THE DAY WE CELEBRATE!

City of Quincy Rejoices Over Award of Two Mammoth Battleships for Argentine Republic to Fore River Shipbuilding Company at $22,000,000.

GRAND RECEPTION AND BANQUET

TO Francis Tiffany Bowles, President of the Fore River Company.

Someone asks, why do we celebrate? To one who has followed the trend of events during the past month, the answer is plain. There are several reasons why we should celebrate at this time. The main reason is that Quincy has an industry at the head of which is a man, who by his strong personality and tact was able to go into the market of the world and to compete with the largest shipbuilding companies and carry off a contract for two of the largest battleships ever built. In round figures a contract that aggregates something like $22,000,000.

In adition to this he was also to compete with other firms and to announce the securing of another contract for another foreign nation which will aggregate something like $400,000. And a few days later to announce that still a third contract had been signed with a Cuban firm for $500,000. All of this was within the space of one short month.

It is something well worth being proud of, and Quincy may well be forgiven a little vanity if she steps aside from the even tenor of her way and celebrates. The total of these contracts will foot up nearly $23,000,000. This represents employment to a large force of men for a long period although the amount to be expended in Quincy will be some less than this, for one of the battleships for the Argentine Republic will be built by the New York Ship Building Co. However the Curtis turbine with which she is to be equipped will be built in Quincy.

LARGE PAY ROLL.

The pay roll at the Fore River yard during the fulfillment of these contracts will aggregate two and one half millions a year. It was stated at a recent meeting by an official of the company that fully seventy-five percent of the employes resided in Quincy. With all this money in circulation there is no question but a very large part will be expended by the workmen at Quincy stores, so that what benefits the Fore River Co., in turn benefits every industry and business enterprise of the city.

That the Fore River Co., were to make a strong bid for the two battleships for the Argentine Republic, has has been known in Quincy for a long time, for President Bowles has been in Europe nearly a year looking after them. Late last year the news was flashed under the ocean that the bids had been opened and that the Quincy company was among the lowest if not the lowest of the many firms that sought to build the vessels. Then came a wait while the commission having the award in hand were considering the various bids. Through all this time President Bowles was in constant touch with the powers that be, and his personality had as much to do with the final award of the contract as to the superiority of the plans and designs submitted.

Then came a period of waiting until Feb. 5, when a cable was received announcing that the contract had been signed with the Fore River Co. That the vessels would be equipped with the American Curtis turbine engines, and that one of the largest battleships in the world would be constructed in Quincy and the second would be sublet to another American firm.

GREAT REJOICING.

This news brought great rejoicing to Quincy, but hardly had people recovered from this news when another cablegram was flashed beneath the ocean announcing that still another plum had fallen to the Quincy company by the awarding of the contract for two sets of three each of the American Curtis turbines for two scout cruisers which the Italian nation was building. The news of the awarding of this contract came Feb. 11. Then people begun to sit up and take notice, as they began to realize just what this meant to Quincy. Still this was not all, for no later than last week came the news that still a third contract had been booked. This time it was to build a tank vessel for the Cuban Distilling Co., the contract price of which was something like $500,000.

The Fore River Co. now has contracts for eighteen of the American Curtis turbines. Six for the two Argentine boats, six for the Italian navy and six for United States destroyers. These turbines alone represent between $1,100,000 and $1,200,000.

MUCH TO BE PROUD OF.

Quincy has long been known all over these United States, not only as the birthplace of two Presidents, but for its famous granite quarries, and now it will become known all over the world as a shipbuilding city, and as was stated by General Manager Smith, at the recent banquet of the Fore River apprentices, she will become as famous for her battleships as she has been for her granite hills.

Therefore should a stranger entering our portals today ask, why do you celebrate, you can answer, because we have within the limits of our city already famous in American history, an industry at whose head is a man, who by his personality and ability to deliver the goods; has entered into competition with the shipbuilding industry of the world, and came out victorious. He has been pitted against a proposition that seldom falls to the lot of any man. He has been tried in the scales and not found wanting. All up for President Bowles and Quincy.

GREAT NAVAL CONSTRUCTOR

Admiral Bowles So Regarded at Washington in 1903

When Rear Admiral Bowles was elected president of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company in October, 1903, A. Maurice Low, Washington correspondent of the Globe, said in a dispatch to his paper: The government has lost another prominent official simply because when the government is brought into competition with private employers the inducements offered by the private employer are always so much greater that a man who is solely dependent upon his salary does not feel justified in remaining in the government service.

Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, chief constructor of the navy, this afternoon handed his resignation to Sec. Moody, to take effect at the end of the month. Rear Admiral Bowles will be president of the Fore River Ship and engine company of Quincy, Mass., which has built some of the finest and latest vessels in the navy.

Rear Admiral Bowles is recognized as one of the greatest naval constructors in the world, and his resignation from the service is a loss which cannot easily be replaced. He told Sec. Moody that he felt it was due his family that he should accept the offer made him.

As chief constructor of the navy he receives a salary of about $6,500 a year, and while the exact amount the Fore River company will pay him is not known, it is understood that it will be more than twice what he is now receiving.

Rear Admiral Bowles is a Masschusetts man. He will be succeeded as chief constructor by naval constructor W. L. Capps, at present on duty at the New York navy yard.

HELPING UNCLE SAM'S FARMERS

Facilities Provided by the University of Wisconsin's College of Agriculture Through Special Courses and Lectures :: ::

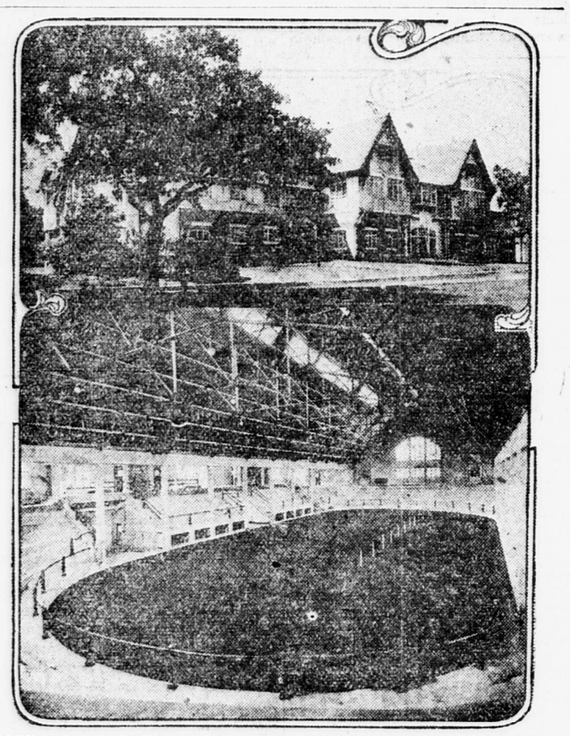
Even Women and Children Given a Chance to Study Home Economics---What Other States Are Doing to Advance Scientific Farming

By WALTON WILLIAMS.

THE cry of today is "Back to the farm!" The production of foodstuffs is not keeping pace with the demand. The secretary of agriculture says we should have more scientific farming, while numberless college professors have pointed out the fact that European soil, although in use for centuries, is more productive than American soil. The reason for this is that in Europe the farmers are compelled to get out of an acre of ground all it can possibly produce. The rapidly increasing population of America will soon force us to like conditions and similar intensive farming. We hear much of the conservation of natural resources, but it will be discovered in time that the conservation of soil fertility is the most important of all.

In the work of teaching scientific farming no single agency is accomplishing more than the agricultural colleges. Not only their regular courses, but the special courses open to farmers and their families, are of benefit. For example, in the live stock pavilion of the University of Wisconsin has just closed a ten days' course, attended by 2,000 farmers of the state, with their wives, daughters and sons, and of Swiss cheese makers, with operators and managers of creameries and cheese factories, for all of whom special courses were provided at the College of Agriculture.

All the large gatherings for lectures and demonstrations were held in the great arena of the live stock pavilion, with its big show ring and seating capacity of over 2,000.



LIVE STOCK PAVILION OF THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN AND THE ARENA IN THE PAVILION.

The ravages of tuberculosis in cows and pigs were shown to the farmers by postmortem demonstrations on diseased animals by State Veterinarian D. B. Clark and Dean H. L. Russell of the College of Agriculture.

The handling of milk, both for direct consumption and for cheese and butter making, was the central theme for the whole series of courses as a part of a big campaign for increasing the purity and value of Wisconsin's dairy products.

Course For Farmers.

In the ten day farmers' course many of the addresses have been upon the ventilation of dairy barns and creameries, rural schoolhouses and other buildings, on the feeding of cows and other stock, the control of bovine tuberculosis, the relation of the dairy industry to the fertility of farm soils and the application of business methods to the dairy farm.

Special lectures by S. A. Knapp of the United States department of agriculture at Washington, C. T. Barnum of the United States forest service, Joseph E. Wing of Chicago, Professor T. L. Haecker of the University of Minnesota, Dr. C. G. Hopkins of the University of Illinois and F. R. Crane of the Dunn County School of Agriculture, besides those by members of the College of Agriculture, covered such subjects as the treatment of farm timbers to prevent decay, improving the Wisconsin corn crop, the education of the farm boy, problems of sheep farming, the Wisconsin soil survey, the farmer's small fruit garden, the care of farm machinery and judging and mating poultry.

Men who have been of special service to the agricultural world through scientific investigation and practical demonstration were presented with testimonials at the "recognition exercises" on Friday night, Feb. 11, when President L. D. Harvey of the Stout Institute, Menominee, delivered an address on "The Education of the Farm Boy."

For those interested in the work of the creamery and cheese factory two special courses were arranged, one for makers of Swiss cheese covering ten days, in which experts offered instruction and opportunity for practice under supervision, with all of the latest dairy equipment; the other for the operators and managers of cheese factories and creameries, covering five days, in which all of the problems to be met in the 1,649 cheese factories and the 1,017 creameries of the state were discussed as to their scientific and practical solution. The first day was marked by an address on "The Value of Ventilation In the Prevention of Diseases" by Dr. M. P. Ravenel, university bacteriologist, who is the head of the state hygienic laboratory.

Women and Children Not Neglected

The sixth annual session of the woman's course in home economics was held under the direction of Miss Abby L. Marlatt, head of the home economics department of the university. She was assisted on the lecture program by Miss Anna Barrows of the Teachers' college, Columbia university, New York, and by Miss Nellie Crooke of Milwaukee-Downer college.

"The Home and the Child" was the subject around which the discussion of the women's course centered, including lectures on house sanitation, the physical development of the child, problems of feeding infants and growing children, including a discussion of school lunches, insect pests in the house, ways of keeping the grocery bill down, the care of the sick and suggestions on the training of children by Dr. M. V. O'Shea of the university department of education.

Even the small boy was given a place in these courses, one having been arranged for boys between ten and sixteen years to teach them to judge corn and various grains. Boys who were winners in the grain growing contests at the different county fairs last fall had all their expenses paid for the five days of the course, and any other boys interested were admitted without fees of any kind. The object was to inspire the youth of the farms and small towns with an interest in the study of scientific agriculture and an ambition to fit themselves for the highest type of farming.

Movement Nation Wide.

Work along similar lines is being carried on elsewhere throughout the nation. As an instance agricultural instruction for schoolteachers is receiving special attention in Ohio. Horticulture, farm products, dairying and judging dairy cattle are the four subjects required of teachers in the Ohio country schools. Of course it is only the more simple and fundamental principles that are required, but they must be practical. For instance, in horticulture, teachers must be prepared to show how plants are propagated from layers, stolons, cuttings, buds and drafts. Other subjects are taught, such as dairying, the requirement of which is a knowledge of testing milk for butter fat and to give simple instructions in cleanliness and in general dairy hygiene.

A few years ago, when it was first advocated that teachers in country schools should be required to qualify in subjects calculated to foster an interest in country life, the promoters of the idea were called faddists and were severely criticised, but now all the older states of the Union are recognizing the value and necessity of instruction that will interest young folks in the business of the farm instead of encouraging ideas that tend cityward.

At Amesville, O., an agricultural extension school was held for one week in September which farmers, their wives and families attended. The men and boys were instructed in the principles of soil fertility, farm crops, horticulture, live stock judging, etc. The women and girls were given new ideas in homemaking, the principles involved in breadmaking and other cooking, together with simple scientific reasons for certain chemical changes which come under their observation in everyday life on the farm.

Agricultural high schools are being established in different states so that pupils may go from the small district schools to a larger and better equipped school to continue their agricultural studies. There should be at least one such school in each county where farm subjects would receive special attention. It is education of the right sort, considering what is demanded of modern progressive farmers.

Agricultural Department.

The important service rendered to the farmers of the land by the agricultural department at Washington is everywhere recognized. The experiment stations, the successive bulletins dealing with all phases of crop growing, live stock and other subjects of interest to farmers and the other activities of the department have been of incalculable benefit to American agriculture.

Of scarcely less moment are the various farmers' institutes held in the different states. A case in point was the institute held at Manhattan, Kan., about two weeks ago. Over 800 farmers were present.

During the last year a large corps of farmers' institute workers and instructors from the Kansas State Agricultural college have been busy in the county and local institutes of the state. They have lectured upon and demonstrated scientific agricultural investigation and better methods of farming. The mails have carried large amounts of bulletins and other literature relating to agriculture, and special trains have made tours of the state. This is taking the college to the people. Then for a week, from Dec. 27 to Jan. 1, the people came to the college when it opened its doors to the state farmers' institute. Almost 700 persons, most of them boys and girls, sent by the local institutes of their respective neighborhoods, were enrolled in classes. Besides these there were a large number who came to the conferences of the various organizations of agricultural interests that met at the college during the week. The dairymen and creamerymen of Kansas effected organizations, and the horse, the sheep and the swine breeders' associations convened. Conferences of millers and wheat growers and of county highway officers were held, and the corn show and the poultry show brought a large number interested in these lines. In short, almost every phase of agricultural interest was represented.

Kansas Farmers Alive.

The state farmers' institute of Kansas this year was the most successful ever held. Not only is this true in point of attendance, but in the live interest displayed. There was no evidence that any one came through idle curiosity; every one evinced a purpose to observe, study and learn. And the opportunity was unequaled. On the college grounds were to be seen some of the championship show stock of the world, the prize winning corn exhibits of many shows, and the well equipped laboratories were open to the use of the students. Classes were offered the men and boys in corn judging, stock judging, dairying and poultry management. Women and girls were given work in domestic science and art. The actual laboratory and practice work was supplemented by lectures and demonstrations. These were given by the very best of authorities on the various subjects, speakers from various state universities and the department of agriculture at Washington.

Every evening the large auditorium was thrown open to every one—students and visitors. Lectures and demonstrations were given, many of them made especially interesting and instructive by the use of stereopticon slides thrown upon a screen.

Professor C. P. Hartley of the United States department of agriculture gave some very valuable lectures about corn breeding and corn variation. He told of the results of experiments which he himself had carried out in corn growing. There was no pretty but useless theory here. The practical nature of his work was set forth when he said:

"It is not always the nicest looking ear of corn that is the best; hence the necessity of making 'ear to row' tests in order to determine which ears are really the highest yielders. My idea of a score card for corn is 'yield of good corn per acre 100 points.'"

The dairymen, millers, wheat growers, live stock raisers, poultrymen, good roads advocates and others also had their day at the Kansas institute. All this work, together with the instruction at the agricultural colleges, the multifarious activities of the agricultural department and such meetings as those mentioned, shows that the movement toward scientific farming in America is going forward in a most gratifying way.

TO FLY TO NORTH POLE.

Dr. F. J. Fielding's Plans For Aerial Arctic Trip.

Dr. Frederick J. Fielding of San Antonio, Tex., who won a trophy for making the longest balloon trip out of Chicago two years ago, says that he is very much in earnest in his proposition to make a journey to the north pole and back in a dirigible balloon. He already has his plans well advanced, and when a few more of the necessary details are arranged he will let the contract for the construction of the big balloon. It will hold 200,000 cubic feet of gas and carry 6,000 pounds burden.

Dr. Fielding has made a close study of balloons for several years, and the new craft will embody a number of new ideas that he believes will be advantageous in its operation. It will be built for speed and comfort. The power equipment will consist of a gasoline engine of 200 horsepower, which Dr. Fielding claims will drive the cigar shaped balloon through the air at a speed of 100 miles an hour. He expects to accomplish the daring journey with ease, and the trip both ways, including a short stay at the pole, ought not to take more than eight or ten days, probably much less time than that, he says. His equipment and supplies will be ample for all possible emergencies. A tank containing 25,000 cubic feet of extra gas to replenish the supply for the balloon will be taken along. A sled and team of dogs, a scientist of note and one or two other congenial companions will also be taken along.

It is not to be a trip of exploration, but one of verification. Careful observations will be taken to settle any disputed questions that may arise as to the records of exploration that have already been made in the far north. The starting point has not yet been decided upon. Owing to the rapidity with which the journey can be made it would be feasible to start from some point in Canada or the northern part of the United States. Dr. Felding is a man of wealth and will finance the expedition out of his own pocket.

HIGHER PRICES FOR YEARS.

So Professor Jenks Predicts if Gold Production Continues.

Professor J. W. Jenks of Cornell university, at Ithaca, N. Y., agrees with those economists who ascribe the increase in the cost of living to the increased production of gold. To a large number of farmers at Ithaca for farmers' week at the State College of Agriculture he said the other night:

"Money is no more fixed in value than the articles it purchases. There is no sign of a letup in the increased production of gold, and unless some change is made in our monetary system we may expect prices to go up for years to come."

BRIEFS.

Histen or Studley?

"Welcome home, Admiral Bowles!"

"Quincy is waking up, that was the remark of a gentleman today on observing the very general decorations in City Square. What will he think tonight!

C. W. Hanscom attended the hearing at the State House this morning before the joint committee on Judiciary and Labor in favor of the "fine's bill" which would allow labor unions to disapline members.

A meeting of the Board of Trade will be held Wednesday evening when action will be taken on amendments to bylaws. One of the subjects for discussion will be gas and electric lighting.

The warm rain of Sunday night and Monday has removed about all the snow and if the wishes of most people are consulted there will not be any more snaw this winter. This morning there was a little rain, but the weather was considerably cooler than Monday.

MINING TOWN FAIRLY BURIED

Overwhelmed by Avanlanche From a High Mountain

Spokane, Wash., March 1.—Startling from the top of one of the highest mountains of the Coeur d'Alène range, an enormous avalanche of snow, earth, trees and stones killed perhaps a hundred men, women and children at Mace, Idaho, a mining town about seventy miles from here. Twenty-five men and women were taken out alive from their cabins which had been buried beneath thousands of tons of snow, rock and debris from the mountain side, but there are known to be more than 100 persons buried beneath the slide in the lower part of the village, where the houses were built in a ravine.

The snow and rocks made a sheer drop of more than 1000 feet here after having gained lightning momentum from the crest of the peak to the edge of the precipice above the village.

Two relief trains with 700 miners on board, as well as every physician and nurse who could be found, started from the mining town of Wallace, five miles from the scene of the avalanche, but owning to the slide having buried the tracks in many places slow progress was made.

The slide is more than a mile long. The roar of the rocks, snow, trees and earth as they swept down the mountain, gathering more and more strength as the descent was made, could be heard for more than ten miles.

The avalanche occurred shortly after midnight, when there was not a soul astir in the mining town. For the last few days there has been a warm breeze blowing over the Rockies from the Japanese current, known through the northwest as the Chinook, and this served to loosen the snow cap on the mountain peak.

Sunday afternoon a warm rain set in and owing to the warm wind from the Pacific instead of becoming hail at the high altitude it remained uncongealed at the great height, and soon the great snow banks were soggy.

It has been sixteen years since the peak from which the slide started had been cleared by an avalanche and the snow there was many feet deep. Some years ago there was a slide which took all the snow from an adjacent mountain and the slide resulted in the death of sixty families in the town of Burke.

Snowslides are rare in the Kootenai district, in which Mace is located, and little fear was entertained that there would be one this year. No snowslide break wall had ever been built on the lower part of the mountain slope, as the miners believed the forest growing half way up the mountain would serve as a natural barrier for any of the snow and boulders which might become loosened above.

TAFT IS AROUSED

Does Not Credit Charge That He Was Deceived by Ballinger

Washington, March 1.—President Taft is indignant over the charge made to the investigating committee by Gifford Pinchot that Secretary Ballinger had "wilfully deceived the president." Taft made swift answer by declaring the charge false.

It was made apparent in several ways that Pinchot as a witness in the proceedings, which reached the high water mark of interest as he took the stand, will not be allowed to "run wild" in his allegations against Ballinger. Great interest is aroused by the decision of Ballinger to take the stand in his own behalf.

Ossining, N. Y., March 1.—Charles Bowser, a New York negro, was put to death in the electric chair in Sing Sing prison. From the time he entered the death chamber until the current was turned on Bowser kept repeating a prayer. Bowser shot and killed Eugene Hutchinson, another negro, in front of the latter's home in New York.

Boston, March 1.—The New England sanitarium, located in Stoneham, was declared by the supreme judicial court to be exempt from taxation as a charitable institution, and its treasury will soon be enriched by the sum of $2500, which was levied and collected by the assessors of that town in 1907.

LIBERALS' LEASE OF LIFE

Postponement of Drastic Legislation Until After Easter

London, March 1.—In the session of the house of commons Monday Premier Asquith's government obtained a lease of life until after Easter. This was the gift of the Conservatives, who were so anxious to avoid two general elections successively within so brief a period that they accepted the premier's program without calling for a vote.

When the house of commons meets after Easter it will take up the struggle to revolutionize the British government system. Resolutions will be presented to deprive the house of lords of all authority over finances, and also of the power of vetoing the measures of the lower house, leaving to the lords only the functions of delay and discussion.

If this plan succeeds, the government proposes next year to proceed with the transformation of the house of lords from an hereditary to a democratic body.

LIKE ARMY IN THE FIELD

People Have Camped Ten Days, Awaiting the Opening of Farms

Los Angeles, March 1.—Scores of men and women have been in line at the chamber of commerce building for ten days, awaiting the opening to entry today of farms in the Yuma irrigation project. More than 150 men and women have been in line since Feb. 19, eating and sleeping practically on the door steps of the building in which the entries are being made today.

Every policy of every political party has been threshed out in the conversational bees that have been held among those in line, and most of the men have gone through post-graduate courses in farming advice while killing off the hours. At night oil stoves have been impressed and the line resembled an army bivouacked in the field..

MANY TROPHIES OF THE BIG HUNT

Roosevelt Has Some Specimens of Greatest Importance

Gondokoro, Soudan, March 1.—Theodore Roosevelt and the others of his immediate party sailed Monday on the steamer Dal for Khartum, where they expect to arrive on March 15. Roosevelt and his son have killed some 500 specimens of large mammals.

All these were killed in the interest of science, and the specimens will be disposed of accordingly, the greater number going to the Smithsonian institution. Roosevelt will refain not more than six trophies for himself.

From the points of importance the most highly prized game may be rated as follows: First, the giant elands, the first complete specimens of which family are now being taken from the country; second, the white rhinoceros; third, the bongos, the first to be stalked and killed by a white man, and, fourth, the sitatunga, a species of antelope.

The naturalists secured a remarkable collection, comprising many thousands of birds and other animals.

STRUCK DYING PATIENT

Charge Against Doctor Connected With a Naval Hospital

San Francisco, March 1.—Two depositions, reciting cruelty alleged to have been practised upon Mateo Brezzinco, a sailor, at the United States marine hospital here, immediately before his death on Feb. 17, were sent to Washington to be submitted to the surgeon general as a protest from the sailors of San Francisco.

Numerous reinforcing affidavits accompany the depositions. The depositions charge that Brezzinco was attacked and struck in the face by one of the staff physicians while the patient, who had submitted to an operation, reclined in bed.

Dr. Gassaway, commanding officer at the hospital, declares there is no truth in the charges.

NO "VOTES FOR WOMEN"

Woman Suffrage Bill Rejected by Bay State Legislative Committee

Boston, March 1.—There will be no vote for women in Massachusetts this year. With nine members present, the legislative committee on constitutional amendments, in executive session, voted to report adversely on the woman's suffrage bill.

The vote was six against the bill to three for it. The two members absent were divided, so the vote will be seven to four.

Saved Lives In Big Flood

Northampton, Mass., March 1.—Daniel C. Graves, who distinguished himself in the Mill river flood of 1874, one of the greatest disasters that New England has known, died at his home in Williamsburg. He was 70 years old.

Two Girls Ordered Deported

Boston, March 1.—Pearl Perrant and Alice Russell will be deported to their homes in Ottawa. The two young women arrived in Boston less than a month ago and were arrested last week, charged with night walking.

AUGUSTUS GARDNER

"Insurgent" Is Son-In-Law of Senator H. C. Lodge

GARDNER IN THE CHAIR

House Finds Itself In Control of a Rampant Insurgent

Washington, March 1.—Speaker Cannon has given evidence of a sense of humor and at the same time showed his utter disregard for the strength of the insurgent movement. He was summoned to his office and in looking over the chamber for a member to take his place as presiding officer his eye fell upon Representative Gardner of Massachusetts.

Instead of announcing in loud tones the name of the man who would wield the gavel the speaker quietly beckoned to Gardner, and in a moment the members of the house were rubbing their eyes to make sure that they observed a real insurgent presiding over the house.

Mr. Gardner had been in the chair but a minute when he sent the speaker's gavel crashing to the desk and demanded that conversation cease, and while he was in the chair the house was in order. As soon as he was relieved by Speaker Cannon he was greeted by several members who joshed him about his new relations with the speaker.

NAIL FIVE WEEKS IN A BOY'S LUNG

X-Ray Proves Valuable Adjunct In a Difficult Job

New York, March 1.—That surgeons in the Beth Israel hospital saved the life of Jacob Miller, 9 years old, by delicately removing a nail that was imbedded in his lung with the aid of the X-ray does not interest the little patient. His thoughts are centered on that "funny thing they used to see inside of me," as he calls the X-ray. His quick recovery is expected.

If it hadn't been for the X-ray, the surgeons declare, the boy would probably have died. He had a lung ailment that none of the physicians could diagnose. Some thought it tuberculosis and others an abscess. The X-ray showed that a nail, about an inch long, was imbedded in the lung and the cause of his continual illness. After the discovery the boy said he had swallowed the nail five weeks ago, but was afraid to tell his parents because he feared punishment.

The nail was extracted by introducing a long pair of forceps down the windpipe, guiding them to the right place with the help of the X-ray, and in that way laying hold of the nail.

BIG ENDOWMENT SOUGHT

Bill to Create State College In Massachusetts Becomes a Law

Boston, March 1.—Governor Draper has signed the bill to create a Massachusetts college providing for a liberal education for those without means to secure it at the larger institutions.

The next step toward establishing the college is to get an endowment fund of at least $1,000,000. One subscription of $100,000 has been received and appeals are to be sent to the cities where it is proposed to establish branches of the college.

The charter does not go into effect until $500,000 has been raised.

Miners Have Narrow Escape

Danville, Ills., March 1.—Just before 100 miners were to have entered Gray's mine the swollen Vermillion river broke through the walls into the pit. There is thirty-six feet of water in the mine now. The miners would all have perished in the flood had they gone to work a few minutes earlier.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

All Dr. Cook asks is to be left in peace, not pieces.

There is many a slip between the North Pole and the Rear Admiralty.

Lent has also joined the meat boycott.

An increase of a cent a pound, in the price of meat is the trust's answer to the boycott. Its impudence is sublime.

"We move that Senator Dick be retired as a rear admiral," says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Well, it is Ohio's move ,all right.

"Teddy" Roosevelt, Jr., says he knows just what his financee thinks about everything. Here is evidence that poetry is not dead.

The House rules, perhaps need reforming. So, perhaps, do some of the House mules; not to mention another word that rhymes with both mules and rules.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

In the choice of agents to take the census the utmost care should be exercised in order that men both competent and trustworthy may be secured. A census which lacks accuracy to a serious degree may be worse than no census at all. One who knows of the defects can have no confidence in such a census. But, worse than this, others who accept the reports build on them erroneous conclusions thus extending and enlarging the evil. The trustworthiness of the census will depend on the trustworthiness of the agents employed to make the enumeration. A distinctly educational test will not be adequate. Before appointing any man inquiries should be made into his moral character and the degree to which he can be depended upon to cover the whole ground assigned him and to make a truthful, accurate report of the number of inhabitants in his district.—Haverhill Gazette.

Business men of New England, do you know what's going on in this country? Do you see a hundred, a hundred and fifty, two hundred million Americans? Is your thought parallel with the giant times? Do you thrill with the world forces throbbing in your blood? Do you think and feel nationally? Some of you do, I know, but as a class, do you in the way that other sections do?

Do you dream enough? Are you alive to one of the greatest human powers in the world today? A power thought? A power as potent in the realm of mind as electricity is potent in the realm of matter. The power of publicity.

You know what the printing press has done for the wider intelligence of humanity. Do you know what it can do, is doing, for a world-wide commerce? A publisher newspaper or periodical ought to know something about it both ways. He lives by publicity. He helps to supply a nation-wide demand for reading matter. He helps to supply the merchants with a nation-wide market.—E. J. Ridgeway of Everybody's Magazine at Publicity banquet.

"You were a long time in the far corner of the conservatory last evening," suggested the mother. "What was going on?"

"Do you remember the occasion on which you became engaged to papa?" inquired the daughter by way of reply.

"Of course I do."

"Then it ought not to be necessary for you to ask any questions."

Thus gently the news was broken that they were to have a son-in-law.

QUINCY ILLUSTRATED

A Lecture Which Would Interest People of New England

With each presentation of the illustrated lecture on "Historic Quincy, past and present," Mr. Charles H. Johnson has something new to relate of our city which is making history fast. The Daily Ledger recommends Mr. Johnson to any society in New England which would provide a pleasing entertainment at little expense. Concerning a recent presentation of this lecture in Quincy the Daily Ledger said:

"Historic Quincy—past and present," was the very interesting subject on Wednesday evening at the public meeting of the Quincy Historical Society held in the chapel of the First church, and the large audience present should feel proud, if never before, of the "City of Presidents;" not only of its achievements of the past, but of its wonderful resources of today; its industries; its homes; its men of affairs; its schools; its churches; its institutions; its beautiful scenery.

The evening was devoted to an illustrated lecture by Charles H. Johnson, a member of the society and chairman of the Board of Assessors of the city, who was happily introduced by Brooks Adams, Esq., president of the society and a grandson of President John Quincy Adams. He said Mr. Johnson had at considerable trouble and expense prepared the lecture, and the society was much indebted to him; also the city of Quincy.

Mr. Johnson said he did not pose as a lecturer; but as a citizen loving the city of Quincy, he had prepared the lecture. All the views were original, and if they awake a civic pride in Quincy, which seems to be lacking, he would be pleased.

The first views shown were those of the earlier men and women who had made Quincy famous in Revolutionary times: President John Adams and Abigail his wife, President John Quincy Adams, John Hancock the patriot, Dorothy Quincy, Col. John Quincy for whom the city was named, and others. Also of Mt. Wollaston or Merrymount, Squantum head and its Myles Standish cairn, Penns hill with its Abigail Adams cairn, and a view from the Third hill reservation.

Next came the religious history of the town, with views of the old church which stood on the old "Training Field" and also the one replaced in 1828 by the present stone church. Exterior views and interior views of the First church were shown, also several of the pastors, including Rev. Peter Whitney, Rev. William P. Lund, Rev. John D. Wells, Rev. D. M. Wilson and Rev. E. C. Butler. Also views of Christ church and several of the other churches. An excellent photo of the late Henry H. Faxon was shown, also his birthplace and home, and a photo of Henry M. Faxon.

Schools next received attention, and views were shown of some of the earlier schools,—those of a century ago—and also those of today; the High school, Adams Academy, Woodward Institute, Washington school and the Coddington. A fine photo of Supt. Parlin was shown.

The 25 miles of seacoast were then illustrated, including the coal wharves at Quincy Point, the mammoth power station of the Old Colony street railway system, the beauty of Germantown, the Baker Yacht Basin, the plant of the Quincy Electric Light and Power company, the Quincy Home, the Coddington boulevard to Houghs Neck, beach scenes at Houghs Neck, views of the clubhouse of the Quincy Yacht club, also from Great hill. At Wollaston beach, the clubhouse of the Wollaston and Squantum clubs were shown, also the Quincy shore parkway, Moswetussett, Squantum and Moon islands.

The industries of the city were illustrated including the granite quarries, granite manufacturing yards, the Tubular Rivet and Stud Co., the Translucent Fabric Co., the Wollaston Foundry and the Fore River shipyard.

The cemeteries received attention, also such institutions as the Thomas Crane Public Library, the City Hospital, etc. Several of the business houses in City Square were illustrated, also many of the residences in different parts of the city, which would be creditable to any city.

The closing chapter included 40 interesting views at Fore River Shipbuilding plant, and several of the battleships, cruisers, submarines and steamboats which have been built in Quincy. With a plea for patriotism and good old Quincy the lecture closed about 9 o'clock.

Nearly 200 views were thrown upon the canvas and all were exceedingly clear. Indeed they were excellent. Some views were entirely new to most of the audience, while there were many views of familiar scenes which were never before thrown upon the canvas. It is an illustrated lecture of which Quincy people will never tire, and the Ledger hopes that all residents of the city may have several opportunities to see the views and hear them explained by Mr. Johnson. He certainly has collected considerable valuable and interesting data.

The lecture should be given in every school building of the city for the pupils, and also in each ward of the city for the general public. The Ledger understands it is the intention to give the lecture all over Massachusetts, and already some dates have been booked. The Historical Society, Board of Trade, or the Citizens' Association should lend their influence, and possibly their financial assistance, for the good of Quincy.

The above lecture was a leading feature at Keith's Bijou Dream in April 1909. Terms reasonable. Special rates to churches, Sunday Schools.

Kidney disease advances so rapidly that many a person is firmly in its grasp before aware of its progress. Prompt attention should be given the slightest symptom of kidney disorder. If there is a dull pain in the back, headaches, dizzy spells, or a tired, worn-out feeling, or if the urine is dark, foul-smelling, irregular and attended with pain, procure a good kidney remedy at once.

Your townspeople recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read the statement of this Quincy citizen.

P. J. Garrity, 367 Granite street, Quincy, Mass., says: "Some time ago I suffered so severely from kidney disease that I could hardly get about. I was restless at night and could not find any position that was comfortable. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and contained a heavy sediment at times. I was rapidly growing worse and was at a loss to know what to do, as the many remedies I tried failed to help me. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. After I had taken the contents of four boxes I was in good health. I highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other kidney sufferers."

ARE YOU A BACKFISCH?

Amanda Riddle Asks a Puzzling Question of American Misses.

Dear girl, are you a backfisch?

A what?

A backfisch.

Now, isn't that awful?

But let me explain to you before you get miffed. If you are anywhere between fifteen and seventeen years of age you would be a backfisch if you lived in Germany. Since you live in America you needn't worry.

On a recent trip to Germany I saw and discovered many things of curious interest, some of them truly amusing. The backfisch was the most amusing of all; not that the backfisch is distinctly comic—some backfisches I found were most charming, the sort that would make an American young man strive manfully to write sonnets. In fact, I saw one black eyed backfisch who made me, woman that I am and somewhat beyond the backfisch age limit, I freely confess, turn a pale sea green with envy.

She had lips like the rose petal, cheeks like the bloom of the peach, a neck of more than swanlike softness and a form suggesting a Psyche on a pedestal. Of course she wore short skirts—backfisch brevity, which isn't very short, after all—and she carried her music roll, without which no girl in Germany can be and remain a backfisch. I saw this delightful girl tripping along the magnificent Unter den Linden in Berlin and asked a native friend who she was.

"She's nobody," replied this German matron, with infinite scorn; "merely a backfisch."

"A wh-wh-what?" I almost screeched

Then my friend explained to me what a backfisch is, and why she is, and just how she manages to overcome it. She is a typical German girl of the well to do class between the ages of fifteen and seventeen. Before she gets to be fifteen she is simply a "kid," as we say in this country. But for those two years she is a backfisch pure and simple. The petite fraulein is called that because it means "baked fish" literally, though just why she suggests a baked fish is outside the pale of my comprehension.

Most of the backfisches I saw looked to me rather uncooked and raw, being in their formative period. In our country the pert misses of that age too often begin to adopt long skirts and the airs of young womanhood. These German frauleins dare not do so, because they know they are mere backfisches. They can't get out of the backfisch class by any hook or crook until their seventeenth birthday save one—matrimony. Of course a matron, even though only sweet sixteen, is not a backfisch. She has outgrown it by the aid of Cupid.

But unless the girl marries she is doomed—and it isn't such a bad doom either—to backfischiness for those two years. Behind her back the servants in the house call her that. Her big brothers call her that to her face.

THE "BACKFISCH."

Sometimes her mother, if the girl evinces highfalutin tendencies and seems to imagine herself older and maturer than she really is, says to her:

"My dear, you're only a backfisch. Now, don't you forget it."

The backfisch goes to school. She always studies music and needs must carry that roll or flat portfolio, indicating that she is "taking lessons." I was told that some of these girls when they attain the seventeenth birthday toss the music roll contemptuously into a cubbyhole, and nothing could induce them to recover it. They are emancipated; they are no longer little backfisches, but young ladies.

It occurred to me that being a backfisch is just about the best thing that can happen to a girl of that age. It makes her know her place and strive hard to become an accomplished young lady by the time she reaches the emancipation age. And over in England, as I learned, they call a girl of about fifteen a "flapper." If I were still but fifteen I am sure I should prefer being a backfisch.

LITTLE WORK AT NAVY YARD

But Busy Times at the Quincy Shipyard

The workmen at the Charlestown navy yard were given another disappointment on Monday, says the Globe. The battleship North Dakota, which is being completed at the Fore River yard, it was expected would be delivered at the local navy yard some time during March. Monday word was received that the date of delivery had been again postponed until about June 1.

The March apportionment of funds for the various departments at the navy yard became known Monday. The average is from 12 to 15 per cent in excess of those for February in the allotments for labor. As there are three more working days in March than in February the amounts available are not much greater, in reality than those for February.

It is stated at the navy yard that there is a lot of work, but that as there are no funds available or allotted for it, it cannot be undertaken. Practically every construction item for the rebuilding of the battleship Illinois has been approved and could be started it the money was available.

The armored cruiser New York, which was repaired at the Charlestown navy yard last year, at a cost of over $1,000,000 and which since has been on duty on the Atlantic station, has been selected as flagship of the Asiatic station. The New York will leave the League island navy yard, Philadelphia, on April 1 for Manila, by way of cape Horn.

HISTEN OR STUDLEY

Special Election Today for Ward Two Councilman

The special election in Ward Two to fill the vacancy in the member of the City Council from that ward is being held today. There are but two candidates on the official ticket, Harry Studley, who is running under the designation of Republican Independent and Edward P. Histen who is running under the designation of Democratic Independent.

At the municipal election in December there was but two votes difference between these two gentlemen for the third councilman from that ward. A recount was asked, with the result that a tie was declared, making a new election necessary. Ordinarily it would have been necessary to go through the formality of a caucus to nominate candidates, but both parties agreed to waive the formality of a caucus, and that their candidate should go on the ticket as a Republican Independent, and as a Democratic Independent, under the law they were not allowed to use the word Republican or Democrat alone when nomination papers are used.

There has been no flare of trumpets or the burning of red fire during the brief campaign, but it has been a still hunt from the very beginning. Both gentlemen have a large following and they have made a personal canvass of the ward. Both claim that they will be elected but the counting of the votes will settle the question.

Voting during the early morning hours was brisk at both precincts, for during the first hour nearly two hundred votes were cast. The morning hours at the polls were quiet, the voters dropping in one at a time. This noon, however, there was quite a rush at both precincts, although the total vote is not expected to be as large as at the regular election.

As there are but two candidates and the vote will be small, it should not be long after 4 o'clock before the result is known.

PLANS FOR BANQUET

Will Begin Promptly at 7 at Music Hall

All the details for the complimentary reception to Admiral Francis T. Bowles, president of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., which takes place tonight, have been completed, and all that is needed to crown the event with success is pleasant weather. The indications are that it will be clear and colder by night, so that those who will march from the depot to Alpha hall will not have to wade through mud.

Members of the committee of 100 are requested to meet at City Hall at 5.30 and proceed to the depot to act as escort to President Bowles in the march to Music hall. It is said that one of the uniformed divisions of the A. O. H. will also parade.

The Admiral will arrive at 5.49, and the reception will be from 6 to 6.45. Ladies will attend the reception and many have signified their intention of attending. The ushers at Alpha hall will be:

Clarence Burgin, Edward J. Murphy, Delcevare King, John W. McAnarney, Eben W. Sheppard, Walter S. Pinkham, Dexter E. Wadsworth and Henry L. Kincaide.

It is planned to have Music hall opened as early at 6.15, and those who are to attend the banquet are requested to go to Music hall as soon as possible after this hour as it is the desire that all the guests shall be seated by 7 o'clock at which hour Admiral Bowles will be escorted to the hall.

If this plan is carried out the banquet will begin on time and the affair will be concluded by 10 o'clock. This will enable the guest of the evening and Mrs. Bowles to return to Boston on the 10.08 train.

There was a constant inqury all day Monday for tickets for the banquet, and it is believed that if accommodations could have been provided that fully 200 more tickets could have been sold. Considerable regret is expressed on the part of the committee that some people holding tickets have seen fit to speculate with them, for it is a known fact that tickets were sold by these paries Monday for $1.25 and perhaps more.

Decorators were busy all day Monday, in the rain and many of the business houses between the depot and Music hall are in holiday dress. The places decorated are:

OUR SHIPYARD PLANT

Covers 35 Acres and Valued at Over $2,000,000

The Fore River Shipbuilding Company is one of the largest industries of New England, with assets of over $5,000,000. Real estate and buildings in Quincy comprise nearly one half of this amount.

The plant on East Howard street is a modern one, equipped with all the latest machines. It comprises over 35 acres, and there are at least forty buildings. These include a large machine shop, a large ship tool house, a large wood working shop and mold loft, a large forge shop, a large blacksmith shop, a large sheet iron and electrical rigging shop, a large store house, an annealing plant, a lumber storehouse and saw mill, a brass foundry, a pattern store house, an angle smith shop, a ship carpenters shop, a pipe shop, a paint shop, a pneumatic tool shop, a rivet shed, a large office building, a government inspectors office, a hospital, an oil house, and several small store houses, etc. etc.

The large shipbuilding crane, under which the mammoth battleships are built, and the powerful gantry crane which is alongside the dock should not be overlooked.

The plant has a water frontage of nearly a mile on Weymouth Fore river and Bent's creek, and there are six or more building slips. The fitting out dock on Bent's creek will accommodate three or four battleships and smaller ships at a time.

A private railroad of standard guage inside the yard connects all the buildings and dock, and is busy all the time. A private branch also connects the shipyard with the tracks of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., so that freight and supplies can be received directly at the yard by rail or water. The Daily Ledger recalls one day when 21 loaded cars came over this branch railroad to the Fore River shipyard.

At the plant the Curtiss turbine engines have been developed, and also submarine boats which now make up a large fleet.

SAGE FOR DARKENING THE HAIR.

There is nothing new about the idea of using sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our great-grandmothers kept their locks soft, dark and glossy by using a "sage tea." Whenever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance, they made a brew of sage leaves and applied it to their hair with wonderfully beneficial effect. Nowadays we don't have to resort to the old-time, tiresome method of gathering the herbs and making the brew. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves, and all we have to do is to call for the ready-made product. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, containing sage in the proper strength, with the addition of Sulphur, another old-time scalp remedy. This preparation is sold by all first-class druggists for 50c. and $1.00 a bottle, or is sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.

Important Announcement

BY JOHNSON BROS.

Why and How We Shall Reduce Our Prices April 1st, 1910.

AFTER a careful study of the credit business for a number of years, and the same of the cash business for the past two years, we have decided that for the mutual benefit of the buyer and seller, beginning April 1, we shall turn our business into a strictly cash business. Our experience and close study of the wants of the people for the past thirty-five years has put us in a position to judge, and we have decided that low prices and high quality can be obtained in no other way than by a strictly cash proposition, as a credit store cannot possibly compete successfully with a store that is handled on a strictly cash basis, as there is a great expense attached to a credit business, which we wish to curtail, and our curtailing means much lower prices to the trade. Under the credit system there is always a proportion of bad bills which must be taken care of in our scale of prices. Under the credit system you are helping to pay the bills of those who do not pay themselves. The method of sending teams to take orders daily is very costly. We figure it costs us eight cents per call. If our clerks make from fifty to two hundred calls daily the expense of these calls must be added to the prices of the goods. The salaries of bookkeepers and other expenses of accounting and collections must also be taken care of. We propose to eliminate these items of expense, and correspondingly reduce the prices of our goods. We will deliver orders sent to us by mail, telephone or left at the store, and we intend to show the people of Quincy and surrounding towns what a really cash store can do for them. We intend to place on sale a certain day of each week some staple article from our stock at absolute cost, something different each time. Remember, one of the most important things in this change will be the keeping up of our quality for which we have so long been popular. We shall try to give even better quality if such a thing is possible, and we shall hammer the prices down hard—for cash.

We will pay cash for our goods, by so doing get all the cash discounts from the wholesale trade, and we intend that our trade shall benefit by it, and by owning our own plant it will not be possible for any concern in our line of business to undersell us, when you take into consideration our reputation for quality. We have one of the best equipped stores in our city, also the cooperation of experienced clerks which all go to make Johnson Bros. an ideal firm with which to trade. All orders will be delivered with care and promptness by our new Automobile system, which we will place at your service and which is being practised by nearly all the up to date concerns throughout the country. Customers not caring to pay cash every time they come, or send to the store can if they wish make a deposit with us, and when they have taken up all their deposit will be notified. At the prices we shall ask and the quality of our goods, we must insist on a strictly cash transaction, for at the present age of high prices a credit store can do nothing to lessen the expense of living for its customers, as the increasing expense of carrying on a credit business places low prices out of the question.

The credit dealer must realize a larger percent of profit than a cash dealer, as his expense account is more than double, so we decided that the only way we can help our customers and all careful buyers, is to establish a strictly up to date cash store, for there is no other way that we can afford to cut the prices for the mutual benefit of all. Hoping that this will meet with thoughtful and willing cooperation, we remain,

Respectfully,

JOHNSON BROS.' MARKET,
City Square

SUNDAY SERVICES

Reports from the churches which fail to reach the Daily Ledger office before 12 noon on Monday, are deferred until Tuesday:

HALL PLACE M. E.

Rev. L. L. Hale pastor of the City Point M. E. church, South Boston occupied the pulpit of the Hall Place M. E. church on Sunday. He took for his text, "For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul," Mark 8-26.

Mr. Hale explained the meaning of "gaining the whole world" riches, power, wisdom; yet all these things would be of no use to us if we should lose our soul. Life is worth more than property and the whole world could never pay for the lost soul.

Mr. Hale is a very forceful speaker, and he was well liked and appreciated by his audience.

Sunday school was held at the close of the morning service and Junior League at 3 P. M., in charge of the pastor. Richard H. Moyle was the leader at the Epworth League devotional service at 6.15 with this for a topic: "How to work."

The pastor took for his evening text, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want. "his subject being "The implications of an old time song." Mr. Raupach gave a noble setting to the 23d Psalm, as written by David, the time it was written and its meaning. At the close of the service the congregation repeated the 23d Psalm.

FURNITURE PROFITS

That are Yours

AMONG the many things we do to make our store attractive to furniture buyers—is to mark all goods displayed in our show windows at cost or at a very substantial reduction from the retail market value. It is a part of our store advertising. Each week a new list of goods is selected from our large stock and placed on sale and as each piece is sold from show window it is replaced by some new article. In this manner we give the profits to the purchaser and from the manner the buying public watch our weekly display and take advantage of our bargain offerings, we are convinced that this part of our business policy is largely appreciated. As a matter of fact we make our store attractive in every way to the buying public.

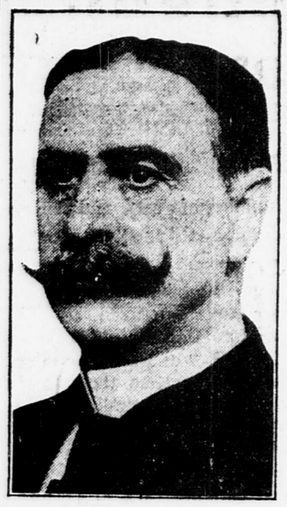
WILLIAM J. MOXLEY

Said to Have Backed Violator of Oleo Law



INQUIRY INTO OLEO BUSINESS

Ordered by Judge Landis In Federal Court at Chicago

WILFUL DEFIANCE OF THE LAW

One Dealer Sentenced to Six Years In Prison and Fine of $15,000—Has Persistently Violated Oleomargarine Regulations, Having Been Backed, It Is Said, by an Illinois Congressman Who Manufactured Commodity

Chicago, March 1.—Federal inquiry into the methods of disposing of oleomargarine was ordered by Judge Landis of the United States district court, after he had sentenced William Broadwell, one of four dealers, who had been indicted for violating the oleomargarine regulations, to six years in the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, and fined $15,000.

"It has been disclosed that probably not less than $15,000, and possibly more than $20,000, has been lost by the United States government as a result of Broadwell's activities," said Landis in sentencing him.

"Whenever arrested he has given bond and then gone out and violated the law again the next day. It has been a wilful defiance of the law. His bond has been supplied by a manufacturer of the commodity which he sold illegally, a proceeding which I regard as my duty to say is highly significant."

Thomas Dudman, a purchasing agent for an oleomargarine concern, testified about his case as bondsman for the indicted man. He told Landis that when he went on the bonds of the men he expected to be indemnified, in case there were any losses, by his employer, William J. Moxley.

Moxley is representative in congress from the Sixth district of Illinois.

Federal inspectors told the court that the defendant sold daily large quantities of illegally manufactured oleomargarine to downtown restaurants.

NEW ENGLAND'S FIRST

Heavier-Than-Air Flying Machine Has a Successful Test

Hamilton, Mass., March 1.—The first successful flight in New England by a heavier-than-air type of flying machine was made at Chebacco pond by A. M. Herring in the new Herring-Burgess machine. The start was made from the smooth surface of the ice of the pond. Under its own power the machine started skimming on the ice and gradually ascended until at ninety-five feet it was in full flight at about thirty feet above the ice.

Under perfect control it dromed along for about 120 yards and then gently dropped back to the ice, taking its wheels without a jar.

Burglars Get $10,000 Haul

Boston, March 1.—Robbers broke into the jewelry store of Samuel E. Ullian at 1113 Washington street and stole diamonds, gold rings and gold watches wisth about $10,000. All of these were taken from a large safe. It was, to use the words of the police inspectors now working on the case, a "high-class" job.

Woman Slays Her Tempter

ABRUPT GIRL'S CAUSE AND CURE

Shirley Breeze Discusses a Purely American Type---Selfishness and Vanity Largely Responsible For Her Disagreeable Trait.

A CERTAIN period of childhood has been called the "interrogation point stage." There is a type of young womanhood which with equal propriety might choose the exclamation point as its representative symbol. The speech of this sort of maiden is so interlarded with explosives that one marvels that the stock of exclamation points does not become exhausted.

The abrupt girl seems to be an American product. In other countries abruptness in women of any age is regarded as a fault, and pains are taken to get rid of it. In America it is in some cases considered amusing, and if the one who exercises it is personally attractive she may be tolerated awhile. Ordinary abruptness is a fault of youth. It isn't precisely an indication of inherent boorishness, but it seems to come natural, as it were, to slam inanimate objects, like doors, to make curt replies, to enter and leave a room with a dash and to do most things with more slambang than is at all necessary.

Of course much of this abruptness is due to excess of animal spirits and will be toned down by the advance of years. Even if no effort on the part of those in authority is made to correct the fault it is in most cases almost certain to yield to more suavity of manner and desire to be conventional. As girls grow older they learn to move gracefully and quietly, to abandon much of their antagonistic and vociferous manner and to appear to take an interest in what others are saying and doing.

It is a pity that girls cannot be brought to an earlier realization of how greatly this abruptness of manner conflicts with their mental comfort. Many and many a well meaning girl has forfeited a coveted pleasure by her awkwardness of speech and manner. She has permitted herself to be misrepresented by a compelling something within her which she detests thoroughly, but seems to be powerless to control.

Sometimes this unlovely trait comes from self consciousness. Its possessor may really be very shy, painfully so, and her effort to conceal it may result in an exhibition of bravado. With her heart aflutter and cheeks aflame she actually swaggers, talks brusquely and does her best to maintain an appearance of recklessness which is strangely unbecoming to the sex.

Still more frequently may abruptness be ascribed to an overflow of good spirits. A young girl endowed with abundant health and energy is sometimes disposed to regard conventionality as something to be disregarded with impunity. She is apt to declare that she has no patience with the accepted way of doing things, and she adopts whatever is odd and pronounced in manner. She is especially addicted to what she regards as "plain speaking," and her conversation is interlarded with slang expressions. She is intolerant of the advice of her elders, and when it is offered to her she manifests her unwillingness to receive it in terms that are not to be found in the vocabulary of a "perfect lady." This is the type of girl for whom time and experience will do much.

Another species of abruptness may be referred to selfishness pure and simple. As long as she is having a good time a girl of this sort cares little what happens to others. She has no sympathy with those who are under the dominion of "nerves," and she behaves as if she were a firm believer in her mission to shock the more sensitive natures of others.

MRS. GLOVER TESTIFIES

Says Husband Admitted Accusation Against Hattie Le Blanc

Cambridge, Mass., March 1.—Mrs. Lillian M. Glover, widow of Clarence F. Glover, took the stand in the Glover will contest yesterday afternoon. She made grave charges against Hattie Le Blanc, the 16-year-old girl accused of murdering her husband. She coupled her husband in the charges against the girl.

Mrs. Glover declared that her husband had admitted the truth of her charges. She said that when she confronted Hattie the girl screamed and ran away. That, Mrs. Glover said, was on March 31. Then next day she went to the home of Mrs. Kate Sampson and told her about it. Mrs. Sampson is an aunt of Hattie. Mrs. Glover denied that she had ever mentioned buying a revolver to kill her husband.

On the witness stand last week Mrs. Sampson swore that Mrs. Glover said that she had no revolver, but that she would buy one and kill her husband.

TAFT TALKS ON IMMIGRATION

He Praises Jews Who Have Become Part of Our Population

Washington, March 1.—President Taft, speaking in reply to a delegation from an association of foreign language newspapers, virtually declared himself against the restriction of immigration, and took occasion to praise highly the Jews who have come to America from various parts of the world and have become imbued with a true spirit of patriotism.

"The question of limiting immigration," said the president, "in such a way as to shut out the undesirable part of the population of Europe is a question which has addressed itself to congress in the past.

"They rejected the educational limitation on the ground that the limitation was one which did not shut out those whom we most desire to shut out, and that the anarchist—a man who comes here with no loyalty to the new government—is the man who could easily pass a mental examination."

CITY IS STIRRED BY LABOR'S THREAT

Arbitration May Yet Prevail In Philadelphia Strike

Philadelphia, March 1.—There is more talk of arbitration heard in Philadelphia than on any day since the street car men went on strike. Believing that organized labor is in earnest in its decision to back up the trolleymen by causing a general walkout of nearly 100,000 men next Saturday, business men and others who last week appeared to be indifferent about conditions are now more or less alarmed.

Following Sunday's riotous scenes quiet reigned yesterday. The traction company announced that there had been no falling off in the number of cars in operation, but on the other hand, it has been able to put more crews to work.

Through the central sections of the city many cars are being run without even a single policeman aboard, but in the outlying sections mounted escorts are the rule.

OLD ADAGE VERIFIED

Two Poor Girls Prove That Fine Feathers Make Fine Birds

New York, March 1.—The wife of A. J. Powell, a rich piano manufacturer of Brooklyn, told a story to aristocratic dames of this city that is the talk of social circles. She said:

"I brought two young ladies—poor girls—from the East Side to my residence last week, and after dressing them in my most beautiful gowns introduced them into a select and aristocratic assemblage that had come to my home for the evening. The two young ladies deported themselves during the reception so charmingly that two of the gentlemen present were much smitten with them and requested permission to call upon them at their homes."

New Bedford, Mass., March 1.—It is stated that a new million dollar corporation is in process of formation, and that mills to be devoted to the manufacture of fine cotton goods will be erected.

A yarn mill is also to be erected by Abbott P. Smith and others, who have formed a corporation with $1,000,000 capital. The plant will have 80,000 spindles.

BANKER LOST IN FARO GAME

Said to Have Been "Trimmed" to the Tune of $60,000

Boston, March 1.—With the discovery that a well-known Boston banker had been swindled out of $60,000 by the gang that helped wreck the National City bank of Cambridge, the exposure of the great Boston bunco syndicate reached a crisis. This revelation brought the total known operations of the gang up to $204,100, with a certainty that the profits of the syndicate had been much more than that.

The tremendous loss of this banker—whose name is known throughout the New England financial world—was 50 percent greater even than the amount taken from Coleman, the boy bookkeeper of the Cambridge bank. It was taken from a supposedly conservative financial man. That the swindlers succeeded in getting a fortune from him showed conclusively that Boston is the headquarters of one of the strongest, cleverest and most powerful syndicates of crime known in a generation.

Fifteen victims are now known to have supplied this gang with over $200,000. Nor will any of them admit that he fell a prey to the gang. The facts were obtained only after the most exhaustive search. How many more have paid the penalty of the mad race for unearned profit cannot even be guessed. Most men will not confess that they have been fools; to say nothing of admitting that they lost their own money trying to cheat somebody else. So the full extent of the frauds will never be known.

The operations of the gang extended even to a Boston judge, it is learned, and he was induced to descend from the bench, where he was supposed to administer justice and where he had often sentenced poor, unfortunate petty criminals, to try to cheat a set of gamblers. Result, he lost $4000, a year's honest salary.

From the evidence gathered, one of the greatest swindles ever known in Boston is exposed. A gang including nearly a score of Boston sports has worked right and left, taking thousands of dollars from gullible men—merchants, bank employes, professional men and others.

The gang of swindlers is said to have had an office on Beacon street. Here it was that the intended victims were taken to be instructed in the part they were supposed to play in the breaking of the New York bank. Since Wednesday the office has been vacant and the men whose names have been mentioned as members of the gang have been noticeably absent from their customary resorts.

The get-rich plan is attributed to Martin Walsh, a man of world-wide reputation, who is a resident of Melrose, when he is at home. His right-hand man or chief steerer is presented in the person of William Keliher, known as "Big Bill," a good looking, athletic fellow, who has been the wonder of his friends for months past by the way he scattered and displayed $1000 bills.

If the entire story comes into publicity, as it promises to do, the city will stare wonderingly, not only because the scheme shows how easily men can be separated from their money, but also at the standing and respectability of the men who stood ready to work a plan to rob someone, even if the robbing was to be done from a gambler with the aid of a "dishonest" gambling employe.

Boston Crook Says Rhode Island Is a Paradise For Criminals

Providence, March 1.—Rhode Island is a paradise for criminals from all over the country, according to a statement made by Joseph B. Dixon, the Boston sailor, who is in Cranston jail charged with being an accomplice of William Trent, the desperado captured here.

Dixon says that the parting salutation of one criminal to another when one is locked up in a jail, is: "Meet me in Rhode Island when you get out."

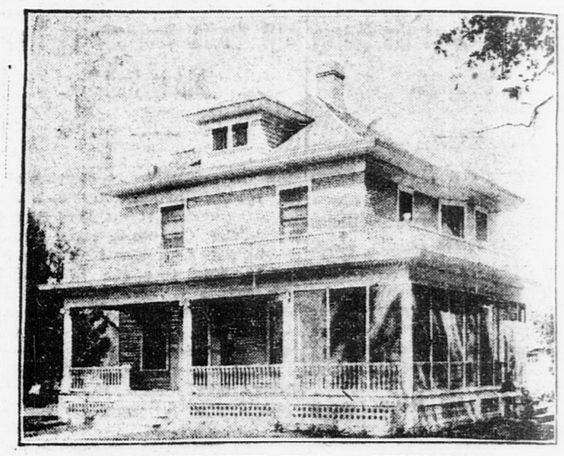
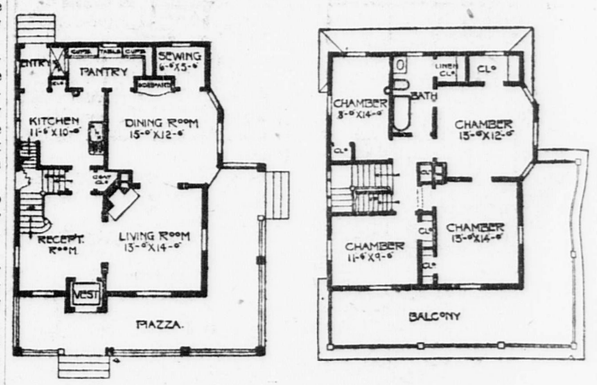
House With a Double Piazza.

Design 927, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect.



PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN. SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

Although this house is of the square type, it has a distinction quite its own, mainly on account of the large piazza, built on two sides of the house. There is a splendid interior arrangement, comprising eight rooms, a bath, a small den or sewing room, as well as a large pantry and entry. There is a side entrance into the dining room. The first story is finished in red oak or birch and the second story in pine to paint. There are birch floors throughout. Size twenty-six feet wide by thirty-four feet deep. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $4,000.

By special arrangement with me the editor of this paper will furnish one complete set of plans and specifications of design No. 927 for $25.

And the Woman Who Would Try to Do a Little Smuggling.

By A. S. CROCKETT.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"Be sure." Mrs. Jeffreys read from her husband's letter, "to declare everything. The customs inspectors are on the alert. The new collector is carrying out the law to the letter, and there is no chance of getting a 'free entry' this year. I spoke to Senator Jones about it, and he assured me that, while he would be glad to give me the same sort of letter as last year, it would be worthless.

"Let's see," she reflected. "Of course I can wear the traveling dress ashore, and then I can also wear that dear little turban. I must muss both up a bit, and I can break the feather in the turban, so that the hat will not look new.

"Heloise!" she called.

"Oui, madame," answered her maid.

"Have you bought much in Paris for yourself?"

"Non, madame; jus' a leetle lace."

"Then you must take one of my trunks for yourself and pack some of my things in it. I will tell you which later."

"Let's see, $100 for each passenger. That makes $200 for Heloise and myself. That black silk alone cost that much, while the other dresses cost—let's see—400 francs plus 500, plus 750. That's 1,650. Five into sixteen goes three times, carry one. Why, 330 plus 200 equals $530, and, merciful heavens, that doesn't count lingerie or stockings or"— And her glance encountered two beautiful Sevres vases standing on the mantel. She gave a scream that brought Heloise to the door.

"It is nothing. I—I thought I saw a mouse."

Heloise picked up her skirts and fled.

"Ah, those vases!" Mrs. Jeffreys resumed. "How on earth am I ever going to get them in? The duty on them alone would be more than $100. Let me think. No," after a pause, "I could not conceal them. Well, let me make the best I can out of the other things. Let's see. I can put the black silk down at, say, $50. The materials did not cost more than $30, I am sure; the other dresses $30, $35 and $40, not counting the one I shall wear. That makes $155 altogether. The lingerie—well, we can change the appearance of most of that by rubbing it on the carpet, and the rest I can divide between Heloise and myself in such a way that I can list the hats and the stockings for $40."

Then she thought of the vases again. Mrs. Jeffreys was still thinking of the vases when the steamship left Cherbourg, and she thought of little else for the first three days. Women homeward bound are sometimes a little talkative when it comes to discussing great bargains they have picked up, but Mrs. Jeffreys maintained a strict silence on this topic, even when her friend Mrs. Burroughs confessed that she had bought lots of things, including yards and yards of lace, and, as for simply paying duty, she would see congress and the president in very hot regions before she would give up a cent. "I shall conceal the lace on my person," she confided. "I have a dress that I am taking home to mother, who, you know, is larger than I, and on the morning we land you will see an extremely matronly person going down the gangplank if you watch me, my dear."

Mrs. Jeffreys sighed. Ah, if she had not bought those vases!

A thought struck her. Why not carry those vases ashore, after all? She excused herself and went to her stateroom, where, after locking the door, she took the two exquisite ornaments from a traveling bag.

She removed her skirts. Then she took a strap from the bag and fastened one end to a vase and the other to a belt. The other she fastened similarly, so that one hung from the front and the other from the back. Then she put on her skirts again and walked about the room.

"I have it at last," she exclaimed joyfully, "only I must be careful about walking."

That day she ate the first hearty luncheon of her voyage, and when in the afternoon the declarations were passed about to be filled by the passengers she made hers out in the fashion she had planned in Paris.

Mrs. Jeffreys did not complete her toilet on the morning the ship arrived until the vessel was coming up from quarantine. Then she went below, locked her door and slipped into the harness she had invented.

She went down the gangway so carefully that her husband, who was at the foot, asked in great concern: "What is the matter? Hurt yourself? You seem lame."

"It is nothing," she assured him. "Just a touch of rheumatism."

While they were waiting under the letter "J" for their baggage to be assembled her husband solicitously urged her to sit on a trunk and spread a steamer rug for her.

"No," she said; "I feel much better standing." At the same time she felt as if she must sink, for the two vases, really light, now weighed a hundred pounds each.

It was an age before the trunks and bags were collected and the customs inspector began his examination. He looked at Mrs. Jeffreys' declaration, and as his eyesight was none of the best he found only what she had listed. Then he called an appraiser to pass upon the value of the goods declared.

The latter gave a sharp look at Mrs. Jeffreys, who was talking very volubly to her husband and telling him in a tone that was audible some distance away how she had taken his advice and declared everything. The official peered into the trunk that was nearest him and then wrote something in red ink on the bottom of the declaration. Then the inspector carefully placed a label on each of the packages showing that they had been passed, and Mrs. Jeffreys in her relief, forgetting her own precious cargo, plumped herself down upon a trunk.

Crash! The bottom of a vase dropped upon the pier and rolled some distance away. Mr. Jeffreys had gone to look for a porter. His wife started to make a rush for the broken piece, but as she did so a keen eyed man who was standing near anticipated her.

"Is that yours, madam?" he demanded.

Mrs. Jeffreys hesitated. "Yes," she said, with a gasp.

"Will you kindly show me the other part of it?"

The woman almost fainted. "Why, it isn't possible—it—er—it's in my trunk!" she finally managed to get out.

"I am sorry, madam, but I must see the other part of this vase. Will you open your trunk?"

Mrs. Jeffreys handed him the keys.

"Which one?"

"This—no, that—no, the other one. Merciful heavens, what shall I do?" And Mrs. Jeffreys sank weeping on one of her trunks just as her husband came back with a porter.

"What is this? Who are you?" he demanded of the other man. The latter showed him the shield of a special officer of the treasury. "I must see the other part of this vase," he repeated to the husband. Mr. Jeffreys, protesting, gave him his card.

"I would advise you to make no scene," the "special" told him. "There are lots of reporters about here, and they would be only too glad of a chance for a sensational story."

He went away and returned with a uniformed inspector, not the old man who had made the previous inspection, but a younger. "Here," he told him, "get this woman's declaration and reinspect those trunks." The "special" stood by while each article was being turned out in a heap on the pier. He fingered the dresses and looked at the declaration. Then he took up several pieces of lingerie and examined them closely.

"Ha, not worn! Apparently rubbed on the floor to give them that appearance. See anything of that broken vase?"

"No," the inspector replied, "but here is a lot of lace." It was that belonging to Heloise.

"Tell the appraiser in charge to come here."

The latter was soon bending over the pile of finery. He looked at each garment separately and then put down a lot of figures.

"The total is $700," the "special" informed Mrs. Jeffreys. "Under the law we have a perfect right to seize the contents of the trunk, but to avoid unnecessary notoriety we will permit you to pay the duty and take the trunks away with you. Wait a moment; I forgot. We have not found that broken vase." He turned to Mrs. Jeffreys.

"Let me go aboard the steamship," she begged, "and I will find it for you."

"I have no objection, madam," he replied, "but an inspector must accompany you."

Mrs. Jeffreys started back. "Oh, horrors! Never!" she protested.

"A woman inspector, madam," the "special" explained. But Mrs. Jeffreys still protested vigorously. Mr. Jeffreys, feeling that the scene had gone far enough, demanded to see the official in charge of the pier.

"I regret it, sir," he said, "but your wife will have to accompany the woman inspector on board the ship and be searched."

It is best not to follow the two women into that stateroom. The inspectress came out with a broken Sevres vase and a whole one and several pairs of stockings.

"Now, madam," said the "special," "we shall not take into account the new dress and hat you are wearing. Under the circumstances I think you would prefer to have us seize what is left of the 'pair' of vases. Now, if your husband will step to the cashier's office and pay the duty on $700 worth of goods, less $200 worth allowed for yourself and maid, I think the requirements of the law will be met."

When they had got into their carriage Mr. Jeffreys turned to his wife sternly.

"Why did you not do as I told you?" he demanded.

She disregarded his question. "Oh, the horrible customs laws of this country! They are enough to make an American deny that he is such!" she exclaimed.

"Yes; that is just the way a woman would put it," her husband returned. "On the other hand, suppose the treasury agent had handed us over to the newspapers."

"Oh, don't! I can't bear it!" She buried her face in her hands and shuddered. "Oh, Gerald, I have been punished enough! Just forgive me, and I'll promise never to buy a single thing in Paris again!"

And Mr. Jeffreys, being a tender hearted man and tolerant of woman's little weaknesses and, besides, having an eye to future economies, promptly absolved her.

NATIONAL HOME FOR THE THEATER

Scheme to Better the Drama and Help Actors.

VAST STRUCTURE TO BE BUILT

Actors' Fund of America to Put Up Building In New York For Housing Varied Co-operative Charitable and Business Stage Enterprises.

Daniel Frohman, president of the Actors' Fund of America, announced the other day a project involving philanthropy, business and an investment of at least $500,000 which may go far toward revolutionizing the dramatic profession in the United States. Managers, players and to a considerable extent the public will all be affected to a great degree by the consummation of the plan.

The plan involves the erection of a half million dollar structure near Central Park South, in New York city, which will not only house what may be described as the "United Charities" of the three allied professions—the drama, music and the fine arts—but also a noncommercial theater for the testing of new plays, a general booking agency, meeting rooms for actors and managers and the business offices of an old age pension fund. Of the various branches of the great work planned this last part of the general plan and the national booking agency will touch most directly upon the actors, for at present they have to give anywhere from 10 per cent to 50 per cent of their salaries to the private agencies.

To Cost Half a Million.

In discussing the vast project Mr. Frohman said that, while two years ago the plan was hailed as wildly visionary by leading members of the profession, they have now all come to see its practicability, even necessity.

"We hope to begin operations by next fall," he continued. "We expect to clear at least $200,000 at the coming Actors' fund fair to be held in the Seventy-first Regiment armory, New York, during the week of May 9. A good share of this must go to the fund itself, which is sadly in need of repletion, but the rest should be used for this vast philanthropic scheme from which investment an income can be procured.

"It will take a very large structure to house so many interests, and it will not cost less than $500,000. We do not believe that there will be any difficulty in raising this sum through the fair, benefits and donations, as several of our wealthiest philanthropists have already promised their support.

Scope of Vast Enterprise.

"One whole floor will be given to the 'United Charities' of the three professions. Youth is the chief asset of most of the vaudeville players, singers, chorus girls and especially the hundreds of art models. As a rule, when these people are deprived of their means of livelihood the outside charitable organizations give them a chilly reception. The Actors' Fund of America cannot cope with all our own poverty, and the other organizations are even harder pushed. With all these charities under one roof much more can be accomplished.

"Supplementing this is an old age pension fund, whereby the members of the profession themselves can provide against want in old age.

"A great national theatrical exchange, which will do away with individual booking offices and the big fees they exact for engagements of only a week or a month, will occupy one more floor. It will be a good thing for the manager and also for the actor, who will no longer have to tramp from office to office. It will also protect the actor from unscrupulous managers and dubious, questionable places of amusement. This is particularly necessary for the art models. The Art Workers' club is doing much noble work to protect these beautiful young women, and our national organization would extend that work even further.

To Aid Young Playwrights.

"Another floor will be devoted to the development of the native drama. Failures in the last two years have been very frequent. To minimize the risk of failure we will have a small theater to seat about 300 persons where new plays may be tried out without going to the expense of collecting a company, preparing costly scenery and going out on the road for a trial. There will be plenty of stage people in the building who will be glad to give some spare time to this tryout. It will also make it easy for young authors to get a trial for their plays and a thorough hearing from the managers.

"There would also be lecture rooms on this floor, where critics and professors of dramatic literature would be invited to deliver addresses on topics of interest to the profession and the public."

The club features of the plan comprise a big meeting room for the profession, a restaurant with reasonable prices and a library.

Skating Rink on a Hotel Roof.

A section of the roof of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York city has been turned into a roller skating rink, and there upon sunshiny days scores of guests enjoy the pastime. A number of children whose parents are staying at the hotel have organized afternoon skating parties.

STRING EMBROIDERY.

Charming Results Obtained With Extremely Primitive Materials.

SMART DRESS TRIMMINGS.

The Sewing Necessary Is Simply Satin Stitch — Shading Obtained With Darker Linen For Applique and Light String For Outline Cord.

Of the new embroideries and fancy stitches which have been evolved by the sudden revival of artistic needlework astonishing results are offered by the deft handling of such primitive materials as coarse linen and common string.

At a recent exhibition held in Paris by the Salon des Artistes Francais the greatest piece of attraction was without doubt the magnificent portiere, cushion covers and dress trimmings exhibited by a woman artist.

This artist—for, indeed, it requires the soul of an artist to produce such work—showed what could be done with these rough and ordinary materials. By the clever manipulation of a piece of coarse linen and a ball of string beautiful landscapes are produced. Country scenery, sea waves and the picture of a cottage were exhibited as a result of the clever invention.

The artistic taste of the worker is brought into full play, as the color of the work is necessarily grayish fawn, and talent and a sense of beauty are needed to create the beautiful and simple lines which harmonize with the materials employed. A drawing is traced on a foundation of linen in the usual way, and after the linen has been well stretched on a frame the outlines already traced are followed with different strings, which are couched and stitched down, thickest strings being used for the outside of the large conventional designs, flowers, leaves, etc., while the veining of the leaves, the inside of the flowers, and the shading of the general design is worked by the thinner strings. The sewing necessary is simple satin stitch, always remembering to cross the cord at right angles and at regular intervals, although sometimes buttonhole stitch is used by reason of the firmer edge it gives to the work.

Shading is obtained by using darker tones of linen for the appliques and a lighter shade of string for the outline cord.

The cushion illustrated represents a charming pattern of umbelliferous flowers, among which a spider has woven its web, the thin threads of which decorate lightly the middle of the design, leaving the important part of the work on the border.

The conventional scrolls of the corners are worked in applique, lighter pieces of linen being cut into shape and placed on the foundation. These pieces of linen are cut with very sharp scissors, as the linen has a great tendency to fray, and secured in position on the work by steel pins stuck through in an upright position and then firmly tacked.

To cover the raw edge of the linen applique and to form a bold outline couched fine cord is used, but when doing work of this kind great care must be taken in stitching this fine cord so as to grip the raw edge of the applique sufficiently to keep it down, yet not enough to allow it to show under the cord outside the line of the design. The cord must be sewed down with very fine linen thread of exactly the same color, beginning from right to left and from outside the outline inward, the cord being held in such a way as to keep it even.

The fine veining of the leaves in the cushion is done in dark, fine string, the stems of the umbelliferous flowers and the spider web in couched cord of different shades and thicknesses. A charming touch of novelty is given by some of the flowers worked in white string, each little petal being done in a French knot, the spider being embroidered in raised satin stitch.

The beauty of the new needlework is that it can be applied as well to the ornamentation of heavy curtains and other furniture draperies as to the dainty and delicate trimmings used for evening dresses.

She Knew How to Cook.

The Countess of Colloredo-Mansfeld, in Rome, is an American girl who has set the fashionable people of the Holy City talking about her cooking. Recently her cook did not suit her at all, and she went into the kitchen and cooked a meal herself that showed the cook that she knew what she was talking about and would have to have what she wanted.

TO BRIGHTEN FARM HOMES.

Work of Miss Ilena Bailey, a University of Missouri Student.

Miss Ilena M. Bailey, a student in the home economics department of the University of Missouri at Columbia, Mo., has invaded a new field. She is a lecturer to farmers and particularly to farmers' wives.

Under the direction of the state board of agriculture she goes over the state to farmers' institutes. Her object is to get the women and girls of Missouri interested in better home work and the lessening of the drudgery found in so many country homes. The board sends her out to talk a new side of farm life at the institutes in the winter months.

"I believe the girls should have the same chance as the boys," Miss Bailey says. "The farm boys are given the opportunity to take part in corn growing and stock judging contests, and the girls likewise should have something to stimulate their interest in the great work of the home. At Sarcoxie we have started the first of our contests for girls; it is a buttonhole contest."

In her talks Miss Bailey discusses foods, clothing, homes and home furnishings. She attempts to organize homemakers' clubs at all these institute meetings.

Miss Bailey has several dates for farmers' institutes to fill yet this spring.

A NEW CANAL ON MARS.

Positive Proof That Planet Is Inhabited, Claims Professor Lowell.

A new canal on Mars a thousand miles long has been discovered by Professor Percival Lowell of the Flagstaff observatory, Arizona. This is evidence, according to the astronomer, that the planet is inhabited. The announcement of the discovery was made the other day to Professor S. W. Burnham of the Yerkes observatory. Professor Lowell spent a few hours in Chicago recently on his way west.

Not only did he see the new canal, but he photographed it. Previous photographs of this region made as late as last May failed to show any trace of the canal. The fact that it developed between May and September, when it was first observed, Professor Lowell regarded as positive proof that it was artificial and therefore that living beings exist on Mars.

The new canal extends southeast from the region of vegetation, known as Syrtis Major, through the great plain of Libya.

FARMER'S HINTS ON LIVING.

Drop Style, Pay Your Debts, Buy For Cash and Look Ahead.

Be a farmer and snap your fingers at the monopolists, says O. C. Siggsworth, a Venango county (Pa.) agriculturist. "But if you must live in the city," he says, "then buy your apples when they are at rock bottom prices and make apple butter. Lay in fifty quarts of tomatoes when they are 50 cents a peck and preserve them.

"I take issue with those who say things cost more than they used to," he continued. "In 1872 I paid $1 for four pounds of green coffee, 12½ cents a pound for sugar, 15 cents a pound for prunes and 25 cents a pound for rice. I paid $3 for a hat I could buy now for $1. $3 for gloves that I could duplicate now for $1.50, 45 cents a yard for checking for shirts, $10 for wedding boots and $8 for an ordinary pair of shoes.

"The wage earner is hampered by credit. He goes into debt for two weeks, and his money has to be paid out the day he gets it. It would be better for him to go hungry for two weeks than never to have any money ahead.

"My advice to those who don't like life on a farm is, Drop style, pay your debts, buy for cash and look ahead."

Actors Want Postal Savings Bank.

A petition has been put in circulation among actors and other theatrical folk advocating the establishment of a postal savings bank in the United States. The petition is directed to congress and reads: "We, the undersigned, engaged in the theatrical business, desire to express our interest in the passage of a bill establishing a postal savings bank as an adjunct to the United States postal service. Such a department would be of the greatest service not only to several hundred thousand people connected in some capacity with the acting business, but to every one compelled by business to travel continually."

SURPRISE AT WOLLASTON

Presentation to Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Smith

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Smith were agreeably surprised at their home on Prospect avenue Monday evening by a large party of their friends. The family is leaving Wollaston the middle of March for North Stoughton where Mr. Smith will engage in fruit culture upon a large estate.

The affair took the form of a farewell gathering and was in charge of Mrs. George Taylor. In behalf of those present the couple were presented with a handsome library table George Taylor making a most appropriate presentation speech.

Games of all kinds were enjoyed most informally and refreshments were served. Harry Smith contributed several piano solos. Those present departed at a late hour extending their best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Smith in their new home.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, Rev. and Mrs. Wesley Wiggin, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sedgwick, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ewertz, Mr. and Mrs. George Crothers, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Cassidy, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Dimock, Mr. and Mrs. Bent, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Crittenden, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Phelps, Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Belcher, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sutermeister, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Epps, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Poole, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kay, Mrs. David Stiles, Mrs. A. B. Woodhead, Mrs. Keith, Mrs. L. W. Grant, Miss A. Merrill, Miss Helen Earle, Mrs. Jane Hopkins, Mrs. Storer, Miss Ruth Epps, Augustus Daly and Mrs. Lupton.

MAIL BAGS FOR CLOTHING.

Where Some of United States Government's Property Goes.

United States mail bags are used in some foreign countries as material for clothing, for saddlecloths and for packs on mules. This curious fact was developed by an investigation into the circumstance of a steerage passenger who arrived at New Orleans a few weeks ago having her belongings carefully tucked away in a mail bag of the United States. The woman came from Guatemala. Her belougings were seized by the customs officers, and she was detained. She explained that she acquired the mail bag in Guatemala, where it was on sale, not knowing that she was committing any wrong. After an examination she was dismissed.

It is shown by the records of the postoffice department that a large number of mail bags in which foreign mail is sent disappear each year, but it is impossible to keep a definite trace of them. Diplomatic representatives of the government have reported from time to time that the material used in United States mail bags frequently is found in possession of natives of countries like those of Guatemala. The loss sustained by the United States through the disappearance of mail bags, however, is comparatively small, not exceeding probably 150 a year.

—The city council of Lynn has started in early to regulate this year's Fourth of July celebration with a view to bringing about a quieter and more rational observance of that holiday. The proposed ordinance prohibiting any person from setting off any where within the city limits or exposing for sale therein any blank cartridges, fire crackers exceeding two inches in length, torpedoes exceeding 3-4 of an inch in diameter or any kind of fireworks containing powder more explosive than black powder. Violations of this ordinance are to be punished by a fine not exceeding $20 for each offense.

THE MOTHERS' MEETING.

Tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock the Mothers' Association will meet in the chapel of Bethany Congregational church. Rev. Edward A. Chase of Wollaston will conduct the devotional service. At 3.30 Dr. John A. Gordon of this city will give the ladies present a talk which will be very helpful. There are books printed and lectures delivered upon "What to do emergencies" but we are seldom directed "What not to do in emergencies." Among other things, Dr. Gordon will tell those present of some things which are unwise to do when in doubt as to the proper course to pursue.

The women of this association are hoping that there will be a large audience. The meeting is free to all women. The purpose of the meeting is two fold to entertain and instruct those present. The afternoon will be most profitably spent. Besides giving the mothers an opportunity for rest, there is this unusual chance of learning what is so valuable in such an agreeable manner.

SPORTING CHAT.

That boxing match between George Jennings and Frederick Schenkelberger came off Saturday afternoon as scheduled and proved extremely interesting for those fortunate enough to view it. Paul Blackmur made a popular decision in declaring it a draw after six rounds. Jennings declares he wanted to continue, for he only studied his opponent's style in those six rounds, but Fred only answered "George couldn't do it."

Would it not be well for all of the clubs in local sporting circles to turn out in a body tonight to welcome Admiral Bowles home? He surely deserves all the praise that we can bestow on him, and besides it would show that you also are awake.

"Al" Rogers of Harvard college, the crack left end on the football team last fall and well known by many in this city who were schoolmates at Thayer Academy, stands fifth among Harvard's strongest men. When it is considered that Jack Johnson, the pugilistic champion's record was 860 on a recent visit there, we can realize how strong Rogers is for his record is 1071.6.

George Grant of the Quincy alleys is very much pleased with Poland's reply to his challenge through this column, but Grant thinks it no more than fair that ten strings be rolled at Norfolk Downs and ten at Quincy. He also is willing to let it go as a championship match for Norfolk county. Get together boys and I'll warrant you will find plenty of interest in the games.

Hats off to C. M. Gifford of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. He is wearing a smile that won't come off and well he may after that meet of Saturday.

Quincy owes much to "Babe" Marceau for his wonderful feat in breaking the record for the mile at the New England Interscholastic A. A. in Boston on Saturday. This record will often be referred to until broken and every time it is mentioned Quincywill be thought of. Everybody should thank "Babe" for this free "ad."

Quincy Y. M. C. A. beats Newton Y. M. C. A. at basket ball. Gee that sounds great. But did you notice how it was done? Dakers and Glover were put in place of McKenzie and Mundie and the fresh men proved equal to the task.

Baseball will soon be the rage, even now the big teams are leaving for the sunny South and the great National game cannot come too quick to satisfy the Quincy royal rooters. It certainly will sound good to me, when I hear that old familiar "play ball" cry, and I'll gamble I am not alone in looking at it this way.

GRAND HOME COMING.

Thousands of Quincy People Out in the Rain to Greet President Bowles of Fore River Shipbuilding Company.

ADMIRAL FRANCIS T. BOWLES

President Fore River Shipbuilding Company of Quincy, Mass.

GREETING:

Quincy Welcomes Your Return

She extends her hospitality to you with the utmost cordiality.

She is proud of your achievement abroad in forwarding commercial enterprise; and greater still is her pride in you as the leader; strong, courteous, truthful, irradiating always an influence for good.

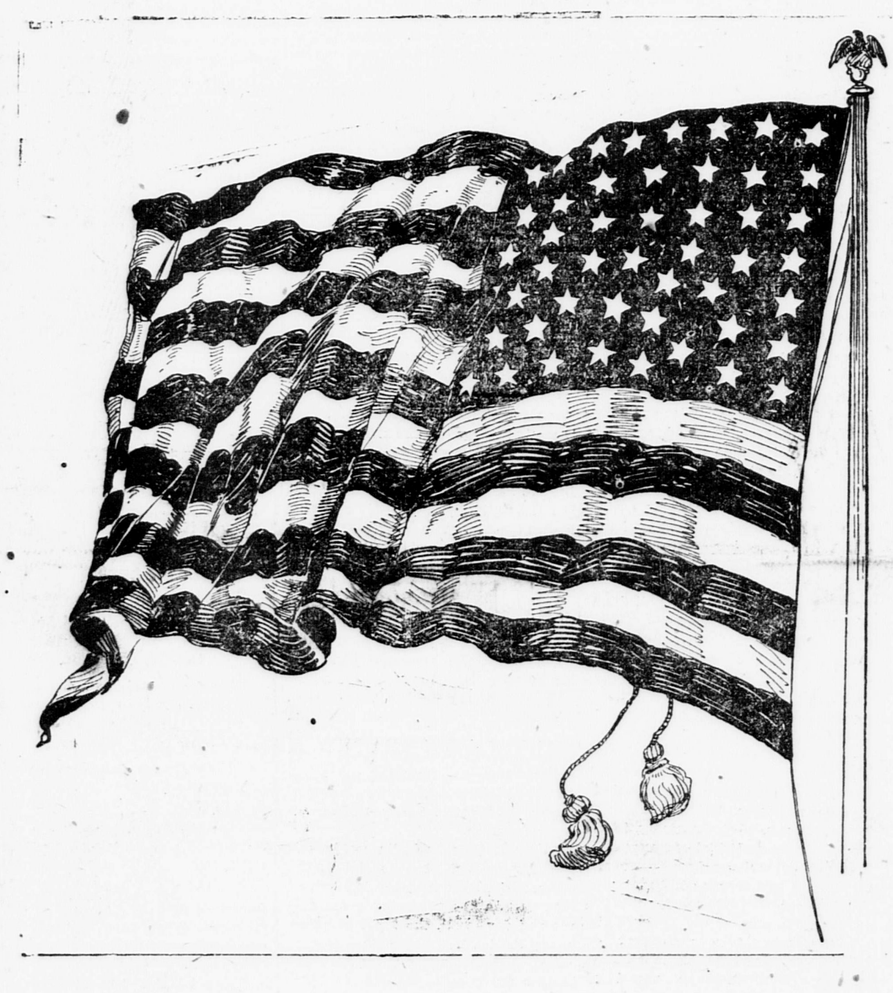
A MAN AMONG MEN

plain, simple and kindly.

Quincy gives you a warm place in her affections.

May your stay be long with her, and cement an ever increasing bond of deep regard.

WILLIAM T. SHEA, Mayor



"FORE RIVER, FORE RIVER, FOREVER!"

by C. M. Duggan.

Proud Quincy's true citizens gather tonight
Fore River, Fore River, Fore River
Each heart and each tongue speaks with fervent delight
Fore River, Fore River, Fore River
The man in whose honor this banquet is spread
Of him it has often and truly been said
The pride of the ship-yard its leader and head
Is Admiral Bowles of Fore River

CHORUS

Here's to our Country whose service enrolls
The best blood within it, brave true-hearted souls
Our Army, our Navy, and Admiral Bowles
Fore River, Fore River, forever.

Our Argentine sister in soft balmy climes
Fore River, Fore River, Fore River
A navy would build, to be up to the times
Fore River, Fore River, Fore River
Her Naval Commission ingeniously planned
Two battleships, stately magnificent, grand
In the subsequent contest we've all seen the hand
Of Admiral Bowles of Fore River

CHORUS

The French, the Italians, the British and Dutch
Fore River, Fore River, Fore River
All wooed this fair maid, did they win her, not much
Fore River, Fore River, Fore River
This keen Southern lady persuing the bids
Said, "Begone Europeans, you're out of it, kids,"
Then stammered, and blushed, smiled, and rolled up her lids
Towards, Admiral Bowles of Fore River.

CHORUS

The Admiral knows every inch of a ship
Fore River, Fore River, Fore River
He grasped this big contract with Herculean grip
And that's how it comes to Fore River
A bid of eight figures not often is seen
It means to our city some miles of "long green"
Yes, twenty-two millions from far Argentine.
The bulk will be spent in Fore River.

CHORUS

Who leads is construction of fighting machines
Fore River, Fore River, Fore River
Best engines, best turbines, best fast submarines
Fore River, Fore River, Fore River
The dreadnaughts, of Europe, are monsters, they say,
If ever they'll meet Uncle Sam in affray
Supreme Yankee genius will blow them away
By battleships built at Fore River.

CHORUS

Arise every banqueter, drain out your bowls
To Admiral Bowles of Fore River
And here's to the shipyard his genius controls
Fore River, Fore River, Fore River
Mechanics and workmen we toast them herewith
Here's every department its kin and its kith
And plain, unassuming, keen, Manager Smith
Fore River, Fore River, forever.

CHORUS

GREETING ON ARRIVAL

Depot Square and City Square a Mass of Humanity

Did Quincy enthuse?

Well yes, it certainly did.

And to a greater extent than ever before. It has often been said that people of this good old city are slow to enthuse over anything but Tuesday night showed, that when keyed up to the proper pitch, her citizens can enthuse like no other place.

It was a royal welcome that she gave to Admiral Bowles who had come home from abroad with the contracts for two mammoth battleships and half a dozen turbine engines, and if he ever had any doubts about his efforts being appreciated, or that the full worth of the company which he represents were not well understood, these doubts must have been dispelled.

ESCORTED BY MUSIC

While Bells Ring and Colored Fires Are Burned

Chief of Police Burrell and Lieut. McKay, in full uniform with a squad of Quincy's finest was on hand to lead the procession and following them came Albert T. Whitman, the drum major, the City Band and the two carriages. Then came the drum corps, several clubs and the citizens in general.

As the train pulled into the depot the bells on the First church and the Bethany church pealed forth their welcome, and a salute of 21 guns was fired from a small cannon stationed on top of the Savings Bank building. This gun was in charge of James Nash, a former naval man, and he did his job well.

As the procession passed the rooms of the Granite City club located in

RECEPTION AT ALPHA HALL

Young America Out in Force and a Proud Day

Young America held the fort at the reception to President Bowles at Alpha hall. Adults found it very difficult to get anywhere near the building as fully 2000 swarmed about the entrance for nearly an hour. Most of the business men did not attend the reception but went directly to Music hall, while it was too stormy for ladies in general to venture out, especially as dress with them is important at a social gathering of that kind. Perhaps 300 to 400 ladies and gentlemen attended the reception, but there were nearly 1000 boys and girls of all ages many of them quite young. Probably the youngest was Sadie Pottle, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Pottle of Cottage street.

It was about 6.20 when the honored

BANQUET AT MUSIC HALL

Five Hundred Business Men Show Appreciation

Long before 7 o'clock those who were to attend the banquet began to gather at Music hall, as it was the desire of the committee that everybody should be seated before the Admiral arrived at the hall. The checking arrangement was admirably carried out, clothing being checked at the regular cloak room, and also in the rear of the platform.

The hall as laid out for the banquet looked very inviting. Across the head of the hall was a long table for the guests of honor, speakers and officials while lengthwise of the hall were seven long tables. Across the front of the platform was a row of handsome potted plants and on the guest of honor table were two handsome mounds of roses and numerous pot-

The Re-Birth of Quincy Says Rev. Dr. Hardy

Mayor Shea presided at the post prandial and as he arose to welcome the Admiral he was greeted with a great outburst of applause and cries of "What's the matter with Shea? He's all right." Mayor Shea said:

"Honored Guest and Fellow Citizens:—We are gathered tonight to do honor to one who has already done honor to Quincy. It has been well and truly said that "Peace hath her victories no less than war." Our guest of this evening although educated and trained as a naval man has had a long and notable career in preserving the peace of his country by keeping her prepared to meet any foe. In his last victory won after a hard and keen contest with the best ship-building brains of the world, he

It was pleasing to note that President Bowles appreciated the hearty welcome at his home coming and the gift of the scroll. His address follows:

"I want to assure you that I am glad to be home again. When I was smoking my pipe aboard the Auguste Victoria amidst a lively hurricane 1200 miles from New York, I received the courteous and kindly invitation of his honor the mayor, in which he did not spare words at 10 dollars apiece and I immediately wrote out my acceptance with pleasure, stating that I was glad to get home and that I would even be grateful and pleased to meet the tax assessors and board of health.

"Of course you must expect me to talk a little shop; I never fail to do it when I get the chance. Some few years ago we undertook what was a

"The Salem and the North Dakota have covered themselves and those who built them with glory. During the past year the great shipbuilding firms of Great Britain have taken the license of the Curtis turbine and have already launched a vast cruiser and have taken further orders from the British admiralty.

No man in the recollection of the ollest citizens ever saw a more enthusiastic demonstration, than that which started with his arrival of he train from Boston at 6.07, until the departure of the 10.08 train for Boston which bore the Admiral and Mrs. Bowles to their home.

City Square was packed with humanity. Men, women and children vied with each other for points of vantage to see the honored guest pass on his way to Alpha hall. Mud and rain did not appear to make any difference other than perhaps these elements kept some people away who otherwise would have been out. All along the route from the depot to the hall where the reception was held the streets were brightly illuminated with red fire, which vied with the business houses which were brightly illuminated, giving the city a more cosmopolitan appearance than it ever had before.

The City band and Quincy fife and drum corps arrived in City Square at 5.30 and from then until the train arrived the air was full of martial music. As the time for the train to arrive approached the crowd about the depot platform was almost suffocating. Drawn up at the platform were two closed carriages and as soon as the train arrived and the Admiral and Mrs. Bowles stepped off they were welcomed by Mayor Shea and escorted to the first carriage. The second carriage was occupied by Henry L. Kincaide, secretary, and James F. Burke, treasurer, of the general committee and S. T. MacQuarrie, Admiral Bowles' private secretarp, who had accompanied the Admiral and Mrs. Bowles from Boston.

the Savings Bank building quantities of red fire was lighted in the window and thousands of old playing cards went fluttering through the air the red glare, a pretty sight. Red fire was also burned all along the line, and the streets and sidewalks were packed to suffocation. In a few minutes Alpha hall was reached and here the reception was held which lasted until after 7 o'clock.

The floral decorations were in charge of Derringer of Norfolk Downs and he was complimented on the excellent taste displayed. Over the orchestra was a large reproduction of the seal of the city flanked on either side with two American flags while on the walls on either side of the platform were other large Aferican flags displayed at full length.

Place cards were in position at the head table showing where each guest was to sit, while at the head ends of several of the tables in the centre of the hall were other place cards. At the head table were the following: Henry L. Kincaide, Eugene R. Stone, president of the Board of Trade; Clarence Burgin, Eben W. Sheppard, president of the Merchants' Association; Hon. Eugene C. Hultman, Henry G. Smith, general manager of the Fore River Co., Ralph W. Hobbs, president of the City Council; Ward W. Whitcher, Hon. William T. Shea, Admiral Francis T. Bowles, Mrs. F. T. Bowles, Theophilus King, Rev. Dr. E. N. Hardy, Rupert F. Claflin, Frank F. Crane, Dock and Water Front Commissioner; S. T. MacQuarrie, secretary of the Fore River Co., City Treasurer John Curtis and James F. Burke.

Other cards were for F. O. Wellington, of the Fore River Co.; J. C. Murray, president of the Granite Manufacturers' Association; Hon. Russell A. Sears, City Clerk Harrison A. Keith, John Cashman, J. A. Sedgwick, treasurer of the Fore River Co.; Representatives Thomas and Langelier; Overseer of the Poor, James H. Elcock; Principal Assessor Warren W. Adams; Assistant General Manager Brown of the Fore River Co.; Hon. H. O. Fairbanks, Hon. C. M. Bryant, Delcevare King, Paul R. Blackmur, president of the Citizens' Association; Hon. John O. Hall, Dexter E. Wadsworth, Hon. John F. Merrill, Edward J. Murphy, Hon. W. S McNary, City Solicitor John W. McAnarney, John L. Miller, chairman of the School Committee, and for the press and drum major.

At one of the tables on the east side of the hall were many members of the Granite City club, the business men's club of the city. These gentlemen wore a red bow in the coat lapel as a distinguishing mark. On the platform was Wilson's orchestra, and never did this orchestra appear to better advantage. The selections were largely of popular airs and as these were played the men sang the choruses led by President Tilden of the Granite City club, and its quartette of vocalists.

Once when the Star Spangled Banner was sung, everybody arose to their feet spontaneously and waved their hands on high. Then someone in the rear of the hall persuaded "the only Galen" to sing this air which he did accompanied by the orchestra.

It was planned that the dinner should commence at 7 o'clock and it was but ten minutes later when prayer was offered by Dr. Hardy and the first course was served. Through it all the only lady present was Mrs. Bowles and although sometimes the air was a little foggy with smoke, she entered into the spirit of the occasion with true American spirit and evidently enjoyed it as much as any one of the five hundred men. It seemed a little odd to see one lady with such a large body of men but it only went to show her loyalty to the Admiral and that the Admiral desired that his true helpmate should share in the festivities of the evening.

The menu was an excellent one, and will be found on another page. C. C. Whittemore was the caterer. There was plenty of food and it was well served. A little over an hour was occupied over the different courses on the menu card, and at the conclusion when Bill Shea cigars had been lighted, the post prandial exercises commenced.

While the ices were being served during the banquet a large plate of cream was brought on and placed in front of Admiral Bowles. The cream was fashioned to represent a large battleship from which two small American flags were flying.

RECEPTION AT ALPHA HALL

guest reached Alpha hall, and there were three in the reception party which took a position directly in front of the plaform. President Bowles was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Bowles and Mayor Shea, and all took considerable pleasure in greeting the children as well as the adults.

Had not the crowd of people been systematically handled it would have been impossible for so many to have greeted the Admiral, but from the street to the platform, and out again almost, the people were kept in line by the police, so that over thirty a minute shook hands with the Mayor and Admiral and Mrs. Bowles.

The ushers were Clarence Burgin, Edward J. Murphy, Delcevare King, John W. McAnarney, Eben W. Sheppard, Walter S. Pinkham, Dexter E. Wadsworth and Henry L. Kincaide, but after the start most of the work devolved on Mr. King, who spoke the person's name as he approached the receiving party.

Wilson's orchestra was stationed on the platform behind a bank of palms and other plants, and played popular music.

Some of the committee wanted to stop the reception at 6.45 the advertised time, but no such disappointment for Young America. Not until 7.10, when there came a break in the line, was the reception brought to an end, and the guests were escorted to Music hall.

IN FASHION'S REALM

This is a peaceful time of the year about clothes. We have ridden out the storms of Autumn, outlived the changes of Winter, and are looking quietly forward to what may happen next. We are not regarding the coming events with alarm. This is not because we feel sure that nothing will happen, but our peace of mind is born of confidence in our strength.

We know that we will not be called on to stand anything more severe, exhausting, or changeable than what has happened. We have been through the worst and gained experience. That experience is at hand to meet any disster in clothes that may come with the first warm weather.

Another reason for peacefulness is that we are not overstrenuous about buying new clothes. Even the fortunate ones who migrate to the South for Lent are not so concerned with the models of their gowns as with the fabrics.

There is a good deal of talk about the new Spring styles early in the year, but it is mostly talk. It is quite true that the great shops and designers have the last French models and that these last French models often spell out Spring styles, but the woman who is geeting clothes at this time of the year is not very apt to indulge in a new model, untried and practically unlaunched.

There is much for her to choose from among the Winter styles that she is quite able to build up an artistic and worth-while wardrobe, if she needs one just now, out of what has been, grafted on the rumors of what is to come.

The majority of women do not contemplate a wardrobe of any proportions at this time of the year. No matter how active they are or how their energies run at full tide, they are naturally glad to drop any problems in clothes for a while.

True, Lent is no longer a season for sackcloth, while the fashion of the world yields to the Church in drawing the line at great balls, receptions, and other formal ceremonious occasions, it dines at home and in public, it plays bridge, goes to the opera, has an endless series of theatre parties and a succession of musicales. And for all of these the fashionable world dresses as smartly in Lent as it does after Easter.

The attractive and popular custom of wearing collarless frocks of soft fabrics and handsome weaves for all occasions except those spent in the open has brought about extra good dressing among women of all kinds of purses.

The day of the unattractive house gown with its high neck, boned collar, and sometimes shabby severity has passed, happily for us as a Nation.

The fashion of dressing attractively in good-looking gowns cut low at the neck has spread among all classes, whether they be fashionable or not. On the street women are especially fastidious of their clothes this season. We went back, whole-heartedly, in the man-like coat and skirt of heavy suiting, and we will continue to wear it through the mid-season and the Spring. It is the only suitable one for this life we lead. Women go out early in the morning, drop into a restaurant or private house for luncheon in a casual manner, and finish up a round of things before the more formal hours after 4 o'clock.

Suits that have to stand so much service and the American woman wears her clothes hard must be well cut and well put together. This is the secret of a gown lasting and keeping its shape.

There is an art about sewing the seams and snipping the material that means a perfect hang until the cloth is worn out.

The incoming tide of belts is rather remarkable. For seasons all garments have been beltless, and now they have appeared everywhere on everything that has a waist line. One rarely sees the plain princess frock of last Winter, and the one called moyenage, without a belt, already looks old-fashioned.

Tunics that have been guiltless of belts for two seasons now have this accessory as the chief feature. Even coats have belts; those for street wear have them of the material or of soft patent-leather run through mother-of-pearl buckles in front, and those for motoring and driving have heavily stitched belts attached to the foundation and lifted slightly above the normal waist line.

There is nothing simple or inconspicuous about these belts when they are used on house gowns. They are ornate, resplendent, and expensive. The shops show wonderful materials out of which to make them, all suggestive of the Eastern gorgeousness that has been part of our clothes all season. Metal nets, heavily embroidered in gold and silver, in crystals and beads, taking the form of Egyptian characters and symbols, are favored.

That these belts may be more conspicous, they are outlined at both edges with a band of brilliant sequins in such colors as turquois, peacock green and blue, Burgundy red, and black.

Other belts are as massive and heavy as those worn by Otello on the stage. They are made of linked metal, set with heavy opaque stones, and ending in massive buckles. It is doubtful as to whether they are really artistic. They smack too strongly of the footlights. They can be prettily imitated with the heavy metal meshed nets, which hold any amount of embroidery and which sell at reasonable prices, worked out in sumptious designs.

These fit into the figure with more grace than metal does and are therefore more attarctive. The velvet or satin rose, or the single cut stone, remains in fashion as a finish, instead of a buckle.

For every-day wear belts are excessively popular, especially the soft patent leather ones. Remember that the stiff ones are not in style and that they are not becoming to the figure. In the days of tiny waists it was all very well to wear any belt that did not lessen its size, but in these days of the twenty-eight-inch average measurement one wants soft and supple materials to do the measuring. They are more complimentary.

These belts are from two to three inches wide, and instead of being finished with leather buckles are run through oblong buckles of smoked pearl, as well as those of mother-of-pearl. Both are in fashion. The carved gold and silver ones are also in style, but they do not suit their surroundings as well as the pearl ones, or even those of varnished leather.

These belts will be very popular on one-piece frocks, not pulled in, but run through straps of patent leather sewed to the frock. If this is not convenient in the home sewing room, then heavy strips of the fabric are used.

While patent leather is a preferred belting, there is a good deal of saddle leather used, some of it perforated and some of it plain. This is only worn with gown that harmonize with natural leather tones.

There are two distinct style s of wearing these belts, and by far the prettier is the one that lifts the waist line without destroying its curve. This is easily managed by the strips through which the belt is run.

The other way is newer than the Empire line and growing in favor, but is not so attractive. This is a Buster Brown fashion. The belt goes through strips of fabric placed well down toward the point of the hips and is loosely fastened in front.

Sleeves are always interesting, and new one are enticing. The one thing that most women yearn afterin a gown is a novel arm covering. She has enough styles to choose from now without drawing on her imagination.

One can do pretty much as one pleases and still be in fashion. The puncheinello idea of making one sleeve entirely different from the other has gained followers, although it is one of the most eccentric features of an eccentric season.

It is not quite so bad when lace is used for one and jet and metal for the other, but when one sleeve is lace and pink chiffon and the other green velvet and fur—well, the sight is queer, to say the least.

But there are many other novelties besides the punchinello one to give women a chance to display their inner love of eccentricity. To detail these experiments would take a chapter on sleeves. One might tranpose the old Latin phrase and say so many women, so many sleeves. The appearance of them all in mass is not altogether pleasing. It looks like originality run rampant.

There are many fashions, however, that are pleasing and worthy of imitation. The new sleeve used in blouses with its fullness confined into a cap at the top and a long, tight cuff below is an agreeable change from the plain or tucked one of the last two years. Even in dressy blouses this has superseded the one we have had with us all Winter, which showed a short kimono shape over a long tucked cuff of transparent fabric.

This sleeve was usually triple, for it had a lace cuff at the end, and a little of it was very good, but we have had too much of it. No matter how lovely or beneficial a thing is, human nature is so constituted that it is happier, when desiring more than when getting enough.

Manna from Heaven is well received in small quantities, but a cloudburst of it is fatal.

By the same token one has got tired of the entirely plain Directoire sleeve, with its glovelike clinging and row of buttons from wrist to shoulder.

The three-quarter sleeve is sure to come our way. All the new models that are now coming weekly from Paris on fast steamships give hints of what may arrive with the springtide of clothes. These late January gowns that are built up for American houses are not intended as absolute fashions for a coming season, forthese are not shown until after Feb. 15. The ones we are getting now, however, are forerunners of things that the great designers are going to try out next month.

And so the three-quarter sleeve is worth paying attention to now as something that will be received later. It comes in coats, in house gowns, in smart blouses, in top wraps. The late fur coats show this length of sleeve with an immense plaited frill of lace as a finish.

This may not mean that the elbow sleeve will be a sister fashion to the three-quarter one. It is to be hoped that if this fashion does return in a general sense it will not be introduced again into white shirtwaists. We have had few abuses of a dainty fashion more conspicuous than this.

Everyone remembers the regiment of girls parading the streets at the noon hour with sleeves cut off above the elbow and gloves in their hands, if they had them at all. When to these bare arms were added a few bracelets the effect made one wish for stringent rules on public dress.—Anne Rittenhouse in the New York Times.

in a modern product. From time immemorial sage and sulphur have been used for the hair and scalp. Almost every one knows of the value of such a combination for darkening the hair and making it grow. In olden times the only way to get a hair tonic of this sort was to brew it in the home fireplace, a method which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays almost every up-to-date druggist can supply his patrons with a ready to use product, skillfully compounded in perfectly equipped laboratories. Such a preparation is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, which is sold by all leading druggists for 50c. and $1.00 a bottle, or which is sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.

BRIEFS.

Mrs. Charles Ewell of Hamden circle is able to be out again after a severe illness of tonsilitis.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Titcomb, Clarence and Ellen Titcomb of Pelham, N. H., have been guests of Charles Maxwell of Hamden circle this week.

Miss Elvira Ewell of Norfolk Downs who is at Rutland, Mass., has improved so much that she is looking forward to coming home before a great while.

Charles Maxwell of Hamden circle was given a surprise party by his neighbors and received a number of useful gifts. A good time was enjoyed after which all wished him good night and many more good times.

Elliot club of Wollaston meets next week, Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Allen M. Jameson, Warren avenue. Those to take part in the program are: Mrs. Joseph M. Lewis, Mrs. Lincoln Crowell, and Mr. and Mrs. George H. Murray, the subject being, "Statesmen."

Monday evening the Jolly Sixteen met with Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Gragg. Bad weather does not frighten this merry party and all members were present. Whist was played for two hours. The gifts were awarded to Miss Gragge, Mrs. Stoddard, Mr. Dexheimer and Mr. Johnson. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess, when all the latest and popular songs were played.

UNIQUE PURCHASE.

A real estate agent reports that Daniel Ahern of Quincy made a rather unique purchase Saturday, when he bought half of the old Arnold house, on South street in this city. The Arnold house is one of the most picturesque in Quincy and it has been owned by two parties for many years. The owners have been the Mt. Wollaston National bank and Mrs. Julius Johnson.

The house has long been an object of interest because it generally was painted on one side or shingled for half the distance across, owing to the fact that the different owners could not always agree to improve their sides at the same time.

Mr. Ahern bought the side owned by the bank and will live in it. He will improve his side, and the old house bids fair to be as much an object of curiosity as it has been in the past.

The house was built over 100 years ago by a man named Arnold of whom the present day generation knows nothing. He was a famous butcher in his day and near the old house for many years he maintained an old-fashioned slaughter house. This disappeared many years ago.

WILSON GIVES HIS TESTIMONY

Expected Clash With Pinchot Developes at Investigation

Washington, March 2.—The expected clash between Gifford Pinchot and Secretary of Agriculture Wilson over the disputed question as to whether or not the secretary had given the former forester permission to write to Senator Dolliver the letter which resulted in Pinchot's dismissal came before the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Pinchot declared he had discussed the matter at length with Wilson, and that he understood his superior had given him permission to write to Dolliver.

Secretary Wilson took the stand and asserted that while he had given Pinchot permission to write to Dolliver concerning "departmental affairs" he never did, and never would have given him permission to write a letter criticising the President of the United States.

Under a cross-examination almost wholly by the Democratic members of the committee, Wilson was uncertain as to just what had passed between himself and the forester, and became somewhat mixed at times as to just what letters the committeemen were referring to in their rapid fire of questions.

The secretary reiterated again and again that he never saw or heard of the letter Pinchot wrote until it was read in the senate.

Secretary Wilson was plainly agitated when he took the stand. Pinchot had been reluctant to testify to anything that would bring him into controversy with the chief under whom he had served twelve years. But Chairman Nelson insisted that he should go into the matter.

Mr. Pinchot declared that he and Secretary Wilson went so far as to discuss the executive order issued by President Taft forbidding subordinate officers of the various departments from giving information to congress, and he added that the secretary said: "You and I will have no trouble about that order."

Admitting that his memory failed him as to certain points, Wilson also came back to the statement that he never, under any circumstances, would have given Pinchot permission to write the letter which caused his separation from the service.

The secretary said he urged Pinchot not to carry out his purpose to "blanket" a message from the president exonerating Ballinger, by sending in a letter to Dolliver.

"But," persisted counsel for Pinchot, "if Pinchot was only to be permitted to write about departmental matters, how could you have thought this letter would blanket the president's message?"

"I don't know. That was Pinchot's idea."

Mr. Pinchot denied that he had been embittered by a dismissal which he considered was not justified. He denied, also, that there was a specific movement to discredit Ballinger. He added, however, that he and former Secretary Garfield, Glavis and others are concerned in a movement for the conservation of natural resources, and that they regard Ballinger as one of the greatest enemies of that movement.

A decided surprise came in the development that Pinchot's charge that Ballinger had in his reply to the president made statements that were "absolutely false in three essential particulars," were not based upon Ballinger's letter, but upon a letter written by Ballinger's former law partner, J. T. Ronald, to Dr. Lyman Abbott, editor of The Outlook. Ballinger has sent this letter to the president "as a part of his defense," according to Pinchot.

BOYCOTT THREATENED

Chinese Seek Relief From Exclusion Laws Enforced In San Francisco

San Francisco, March 2.—To carry their grievances directly to President Taft and congress, the Chinese of San Francisco sent two representatives to Washington to voice their dissatisfaction with the exclusion laws enforced at this port.

In case relief is not granted, the Chinese, it is said, will threaten to try to bring about a boycott in China against American products.

"WET" MAKES GAINS

Rutland and Thirteen Towns In Vermont Swing Over to License

Montpelier, Vt., March 2.—Oases in three Vermont counties during the past year were voted out of existence in the annual vote on the liquor question at the city and town elections held Tuesday throughout the state. This brings these three additional counties into the "lily white" column. There are now four arid counties in the state.

Returns from most of the towns in thirteen of the fourteen counties—Grand Isle, as usual, being still unreported—indicate that one city, Rutland, and thirteen towns changed from dry to wet, while eight towns "flopped" from wet to dry.

There was, nevertheless, a general reduction in the license majorities in the comparatively few places among the 243 cities and towns in the state which so voted.

WAS LONG IN POLITICS

Death of President De Obaldia, One of Panama's Richest Men

Panama, March 2.—Jose Domingo de Obaldia, President of Panama, died from heart disease Tuesday afternoon. He had been sick only since last Friday. He had been President of Panama since October, 1908, and was born at David, department of Panama, Colombia, sixty-three years ago. His father was president of the latter republic from 1854 to 1857.

For several years before the establishment of the Panaman republic the young Obaldia had been a prominent figure in the political affairs of Colombia. In politics he was a Conservative.

The president was one of the richest men in Panama and his plantations were the largest in the republic.

NARROWLY ESCAPE AFRICAN FEVER

Men In Roosevelt Party More Fortunate Than Others

Gondokoro, Soudan, March 2.—Roosevelt luck has attended the American hunters and scientists, and this time they may be congratulated upon their escape from the African fever that has followed in the wake of the expedition.

Dr. Rodoric Prosch, a French medical missionary, who lunched with Roosevelt Monday, suddenly died of fever at noon yesterday.

At a camp adjoining that occupied by the Americans here an English sportsman is seriously ill, following a trip to one of the places at which the Smithsonian African expedition stopped.

The district commissioner of Gondokoro, the British officials of which were most active in entertaining their American guests, has been stricken with the fever.

When Roosevelt and the others of his party left here on the steamer Dal they were all apparently in good health, and little the worse for their rough experiences.

FIFTY-ONE PERHAPS DEAD

Avalanche Overtakes Express Train In the Cascade Mountains

Everett, Wash., March 2.—Fifty-one persons, men, women and children, are believed to have perished in an avalanche which buried the Spokane express in the Cascade mountains.

Two passengers, who forced their way through drifts and almost impassable trails for ten miles, brought the news last night.

Wires are down, and, although a wrecking train has been sent to the scene, it will probably be unable to get within ten miles of the place of the accident.

The train that was buried was stalled two miles west of the west portal of the long Cascade tunnel.

CUT DOWN TO $7100

Woman Claimed That $180,000 Was Due Her From the Government

Providence, March 2.—Instead of the $180,000, which she claimed, Mrs. Margaret D. M. Robinson is allowed only $7100 from the government for damages growing out of the condemnation by the war department of one and three-quarters acres of her land adjoining the Point Judith harbor of refuge.

This is the finding of a civilian board, appointed to adjudicate Mrs. Robinson's claim, which was filed in the United States circuit court here.

Pisa Tower May Be Unsafe

Pisa, March 2.—A special committee of scientists are making an investigation to ascertain the stability of he leaning tower, from the foundation of which water has been springing for a long time. This has resulted, it is feared, in weakening the understructure of the historic tower.

Trolley Men Demand a Raise

BAN ON KING PETER LIFTED

Servian Ruler Receives First Invitation From a Foreign Country

St. Petersburg, March 2.—The Novoe Vremya announces authoritatively that King Peter of Servia will visit St. Petersburg this spring.

This will be his first reception by a foreign sovereign since his accession, and probably will lead to a general lifting of the ban by European courts from which King Peter has been excluded because of the circumstances attending his elevation to the throne.

SUTTON'S MOTHER IS NOT SATISFIED

Congressional and Civil Proceedings Instituted

Washington, March 2.—The "Sutton case" is to be reopened. On Wednesday of next week a joint resolution will be introduced in both houses of congress asking for a thorough investigation into the death of Lieutenant James S. Sutton at Annapolis on the night of Oct. 7, 1907, and of all of the events leading up to the tragedy.

On the same day Henry E. Davis, attorney for Mrs. Sutton, mother of the lieutenant, will institute proceedings in the civil courts of Maryland. The mother still maintains, despite the finding of the board that investigated the death of her son, that he did not die by his own hand, but that his death was the result of a conspiracy.

DEAF EAR TO PEACE PLANS

Philadelphia Transit Company Reiterates Stand on Arbitration

Philadelphia, March 2.—Determined to fight the union, the transit company again declared that no settlement involving a recognition of the Car Men's union will be considered and reiterates that arbitration is not needed. The officials are defiant and turn deaf ears to the many pleas that they reach an agreement with the striking men before the labor unions put their threatened general strike into effect.

Both the labor leaders and the city administration are lining up for the expected battle. Director of Public Safety Clay says he does not regard the proposed sympathetic strike as a "bluff," and has made plans for increasing the police force in anticipation of further trouble.

WRECK NARROWLY AVERTED

Big Washout Discovered Just Before Express Train Was Due

Great Barrington, Mass., March 2.—The timely discovery of a bad washout in a curve midway between this place and Van Deusenville prevented a disastrous train wreck.

The earth was washed from under the tracks for a space of nearly twenty feet deep and fifty feet wide, leaving the rails suspended. The washout was discovered just before an express train bound for New York arrived there. The matter was reported at Van Deusenville in time to warn the express train.

DROPS THREE STORIES

Death Comes to Providence Woman When She Rolls Out of Bed

Providence, March 2.—The death of Mrs. Abbie Slocum at her home here was due to the fact that her bed was placed too near the window of her room.

The window was open, and when Mrs. Slocum turned over in bed she rolled off the edge and over the sill, falling three stories to the ground. She was 84 years of age.

Fined For Selling Bogus Steak

Boston, March 2.—James A. Norvitz, a storekeeper in this city, paid a fine of $25 in the municipal court after being found guilty of mixing a foreign substance with "hamburger steak." It was said that the steak had more of the foreign substance than the actual meat in its makeup.

The Quincy Fleet Built at Fore River

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Premier Asquith will proceed first to chastise the House of Lords.

The "three wise men "from the East ,to whom Senator Gore refers, were not Aldrich, Lodge and Hale.

It takes a mild, inoffensive man of peace like Mr. Fairbanks to stir up a real storm.

In opposing the Postal Savings Bank Bill, Senator Burton ,of Ohio, opposes the policy of an Ohio President.

People who have been discovering complete substitutes for meat are almost as sanguine as the inventors of perpetual-motion machines.

Speaker Cannon made so effective an impression when he stepped down from the tribune and as the "gentleman from Illinois" addressed the House on a timely topic, that the movement to give him back the desk there, in event of his election to the next great Congress, must have been greatly encouraged.

Three months ago we installed the new press and started printing the bigger Ledger. The press has proved somewhat of a mixed pleasure for it is so new its working is not entirely understood. When the edition runs off like clockwork the press seems wonderful and a great time saver but when as with Tuesday's edition the paper persists in breaking as it goes through the press, and the edition is a few hours late the whole force gets disgruntled. We have had several delays of this kind and hope our patron's will be as lenient as possible until we have mastered the problems of the press.

During the past three months we have had many letters and personal words of appreciation of the Ledger and we have not been unmindful. We have been so busy we have perhaps not expressed all that was in our minds. We appreciate the loyalty of subscribers and advertisers and shall continue as in the past to give the city a good clean newsy home daily.

The past season has been the most prosperous as well as the busiest of all the years in the nearly quarter century since the Ledger started and if in ten years to come a larger Ledger seems necessary we will be found ready.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

Not only has the time come and now is, when this new spirit requires business to be handled in a scientific way as compared with the old slip-shod, hit-or-miss methods, but also the day has dawned (ushered in likewise by this new spirit) when business men are recognizing more and more that istry which must be fulfilled in the interest of social, cibic anud economic welfare, just as sure as the teacher and the preacher through their callings must serve the spiritual, moral and intellectual needs of men. When once the busines man gets this conception of his calling, be he a large or small factor in the commercial world, he will become a better business man and a nobler citizen.—President George W. Coleman at Pilgrim publicity banquet.

We need here in the United States a little more of that good old English bluntness on the part of modest men and women who know their own worth when men and women of the arrogant sort get in the way or try to be patronizing, says New York Independent Our observation is that nowhere in the world are men and women of exceptional intellectual attainments so lacking in self-assertion as they are in the United States. This phenomenon is a comparatively new one in American life. Wherever one opens the documents of American history before the civil war he is sure to discover interesting incidents proving the sense of dignity and real self-respect of the American farmer mechanic, merchant, teacher, physician or clergyman. It was something in man himself that in those days was regarded as worth while and worthy of respect. It takes certain amount of courage for an individual, face to face with a person politically or financially prominent, to tell him to stay on his own reservation and mind his own business. Americans have ben inclined to regard the Englishman's habitual manifestation of this particular kind of courage as a disagreeable quality. Perhaps it is. But we are convinced tha t it is a necessary quality, at that its cultivation is an essential part of that eternal vigilance which is the price of liberty.—Framingham News.

has brought back to us one of the biggest prizes ever won in the industrial world.

"He has achieved victory for his country, victory for himself, victory for the city, our city in which this shipbuilding plant is located, and we would be lacking in public spirit, lacking in local pride, lacking in national patriotism, if we did not show public and fitting action to welcome to our household once again this keen, alert and brainy business man, the past efficient officer of the United States navy, and now, tonight, our honored guest, Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles.

"It is well that we should come together to honor this man. The spirit which gathers us around this festive board, is the spontaneous demonstration by the people of a city, rich in historical traditions, proud of its past influence in State and National affairs, and keenly alive to the position she is about to occupy, as an international

SHIPBUILDING CENTER.

I do not remember of any man, who has met with such an enthusiastic reception, as we have witnessed tonight, and I know of no man more worthy of it.

"It is not within my province tonight to attempt a speech, there are others here better qualified than I. As Mayor of the City of Quincy, it gives me the greatest pleasure to extend in behalf of our citizens a cordial and hearty welcome to Admiral Bowles.

"Since he has been amongst us, we have seen but little of him; he is a busy man; he does not talk things, he does them, and after all, the man who does things usually keeps out of sight until he has accomplished results ,and that is the main reason that we have the Admiral with us tonight.

"It is said that naval men, when forced to a contest like a short, sharp fight, and then victory we are proceeding along an inverted order tonight, we already have had the victory, and we will now proceed to the rest of the engagement, which will be short and to the point."

The first speaker of the evening was Dr. Edwin H. Hardy, pastor of the Bethany Congregational church. Dr. Hardy was unusually good on this occasion. He spoke in part as follows:

Mr. Chairman, Honored Guest Ladies and Gentlemen:

This is an epock-making occasion for Quincy. A red letter day in her annals. Today the city opens a new chapter in her history. From provincialism she suddenly springs into national and international importance. And there is no prophet among us wise enough to foresee the changes, the far-reaching influences, the future power and prominence of this quaint, historic city. And we gather here to honor the man who is the personal dynamic, the epoch-maker of the new Quincy.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that an ounce of taffy is better than a pound of epitaphy. Let me illustrate. A dear old New England spinster, the embodyment of the timid and the shrinking passed away at Carlsbad where she had gone rof her health Her nearest kinsman, a nephew, ordered her body sent home to be buried —as was her last wish in the little Vermont church yard. His surprise can be imagined when on opening the casket he beheld instead of the placid features of his Aunt Mary, the majestic port of an English general in full regimentals, whom he remembered had chanced to die at the same time and place as his aunt. At once he cabled to the friends of the general explaining the situation and requesting instructions. They came back as follows: Give the general a quiet funeral. Aunt Mary interred today with full military honors, six brass bands, three regiments of infantry, the king's guards and the royal family in attendance. "We wish you sir to enjoy the bands and the bunting and the appreciation, our enthusiasm and admiration while you are with us and may a gracious providence prolong your life for many years to come."

We congratulate you, Mr. Chairman, honored mayor of the city in this happy and appropriate voicing of our civic enthusiasm. Your birth must have taken place under the lucky star, and we feel sure that when you represent this district in Congress that you will provide that all the ship-made to develope our twenty-three miles of waterways. I congratulate you gentlemen of the city for such a gathering is the most auspicious token of better things to come.

When at the outbreak of the Revolution Benjamin Franklin represented the United States at the Court of France he was invited to a great banquet and the toasts to the different nations were given. One said, "I present the King of France and I call him the sun," another said, "I present the King of England and call him the moon," and the toastmaster turning to Franklin said, "And what will you do for a toast with the sun and the moon already engaged?"

Franklin raised his glass and said, "I cannot give the sun, the moon, or the stars, nor call my country such, but I give you the United States and call them the Joshua, the Son of Nun, who made the sun, the moon, and the stars stand still in their orbits at his will."

You Admiral Bowles are the Joshua who has brought to a stadstill the commercial plans of our European friends and proven that in spite of better living and higher wages, that America can underbid the world in price and excel the world in the quality of our fechanical achievements. Such avictory marks an epoch of national as well as local significance

The highest honor which we can confor upon you, sir, the most genuine token of our appreciation is not in congratulations and heartiest welcome, not in draped bunting, waving flags, or martial music, not in banqueting and feasting, but in arousing ourselves as a city to a new commercial, educational, moral and civic regenertion. All these tangible evidences of our welcome, of our admiration of your marked ability and of our enthusiasm are most fitting, but what we, representing every phase of municipal life propose to do in the next twelve months, is the true index of our real appreciation.

You, sir, have magnificently met your difficult though glorious opportunity, and won an international victory. Your success has created for Quincy, also, a great and grand opportunity. Much as you will enjoy this spontaneous outburst of enthusiasm and welcome I am confident that an appreciation which registers itself in a new growth of public sentiment, in the development of our commercial interests, in the exaltation of civic righteousness commensurate with our opportunity will be far more gratifying.

And this banquet celebrates the rebirth of this city. Here, irrespective of party, creed, class or condition, the foremost citizens of this fair city have convened. Almost every vital interest of the city is represented. And we have been summoned hither by a hearty, civic enthusiasm begotten of admiration for you, sir, yet if I sense the situation at all accurately this gathering is also the pledge of our intention to "make good" ourselves, that your success may gain the greater lustre as it stimulates the city to meet a great commercial and municipal proposition with wise and heroic endeavor.

These changes will mean great problems for Quincy, but they will not be the problems of stagnation and provincialism, but of growth and new life. There will be great perplexities but they will not be the perplexities springing from partisan, sectarian and local interests, but of united action aggression and progress. There will be anxieties and suffering, but not those of disease and death, but the growing pains of youth and the forbodings of the out-reaching of new life. It will require patience co-operation, charity, statesmanship to adapt ourselves and our institutions to the new demands. And for our new responsibilities. We have sir, in you the very characteristics which emulated will lead to a glorious success.

Further your success, this welcome, this banquet, is the sure evidence of that for which some of us have labored long and sometimes with disappointment, the clear token of the birth of civic consciousness. Hitherto we have been a group of isolated and independent villages of communities with little esprit de corp, little unity in the work for civic betterment, little enthusiasm for our industrial welfare. I confidently believe that from this night perhaps slowly at first, but eventually all this will be changed, because we have awakened to civic consciousness. And you, sir, are the greatest contributer to this much desired consummation.

Someone has said that it was a grand thing to be a Greek but never so grand as to be Greek in the tife of Paricles; that it was a grand thing to be a Roman, but never so grand as to have been a Roman in the time of Caesar Augustus; that it is a grand thing to be an Englishman, but never so grand as to be an Englishman in the time of Queen Victoria, that it is a grand thing to be an American, but never so grand as to be an American in the time of Roosevelt." I wish to add that it is a glorious thing to be a citizen of Quincy but never so grand as to be citizen in the time of Admiral Bowles.

THEOPHILUS KING.

followed Dr. Hardy. In opening he said: Mr. Chairman, Admiral Bowles Mrs. Bowles, I know all appreciate the presence of the Admiral's better half. He believed that he must have swallowed the most of the smoke from a North Dakota gun and the gun with it. Congratulations are certainly in worder when we meet to celebrate a star achievement. It was extremely pleasing to the citizens of Quincy, surprising to the country and startling to the whole world when such a contract was received. It means that it is time for the nation to understand; First, the conception, and then the growth along the line to produce results. We had the conception. When the proper man was needed in the proper place we sought him out. He believed the Fore River Co. had the best plant in the country and it has got the men, and we know the men will help him. It is the better product that secured this contract. President Bowles had the stockholders; the Curtis turbine which that progressive nation of Japan had recognized also the cooperation of the steel plant and with this combination he went forth to seek success. The world wants the best, and is willing to pay for it. This contract has not been won on sentiment but on merit. Patience and action were the sledge hammer blows. that President Bowles used. Think how tireless and patient he has been. Action is always on tap at the Fore River. Patience and action. The doing of the right thing in the right time.

We are here to celebrate the force and power of a man who understood. A man who had faith in the power to produce. There were 23 different competitors at first in the bids for these ships, but one good fighter went in among them in a quiet way and got the turkey. Caesar said I came, I saw,, I conquered. We have the man who can say, "I went, and I saw them and I went them one better, and took the trick." All honor to President Bowles.

Mayor Shea then called upon Secretary Kincaide to read the letter of regret from Hon. E. C. Bumpus who was unable to be present.

HON. E. C. BUMPUS

sent the following letter to the Mayor:

"I exceedingly regret my inability, because of poor health, to be present at the reception to Admiral Bowles, but despite that i wish to join with everyone in showing the high appreciation which we owe him.

"While in Panama I have many times talked with the representatives from the South American and Central States and while they always expressed their appreciation of the energy and skill displayed by our people in building the canal insisted that the greatest marvel of all was that there could be found among the subordinate officers of our navy and army men competent to plan and execute one of the greatest feats of engineering which has been undertaken.

"The explanation is simple enough when it is known that the high honor men who yearly graduate from the naval and military academies must of necessity be perfectly equipped from the scholarly standpoint and when executive capacity is added thereunto we have a man capable of meeting every requirement in the creation and carrying on of public work.

"Among these leaders, there is no one who holds a higher rank for merit than your guest and of him it can be fittingly said "he is the foremost man in all this world to do this work." And this is the best exemplification if we will consider not only his genius to do but his audacity to dare in disregarding every unfavoring condition standing in his way by going to South America, the last place in the world, for an American to achieve good results.

When we recall that Great Britain and Germany have upon a conservative estimate at least two million dollars invested, in the southern continent and practically have the monopoly of the million dollar commerce carried on there and that the Americans have hardly a dollar invested with little or no commerce and yet despite all this and many other discouraging features to overcome success was obtained this marks his achievement so high as to call upon us to honor and glorify his name."

The next speaker was Frank Fessenden Crane, Quincy's Dock and Water Front Commissioner, and it was largely through his instrumentality the Fore River Co., was induced to locate in Quincy. Mr. Crane's address in full will appear in the Daily Ledger tomorrow.

The last speaker was Ward W. Whitcher who received such an ovation at the conclusion of his remarks that he had to again respond, closing his encore remarks with the story of the two frogs in the pail of milk, illustrating how constant kicking on the part of the wise frog churned the milk into butter and saved him. Mr. Whitcher in his address said:

WARD W. WHITCHER.

When introduced said in part:

"It hath been taught us from the primal state,
That he which is was wished until he were."

"Now if fate should so ordain that I should again return to that home from whence I came to make my habitation here; one of my pleasantest remembrances would be, that to me, a stranger then, was given a part in the reception tendered our admirable Admiral upon his advent here some six years ago. I recall that we had music, but the orchestra has been since augmented, and the tunes enlivened. We had then nothing to equal "Tit Willow," nor did we sing the then popular "Hot time in the old town tonight." In fact there was no congregational singing, but had there

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

"What is a woman's club? A meeting ground
For those of purpose, great and broad and strong,
Whose aim is in the stars; who ever long
To make the patient, listening world resound
With sweeter music, freer tones.
A place where kindly, lifting words are said,
And kindlier deeds are done; where hearts are fed,
Where wealth of brain for poverty atones;
Where hand grasps hand, and soul finds touch with soul;
Where victors in the race for fame and power
Look backward, even in their triumph hour,
To beckon others to the shining goal.
This is a woman's club, a haven fair
Where toilers drop an hour their load of care."

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

Tuesday afternoon's meeting of the Quincy Women's club at the clubhouse will be in charge of the Education committee, Mrs. John Mackay chairman. Dr. Frank E. Spaulding the speaker is well known to those interested in education in and about Boston. He is Euperintendent of Schools in Newton; he has been on the teaching staff of the Harvard Summer school; he, with the assistance of one of his teachers, a Miss Bryce, has thought out a system of teaching reading to children, which is used in Newton and Quincy and many other surrounding cities.

Dr. Spaulding has attracted attention because throughout his entire school work he has endeavored to make the schools minister in their fullest capacity to the needs and qualifications of each child, and so it is with peculiar gratification that he has seen erected and equipped Newton's fine new Technical High school and also its Industrial school. The former broadens and enlarges the courses offered to boys and girls going through the High school The latter offers to boys who would otherwise leave school during the grammar grades, a broader education and a knowledge of that which will enable them to become skilled workmen in a chosen trade.

Dr Spaulding has been much interested in the success of the classes for teachers that have been held in Newton during the past two winters, classes in literature, in drawing, metal-working, aesthetic dancing and story telling. These classes have been held on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons when there is no school session and they have been enthusiastically attended.

It will easily be seen that Dr. Spaulding is not only a man with theories, but a man who has been able to put his theories into practice. The subject of his lecture at the Women's club on Tuesday is "Education as a Business." The meeting is an open one and the public is cordially invited to attend.

The exchange of the Home Economics committee will be open with the usual variety of nice home cooked articles and upstairs the Arts and Crafts department will have an exchange of handicraft work also talk with club members desiring to poin any of the classes now forming.

Members are invited to pay dues for 1910-1911, which are now due and payable during March and April. Mrs. W. E. Blanchard, treasurer is prepared to give out the new membership cards.

MOTHERS' ASSOCIATION.

Reception committee: Mrs. Bates, Mrs. A. G. Coffin, Mrs. W. H. Doble, Mrs. E. N. Hardy, Mrs. Wilson Marsh, Mrs. W. G. Shaw, Mrs. E. W. Sheppard and Mrs. C. T. Sherman.

Calling committee: Mrs. Doble, Mrs. F. W. Crane, Mrs. E. V. Fitts, Mrs. Guy, Mrs. Keast, Mrs. C. H. Hayden, Mrs. C. W. Miller, Mrs. E. E. Miller, Mrs. G. M. Miller, Mrs. J. C. Pierce, Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Charles Sampson, Mrs. W. Sidelinger, Mrs. Sherman.

Refreshment committee: Mrs. Coffin, Mrs. Hodgkinson, Mrs. Horton, Mrs. McFarlane, Mrs. V. E. Miller, Mrs. Rice, Mrs. Walter Sampson, Mrs. George Sidelinger.

Kindergarten: Mrs. Badger, Mrs. Bell, Miss Bates, Miss Crane, Miss Hayward, Miss Park, Miss Thomas.

HOSPITAL AID ASSOCIATION.

The report of the meeting of the Hospital Aid association held last week at the home of Mrs. William B. Rice, was a little misleading when it stated that a committee was chosen to nominate a president. The vacancy in the office of treasurer was filled, according to the by-laws of the association by the board but nothing was done about the nomination of a President, as there were two vice-presidents still in office and it had to be ascertained first whether either would be willing to serve as president. The members who attended the meeting could not but appreciate Mrs. Rice's charming hospitality and graciousness towards her guests. The furnishing of the new ward has occasioned renewed interest, and as there is now a real need, and much important work to be done, a full attendance at future meetings is desired. Come yourself and bring a new member.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB.

The regular monthly meeting of the Young Women's club was held Saturday evening, at the Club house on Goffe street. The meeting was presided over by Miss Minnie Packard, president and reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and accepted. Aside from the usual business, the constitution was read and accepted as it now stands.

Although it was proposed to discontinue the classes in Arts and Crafts, quite a nufber desired lessons in basketry, embroidery and dressmaking. It was suggested that a class in Aesthetic dancing, or a blee vlub, be formed for the remaining fonths. Instead of having two monthly social meetings it is probable that special speakers will be arranged for at one of them. These matters were left to the final decision of the executive Board.

Music was furnished by Mrs. Chandler W. Smith and a play entitled "A Double Deception" was given by the following: Miss Packard, Miss Luard, Mrs. Fleming, Mr. Keyes and Mr. Arnold.

The program closed with a piano solo by Mrs. Smith. The club greatly enjoyed and appreciated the privilege of hearing Mrs. Smith.

After the presentation of the play, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present, a unanimous vote of thanks was given to the participants, and the club adjourned.

A special meeting of the executive board was held to make plans for the next social which will be held in March.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

In spite of the inclement whether the usual number were present at the Alliance meeting on Monday afternoon in First church parlor. After the devotional service and routine business several methods were discussed to raise money for Alliance work. There were several good suggestions. It was decided to ask members to save two cents each day during the month of March. If a penny saved is a penny earned, two pennies each day should bring in a goodly sum the first of April for the Alliance treasury.

The speaker for the afternoon Rev. Paul S. Phalen of Hingham was unable to be present and Rev. C. B. Ames, assistant pastor read very acceptably his paper on "The Problems of the Poor."

Miss Akeroyd sang two songs in her usual pleasing manner.

The afternoon closed with the usual social hour and tea the hostesses being Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell and Mrs. Frank S. Davis.

WHY WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Mrs. Mary I. Wood, of New Hampshire, in the Woman's Era gives these pertinent thoughts and facts:—

"Is it of importance to the country that there should be juvenile courts which save to the nation thousands of young boys and girls who would otherwise become adult criminals? Yet even the ablest opponents of the woman's club movement grant that the juvenile court is the product, to a very large degree, of the work of the club women.

"Is it of benefit to a nation that it have a pure food bill? Those in authority admit that the national pure food bill in the United States was greatly aided, if not virtually secured, by the nation-wide agitation by the club women for months preceding its passage.

"Is there anw virtue in the cafpaign against child-labor? The club women of every section of the country have bent their efforts to help in the fight against this shameful misuse of child life.

"Is an educational campaign worth while? Scarcely an individual club exists that has not made its influence felt along educational lines, and kindergartens manual training schools, vacation schools, scholarship funds, and other forms of educational progress mark the work of every state federation.

"Is the warfare against tuberculosis a benefit to the American people? Thousands of dollars are being raised at this present writing, and millions of persons are being informed concerning the need and value of this work by the health committees of club women.

"Are clean streets and beautiful parks of value? Club women are working for them.

"Are rest-rooms and lunch-rooms good for working women? Club women are establishing them.

"Is medical inspection in public schools necessary? The club women are bringing this about in very many localities.

"Are visiting nurses public benefactors? Club women are supplying them in many cities anl towns.

"Are pure milk and water supply beneficial? The pure food committees of the clubs believe that they are and are striving to secure them.

"Is meat and market inspection a step in the right direction? Through the efforts of club women such inspection is having satisfactory results.

"Are the traveling libraries valuable? There are many thousands of books traveling, because of the club women, through sections where there is practically no other means of obtaining reading matter.

"In such ways as these, and in many other similar lines of social service work, the club women of today are demonstrating that they form one of the greatest, if not indeed the greatest, organized agencies for the betterment of present conditions."

HOLLAND.

Holland is one European country that looks like her pictures. There is no better use for the word quaint than no beter use for the word quaint than really wear wooden shoes. The land really is diked. Black and white Holstein cattle really pervade the landscape. The men really wear blue jeans shirts outside their trousers as they work in the fields. On hundreds of heads of women in any crowd the silver hair baskets, covered with lace net, really may be seen. The girls and women are really red-cheeked, without artificial coloring. The fields really abound in wild flowers, and windmills really sway their gaunt, awkward, arms in the wind. There is no sham, no pomp, no splendor, no fuss and feathers in the country. One gets the impression of a rugged, sham-hating, simple, kind-hearted, hopeful race in going through Holland. —Christian Science Monitor.

HIS RECEIPT.

A Southern banker recently told the following about his eight-year-old son: The boy had been invited to spend a week with some friends in the country. "Stay and keep me company, Jack," said his mother. "Father goes travelling this week, and I shall be all alone. Here is a $5 bill for you instead of the visit."

Jack promptly closed with the offer and the banker as promptly borrowed the $5 at current interest. Some two months later Jack wanted to recall the loan.

"I haven't any $5."

"But I gave it to you, Mother, didn't I give him $5? You saw me."

"I certainly did," she replied.

"Where's your receipt, then?" demanded his father. "Do you mean to say you've been lending money without getting black and white to show for it?"

"Mammie," said the boy, appealing to his nurse, "didn't I give papa $5?"

"You poh, little lamb!" indignantly exclaimed the old woman. Co'se you done gib it to him, honey"

"There, papa," said the budding lawyer, triumphantly, "there's the black and white of it."—Delineator.

Important Announcement

BY JOHNSON BROS.

Why and How We Shall Reduce Our Prices April 1st, 1910.

AFTER a careful study of the credit business for a number of years, and the same of the cash business for the past two years, we have decided that for the mutual benefit of the buyer and seller, beginning April 1, we shall turn our business into a strictly cash business. Our experience and close study of the wants of the people for the past thirty-five years has put us in a position to judge, and we have decided that low prices and high quality can be obtained in no other way than by a strictly cash proposition, as a credit store cannot possibly compete successfully with a store that is handled on a strictly cash basis, as there is a great expense attached to a credit business, which we wish to curtail, and our curtailing means much lower prices to the trade. Under the credit system there is always a proportion of bad bills which must be taken care of in our scale of prices. Under the credit system you are helping to pay the bills of those who do not pay themselves. The method of sending teams to take orders daily is very costly. We figure it costs us eight cents per call. If our clerks make from fifty to two hundred calls daily the expense of these calls must be added to the prices of the goods. The salaries of bookkeepers and other expenses of accounting and collections must also be taken care of. We propose to eliminate these items of expense, and correspondingly reduce the prices of our goods. We will deliver orders sent to us by mail, telephone or left at the store, and we intend to show the people of Quincy and surrounding towns what a really cash store can do for them. We intend to place on sale a certain day of each week some staple article from our stock at absolute cost, something different each time. Remember, one of the most important things in this change will be the keeping up of our quality for which we have so long been popular. We shall try to give even better quality if such a thing is possible, and we shall hammer the prices down hard—for cash.

We will pay cash for our goods, by so doing get all the cash discounts from the wholesale trade, and we intend that our trade shall benefit by it, and by owning our own plant it will not be possible for any concern in our line of business to undersell us, when you take into consideration our reputation for quality. We have one of the best equipped stores in our city, also the cooperation of experienced clerks which all go to make Johnson Bros. an ideal firm with which to trade. All orders will be delivered with care and promptness by our new Automobile system, which we will place at your service and which is being practised by nearly all the up to date concerns throughout the country. Customers not caring to pay cash every time they come, or send to the store can if they wish make a deposit with us, and when they have taken up all their deposit will be notified. At the prices we shall ask and the quality of our goods, we must insist on a strictly cash transaction, for at the present age of high prices a credit store can do nothing to lessen the expense of living for its customers, as the increasing expense of carrying on a credit business places low prices out of the question.

The credit dealer must realize a larger percent of profit than a cash dealer, as his expense account is more than double, so we decided that the only way we can help our customers and all careful buyers, is to establish a strictly up to date cash store, for there is no other way that we can afford to cut the prices for the mutual benefit of all. Hoping that this will meet with thoughtful and willing cooperation, we remain,

Respectfully,

JOHNSON BROS.' MARKET,

"EASY MARKS" IN MANY CITIES

Bunco Gamesters Did Not Confine Operations to Hub

Boston, March 2.—Boston men have been fleeced of a million dollars in five years by the "faro-gang." This is the startling declaration of a man once a member of the band. He mentions a State street millionaire who lost $170,000 two years ago, and a Harvard student, son of a western ranch owner, who was trimmed for $50,000.

Independent of this man's story comes those of three other victims. "Charlie" White of Winthrop describes the trimming of Charles Hatch of that town. It cost Hatch $4000 to meet the gang.

D. L. White of Winthrop was approached, but didn't bite.

Andrew J. Granara, an undertaker, loaned $2500 to the gang. "Big Bill" Kelliher gave a mortgage on his property as security, and guaranteed Granara a share of the killing. The money was lost. Granara forced Kelliher, who was in the liquor business, into bankruptcy, but recovered only $400 of the $2500.

More information along these lines was laid before the authorities and a search is on for Kelliher, "Doc" Owens, Martin Welch and other men whose names have been connected with the "faro swindlers."

The officials also want to find a woman who was used as a lure. Her specialty was aiding in the "badger game," but frequently she was a leader in the other method of swindling.

This woman's presence in the case has prevented scores of men from making a complaint lest divorce proceedings by a wife would be the climax.

It has been established that the gang had headquarters in New York, and agents in all the large cities. "Easy Marks," like those in Boston, have been found in other cities.

The gambler who gave interesting information concerning the swindlers is one of the best known men in New England at the gambling resorts and race tracks.

"The papers say that $400,000 has been obtained from the people who 'bucked the tiger,'" said this well-informed man. "That sum is ridiculous—a million wouldn't hit it. Why, I know one man who has retired from sporting life with nearly a half-million dollars. He hasn't bet a cent in five years, and he got all of his money in the fake faro game. And he is only one.

"The people who are squealing now are the small fry. There are scores and more of rich men who wanted some easy money who were fleeced of enormous sums and owing to their positions do not dare to let their connection with the game be known."

Inspectors are watching the hotels for the members of the gang of swindlers. Two of the detectives were met in Washington street hotels and did not deny that they are looking for the Kelliher gang.

One of the faro leaders who had permanent quarters in a Tremont street hotel had his apartment locked up and has not been there for about a week. The police say they believe all have fled from the city and are in New York and Chicago.

Strike Breaking Driver of Coal Wagon Has an Unpleasant Experience

Providence, March 2.—From the slow progress of a heavy coal cart to a swift ride through the air was the sudden transition experienced by a driver employed as a strike-breaker by a local coal dealing firm.

The man was pulled from the cart by several striking teamsters and thrown through a plate glass window on North Main street. He was not seriously hurt. The company later applied for police protection and one of the strikers was arrested.

APPRECIATED BY ADMIRAL

has recently taken contracts for two dreadnaughts equipped with the turbines. Followed by our designs furnished to Argentine Republic, they have in addition required all the destroyers which have been awarded to be equipped with the turbine.

"As a result we find ourselves in a very satisfactory position of having on hand orders for turbines to be manufactured in Quincy to such an amount that, working day and night for the next we shall be obliged to add very largely to our equipment. I shall be glad to specify these great additions of machinery but I find the chief assessor is sitting in front of me. (Laughter)

"I suppose you expect me to tell you something about how we secured this contract, and I feel like talking more freely about that matter than, ever before. You are entitled to my confidence. (Applause.)

"There is no secret about it and it is very simple. The whole credit of it does not belong to any one man, but the principal credit belongs right here in Quincy, and to the

of the Fore River company. (Applause.)

"The original designs were called for in January, 1909. We had at that time only 10 days upon which to prepare the designs based upon very generous specifications. This was accomplished and it was upon those designs—we ranked third in the competition—that I thought it desirable to visit South America.

"While there I learned that the Argentinas in their wisdom had found many desirable features in many of the designs and wished to combine them in a more powerful and efficient manner and they therefore requested, from the 23 original new tenders.

"I was able to communicate the bare information to the works; in fact, I only told them to have the designs ready when I reached London. A number of our competitors were discouraged at the short time available for the task and our people had only eight or nine days, including Sunday, to work out these plans.

"In that competition we came out No. 2. And, fortunately, they gave us another chance, and I called upon the works again to prepare a second set of plans, having acquired by that time sufficient information to do it in a better and more efficient manner than on the first occasion.

PERFECT PLANS.

"I want to assure you that nothing can equal the skill, energy and devotion with which my boys at the Fore River worked upon those designs. I am gratified to tell you that a more perfect set of general plans never were prepared, and they were universally admired by the people to whom they were delivered. In that competition we came out No. 1. (Applause.)

"The question which many people have in their minds is how is it that we were able to underbid our foreign competitors when it is a general known fact that ships cost more in the United States than in England and in Germany. The answer is simple.

"In the United States the cost of the production of large masses of steel is cheaper than anywhere in the world. The active competition which has existed among shipbuilders and manufacturers of steel and war materials has enabled the United States to build its battleships cheaper than anyone in the world so that all we had to do was to guarantee to deliver a battleship up to the standard of the United States navy and put on our regular price, and that

DID THE TRICK.

"My answer, therefore, is this: I shall be happy now and at any time to duplicate for the United States the ships for the same money and in the same time. The American shipbuilders, in this competition, all showed creditably. It is necessary, in such an affair that the group representing this country should know their business and all our designers of the American shipbuilders made a creditable showing and they won.

"We were exceedingly fortunate that in Argentine the United States was represented by a minister, appointed by President Taft, a man of great ability, a man well educated in business, devoted to the interests of his country, not holding down the job, but working for the United States.

"That man had acquired the Spanish language, had made himself acceptable to the people generally, and had won for us in three months a position such as North America had never held in that country. That man, Mr. Sherall, is the type and model of which the selection of our diplomatic representatives abroad should be based upon.

GREAT ABILITY.

"I am in favor of them being politicians. I have no use for civil service in such matters. I used to be a civil service reformer, but I believe that out of the battle of politics it is always possible to choose men of great ability, fine character and good standing, and that they are the best ones to represent the spirit of the United States.

"Not one word about the Argentine republic. You will receive in Quincy within a few days the beginning of a number of representatives of Argentine who are to come here to inspect their work and I beg you not to forget that they are American.

"They call us North Americans. They are a strong, able distinguished and cultivated people. They are worthy of every cordiality and hospitality and kindness that can be shown them. It is necessary that they should be made glad and want to stay and we want them to come again.

"This is not the last battleship that we shall build in Quincy for South America. (Prolonged applause.)

CROWD UPSETS CAR TO AID DYING MAN

Could No Longer Stand Listening to His Groans

Everett, Mass., March 2.—A throng of 200 people, exasperated by listening for over three-quarters of an hour to the groans of a man pinned beneath a surface car at the corner of Main and Winthrop streets last night, put their shoulders against one side of the car and threw it over in order to release him.

Frederick S. Gorman, aged 24, of Melrose, was the man for whose benefit this act was performed, but he died a few minutes after his release while being taken to a hospital.

Gorman met his death in one of two ways. Either he stepped from a team directly in front of the car, or while fooling with a friend began a retreat that ended with his being struck. The car was going at slow speed and was stopped within its own length after Gorman was knocked down.

FILLED BY MORGAN'S FRIEND

Rockefeller Quits Directorate of United States Steel Corporation

New York, March 2.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has resigned as a director of the United States Steel corporation and is succeeded by Henry Walters of Baltimore, chairman of the Louisville and Nashville and Atlantic Coast Line system of railroads and a close personal friend of J. P. Morgan.

According to the common belief, the Rockefeller holdings of United States Steel shares were at one time very large; so large, in fact, as to make them a factor in the affairs of the corporation. It is denied, however, that Rockefeller's resignation is due to any friction or differences of opinion with the Morgan interests.

NO RECONCILIATION

Mrs. Astor Wants to Be Divorced From Her Husband Forever

New York, March 2.—Counsel for Mrs. Ava W. Astor filed in White Plains a note of issue for a motion to make permanent the interlocutory degree of divorce she obtained from Colonel John J. Astor, more than three months ago.

The application sets forth that Mrs. Astor will appear before Justice Mills and ask that the final decree be granted in her behalf. The time limit in this move would have expired on Friday next, and until yesterday friends have said a reconciliation had been effected.

NO FOREST FAMINE IN SIGHT

Head of "Weather Works" Talks to Committee on Agriculture

Washington, March 2.—Backing up his statements as to the effects of erosion on floods and contending that there had been too many reckless opinions given by the forestry advocates, Willis L. Moore, chief of the United States weather bureau, appeared before the house committee on agriculture in connection with the Weeks bill relating to purchase of lands in the Appalachian system.

Professor Moore said he believed the erosion of the mountain sides had a beneficent effect, for it washed onto the level reaches that could be cultivated; he believed in forestation of the slopes only in case the timber so grown could be sold to commercial advantage.

He was heartily in favor of legislation that really conserved and protected national resources, but not of the wholesale forestry so much agitated. He foresaw no danger of forest famine, he declared.

TAFT'S BILLS TO BE PUSHED

Country to Be Shown a Firm and Progressive Policy

Washington, March 2.—President Taft has clasped hands with the Republican leaders of congress over a plan to put through his legislative program. A final conference was held at the White House Tuesday, attended by Attorney General Wickersham, Senators Aldrich and Crane, and Speaker Cannon, at which it was decided that the railroad, the postal savings bank and two conservation bills should be pressed for passage, with all the power at the command of the Republican party.

The railroad bill will be taken up in the senate, when the postal bank bill is through, and the conservation measures will follow. It is hoped that the house meantime will get its appropriation bills out of the way and thus give a clear field for the administration measures. The Alaskan bill is hopelessly pigeon-holed. Arizona and New Mexico statehood may be compelled to await action at a future session and anti-injunction legislation, along the line of the Moon bill, will be neither pressed nor resisted. Although such a law is earnestly desired by the president, some of the leaders fail to see any special advantage at this time in stiffening the law controlling the courts.

Under no circumstances, as at present constituted, will congress agree to such an anti-injunction measure as President Gompers wants, while the Moon bill does nothing more than standardize the best existing practice. Should the Moon bill be sent along, the leaders would willingly vote for it.

The White House conference followed one held Monday, when the differences over the postal savings bank were adjusted. This was perhaps the most serious situation confronting the administration, for the Root and Smoot amendments to the bill appeared irreconcilable. Senator Root now withdraws his amendment, which would direct the money into the United States treasury to be used for investment in United States bonds, while Senator Smoot, representing the western sentiment for the postal bank, is assured that the money may be deposited in local banks for local uses.

The compromise feature is one which permits the president in time of emergency to withdraw the deposits from the banks and invest it in bonds. This compromise covers the point made against the bill by Senator Aldrich, who will support the measure now that it can aid and not embarrass his plan of currency reform.

The bill will go from the senate to the house committee on postoffices and post roads, of which Representative Weeks is chairman. Weeks hitherto has opposed the bill and has not yet declared in favor of it, but he may come to its support later as a party measure.

The White House agreement includes an understanding that the majority in congress, as far as it can be controlled, will stand by the administration bills practically as they are reported from committee. This means, of course, that none but administration amendments will be accepted.

None of the administration measures is a particular pet of any of the leaders, but they and the president have become alarmed over the chaotic conditions in congress and have resolved that nothing but a firm and progressive policy will appeal to the country. If the program thus outlined goes through, it will leave congress with a record of something practical accomplished and quiet the hasty criticisms that the president has surrendered his independence to the great financial interests which some of the leaders popularly are supposed to represent.

While it is true that the president has intrusted to Senator Aldrich and Speaker Cannon the task of putting his bills through congress, the more important consideration is that they have agreed to let him determine what the character of that legislation shall be.

Revealed By Fire

What a Discarded Lover's Heroism and Sacrifice Brought Him.

By ADDISON HOWARD GIBSON.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

The full September moon shone down upon a little cabin on the dry prairies of western Kansas, lighting up the faces of a young man and woman who were slowly walking up and down the open space before the door.

"I was so happy, Rachel," the man said, glancing at the strong, beautiful face of his companion, "when I heard your school up in the Wyoming mountains was closed and you were coming home. I thought you were coming to stay this time. I hope so, for, Rachel, I've loved you a long time."

Dan Southard leaned toward the girl to study the effect of his avowal on her.

But Rachel Winton betrayed no emotion.

She merely turned her dark eyes from the man's eager face and looked off across the moonlit prairie.

"I've been working and waiting, Rachel," he continued, his voice husky with feeling, "until I had something to offer you. I was sure you wouldn't give up teaching for just anything—you're not that kind.

"But I've loved you ever since two years ago, when we all came out to these prairies together in our covered wagons. I remember, after we were here, how bravely you worked to help your parents get started off comfortably before you went with your uncle to Wyoming to teach that ranch school."

"Dan," she exclaimed almost sternly, "I haven't ceased to remember our old house, which father lost on that security debt, the home we were forced to leave when we came here. Mother and I were not very brave, for we shed tears most of the way, though no one knew it. We came because it was the only thing to do, but this pioneer life is a hard, hard one.

"In my heart I am at war with it and always have been. It takes away youth and kills all high and noble ambitions. See how mother has aged during the two years we have lived here. It makes me bitter. That's why I go back to teach. I'm going to make enough to take them away from this life."

"But, Rachel," he pleaded, "you shall never work as your mother has had to, I promise it," then suddenly, with a catch in his voice, "Say, girlie, there's no truth in the report about your caring for that rich Wyoming ranchman?"

"Mr. Miles has been very kind to me," she answered without pretending not to understand. "He has offered to let father and mother have the lovely home he owns in Denver if I'll marry him. It would be an ideal place for them to end their days in."

"My God, girlie! I couldn't stand it to see you the wife of another!" the young man cried, his strong frame shaken with emotion.

"You mustn't care so much, Dan," she returned, tender pity for his suffering making her tones kind. "Get a better girl to share your home—one who will love you enough to make the best of this hard life."

"Never, never, Rachel!" he answered, with passion. "I love only you. If you could but read my heart and see how much you would surely care just a little for me. Your ranchman, rich as he is, will never love you as I do, Rachel! Never!"

"I couldn't love any man well enough to give up all I enjoy and settle down to this isolated life, this continual treadmill of drudgery," she retorted, turning away, then in a milder tone, "Forget me, Dan."

Forget her! That he would never do—he never could. There was a time—it was when they lived in their covered wagons and camped at night by the trail; yes, and even after they were settled here—that he had thought she cared for him.

Those had been the happiest days in Southard's life. He had never dreamed that she hated those free, rolling prairies so intensely.

Blind to this, he had been toiling on his new claim to get things in good shape before asking her to marry him.

Bitterly now he felt that it was all labor lost, for without Rachel Winton nothing was worth while.

After gazing at the girl a moment in silent reproach Southard walked over to his tethered horse, mounted and rode away.

The moon climbed higher as Rachel stood looking after the vanishing horseman.

"Poor Dan!" she murmured. "He is so strong and good. Father and mother love him like a son, but I just can't, can't!" And the tears gathered in her eyes.

"I was intended for something better. If I wasn't, why should I dislike the rough, crude ways of pioneer life so terribly?"

With this question on her lips Rachel Winton entered the cabin, where her parents were already asleep, and sought her couch.

For a long time she lay awake, her mind, much against her will, busy comparing young Southard and Mr. Niles.

Dan's clear cut but somewhat boyish face lost nothing by comparison with that of the bearded, middle aged rancher man who had been wooing her persistently for the past year.

Life with one meant the unceasing drudgery of the prairie farm; with the other, wealth to enable her to live wherever she might choose herself and also give her parents a comfortable home.

But which of the men held the key to her heart?

Really she could not tell, but she grew drowsy making herself believe she would be able in any event to compel her mind with its power of judging wisely to control her heart.

Toward midnight she was aroused by a strange pungent smell pervading her little room. Her breathing was not quite free. What could it mean?

She lay for a minute dazed, yet with what sense she could command, trying to discover the cause of the odor that was gaining in strength and stifling power.

Suddenly a great crimson light illumined the small window. With a quick movement Rachel sprang from bed, and as she did so there came to her ears the rapid beat of a horse's hoofs on the prairie road.

Then she heard Dan's voice burdened with awful import.

"Rachel!" he called. "Mr. Winton! Get up! Get up quick! The prairie is on fire!"

"Father! Mother!" the girl called, running to their bed. "Get up! Do you hear? There is a big fire. Yes, Dan," she called from the window as she helped her mother to dress.

"There's not a minute to lose," Southard called back. "The fire is sweeping this way as fast as a strong wind can bring it."

There had been no rain for three weeks, and everything was dry as tinder.

The Wintons understood the terrible danger impending.

Not only the cabin, but stock, crops, even they themselves, were at the mercy of those leaping flames.

"Bring the blankets, quick!" shouted Southard. Obeying him instantly, Rachel dragged every blanket out of the house.

Dan had ridden his horse to the little spring in the hollow and was rapidly filling every pail he had been able to find about the place.

Acting under his directions, the girl mounted her father's pony, and she and Dan carried water for Mr. and Mrs. Winton to wet the blankets, this being their only means of fighting the fire.

How they worked and fought! It seemed as if the whole world was arrayed against them, and all the while the moon looked down, cold and uncaring, while the fire swept fiercely onward until it caught in a row of dry cornstalks that reached nearly to the cabin. Here the battle must be fought with renewed energy.

The smoke of the burning grass and grain assailed their nostrils, scorched their throats and blinded their eyes, but with hands torn and blistered they toiled on.

When the old couple fell back overcome Dan and Rachel took their places with the heavy wet blankets and worked side by side. Inch by inch they beat back the angry flames.

Even in that terrible situation the girl felt a singular strength and coolness in working by Southard's side. She felt that the enemy must yield to such grand and compelling superiority.

When the fire attacked them from another vulnerable point it was Dan's exhaustless energy that saved the day.

By sacrificing a patch of ripe grain through a prompt back fire, the foe was met and made to recoil in wrathful flames upon itself.

After a time the great body of the fire swept away northward, having consumed everything of the Wintons' except cabin and stock.

With a thankfulness in their hearts for the preservation of these, the old couple entered the house and threw themselves upon the floor.

Then Southard and Rachel came back with weary, lagging feet from their last successful onslaught.

"Everything's safe now, Rachel," he said huskily, starting toward his horse.

"Dan," she questioned, a queer choking in her throat, "you are not going now?"

He stopped and looked at her. She had never appeared more beautiful to him than now, with the marks of that great fire battle upon her face and tattered dress.

"All we have left we owe to you, Dan," she went on, noting his scorched face, bleeding hands and burned clothing.

Then she placed her blackened hand on his shoulder. How he trembled under that touch.

"I don't feel as if I could bear to have you leave us, Dan." There was a tender pleading in her tones.

"The danger's over, Rachel," he reassured her, "and I must ride all the way to Westfield before daybreak."

"Why to Westfield?" she asked.

Without a word he pointed across the blackened prairie toward his claim.

Only a mass of smoking ruins marked the place where his house and stable had been. She understood.

"You left all you had to come to us, Dan," she said, with a sob. "Now you have nothing left. Without your help everything here, even our lives, would have been sacrificed. Oh, Dan, the light of that fire has given me a sight of my own heart! I see that the true life for me is right here, and if you'll let me I'll help you make another home."

"Rachel!" he cried. "You can't mean it! Do you really love me?"

"I have loved you all the time, my knight of the prairies," she answered as his strong arms gathered her to his breast.

A JUVENILE COURT

Modest but Far-reaching Work of a Washington Judge.

In an antiquated part of Washington, a plain old dwelling-house—the Court. Within a house, the narrow hallway, obstructed by waiting groups of squalid or rough-looking boys. Opening from the hall, a long, bare room; at its end, behind a table on a low platform, a stout, ruddy gentleman with a peculiarly genialface—His Honor Judge DeLacey of the Juvenile Court. Seated below, a clerk and a portentously solemn usher—the Court officers.

This much we observed in passing to seats at one side of the platform, led by a gracious Lady of Charities, who is accredited here ex-officio, and equally welcome in Courts judicial or social.

Before the Judge's table a pretty pseudoo—stylish young fulatto woman is making plaint to the Judge, who listens intently; then interrupts:

"You say your daughter is unruly and disobedient?"

"Yes, sir; she"—

"Does she live with you?"

"No, sir; her gran'mother she done got away from me and sot her against me"—

"Are you married?"

"No, sir," faintly.

A few low-voiced questions from the Judge, his genial face a very grave; then:

"Step down," he directs. "Now you," motioning to a decent-looking elderly negro woman, who advances timidly to the stand.

"You are the grandmother of this Tilly Carter?" asks the Judge kindly. "And do you find her unruly—hard to manage, disobedient?"

"No, sir,' please Your Honor. She's a little flighty-like, as girls will be, but not bad, sir. Minds me good, does her wu'k, goes to school regular."

There follows a short colloquy, of which we only hear from the old woman, "I'm a-trying by best to bring her up good," and "not leave her grow up like her mother." Then the grandmother returns to her seat and the clerk calls:

"Tilly Carter."

A bright-faced mulatto girl of fifteen comes forward half-frightened, half-defiant.

"Tilly," the Judge fixes his kind eyes on her down-bent face until it is lifted in repose: "what are you doing wrong—neglecting school—disobedient—staying out evenings? You know you mustn't stay out evenings, Tilly."

"I ain't never out after nine, sir," protests Tilly.

"Nine is too late for a young girl like you. A girl who wants to be respected mustn't be on the street after dark. Doesn't your grandmother tell you that?" and there follow more fatherly counsels.

"Let the mother and grandmother come here," ordered His Honor. The three stand at the desk, the young woman beginning her high-pitched plea again.

"Stop!" the Judge's face and voice grow stern. "I don't believe your story. I believe the grandmother, and I am going to give Tilly into her care to be made a good girl of. They may go upstair to the matron and she will give them certain restrictions for the girl. Mind you obey, them, Tilley!" and the trio gives place to a bullet-headed black boy, who ducks and grins as the usher eteers in the front hall. The clerk reads the indictment:

"Nick Brown, twelve years old, runs away from school."

The Judge leans forward and regards the ebony incarnation of mischief with a friendly, quizzical gaze.

"Well, Nick, what is the reason you can't stay in school like other boys? You don't look stupid or lazy. What do you do when you run away?"

"I'm in business, sah."

"What kind of business?" asks the Judge, as man to man.

"Blackin' shoes, sah" responds Nick, encouraged by this interest "Boy done gin me his old box and I runs it."

"How much do you make a day, Nick?"

"Sometimes five, ten cents, sah, sometimes more, muddy times."

"Any home, Nick?"

"I—I sleeps wid some folks—and justs picks up my eating."

"Hm-m. Like business better than than school, Nick?"

"Bet I do, sah!" a broad display of ivory.

"Well, now, Nick, listen to me. You are evidently cut out for business." (Grin of delight from Nick) "But a business man must have some schooling to make a good one." (Grin fades.) "How else will he know figures when he sees them, or when he is right or wrong? Oh, yes; a business man must have schooling. Now I'll make a bargain with you, Nick. I'll let you off punisment this once, since you were out for business, not mischief, if you will promise me to go school till you are fourteen—two years more; then, if you've done well, I'll see that you get a fair start in business; you reporting to me, meanwhile, that you are keeping your part of the contract. You can easily pick up your five or ten cents a day after school. Is it a bargain? You keep your part of it and I'll keep mine, sure. Report to me once a month, Nick. Good-by, Nick!"

In response the usher pushes in before him a thin, ragged, trembling wisp of a child, scarcely more than a pickaninny, followed by a rough-looking white man, his accuser.

"What has this boy done?" The Judge gives a glance of mingled compassion and humor at the small delinquent before him.

"Caught ringin' doorbells, your honor," replies the accuser.

"Nothing more?"

"Well, not as I knows of, your Honor, but likely there is. Anyway, the lady as owns the doorbell, she won't stand it and had the little rascal took up"—

"I'll attend to this case. What is your name, my boy? Don't be afraid." leaning across the table and bending a heart-warming smile on the shrinking culprit, who whispers a reply. "Well, now, Sammy, don't you know you have no right to make trouble for other people by ringing their bells—no right to touch other people's property? Did you stop to think about that? (A shake of the woolly head.) "I thought not. But you must learn to think what is right and wrong. Have you a mother, Sammy?" (Another shake of the head and a timid whisper. The benign expression deepens on the Judge's face.) "Live with your stepfather, eh? Is he good to you, Sammy"

But here poor Sammy's shaky self-control breaks, the small black face buries itself in a ruinous cap, the narrow shoulders under the thin shirt with lifting sobs piteous to hear.

The Judge wheels his chair to one side, drawing the convulsed little figure within his kind arm, "like as a father," patiently soothes the black waif, until at last he control his sobs, dry his face on his cap and listen to the kind voice, saying:

"Now, Sammy, listen to me, my boy. A little fellow like you mustn't be running about the streets alone, getting into mischief. That will make a bad boy of you, and you don't want to be that." (Decided shake of the woolly head, as the waif looks trustfully into the Judges face.) "Wouldn't you like to have a comfortable home and a nice, kind woman to look after you, and teach you to live right? Yes, I know you would! So I'm going to send you to a home in the country, where there's plenty of green grass to play on and where you'll have good, kind care. That's what you need. And you must be a good, obedient boy there, Sammy, in return for all that care and kindness. You will? That's a promise, Sammy. Can you keep one? Good! I shall hear how you keep this one. I shan't forget you," and the Judge lays a fatherly hand on the thin shoulder as the usher, patting the small waif's head, leads him out to the matron and a country home—and, we hope regeneration.

"Next!" proves an incorrigible runaway-from-home, brought by despairing parents, who are promptly instructed to take their rebellious scion home and spank him well, with the warning that at another complaint the Court will deal with him. Just here the scared rebel coughs—a real bronchial bark. The Judge bends a quick ear toward it.

"Has that boy a cough?"

"Yas, sir; somehow he done cough like that for some time."

"Have him see the dispensary doctor at once. And postpone his spanking till he's well. Then give it to him good ,if he doesn't behave."

"Well, Fred," to an alert, neatly dressed, white youth who now presents himself with confidence at the bar. "I'm glad to see you looking so neat and properous. Shiny shoes are a good index to a fellow's self-respect. Still doing well in the machine shop? Dollar and a half a day, eh? That's fine! Now, Fred, you've been steady so long that I don't think you'll need to report to me again. Just go on as you are doing and you'll succeed, because you deserve to. Good-by, my boy." A hearty handshake dismisses proud Fred from the list of probationers—the only white delinquent that session.

He is followed by several other probationers, who report regularly to the Judge, receiving such comments as; "Don't hear satisfactory accounts of you, Tony. Look out! Do better than this or the Court will have to take you in hand. Report again." Or, "You are on the right track, my lad. Boots blacked, too: good sign! Keep on improving. Be good!" Or to a self-assertive young mulatto, a sharp reprimand for disrespect to the Court.

Last of the long procession appear a couple strangely in contrast to the preceding youth—a grizzled, work-worn, elderly negro man and a weazened, neat little woman of about his age: for it seems that conjugal difficulties also come under this Court's paternal jurisdiction. The man in his teamster's garb shuffles clumsily to the table and there puts down a sum of money, which the judge passes to the woman, who advances stolidly behind her husband, without a glance at him, apparently conscious only of their intermediary, the Judge.

"Is that right, Mrs. Johnson?" he asks her in friendly tone. 'Ephraim pays your money regularly every month, doesn't he?" The little old woman nods, silently.

"Well, come both of you next month; and I wish with all my heart that I could see this separation ended. You used to be happy together. Try this month to forget whatever has been unpleasant between you and to remember all that was helpful and good; there was much of it, wasn't there? You're going down the slope of Life's hill now, and it's mighty lonesome going down alone; that's the time when you whant a kind hand in yours. Think it over and tell me next month" (his smile envelopes them with its cheery persuasion) "that you have decided to go on down the hill together."

As Ephraim and his old wife pass out, silent, thinking—who can tell what?-the clerk declared the Court closed for the day, and we go forward to receive our sentence from His Honor, who is not too weary to give us a cordial greeting and one of his smiles that warm the depths of one's heart. And I say to him, with a choke in my voice:

"Judge. I feel as if Ihad been witnessing a bit of His Kingdom come."

"Why, we try to do a little good here," the Judge replies, simply.—The Congregationalist.

BRIEFS

An extended report of the conference on charities will appear in the Daily Ledger of Thursday.

The weekly whist party will be held at home of Mrs. A. Boutilier, North Payne street this evening.

Charles F. Cook, a well known resident of Houghs Neck, died on Monday in his 51st year.

Mrs. Mary L. Wade is to begin on Thursday a course of twelve lessons in home economics for the nurses of the Brockton Hospital.

Charles Capaccioli of Center street left Tuesday night on a business trip to Key West, Florida, where he will stay about two weeks.

Mr. and Mr. Peter J. Cahill of 76 Franklin street Quincy Adams, have the sympathy of friends, in the death of their infant daughter, Elisabeth.

Mrs. W. L. Jackspn of 129 Marlborough street, Wollaston, was awarded the tea-set on Tuesday which has been on exhibition in Wheeler's dry goods store the past week.

The School Committee will hold a special meeting on Friday evening to take action on the request of the City Council for an opinion of the School board as which new schoolhouse is needed first: Bigelow Park, Montclair or Wollaston. It is a meeting open to the public.

Last week was Mrs. Mary L. Wade's last week of teaching home economics in the schools of Milton and she was very much surprised to receive from the Hivh school class a very pretty bar pin and a large box of chocolate bon-bons. It was a class of 20 girls all freshman. Last Thursday afternoon the teachers of the High school and the consolidated gave Mrs. Wade a reception, to which all the teachers of Milton and the school committee were invited. It was a very delightful occasion. The tables and room were very artistically arranged. The girls of the senior and junior classes who had been former pupils made and furnished the cake and candy, and also passed the refreshments, which were most daintily served.

The House committee on naval affairs of Congress voted on Tuesday, while Quincy was celebrating, to recommend the construction of two mammoth battleships, one repair ship, two fleet colliers and four submarines.

HISTEN BY CLOSE VOTE

Leads Studley by 12 Votes at Special Election

The special election in Ward Two Tuesday resulted in the election of Edward P. Histen, the Democratic candidate to fill the vacancy caused by the tie at the recent municipal election. On the original count at that election seven votes separated Mr. Histen from Harry Studley and the recount resulted in a tie vote.

The vote at the special election was also close, resulting in the election of Mr. Histen by 12 votes.

As there were but two names on the ballot at the special election, and great care was exercised in the count, there is but little chance of an error, and it is doubtful if a recount is asked.

The vote of the Ward was as follows:

	Pre. 1	Pre. 2	Total
Histen,	79	202	281
Studley,	138	131	269
Blanks,	2	2	4

Edward P. Histen the new councilmen born in Lowell, April 3, 1885, and came to Quincy in 1897. He has since made his home here. He attended the Coddington school and was graduated from the High school in the class of 1902. He entered the employ of the New England and Telephone Co., where he is still employed. He is a member of Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, the Quincy Point Social club, and the Holy Name society of St. John's church. He is also a member of the Ward Two Democratic committee. The office of councilman is the first public position he has held.

NOW AT HIS DESK

President Bowles Returns Quietly to the Shipyard

President Bowles made his first appearance at the Fore River yards since his return from Europe this morning. He arrived about 10 o'clock and immediately started in to work just as though a trip to Europe, the securing of a $2,000,000 contract, and a banquet, was an every day occurance. President Bowles found that during his absence his office had been enlarged and that it had been entirely refurnished in mahogany.

COLEMAN OUT ON BAIL

Father and Uncle of Accused Bookkeeper Furnish Required Bonds

Boston, March 2.—George W. Coleman, accused of falsifying the books of the National City bank of Cambridge, was released on bail of $50,000 yesterday afternoon. He spent last night at the home of his parents in Cambridge.

His father, W. G. Coleman, and his uncle, J. W. Coleman, who are associated in the coal business in Cambridge, furnished bail, offering as security real estate and buildings valued at $100,000, free of all incumbrances. Immediately after his release Coleman rode home with his father.

King Albert Rescues a Rubens

Brussels, March 2.—King Albert has sent orders to New York for the return to the royal palace of the Rubens picture "The Miracle of St. Benignus," sent there for sale by King Leopold.

Rev. Daniel Roy Freeman will be installed as pastor of All Souls' church, Braintree, on Tuesday evening, March 15. Rev. F. R. Griffin of Montreal, former minister, will be present. High School Boys Win Close Game at Milton

The Quincy High basket-ball team journeyed to Milton Tuesday afternoon, and defeated Milton High by the close score of 10 to 6.

The game was fiercely contested throughout. The Quincy team appeared to be away off color, but Milton should be credited with playing a fast close covering game. No one player did exceptionally fine for Quincy, while Stuart for Milton caged the ball four times from free tries.

It is remarkable, but nevertheless true, that Quincy has never tasted defeat at the hands of the boys from Milton ever since they have met each other in athletic contests. For this reason alone it was apparent that Milton started the game seeking victory at all hazards.

This game practically closed the playing season after making a very enviable record. Out of 12 games played they have returned the victor in 10, and many of these games were played with some of the fastest school teams in the state.

INDIGNATION AT FORE RIVER

Action of City Official Mars the Celebration

In all of the arrangements for the home coming of Admiral Bowles there was but one incident to mar the occasion. That took place in the morning near the works. Early in the morning all over the city people who owned the American flag had them displayed in honor of the occasion. On the little city playground on Howard avenue, where the first school house was located is a flag pole. The flag usually displayed on patriotic occasions on that pole was purchased by popular subscription, a good part of which was contributed by employes at the Fore River yard. This flag was not displayed Tuesday. The flag is in the custody of Arthur W. Newcomb and during the morning he was waited on and requested to raise the flag. This he refused to do, although reminded that other flags in the city were out and that this flag was purchased by popular subscription.

Not to be outdone some of the Fore River men returned to the yard and secured a handsome new flag and started to raise it. But Mr. Newcomb was ahead of them and taking a knife from his pocket he cut the halliards and pulled them through the block so that they could not be used.

The incident ended here for the time but it is understood that it is to be brought to the attention of the proper authorities before the week is out. Mr. Newcomb is a member of the School Committee, and also the Sons of the Revolution, and his action is a surprise to the people of Quincy, who are indignant.

ADVERTISE.

SPORTSMEN'S SHOW.

Live Game Displays a Big Feature of Exhibition in New York.

The sixteenth annual exhibition of the Sportsmen's association recently opened at Madison Square Garden, New York, has many new features to please sportsmen generally. There will be basketball games every afternoon and evening, in which college, school and intersettlement teams will compete. The schoolboys will have their rifle shooting tournament under the auspices of the Public Schools Athletic league. This tournament is for the elementary and high school championships, and it will be decided on sixteen targets placed in the basement. There will also be an indoor intercollegiate shooting tournament.

More than 150 guides from all the big hunting resorts of the United States will entertain visitors at their various camps. There are camps from different parts of Canada, coon hunters in a camp representing Virginia and several thousand specimens of fur, fins and feathers from all parts of the world. The entire fleet of the Brooklyn Model Yacht club, consisting of fifty boats, is exhibited on the main floor. The Canadian government has an exhibit of live game animals from New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. A very complete collection of pheasants gathered from all parts of the world is inclosed in a space occupying 800 square feet.

The largest collection of live cranes in the United States is another feature. These cranes have been secured from all over the world, many coming from the royal palaces of Europe. There is a collection of waterfowl housed in an inclosure covering 2,500 square feet, while rare species of African game birds and bleeding heart pigeons make the show the most complete from a sportsman's standpoint that has ever been presented to the public.

DARING TRIP FOR MOTORBOAT

The Rabbit's Foot to Go Through Whirlpool at Niagara Rapids.

One of the sensations of the recent motor boat show in New York was the Rabbit's Foot, exhibited by a Detroit firm, which will be sent down the rapids of Niagara next June. The boat is fitted with 150 water tight compartments in the body and has been constructed so that it can be punctured 125 times and still float. The distance the boat is expected to negotiate is seven and a quarter miles from the base of the falls to Lewiston, Ont. In the past logs have been thrown in the rapids and after they entered the whirlpool were whirled around and around at a terrific speed until they stood on end, then suddenly shot downward, not to appear again on the surface. It is commonly thought that there is a subterranean passage into Lake Erie, as none of these logs have ever been seen after their disappearance.

The Rabbit's Foot has been constructed so that it can neither sink nor be forced to the bottom. The main difficulty will be for the two men to stay in the boat. Special foot clamps and hand holds have been built, and when the passage is attempted the men will be fastened in such a manner that they cannot be thrown out of the boat. Owing to the remarkable effects of the whirlpool the engines of the boat will be of little use when once the whirlpool itself is actually encountered, and in fifteen minutes after the lines are cast off the occupants of the boat will reach Lewiston in safety or two more lives will be added to the list of those who have attempted the passage. The men who will make the attempt are W. E. Rose and C. F. Worford, who will attempt the passage the early part of June.

STAR DUST TO CLARIFY MINDS

Professor Ormsby Sees Wonderful Things In Wake of Halley's Comet.

"The Halley comet, when it comes, will come like a cyclone," said Professor F. F. Ormsby before the Order of Nature at the Great Northern hotel the other afternoon in Chicago, "sweeping and clarifying the minds of men and will have a tendency to promote the study of the zodiac, which has been buried practically since the dark ages.

"The Halley comet really is an atmospheric arrangement of the planets, and when it comes in May I look for several interesting happenings, such as a rush to the study of the different signs, which we have here (pointing to a zodiacal chart). The star dust that will fall from the comet will have much effect on the minds of the people, but as to bodily injury from its coming there is nothing to that.

"The comet will open up a new cycle of thought and will inspire in the public the desire to learn of things higher up, above their present zone of thought."

Plan to Revive Spelling Bees.

In order that the pupils of the various public schools in York county, Pa., may become more efficient in orthography, County Superintendent C. W. Stine has planned to conduct spelling bees throughout the county during the next scholastic year. The county superintendent has prepared a book of 5,000 practical words which he will use in these spelling contests, and prizes will be awarded to the successful spellers.

New Snuffboxes In the Senate.

New snuffboxes were installed in the United States senate chamber the other day. They are tacked on the wall, one on either side of the vice president's dais. Many senators took a pinch. The snuffboxes displaced had been in use for over fifty years.

ADDRESSES

been, and had I made the selection, I would have turned to Cowper and had them sing:—

"Ye fearful saints fresh courage take,
The clouds ye so much dread;
Are big with mercy and will break
In blessings on your head."

"There were clouds; clouds of financial depression hanging low above the business horizon, but we realized the truth of the proverb. "'Tis always darkest just before the dawn," and we welcomed our guest as a Moses come to lead us out of our industrial wilderness. And you all know how the voice of the bush has been heard; the snake of stagnation has been turned into a rod, and staff of progress; the pillar of cloud by day, and the pillar of fire by night have been followed far o'er Southern seas to distant Argentine; where Horebs rock was smitten to maketh a land to flow with milk and honey and we are again gathered to welcome him, the realization of our hopes; the devotee; the zealot; the harbinger of better times; the light about to break upon another dawn, and bring the

SUNSHINE OF PROSPERITY.

"And we must wake, not as Israelites to bask in the warm rays of its refulgent beams, but we must, to use another figure of speech, leave our plains of Egypt marked with pyramids for mausoleums and colossal tatues to commemorate kingly memories, with all else desert waste. We must let the dead past bury its dead. While like old Egypt, Quincy has a glorious past, rich in history and tradition; it speaks to us only of the past, and if we sleep in its desert of tradition and tranquility, we will awake to find only the mountain of ancestry upon the one side casting its shadow athwart; the depression of posterity upon the other, with no mysterious manna to support the industrial life which must exist between. We would, like Mahomet's coffin be hanging somewhere between heaven and earth, above industry and below income.

"But figures of speech will never total the grand sum of twenty-two millions of dollars. The Admiral has turned the trick on two continents, and in all the languages. In the vernacular of the street, the proposition is up to us, the question is about it. My suggestion for an answer would be, make this city the proper setting for such a plant as we now have, and the large one it is going to be. This magnificent gathering, a spontaneous expression of our appreciation of the Admiral's efforts should be as well an inspiration for action.

"We should not again suffer any relapse in our efforts to make this city what it should be, for 'tis only when boulevard's completed to Atlantic by the Sea, when the railroad tracks are at a grade that suits the powers that be, when Chinese wall or tracks depressed replace those awful gates, when Bill Shea sits in congress, and when things just suit Gus Bates, when Ward Five gets that school house, when City Hall's complete, when Houghs Neck gets that sewer and ten thousand dollar street, when the bridges at Neponset and Quincy Point are built, when dredges keep the channels free from mud and sand and silt, when the draws are of sufficient size for any boat to pass, when we have branch libraries and can light with dollar gas, when trustees of the Savings Bank will look on money lent to build a home at Quincy Point as a proper investment, when the citizens association have stirred our civic pride, when the water front's developed, when our freight comes on the tide, for 'tis only when we've done these things that we should stop and rest, and feel that we have paid the debt we owe our honored guest"

Mayor Shea then arose and read the wording on the handsome engrossed scroll which he presented to Admiral Bowles as a testimonial from the citizens of Quincy. The wording will be found on the first page.

As Admiral Bowles arose and accepted the scroll, the audience arose and cheered him loud and long, giving him a reception that almost shook the walls of the hall. The address of Admiral Bowles is given in full in another column.

The last thing on the program was the singing of the original song composed by Cornelius M. Duggan and dedicated to Admiral Bowles. The song was printed on last page of the menu. Mr. Duggan sang the verses and the audience joined in thechorus.

This closed the evening's program and with three cheers loud and long for Admiral Bowles and three equally as loud and long for Mrs. Bowles the banquet came to an end shortly before 10 o'clock.

PERIL IN FUDGE.

Makes Girls Shapeless Rolly Polies, Says Food Expert Wiley.

Dr. Wiley, who is United States pure food commissioner and the man who knows more about food than anybody else, in a discourse on food, what to eat and what not to eat, said:

"Fudge is harmful. It makes girls fat owing to its excess of carbon hydrates, which produce adipose tissue. College girls and high school girls are round, rolly poly creatures instead of the slender maids that the country used to know before the fudge craze seized the nation. Fudge has become a national feminine habit. Not only do the college girls and the high school girls eat fudge, but it is made in vast quantities in the country where girls cannot buy candy except of the worst grades. I might almost say that fudge is becoming a national menace. Families everywhere are fudge ridden."

New Breath Holding Record.

After seven attempts Bert Swan of St. Joseph, Mo., broke the world's record for remaining under water the other night by lying at the bottom of a large tank of water for three minutes and six seconds. The previous record was two minutes and thirty-eight seconds, held by A. Enid, made in a Philadelphia swimming pool.

GREATEST FLAG'S ODD USE.

A Screen For Easter Lilies Growing In a Pittsburg Hothouse.

The largest American flag in the world, 160 by 80 feet, is now used to cover the lilies that are being forced in the Phipps conservatory in Schenley park, at Pittsburg, for the Easter flower show.

The original idea of the big flag—which has proved a red, white and blue elephant—was inspired by Captain Howard Oursler, Mayor Magee's secretary, who enlisted several hundred women in its making. These organized the Society of Betsy Ross. No supports or pole could be found sufficiently strong to hold the big bunting. The last time it was displayed was during the world's series championship ball games last fall, when it was spread on the hillside of Schenley park. The thousands at Forbes field could see its bright colors across the diamond in the distance.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS FOR ANNUAL BANQUET

Board of Trade Also Invite Ladies to be Their Guests on the Occasion.

Prices of Gas and Electricity Discussed by the Board.

The prices of gas and electricity to the citizens of Quincy was the main subject for debate Wednesday evening at the regular meeting of the Board of Trade.

Many of the members present spoke on the question. A majority argued that it was inconsistant that consumers in Quincy should be obliged to pay $1.50 per 1000 feet while gas from the same company, from the same source of supply, and through the same pipes, was supplied Milton for $1 per 1000 feet.

Others argued that citizens of Quincy should not be called upon to furnish capital for the Gas company. It was pointed out that other industries did not do so but that they entered the market of their own free will and placed the price of their product on a par with other concerns in the same line of business.

There were still others who argued that the company should be given an opportunity to get on its feet, and that the company should not be asked to make a reduction until it had been able to pay at least one dividend.

As to the price of electricity, it was argued that Quincy was at a disadvantage because in the city of Boston consumers were furnished with the current at 11 cents per kilowatt hour net, while in Quincy the price was 17 cents net.

No definite action was taken on the question, as it will be further discussed at a future meeting.

An amendment was made to the by-laws. This amendment in brief provides that members six months in arrears for dues shall not be allowed to vote, hold office or serve on any committee. Members eighteen months in arrears may be suspended by the directors but may be reinstated on payment of the regular fee.

The committee on the annual banquet to be held March 9, reported that the speakers would be Judge Loyed Chamberlin of Brockton, president of the State Board of Trade, Lieut. Gov. Frothingham and Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston.

Ladies will be admitted to the banquet which will be served by Burleigh & Martin, the contract having been awarded this firm as one of the members is a resident of Quincy.

A substantial lunch was served during the evening.

MOTHER OF POSTMASTER.

The funeral of Mrs. Eliza Hammond, widow of Charles Hammond, and mother of Postmaster Hammond, was held Wednesday afternoon from her late residence on Crescent street. The services were very largely attended and were conducted by Rev. Richard Armstrong of Christ church. During the services the Webber quartette sang "Gathering Home," "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." There was a very large number of floral tributes including a large set piece from the employees of the Quincy post office. The burial was at the Hall cemetery.

NAVY MEN TRANSFERRED.

Commander Emil Theiss, USN, who has been on duty as inspector of machinery at the Fore River shipyard for a year past, was this week ordered detached and assigned to duty as a member of the board on shore stations. He will go to Washington immediately, and it is expected that his successor at Quincy will be named in a few days.

Lieut. D. A. Weaver, who has been serving in connection with the fitting out of the submarine boat Salmon at the Fore River shipyards was ordered detached and assigned to the naval academy for duty as an instructor.

DOCTOR TELLS WHAT NOT TO DO

Valuable Address Before the Mothers' Association

The Quincy Mothers' Association held its first regular meeting for the year in the chapel of Bethany Congregational church Wednesday afternoon. In spite of the down pour of rain, the room was well filled, and the women who ventured out were repaid for their efforts.

Rev. Edward A. Chase of Wollaston conducted the devotional service, which was inspiring and greatly appreciated by all those present. The president of the association, Mrs. John D. Mackay, then introduced Dr. John A. Gordon, as one who had so often brought comfort and good cheer into our homes, the dean of his profession in this city, and the noblest Roman of them all."

Dr. Gordon said in part: Mother! The word implies an immense responsibility from a medical, moral and social point of view, but I will not dwell upon that. When I was invited to speak before you this afternoon I was asked to say something about, "What not to do in the emergencies of children." I am glad to do this, for in my forty years of practice I have seen so much that was done by the mother or her neighbor in the excitement of an accident or emergency that was unnecessary, inefficacious or harmful, that I feel that a talk of half an hour upon the subject will not be out of place. You understand that my subject is not, "The first aid to the injured," although it must necessarily include that by way of contrast.

I think that every mother should familiarize herself with the subject, so that she will have some clear idea what to do when accident and injuries occur to her children. Then she will not need to be told what to do. Dr. Gordon told the women present of a little book which contained a clear and condensed account of what to do for children when these occasions arose. He told how much more profitable the information gained from that book would be than the latest and most exciting novel, and how it would take less time to read than one number of the Ladies Home Journel. Continuing the speaker said:

"The trouble with most mothers and their friends is that there is a lack of good judgment in what they do without the doctor's directions. They do too much as a rule. The case was cited of one woman who had a sick child of about a year old, who gave it a hot bath, a dose of castor oil, an injection put a mustard plaster on its ankles, and onion poultice on its chest, and then, as she could think of nothing else, sent for the doctor.

All of these things in separate and suitable cases might be advisable, but it was the full extent of her knowledge on the subject of illness, and she applied them all to one poor child, not realizing that they were wholly unnecessary and very harmful. The natural impluse is to do something in an emergency, the mother or the neighbors have heard of something which was done in simular cases, and without reasoning proceed upon the same line of treatment.

Dr. Gordon laid stress upon the don'ts. There are very few cases of accident and injuries which can not wait until a physician can reach the spot, with the exception of severe hemorrhages. Put the child in a comfortable position on the bed and send for the doctor. The first "what not to do" is the most important of all. When a child has a bad fall or cuts himself or has a convulsion, do not get excited and lose your good judgment, but be cool and calm, and consider carefully what you must do. In 99 cases out of 100 there will not be need of undue haste. It is a good plan to have in some readily accessible place, a box containing some mild antiseptic, some sterilized gauze, and a bandage or two for cuts. These are the only things you will be called upon to use unless you mean to carry on the case yourself.

Now, I will tell you some things not to do, and I will not confine myself to emergencies. First, do not give a new born babe castor oil. A case was cited where the woman in charge of the child gave it a teaspoonful of castor oil. A teaspoonful of castor oil to a child a day old is equal to a full pint for an adult. Do not give children castor oil, castoria or an lavative without the advice of a physician. Do not give soothing syrup, paregoric or any other anodyne or hypnotic or quieting medicine to your child except by the advice of your physician. They are only temporary in their effects and very harmful. They will ruin his nervous system, destroy his digestion and retard his growth. When a child cries you may be sure there is something the matter. Find the cause of distress rather then hush the noise.

All medicines and drugs in themselves are harmful. They are like two edged-swords and cut both ways. They are given by the physicians for very definite purposes, and as the lesser of two evils, and the harm they are apt to do receives his careful consideration. When given for a specific purpose with a full knowledge of the harm they may do, they are of great value. Dr. Holmes was more then half right when he said, "If all the medicine in the world were thrown into the sea it would be better for humanity, but worse for the fishes."

I want to impress it upon your minds that 90 percent of all cases of all illness will get well without medicine if you practice proper hygenic conditions and follow the dictates of nature. Rest and quiet, fresh air—good water and nourishment suitable for the condition—is all the treatment that is necessary in 90 per cent of illness.

Have a good family physician on whom you can always rely and stick to him. He will learn our peculiarities and idiosyncrasies, and those of your children. He will soon find out what medicine will suit you, and what will do you harm. He will read you and learn you like an open book, and, when called to see you in illness, will know at once what is best to do for you; while the stranger physician has all that to learn. Do not mind his temper nor his peculiarities, over-look his failings. All doctors have them, because they are human. Remember that you do not employ him for his personality, but for his care of you in sickness. I am sorry to say that in this day of multiplicity of physicians the old time family doctor is fast passing out of custom. It is a great mistake.

Hemorrhage or bleeding. The sight of blood is terrifying to some people. The cuts of children are not usually severe. There is little danger of their bleeding to death unless a very large blood vessel is cut. Do not put on a cobweb. Do not put on a dirty rag from a corner of the floor. These are full of germs. If you havn't time to boil some clean water, use cold water and a clean cloth, and make a compress, or use ice. Keep sterilized dressings on hand. Do not use carbolic acid, it is very strong and unless used carefuly and intelligently may do serious harm. Sponges from the bath room or used for the body should never be used upon an open wound, because they abound in germs. Use only surgically clean things for dressing.

When sending for a doctor for an accident or emergency always give explicit information over the telephone, so that he may come properly equipped for his work.

When a child receives a fall and af-

A QUESTION AT BANQUET

What Is the City Going to do For Shipyard

What is the city going to do? This was the question propounded by Frank Fessenden Crane at the grand banquet to President F. T. Bowles on Tuesday evening. His address is given in full:

"Ten years ago in this same month, only three men of this City of Quincy knew of this industry. They were in conference, asking each other, what the city could do to induce this great shipbuilding industry to come to our water front. Hon. John O. Hall, Mayor of Quincy, Charles M. Bryant, President of the Council and myself. Tonight five thousand citizens, and the whole country join in a tribute to the president of that great industry, Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, to whom we are proud to show our appreciation.

"Now I will only mention one inducement that our city held out to this industry, it was the unanimous vote of the City Council to help the enterprise by every means it legally could.

"But what about the future? What are we as a city to do to help keep this great shipbuilding industry to the front? In a recent paper it was advised to ask the U. S. Government to spend in the neighborhood of forty-six million dollars to improve East Boston flats. But let our city of Quincy ask the U. S. Government to remove Channel Rock, to dredge the Weymouth side of the draw, and spend one million dollars on our two great channels, in order that there shall be no limit to the size of vessels these great works can produce. Then we can give to eastern Massachusetts all that East Boston can give ,at one tenth of the cost, and in one-tenth of the time.

We need other industries in this city of great opportunities, that will employ women and young people, and ally the whole family with our city. We need cheaper transportation. We need the best approach to our water front that money will give. Let us not forget the good things of the past, but let us keep in touch with the great possibilities of the future, and stand shoulder to shoulder for the improvement of all the great industries of the city, and make all the heads of these industries have confidence that we as a city mean to help their interests in every way that we honorably can."

—Not many weeks before baseball, America's greatest sport, will be in full swing. Who wouldn't be a baseball player? Large salaries, short days, and great lumps of excitement. What editor wouldn't close his sanctum door and spend three hours a day playing, mind you, baseball at a stipend of $1,000 a month.—Mansfield News.

WHERE CURTIS EXCELS

But One Set of Engines Required in Our Turbines

The American Curtis turbine engines, six of which are to built by the Fore River Shipbuilding Company of Quincy for the Argentine Republic, six for the Italian navy and six for use on United States destroyers, are of unusual mechanical interest, says the Christian Science Monitor.

The public is generally familiar with he turbine, but does not readily appreciate the differences between the Curtis and the Parsons or English type. A vessel equipped with the latter type must have two sets of engines one to go ahead and another to go astern, as the Parsons turbine cannot be reversed. With the American Curtis turbine but one set is needed, as the engine can be reversed as easily as the reciprocating type.

In the Curtis turbine the steam expands in seven sets of nozzles, or pressure stages, successively from the initial pressure to that of exhaust. The first pressure stage develops one fourth of the total energy, the other six one eighth each. The jet energy is transformed into work by impulse on the moving discs, which, according to the jet velocity used, are arranged in from three to four velocity stages.

After expansion on the nozzles of the first stage the steam issues in solid jets against the first row of moving buckets which absorb a part of the jet energy and, after passing through said buckets, meets the first row of stationary vanes. The purpose of these vanes is to guide the steam into the second row of moving buckets, which, in turn, take up another portion of the kinetic energy still possessed by the flowing steam at the same time dividing it into the second row of stationary buckets, which deflects the steam on the third row of moving buckets.

After leaving the last row of moving buckets in each stage the steam attains partial rest before it enters the nozzle of the next stage.

We must give the "Americans" a reception when they come to "North America" to inspect the building of their new battleships at the Fore River.

All things considered, it is not surprising that the leaders are sorely distressed over the fact that the public has awakened at last to the effect of the Aldrich tariff on the cost of living, hence there is much dread of the wrath that threatens to burst upon the plunderbund of November.

It has often been stated that a merchant could not do business on the East side of Hancock street but we are inclined to doubt the assertion for we see many who are not only doing business, but a good business. If a man starts out to get trade he will get it, but he knows he has got to hustle for it. If he carries in stock what people want, if the prices are right, and customers get courteous treatment he will get the trade no matter where located.

The merchant only half awake, with commonplace show windows and goods not worth advertising won't do business, even if the stores all about him are hustling.

We believe the wrong idea prevails and that the East side of Hancock street also Maple and other streets will before long be as busy as any sections of the city. What is needed for all business is a better lighting of City square and a more businesslike outlook.

Cash vs. credit is a topic of interest to every business man. What a different aspect business would take on if every one paid cash or at least cleaned off the slate every month. The way in which business is carried on with the credit system so elastic that months stretch into years before the account is settled and often then only a few dollars are paid on account, makes doing business a problem that is not easily solved. Many honest merchants have fallen by the wayside because they could not collect their just dues. Others have money enough out to give them a comfortable living and pay all bills, but because people won't or can't pay their way as they go they cannot meet their obligations.

A part of the high cost of living is due to the credit system. It works badly in two ways. If people do not pay cash they get the charge habit and often charge up things they cannot or should not afford at all. Then again they get lax in prompt settlement and soon the account gets beyond their means.

It takes a pretty good business to carry the credit system year after year and it should not be. Their should be a getting together and a standing together of the mechants and if a person's credit is exhausted in one store it should not be good in another.

No Bridge over Neponset River Previous to 1803

(Historical Paper No. 9.)

Pattee's History of Quincy has an interesting chapter on old roads and bridges from which we quote:

At the beginning of the nineteenth century the business interests of the eastern and southeastern parts of the State demanded a more direct and shorter route to Boston. To accomplish this, in 1802, Benjamin Beale, Moses Black, John Davis, John Billings, and Josiah Quincy petitioned the Legislature for an act of incorporation to build a bridge over and across the Neponset river, from Preston's point in Dorchester (now Ward twenty-four, Boston,) to Billings' Rock in the town of Quincy, which act was granted March 11, 1802. The former petitioners of the "Neponsite Bridge Corporation," not being satisfied with the location of the bridge under the act of incorporation, sent a second petition to the Legislature in 1803, to have the location changed, and that they might be authorized to construct a bridge across the Neponset river at a place called Horse Hommock, in said town of Quincy, and to lay out and make a road from the meeting-house in Quincy (this meeting-house is now the Stone Temple) to said bridge.

The Legislature, after due consideration, was of an opinion that this change would better facilitate and accommodate the public travel. In accordance with these views, they granted the "Neponset Bridge Company" a new charter, changing the location from Preston's Point, now Commercial Point, to Horse Hommock, as the prayer of the petitioners desired.

The company then made satisfactory arrangements with the town in reference to the old way to Squantum, they permitting them to take whatever portion of the old road that was needed to complete the new. From that time to this it has been the principal thoroughfare to Boston.

The cost of the turnpike and bridge as reported to the State, was $34,000, including all land purchases. The amount of receipts from October 28, 1803, to December 31, 1841, was $197,878; disbursements in the same period, $52,606; making the balance of net proceeds, $145,272. A very good return to the stockholders of this successful turnpike corporation.

Previous to the incorporation of the Neponset Turnpike, the Farms road, as it was always called at that time, commenced at President's bridge, on Adams street, and ran in an easterly direction; then turned at a right angle, crossed the brook, and went up the hill on the ridge on the easterly side of the turnpike, where the remains of said road may still be seen; then crossed to the westerly side, passing over the land on which the house of James H. Penniman on Hancock street, now stands; then turned a right angle near Merrymount Park; thence passing in a straight course towards the Bay until it came to Mr. Quincy's land; then turning a right angle again, passing by Mr. Quincy's gate, and crossing the turnpike, passed the northeast end of the swamp, crossing Stand Brook and passing the house of Dr. Wilson, which has been taken down, but was located nearly opposite the house of Edmund B. Taylor, near the swamp, and also the house now in possession of the heirs of John Glover; then came into the road leading from Squantum to Milton.

We find that the first effort to establish a ferry over Neponset river, for the purpose of opening communication between Boston and the Mount, was September 3, 1635. The General Court ordered that John Holland should keep a ferry between Capt. Poynte, now Commercial Point, and Mr. Newberry's Creek now Billings Creek. "He was to receive four pence for each passenger, and threepence if there were two or more." This, not being a paying business, and as Mr. Holland could do better at navigation he soon gave it up. One hundred and sixty-seven years after, the Neponset Bridge Company received a charter to construct a bridge in the same place but as we have before stated, it was changed to its present location.

This Ferry having been given up, the General Court the 6th of September, 1638, ordered that another one should be opened, and appointed Bray Wilkins to act as ferryman; under the direction of Mr. Stoughton and Mr. Glover, he was to receive one penny a person.

This ancient ferry was from the ridge in Quincy to Sling Point in Dorchester, about half way between the Neponset and Granite bridges. Afterwards Penny Ferry was in the same vicinity, the relics of which can be seen to this day.—The following statement in reference to Penny Ferry, is taken from the Quincy Patriot, December 25, 1875:

"In 1823, ex-President John Adams was asked whether Judge Edmund Quincy of Braintree, went to Boston over Milton Hill? He replied 'No, Judge Quincy would have thought it unsafe to venture as far inland as Milton Hill, for fear of the Indians; he was accustomed to go to Boston by the way of Penny's Ferry;'—a ferry so called because passengers paid a penny a piece to be rowed over the Neponste."

At what time Penny ferry was discontinued, we have not been able to find out; in all probability its business was of an occasional nature, and it must have proved a financial failure, as being located over a tidal river, it would delay travellers more or less in waiting for the tide to get at its proper height to ferry them across. It would have been as convenient, if not more so, to have taken the regular road over the bridge at Milton Mills to Boston.

This ferry, while it existed, was evidently a continuation of Glover's Ferry.

In 1648, it was ordered that no ferryman should be compelled to put out his boat until the ferryage was paid, and that the ferryman might refuse any Wampum not "stringed," or unmerchantable.

This year, 1648, the Court was informed that no ferry existed for the accommodation of the public to cross the Neponset river, and issued the following order:

May, 1648. Vppon certayne informatio giuen to this Court that there is no ferrie kept ouer Neponset River betweene Dorchester and Brauntry, whereby all that are to passe that way are enforced to head the riuer, to the great prejudice of those townes thereabouts and that there yet appeares no ma that will keepe it vnless he may be accommodated with hous, land and a boat, at the charge of the country, its therefore ordered by the authoritie of this court, that Mr. Jon G'our shall and hereby hath full power given him, either to graunt it to any p'son or p'sons for the terme of 7 years, so it be not chargable to the country, or else take it to himselfe and his heires as his owne inheritanc for ever, p'vided that it be kept in such a place and at such a price as may be most convenient for the country and pleasinge to the gennall court."—Mass. Rec., Vol. III., p. 128.

The first mention of a bridge over the Neponste river was in 1652, when the town of Dorchester was fined five pounds for not erecting a bridge over this river, and the fine was to be remitted provided the bridge was built according to law within three months.

The Court ordered that as the river bed was hard and passable for horse and cart, that Mrs. Stoughton might be discharged by making a good foot bridge with a "good rayle."

This bridge was cheaply constructed and of a temporary nature, as three years after, in 1655, a complaint was made to the court that this bridge was wholly ruined and unsafe for public travel.

"23d May, 1655. This Court having ordered that all bridges in country highwayes, as need shall be, shall, from time to time, be made and maynta'ned by each county in which they are, and that the bridge at Neponset Riuer is wholely ruined and that there is, as aleaged, a necessity of a cart bridge ouer that riuer in some place neere Mrs. Stoughton's mill, which, if deferred, cannot be made vp before winter which, if it should not be, would be very dangerous to man and beast, it is therefore ordered, that Capt. Luchas, Capt. Savage, Mr. Collicott, Mr. Wm. Parkes, Thomas Dyer and Deacon Bass, or the major p't of them, are appoynted a committee to consider and determine whether to erect a bridge there, and if so, then to agree with workmen for the same, and to returne the same to the next County Court, who shall p'portion the charg according to law."—Mass. Rec., Vol. III., p. 376.

This was the original County bridge, over which the old Plymouth turnpike passed, and was the principal thoroughfare to Boston before the Neponset turnpike was established.

The rapid increase of the stone business had so multiplied and increased the inhabitants of West Quincy and East Milton, that they demanded a more convenient and direct communication with Boston than the old way, and to relieve this urgent necessity, the General Court granted a charter for a new bridge over Neponset river, which was constructed in 1836, and called the Granite bridge, now in use.

BUSINESS MEN FEAR GENERAL STRIKE

Renew Efforts For Arbitration In Philadelphia Trouble

Philadelphia, March 3.—As the time draws nearer for the general sympathetic strike for all organized labor in Philadelphia in support of the trolley men, the pressure being brought to bear on the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company to submit the question at issue to arbitration is becoming stronger.

The menace of a general strike and the consequent prostration of practically all lines of industry has stirred up business men and large employers of labor, and the efforts to have the company accept arbitration in some form have been renewed with vigor. Violence for the present, at least, has practically disappeared, but the city remains heavily policed.

In the criminal court James S. Swegard, a former United States marine, was sentenced to nine months in the county prison for leading an attack on a car. Swegard wore a marine's uniform when he was arrested. He told the court he was a striking motorman, but that he wore the government uniform because it was warmer than his own clothing.

CHASING "BUTTER" MEN

Further Arrests In Chicago For Illegally "Doctoring" Oleomargarine

Chicago, March 3.—As another step in the ousting of illegal butterine dealers, internal revenue inspectors have arrested Otto Rapp, a grocer, and Clarence Gregerson, his clerk. Three hundred pounds of oleomargarine, which it is said had been unlawfully colored, were seized by the inspectors.

United States District Attorney Sims has begun a general investigation of the oleomargarine business following revelations made in Judge Landis' court. Evidence introduced at the hearing showed that 143,182 pounds of white oleomargarine were purchased from manufacturers during the last six months by four dealers and that the greater part of this was colored illegally and sold to Chicago restaurants.

MRS. GLOVER DENIES ALL

Did Not Conceal Miss Le Blanc and Felt "Too Faint" to See Husband

Cambridge, Mass., March 3.—Mrs. Lillian M. Glover declared under oath in the probate court that she did not know that Hattie Le Blanc was hiding in her house for three days and nights, following the murder of Clarence F. Glover, until the girl was pulled from under a bed on the evening of Nov. 23.

The widow of the murdered man testified that when a policeman called at the house and told her that Glover had been shot she exclaimed: "Oh, my Lord!" and dropped on the stairway.

Mrs. Glover testified that she remained down stairs in the private hospital of Dr. Cousens about an hour while her husband lay dying in an upper room, and talked to a young man about football and fishing, but did not go up to speak to the victim of the tragedy, because she "felt too faint."

LIVING IN TOTAL DARKNESS.

Animals Put In Concrete Cave at a Carnegie Experimental Station.

Dr. A. M. Banta of the Carnegie Branch For Experimental Evolution at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., has built a concrete cave 10 by 42 feet and 8 feet in height underground, there to carry on his experiments. It is equipped with tanks into which water from driven wells is run through screens and from which the overflow is also well screened. Live fishes have been put into the tanks, while crickets and other insects are entombed in compartments that are dry, but totally dark. Dr. Banta wishes to know the effect of complete darkness upon the objects of his experiments.

Other experiments of odd character have been in progress at the experiment station for several years, most of which have been kept from public knowledge. The effort to breed a tailless cat is said to be one of the interesting experiments that have yielded no encouraging results.

Leisure Hours.

Dr. Johnson had scant sympathy with inconsistent and arrogant industry. "No man, sir, is obliged to do as much as he can. A man should have part of his life to himself."

CHARITIES CONFERENCE.

To Organize Associated Charities In City.

A most interesting meeting of the Charities Conference was held at the Women's club house Tuesday morning. Miss Edgerly one of the Overseers of the Poor in Brookline, Mr. Elcock, Overseer of the Poor in our city, Rev. E. C. Butler, Rev. R. E. Armstrong, Rev. R. J. Davis, Rev. T. W. Davidson, Rev. J. E. Lillback, Rev. C. B. Ames and Mr. Delcevare King were present in addition to the regular conference representing the Charitable societies of Quincy.

Letters were received from Rev. A. E. Clattenburg, Rev. C. L. Paddock, Rev. J. A. Matheson, Rev. Carl Raupach and Rev. Joseph Walther containing helpful suggestions and regrets at their inability to be present, also from Mr. F. W. Plummer, President of the Quincy Charitable society. Two directors of that society were present, Mrs. E. G. Pratt and Miss Amey Newcomb also Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth, President of Day Nursery association; Miss Mary L. Gavin and Mrs. J. A. Dasha officers of the Quincy Catholic Charitable society; Mrs. J. F. Welch, Bethany Circle; Mrs. W. E. Blanchard Unity Circle of King's Daughters; Mrs. J. W. Sanborn Charitable Tens, King's Daughters; members of the Philanthropic committee of the Women's club and others interested.

Discussion of problems relating to the right relief, the best way of helping the poor to help themselves, the giving or withholding in order to prevent pauperizing and to build up self-respecting citizens, proved of value to all.

In Brookline the five selectmen are also Overseers of the Poor with the helpful addition of two women on the Board. They have the cooperation and assistance of the paid secretary of a Friendly society which is really an associated charities composed of representatives of all business and charitable organizations in the town. They find it pays to have a paid trained secretary who devotes his time to investigation of conditions and means of relief.

The Conference culminated in the motion that a committee of seven should organize some better form of Associated Charities in Quincy, and if conditions seemed to warrant, a paid secretary. It was brought out in discussion that by the present lack of knowledge by one society of what other societies might be doing that we are likely to give not wisely but too much and that each charitable society could better afford to give a part of its money for a trained and businesslike administration of its gifts than have it said that by our well-meant yet independent charitable efforts we are making more paupers in Quincy every day. There is great need of cooperation, of taking a broader outlook of the whole subject so that it will not be possible for a family to live in idleness and drunkenness supported by the city, charitable societies and money begged from generous individuals ,and bringing into the world children whose whole training is to make them paupers or even criminals.

The committee with Rev. R. E. Armstrong of Christ church, chairman; Mrs. W. L. Russell, Catholic Charitable society; Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth, Day Nursery association; Mrs. W. E. Blanchard, King's Daughters; Rev. T. W. Davidson, Memorial church, Atlantic; Mrs. E. G. Pratt, Quincy Charitable society; Rev. C. G. Horst, Unitarian church, Wollaston; Miss Harriet Turner, chairman of Charities Conference and Mrs. Wilson Marsh, secretary of Charities Conference is to have a meeting Friday afternoon at the Women's club house to consider the organization of an Associated Charities in Quincy.

HAPPY WOMEN

Plenty of Them in Quincy, and Good Reason for It.

Wouldn't any woman be happy,
After years of backache suffering,
Days of misery, nights of unrest,
The distress of urinary troubles,
She finds relief and cure?
No reason why any Quincy reader should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. George L. Nott, 99 North Street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I have every reason for holding a high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills. I was troubled a great deal by headaches and dizzy spells which were so seaere at times that I had to grasp something for support to keep from falling. My sight was also affected, spots often appearing before me and my back ached intensely. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store and began their use. I was helped from the first and after I had taken the contents of five boxes, I was cured. Other members of my family have used this remedy with equally good results."

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL

Items of Interest to Students and Graduates

This year no money prizes are offered for meritorious work in any department. Previously the Goldenrod has offered them at times to increase the interest of preparing the best stories or compositions, but now finds it unnecessary. If the alumni as an association should offer prizes as the Woodward alumni recently did, and Adams Academy regularly did a very beneficial stimulation of the activities in some of the departments would undoubtedly follow.

The Juniors held a class meeting Monday and decided to give a reception to the Seniors Friday, March 11.

It is expected that the Goldenrod will be out somewhere about March 11.

Sherman Hayden, '12, is with the United Shoe Co., of Atlantic avenue, Boston.

Quincy High made a very creditable showing at the B. A. A. interscholastic meet on Saturday. Franz Marceau did great work in the mile race, winning and lowering the record to four minutes, thirty-seven and four-fifths seconds. From this one victory and entry, the school secured sixth place among the sixteen competing high schools and academies. The Quincy relay team composed of R. Crawshaw, W. Manning, E. Prout, and F. Marceau won the race in three minutes, thirty-three and four-fifths seconds, going over eight seconds faster than the Powder Point school team.

The sister of Miss Holt the French teacher, visited school on Friday.

Miss Tucker, formerly teacher of English, visited school Tuesday and Wednesday.

Tuesday, Miss Catherine Theiss, '12, left for Washington, where she will reside.

Quincy High school continues to keep up its reputation in the field of sports among the alumni. The gym team from Amherst College with Allison Marsh '09 in the tumbling events met the crack Harvard team Friday night and on Saturday beat the M. I. T. team. In the latter event Marsh scored second place, winning the red ribbon.

Monday, Miss Mildred Dunham, '10, returned to school after a long and serious illness.

Howard Pratt, '09 has entered the business of S. Scammell & Sons as bookkeeper.

Miss Minnie Packard '05 has been appointed as teacher in the Danvers High school.

The Quincy High basket-ball team has made an enviable record this season, which is now nearly closed. Ten of the twelve teams it has met have been beaten. And since their first defeat it has again met Newton and won from them. At nearly every game a different quintet has been met. In this manner it has gone up against some of the strongest and fastest fives around Boston. The season will close next week. It is expected that the team will meet Rockland at Quincy on Friday Mar 11, and possibly some other teams.

Friday the Concord team cancelled its game at the last moment, and Monday Middleborough called off its game for Monday.

Tuesday, Milton Academy was again unable to conquer the local team although the score stood close, 10 to 6.

The motto committee of the Seniors are slowly gathering some choice latin mottoes to present to the class from which to select. By a curious coincidence all the members of the committee are fourth year Latin students. They are: Miss Mary Cleveland, Miss Bertha Given, Miss Lillian Mead, Miss Edith Hyland, and Charles H. Kendall.

Russ L. Bates and Ted H. Corey have issued the following: "We hereby challenge any two students of the Quincy High school to a game of bid whist to be played at time and place agreed upon by both parties."

The dramatic committee of the Seniors, which is composed of Miss Dorothy Frye, Miss Gladys Bain, Miss Anna Heaney, Gordon Jameson, and Stanley Churchill; held a meeting Wednesday afternoon. Plans for the play which will be given in High School hall the last of April, were discussed. Thus far the selection of the play has not been made. Miss Mary Brown who has coached so excellently the plays given lately, will assist in this one.

The treasury of the Athletic committee is in very good condition, holding about $115.

The music class will soon start practicing the music for graduation.

The orchestra meets once a week Wednesdays.

The Athletic committee met Wednesday afternoon to made plans for an indoor meet. Such a meet was held very successfully a year or two ago. The members of the committee, William Northrop, Everett Prout, Earle Church, Millard Chapman, Russell Bates, Captain of the basket-ball and baseball teams, Franz Marceau, captain of the track team, Mr. Howlett, Mr. Roach, Mr. Holbrook, and also Mr. Blazo and Mr. Currier, will make arrangements. It has been suggested that the money received from the attendance at the meet be used to buy sweaters with the Q's on them for the members of the basket-ball team. The team certainly deserves a remembrance for their hard work and victories for Quincy High. At this meeting it was voted to present Q's to the members of the track team who competed at the B. A. A. races.

RECKLESS DRIVING.

Wednesday afternoon about 4 just as the Houghs Neck school children were about to board a car in City Square for home, a horse and buggy came from the direction of Neponset. Although the driver must have seen the crowd of children standing in the street, he made no attempt to check the speed of his horse, but dashed through the children scattering them right and left. Most of them got out of the way ,but one child whose name could not be learned was knocked down and run over. Fortunately owing to the carriage being a light buggy, she was apparently not badly injured. The driver of the carriage did not stop to see what damage he had done but kept on toward Quincy Point.

Charles Austin, the street railway starter in City Square, saw the accident and jumping onto a car gave chase. It was not until Graham's turnout was reached that the car passed the team, and Mr. Austin was able to hold it up and learn the man's name. The man gave his name as Joseph Pitts and his residence at North Weymouth.

PICKPOCKETS AT WORK.

It leaked out Wednesday that a gang of pickpockets were in town Tuesday evening evidently attracted by the fact that there would be a large crowd on the streets. At least two citizens had their pockets picked, Henry L. Kincaide and J. S. Swingle.

Mr. Kincaide thinks that his pocket must have been picked in the crowd at the depot, for as he left the train he was pushed about considerable. His pocket book contained about $18.

Mr. Swingle had three dollars in his pocket book, including a number of papers, his ticket for the banquet and tickets for the Board of Trade banquet. Wednesday his pocket book was found in the yard of the Col. Packard estate on Hancock street, where it had evidently been thrown. The money was gone but the papers and tickets were left.

—The oldest house on Cape Cod, built about 1690, is being moved from its present location in West Brewster into the adjoining town of Dennis, where it will shortly be changed into a magnificent summer residence by J. D. Anderson of Hartford, Conn. This ancient landmark of more than two centuries was built for one of the first settlers in Brewster, John Dillingham, by Isaac Winslow, and has always been known as the old Dillingham house. On one of the large rafters in the attic there is cut the date, "1690" showing the date on which it was erected.

THE DEPOSED DALAI LAMA.

Side Lights on Former Head of Tibetan Government and Religion.

The personal history of the dalai lama, former head of the Tibetan government, recently deposed for the second time by the Chinese government for endeavoring to enlist the support of Russia and Great Britain in opposing China's sovereignty and organizing a general revolt, is shrouded in mystery. His family name even is unknown, and only the most meager details have come to light regarding this man who long ruled the only theocratic country in the world.

The title "dalai lama" means "ocean priest." For more than four centuries the bearer of the title has been the supreme ruler of Tibet and the head of the Buddhist faith. He is regarded as a reincarnation of the founder of that religion.

When the British expedition under Colonel Younghusband in 1904 penetrated the hitherto Forbidden City of Lassa the dalai lama, or "Buddhist pope," was facing a revolt of his followers, brought about by his policy of domineering insolence toward the other lamas. He fled on the approach of the British and was forcibly deposed by the Chinese. Later he returned to the Tibetan capital and thence journeyed into China with an enormous caravan, penetrating as far as Pekin and being acclaimed by the Buddhist population along his line of march.

The Pekin authorities received him with courtesy, but gave him to understand that they would be glad if he went back to Tibet and attended to his own affairs. This the dalai lama did, but China's fear of internal strife and possible revolt against her authority in Tibet led her to send a force thither to uphold her power. The dalai lama then fled toward India.

Face of the Typical New Yorker.

London is a friendless city enough, heaven knows, to those who are not able to conquer, but she seems to me mild, benignant even, in comparison with New York. The face of the Londoner is very often overcast with the thought of how to get a living in the keen competition of the people in that mighty capital, but the London face is tranquillity embodied in comparison with the face of the typical New Yorker. Keen, hatchet shaped, anxious, absorbed—such is the face you see everywhere around you. And this keenness of face is accompanied by a terrible spirit of self absorption. You seldom see people talk much while they are traveling in the elevated railway or in the subway, as they call the underground train there.—T. P. O'Connor in London M. A. P.

Napoleon's Temper.

A story is told of a sudden rage into which Napoleon I. fell one day as he was at dinner. He had scarcely partaken of a mouthful when apparently some inopportune thought or recollection stung his brain to madness, and, receding from the table without rising from his chair—his small stature permitted that—he uplifted his foot—dash went the table, crash went the dinner, and the emperor sprang up, intending to pace the room. Quick as a flash his waiter scratched a few magic symbols on a bit of paper, and the emperor's check had grown more than double. Napoleon appreciated the delicacy of his attendant and said, "Thank you, my dear Dunand," with one of his inimitable smiles. The hurricane had blown over.

BEN TILLMAN OF SOUTH CAROLINA

How Hard Study Cost the Palmetto State Senator an Eye. Odd Experience With a Senate Page.

Striking Examples of His Keen Wit—When the Tables Were Turned on Him—Some of His Characteristic Utterances.

By WALTON WILLIAMS.

SOUTH CAROLINA has been represented in the United States senate by many notable men, among the number having been John C. Calhoun and Robert Young Hayne, who debated with Webster, but of them all there was no more picturesque figure than Benjamin Ryan Tillman. Senator Tillman was born in Edgefield county, S. C., on Aug. 11, 1847. He was educated in an academy and left school to join the Confederate army in the summer of 1864. A severe illness that resulted in the loss of an eye prevented him from going to the front and kept him an invalid for two years. He became a farmer and took no part in politics until the Farmers' Alliance became active in the state. In 1886 he started an agitation for industrial education, which resulted in the establishment of the Clemson Agricultural and Mechanical college at Calhoun's old home, Fort Hill. In 1890 he was elected governor as the farmers' candidate and was re-elected in 1892. The two chief achievements of his administrations were the passage of the liquor dispensary law and the establishment of the Winthrop Normal and Industrial College For Women. He was elected to the senate in 1895 and re-elected in 1901 and 1907. When he entered the body he was known as a radical and was called the "pitchfork" senator. Of recent years, however, he has had the entire respect of his colleagues of all parties and has been regarded as one of the really great figures of the senate.

Senator Tillman was but two years old when his father died, being the youngest of seven sons. His uncle, John Tillman, was a man of strong intellectual qualities and a constant, careful and discriminating reader. He collected a large library, and he was of the kind that profusely annotated his books. Even when his nephew, Ben, was a small lad his uncle picked him out as the one who would most likely conserve and advance the Tillman name, and to him he bequeathed this library. Inheriting his uncle's tastes and his mental abilities, as well as this large library, the boy became a close student of those books.

BENJAMIN RYAN TILLMAN.

How He Lost an Eye.

Senator Tillman never had the opportunity to go to college. When the civil war broke out he was fourteen years old, and his mother sent him to school to a neighboring academy to prepare him for college. But, realizing very soon that he could probably never do this on account of the war, he made up his mind that that would be about the only schooling he would ever be able to get, so he determined to make the most of it. He studied so hard that his health was seriously impaired, and it was this that caused him to lose his left eye. An abscess formed in his head back of this eye and burst through the socket, destroying the eyeball. This also prevented him from actively participating in the closing bloody affrays of the civil war.

An amusing story is related concerning the senator's one eye. Some time ago, while in the senate, he clapped his hands for a page from the cloakroom door. A new page who had not yet mastered the senatorial names responded.

"Tell Senator Clay," he said, "that I want to see him in the cloakroom."

The page ran on the errand, on his way stopping to ask the head usher where Senator Clay sat. Then he asked, "Who's this that has only one eye?"

The usher, thinking it a question in mythology, replied, "Why, Cyclops, of course."

The page delivered his errand in this astounding way:

"Senator Cyclops wants to see you in the cloakroom."

When Tillman first landed in the senate there was a disposition to take him seriously, but it would not do. One day, when the South Carolina senator was engaged in a spirited colloquy with Senator Bailey of Texas, Senator Warren of Wyoming slipped up stealthily, extracted a bottle from the pocket in the tail of Tillman's coat, uncorked it, smelled of its contents with an appearance of intense appreciation and then restored it to its original position. The senate was convulsed, but the South Carolinian was unconscious of the pantomime and went on with his speech. When he had finished a nearby senator explained to him the cause of the hilarity which still prevailed.

Samples of His Wit.

Without a moment's thought Tillman rose in his seat and said benignly:

"I don't want to magnify a trivial matter, but I learn that a friend has taken advantage of my preoccupation to examine a bottle which I am carrying in my coat pocket. Now, in order that there may be no misapprehension and that I may not be considered inhospitable and perhaps selfish I will state that the bottle contains a solution of boracic acid, a throat lotion placed in my pocket by Mrs. Tillman with the admonition to use it frequently. I regret deeply that the gentleman should have been disappointed in his investigation, although I know that had the bottle contained that for which he was searching I should never have seen it again."

During one of the daily colloquies that occurred between the two Senator Spooner said:

"The last cartoon I saw of the senator from South Carolina represented him as down in the straw and being kicked by the Democratic donkey."

"The last one I saw," said Tillman, "represented me as riding the donkey, with the Republican elephant tied to its tail."

Tillman's readiness to illustrate a point by means of a humorous story is well known at the capitol. One day he was discussing with some of his colleagues the efficacy of mildness in debate.

"One can't be too mild," he argued. "To be mild and at the same time unexpected is usually to succeed. Here is an instance: At the theater the other night a man turned to his neighbor and exclaimed excitedly:

"'Look here, my friend—you have sat on my silk hat, and it's ruined!'

"The other looked at the hat and sighed regretfully. 'I'm awfully sorry,' he said, 'but it might have been worse.'

"'I'd like to know how!' the injured one exclaimed indignantly.

"The answer was an excellent example of mildness coupled with unexpectedness. It was:

"'I might have sat on my own hat.'"

How a Critical Situation Was Saved.

On a certain occasion when Senator Tillman was talking in a vehement manner he had the tables neatly turned on him. The conversation threatened to be stormy. A friend expostulated with the senator, saying it was "hardly the place for such a discussion."

"Please don't talk so much," said the warning voice. It irritated Tillman. "Talk!" he shouted. "I'll talk as much whenever and wherever I please. I would like to see the man who can keep me from talking!"

"I can!" came a voice from the crowd. Tillman turned and glared about him. Then his eye caught the speaker. He pretended to quail. The laugh went around, and the critical situation was saved.

The man who had hurled the defiant "I can!" was Dr. T. T. Moore, Tillman's lifetime dentist.

Here are a few characteristic utterances of the South Carolina senator:

"I would rather go to the infernal regions with my followers than to heaven with the other crowd."

"I am one of God Almighty's gentlemen."

"Abraham Lincoln was the greatest of modern men, and I, from South Carolina, tell you so and feel honored in doing it."

terwards wishes to sleep, let him do so. If his hurt is fatal, rousing him from natures sleep will not save his life.

The burns from hot water bottles are often intense because of inability to feel the pain while sleeping. Use hot baths in these cases. For scalds and burns it is a good plan to take a slice of bread and cover thick with baking soda and bind on the burn. Don't use cold water.

Don't take out a splinter from the skin or flesh with a dirty pin or needle. Always sterilize the point by holding it in the blaze of a lighted match for a minute. For broken bones and dislocations put the child in a comfortable position and wait for the doctor.

Dog bites are not always as serious as feared. Don't kill the dog. Watch him, and send for the doctor.

If a child has swallowed a coin, buttons or solid body, do not give castor oil or cathartics or emetic. If a foreign body has become lodged in the ear, nose or throat, don't probe them in farther.

Most mothers have a deadly horror of croup. If a child coughs with a rattle the mother becomes frightened and gives emetics. It is better to hold back these things and allow the child to rest and sleep. The serious croup, such as membraneous croup has very definite symptons which soon develop.

Poisons. The best rule is not to keep any within the reach of the child.

Convulsions. Caused by teething, worms in the intestines or pin worms, or indigestion not the sort to cause great alarm, but need careful treatment under the physician's care. The more serious conculsions were described at some length.

Measles and the common opinion that hot drinks must be given to drive out the eruption was the last topic for the afternoon. Dr. Gordon explained how with a temperature of 104 degrees, which is not uncommon in this diseases hot drinks only added fire to the roaring furnace of the child's body.

Your neighbor Bragman has, under persuasion, agreed to take that business enterprise of mine I told you of some days ago."

"Agreed to undertake it, has he? Well, he'll do it to the letter."

"Think so, do you?"

"I'm sure of it; he's proven an undertaker to every business enterprise he's ever had anything to do with."

AN EASY AND HARMLESS WAY TO DARKEN THE HAIR.

Who does not know of the value of sage and sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft, glossy and in good condition? As a matter of fact, sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than sage and sulphur, if properly prepared. The Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, put up an ideal preparation of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur. It is sold by all leading druggists for 50c. and $1.00 a bottle, or is sent direct by the manufacturers upon receipt of price.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER
Congress May Help Him In Money Distribution

GIVE MILLIONS WHILE ALIVE

Gigantic Gifts Are to Be Distributed by Oil Magnate

A ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION

Bill For Its Incorporation Introduced In the Senate, Its Object Being to Afford Rockefeller a Means of Philanthropy Along the Lines of Promoting Well Being and Advancing Civilization

Washington, March 3.—That John D. Rockefeller plans to spend his millions on a still greater scale than ever in the cause of education, charity and other beneficent objects, was made clear when Senator Gallinger introduced a bill to incorporate "The Rockefeller Foundation," which will have headquarters in Washington.

The incorporators are John D. Rockfeller, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Fred T. Gates, Starr J. Murphy and Charles O. Hedyt. The organization will be a rival to the Carnegie Foundation, which is established to pension teachers and advance the cause of education.

The Rockefeller Foundation will have for its object the promotion of "all of the elements of human progress," including education and charity. Rockefeller has already spent $52,000,000 through the general education board. He proposes to go still deeper into the matter of giving for causes that will uplift civilization.

"Mr. Rockefeller proposes to spend his millions on a scale equalled by no other living man," said Gallinger.

The bill introduced by Gallinger was referred to the senate district committee. It will be taken up at an early date and will probably be passed. The bill thus sets forth the wide scope of the objects of the corporation:

"To promote the well-being and to advance the civilization of the people of the United States and its territories and possessions and of foreign lands in the acquisition and dissemination of knowledge; in the prevention and relief of suffering, and in the promotion of any and all the elements of human progress."

From all that can be learned, Rockefeller intends to undertake the advancement of charitable, philanthropical and educational movements on a scale he has never before equalled and which no other multimillionaire has approached. His war on the hookworm in the south is an illustration of his purpose.

It is declared that Rockefeller intends to give away most of his millions while he lives and that the Rockefeller Foundation will be the medium of distribution.

THREE PET CATS

Uppermost In Mind of Woman Who Leaves a Strange Will

Worcester, Mass., March 3.—The strange will of Mrs. Jennie Field, late of Upton, filed in the probate court here, has brought great comment.

The woman specifies that Calvin A. Taft may occupy her house in Upton as long as her three pet cats shall live. All her estate has been left to Nettie A. Holbrook of Upton, providing that she furnishes a home to Taft and the cats.

Free Port Plan Killed

Boston, March 3.—Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston asked the legislature to memoralize congress to establish for this city a free tariff zone, and the committee on federal relations reported adversely to the house on his resolve.

President Alcorta Receives Bryan

Buenos Ayres, March 3.—William J. Bryan was received by President Alcorta today. The minister of foreign affairs will give a banquet in Bryan's honor.

LOST EYE IN SALOON BRAWL

Boston Man Awarded $10,000, but Loses It by New Trial

Boston, March 3.—John H. Wood, though awarded by one judge the sum of $10,000 for the loss of an eye, yesterday lost his suit, which had been place for the second time on the trial list against a Broad street liquor dealer.

Wood alleged that while in the saloon of the defendant he asked a bartender for a glass of water. Instead of receiving it, however, he claims, a glass tumbler struck him in the eye, destroying its sight.

Before Judge Richardson the case was defaulted, and upon a hearing to award damages he was given $10,000. Later the default was removed and upon a trial of the merits he lost his case.

The defendant claimed that Wood was making a general disturbance in the saloon and that the injury to his eye was only an incident in his removal.

RENTS HIGHER IN CANADA

Steady Increase Also Noted In Wholesale Prices of Grains

Washington, March 3.—Rents in the principal cities of Canada have increased 40 percent in the last ten years, according to a report of Consul General Foster of Ottawa, presented in the senate by Senator Lodge as chairman of the committee to investigate the causes of the increase in the cost of living. This is the first of a series of reports covering the general subject ordered by the state department.

The department of labor of the Dominion government is making a like investigation and the documents sent by the consul general show a steady increase for the last ten years in the wholesale prices of grains.

The Ottawa batch of information will be published as a senate document.

AULD IS ORDERED TO PACIFIC COAST

Cliques at Charlestown Navy Yard Are Broken Up

Boston, March 3.—With the detachment of Paymaster George P. Auld to the Pacific coast, the navy department has completed its work of breaking up the cliques at the Charlestown navy yard which resulted in the famous court martial following an altercation with Dr. Cowles at a dance last December.

Robnett, the other defendant in the case, was detached and sent to Newport before the proceedings started. Dr. Ames, who pushed the charges against Auld and Robnett, has been ordered from the directorship of the Chelsea naval hospital to Washington. His daughter, Miss Marguerite Ames, was one of the principal witnesses against Auld and Robnett.

Rear Admiral Swift, commandant of the navy yard at the time when the assault occurred, was transferred to Washington before the court martial. His daughter, Madeline, had shortly before broken her engagement to wed, and Auld was said to have been instrumental in effecting the final estrangement. Miss Virginia Swift, another daughter of the admiral, was a witness at the trial of Auld, and contradicted Miss Ames in her testimony.

PUSH CARTS A NUISANCE

No Damages Unless Injury Is Wilfully or Wantonly Inflicted

New York, March 3.—The push cart pedler is declared a public nuisance and his right to collect damages for injury by passing vehicles, while plying his vocation along the curb, is denied in a decision handed down by the appellate division of the supreme court.

The case was that of a curb side vender who was hit by a wagon wheel and injured and sued for damages. In finding against him and declaring his class a nuisance the court lays down the rule that damages are only collectable by push cart men where it is shown that injury is wilfully or wantonly inflicted.

FRANCO-GERMAN ACCORD

Shown by Visit of French President to German Embassy

Paris, March 3.—President Falleres personally called on Prince von Radolin, the German ambassador to France, and expressed condolences on the death of the ambassador's son.

As this is the first visit a president of the republic has paid to the German embassy since the Franco-Prussian war, it has created much comment.

French Route Zear Tribesmen

Casablanca, Morocco, March 3.—The French column surprised and routed with severe loss a band of Zear tribesmen who recently murdered a French lieutenant. The French, in this attack, lost two killed and thirteen wounded.

New Philippines Bishop

Rome, March 3.—The pope has appointed Rev. J. MacGinley of Philadelphia bishop of Neuva Caceres, in the Philippines, and has created four new dioceses in the islands.

CHELSEA'S LIQUOR LAWS

None More Strict Can Be Found In All New England

Chelsea, Mass., March 3.—The licensing board of Chelsea has provided a set of rules as regards the manner in which saloons must be run by proprietors when those allotted the conduct of such business open up on May 1.

Every saloon must provide a man, whose duty it will be to announce to the patrons the approach of certain street cars. No license will be given a hotel. Women will not be given licenses, neither will they be served with liquors, and only one line of men will be allowed to stand at the respective bars. This means that if patronage is good those behind will be unable to get what they call for until the thirsty fronting them have been served and depart.

The laws, according to Chairman Lawrence, are the strictest in New England.

HERO OF STEAMBOAT FIRE

Death of William Whelpley, New Brunswick's "Jim Bludsoe"

St. John, March 3.—William Whelpley, the "Jim Bludsoe" of the St. John river, died at his home here. Whelpley distinguished himself through his bravery when the river steamboat David Weston was burned several years ago.

The steamer, a passenger craft, caught fire on the trip down the river from Fredericton. Whelpley, who was the wheelsman of the steamer, stuck to his post while the flames raged around him until he beached the burning steamer.

Most of the passengers and crew were saved by Whelpley's act, although nine lives were lost. Whelpley never recovered from the shock of this experience.

SIX RIBS BROKEN JUST BEFORE DEATH

Potter Autopsy Promises to Lead to a Sensation

East Douglass, Mass., March 3.—The autopsy performed on the body of Charles W. Potter, whose remains were disinterred by order of the district attorney, has disclosed the fact that six of his ribs on the right side were fractured, the injury, according to the surgeons, having occurred but three days prior to his death on last Wednesday.

Peter Manite, a young Italian, is held on the charge of assault with intent to kill Potter by attacking him in his home on Dec. 28.

The strange developments of the autopsy have caused a great sensation. Manite's counsel declares that a full investigation should follow.

Women of the family, some of whom benefit greatly by the will which the aged man left, whereby almost $100,000 is to be disposed of, are lined up against one another and are making insinuations pertaining to events that they hint occurred in his chamber, the exact status of which they refuse to divulge.

ACTION ON POSTAL BANKS

Indications That Heyburn May Cause Delay In the Senate

Washington, March 3.—The administration postal savings bank bill may be referred back to the postoffice committee when the time comes for a vote on that measure by the senate.

Senator Heyburn of Idaho so intimated in a speech in the senate on his substitute for the pending bill. Whether he would offer the substitute he said would depend upon developments.

He said that the Republican party was under no pledge to pass a savings law at the very beginning of the Taft administration. There would still be time for consideration if the bill should go back to the committee.

DECLINES A PARDON

Washington Man Prefers to Remain a "Trusty" In Penitentiary

Washington, March 3.—Declining to take advantage of the pardon granted him by President Taft, Thomas Taylor, sentenced in this city to fifteen years in the Atlanta penitentiary for the murder of his wife, will remain as one of the "trusties" of the institution.

During his long incarceration Taylor studied pharmacy and was assigned to the custody of the prison pharmacy. He will remain in this capacity.

Bond Scheme Goes Over

Boston, March 3.—Governor Draper's most important recommendation to the general court this year that the bonds of the Boston Railroad Holding company be made investments for Massachusetts savings banks is going to the next general court. This is the decision of the joint committees on railroads and banks and banking.

Drop In Meat Provisions and Lard

Chicago, March 3.—The annual estimate of the amount of meat provisions and lard in the world made by the boards of trade of the chief meat centers of America and Europe shows a volume 60 percent of the amount on March 1, 1909.

PROMINENT MEN CALLED UPON

Asked For Information Concerning "Bunco Syndicate"

Boston, March 3.—District Attorney Pelletier and one of his assistants, Thomas Lavalle, have started an investigation of the operations of faro men in Boston, to get evidence on that or any similar "bunco" games in Suffolk county. If the evidence warrants, it will be presented before the grand jury.

Among those requested to appear before the district attorney and who responded during yesterday afternoon, to give such aid as they could in the investigation, were President John M. Graham of the International Trust company, A. Tomfohrde, restaurant keeper; D. M. Bristol of Winthrop; Fred J. Daggett, representing as counsel a man who is supposed to have been a victim of the faro gang; J. F. Nowell, Charles Beatty, Max Ratshesky, Daniel L. White, a music publisher; C. A. White, a Winthrop laundryman; Andrew J. Granara, a Boston undertaker, and John Cronin, counsel for George W. Coleman.

The district attorney announced before starting the investigation that he would take as much time as was necessary to sift the matter thoroughly. If, through the witnesses who appear before him, he learns of men who have been the victims of swindlers, but who have not yet been requested to appear before him, he will ask them to appear, and if they do not willingly he will issue summonses.

Mr. Graham was the first to be questioned. The district attorney asked him if he knew several of the persons who were named, but he declared that he was not acquainted with any of them; that the district attorney must have mistaken him for another man.

Mr. Pelletier's action was taken on his own initiative after reading the stories which have been published within the past few days regarding the extensive harvest reaped by clever crooks hereabouts. There are plenty of evidences that the police department assistants assigned to him were given the word beforehand and are already actively engaged in getting information.

Some twelve or fifteen names of victims or men who were actually approached by the swindlers with a view to catching them for good sums have been obtained by the district attorney. Among them are several of business and professional men who are pretty well known about the city.

The district attorney's office has decided that it will attempt to prosecute the swindlers, provided, of course, that evidence sufficient to warrant such a proceeding is forthcoming, under the general statutes against conspiracy to defraud. Already the office has ample evidence of larcenies having been committed by the faro gang, but, unfortunately, they took place in New York and only the preliminary arrangements of the conspiracy were perfected in this city.

The gang prepared their victims for the slaughter, so to speak, before they left Boston; then they took them to New York and there consummated the plans by getting away with their money.

STREAMS ARE VERY HIGH

Flood Conditions Prevail In Many Parts of New England

Boston, March 3.—Heavy rains and continued mildness have contributed still further to the creation and maintenance of flood conditions along many of the rivers in New England.

Though so far but little damage has been reported, great inconvenience has been caused, transportation schedules have been deranged by the washing out of tracks, and in several districts considerable apprehension is being felt for homesteads and factories along the banks of the menacing streams. Throughout Massachusetts the rivers are still rising.

France Accepts Knox Peace Plan

A pleasant day is very welcome.

Now for prosperity in Quincy.

The Philatheas of Bethany church will give a supper Tuesday evening, March 15.

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Mary L. Wade entertained her former class in domestic science of the Milton High school, at his home in Wollaston Park.

Master Rolland Newcomb of Webster street who has been critically ill with pneumonia, is gaining slowly. He has the best wishes of his school mates and friends for a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Wade, chairman of the Home Economics committee of the Quincy Women's club finished last week a very successful course of five lectures for the Philergians of Braintree.

Shipyards at Quincy, Mass., and Camden, N. J., get Argentine and Italian battleship contracts. The high cost of American labor seems to be offset by the brains and alertness of the American mechanic.—Beverely Times.

Admiral Bowles returns to Quincy as a hero of the greatest marine battle in the time of peace during the 20th century and the largest medal he wears is one that shows how completely dazed are the British shipbuilders who failed to get the contract.—Record

The date of the Easter Sale, to be given by the Memorial Congregational church has been set for March 24. A most pleasing program is being planned for the concert in the evening which includes a short dramatic skit with parts assigned to David Moffat, Henry Swanson, Miss Annie Harding and Miss Maude Read

Farmer Is Cleared of All Complicity In Brennan Murder Case

Watertown, N. Y., March 3.—James D. Farmer, whose wife, Mary, was put to death in the electric chair at Auburn, March 29 last for the murder of their neighbor, Sarah Brennan, near Brownsville, in April, 1908, has been cleared of all complicity in the case. A jury returned a verdict of not guilty after a second trial in the case.

Farmer had before been convicted of murder in the first degree, but Mrs. Farmer, before her death in the chair, left a statement exonerating him and the court of appeals granted a new trial.

WANTS UNCLE JOE TO RETIRE

Taft Thinks It Would Avoid Split In the Party

Beverly, Mass., March 3.—"I am absolutely convinced that the uppermost wish in Mr. Taft's mind today is that Speaker Cannon should announce his retirement and thus avoid a split in the party," was one sentence of a speech by Congressman Gardner here last night that was received with cheers and howls of delight from 200 members of the Beverly Republican club at their annual banquet.

Congressman Gardner, who was called to the chair to preside by Speaker Cannon only a few days ago, came to Beverly from Washington to attend the dinner, and a considerable part of his time was devoted to an attack on the speaker.

"Mr. Cannon is a politician of a type that is passing away," continued the speaker. "He is scrupulously honest, from the financial point of view, and he is determined and courageous. If he were not he would not have been returned to congress again and again.

"On the other hand, his mind, doubtless from age, has lost its plasticity, and is quite impervious to the views of modern thought. He is intolerant by nature, and self-willed to a degree that is unbearable in a man clothed with such transcendent power. A rugged type of man, I admit, but utterly unsuited for the control of the house of representatives at times like the present. In times of great stress it might be that rules might be necessary suppressing the liberty of members, just as martial law must be proclaimed in times of great distress.

"Those of us that are banded together under the name of insurgents have two objects in view. First, the retirement of Mr. Cannon, and second, a change in the rules of the house, as will distinctly curtail the power of the speaker.

"To my mind the first proposition is the most important, for I feel that Mr. Cannon's successor, whoever he is, will not have support enough in the house to enable him to misuse his powers."

Mayor Howard of Salem said that the Republican party had become drunk with power, and prophesied a Democratic landslide in Massachusetts, as well as other states, next fall unless there should be a decided change of policy.

The Mystery Of the Open Window...

A Clever Bit of Detective Work That Won a Reward.

By KARL K. SHIMANSKY.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

The acquaintance began in this wise: Lieutenant Philip Vandermuth was walking toward the war department in Washington when Miss Beverly Comstock's horse started to run away. The groom was thrown out, and the reins dropped to the pavement. Vandermuth was just in time to stop the horse. Miss Comstock distrusting her groom's driving abilities, Vandermuth drove her home. He was introduced to her father and spent the evening at her home.

When Vandermuth arrived at his hotel he found that all that he could think of was Beverly Comstock.

The next morning he received a note from Captain Comstock requesting him to go to Comstock's private office in the Westing building, and he responded forthwith.

"I am glad you came," said Captain Comstock. "I want to talk to you about some plans I have in hand."

The captain went to a large safe which stood open before a wide window.

"Young man," he said to Philip, "if you knew how valuable that roll of plans is you would not wonder at our watchfulness. They are the same ones I told you about last night. The man you saw at the door is a secret service agent detailed for duty here."

While he was talking he had taken a paper from the safe, and, leaving the door open, he took it to the table where Philip was sitting. Philip and the captain discussed the plan for half an hour or so, when Captain Comstock went to the safe to get other drawings.

Philip was startled by a loud cry and saw the captain fall with a thud to the floor.

Vandermuth rushed at him, saw that he had fainted, then opened the door and called for help.

He looked into the safe and gasped. The plans were gone.

The secret service man stationed outside rushed in and exclaimed: "What's the matter? What's this disturbance about?"

"The plans are stolen!" cried Philip.

Several other men came running in to see what had happened. One of them, a doctor, examined the captain and announced that his condition was serious, but not dangerous.

In the meantime the man whom Philip had met at the door called up the secret service office, and in a few minutes the chief himself hurried in, and straightway Vandermuth was put on the grill.

The secret service men examined the room from end to end. The doorkeeper said no one had passed him.

The captain had recovered by this time and was sitting on the couch, pale and weak.

"Well," said the service man, "the secretary of war orders us to find those papers if we have to use the whole force."

As Vandermuth went to his hotel he heard the newsboys yelling:

"Extra, extra! All about the big robbery! Government plans stolen!"

Philip bought a paper and saw that all the facts were correctly stated. Halfway down the column he read in subhead type:

THE SECRET SERVICE ACCUSES NO ONE, BUT A FRIEND OF CAPTAIN COMSTOCK IS THOUGHT TO BE UNDER SUSPICION.

Vandermuth gasped.

The same night Captain Comstock was discussing the absorbing subject with his daughter.

"Beverly," he said, "there is only one way I can think it was done."

"How?" she asked, with interest.

"I hope it is not true, but when I was closing the door Lieutenant Vandermuth might have thrown the plans out of the window to a friend."

"Oh, father, you don't think that, do you?" cried Beverly in despair.

The next morning Vandermuth went over to the Comstocks', where he was met by Beverly, who led him to her father's study. There Philip found the captain.

"Ah," he said scornfully and tactlessly, "a clever rogue! Sir, neither my daughter nor myself can associate with a man under suspicion. Betty, show him the door."

Philip was staggered by this and was about to make a hot retort, but he turned and marched to the door, followed by Beverly.

When out of hearing of the irate captain the daughter looked the lieutenant full in the eyes and tremulously inquired:

"Did you take those plans?"

"No, Miss Comstock; I did not touch them."

A week later he was sitting in the window of the captain's office, as he had done a dozen times since the plans were lost. He had volunteered his services to the officials, and, more with the idea of keeping him under surveillance than expecting any help from him, they had permitted Vandermuth free access to the offices.

Vandermuth was looking dreamily at the big building across the street when he saw a man's face at a window several floors up.

"If that man's arm were long enough he could reach down here," thought Philip.

That evening he went to the Comstocks', where he found Beverly and told her what he had discovered. She laughed at him. Philip explained the chief might have fished for the papers, but Beverly pointed out that he would have been seen from the street.

Two whole days were spent by Vandermuth going from office to office in the building across from the Westing. He asked all sorts of foolish questions, but he always managed to look out of the office windows. He got into every office on the sixth, seventh and eighth floors except one. That was on the seventh floor, with the name Steven Skivetsky on the door.

Philip had been able to see the captain's office from every window he had looked out of, and from some he could even see the safe, but when the door of the safe was open he could not see the inside. He figured if he could enter the office of Steven Skivetsky he would be able to see the compartment where the plans had been kept. So he went there time after time, but could never find any one in.

He told Beverly about Skivetsky, and when she was downtown the following day she heard some one say "Skivetsky."

Beverly turned around quickly. The speaker was a tall, clean shaven man and was talking to a large man with a full beard.

The one with the beard was saying to the other, "Skivetsky always does as he is ordered."

They were walking slowly down the street, and she followed them. They soon came to an old fashioned office building, which they entered. She trudged after them up a rickety flight of stairs to the second floor. On a door she read "Progressive Order of Liberty," and as she passed it the two men she had been following came out. She heard one say:

"With those papers in our possession we can make them do anything we want."

Beverly went home feeling sure that she had learned where the plans had gone, and when Philip called that night she told him all she had found. He became very excited and started for the door, rushing madly to the secret service office. He wanted to know what the Progressive Order of Liberty was.

He was informed that the Progressive Order of Liberty was a society of Russians which had been watched by the service for some time, but was nothing but a socialistic order.

The following day he went to the superintendent of the building where Steven Skivetsky had his office and made bold inquiries about him.

"He is a good, quiet tenant," said the superintendent, "but we will lose him, for he is going to vacate next week."

"Fine!" said Vandermuth. "I would like to take his office when he leaves. May I look through it?"

"Well," said the superintendent, "I will ask Skivetsky, and if you come around later and I get his permission I will show you through."

Philip returned to Captain Comstock's office, opened the safe and then went over to the office of Skivetsky and knocked on the door, but as no one answered he went after the superintendent. That functionary greeted him with the tidings that he had Skivetsky's permission to show him through the office. It was a small, dirty place, with one desk and several chairs.

He opened the closet door and found hanging on a hook a large coil of silk fish line, with a long barbed dart attached to the end.

"This was what he got them with," mused Vandermuth. "But how did he get them on that line?"

"Ah, here it is!" he exclaimed aloud as he picked up a large air rifle with a dart in the barrel like the one he had found in the closet. "This is what he shot them with."

"Shot what?" asked the superintendent.

"You'll find out soon enough," said Philip. "If Steven comes back keep him here."

Vandermuth dashed to the secret service office, rushed in and yelled:

"I've got him—the man who stole the plans!"

"What!" cried the chief, springing up. Philip hastily told his story, and the chief, with several men, went up to Skivetsky's office. The superintendent was sitting on a chair and was covered by a revolver held by a tall man with a heavy beard. A third man was leaning over the desk taking out a bundle, which Philip instantly recognized.

"The plans!" he shouted. The man with the gun turned to fire, but in a twinkling the men were overpowered.

"Ah, Steven, thanks for those plans!" sarcastically said Philip. "And you've found that the secret service is hard to dodge."

"Rather, 'tis hard to dodge you, Lieutenant Vandermuth," said the chief. "Congratulations on your fine detective work. Here are the plans. They are the best proof you have that you are innocent."

Philip took them and drove quickly to the Comstocks'.

As he went into the living room he met Beverly, who, seeing the roll of papers, figured out what they were. She cried, "Oh, Philip, I'm so glad!"

"Beverly," he said, "did you ever think I took them?"

"No, Philip."

"But your father did."

"Yes. And, Philip, I know he'll be proud of the fact that you've cleared your good name."

"That I've cleared it? Why, Betty, you helped. Only for your faith and patience the task would have been impossible. And, Betty," he continued, even more seriously, "we've earned a good name, haven't we?"

She understood.

"I—I think we have," she replied.

And they forgot to rush immediately to Captain Comstock with the plans.

MONARCHS WINNERS

Defeat St. Marys in Series of Games

A series of games composed of crib whist and forty-five was played at St. Mary's hall this week between a team representing the St. Mary's of West Quincy and the Merry Monarchs of South Quincy which resulted in a victory for the Merrf Monarchs by a score of 78 games to St. Marys 66.

At cribbage the teams were composed as follows:

William J. Sullivan and Robert McConnell of the Monarchs, vs Foley and William Duggan of St. Marys.

Stanley Barnicoat and James Birnie of the Monarchs vs. Canavan nd Duggan of St. Marys.

C. D. Austin and A. Howley of Monarchs vs Oscar and Duffy.

The "forty-five" teams were composed as fo'lows:

W. W. Spargo and Michael Donahue of Monarchs vs William Duane and Garrity of St.Marys.

Sidney Patterson and Eugene McAuliffe of Monarchs vs. Murphy and Scully of St. Marys.

The Spargo-Donahue team made a sensational finish, winning the last five gafes by jink frof the two best 45 players around the suburbs of Boston.

The whist series, after a three hours play, in which Forbes Craig and Chas. Osborne represented the Merry Monarchs, was won by the St. Marys team by 19 points. The St. Marys were represented by Patrick O'Rouke and partner.

Another series of games between these two teams have been arranged and will be composed of whist, cribbage, forty-five, checkers, chess, pool, billiards, hand ball, basket ball and a tug of war match.

The Old Merry Monarchs were the first team to beat the famous Clan McGregor tug of war team a few years back. They also produce many experts long other athletic lines and games. Keen interest and much speculation as to the outcome of the match is shown by the manner and good feeling in which both rival teams are preparing.

The Merry Monarchs have a few open dates, and would like to hear from any of the Social clubs in a series of any of the above nafed games. The Washington or Fore River or Knights of Columbus or Div. 5 A. O. H., may have an opening, and the Merry Monarchs would be pleased to hear from them.

A Mean Thrust.

"Ten thousand dollars for a dog!" he exclaimed as he looked up from his newspaper. "Do you believe any one ever paid any such price, Maria?"

"I'm sure I don't know, James," she returned without stopping her needle work even for a moment. "Does the paper say that much was paid?"

"Yes. There's an article on valuable dogs, and it's speaking of one that was sold for $10,000. I don't believe it."

"It may be true, James," she said quietly. "Some of those high bred animals bring fancy prices, and there's no particular reason why the paper should lie about it."

"I know that, Maria, but just think of it, just try to grasp the magnitude of that sum in your weak feminine mind. You don't seem to realize it—$10,000 for a dog! Why, hang it, Maria, that's more than I'm worth!"

"I know that, James, but some are worth more than others."

She went on calmly with her sewing, while he fumed and spluttered for a moment and then dropped the subject, especially the weak feminine part of it

To Our British Cousins.

Our British cousins, poking round
To find the south pole, may,
If they desire to get there straight,
Be shown the easiest way.

We Yankees always strive to please
Our kin across the sea,
And if they'll take a tip from us
We'll give it cheerfully.

The stars and stripes at present float
Upon the north pole, where
The Yankee Peary swung it when
He, first of all, got there.

He'll tell them where the north pole is,
And they can hit the trail
That Peary kindly blazed for all
Who seek "the frozen grail."

When they have reached it all they've got
To do is to descend
By sliding down the pole until
They reach the other end.

With one end found, and only two,
The other's but a drop,
And they can find the bottom now
Since Peary's found the top.

They say that way of the athlete is hard. Evidently this is true in the case of Harvey Parker of Brockton. Harvey was one of the best wrestlers in America a few years ago, but time has brought many changes and the poor fellow is now in the clutches of the law for stepping from the straight and narrow path. Young athletes of Quincy listen to your elders and instructors. You can avoid these dangers by doing this.

In another column of this issue can be found a letter from E. A. Poland, representing Poland and Lyons, of Norfolk Downs, the winners of the match bowling games on Washington's birthday. Mr. Poland asks me to decide the best plan for these match games, and if this is agreeable to all concerned I will publish in Daily Ledger of Saturday my plan and suggestions, but if possible would like to hear from Bugbee and Guinon, Grant and partner, and Kiley and Smith of Weymouth before doing so. A letter mailed tonight will reach me in time so please do so if possible. Address, "Rube" Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass.

SEVERAL CHALLENGES

E. A. Poland Ready to Meet All Comers

Sporting Editor Daily Ledger:

In reading last night's Ledger I found that Manager Grant of the Quincy alleys was pleased at my answer to his challenge. I also, received a challenge last night from Kiley and Smith of Weymouth. Bugbee and Guinon of Norfolk Downs learning of the other challenges also issued a challenge to roll Lyons and myself. Making altogether three challenges which we have received. If we accept all and rolled them on different nights ye might be rolling till next July.

Now I am going to allow "Rube" of the Ledger to decide the best plan. I offer the following suggestion, and issue an open challenge to any two-man team or single man team in Norfolk County to roll a tournament of ten games, to be rolled five at Quincy, and five at Norfolk Downs. Five to be rolled on March 7, 1910, at Quincy and five to be rolled March 11, 1910, at Norfolk Downs. Each team to pay an entry fee of $10 all to be put in one prize and given to the team making the highest total. City league rollers to be barred from this tournament.

All entries to be made with Editor of Ledger on or before March 5 1910. All entry fees to be put up on March 7, 1910, at the Quincy alleys in the hands of the Sporting Editor of the Ledger. Hope to have many entrees in this tournament.

E. A. Poland.

SMYRK INVADES AMERICA.

Great Fancy Diver of Australia Anxious to Try Skill Against Our Best.

Interest has been added to the indoor swimming season of 1910 by the arrival in this country of Harold Smyrk, the champion fancy diver of Australia and England. Smyrk is here to compete and has issued a challenge to all fancy divers of America. Smyrk represents the best that either Australia or England can produce in the way of crack fancy divers.

The young Australian's visit is particularly welcome because of his having tied for first place with Johansen of Sweden in the contest for the championship of England in 1907. It may be remembered that at the Olympic games of 1908, in London, Johansen was awarded the high diving title, though many of those present thought that it should have gone to George Gaidzick of the Chicago A. A. Gaidzick will gladly welcome the opportunity of meeting Smyrk, for he feels confident that he can defeat him, and should he do so it will go far toward proving that the American is the superior of Johansen and the peer of all divers as well.

UNIFORM SKATING RULES.

Americans to Compete on Same Terms as Foreigners.

With the American figure skating championship to be held under the same rules as those given European contests there will no doubt be greater interest taken in them than ever before. The fact that these rules will govern will be welcome news to those interested in ice skating in this country, for it puts the championship here on the same level as those of other countries. In fact, the International Skating union will this season hold the events under exactly the same conditions as govern those of foreign countries. This was sent out by the secretary of the union, who also announced that the championship events will be held early in March at either the St. Nicholas rink in New York or the new Arena in Boston.

The decision to use the same rules as are enforced at European championships was arrived at after careful consideration by such men as Irving Brokaw, champion of 1906, and others who desire to place this country in the same prominent position in the ice skating world that it enjoyed a few years ago.

Arnst has also been matched to row Edward Barry of England on the Zambezi river, South Africa, next August.

MERCHANTS' WEEK PLANNED FOR QUINCY

New Retail Merchants' Association Decide to Have One in Month of May.

Sealing of Weights and Widening of Hancock Street Considered.

Several matters of much importance to local merchants was discussed Thursday evening at the meeting of the Retail Merchants Association, one of the most important of which was a Merchants week. It was decided that such a week be celebrated during the month of May. During that week the merchants propose to offer such bargains that it will cause the people of Quincy and neighboring towns to sit up and take notice.

The meeting was held in Union hall, and opened with a supper which was served at 6.30 by Caterer Thompson. Cigars lighted, President Sheppard called the meeting to order, and stated that the directors had pledged $10 toward the expense of the reception to President Bowles of the Fore River. The action of the directors was endorsed.

Under reports of committees, the special committee on the subject of sealer of weights and measures reported that there was now pending before the Legislature a bill that provided that the expense of sealing weights and measures should be borne by the cities instead of by the parties whose measures were sealed as now. The committee stated that a conference had been had with the Mayor in relation to the local conditon, and he had suggested that steps be taken to have the City Council pass an ordinance that should provide that the sealers of weights and measures should devote his whole time to the duties of the office, and that the compensation be fixed from $800 to $1000 per year.

This opened up a general discussion on the subject, during which it was brought out that the State sealer had stated that the conditions in Quincy were among the worst in the State, and that he intended to get after the sealer through the local merchants until something was done to remedy the present conditions.

Some of the speakers claimed that the present sealer had done better than any previous official, and that too much could not be expected of an official who received but $350 per year. Others thought he had not done well, and cited instances when the sealer had promised to call and seal measures but had not done so as yet, although several weeks had passed. It was pointed out that merchants using unsealed weights, etc., were liable to heavy fines, although it was not their own fault that the weights were not sealed.

Others thought that the sealer should advertise regular office hours, at which he could be found at City Hall, so that merchants could go there, and not have to wait for the sealer to call upon them. The trouble was the man had too much to do. He was simply holding down the job and drawing the salary. Pressure should be brought on the Mayor to remedy the existing conditions.

It was thought that the sealer should be given an opportunity to explain his position, and it was voted that he be invited to appear before the next meeting of the association. It was also voted that the special committee confer with the Mayor to see if the sealer cannot be at his office half a day each month, and that the day be advertised so that merchants may know.

During the discussion one gentleman thought the newspapers ought to be sealed for the benefits of the advertisers. That is the advertisers were entitled to know the true circulation of the paper. No action, however, was taken on this suggestion.

The special committee on lighting of City Square asked for further time which was granted.

A communication was received from the New Haven railroad in answer to the complaint relative to the handling of freight at the Quincy station, to the effect that the subject would be promptly investigated.

It was announced that since the Adams Express Co., had absorbed the New York & Boston Express that the rate from Quincy to New York had been increased from 75 cents to $1 per hundred pounds. Quincy was within the Boston limit, however, so that no extra charge for delivery in Quincy was made.

One member suggested that the matter of widening Hancock street should be considered. If widened between Granite and School street it would develope business on the east side. This subject also brought on interesting discussion. It was argued that an attempt was made some months ago to straighten the line of the street, but the matter of sentiment in relation to cutting down trees had prevented anything being done. The time was coming however when the lines would have to be straightened. More stores were necessary. Hancock street is our natural business street. Too wide a street was not favored as it would be detrimental to business. This was illustrated right in City Square by the Adams building. A street of reasonable width meant better business for all of the stores. The agitation of straighting the lines between City Square and School street should be kept up, but should not be acted upon hastily. It was suggested that perhaps the City Council might establish a building line on Hancock street, so that when the time came that the street should be widened there would not be any new buildings to move. It was voted that a committee be appointed to request a hearing on the matter from the Committee on Streets of the City Council. The president appointed Henry L. Kincaide, Dexter E. Wadsworth and T. L. Williams as that committee.

MERCHANTS WEEK.

At this point an article published by a trade journal on the good results to be derived from a Merchants Week was read. The plan suggested by the article was that all merchants should cooperate. Each merchant should quote some article to be sold as a specialty, and should advertise that. All advertisements should be passed upon by a committee, so that all merchants would be treated fairly and there would be no clash in prices. Such a weeks sale would make people sit up and take notice, and would boom the city.

All of the members immediately fell in with the scheme, and agreed that it ought to be tried in Quincy. It was a plan that several had often seriously considered. It would show the people that it was for their advantage to trade at home, and also show them that the Quincy merchants are alive. It was suggested that for the work that an advertising sheet should be printed. Each member of the association should have an advertising space of the same size, and that the total expenses be assessed equally upon the merchants entering the scheme, and that all the advertisements should be passed upon by the committee. It was also suggested that in the advertisement no mention of trading stamps should be made, although merchants could give them to their customers if they desired. After some further discussion it was voted that the directors take up the question of holding a merchants week in Quincy during the month of May.

The only other matter of importance discussed was relative to the opening of the banks on Saturday nights for deposits. Sentiment in this question, however, was not unanimous.

SALVATION ARMY CONCERT.

The Salvation Army concert on Thursday evening was a great success. About 7 P. M. the band paraded through Cranch, Whitwell and Granite streets to the temple. At the hall it was necessary to secure extra chairs to accommodate the large audience. The male choir of the Swedish Congregational church was so popular that it gave an extra number. The songs, recitations and instrumental numbers were all pleasing. E. J. Norell was unable to be present but Mrs. Haglind gave a recitation in his place.

FIRST OF SERIES.

An interesting talk on education and the benefits of education was given before the Knights of Columbus club Thursday evening by T. J. Buckley, a member of the new Boston City Council. In addition to this there was vocal and instrumental music by James Brenan, lecturer of Elm Hill council, solos by J. A. Duggan and Edward J. Sullivan, and piano selections by John Mahan. The talk was given under the directon of Councilman Edward P. Histen, who is the lecturer of Quincy council, and is the first of a series of talks to be held during the next few months.

MORE COMPLAINTS.

Bartholmew Capilini, who was before the district court some days ago for soliciting orders for liquor in Quincy, was defaulted when the case was called this morning. Capilini was out under $500 bonds to appear. His counsel was present and said that he had told the defendant he need not appear as the case was to be continued. The court, however, said different. That he should have appeared and therefore a default should issue. Inspector Goodhue who had charge of the case informed the court that he had secured three additional warrants against the defendant and that he desired that these complaints be heard at the same time the first complaint came up. The court ordered the cases continued until March 12, at which time all complaints will be heard.

BALANCE FROM BANQUET

West Quincy Association Encouraged to Go On

A largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of the West Quincy Improvement association was held Thursday evening, President S. B. Little presiding. The report of the committee on the banquet was very gratifying. All bills have been paid and there is a good balance to be paid into the treasury. A vote of thanks was extended to the ladies who assisted, to the committee, and especially to Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Dennen who made the chowder and coffee.

Rev. Henry T. Gray, pastor of St. Mary's church, and Rev. Carl Raupach, pastor of the Hall place church, were made honorary members of the association. Several residents were also admitted to membership.

Several matters of local interest were then debated more or less. One of these was the desirability of the construction of a tar concrete sidewalk on Crescent street from Willard street to the junction of the Furnace Brook parkway. Definite action on the subject, however, was put over until the next meeting.

It was voted hereafter to hold meetings twice a month instead of every week.

The question of obtaining the use of the hall in the Willard school building for the meetings of the association was touched upon, but no action taken.

It was also suggested that it would be a grand good idea if a blue print of Ward Four could be obtained that the members might discuss more intelligently what changes in the lay out of the ward would be advantageous for its future growth.

The sealing of weights and measures was taken up and discussed along the same lines that other associations have discussed the question. The general opinion seemed to be that it would be to the best advantage of the merchants if the office of sealer of weights and measures was made a permanant one, and the official paid sufficient salary to enable him to give his whole time to the duties of the office. Action will probably be taken at the next meeting of the association.

NAVIGATING OFFICER.

A Boston paper reports that orders were received on Thursday at Charlestown Navy Yard commanding Lieut. Clarence A. Abele, U. S. N., to report immediately aboard the scout cruiser Chester for duty as her navigating officer. Lieut. Abele's home is in Quincy and for the last month he has been on his honeymoon with his young bride, formerly Miss Ruth Sanford of Bridgeport, Ct. Lieut. Abele was divorced from his first wife, Miss Elsie Manney, daughter of Rear Admiral Henry N. Manney, last year, after a sensational trial. Lieut. Abele since then has been on duty at the board of inspection and survey. He is the son of Francis Abele of Quincy.

MEMORIAL CHURCH.

The Memorial Congregational church held its annual meeting Wednesday evening. William Arthur was chosen moderator Walter L. Blake, deacon John M. Smith, clerk. On the music committee are William Harding, Miss Ella Horton and Fred Burditt.

The parish society held its annual meeting Thursday evening. The finances are better than they have ever been in the history of the church.

Henry Von Emden was elected president; William F. Cummings, clerk, and Charles R. Safford, trustee for three years.

The following were elected a building committee with power to go ahead and get plans to build a new church this spring: W. F. Cummings, C. F. Letteney, Charles A. Hall, Charles A. Hadlock and W. F. Buckley.

JAPANESE SKETCH GIVEN

Pleasing Entertainment at Wollaston Church

The sale and entertainment of the Ladies Benevolent society held in the vestries of the Wollaston Congregational church on Thursday afternoon and evening was largely attended.

In the evening a charming little Japanese sketch, entitled "A case of spoons," was most creditably presented under the direction of Mrs. L. L. Cleveland. The scene represented a Japanese tea garden, and the decorations of Japanese lanterns and cherry blossoms were arranged most effectively.

Composing the cast of characters were the following:

Baroness Shorato, with high ambitions—Mrs. R. B. Locke

Misa, a daughter, Miss Caroline Lewis

Yaki, a daughter, Miss Helen Seavey.

Suzume, maid of the Shorato's, Mrs. George Fleming

Baron Ito, of diplomatic service R. B. Locke

Miss Helen Drew, American young lady—Mrs. A. L. Freeman

Captain Richard Stewart, U. S. N. Charles Capon

Count DeVigny, amourous Frenchman Robert Jennison

During the sketch a group of Japanese songs were pleasingly rendered by Miss Caroline Lewis and Helen Seavey.

Mrs. W. H. Brazee was in charge of the fair and was ably assisted by a large committee. A couple of amateur electricians, Norton Nickerson and Carlton Lewis provided a unique flashing electric sign on the outside of the church, together with the interior electrical arrangements.

The committees were composed of the following:

Apron table—Mrs. Rufus B. Tobey, Mrs. W. P. Gould, Miss Alice Lincoln, Miss Annie Robbins.

Fancy table—Mrs. Amos T. Leavitt, Mrs. Carroll Bates, Mrs. Albert Sayward, Mrs. Charles Alden, Mrs. Charles Hull.

Candy table—Mrs. E. R. Johnson, Mrs. E. A. Chase, Mrs. C. J. Hogue.

Cake table—Mrs. Herbert Marshall, Mrs. W. B. Perry, Mrs. I. C. Bonney Mrs. A. A. Lincoln.

Ice cream—Mrs. John T. Thompson Mrs. George Taylor, Mrs. Hanna Farwell.

Goose grab—Miss Helen Jones, Miss Edith Chapman.

Tickets—Mrs. H. T. Whitman, Mrs. William Sayward.

GOLD POTATOES.

Whether those potatoes presented to Mrs. Haglind this week were raised in Quncy or not we are not told, but many people would like to order a few bushels. They were large handsome potatoes and said to be samples. When cut for cooking they were found to contain gold, which is always appreciated. The potatoes were presented to the wife of the Salvation Army captain with wishes for health and wealth.

AN AMERICAN TRIUMPH

Speech of Admiral Bowles Heard by Congress

The banquet of the citizens of Quincy to President Bowles this week has attracted National attention, as will be seen by this dispatch from the Herald bureau at Washington:

The exploit of Admiral Bowles, president of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, in obtaining contracts to build two monster battleships, for the Argentine Republic was placed formally in the Congressiona l Record today. Representative Joseph F. O'Connell of Boston briefly referred to his achievement as a triumph for American shipbuilding, and as an indication that American shipbuilders could build ships cheaper than they can be built abroad, as Admiral Bowles had obtained the contracts in competition because he offered better prices.

A statement by Admiral Bowles as to how he had obtained the contracts published in a Boston newspaper, was placed in the Record at the request of Mr. O'Connell.

SURPRISE PARTY.

J. Carleton McNeil, one of Quincy Point's young men, was tendered a surprise party last evening at his home on Washington street. About twenty young friends gathered and an enjoyable evening was spent with games, music, etc. A dainty collation of ice cream and cake was served. When the guests departed they left behind them a beautiful Morris chair, which will always be prized by Mr. McNeil.

UNKNOWN WOMAN KILLED

Struck by Train Near the West Street Crossing

An unknown woman, whose identity had not been learned up to noon, was instantly killed near the West street crossing on the Granite branch at 9.16 this morning.

The body which is that of a woman evidently about 50 years of age was badly mangled, her head being crushed and her limbs broken.

The woman wore a dark colored waist and skirt and low shoes, and had a black shawl over the shoulders. She also wore a woolen scarf on the head. It is believed that the woman lived in the vicinity of the accident as the track walker identified her as a woman he had frequently seen walking along the tracks picking up coal.

There are a number of paths crossing the track near where the accident happened, and in several cases an approaching train would be hidden from the view of a person coming out of them. It is supposed therefore that the woman was coming onto the track and did not see the train, and for some reason did not hear its approach, and that she stepped directly in front of the train which struck her, as the engineer had no time to check the speed of the train.

Medical Examiner Jones was notified and viewed the body, after which it was given in charge of an undertaker.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

"There have been four great liars in history," says Dr. Heathcote. Tut! Mr. Roosevelt pointed out more than that.

"Why is it that I am here?" inquired Mr. Heyburn, in the Senate recently. If Mr. Heyburn does not know, the answer seems hard indeed.

A New York legislator says that automobiles will eventually regulate freight rates by competing with common carriers. To hasten the eventuation, build good roads.

A Michigan professor says that human souls grow after death. Even if this is so the souls of a couple of high protectionists might hop about for 1,000,000 years on one griddle two feet in diameter without crowding one another.

The Ledger has been making arrangements for a "merchants edition" for several weeks but has made no definite announcement about it because it was thought best to wait and see if it was to go it alone or have the cooperation of the Merchants Association. The decision of the Association Thursday night to have a merchants' week in May is most pleasing to the Ledger and it will go ahead with its plan to give Quincy the largest and best edition ever put out in the city. It will be thirty-two pages or larger with illustrations of public buildings, leading merchants and articles on the growth of business enterprises and local history. It will be a paper to send all over the country and it will take many thousands of copies to supply the demand. The new press recently installed for printing the Ledger is equal to an edition of any size and will put forth a Merchants' edition that will be a credit to the city. Hurrah for Quincy.

It will be well for the city of Quincy to be well prepared for the Supreme court hearing April 5 on the basis of apportionment for Metropolitan parks and parkways for the next five years. In the past Quincy's proportion has been larger than it should have been, requiring a levy of $14,582.14 in 1909. This meant a tax of about fifty cents per $1,000 in Quincy for Metropolitan parks.

A Boston paper says: "It is expected that Mayor Fitzgerald will this year make special efforts to have the tax on Boston for the maintenance of the metropolitan park system reduced from its present rate of 62 1-2 percent to a more equitable sum.

The Metropolitan park system is almost wholly for the benefit of Boston, yet it is only assessed two-thirds of the cost and is kicking at that. The Daily Ledger doubts if Boston is paying fifty cents per $1,000 valuation or even ten cents per $1,000.

About 25 miles of parkways have been built by the commission, but almost 20 miles are north of Boston. The Revere Beach parkway is over five miles long, the Middlesex parkway nearly five miles, the Mystic Valley parkway nearly three miles, the Lynnway several miles, the Fresh Pond parkway half a mile and so on.

If the assessment of Boston is reduced the assessments on the adjacent cities and towns will be largely increased, because there is a certain amount to be raised.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The difference between modern vessels and the wooden ships of long ago, is illustrated in many ways. In the old days sometimes an emergency would come when an order to cut away the mast would be given. This cannot be done now in the case of steel ships with hollow steel masts. In the old days a lookout went up the shrouds to the crow's nest, but now he goes up inside the mast. A steel ladder fixed within the hollow mast enables the sailor to go aloft to his perch where he can look out over the tossing seas and give warning of danger. The old tar of the wooden ship period is rapidly disappearing for steam has supplanted sails to such an etent, that comparatively few men who follow the sea can compare with the sailors who went "round the horn" in the first half of the last century.—Lynn Item.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Co., has commenced its campaign of advertising the Cape and the Island summer resorts. The booming of the Cape by the railroad company last year had a marked effect on the business of this section, and in some places the accommodations were overtaxed. It's up to the Cape to increase its accommodations that comers may be entertained.—Barnstable Patriot.

It all comes down to this, that America is an immense country, having the task of amalgamating imported job lots of all the civilizations of the earth. We have made progress. We are making progress now. We shall make more progress in the time to come. But, meanwhile, we pay the price of our political unity, our vastness and our job-lotness by having foreign critics interpret everything evil among us, wherever located and whatever its primary cause, as a blot on "American civilization." Sometime, there will be an American civilization—the real thing. At present, it cannot be found.—Springfield Republican.

And now newspapers and legislatures and congresses and councils and labor unions and sociological societies and settlement houses are going to find out the cause of the high cost of living. Different ones are cussed, and we are all gouging each other in self-defense.

And it is all necessary, not because labor and land and machinery and buildings and rain and sunshine and fuel are scarce, and because God's pantry has been anticipated, capitalized and we are made to pay today a profit on next year's crop and a royalty on unborn beef.

In a word. If $70,000,000,000 has artificially been added to the capitalization of the nation's industries, then to earn 5 per cent on this fiction somebody must pay $3,500,000,000 per year more than things are worth.

That's added to the cost of living, isn't it?

That means about ten millon dollars a day to start with.

So don't let them get you to cussing the farmer, nor the butcher, nor the housewife, nor yourself.

Cuss congress, which permits watered stock and a Wall street to gamble with them—that is if you feel like cussing.—Beverly Times.

One of the institutions of Charleston, S. C., has been Major J. C. Hemphill of the Charleston News and Courier. He is about to leave to go into simlar work in Richmond, Va., Since 1880—a space of thirty years—he has served the News and Courier in various positions, and for 21 years has been manager and editor. He has been vitally interested in Charleston, in the State, and in the paper he has served. His valedictory on leaving is interesting, and seems not wholly marked by joy, as is quite natural. Dragging up the roots of thirty years and starting over again in another soil and under changed conditions is no easier in the newspaper world than in any other. A newspaper man who likes a town and has been interested in it for thirty years or so, and has seen its business develop, and has watched its life and the life and history of thousands of its people, finds it perhaps harder to leave than do men in some other callings. It has been his business to so closely watch the community's life and movements that he is himself a sort of walking history of the place, and no other town has or can have in the years that remain of his life so much of personal interest.—Brockton Enterprise.

The project of erecting a statue of an Indian of heroic size to be placed in New York harbor as a companion to Liberty enlightening the world has much to commend it. The Indian, as the Pilgrims knew him, has passed away, and the Indian as Sheridan described him is rapidly becoming "good." To perpetuate the appearance of the tribal man, who at one time dominated this continent, by erecting a giant statue in bronze is a worthy conception. The work is to be done without expense to the government, wealthy New Yorkers proposing to furnish the funds. It will serve an educational purpose, which will not be its least value, and speak a welcome as did Massasoit of old, to the Plymouth pilgrims.—Lynn Item.

CANAL BUT NO SHIPS

Government Should Immediately Help Shipping Interests

An editorial in the current issue of Leslie's weekly is of local as well as National interest:

Are we spending $500,000,000 for the benefit of other nations? This is what Bernard N. Baker asserts in the North American Review for January, and no one arises to deny it. We are pushing to completion the Panama Canal, a trade highway making necessary a new commercial chart of the world; but when we throw it open, the vessels which pass through it will not be flying the stars and stripes, unless Congress takes immediate action. Prior to the Civil War we could boast a merchant marine, but so steadily has it dwindled that practically there are today no vessels carrying the United States flag.

And this stupendous enterprise, whose half-billion cost would stagger any other nation, we are putting through to benefit others more than ourselves. Foreign missionary work is all right in its place, and our country should do its share. To some, this way of digging a canal may seem like a beautiful charity; but we believe charity should begin at home. The ninety millions of people in the United States are paying the bills to dig this ditch, therefore it must be made to serve their interests first of all. And, unless there are American ships to use our American canal, their interests will not be adequately served.

For the nation's persistent neglect to aid in creating a merchant marine, American built and American manned, to carry American commerce, no valid reason can be produced. Compare our attiude in this regard with that of Great Britain and Germany. Says Mr. Baker: "Today the Cunard Steamship Company, so largely subsidized by the English government, absolutely prohibits the ownership of any of its stock by other than citizens of Great Britain.

The prosperous and well-managed Hamburg Packet Company will not allow any of the higher officers of the company to be citizens of any other country, so jealously do foreign nations guard the protection of their merchant marine, and of such importance is it to them." The remedy proposed for our absurd predicament is the amendment and extension of the ocean-mail service act. Our mails should be carried by our own vessels our own ships and our own trade receiving all the advantages accruing therefrom.

At the request of many eminent men, Mr. Baker suggests the amendments that would be necessary to make the act of March 3, 1891, of great value in building up our marine service as mail carriers, and yet at no excessive cost to the government. He proposes a definite amount for this purpose upon a graduted scale, the figures finally reaching $10,000,000 upon the tenth year, but with the provision that this amount shall never be exceeded.

Our country is definitely committed to the policy of protection for its own products and manufactured goods. As to the tariff, there is only one real difference of view, and that is in regard to the amount. When, therefore, Congress is asked to grant to our merchant marine some protection against foreign ships, more cheaply built and manned than is possible here, it is asked to do only what to be consistent and just it ought long ago to have done.

Think of the hundreds of millions of dollars our country is spending for freight and passenger traffic, all going into the pockets of foreign ship owners. At least a proportion ought to remain among us. Think of the roundabout way the mail from our Atlantic ports takes to reach South America, going first in foreign ships to various European countries, and thence in other foreign ships to South America. Do we wonder that Europe's trade with South America far excels our? Yet the bulk of it would naturally come to us. American mail ought to be carried in American vessels. The time for Congress to act is at once.

To possess a splendid navy, yet with no merchant marine to supply it with fuel in time of war, is bad enough. But what shall be said of the folly of digging the most important canal in the history of the world, yet having no vessels of our own to use it? It reminds one of the man who had no thought of getting an automobile, but who nevertheless adorned his place with a garage. "To spend a half-billion dollars entirely for the benefit of other nations would be an incredible indictment of our own good sense." Build the canal, but at the same time build up a merchant marine.

HAT-PASSING STOPPED

Lodge Considers It Beneath the Dignity of the Senate

Washington, March 4.—A plan originated by Senator Gore to pass the hat and raise a fund to purchase a cane for James Gordon of Mississippi has stirred up the senate. Gore called a page and started him around requesting senators to chip in. A dozen or fifteen had dived into their jeans when Senator Lodge filed a complaint and asked that the collection of funds in the senate chamber cease, saying that such an innovation was beneath the dignity of the senate.

Senator Money, the minority leader, slipped around and diplomatically told Gore that the hat could not be passed in the senate chamber.

Senator Gore gave instructions that the money collected be returned to the senators. He declared that he would secure the contributions from senators outside the chamber.

TRAINS STILL UNDER SNOW

Hundred Dead Bodies Believed to Be Beneath Big Avalanche

Wellington, Wash., March 4.—Eighty-six names are now on the list of dead and missing passengers, railroad and postal employes who were carried down by the avalanche which destroyed two Great Northern trains. An estimate of 100 dead is conservative, it is said.

All of the dead were residents of the northwest. No one who has seen the wreckage has the slightest hope of finding any of the missing alive. The explorations have uncovered none living, and some of the bodies are shockingly mangled.

An avalanche of dry snow might have covered its victims alive, but the gorge at Wellington is packed tight with wet snow, ice, huge trees and glacial boulders of enormous weight.

CLASH OF COUNSEL IN GLOVER CASE

Woman's Lawyer Objects to Severe Gruelling of His Client

Cambridge, Mass., March 4.—Attorney Elmore became so incensed at Attorney Scott's examination of Mrs. Lillian M. Glover in the probate court here that he challenged Scott to prepare an indictment of murder against Mrs. Glover.

If this were done, he promised he would go ahead and try the case. He objected so frequently to Mrs. Glover being subjected to the merciless gruelling she was receiving that the court interfered several times.

But Scott was obdurate. He had got Mrs. Glover to admit that Hattie Le Blanc's sisters called on the Monday following the murder to see the body of Glover. Mrs. Glover admitted that she went to the room where the body lay.

Scott asked Mrs. Glover if she didn't turn away and didn't close her eyes while passing the body, and if she did not say afterwards: "I couldn't look at the man then;" but Mrs. Glover denied all.

Several times Mrs. Glover testified to things which were different from the testimony she had previously given at the inquest and at Hattie Le Blanc's hearing in Waltham.

AS FATHER'S AGENT

John D., Jr., Likely to Become Head of the Rockefeller Foundation

New York, March 4.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., will probably become the active head of the new Rockefeller Foundation, and devote his entire time to the philanthropic work undertaken by his father. To this end, young Rockefeller has resigned as a director of the Standard Oil company, and the directors have reduced the number in the board from fifteen to fourteen directors.

The control and direction of the vast sums of the Rockefeller Foundation, which will mount far into the millions, involves a task which will require the undivided energies of young Rockefeller for years to come.

OUTLOOK CLUB.

The Outlook club of Bethany church met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Sidelinger of Presidents hill. The meeting was opened by Miss Crane after which reports were read. Then came the election of officers, the following being chosen:

President—Miss Agnes Souter.
Vice President—Miss Jessie Pratt.
Secretary—Miss Frances Burke.
Treasurer—Miss Lillian Moodie.

Miss Esther Sidelinger and two other students of Radcliff college gave a very interesting talk on the Student Volunteer convention recently held at Rochester, N. Y., after which a social hour was enjoyed, and refreshments were served.

PEANUT PARTY.

A goodly number attended the social held by the Epworth League Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Crothers of Beale street. Following the regular business meeting a Saint Patricks peanut party was enjoyed. This included all sorts of peanut games appropriate to St. Patricks day, including conundrums and peanut contests. Mrs. Paul Brodbeck proved doubly fortunate as winner of both peanut doll dressing contest and guessing game.

Quick Time Music.

A music teacher in Chicago was recently approached by a lady from the interior who confided to him her intention of taking piano lessons and inquired as to terms, etc. These proving satisfactory, she went on to explain that she was desirous of accomplishing a rapid course. The professor assured her that she might learn a great deal in twenty lessons.

"Good," said the woman. "I've got only a limited time in Chicago, so I must contrive to get the twenty lessons into that."

"How long are you to be here?" she was asked.

"Three weeks."

"Twenty lessons in three weeks!" exclaimed the astonished teacher. "You could never do that!"

"Oh, yes, I could!" returned the woman. "Couldn't I, Marie?" turning to a friend for support. "I could take two lessons a day, or perhaps I could take the whole at once. Twenty lessons, one after another, would only take ten hours."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

GRAY HAIRS BANISHED.

The old idea of using sage for darkening the hair is again coming in vogue. Our grandmothers used to have dark, glossy hair at the age of seventy-five, while our mothers have white hair before they are fifty. Our grandmothers used to make a "sage tea" and apply it to their hair. The tea made their hair soft and glossy and gradually restored the natural color. One objection to using such a preparation was the trouble of making it, especially as it had to be made every two or three days on account of it souring quickly. This objection has been overcome and by asking almost any first-class druggist for Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur the public can get a superior preparation of sage, with the admixture of sulphur, another valuable remedy for hair and scalp troubles. Daily use of th's preparation will not only quickly restore the color of the hair but will also stop the hair from falling out and make it grow. It is sold by all druggists for 50c. and $1.00 a bottle, or is sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.

EVENTS AT Y. M. C. A.

Out of Town Entertainers Have Been Secured

The three biggest events of the year will occur at the Y. M. C. A. during the next three days. Tonight at 7 o'clock eighty older boys will sit down to a supper. Never before has there been gathered as many older fellows at one time. J. A. Sedgwick of Fore River Shipbuilding Company will preside, and will introduce Charles Bishop as toastmaster of the evening. Roger B. Hull of Yale, now of Harvard, will be the principal speaker of the evening. This is the first of a series of three.

Only two more meetings on Saturday mornings. Tomorrows meeting for Juniors at 9 A. M., is going to be unusually strong, as Lucius H. Bugbee of Brookline has been secured as speaker. Mr. Bugbee was one of the speakers at the State conference for boys held in Holyoke a few weeks ago. He is an enthusiast, boys, come out and hear him. Every boy in Quincy invited to this meeting.

At the meeting on Sunday at 3.30 P. M., Illsy Boone will be the speaker.

Bribery In English Elections.

Bribery is a term which every candidate for a seat in the imperial assembly dreads, for the law visits offenders against it with very heavy punishment, and more than one politician has realized that the game is not worth the candle.

The would be M. P. must be very careful not to give, lend or promise money or money's worth to induce an elector to vote for him or abstain from voting for an opponent. Neither must he pay the day's wages of any voter or give him money for railway fares or loss of time. If he does and is elected the candidate loses his seat, and both he and the recipient of his ill advised gift are liable to twelve months' imprisonment or a fine not exceeding £200. Even treating the wives or relatives of electors may constitute an offense, and the quantity is immaterial if the intention is corrupt.

The withdrawal of custom from a tradesman, if done with a view to affecting the man's vote, constitutes undue influence, for which the punishment is the same as in the case of bribery.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Australian Stock Whip.

The stock whip in the skillful hands of the Australian is not only an article of the greatest utility, but also a formidable weapon. Owing to its great length—the lash varies from twelve to thirty feet—and the shortness of the butt, which measures only eighteen inches, it is an extremely difficult and awkward thing to wield, and the beginner is apt to hurt himself if he does not exercise care when practicing. A well trained stockman, however, can hit a cent every time at ten paces distance and with the dreaded lash in his hand, cracking like pistol shots, can keep a mob of wild cattle in check. If used with full force it will cut through skin and flesh like a knife, says the Wide World Magazine, but, unless a beast shows distinct vice the stockman uses it more for the purpose of instilling fear than of causing pain. It can also be used as a bolas, a Patagonian form of the lasso, and an adept can catch and hold a beast by causing the lash to curl around its legs.

Luck of Peacock Feathers.

The peacock's feathers superstition is nothing like so common as it used to be. Perhaps Whistler's celebrated peacock room helped to break it down. At any rate, peacock's feathers are ordinary enough articles of decoration in many happy and placid homes. There are shops in London that keep large stocks of them, and you may buy these bringers of misfortune at a shilling a bundle. Did the superstition originate because of the reported pride of the peacock on the "pride shall have a fall" theory, or is it that the "eye" of the feather is supposed to see undesirable happenings which somehow get published upon the housetops? One rather feels that the beautiful tail was nature's compensation to the bird for giving it the most abominable of all voices.—London Chronicle.

An Insinuating Missive.

He was a German student, and this was the letter he addressed to his uncle:

Dear Uncle—A very strange thing happened yesterday. I went to see a friend of mine at the bank who knows your handwriting very well, and he thought you were ill, as I had not lately presented any checks signed by you. He begs to be remembered to you, as also do I, and you might let my friend see your signature again. If you are very busy, you might send a blank check, and I will fill it in. Yours affectionately. KARL.

Unusual.

"Don't you like the book?"

"No. I think the heroine is a most impossible creature."

"Is that so?"

"Yes. She doesn't appear to have a single 'gown of some simple material that enhanced rather than hid her graceful figure!'"—Exchange.

TOURING IN AFRICA WITH ROOSEVELT

Former President's Visit to an Abode of the Masai, Giant Savage Warriors Who Wear Strange Ornaments In an Odd Way. ::

Work of Missionaries at an American Mission to Uplift the Natives—How They Are Taught to Live For the Good of Others.

DURING one of his recent African hunting trips former President Theodore Roosevelt visited a kraal, or village, of the Masai, a native tribe. In describing the incident in his article on "African Game Trails" in the March Scribner's Mr. Roosevelt says:

"The kraal was in shape a big oval, with a thick wall of thorn bushes eight feet high, the low huts standing just within this wall, while the cattle and sheep crowded small bomas in the center. The fires gleamed here and there within, and as we approached we heard the talking and laughing of men and women and the lowing and bleating of the pent up herds and flocks. We hailed loudly, explaining our needs. At first they were very suspicious. They told us we could not bring the lioness [which Mr. Roosevelt had killed a short time before] within, because it would frighten the cattle, but after some parley consented to our building a fire outside and skinning the animal. They passed two brands over the thorn fence, and our men speedily kindled a blaze and drew the lioness beside it. By this time the Masai were reassured, and a score of their warriors, followed soon by half a dozen women, came out through a small opening in the fence and crowded close around the fire with boisterous, noisy good humor.

Wearers of Strange Ornaments.

"They showed a tendency to chaff our porters. One, the humorist of the crowd, excited much merriment by describing, with pantomimic accompaniment of gestures, how when the white man shot a lion it might bite a swahili, who thereupon would call for his mother. But they were entirely friendly and offered me calabashes of milk. The men were tall, finely shaped savages, their hair plastered with red mud and drawn out into longish ringlets; they were naked except for a blanket worn, not round the loins, but over the shoulders; their ears were slit, and from them bone and wooden ornaments hung; they wore metal bracelets and anklets and chains which passed around their necks or else over one side of the neck and under the opposite arm. The women had pleasant faces and were laden with metal ornaments—chiefly wire anklets, bracelets and necklaces—of many pounds weight. The features of the men were bold and clear cut and their bearing warlike and self reliant."

Uplifting the Natives.

In the same article Mr. Roosevelt, describing the work being accomplished by the American Industrial mission at Kijabe under the leadership of the Rev. Mr. Hurlburt, says:

"At Kijabe I spent several exceedingly interesting hours at the American Industrial mission. Its head, Mr. Hurlburt, had called on me in Washington at the White House in the preceding October, and I had then made up my mind that if the chance occurred I must certainly visit his mission. It is an interdenominational mission and is carried on in a spirit which combines to a marked degree broad sanity and common sense with disinterested fervor. Of course such work under the conditions which necessarily obtain in East Africa can only show gradual progress, but I am sure that missionary work of the Kijabe kind will be an indispensable factor in the slow uplifting of the natives.

Taught to Be Missionaries For Good.

"There is full recognition of the fact that industrial training is a foundation stone in the effort to raise ethical and moral standards. Industrial teaching must go hand in hand with moral teaching, and in both the mere force of example and the influence of firm, kindly sympathy and understanding count immeasurably. There is further recognition of the fact that in such a country the missionary should either already know how to or else at once learn how to take the lead himself in all kinds of industrial and mechanical work.

"Finally the effort is made consistently to teach the native how to live a more comfortable, useful and physically and morally cleanly life, not under white conditions, but under the conditions which he will actually have to face when he goes back to his people to live among them and, if things go well, to be in his turn a conscious or unconscious missionary for good."

One of the exciting incidents described in this article was the killing by Kermit Roosevelt of the largest lion bagged thus far by the party. The lion was charging Kermit when he brought it down.

To Wage War on House Fly.

The common house fly is the object of a nation wide crusade that was recently launched against him at Washington. A moving picture campaign of education in theaters throughout the United States and in Canada was perfected by enthusiastic men and women, who have organized themselves into the special fly fighting committee of the American Civic association. By the moving picture films they expect to educate everybody to the dangers of the house fly and transform the population of the United States and Canada into an army that will make his existence short.

Airships Good For Smugglers.

An aviator has played tag with the customs officers of two nations at El Paso, Tex., remaining in the air thirteen minutes and covering fifteen miles in his flight. Charles K. Hamilton fluttered above El Paso and Juarez, Mexico, darting back and forth from one city to the other over the international boundary and demonstrating, as he declared he would, the practicability of the flying machine in smuggling operations.

Familiar Song a Voice Restorer.

Thirteen years ago Jesse Everett of Monticello, N. Y., completely lost his voice, having once been a good singer. When he heard recently the strains of a familiar air played upon the piano he told his wife he thought he could sing again and did so with remarkable effect. Physicians are unable to explain the phenomenon.

Motion Pictures For the Insane.

The Nebraska state board of public lands and buildings will buy a moving picture machine for the amusement of the insane patients at the Norfolk asylum. Superintendent J. P. Percival says that the pictures soothe patients and that they watch them without the exciting effects incident to other diversions.

London Women Pipe Smokers.

Pipe smoking is the latest practice among the clubwomen of London. The pipe most in use is a dainty Japanese affair, known as a kiseru, with a gold and silver bowl and mouthpiece. The bowl holds a pinch of tobacco, from which about seven whiffs can be obtained.

A Dark Horse

She Married In Haste, but Did Not Repent at Leisure.

By LUELLA D. COWLES.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

You will scarcely believe your senses, my dear, when you receive this my announcement that I am married. Just think! When you left me only two days ago I told you that under no condition whatever would I marry, because I knew of no man I wished to marry, and yet here am I married. And doubtless you will exclaim: "Poor Irene, after all my warnings! Some one of the hunters for her ten millions has bagged the game. And now that he has got her and the millions he will hang on to the money and the wife will have to take care of herself."

But you are wrong, my dear, entirely wrong. I have married the best man in the world, one who loves me devotedly. Why will people insist that a sordid interest must always prevail over the yearnings of the heart? My case at least affords an instance wherein love has risen superior to avarice.

But I must begin at the beginning or rather, at the beginning of the end. You know all till the 12th, the date of my parting with you. You know that I had promised the count an answer on the 13th, that a new and attractive offer from Prince Fiegenheim had been been made to me on the 12th and that, while the count was a delightful man, irrespective of his title, to be a princess was far more attractive than being a countess. Meanwhile General Du Pont had cabled me from Paris that he was about to sail for America hoping to induce me to reconsider my refusal of him.

On looking over my memorandum book I counted seventeen other offers, including six titles. Can you blame me for becoming confused? Count Polinski stopped at hte hotel at which I was living and would not let me out of his sight. The prince, who is wealthy—he is an old man—was more dignified, more ceremonious, but he would not take "No" for an answer. His is one of the oldest families in Prussia, and he is on intimate terms with the emperor. The Earl of Micleton was at Newport when you left—he is the Englishman, you know—but sent me a long letter from there explaining that with my fortune he and I could put his castle in order and entertain royally.

Perhaps if there had not been so many and such tempting offers I might have taken up with some one of them. But no sooner did I get my mind fixed on the advantages of one than I was called upon to consider those of another. The prince would tell me of the dinners we would have with the emperor and empress and the great social advantages to be derived therefrom. Then the count would describe the jewels that have been in his family for centuries, and the exquisite pleasure of possessing them almost tempted me to decide in his favor. But while I was thinking about them the fact that the earl is an English peer with a seat in the house of lords would come up before me, and you know the English nobility is the finest in the world. But there is one thing about the Micletons that isn't a bit nice—the family derived its estates through one of the mistresses of a former king of England.

Oh, dear! My brain begins to whirl again at thinking of all these inducements that were so lately pulling me in every direction. I thought how nice it would be if they could all be united in one man. To be a German princess and sit at the emperor's table, a peeress of England and be received at Buckingham palace, a Polish countess and wear family jewels a thousand years old—I almost wished we could have that system that was in vogue in olden times—Polly Andrew, I think it was called—whereby a woman could have as many husbands as she pleased. (I have looked the word up in the dictionary, and it's polyandrous.) Just think! I could have been a German princess, an English peeress and a Polish countess. Besides, I could have had a real husband to love me. Heigho! If I had had the making of social systems I would have made them much better than I find them.

As I was telling you, the day after you left I found myself in a very uncomfortable position. I had promised the count an answer, the prince was of too high rank to keep waiting, General Du Pont, who, by the by, I didn't tell you comes of one of the oldest families in France and may be president some day, arrived from Paris, and the Earl of Micleton came down from Newport. What do you suppose? Polinski was waiting in my private parlor for his answer when up comes the prince's card. At that moment a note is handed me from General Du Pont stating that he had arrived and would call at noon (it was then 11). While reading his note another waiter hands me the card of the Earl of Micleton.

What was I to do?

I just sat down and cried. But I only shed a few tears. I hadn't time. I must think, or, rather, I must act. My first thought was to accept the prince, he being of the highest rank and considering his intimacy with the emperor and all that. But I just could not give up being a peeress of England. General Du Pont had come all the way from France to plead his cause, and there was a possible presidency of the French republic in his suit. As to Polinski, I had promised him an answer on that very day and had led him to believe that it would be favorable. Besides, I got to thinking of a certain gem he had described to me among those family jewels. It seemed to sparkle just as if it was really before my very eyes.

It was dreadful, these four men all pushing their claims and I not able to fix my mind on any one of them to the exclusion of the others. And then think of the difficulty of handling so many suitors at once. That alone was enough to set one wild.

You know the saying the homeopathics have, "Like cures like?" Well, to handle all these men I was obliged to call in a man. John Jones has had the full charge of my property ever since father died and has managed it very well and, I believe, very honestly. I knew I had something far more difficult to manage than property, and John was the only person I could think of to help me. I just telephoned him to come right up from his office. He telephoned back that he was concluding the sale of one of my buildings that he was anxious to get rid of and desired to nail the transaction, fearing another building would be sold instead of mine. I told him that if the whole estate was in danger of being lost I wanted him to come right up anyway. In ten minutes after that he arrived.

I told him of the four men who were trying to get at me to marry me.

"Have you no preference?" he asked.

"I can't make up my mind," I replied, "whether I would rather be a German princess or a British peeress or run my chances of being first lady of France. Then there are the jewels"—

"You mistake me," said John Jones. "I wasn't asking about the titles and things; I referred to the men."

"Oh, the men! I hadn't thought of that," I said.

"What do you wish me to do?" he asked, looking puzzled.

"I don't know," I said, with a little nervous laugh. "I wish you to do something."

"Do you wish me to decide for you?"

"Yes; anything."

"It will do no good for me to decide unless you abide by my decision."

"I will."

"On your honor?"

"Yes, on my honor."

"You wish me to decide whom you are to marry. Is that right?"

"Yes."

At that moment there was a rap at the door, and like a fool I cried, "Come in!" The door was opened, and—goodness gracious—there stood the count!

"Pray excuse my trespassing," he began; "the fullness of my heart"—

He had got thus far when—what do you think?—some one pushed against him, and, turning, he saw the prince. And, great Scott, the other two were coming down the corridor! The prince had seen the count, the earl had seen the prince, and the general had seen the earl coming toward my suit. They had followed one another.

I looked at John Jones appealingly.

"Gentlemen," he said, "this lady has just made a very important decision—a decision that affects you all." Oh, dear, how eager they all looked!

"Looking at me, he asked, "Am I right?" and I answered "Yes." I trusted him.

"She has decided to whom of all her suitors she will give her hand." (Each man's eyes sparkled with anxiety lest some other than himself had been chosen.) "I have the honor to announce to you, gentlemen, that I am the favored man."

"You!" shouted the count and the general. The other two maintained a dignified silence.

You could have knocked me down with a feather. I glanced at John Jones to know if this was in earnest or only to get rid of the others. He understood my meaning and replied by a look, "I am in earnest."

They say that when persons are drowning all the acts of their lives pass in review before them. All the advantages I was giving up passed before me. And it is also said that a drowning person will catch at a straw. I caught at John Jones.

"Ez this an affair comique," asked General Du Pout, "or ze truth?"

I nerved myself for an effort. Oh, how grateful I felt to John, and I said: "It's the truth."

The four noblemen bowed very low, turned and went away. How embarrassing it must have been if they met at the elevator! When they had gone John turned to me and said:

"Do you approve my course?"

"Yes, I do."

"I release you."

"No you won't," I said. "I've had enough of all this. I wish it closed up at once."

"Married at once?"

"Instantly."

John sent out for a clergyman, and we were married and took the train for this place. I always liked John, but somehow I hadn't thought of him for a husband. I suppose my mind had been on coronets. But John says he had loved me—just think—since I was a little bit of a girl. And I—well, I find it perfectly lovely to have a fine decided business man on whom to rely for a husband.

But one thing, only one thing, troubles me. There is one regret that I cannot get out of my mind. The Countess Polinski would sound well, Mme. le General or probably Mme. le President would sound better, the Countess of Micleton, being English, you know, would sound better still, but the Princess of Fiegenheim would be divine.

And to give up all these to be plain Mrs. John Jones!

Isn't it awful?

His Perfect English.

"Did you ever notice anything peculiar in Professor W.'s speech?" inquired a friend of the professor's.

"Why, no; I don't think I did."

"Well, he would never be guilty of saying what you said just now."

"He wouldn't? What did I say?"

"You said 'I don't think I did.'"

"Is there anything out of the way about that?"

"Yes. You didn't say what you meant at all. You didn't mean that you didn't think, but that you thought you didn't. Professor W. is so careful that he says exactly what he means and nothing else. You do not mean that you do not think when you say that, but that you do think that such and such is not. Nearly everybody does that, so it sounds queer when people speak as the professor does and say 'I think I don't' instead of 'I don't think I do,' as the average individual would say. Another of the professor's idiosyncrasies is to say 'I'll not' where you or I would say 'I won't.' All those little ways sound queer, but they're absolutely correct and irreproachable. The professor uses more perfect English than any one else I know."—New York Press.

BRIEFS.

Two weeks more of Lent.

The sun rises an hour earlier than it did Jan. 1.

It should not be forgotten that Quincy will need 1000 new houses before Jan. 1, 1911.

Quincy couldn't have given Admiral Bowles a more enthusiastic reception if Ex-Mayor Quincy had been secured to deliver the welcoming address.—Globe.

Admiral Bowles is telling his friends that the greeting of the city of Quncy far exceeded all his expectations. He is very enthusiastic over the occasion.

Hon. Allen T. Treadway, president of the Massachusetts Senate, and Hon. Joseph Walker, speaker of the House of Representatives of Massachusetts, will be the speakers at the meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club on Tuesday evening.

At the meeting of the Wollaston Boys club in the Baptist chapel on Thursday evening an interesting story, entitled "Kip," was read to the boys following the usual bible study. Next Thursday the boys will practise for the meet to be held shortly.

QUEEN ESTHER CIRCLE.

The regular monthly meeting of the Queen Esther circle met with Mrs. Wesley Wiggin at the Methodist parsonage, Wollaston, Wednesday night.

Miss Florence Bennett, the president presided. After the devotional exercises and the reports of the treasurer and the records of the secretary, Miss Woodworth of the Medical Mission in Boston was introduced.

She spoke of the work with which she is connected. Also of the ideal neighbor and showed what it meant to live among the lower class of people. She said that Christ came to give abundant life. She told how they tried to make the ideal girl. Then she described the Boys' club. They needed some one from the college to lead them.

At the close of the address refreshments were served, and a social hour was enjoyed by all present in which all joined in singing familiar songs. Twenty-six were present. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all.

WORK FOR ROOSEVELT.

Baptist Clergyman Would Make Him Peace Delegate at Large.

Dr. Robert Stuart MacArthur in his pulpit at Calvary Baptist church, in New York city, the other day suggested that the United States should make Theodore Roosevelt, the former president, a delegate at large to all the nations in the world for the bringing about of universal peace. In Dr. MacArthur's opinion, there is no position in which Colonel Roosevelt can accomplish more or better crown his life's work than in being the principal factor in ushering in the day

When the war drums beat no longer
And the battleflags are furled.

The remarks of Dr. MacArthur came at the close of an address by Professor Samuel L. Dutton on "Peace and War" before the current events class, which preceded the Sunday morning sermon.

TAFT AROUSES GREAT STORM

Vigorous Criticism of His Action In Barring Shaw

Washington, March 4.—President Taft's refusal to admit to practice before the interior department A. C. Shaw, the dismissed law officer of the of the forest service, is the sensation of Washington. As the case shapes up it apparently presents features as full of political dynamite as the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, of which it is an offshoot. It may be taken upon the floor of the house by Representative Page of North Carolina, while Senator Root has interested himself in it, at the request of Senators Overman and Simmons of North Carolina, who in turn have had a warm interview with President Taft.

Mr. Shaw was the third member of the forest service dismissed as the result of Gifford Pinchot's charges against Secretary Ballinger, the two others being Chief Forester Pinchot himself and Assistant Forester Price. The facts of the present situation were not made public by Shaw, who, on the contrary, has tried to avoid publicity. The issue is one of bread and butter with him and he is as anxious over it as the president is said to be angry and obstinate.

Mr. Shaw was for many years in the land office and is thoroughly familiar with all the legal questions growing out of the practice in that branch of the government. On the organization of the forest service he was taken over as assistant law officer, in which position he served until his summary dismissal on the day after Pinchot's famous letter to Senator Dolliver was read in the senate. This letter, it will be remembered, was primarily a flaming defense by the chief forester of the official action of Price and Shaw, and it marked the breaking point between President Taft and Pinchot.

Varying stories regarding the incidents which led up to the president's arbitrary refusal to permit Shaw to earn a living by the practice of law before the interior department are in circulation, but the following is a reasonably accurate statement of the facts.

On his removal from official position, Shaw, who is a man of middle age and with a family, found himself without other means of support and determined to remove to the northwest and engage in law practice, making a specialty of the prosecution of land claims in which he is an expert. He applied to Secretary Ballinger for permission to practice before the interior department, and the secretary, according to his own statement, turned the application over to President Taft on the ground that as the president had dismissed Shaw from the service of the department, it was for the president to say whether or not the request of the dismissed employe should be granted.

The answer of Taft was a flat refusal to permit Shaw to appear as an attorney in land cases. Shaw at once laid the matter before Page, and with Overman and Simmons, Page visited the White House. The case was stated as they understood it and the president was informed that his action could be construed only as denouncing Shaw as "disreputable."

"He is disreputable," the president is reported to have replied; and then he explained to his visitors his belief that Shaw was responsible for articles in the newspapers and in Collier's Weekly which had so much to do with stirring up the conservation troubles.

"But Mr. Shaw is entitled to practice before the supreme court of the United States," expostulated the senators.

"Well, let him practice there," returned the president.

The gist of the president's position is understood to be that Shaw's action in the whole Ballinger-Pinchot matter has been such that in the opinion of the president he is not a proper person to be allowed to practice before a government department.

The Shaw case has been referred to Attorney General Wickersham and, in the event of an adverse decision, it is understood that Senator Overman will introduce a resolution calling upon Secretary Ballinger to give his reasons for the refusal of Shaw's application.

Heinze Again Indicted

New York, March 4.—A new indictment aginst F. Augustus Heinze for alleged violation of the national banking laws was returned yesterday by the federal grand jury here. This is the government's fourth attempt to connect Heinze with certain phases of the alleged misapplication of the funds of the Mercantile National bank.

ACCUSED SENATOR ON WITNESS STAND

Allds Disavows the Bribe Story Told by Conger

Albany, March 4.—A flat denial of Senator Conger's charges closed the testimony of Senator Allds at the legislative bribery investigation. Martin W. Littleton, Allds' chief counsel, questioned his client about the conversation Conger said he had with Allds before the actual delivery of the alleged $1000 bribe. "No such conversation ever occurred," declared Allds.

Littleton reviewed Conger's story that Allds visited him at Conger's apartments here toward the close of the session of 1901 and demanded $1000 as the price of killing the Malby-Stevens bill, which would have limited the amount town boards could appropriate for new bridges.

"Mr. Littleton," said Allds impressively, "there are two lies there: First, the conversation never took place: and I never went to his apartments." Questioned about his alleged negotiating along the same lines with Frank Conger, the senator's brother, Allds answered: "I never knew nor met Frank Conger."

COURT MARTIAL FOR HALL

Interesting Question Involved In Case of the Fake Murderer

Portsmouth, N. H., March 4.—The aftermath of the attempt of Private James Hall to secure his release from the naval prison at the Portsmouth navy yard through a "confession" that he murdered Miss Anna Schumacher will come within a few days in the form of a naval court martial.

The court martial proceedings are likely to prove very interesting. One of the questions involved will be whether the general court martial has jurisdiction after Hall has been discharged from the service.

The charge preferred against Hall is "conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline."

LIFE FOR A LIFE

Sentiment Expressed by Rhode Island Citizens at Legislative Hearing

Providence, March 4.—The effect upon public opinion of the numerous acts of violence in Rhode Island during the past few months was seen in the large attendance at a hearing held by the legislative judiciary committee upon a bill providing capital punishment for murder in the first degree in this state.

About 500 persons, including clergymen, judges, legislators and private citizens, appeared in favor of the bill.

Striking Car Men Take a Step In Direction of Arbitration

Philadelphia, March 4.—The first step towards having the differences between the striking street car men and the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company settled under the authority of the courts, and thus preventing the gigantic sympathetic strike threatened, was taken last night by the car men.

An attorney representing the Amalgamated Association of Street and Railway Employes wrote to President Kruger of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company, asking that he join in an application to be made to the courts, under the act of 1893, for the appointment of a board of arbitration to decide the differences existing between the strikers and the transit company.

Before the receipt of the communication Kruger was shown a copy of the law and was asked if the officials of the company would abide by it. He replied: "Certainly the company will submit to law."

HONOR TO ROOSEVELT

World's Metropolis to Confer Freedom of the City Upon Him

London, March 4.—The court of common council unanimously adopted a resolution conferring the honorary freedom of the city on Theodore Roosevelt, former president of the United States, in recognition of "The distinguished services to civilization during his presidency and his efforts toward the maintenance of the peace of the world." Mr. Roosevelt will visit London in the middle of May.

The document conferring the freedom of the city on its guest will be presented to Mr. Roosevelt in a gold casket at the library of Guild hall, prior to the civic luncheon in the banquet hall, to which the most distinguished men of the nation have been invited to be present to meet the former president.

GOING BEFORE GRAND JURORS

Progress Being Made In Probe of Faro Gang's Doings

Boston, March 4.—Several reputable business men have given District Attorney Pelletier additional information regarding advances made to them by swindlers playing the faro game. Three of them communicate their facts over the telephone, summarizing them briefly, and as a result either police inspectors or some of the district attorney's office staff will be sent to interview them and get their evidence in shape to present to the grand jury next week, when the investigation may be begun before that body.

Several others called at the county prosecutor's office in the court house and were interviewed by Pelletier in his private room previous to the reception of those he had invited.

Among those to whom the district attorney has sent an invitation to come and see him with a view to aid him in apprehending swindlers was George W. Coleman, the former bookkeeper of the National City bank of Cambridge, who is said to have lost some $40,000 of that bank's money through the operations of the faro gang. The district attorney is particularly anxious to hear Coleman's experience with these men, if he really had any, and if he does not respond to the invitation a regular summons will be forthcoming when the grand jury sits to inquire into the matter more fully.

Knight & Terhune of the Hotel Vendome appeared at the district attorney's office. A prominent investment agent, a rich South Boston liquor dealer, a well-to-do publisher and several other prominent men also appeared.

Mr. Pelletier said that besides the sworn statements made, because of the publicity of the case he had received a large number of communications from well-known men who said they would not appear publicly, but would tell him and the police privately what they knew. They will be interviewed by Assistant District Attorney Lavelle and Police Captain Armstrong.

A similar investigation is being made by United States District Attorney French. A number of United States secret service agents, acting upon the request of French, are interviewing the alleged victims of the swindling game and those who were approached unsuccessfully.

UNCLE JOE CHIEF GUEST

President Gives State Dinner In Speaker's Honor at White House

Washington, March 4.—President Taft last night gave a dinner at the White House in honor of Speaker Cannon. Not before in many years has a president entertained in honor of the speaker of the house of representatives.

Speaker Cannon was never entertained at the White House with an exclusive official function during all the seven years of President Roosevelt's occupancy.

The affair was on the same social and official par with those given regularly in honor of the vice president, the diplomatic representives and other dignitaries of the government. About fifty guests were present.

A GOOD WORD FOR BEANS

Boston, March 4.—"You can get just as much energy-producing nutrition out of 2 cents' worth of beans as you can from 25 cents' worth of beef."

Dr. Knapp of the United States department of agriculture, after making the above declaration in the course of his address before the conference of the New England Country Church association last night, added, "and I wish the American people would boycott beef for awhile and eat beans instead."

SENSATIONAL DEVELOPMENTS

Expected In Connection With Cambridge Bank Robbery

Cambridge, Mass., March 4.—Wilson W. Lockhart, of Belmont was arrested here last night at the home of George W. Coleman, his employer and former bookeeper of the National City bank of Cambridge, on a charge of aiding and abetting Coleman in the wilful misapplication of the bank's funds. Coleman and Lockhart were close chums.

The arrest of Lockhart has brought to light a state of affairs at the bank which is said to be unexampled in the history of wrecked banking institutions in this country.

According to the inspectors who made the arrest, Lockhart, as the personal employe of Coleman, and without bonds to the officials of the bank, acted as substitute bookkeeper when Coleman was away, having access to the books of the institution and signing checks and performing the regular duties of bookkeeper without being responsible to anyone but Coleman.

The alleged relations of Coleman and Lockhart point to a conspiracy of a very intricate and extensive character, according to the federal officials, who are still seeking to arrest other parties alleged to be implicated in the conspiracy.

The federal officials say that they are unable to explain the apparent ignorance of the officials and directors of the bank regarding the exact state of affairs at the institution.

Sensational developments are expected to follow swiftly, as a number of well known business men with whom Coleman was intimate are wanted by the federal authorities.

Lockhart was taken in a search of the Coleman home. The federal authorities had been seeking him all day Wednesday and Thursday, and a guard of two secret service men had been kept around the premises for twenty-four hours before the authorities decided to search the house.

Captain Hurley of the Cambridge police, accompanied by Police Inspector Cox and United States Deputy Marshal Bancroft, called at the Coleman residence last night with the search warrant. Immediately on stating their errand, Lockhart appeared and was at once placed under arrest without a protest.

At police headquarters where he was booked, he gave his age as 21 and his residence as 89 Marlboro street, Belmont.

Lockhart was arrested on complaint of John B. Fernsler, a national bank examiner, connected with the bureau of investigation attached to the department of justice. Fernsler and Ridgley Brown, another examiner from Washington, were called in by United States District Attorney French to examine the books of the bank when the task of untangling the altered accounts was undertaken. In five hours, it is said, the conspiracy was unearthed. That it was not apparent to Examiner Pepper and the officials of the bank at the first examination of the bank books is inexplicable to the federal authorities.

Lockhart, like Coleman, is said to have operated by means of checks. A number of them, indorsed by him, were found at the bank, it is stated. By means of checks and altering accounts of depositors who seldom or never disturbed the principal invested with the bank, Lockhart, it is said, acted as a party to the conspiracy.

BOMB IN A CHIMNEY

Outrage In Big Tenement House Attributed to the Black Hand

New York, March 4.—Twenty-five families living in a tenement house in East Thirteenth street were driven from the building in panic last night when a bomb exploded in the chimney at the fifth floor and wrecked the apartments of two Italian families.

Francesco Pirciotto, a young peddler, was fatally scalded when the explosion threw over his head a boiler filled with boiling water and spaghetti. The police say it is another case of the Black Hand.

Slashed Wife In Throat

Lynn, Mass., March 4.—Thomas Horne, aged 19, was arrested last night, charged with assault with intent to kill his wife, who is only 17. The couple had separated some time ago. Mrs. Horne was slashed in the throat with a razor, but she is not dangerously injured.

Sugar Trust In Contempt

New York, March 4.—The federal grand jury handed in a presentment against the American Sugar Refining company, charging it with contempt of court in failing to produce books and papers called for by the grand jury.

THEATRE NOTES

PARK THEATRE.

The greatest interest theatre-goers have taken in William Hodge in "The Man From Home" at the Park Theatre, Boston, does not seem to lessen. On the contrary it appears to be on the increase, if one is to judge by the enormous demand for seats two weeks in advance, now in its eleventh week of phenomenal engagement. "The Man From Home" neither waves the star-spangled banner nor screeches spread eagle screams of the red, white and blue, but it is American to the core and it is a solid, meaty, wholesome core. With both a literary force and vitality in its heart, a splendid moral courteously pointed and a story which is rich in humor, delightful in romance and satire and heated vigorously with melodrama of choicest theatricalism, "The Man From Home" has an intense appeal for every sort of amusement-seeker from the frivoler to the thinker, from the scoffer to the patriot. William Hodge has scored an enormous hit with the theatre-goers in this section. Coming as he did almost an unknown star the success is all the more complimentary. At every performance he is compelled to answer from six to ten curtain calls, and the audience not satisfied with this, he is forced to make a curtain speech. "The Man From Home" is the most absorbing interesting play America has produced, not only because of its splendid candid and fearless Americanism, but because of its scintillating humor, its note of sincerity and its good, sound, melodramatic undercurrent. Beautiful scenes complete this handsome and delightful entertainment to which enthusiastic crowds flock at every performance.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Were it not for the fact that the bills at Keith's from week to week are entirely changed in character, it would be almost impossible to understand how Mr. Keith can keep up the present standard in vaudeville, for during the season there has been a succession of important features which a few years ago it would have been impossible to obtain. The coming week, for instance, will have Joseph Hart's big production, "The Futurity Winner," a stirring melodrama with an exciting horse race for a finish. The company numbers 15 people and the principal scene which represents the quarter-stretch at Shepshead bay with 3 Kentucky Thoroughbreds struggling for supremacy, is one of the mose effective staged in years. On the same bill will be Flo Irwin in George Ade's most amusing farce, "Mrs. Peckham's Carouse." Still another feature will be the remarkable English boy, Laddie Cliff, who has always been a favorite at this house and now comes with an entirely new repertoire of songs and dances. Also on the bill are Raymond and Caverly, now acknowledged to be the greatest of all German comedians in vaudeville, Linton and Lawrence in an amusing sketch, the action of which takes place in a piano store; Wright and Dietrich with singing and comedy; Selma Braatz, the lady juggler; Marabinik, the wonderful ice sculptor, and others.

AMERICAN MUSIC HALL.

Bostonians will next week have an opportunity of seeing the widely advertised Parisian sensation "Ma Gosse" which will be presented for the first time in the Hub at the American Music Hall. This act is a European importation which during its brief stay in New York has taken the metropolis by storm. More has been written about it than any other single act on the vaudeville stage and from the Box Office returns thus far it would appear that everything said of it was fully justified. It tells the story of the Paris underworld showing the lowest possible den and the manner in which the social outcasts enjoy themselves. It also introduces the "Black Dance" which is the climax of dancing sensations. A real novelty will be presented by the Royal Polo Players quartet of experts who use bicycles in the game instead of horses. The tries are made with the front and rear wheels only and many skillful goals are shot. The Empire City Quartett made such a favorable impression last week that the management has wisely decided to hold it over for another week. This act is conceded to be the greatest quartet on the vaudeville stage furnishing no end of fun in connecion with its delightful harmony.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Another week of "The Spitfire" at the Castle Square will be necessary to satisfy the curiosity over this new comedy by Edward Peple which Mr. Craig has given its first production on any stage. From first to last it is a delightful entertainment, and the novelty of its scenes is only equalled by the humor of its dialogue and situations. Nothing is more enjoyable, both in a novel and in a play, than the romance and sensation of the sea, and in "The Spitfire" the audience is taken clear across the Atlantic Ocean from France to America. Excitement mingles with the comic incidents in giving emphasis to the plot, and there is the utmost realism in the rescue of the hero, and in the wrecking of the yacht on the shores of New Jersey. "The Spitfire," as a matter of fact, is a play in which laughter is the dominant note, and the audiences at the Castle Square are responding twice a day to its vigorous and piquant humor. The cast will remain unchanged, Mr. Craig and Miss Young appearing in the leading roles, and excellent bits of character acting being contributed by the other members of the John Craig Stock Company. "The Spitfire" will positively have its closing performance at the Castle Square next week, and it will be followed by a production of the romantic Irish play, "Tom Moore."

"BILLY, THE BOY ARTIST.

"This going to be funnier than 'Peck's Bad Boy' was" is the general verdict of the few who have been privileged to attend the rehearsals that have been going on in Boston for the past week in preparation for the first performance on any stage of the professional version of "Billy, the Boy artist." They say that things go in cycles in the style of the show we best like in the theatre, just the same as they do in books, and jolities and art, etc., and it looks very much as if the "Peck's Bad Boy" and "Billy, the Boy Artist" style of entertainment was due again. At least the theatre-going public will have a chance to find out this month for Ed. Payne's famously funny cartoons which have held the enthusiastic attention of newspaper readers for over ten years in New England, under the title of "Billy, the Boy Artist," will very shortly be presented in stage form under the same name at one of the Boston theatres. Ed. Payne has known Billy for more than ten years and has chronicled in amusing pictures all the tricks Billy has played on Profs. O. Howe Wise and I. B. Schmart, Hen, the hired man; Aunt Abby, Clarence Chumpley, Maude Goldington, and all the other familiar characters, and he has naturally been the best one to write a musical comedy around them. Mr. Payne has achieved as great success in writing for the stage as he has in newspaper cartoons.

"Time's Flight Turned Backward"

SAGE AND SULPHUR

Made Her look Twenty Years Younger

READ MRS. HERRICK'S SWORN STATEMENT

STATE OF NEW YORK } ss. Rochester, N. Y.
County of Monroe }

Nancy A. Herrick, being duly sworn, deposes and says: When I was a school girl I had a head of heavy, long, dark brown hair, that was so plentiful, rich and glossy, that it was the envy of many of my young schoolmates, and attracted the attention and remarks of strangers. After I was married and as I grew older, my hair commenced to come out just a little at first, but gradually as time passed it came out more and more, and began to turn gray. I was induced by many good reports heard of Sage and Sulphur, to try a bottle. My hair was quite gray and thin on top when I commenced using Sage and Sulphur, and you may imagine my satisfaction when I found that it was fast coming back to its natural condition, becoming thicker, darker, smoother and glossier than it had been for a long time. I continued the use of Sage and Sulphur and my hair is now in a splendid condition, as heavy and as dark and smooth as when I was a girl of sixteen. From my experience I believe it is one's own fault if they lose their hair, or let it get gray or harsh. It is now four years since I commenced using Sage and Sulphur, and still use it, and my hair still keeps thick, dark, smooth and glossy.

COMPULSORY INVESTIGATION.

Massachusetts has long had the well deserved reputation of being the creator of many institutions beneficial to mankind. John Hay said of Massachusetts: "For nearly three hundred years it has been the birthplace and home of every idea of progress and enlightenment which has germinated in the Western World."

One of these ideas is the Canadian system for avoiding strikes by compulsory investigation and publicity. Without detracting from the constructive statesmanship of the Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and the Hon. Rudolphe Lemieux who added a most important element of strength to the original conception, Massachusetts may take just pride in the fact that the idea came from the fertile brain of our own Hon. Charles Francis Adams.

Mr. Adams proposed it as a substitute for compulsory arbitration at the meeting of the National Civic Federation in 1902. He suggested the appointment of a tribunal having power to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of testimony, which should report its findings and conclusions and then disband, leaving public opinion alone to exert the pressure necessary to compel compliance with its recommendations.

In 1903 Canada embodied this idea in the Railway Disputes Acts. A voluntary board of conciliation had already been established in 1900, on the lines of the British Act of 1896 and of our own pioneer arbitration act of 1886, an historical sequence again going back to a Massachusetts man, this time to Gov. William L. Douglas.

In 1906 in the stress of pitiful hardships caused by strikes then prevailing in Canada, Mr. King was happily inspired to add to the law compulsory "hesitation," as it were, pending the investigation. No strike or lockout is legal until after a speedy investigation and publication of the findings. This has proved the element of practicability which has made the Canadian law such a success. If you are going to fix up your differences anyway, why strike or lock out at all?

So the idea in its improved form completes the circle and comes back to Massachusetts again, to be enacted in the bill which Mr. Luce has drawn with such painstaking care.

NEGRO LEADS LYNCHERS

Man of His Own Race Who Assaulted Child Is Put to Death

Dallas, Tex., March 4.—Led by an old negro, a mob burst into the court-room in which Allen Brooks, another negro, charged with assaulting a 2-year-old white child, was to receive a lawful sentence of guilty.

They seized Brooks and tossed him through a second story window, breaking his neck. His body was dragged through the streets by infuriated men, who hanged it to the Elks arch, high above the heads of the crowd.

After Brooks was hanged, Dallas for nearly three hours was in the hands of the rioters. The jail was stormed and death was threatened to three other negroes held on charges of murder. They had been taken away, however, and after searching for them in vain the mob dispersed.

FEMALE FAGIN EXPOSED

Instructed a Large Class In Harlem In Art of Thievery

New York, March 4.—When Mary Pokorney, 17 years old, and Mary Shadauer, 14 years old, were arrested last night, jewelry, laces, silks and various trinkets to an amount in excess of $60 were found upon their persons.

Mary Porkorney told the police of meeting a woman who invited her to her flat in Harlem. There the woman gave regular instruction to a numerous class in the art of stealing in department stores.

A man she met in the flat induced her to run away with him, Mary says, and for three weeks she stole to support him.

He was arrested and gave his name as William Erbsland, 20 years old. He admitted serving two terms for theft and burglary.

TRIED TO DEFRAUD INSURANCE PEOPLE

Four Boston Men Plead Guilty to Serious Charge

Boston, March 4.—Samuel I. Gordon, Morris Rudnick, Michael Rudnick and Bernard Davis pleaded guilty in the superior criminal court to a charge of conspiracy to cheat and defraud insurance companies.

Gordon was sentenced to the house of correction for three years. The sentence of the others was postponed one month to enable them to make restitution. If full restitution is made, two of the defendants will be fined $1000 each and the other $500. It is said that it will cost them about $25,000 to make restitution.

After a fire in the fur store of Morris, August & Co. in Summer street, August and Gordon went to the office of the insurance commissioner and swore that some furs were stored on the premises at the time of the fire, when they had been removed to Franklin, and later brought back to this city and stored in a house in Roxbury. August turned state's evidence.

The firm of Morris, August & Co., of which Gordon was a member, went into bankruptcy. The defendants intended to collect insurance on the furs that were alleged to have been stored in the place at the time of the fire.

1800 LOST IN FINAL BATTLE

Both Sides Suffer In Nicaragua When Rebel Army Is Wiped Out

Bluefields, Nic., March 4.—News of the crushing defeat of General Chamorro at Tisna has been officially confirmed by the Estrada government.

Chamorro's force was wiped out and he barely escaped with a handful of his followers. His loss in killed, wounded and captured is given at 800.

Chamorro reports that his opponents' loss was 1000. He ascribes his defeat to the giving out of his cartridges.

As a military menace the provisional army now seems to merit no higher classification than that of guerillas.

Child Shot For Teasing

New York, March 4.—Because he was being teased by a number of schoolchildren, Janon Vamosky, a tailor, fired into a crowd in front of his shop and 15-year-old Nita Plucer received a bullet in her left side. Vamosky was arrested. The child was seriously wounded.

BRIEFS

William L. Granahan of Madison street passed away on Wednesday night. Funeral services will be held Saturday morning.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Epworth league of the Hall Place M. E. church will be held in the vestry Monday evening at 7.45.

The flag continues to wave over City Hall in honor of the home coming of President Bowles of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co.

Fred C. Bavin of Quincy, who was married in Montreal three weeks ago, is in Quincy with his bride on a visit to his mother.

Other Quincy men are reporting to the Daily Ledger that their pockets were picked on Tuesday night, but want no publicity.

The 5,000 edition of the Ledger on Wednesday was hardly large enough to supply the demand which still continues. We are getting in a few from the agencies and hope to accommodate all who wish a copy.

BOYS' LEAGUE.

Richard Morrissey of Charlestown was the winner in the contest for the goldpiece offered by the Rambler baseball club of Wollaston. The proceeds from the contest together with funds to be raised by subscription will go toward outfitting the team the coming season.

The Ramblers say they are out to win this year, and would like to see a boys' baseball league formed in Quincy, representing all sections.

Among the clubs who might be represented are the Fore River Apprentices, the Bigelows of Quincy Point, the Rail Reds of West Quincy, Mohicans, Glover A. C. of Norfolk Downs, Merrymounts of Wollaston and the Adams baseball club of Quincy.

Unless some of the clubs get "cold feet "and refuse to organize some hot games may be looked forward to. The manager of the Ramblers is Milton C. Burton, of 26 Everett street, Wollaston.

TALK ON SPORTS.

James B. Connelly, the author of sea stories, gave an interesting talk on athletics Thursday evening before the Iroquois club at Hibernian hall. Mr. Connelly described in detail the Olympic games in Athens in 1896, and the Olympic games in London last year. He gave a graphic description of the great finish in the Marathon race, and also the 444-yard race, when the Englishman claimed he was fouled by an American. The talk was a particularly interesting and instructive one. In addition to the talk, Andy Dinegan of West Quincy sang several of his songs, and Archie Shannon gave a buck and wing dance.

The new cash grocery at 1475 Hancock street is offering some good trades today that will interest housekeepers. Give N. H. Savage "the fancy grocer," a trial order and take advantage of the low prices.

LANDLORDS IN A TRUST

Move to Raise Rents in the Fore River District

And now Quincy is to have a landlord trust, whose primary object is said to be to raise the rents of houses in the Fore River district. That such an organization of landlords has been formed was made known Thursday when an agent went about the Fore River district among the owners of property explaining the scheme. This in detail is to raise all rents $5 per month. That is, hereafter, houses that have been renting for $20 per month will rent for $25. Restrictions will also be made as to the number of rooms that the occupant shall rent to boarders. Al lthis is the outcome of the anticipated increase in demand for houses.

TODAY'S COURT.

James F. Moran was fined $10 for drunkenness at Quincy and given until July 1 to raise the fine.

William J. Jones was fined $15 for drunkenness at Randolph and given until July 1 to raise the fine.

The case of Bartholemew Capilini for soliciting orders for liquor at Quincy was called and he was defaulted.

New Effect In Leather.

This leather bag may be bought, but it is quite easy to make at home. Suede leather of a shade matching the costume is most satisfactory to use. The good luck design may either be burnt in or made of a contrasting piece of suede.

Decimals and Duodecimals.

Herbert Spencer offered a characteristically original system of reckoning. He clung to the duodecimal system, mainly because twelve can be divided by three and four as ten cannot. But he suggested that all the advantages of both systems might be combined by making twelve the basis of calculation, inventing two new digits to take the places of ten and eleven and making twelve times twelve the hundred. Spencer scornfully remarked that the decimal system rests solely on the fact that man has ten fingers and ten toes. If he had had twelve "there never would have been any difficulty."

The Bridal Wreath.

The bridal wreath is usually formed of myrtle branches in Germany. It is made of orange blossoms in France as well as in the United States. In Italy and the French cantons of Switzerland it is of white roses. In Spain the flowers of which it is composed are red roses and pinks. In the islands of Greece vine leaves serve the purpose, and in Bohemia rosemary is employed. In German Switzerland a crown of artificial flowers takes the place of the wreath.

Not the Usual Kind.

"What a fool exercise fencing must be for women!"

"Why so? I always understood it was fine."

"Here Maude Binks is taking lessons, and she told me yesterday she was learning how to feint." — Baltimore American.

—George E. Miller, stone letterer of Lee, filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court yesterday. His liabilities are $2414 and he has no assets.

CHICAGO'S SANE JULY 4 PLAN.

Big Army Show Feature of Independence Day Celebration.

TO GIVE TWENTY EXHIBITIONS

Over Five Thousand United States Soldiers Will Demonstrate Art of War—Huge Parade on July 4 to Include Military and Civic Societies. Flying Machine to Be Tested.

As a result of efforts of the Sane Fourth association the national tournament of the United States army will be held in Chicago next summer. Over 5,000 soldiers drawn from several departments and representing every mobile branch of the regular military establishment of the United States will go into camp in Grant park June 28.

Beginning July 4 and continuing until July 14 exhibitions will be given afternoons and evenings, except on Sunday, in an arena with a seating capacity greater than that of any outdoor place of amusement in the United States. Major General Frederick Dent Grant is expected personally to supervise the encampment and tournament. This "soldier show," which, it is predicted, will surpass in extent and variety of interest any previous exhibition of a similar character, will be the central feature, it is expected, of a "rational and patriotic" celebration of the Fourth of July in Chicago.

Huge Parade Planned.

Federal soldiers will head the huge parade planned for the morning of Independence day by the Sane Fourth association. Besides companies connected with the Illinois national guard, the marchers will comprise members of military and semimilitary organizations, school children, representatives of singing societies and men wearing costumes that will depict the military epochs of the history of the United States. Floats symbolizing notable events will appear in the parade, which has been planned to weld all racial elements in a movement to further true patriotism, appreciation of liberty and civic pride.

Troops, it is expected, will come from Indianapolis, Detroit, Sault Ste Marie, Mich.; Fort Sheridan, Minneapolis; Fort Meade, S. D.; Fort Des Moines, Iowa; Fort D. A. Russell Wyo.; Fort Riley, Kan.; Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; Fort Niagara, N. Y., and Washington. Of seven bands to come to the tournament three will be mounted. Performances will begin daily at 2:30 p. m. and 8:15 p. m. The infantry will display methods of attack and defense in simulation of real fighting, and to heighten the effect hospital corps members will attend supposedly injured men, exhibiting how wounds are dressed on the field and also the work of the military surgeon. Many thrills, it is said, are in store for those who witness the exhibition of wall scaling, in which 400 or 500 men carrying their full equipment swarm over a twelve foot wall.

To Test Flying Machines.

Most prominent of all the features of the tournament will be experimental work with the aeroplane. Considerable secrecy surrounds the plans of those in charge of this branch of the tournament program, but it was said the other day that Chicago residents probably will witness unusual demonstrations in the practical use of heavier than air flying machines.

The riding, it is promised by Secretary John R. Young of the tournament committee, himself a West Point graduate, will equal if not surpass anything shown by the best circus or Wild West show on the road. One of the most spectacular features will be the daily pontoon bridge building from the south end of the park to the breakwater, and the construction in the arena of a trestle bridge across an imaginary shallow but unfordable stream. They are attacked during the work, but repel the onslaught, get their supplies and armed force over and then blow up the bridge—all in seven minutes. The attack and defense of a wagon train will be another feature.

There will be twenty performances, and it is figured that to witness every feature it will be necessary to attend at least four separate exhibitions. An innovation welcomed by many will be the absence of raucus voiced hawkers of peanuts, popcorn and soft drinks. The only concessions will be cushions and opera glasses.

MARRIED MEN WERE WEAK

Upland Roaders Take Them Into Camp

The married Men did some great bowling in the second string Thursday night, but otherwise the Upland Roaders put it all over them, winning two games out of three, and leading 1753 to 1617 on totals. T. King was high on singles with 175, but L. Brooks had the best total, 442, an average of 147. It was one of the Makaria league games bowled on the Y. M. C. A. alleys.

RUBE'S SPORTING CHAT

Tommy Gilroy, considered one of the best southpaw twirlers in this section, has been purchased by the Brockton New England league club, where he will undoubtedly be seen during the coming season. Many Quincy fans will remember Gilroy for he pitched a game here for the local league club last summer, defeating Rockland. The game was afterwards played over, the Old Colony league directors finding he had a contract with a Southern league team. Giroux the heavy weight catcher of the champion Deweys will also be seen in the New England league, having signed with Haverhill.

"M. S. G." That puzzle has been solved at last, and the fun the wearers of the little ribbon have had at our expense is at an end. It was Frank Dennett of South Braintree who solved it for us, and for his trouble he has received a five dollar gold piece and our sincere thanks for lifting us from the guessing seat. The name they wish to be known by is, Minnehaha Social Girls.

I am in receipt of a letter from Bjorkland, the manager of the Quincy Old Colony league baseball club, and to say he is confident in landing Quincy at the top of the ladder is putting it mild. His letter is full of life. He tells me he will positively have Murray to catch again, also Lonergan at third, Duggan in left, himself in centre, and possibly our old favorite "Joe" Burke in right. Among the others he is negotiating with is Briggs, the first sacker here last year, and Pieper the Harvard crack for the same position. Matthews the colored wonder formerly of Harvard and Wadsworth the well known former Williams college star infielder. In the box he is after some dandies, among them being Simpson of the U. of P. and last season with Reading, and Johnny Glaze the well known Dartmouth star and brother of Ralph, formerly with the Boston Americans. Bjorkland plans to open the season April 19, with the new Boston team in the United States league, or with Lowney-Mansfield, a fast nine from southeastern Mass. "Al" also is after a game with Fred Lake's Boston Nationals, and hopes to meet the big leaguers April 13 if possible. We all want to show our appreciation of the new manager's efforts. He is on hand when the bell rings, and if we do our share to support the team we will be up with the leaders from the start.

Many lovers of horse-flesh in Quincy and adjoining towns will be pleased to learn that George W. Leavitt, he of horse trotting fame, picks a two year old colt by Cochato 2-11 1-2, to win the futurities the coming summer. Cochato it will be remembered was bred by Col. A. C. Drinkwater at Braintree, and when racing a few months back took first coin in a number of futurities.

Evidently the Concord and Middleboro basket ball teams feared the result of a clash with Quincy High school for both cancelled, leaving the locals without a game at the last minute.

TRAINING FOR UMPIRES.

Few Suggestions Made For Benefit of Arbitrators.

The suggestion that the umpires go south like the ball players and get in shape for the big league season has brought forth the following from one of the fans who doesn't overlook anything:

"In this circuit next season an arbitrator is going to need to step the half mile in about fifty-five seconds and be able to continue the same pace the Marathon route if he has pulled off a particularly raw decision.

"High hurdling should also be a part of the spring training. The average fence height of the parks is about eight feet. The arbitrator should be able to clear this, taking off on either foot, and do the 100 yards to the fence in about nine seconds flat.

"Shadow boxing would play an important part in the training if it was done right. Whenever an ump gets so he can dodge his shadow and leave it intact ten feet away from him and come back and join it before it can overtake him he will be in pretty fair condition to hear the whiz of a pop bottle and beat it out of the way before it dents his dome.

"He should also get his feet so well pickled in brine and formalin that he can smile when one of our peevish infield pets sinks his spikes through his shoes in the midst of any little airy persiflage that may be bandied about the ball yard."

WILLIE JONES ON WARPATH.

Crack Featherweight Now Hotfoot After Near Champions.

Willie Jones, the Brooklyn featherweight, is now hotfoot after the so called near champions in his division. Since his debut into the ring nearly three years ago he has beaten such good men as Charley Goldman, Philly McGovern and Young Britt and has a draw to his credit with Al Delmont, and his first battle, with Patsy Kline, went the limit of ten rounds. Of course there was a diversity of opinion as to the victor, but as Jones had the better of Kline in the first seven rounds and was on his feet at the end of the last round and fighting strongly it is difficult to understand how any one could fail to pick him as the winner.

Jones is willing to hook up with any one that will make a noise like a bout, or, in other words, is willing to meet any boy in the country at 122 pounds. With proper handling this youngster, who is only twenty years old, has a grand future before him and may some day wear the championship crown.

Batters Are "Suckers," Says Smith.

Paderewski Frank Smith of the Chicago Americans says all batters are "suckers." According to the piano juggler, all a pitcher has to do nowadays is to make a bluff at using the spitter. The batter will then surely miss if the ball is shot in straight and high.

FUTURE SPORT EVENTS

Detroit looks for 2,000 skat players at the tourney, June 11 to 13.

The annual tournament of the National Archery Association of the United States will be held in Chicago Aug. 16, 17, 18 and 19.

The Louisville thoroughbred horse racing meeting will open May 10 and continue until June 4. The Kentucky Derby will be run on the opening day.

Stanley Ketchel, the middleweight champion, who has not fought since he was defeated by Jack Johnson, will re-enter the ring to meet Frank Klaus in Pittsburg, March 11.

The championship contests were arranged by the International Cyclists' union in Paris recently for July 17, 21 and 24. They will be held in Brussels. The 1911 championships will be held in Turin.

What She Was.

Flossie and Mabel, touring the country on one of the famous see-it-if-you-can excursions, were tramping the streets of New Orleans. A comely brunette of delicate complexion and stately carriage swung graciously by them.

Flossie, excitedly nodding toward her, whispered loudly: "Oh, look, Mabel! There goes one of them beautiful octagons."

"Huh," exclaimed Mabel, "what a goosie you are, Flossie, dear! That isn't what they call them at all. She is a pronounced nectarine." — Success Magazine.

The Worried Manager.

"What's the trouble?" asked the impresario's friend.

"I can't keep my people down to their own lines of work. The prima donnas will kick and the ballet won't." — Washington Star.

TWO SCHOOLHOUSES WANTED THIS YEAR

School Committee Will Recommend One at Wollaston and One at Montclair.

Men and Women Heard At a Special Meeting.

A special meeting of the School Committee was held Friday evening, called by the chairman to take action on a resolve passed at the last meeting of the City Council. This resolve which was introduced by Councilman Moir, asked the School Committee to inform the Council as to which school building should in their opinion be erected first that at Wollaston in Ward Five or one in the so called Montclair district in Ward Six.

While it was not announced that there was to be a public hearing, there were a number present from Wollaston and Montclair and they were allowed to address the committee. Councilmen Smith and Gardner were also present.

All the members of the School Committee were present with the exception of Dr. Hunting.

F. J. Kessler, president of the Montclair Improvement Association, said that the School Committee of last year went over the whole matter and saw the urgent need of a building at Montclair to relieve the Quincy, Massachusetts Fields and Wollaston districts. The committee recommended a building in the geographical centre. The location of the building had been thoroughly gone into. We have 284 pupils. It was then thought that a 6 or 8 room building would be large enough, but it would only be a matter of a short time before a 12-room building would be needed. The lack of school accommodations had retarded the growth of that section.

In reply to a question, he stated that the line extended to North Central avenue.

Mr. Brown said he was not present to debate the question. The school district extended from North Central avenue to the Milton line on the west side of the tracks. The children of this section now have to walk a mile to school. He thought that an 8-room building would be inadequate and he believed it poor policy to put up anything smaller than a 12-room building. Last year the School Committee looked the ground over and decided there was great need of a school building at Montclair and the City Council had practically purchased the land. New houses would be built immediatly if a school building was erected.

Mr. Kessler, speaking again, said that a site at the so called Pines had been considered, but that would be expensive as new streets would have to be laid out, and the sewer and water extended. It was also a dangerous place for children around gravel pits. From a financial standpoint the lot selected was the best.

Ex-Councilman Walter S. Pinkham speaking for the Wollaston building, said his district had no quarrel with Montclair. We all recognize that they ought to have a building. He was afraid to have his children attend the Wollaston building. It was a fire trap and unsanitary. The old Quincy schoolhouse which was declared unsafe was built after the Wollaston schoolhouse. He thought that the Central avenue district was nearer the Wollaston school than the proposed Montclair school. He agreed that Montclair should have a school but did not think the needs required a twelve-room building.

Amos T. Leavitt said he had visited the Wollaston school and was amazed at the conditions he found. They were such that would not be tolerated in any private house. He was surprised that people having children had not taken it up before. He would not feel safe with children in the upper roms. He thought a school was needed at Montclair and it was due the citizens of that section, but it was not feasible to have a large building unless the city can afford to build two large buildings.

Herbert S. Barker, speaking as a resident of Ward Six, said he did not know this was to be a public meeting. He wanted to state that the Montclair school would relieve the Atlantic, Massachusetts Fields and Wollaston districts. We feel that this school would have been built but for some error last year. All of a sudden people of Wollaston discover their 35 year old building is a fire trap. It looks as though they are trying to ride over us.

Mrs. W. S. Pinkham said this was not all of a sudden. Wollaston has suffered for years, but could not get a building as the city was not in a condition financially. We have been very patient for a number of years.

Mr. McNabb of Montclair said he did not send his children to school this winter on account of the distance. He had friends who would build at Montclair if there was a school handy.

Albert N. Murray said there was no feeling on the part of Wollaston. All are impressed and admire the work Ward Six is doing. There is no question but what we need a building in Wollaston. It is sadly needed. We are willing that our taxes should be increased for the sake of a new building.

Mr. Barker said there was need of both buildings. If Wollaston has a large building perhaps Montclair will not need as large a one.

Councilman Gardner could see no way out of it except for two buildings.

At this point the hearing was closed and the speakers departed.

The School Committee then took up the question. Mr. Curtis said he had visited the Wollaston school and was astounded at the condition. It was a disease producing trap; a fire trap; and good breeding ground for tuberculosis. He hoped there would be no contentions.

Mr. Barker—We are already on record for a Montclair building. It seemed to him that the School Committee had already declared itself. Montclair should be built first.

Chairman Miller suggested that the School Board ask for an 8-room building for Montclair and a 12-room

MRS. FORD THE VICTIM

Killed on Railroad Near West Street Crossing

It was not until late Friday afternoon that the body of the unfortunate woman killed by the cars on the Granite branch in the morning was positively identified as that of Mrs. Mary Ford of 7 Rail street, West Quincy.

For a time it was thought that the body was one of two women who reside near the West Quincy depot, but Officer Hinchon, who made an investigation, found both alive and well. Shortly after noon a young man visited the undertaking rooms of E. D. Barrett on Canal street, where the body had been taken, and practicaly identified it as that of his aunt, Mrs. Ford, who had been missing since morning. He was not positive, however, and left for Wollaston for Mrs. Ford's son Dennis. He and some of the other children arrived in the afternoon, and then the identification was made positive.

They said that Mrs. Ford left home in the morning to go to the bank. Just why she walked down the track they could not understand. Residents of that section say that they had frequently seen her walking down the track. Just how she came to be struck is not known, but it is supposed that she stepped from one of the paths onto the track directly in front of the approaching train.

When Medical Examiner Jones arrived and searched for clews to the woman's identity he only found a five cent piece tied in the corner of a handkerchief. Mrs. Ford was the widow of Dennis Ford and leaves two sons and three daughters.

In 1865 he married Lydia Foster Bumpus daughter of the late C. C. Bumpus, who with a daughter and two sons survive him. Of a quiet retiring nature his friends were legion, as the attendance at the funeral and the floral tributes bore witness.

$12,000,00 AWARDED

Big Verdict for Miss Garrity In Suit Against Railroad

Miss Margaret P. Garrity of West Quincy was awarded a verdict of $12,000 yesterday in her suit against the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., which has occupied the attention of the Norfolk Superior court a whole week. It was one of the largest awards ever made, in a tort case in Norfolk county.

The suit was a result of a rear-end collision on Nov. 25, 1908, at the South Boston station of the Midland division of the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad, when the 6.16 P. M. train out of the South station was run into by the 6.22 train.

The trial opened on Friday, Feb. 25, and consumed the entire time of the court until late yesterday afternoon. In all 10 physicians took the stand to explain what "pernicious anemia" is. Drs. Hunting, Reardon, Sawin, Larrabee and Cushing appeared for the plaintiff and Drs. Hughes, Jackson, Donovan, Reynolds, Garlan and Graves for the defendant. Mrs. Carr, as instructor in massage, also testified for the plaintiff.

A pathetic feature, says the Globe, was the presence of Miss Garrity in the courtroom. She was in such feeble condition that she had to be almost carried to a chair in the witness stand.

It was brought out that by the collision Miss Garrity was thrown forward and then backwards and afterwards into the aisle of the coach. According to the testimony symptoms of nervous shock were followed by a disturbance of the whole digestive tract. Later the symptoms became suspicious of pernicious anemia and blood tests subsequently confirmed this diagnosis.

The real issue was whether the shock of such an accident and such injuries as Miss Garrity had received, and attending disturbances, would be a contributing cause to pernicious anemia.

The physicians testifying for both sides agreed that the cause of pernicious anemia is unknown and that all they can do is to associate its presence with other conditions, such as a dilation of the heart and enlargement of the liver. Some of the best authorities on blood tests testified.

The counsel were John W. McAnarney, Jeremiah J. McAnarney and Thomas F. McAnarney for the plaintiff and John L. Hall, Joseph Wentworth and Richard J. Cotter for the defendant.

The case was fought out on scientific lines, the leading blood experts of Tufts College and the City Hospital of Boston appearing for Miss Garrity, while those of Harvard College and the Massachusetts General Hospital appeared for the railroad. The McAnarney brothers have been unusually successful at this term of court, this being their second large verdict. The first was in the case of Carroll vs. the Fore River Shipbuilding Co.

Miss Spear's class in Kindergarten which opens Wednesday, Mar. 9, will be in charge of Miss Katherine Sydney Dowsley a graduate of Miss Lucy Wheelock's Kindergarten Training School. Miss Dowsley is an experienced teacher and comes highly recommended.

OFFICER LYONS DEAD

Passed Away Unexpectedly at Carney Hospital

Officer William S. Lyons of the Quincy police force passed away early this morning at the Carney hospital, Boston. Officer Lyons was taken ill three weeks ago, and was off duty for four or five days. He then returned to duty, but two days later was again obliged to give up work. Last Saturday he was taken to the hospital, where it was thought an operation would be necessary. None was performed, however, as he seemed to be improving. Last night he had a sudden turn for the worse. He failed rapidly.

Officer Lyons was born in Quincy Jan. 23, 1866. He was educated in the public schools. Then he learned the granite cutters' trade, at which he was employed for a number of years. In the spring of 1897 he was appointed a special police officer, and on April 7, 1902, he was appointed a regular patrolman by ex-Mayor Bryant. During the past few years he has been on the day beat in the Fore River district. His home was on Miller street, West Quincy. He leaves a widow, two sons and three daughters.

Several new draughtsmen have been added recently to the force of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company and some rush work has been done this week.

POLYGAMY CASE IN COURT

Eliza McIntire Said to Have Two Husbands

A woman named Eliza McIntire was arrested in Boston this morning by Inspector McKay, on a warrant charging her with polygamy. It is claimed that on Oct. 15, 1909, the woman came to Quincy with a man named John J. Holland and secured a marriage certificate. In the application for the certificate the woman gave her name as Eliza Goode, aged 36 years and stated that it was her first marriage. Holland gave his name as John J. Holland, aged 37 years, his occupation that of a carpenter. Both claimed their residence as Quincy. Armed with the certificate, they journeyed arm in arm across City Square where William M. Marden, Esq., joined them in wedlock. After a loving embrace the pair left for Boston where they have since resided.

It is now claimed that the woman was never divorced from her first husband, Michael McIntire, and that he is still in the land of the living. The woman claims that she married McIntire many years ago and believed him to be dead. The woman was arraigned in court and was held in $1,000 until Monday for a hearing.

Important Announcement

BY JOHNSON BROS.

Why and How We Shall Reduce Our Prices April 1st, 1910.

AFTER a careful study of the credit business for a number of years, and the same of the cash business for the past two years, we have decided that for the mutual benefit of the buyer and seller, beginning April 1, we shall turn our business into a strictly cash business. Our experience and close study of the wants of the people for the past thirty-five years has put us in a position to judge, and we have decided that low prices and high quality can be obtained in no other way than by a strictly cash proposition, as a credit store cannot possibly compete successfully with a store that is handled on a strictly cash basis, as there is a great expense attached to a credit business, which we wish to curtail, and our curtailing means much lower prices to the trade. Under the credit system there is always a proportion of bad bills which must be taken care of in our scale of prices. Under the credit system you are helping to pay the bills of those who do not pay themselves. The method of sending teams to take orders daily is very costly. We figure it costs us eight cents per call. If our clerks make from one hundred fifty to two hundred calls daily the expense of these calls must be added to the prices of the goods. The salaries of bookkeepers and other expenses of accounting and collections must also be taken care of. We propose to eliminate these items of expense, and correspondingly reduce the prices of our goods. We will deliver orders sent to us by mail, telephone or left at the store, and we intend to show the people of Quincy and surrounding towns what a really cash store can do for them. We intend to place on sale a certain day of each week some staple article from our stock at absolute cost, something different each time. Remember, one of the most important things in this change will be the keeping up of our quality for which we have so long been popular. We shall try to give even better quality if such a thing is possible, and we shall hammer the prices down hard—for cash.

We will pay cash for our goods, by so doing get all the cash discounts from the wholesale trade, and we intend that our trade shall benefit by it, and by owning our own plant it will not be possible for any concern in our line of business to undersell us, when you take into consideration our reputation for quality. We have one of the best equipped stores in our city, also the cooperation of experienced clerks which all go to make Johnson Bros. an ideal firm with which to trade. All orders will be delivered with care and promptness by our new Automobile system, which we will place at your service and which is being practised by nearly all the up to date concerns throughout the country. Customers not caring to pay cash every time they come, or send to the store can if they wish make a deposit with us, and when they have taken up all their deposit will be notified. At the prices we shall ask and the quality of our goods, we must insist on a strictly cash transaction, for at the present age of high prices a credit store can do nothing to lessen the expense of living for its customers, as the increasing expense of carrying on a credit business places low prices out of the question.

The credit dealer must realize a larger percent of profit than a cash dealer, as his expense account is more than double, so we decided that the only way we can help our customers and all careful buyers, is to establish a strictly up to date cash store, for there is no other way that we can afford to cut the prices for the mutual benefit of all. Hoping that this will meet with thoughtful and willing cooperation, we remain,

Respectfully,

JOHNSON BROS.' MARKET,

HONESTY IN

Pussy Willows and robins indicate that spring is near.

Automobilists are cranking up ready for the big show in Boston which opens tonight.

There should be no exclusive days for the raising of the National flag. When Quincy has a celebration on a "Merchants' week" we hope all citizens will cooperate, and at least fly a flag if they have one.

Most people have hard work getting money but it takes a man like John D. Rockefeller, to make a business of getting rid of it. Just think of having money enough to organize a company to distribute it.

Who wouldn't play ball? Ty Cobb has signed with the Detroit American League Baseball club for $9,000 yearly for three years. It's better than being a bookkeeper in a Cambridge bank.

Over 200 hundred women in Brookline braved the elements Wednesday and voted for the school committee of that town. Quincy women evidently do not care to vote for none avail themselves of the opportunity of even this small say so, in city affairs.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

Summing up the case of President Mellen vs. the Commonwealth of Massachusetts as it now stands, the New Haven Journal-Courier puts the matter forcefully as folows:

The disposition to criticise Mr. Mellen for a sharp tongue, and to make it appear that he is in a defiant mood, is scarcely convincing. There is a principle involved in the controversy, and it is a principle in which the state of Connecticut is interested. It is not altogether Mr. Mellen's controversy. That should be remembered. Connecticut declines to admit the approval of Massachusetts as essential.

Exactly. Were there nothing but sharpness to the statements of President Mellen they would have no lash to them and call out no remonstrance, but the elements of sound sense and the principles of good business lose nothing when driven at an unwilling audience with a keen appreciation of the value of appropriate phraseology and an unusual ability to apply it. It is not altogether Mr. Mellen's controversy, as the Journal-Courier says, but he can state Connecticut's side of it, and his own. We will allow him to present the propositions.—Bridgeport Standard.

PAY RAISED AT LUDLOW

Voluntary Increase Ranging From Five to Ten Percent

Ludlow, Mass., March 5.—The Ludlow Associates, whose mills here figured in a strike some months ago that brought forth wholesale evictions of striking employes and their families, gave their 1800 operatives a distinct surprise by announcing an increase of wages of from 5 to 10 percent.

The additional promise is also made the operatives that if business holds good further increases will be voluntarily given in the wage scale in three months' time.

When the employes were paid last evening they were greatly surprised to find a statement from the company announcing the change, coupled with addition to their pay in each instance, the matter having been quietly taken up and adopted by the officials a few days ago.

SWOPE'S WILL PROBATED

Man Whose Death Is Subject of Investigation Left $4,000,000

Kansas City, March 5.—Colonel Thomas H. Swope owned property in this county valued at $3,433,700, according to his will, which was probated here. Property owned in other states increases the total value of the estate to almost $4,000,000.

The largest bequests of the property located here were made to the unmarried children of Mrs. Logan O. Swope, sister-in-law of Colonel Swope, each of whom was given $410,000. Mrs. Frances Hyde, wife of Dr. B. C. Hyde, was given $276,000.

Chrisman Swope, a nephew, who died since the death of Colonel Swope, was a beneficiary to the extent of $410,000, but his share will now be divided equally among the other heirs. About $100,000 was given to charitable institutions.

ALIMONY OF $10,000,000

Mrs. Astor Is Granted an Absolute Decree of Divorce

New York, March 5.—Mrs. Ava W. Astor was granted a final and absolute decree of divorce from Colonel John J. Astor in the supreme court at White Plaints by Justice Mills, following the granting of the interlocutory decree to her a little over three months ago. Astor is prohibited from marrying again during her lifetime, but she is permitted to marry again if she chooses and also to resume her maiden name.

It was reported in court that $300,000 a year had been settled on Mrs. Astor, and that $10,000,000 was set aside for her before the papers were signed.

Neither Mrs. Astor nor her husband were in court. She was represented by Hugh Bayne, while Astor was represented by Lewis C. Ledyard.

BLACK HAND THREAT FAILED TO OPERATE

Police Get New York Man Who Bites at Bait Set For Him

New York, March 5.—Attempts to extort $100 in cash from J. H. Giebelhaus, a baker with a string of stores in the upper section of the city, led to the appearance in police headquarters of Samuel Rosenthal, 30 years old, to undergo the third degree.

The baker received a letter signed "Black Hand." It demanded that he put $100 in cash on the step of a store adjoining his, adding that failure to comply would result in his death. He notified the police. A marked dollar bill was placed in an envelope and put on the stoop. The police declare that Rosenthal appeared and picked it up. Detectives McCahill and Kerr were on the watch and arrested him.

The police say they saw Rosenthal open the envelope and scrutinize its contents. He would not discuss the matter with the detectives. He said he was an iron worker and had been out of work a long time.

PRODUCES BANK BOOKS

Allds Defies His Accusers to Show That He Received Bribe

Albany, March 5.—Senator Allds, on the witness stand at the senate bribery investigation, voluntarily opened his bank books, and the records of his business transactions for the past nine years, and defied his accusers to find there anything to strengthen their assertion that in 1901 he took a $1000 bribe for influencing legislation.

The impression obviously intended by Allds' exhibition was that he had nothing to conceal. He told the senate that about $24,000 was the limit of his wealth, and that this was invested almost entirely in industrial corporations.

GETS TERM IN SING SING

Former Magistrate Furlong Receives Sentence For Bribery

New York, March 5.—Convicted of bribery, former City Magistrate Furlong stood before the rail in the supreme court and heard Judge Kapper sentence him to Sing Sing for an indeterminate term, the maximum of which is two years and a month and the minimum one year. Judge Kapper said:

"This defendant's conviction forfeits his office. It forever disqualifies him from holding office and deprives him of his citizenship. These facts coupled with the recommendation of the jury for mercy, induce me to impose this sentence."

Pastor Charged With Forgery

building for Wollaston. He thought there was some politics in the question.

Mr. O'Hara thought that would be evading the question in the resolve of the City Council. We may as well decide politics or no politics. He would favor both buildings if they could be had.

Mr. Barker did not feel that there was any politics in it. He thought the proposition of Chairman Miller a good one.

Dr. Bushnell did not see how the committee could answer that way, as it would evade the question asked.

Mr. Burke—The school committee has already recommended both buildings. If the city can afford it both should be built. It was a question of finance. If not, let the City Council decide which.

Mr. O'Hara—If the conditions of one district are more pressing than the other we should say which.

Mr. Burke believed that the City Council should consider both at one time.

Mr. Wadsworth said we want two if possible but we should stand for Montclair which was asked for last year, and then get Wollaston if possible. If we rescind the action of last year people will say we do not know what we want. We should stand flat-footed and say what we want. If we fool around we may not get either.

Mr. O'Hara did not see how we could be called inconsistent when we did not know the condition of Wollaston.

Mr. Wadsworth—The way to proceed is to ask for the Montclair first, If we dodge the issue we will not get anything.

Dr. Bushnell said the same conditions existed last year at Wollaston as today. He was in favor of Wollaston but questioned if we should go back on what had been done.

Mr. Wadsworth was called to the chair.

Chairman Miller was surprised at such an argument. Next year we must have a new Adams school. It would be poor business to build one and not two. The condition of Wollaston was not considered last year. He believed if Wollaston did not get a building none would be built this year.

Dr. Curtis—It is not a question of Ward Five or Ward Six but of solving the school problem. They should go together.

Chairman Miller then moved that the request of the Council be that the School Committee recommends a 12-room building for Wollaston, and an 8-room building for Montclair, the later so constructed that it can be added to.

Dr. Bushnell contended that did answer the question asked.

Chairman Miller—We asked for a new Adams building four or five years ago. Should we now say, give us the Adams first?

The motion of Chairman Miller was adopted. Dr. Bushnell voting no.

MERCILESS THRUST FAILS TO JAR WIDOW

Lawyer Hints That Mrs. Glover Was Accused of Murder

Cambridge, Mass., March 5.—"Do you know of anything that transpired on Nov. 20, 21, 22 or 23 that would lead Hattie Le Blanc to say that you killed Clarence F. Glover?"

This was the question that Attorney Scott hurled at Mrs. Lillian M. Glover on the witness stand in the probate court.

And in a tone of voice that she might have used in answering a query as to the time of day, the imperturbable witness replied calmly: "I don't know of anything."

In less time than it takes to tell, the thundering tones of the lawyer had made the startling accusation by inference. The brief seconds of silence that followed the ending of the question seemed minutes. Everyone was awaiting for the pregnant answer.

Then, without changing her attitude, without more than a barely imperceptible gulping, Mrs. Glover made answer and the suspense was over. There was a momentary buzz among the spectators, a few whispered words between counsel, and Scott announced that he had finished his examination of the witness.

ALEX. C. SMITH.

With the final ceremonies of interment at Mount Wollaston cemetery Feb. 28, was closed a chapter in the history of the connection of Alex. C. Smith with Quincy, its granite industry and the Granite Cutters' Association, worthy of more than passing interest. He was a model citizen, clean in character, alert in embracing opportunity, aggressive for moral advancement and keenly sensible towards the general betterment of the city. He was a good mechanic.

As a member of the Granite Cutters' Association his name and fame as an active spirit are household words not limited to the city of Quincy. He came to America from Scotland when but a young man, and except for a few, short intervals, lived in Quincy ever after arriving on the western hemisphere. By instinct he was a union man, believing at all times that collective bargaining was good economics, consequently, he was found in the meetings of Quincy branch, G. C. I. A. as often as they were held, invariably in office, and for a long time in the position of its president. He was attentive to whatever duty was assigned to him, and his earnestness in carrying out what he believed to be proper was more than half of his argument. The shorter work-day gave him opportunities for reading and for study, which enabled him, with good memory, to easily carry information on the general affairs of the world in his mind, making his conversation agreeable, interesting and fluent.

During the great lockout in the granite industries, during the panic in the early 90's, he was a central figure in the situation in eastern Massachusetts, cheering those in distress, admonishing those who required it and all through the great struggle speaking the proper word at the proper time, to hasten, as far as an influential man coud hasten, an adjustment of the dislocated conditions then existing in the granite industry. Later on, when the headquarters of the Granite Cutters' Association was again located in Quincy, his colleagues promptly honored him by election as International President, and which postion he held until he resigned owing to accepting employment in another city.

As presiding officer of Quincy branch he knew parliamentary procedure and seldom gave a decision calling for objection from any one of the large numbers and different nationalities and with his mature judgment, clear insight to trade and Association affairs, his presidency of the International Associaton was as dignified as his attendance at the meetings was prompt.

It is too bad that the great white plague should claim such victims, robbing men of activity in the prime of life, cities of their best citizens and Associations of their most active members, and in thus noting the passing of A. C. Smith the men of his trade, including employers, may well study the working conditions of men at the trade so that when they leave us it can truly be said their death was not hastened because of trade conditions.

NEW CHURCH FOR ATLANTIC.

The men of Memorial Congregational church and society are to have a banquet in the church Monday evening and will start at that time on a week's campaign to raise funds for a new church.

The new church idea was first started about six years ago, but the time was not ripe to carry it out then yet the thought has remained in the minds of the most interested people of Atlantic.

During the last few years the church has taken new life, and the interest has been growing steadily in the community. People have contributed liberally for its support, and are ready to help put up a suitable building.

The Sunday school fills all the room available, and classes for older scholars could not be started under the present crowded conditions.

The church has always been hampered in its social work, while the demand for such work has been growing steadily.

Plans have been drawn for a neat attractive building which will meet the needs of this rapidly growing section.

The solicitors hope that the response will be so hearty in Atlantic with the outside aid to $5,000 promised if they raise a like sum, and with what the church has already on hand that the new church can be dedicated free of debt. The plan of raising money will be similar to that of the Y. M. C. A. allowing one year to pay the pledges.

United States Asked to Mediate

You can add to your beauty and take years from your looks through the use of this wonderful preparation. It not only brings back the original color to the hair, but adds a lustre which is highly pleasing.

Liberal Sample Free

This clear, pure preparation is wonderful in its action. Its results are quick and complete. It restores gray or faded hair to its original color in a natural, healthful way in from 6 to 14 days.

The hair can be washed, curled with a hot iron or put to any test and you will find that the color is in the hair through and through and is lasting and natural.

Do not confuse Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Restorer with Hair Dyes. The market is crowded with troublesome Two Bottle Dyes and poisonous Sugar of Lead preparations, which you can recognize by the white or yellow sediment which must be "shaken before using" and which are not only greasy, sticky and disgusting to use, but in addition bring about worse conditions than existed before the treatment.

There's no use trying to conceal the fact that your hair is gray or faded if the results reveal the truth. Gray hair or faded hair is much preferable to thin hair with three or four different shades.

Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Restorer is different than other preparations because it cures the cause. It's neither greasy nor sticky and is as pure as water. It's pleasant to use, easy to apply, healthful in its work and lasting in its results.

Just write me a letter, tell me the exact color your hair originally was, or better still, send me a lock of it. I will send you absolutely free of all charges a sample bottle in a plain package which will in no way reveal the nature of the contents and with it I will send, also free, a special comb for applying it.

Use the Restorer on a lock of your hair. Follow our simple directions for applying it and you will then know beyond question that Mary T. Goldman Gray Hair Restorer is all I claim it to be and more. Not once in thousands of tests has it failed.

One full size bottle, price $1, is sufficient in most cases to restore the original color. Send for free sample today—right now while you think of it. Address.

LOCKHART HELD IN $30,000

Charged With Aiding and Abetting Coleman In Thefts

Boston, March 5.—Wilson W. Lockhart of Belmont was arraigned before Commissioner Hayes on a complaint of aiding and abetting George W. Coleman, bookkeeper of the National City bank of Cambridge, with the misapplication of $3000 of the funds of that bank on Dec. 17, 1909.

Lockhart is charged with unlawfully, wilfully and fraudulently misapplying funds of the bank for his and Coleman's own use and benefit, with intent thereby to injure and defraud the bank. A plea of not guilty was entered and the defendant was held in $30,000 for a hearing next Monday.

Lockhart was taken back to the cage in the marshal's office, after the arraignment, and later removed to the Charles street jail.

DIAMOND AN EDUCATOR

Even Girls Should Indulge In Baseball, Says Physical Expert

Indianapolis, March 5.—Baseball should be an important part of the education of children, and every schoolboy, and perhaps every schoolgirl, should play the game.

This is the opinion of William A. Slecher, director of physical training in the public schools of Philadelphia, expressed in the conference of hygiene of the National Education association in this city.

Five-Cent Loaf Remains

Boston, March 5.—The bill which cuts out the 5-cent loaf has been turned down by the legislative committee on mercantile affairs by a unanimous report. The measure attempted to create new bread standards.

AN UP-TO-DATE DRUGGIST

says it is surprising how many old-fashioned remedies are being used, which goes to show that it is hard to improve some of our grandmothers' old time-tried remedies. For instance, for keeping the hair dark, soft and glossy, nothing equaling our grandmothers' "sage tea" has ever been discovered. Although, by the addition of sulphur and other ingredients, this old-fashioned brew has been made more effective as a scalp tonic and color restorer. Nowadays when our hair comes out or gets faded or gray, instead of going to the garden or garret for herbs and making the "tea" ourselves, we simply go to the nearest drug store and ask for a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur. This preparation is sold by all leading druggists for 50 cents and $1 a bottle, or is sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.

LETTERS OF PUBLIC INTEREST

THAT FLAG EPISODE

Arthur W. Newcomb Explains Actions on Fore River Day

Editor of Daily Ledger:

I wish to correct false statements made in your paper of March 2, regarding a flag-staff, etc., situated on the old school house lot, on East Howard street.

I have a permit to erect and maintain a flag staff on the lot. I also have a flag, my own personal property, which I purchased with any assistance from anyone.

I have raised this flag for five years on recognized flag days. The day in question was not one of these days, and I did not raise the flag.

Nothing was said to me in the morning about this, and in the afternoon I prevented a flag from being raised as it seemed best to keep to the flag day list as followed from the beginning.

Yours Respectfully.
Arthur W. Newcomb.

Quincy, Mar. 5, 1910.

EAST BRAINTREE.

The meeting of Hose 1 was held Tuesday evening and the Hook and Ladder Co. Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Gutterson are home from a five weeks' trip to the Isthmus of Panama.

There will be a musical and literary entertainment at the M. E. church Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Epworth league.

Without doubt the large circle of friends and acquaintances of F. O. Whitmarsh will be pleased to know that after the severe relapse of the past week he is rapidly recovering and will soon be about again as usual.

At the M. E. church tomorrow morning the sacrament of the Lord's supper will be administered by the pastor. At the evening service there will be a roll call of the church members, all members and friends of the church are cordially invited to be present.

The monthly business meeting and social of Epworth League of the M. E. church was held Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Smith, Hayward street. The entertainment consisted of roll call of members. Each member responded by a song, a reading or the telling of a story. A pleasant evening was enjoyed.

Despite the disagreeable weather, last Wednesday evening about 150 people sat down to one of the best suppers ever given by the Social club. The supper, which was held in the Banquet room, was provided by a committee of young people under the chairmanship of Mrs. A. D. Tirrell, assisted by some members of the Christian Endeavor Society. After the upper hour a social half hour followed in the Lecture room, where after a piano duet by Miss Martha Loud and Miss Anna Cady, a farce in one act, entitled "The Two Puddifoots" was given. Miss Helen Richards was in charge of the production of the farce and the characters were as follows:

The Rev. S. K. B. Perkins the honored pastor and son of Rev. Jonas Perkins, who, more than any other pastor, is identified with the growth and development of the Union Church has been invited to be present and participate in the centennial observance to be held on the afternoon of Sunday, March 13th. An invitaton has also been extended to Rev. Sidney K. Perkins of York Village, Me., to be present and to preach in the pulpit of the Union Church in the morning service. Rev. Sidney K. Perkins is an honored pastor and grandson of the Rev. Jonas Perkins. An invitation is extended to all the pastors and officers of all the Braintree and Weymouth churches to be present on that occasion.

"The papers say that Queen Alexandra's hobby is clocks."

"Yes, and I noticed the other day that one of her royal sisters is very fond of fine poultry."

"Well, I fancy it requires a much higher degree of intelligence to set a hen than to set a clock."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mrs. James A. Flye of Plain street whose husband passed away this week after a long and painful illness.

At a regular meeting of Blue Hill lodge No. 208, Ancient Order f United Workmen, held last Wednesday evening, no item of business transacted gave those present so much genuine satisfaction and pleasure as that of conferring a past master workman's badge and jewel upon I. Wendell Gammons. The presentation was made by Orrin W. Hollis, himself a past master and a member of the grand lodge.

From two until five last Saturday afternoon the Town hall held a merry party of little ones who had assembled for the annual children's party for the children of the St. Francis parish. Because of late hours and the crowded condition of the hall the youngsters are barred from the annual coffee party but are later given a party for themselves and the grownups are kept at home. The affair was a huge success and was under the direction of Miss Josephine Colbert the popular school teacher, assisted by ladies of the parish. Miss Gertrude Young of Frederick road presided in a very efficient manner at the piano. Cake and ice cream were served after the opening concert by the children and then Cuff's orchestra played for about an hour for them to dance.

SUSANNAH TUFTS CHAPTER.

Monday, Feb. 28, Susannah Tufts chapter, D. A. R., met at Hotel Buckminster, Beacon street, Boston, with Mrs. Sarah Howell, one of its members. Considering the weather a large number assembled ,and it was an extremely pretty social gathering. Considerable business was transacted. Among other things ways and means or raising funds were considered. It was voted to have a birthday box, each member at the monthly meeting in which her birthday occurs to place within at least as many pennies as she is years old.

A Yahr Markt was also voted to be held at our next meeting, March 28th with Mrs. A. G. Bowditch of East Braintree. This in other words is a yearly market. Each member to contribute articles or perhaps things she has tired of; vases, books, etc., cooked food or candy. It is hoped the ladies will contribute generously and buy freely at this meeting as it is important the money should be sent to the Hindman, as soon as possible. Mrs. O. W. Charles is to be the speaker at the next meeting.

—The telephonic delivery of letters on Sunday is one of the latest of London's postal schemes. A special envelope serves to notify the postal clerks at the office of destination that they are to break its seal and telephone the contents to the person addressed. This plan, if adopted here, should not be limited to Sundays. It would be seemingly be a great convenience seven days in the week. It would save the expense of long distance telephony, while getting some measure of its results. Interesting possibilities lie in the linking up of our existing agencies of communication.—Boston Transcript.

WADE H. ELLIS
Formerly Attorney General of Ohio

TAFT DID NOT CHOOSE ELLIS

President's Statement Clears the Political Air In Ohio

REPUBLICANS ARE PLEASED

Would Free Buckeye State Politics From National Complications—Harmon Recognized as Man of Presidential Size—Failure to Defeat Him In Gubernatorial Fight Might Injure the Administration

Washington, March 5.—President Taft's formal denial of his responsibility for the selection of Wade H. Ellis as chairman of the Republican executive committee of Ohio, as made yesterday in the president's letter to United States Marshal Davis at Cleveland, has been received with satisfaction by prominent Republicans here.

When the White House allowed it to go uncontradicted over the country that Ellis had been chosen by the president to lead the Republican forces in trying to defeat Governor Harmon for re-election, the far-sighted politicians saw at once that a mistake had been made. Harmon represents the only line of consistent opposition to the present tariff system on which the Democrats ever have carried the country, and as a personal figure he is rated by many as of presidential size.

When President Taft apparently selected a man in Washington to direct Republican politics in Ohio in the coming campaign, he immediately raised the issue in Ohio from local to national importance. It was said freely here that while the defeat of Harmon would strengthen Taft materially in Ohio and with the country, the failure to defeat him might have a disastrous effect upon Taft and the national Republican party. For this reason the apparent interference of the president in Ohio was obviously a mistake.

The president's friends are saying today that his position has not changed and that the letter to Davis simply confirms what his position has been all along. They say that the president's statement issued when Ellis was first selected was intended to indicate only an acquiescence in the selection of Ellis by the Ohio leaders and that the president did not initiate the movement to retire Ellis from his position as chief trust buster of the administration and place him in control in Ohio. His letter to Davis, they say, is only a confirmation of what they have understood all along.

Whether or not this is so, it is evident that the president has realized the necessity of divorcing his own interests from a too close relation with the outcome in Ohio.

He does not claim to be a politician and, as the Ohio episode demonstrates, the big politicians of the party are not yet sure that he can aid them in framing up a situation so that they can win with it.

The Ohio Republicans are by no means settled as to their choice of a candidate for governor. The lightning is playing more or less about the heads of James R. Garfield and Nicholas Longworth. As one Ohio man put it, "Garfield means Pinchot. When Pinchot's stock is up, Garfield's stock is up. When it is down, Garfield's stock goes down."

Life Sentence For Rich Man

Columbia, S. C., March 5.—W. T. Jones, one of the wealthiest planters in the state, will have to serve a life sentence in the state penitentiary for the murder of his wife. The supreme court affirmed the judgment of the lower court.

PRISON FOR COUNCILMEN

Others Implicated In Pittsburg Graft Must Pay Penalty

Pittsburg, March 5.—The superior court of Pennsylvania, sitting in Williamsport, affirmed unanimously decisions of the Allegheny county courts in the graft cases involving three former Pittsburg councilmen, a banker, a hotel keeper, a broker and a capitalist. This means the sentences imposed become operative in ten days. The men affected and their sentences are:

William Brand, councilman, eighteen months in penitentiary; Joseph C. Wasson, councilman, eighteen months; John F. Klein, councilman, two years on one charge of bribery and eighteen months on the charge of conspiracy; William W. Ramsey, banker, eighteen months; Henry M. Bolger, hotel keeper, two years; Charles S. Cameron, president of the Tube City railroad, two years; Charles R. Richardson, broker, fifteen months.

BY WIRE-TAPPING GAME

West Virginian Induced to Part With $20,000 In Cold Cash

New York, March 5.—Following a story told to them by Walter W. Gwynn of Huntington, W. Va., the police are searching for a band of wire tappers who swindled him out of $20,000 and led him to three cities in order to do it.

Gwynn said he was first robbed of $8000 in Detroit, that he then went to Boston with the band and there dropped $2000, and that finally he came to New York and gave up $10,000.

"I don't know what made me give up my money," he said. "They unfolded a plan to win on horse racing by tapping wires and I went into it. When we didn't win at first I was persuaded that some mistake had been made and so I kept it up."

PROOFS OF HAVING REACHED THE POLE

Will Be Asked of Peary by House Naval Committee

Washington, March 5.—Robert E. Peary will be called upon to appear before a sub-committee of the house committee on naval affairs and submit proofs of having discovered the North Pole. The members of the committee wish to be absolutely sure that the Pole was discovered by him before they bring a bill into the house.

Professors Titman and Gannett, two members of the National Geographic society, will appear before the committee and explain the manner in which they reached the decision that Peary did reach the Pole. The next step will be for the committee to get in touch with scientists not connected with the geographic society and submit to them the evidence given by Gannett and Titman.

These scientists will then be requested to be present when Peary appears before the committee to explain his route. It the evidence proves satisfactory, the committee will report a bill to the house.

CALLS ON BANK DIRECTOR

District Attorney Hears He Was Fleeced by Fake Faro Gang

Boston, March 5.—The name of another officer of the looted National City bank of Cambridge has been mentioned in connection with the victims of the faro bank swindle. George W. Gale, director of the defunct bank, is the person named.

District Attorney Pelletier has received information that Gale was fleeced. His information apparently is of sufficient authenticity to cause him to request Gale to come to the district attorney's office and tell whether or not he had any experience with the gang.

Gale in an interview denies that he lost a cent in the scheme.

LUCKY POLICE CAPTAIN

Gets Dinner and Gem Worth $200 For Eighty Cents

New York, March 5.—Fred Carzon, a Harlem police captain, was taking luncheon in an up-town restaurant when he suddenly bit on something hard in an oyster patty. Extracting the substance, Carzon was amazed to find that it was a pearl, and upon sending it to a jeweler he learned that it was worth at least $200.

"I always was fond of patties," commented the captain, as he paid an 80-cent check.

STOLE $1200 FROM HUB BANK

Thieving Bank Teller Confesses and Is Discharged

Boston, March 5.—John H. Cullen, receiving and paying teller of the Union Institutions for Savings, was arrested on the charge of larceny. The amount which he is now said to have embezzled is $1200. The officers of the bank say that this covers his entire stealing, but an examination of all the passbooks of the bank will have to be made before the exact figure can be reached.

The stealing, which has been going on for two years, was discovered last Monday. Cullen confessed and was immediately discharged. The matter was put before Bank Commissioner Chapin and he took it to Attorney General Malone. The latter ordered that the man be placed under arrest. Judge Fallon, the president of the bank, stated that the cause for the man's stealing was the company he kept while rehearsing for a leading part in the bank officers' show two years ago.

When arraigned in the municipal court yesterday Cullen waived examination and was held in $1500 bonds for the grand jury.

Cullen was under bonds for $2000 with the New York Fidelity, Casualty and Bond company, as are all the employes of the bank. Cullen could have made restitution, but Chapin could not see it in that light, and said that as a matter of public policy the man should be handed over to the police.

Cullen had been in the bank for more than fifteen years, and came as a clerk with a very high recommendation. He is 45 years of age, married, and is the father of six children. His salary was $2300 a year. The man has always been steady, as far as the officers knew, and was thoroughly reliable.

At the bank several of the clerks said that they did not know that Cullen had been arrested or that there was any trouble. They had simply heard that he was sick. Everything was going on as usual. Judge Fallon called and conferred with Treasurer Kelly for some time. He was disposed to treat the matter as of no great scandal and pointed out that as the teller was bonded, the affair in a monetary sense was of little consequence.

CATTLE VALUED AT $10,000

Ordered to Be Killed Because They Are Infected With Tuberculosis

Burlington, Vt., March 5.—Probably the highest priced herd of blooded cattle in Vermont will be killed in a few days by order of the state cattle commissioner, who, upon testing it, found the entire herd infected with tuberculosis.

The cattle are the property of the Green Mountain stock farm, situated in Randolph, and are valued at $10,000. Incidentally it was learned that the herd had been known to be infected for the past twelve years, and had been allowed to remain by the authorities with the understanding that the produce be disposed of outside of the state.

PORTRAITS OF SPEAKERS

Crayons to Be Supplanted by Oil Paintings In House Lobby

Washington, March 5.—Artists are vieing with one another for the honor of painting the nineteen portraits of former speakers of the house of representatives, not overlooking the $500 apiece which they would receive for the work.

Most of the artists who have applied to the library committee of the house are from New York or New England, although all parts of the country are represented. Recently the house voted an appropriation of $9500 to replace the old crayon portraits of former speakers hanging in the lobby with oil paintings.

100,000 MEN MAY QUIT WORK

Union Workers In Philadelphia Notified of General Strike

Philadelphia, March 5.—The final word making effective the general strike already ordered for midnight was sent to union workers all over the city last night, when the committee of ten received word from the secretary of the Carmen's union that the last effort to secure arbitration had failed.

A proclamation was also made to unorganized labor. All unorganized workers are urged by the committee to assist in the general strike by ceasing work at midnight and by refraining from working at their usual occupations until the committee of ten, through the Central Labor union and the United Building Trades council, order a resumption of work.

Another proclamation calls for a public demonstration by the working people of Philadelphia in Independence square this afternoon.

Permanent headquarters for the strikers have been established in the Allied Building Trades council rooms. It was said by the committee of ten that they received hundreds of letters from bodies of unskilled workmen, not affiliated with unions, declaring their intention of joining the strike.

The Philadelphia Rapid Transit company, in its answer to the striking car men's request for arbitration, returned a flat refusal. This ended the last hope of averting the general sympathetic strike, which will call out from 60,000 to 100,000 men.

In its statement the company offers to take back between now and March 7 as many of the strikers as it can accommodate, but none of the men now employed will be discharged to make places for the strikers. The company offers a method of dealing with the strikers' grievances as follows:

That a committee of nine employes be selected, three from those now on strike, three from those who have remained in service during the strike and these six to elect three more from the whole body of employes. The company says it will treat with this committee and settle all difficulties, but it declared that it will continue to employ union or non-union employes as heretofore.

Act of 1893 Invalid

Pittsburg, March 5.—It was learned here that the arbitration act of 1893 was declared unconstitutional during the summer of 1909 by Judge McFarlane of the county courts, who handed down this opinion in the McKees Rocks strike arbitration agitation. This act had been considered in Philadelphia as being a possible means of ending the strike in that city.

TRIED TO BUY THE SUN

Arkell Planned to Have Roosevelt Fill the Editorial Chair

New York, March 5.—W. J. Arkell, former owner of Judge, admits that he tried to buy the New York Sun, and that his hope was to have Theodore Roosevelt as editor. He said:

"I am disappointed that my negotiations with the Laffan estate did not succeed. I am not sure we should altogether have made a hit. Mr. Roosevelt, you see, would perhaps have scared the financial coterie of Republicans in Wall street. But I think we should have had a big thing. There is no doubt people would have wanted to see what Colonel Roosevelt said about things."

RAISE AND KILL DEER

One Way to Break Away From Use of High-Priced Meat

Washington, March 5.—"The high cost of meat problem will solve itself and the price will be reduced two-thirds if the people will raise deer on the farm and are permitted to kill them," declared Dr. Merriam, chief of the biological survey, before a house committee.

He said that deer farming could be carried on profitably in any part of the United States.

Olympic Games Abandoned

New York, March 5.—The Olympic games proposed to be held in Athens this year have been abandoned, doubtless owing to the political situation in Greece. Meanwhile, preparations had already been made by Australasia and South Africa to send representatives, and cables have had to be hurriedly dispatched.

Cooks Place Ban on Asiatic Help

Princely Orchids Which Not Even Bank Clerks Can Buy—Every School Ma'am Will Be Pretty If Hub Educator's Plan Works—Schoolroom Lunches the Price of a Postage Stamp—War on Deadly House Flies Is Renewed—Massachusetts Men Form a Suffrage League.

Dying in a paroxysm of joy might not be such a dire fate, after all. Bostonians are much interested in the theories of the famous astronomer, Camille Flammarion, regarding the possible results of the passing of Halley's comet. There are some superstitious people who will doubtless have their house in readiness when the tail of the comet is due to swish our way, but the great majority of the world's workers will go right on doing their world's work without any particular perturbation of spirit.

Talk of the cost of living. Two-cent lunches are to be sold to all school children of Boston just as soon as the school board can complete the arrangements. Many children under present conditions eat little or no breakfast having no appetite when they first rise in the morning, but get ravenously hungry by ten or eleven o'clock. The idea of the school board is to make it unnecessary for the children to wait until the noon dinner, and to do away, if possible, with the habit of eating candy upon an empty stomach. This is a distinct innovation in school management which will be watched with interest throughout the country.

An orchid exhibit worth $50,000 is one of the attractive features of the week in the Hub. It is not for sale—not even to one of the $12 a week bank clerks who do the town while their directors sleep.

"Was ist Luce in der Massachusetts?" scornfully asked a German American suffragist after the big suffrage hearing before the committee on constitutional amendments at the State house on Feb. 23. There seems to be some doubt whether the eminent gentleman of that name who conducted the hearing for the anti-suffragists, and incidentally appeared to be conducting it for the whole crowd, is exactly popular with the advocates of equal suffrage. There are indications, indeed, that point to his personal unpopularity. The unusual procedure of admitting to a public hearing only by ticket Mr. Luce confesses in a letter to an evening newspaper was his device to balk the "sensation seekers" who got into the hearing last year. The suffragists allege that as a consequence of his arranging the details of the meeting with the Sergeant-at-Arms, no suffrage organization received any official notification of the ticket requirements. The 90 tickets, evidently intended for the suffragists were wrapped up in a piece of paper and addressed, to be forwarded by a messenger boy, to "Lucy Stone Blackwell, Park Street." Mrs. Blckwell died 15 years ago. The messenger boy, however, searched along Park Street until told by some one that the office of the Woman's Journal of which Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell were founders, had for some time since been in the Tremont Building. The tickets finally reached the office of Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, President of the Massachusetts Equal Suffrage association and were thence transmitted to the suffrage headquarters at 585 Boylston Street. Just why the arrangements regarding admission should have been left to the chief spokesman of one of the opposing parties has since been calling for explanations. Despite the unpleasantness over the tickets and a mix-up regarding entrances which resulted in two groups of the suffragists not being heard both the hearing and the overflow meeting in Ford hall were dignified and successful affairs. Right in their train comes the formal announcement of the organization of a Massachusetts Men's League for Woman Suffrage, with headquarters at 20 Beacon street, Boston. A glance at the first hundred names shows registered among them former Secretary of the Navy John D. Long, Former Governor John L. Bates, Hon. William W. Crapo, Hon. Samuel L. Powers, Thomas Wentworth Higginson, William Lloyd Garrison, Jr., Edwin D. Mead and many more of eminence and distinction.

The ideal schoolma'am will appropriately be evolved in the Hub, if the Boston School Board accepts the suggestion of the headmaster of the Boston Normal school. Mr. Boyden firmly advocates a physical examination of all students desiring to enter the normal school, with the purpose of rejecting such young women as are not physically fit to stand the strain of teaching. He is a staunch advocate of gymnastics and has introduced a number of novel ideas in games and exercises at the Boston institution. Mr. Boyden believes that magnetism is an essential in holding the attention of pupils, and that any young woman who is not in good health is lacking in that magnetism. There seems no reasonable ground for opposing Mr. Boyden's suggestions, as the promise of resulting beauty which arises from good health should cause the young ladies to grasp them eagerly, while the resultant economy to the city in point of pensions, which might otherwise have to be paid to teachers prematurely incapacitated for work owing to poor physical condition should allow no argument there. So all hail to the rosy-cheeked, bright-eyed school teacher of the future, who will be popular not only with the children, but with mammas and papas—particularly papas.

Interesting things have been doing at the Tech. of late, culminating in an ocean trip on a capital ship now under way in which four seniors and one professor of the institute are acting as stokers in the engine room. These men purpose to prove that housemaids are not the only wasters of coal and that millions of dollars annually may be saved on shipboard in the cost of fuel for locomotion. Tests of the practical working out of this theory have been made before on a small scale, but never has a large ship been fitted up for a long trip, during which the students could figure out horsepowers, consumption evaporation, temperatures, and all the rest. Apparatus specially constructed at the Institute of Technology will enable the students to perform the most minute calculations, and it is expected that when they return the will be in position to demonstrate the remarkable advantages of oil over coal as a fuel to the saving of millions to ship owners.

The war against the house-fly bids fair to become a fashionable fad in the Hub, extending from millionaire's mansion to humble boarding house. Perhaps more will be done in this way than by all the preaching of bacteriologists and boards of health. One of Boston's most prominent society leaders has taken up the cudgels against the purveyors of typhoid, tuberculosis and other deadly enemies of mankind. Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, Back Bay society dictator is directing the Woman's Municipal League in the preparation of a unique campaign for the coming summer. Mrs. Bradley has made frequent trips to Washington and other cities to ascertain what has been done toward this end. Through the Civic League Association arrangements have been made for furnishing slides descriptive of the dangers and characteristics of the house fly to every picture house in the country which will accept them, as this seems an effective way of reaching all classes of people, well to do, middle class, and, in fact, the almost destitute, who can usually squeeze out ten cents somehow to visit a moving picture show.

NO REASON FOR IT

When Quincy Citizens Show the Certain Way Out.

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the dangers of diabetes of any kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most positive proof given that they can be cured. Read what a Quincy citizen says:

James P. Daugherty, Hammond Place, Quincy, Mass., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and am glad to let other sufferers know what they have done for me. I was bothered a great deal by back ache and had but litt'e strength or energy to do my day's work. I took many so-called kidney cures, but did not succeed in finding relief until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills which I procured at the Cox Drug Store. I was surprised and gratified at the prompt way in which they relieved me. My back was soon strong and free from pain and I felt better generally. I would go to considerable trouble to induce anyone to use Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have so much confidence in them."

CLOVER VICTORY.

The Clover A. C. and Cap. Carrigan's pets rolled some fine strings at the Granite street alleys last night, the former taking two out of three and winning the total by 22 pins.

Morris was high man on singles and totals getting 116 and 299 respectively. G. Carrigan was close with 113. "Cap." Carrigan got his "loco" ball working and tore off the corners and middle for the booby. "Cap." accused the Clover A. C. of landing all the luck, and blames the name "Cover "for his defeat. Good feeling and merry rooting prevailed, and a return match will be rolled at the Y. M. C. A. alleys in a near future.

SEALER OF WEIGHTS.

It was evidently not generally understood by the merchants, that the Sealer of Weights and Measures has regular office hours at City Hall. Up to last year there was no ordinance governing this office, but such an ordinance was established when the ordinances were revised in 1909, and it provides among other things that the Sealer of Weights and Measures shall have regular office hours.

When John Brown Wouldn't.

Pol-Manear is a favorite cast near Balmoral castle and was always held as the special preserve of John Brown, who was the personal attendant of the late Queen Victoria. John was an enthusiastic and inveterate fisher, and often the royal larder was indebted to his prowess for its supplies of spring salmon when the rods of the other fishermen failed to bring them to the bank. It is authentically reported among anglers on Deeside that when the queen wanted John he was immediately at her call except when angling, and at such times she would not disturb him. The tacit understanding between them is said to have arisen in the following fashion: Her majesty one day sent an imperative message to the riverside desiring John to immediately wait upon her.

"Tell her majesty," replied John in his usual Doric, "that I am rinnin' a salmon and I canna come."

The messenger came back to him in hot haste, saying that the queen desired to see him the very minute.

"Well, tell her majesty this time that I am rinnin' a salmon and I winna come." And that settled it.

Albatross and Magpie.

Birds play a great part in good and bad auguries at sea. The albatross is regarded as a harbinger of good fortune and has been immortalized as such by Coleridge in "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner," whereas the magpie is a bad omen.

A friend of Sir Walter Scott, traveling by coach to London, entered into a conversation with a respectable looking seaman, who remarked: "I wish we may have luck in our journey. There's a magpie."

"And why should that be unlucky?"

"I can't tell you that, but all the world agrees one magpie bodes ill luck, two are not so bad, but three are the evil one himself. I never saw three magpies but twice, and once I nearly lost my vessel, and afterward I fell from my horse and was hurt."

Many seamen still believe in water spirits or sprites. In Bohemia the fishermen are afraid to assist a drowning man for fear of giving offense to the water sprite.

Where Authority Ends.

"Rogers is a born leader of men Thousands of them would follow him into the jaws of death."

"Yes, but he can't make his two-year-old boy so much as sit in a chair."—Harper's Bazar.

A Long Minute.

"I'll be ready in a minute," she said to her husband.

"You needn't hurry now," he called up some time later. "I find that I shall have to shave again."—Detroit Free Press.

RUBE'S SPORTING CHAT

In the Daily Ledger of yesterday there appeared in the sporting section an article on training for umpires. This article brought out several sugestions whereby the umpires could improve, move faster and buckle down to work quickly without making the players and fans alike suffer until they become able to follow the plays. In reading this I cannot but think of John D. O'Reilly of the Old Colony league staff. Mr. O'Reilly is an instructor of sports in Boston schools and constantly in touch with the games he umpires, and by his work of last season he showed he knew the national game from A to Z. We all hope to see this "ump" again in harness, for we cannot afford to lose such a dandy.

The Iroquois club are to be congratulated upon the way everything they undertake goes off. This organization annually awake Quincy residents with a live minstrel show and on Thursday evening gave an interesting smoke talk in Hibernian hall. Among those who contributed was James B. Connelly of world-wide fame, "Andy" Dinegan the minstrel king, and Archie Shannon nifty with his "pedals."

With the advent of such fine weather we all look forward to the baseball season. That proposed amateur league with the several local clubs should be organized without much trouble but where are the Mohawks? Are they not going to be represented on the diamond this summer? It seems to me as though such a live group of fellows could get a fast nine and just think of the fun and encouragement the members could give by their attendance. Get together, Mohawks, and show us you are "there."

Here is hoping the Athletic committee of the High school hold an indoor meet, for such an event would certainly be a big drawing card.

The changes in the baseball rules are certainly worth reading.

The swimming pool at the Y. M. C. A. will not be completed for a week or two. The long looked for material to finish up with, was shipped from Chicago to Quincy, Ill., by mistake, but is now being rushed here. Lucky that shipper is so far away.

I have received a reply to my notice in Daily Ledger of Thursday (in regard to bowling) from G. S. Grant and offers suggestions as to how to decide the Norfolk county championship. As Grant and Poland want me to plan this I think the following is the best way to decide it.

Let Grant and Dahl meet Poland and Lyons in two ten string matches, the first to be rolled at Quincy, Monday night, March 7, and the second at Norfolk Downs, Friday evening, March 11. I am not desirous of seeing a tournament at this late date, and believe if there is to be one that it should come after the league season. I also would have each team pay an entry fee of $5, to be placed in my hands at the Quincy alleys at 8 o'clock, Monday evening next, the entire amount to go as one prize and given to the team making the highest total for both matches. The time for the matches to be 8.15. I have secured L. A. Johnson, president of the Old Colony bowling association to referee at the line, and believe this will meet with approval of both teams, as he is fair and disinterested in the final result. If after these matches, the winners want to meet others they may do so.

I hope to see both teams in attendance, Monday night, at the Quincy alleys that the match be clean and that the best team wins on its merits. Farewell until Monday night.

NORFOLK FEDERATION OF CATHOLIC SOCIETIES

Concentrated Effort Said to Be Accomplishing Great Results for Catholics.

Hon. Joseph H. O'Neil and Other Gentlemen Speak.

An open mass meeting of the Norfolk federation of Catholic societies was held Sunday afternoon at St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, and was attended by delegates from all parts of the county. James F. Burke, the county president presided, and introduced Mayor Shea who welcomed the delegates. In his address of welcome the Mayor said,

"It should be the duty of every young man, and especially every Catholic young man, who is called to fill positions of public or private trust, to so discharge the duties of his office that there can be no suspicion of wrong-doing attached to his name.

"There is no better way a young man can fortify himself to fill such a position with credit and honor to himself than to be deeply mindful of his religious obligations. A young man who is a good Catholic cannot be anything else but a good citizen, and the need of good citizens is becoming more apparent every day."

Rev. Henry T. Grady, pastor of St. Marys church, said religion and patriotism were closely allied with each other and an organization like the federation of Catholic societies, which had those two objects for the cardinal points, must of necessity become a benefit to the community and the country at large.

Rev. James J. Chittick of Hyde Park, county chaplain said the federation asked for nothing more or less than religious and civic liberty which had been guaranteed by the constitution of the United States.

"We simply want to make progress," said Rev. Fr. Chittick, "but we want to make progress the right way. We must have men and women of the right character, men and women of good deeds to prosecute this work of reformation.

"What do we propose for his reformation? We propose a morality of the strictest kind and an adherence to the commandments of God, which so many men seem to forget." Rev. Fr. Chittick attacked the divorce question. The federation, he said, stands for a marriage tie that means something to respectable men and women.

Hon. Joseph H. O'Neil said the platform of the federation was big and broad enough for any man, woman or child who loved this country to stand upon. The federation was simply emulating the spirit of the times, when individual effort seemed but to amount to little, while concentrated effort was accomplishing great results.

"A majority of the people of this commonwealth," said Mr. O'Neil, "are Catholic, or, as President Elliot says: 'Massachusetts is Catholic in population.' That being so you can dodge the responsibility for awhile perhaps, but if something discreditable occurs you will have it thrown at you and your state by people outside, and how are you going to meet the responsibility? Only by such an organization as the Federation of Catholic societies."

Mr. O'Neil said he had been asked many times if there was any chance for a young man to succeed in the business world and he said that most young men did not care to get a job where their fathers began but where they left off, although they did not stop to realize how many years it took their fathers to reach the place where they finally landed.

The great trouble with our men of big financial means, said Mr. O'Neil, is that they don't get their money together until it is too late in life to enjoy it. "You can't take your money out of the world with you," said the speaker.

Ten years ago, said Mr. O'Neil, there were 59 national banks in New England and a majority of the stock was owned by the savings banks. The majority of the money on deposit in the savings banks was placed to the credit of Catholics and yet not one Catholic was on the board of directors of those banks. That was 10 years ago, said Mr. O'Neil, before there was any federation.

LARGE CHARTER LIST.

The charter list of Neopa lodge, No. 511, N. E. O. P., was closed Friday evening, when there was a grand jubilee and initiation. The lodge was organized Jan. 1, 1910, but the charter list by vote remained open eight weeks.

The program began with the initiation of twenty-one candidates by the degree team from Tuckawana lodge of Campello, which went through its degree work like a veteran degree team and in a way which drew praise from the Supreme Warden, Frank Rice.

After the initiation of the candidates, speeches were made by Supreme Warden Frank Rice, Senior Vice Warden Sherwood of Providence, Supreme Trustee Guilford S. Newhall and Bertha O. Gibbs of the supreme lodge.

Supreme Warden Rice presented the charter to the new lodge and congratulated them on the good work which they had done since their organization. He praised the work of Mrs. Mary E. Poland of Neopa lodge, who in eight weeks has brought in twenty-five candidates. After the speeches, the party adjourned to the dining room, which was prettily decorated and satisfied their appetites with a salad supper. After the supper dancing was enjoyed.

POPULAR AT ATLANTIC.

The funeral of William L. Granahan, one of the best known young men of Atlantic, was held Saturday, from the church of the Sacred Heart. Mass was celebrated by Rev. John P. Cuffe, pastor of the church, the service being largely attended. The Gregorian mass was sung by the regular choir under the direction of Miss Louise Costello, organist. The solo parts were sung by Miss Clara Duggan. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery. Besides a mother, Mr. Granahan left four brothers and four sisters. His brothers are John P. Granahan, a Quincy letter carrier, Joseph E. secretary of the Boston letter carriers association; Henry M. and Frank of Norwood. His sisters are Miss Ellen D. Granahan, a teacher at the Quincy school; Misses Maria Catherine and Anna.

GANG OF PICKPOCKETS

At Work Sunday on One of the Wollaston Cars

The police were out in force Sunday night looking for a brace of pickpockets who were said to be working the electric cars between Quincy and Neponset. One man at least had his pocket picked and there may have been more. The gang, as far as can be learned, boarded the car which left City Square for Neponset via. Wolaston at 6.30. On the way a man whose name could not be learned, but who left the car at North Central avenue, had his pocket book containing $18 taken. It was also reported that another man when he reached Neponset found that his watch and chain were gone, and still another man was minus a chain.

The conductor on the car thinks that the men tried to pick his pocket, but he became suspicious of their actions and took good care that they did not get near enough to reach his pocket. The conductor says that there was a party of four men whom he believes were the gang that were doing the work. They boarded the car at Quincy and all four left it when the car reached Holbrook avenue, Montclair.

The police were notified and Inspectors McKay and Goodhue and several officers were sent to City Square to keep a sharp lookout for the gang, as it was thought that they would return to City Square on the next inward car. They were unable to locate the crooks however. Up to noon the police had been unable to interview the man who lost the $18.

According to the Boston papers that city had been flooded with a gang of New York crooks, seventeen of whom were rounded up by the Boston police and shipped out of town. Others of the gang are still about Boston and suburban towns, and it was probably a part of this crowd that paid a visit to Quincy on Sunday.

The police have a good description of the four men whom it is thought were working Quincy.

LETTERER UNDER ARREST.

Cook & Watkins of this city are creditors to the amount of $500 of George Miller who was arrested at Lee, last week. Miller, who has been a letterer in a stone quarry, was to have left Thursday for Maine to be married to a young woman reported to be wealthy. The wedding was delayed, however, by a deputy sheriff, who arrested Miller on the eve of his departure, and he is now in the Pittsfield jail awaiting trial on a debt charge.

Miller had disposed of his household goods and made purchase in Pittsfield for a new home in Maine. Everything was complete for the marriage but a farewell "stag" party for Miller's closest friends. The supper was prepared at the home of a friend in East Lee and the guests were assembled when the police took the host into custody. He desires to take the poor debtor's oath, but there are some hindering circumstances. He has petitioned in bankruptcy in a Boston court with liabilities set at $2114 and no assets.

WARD EIGHT NIGHT SCHOOL

Signal Corps Make a Great Hit at Atlantic

A large and appreciative audience at Atlantic Music hall witnessed the presentation of the "Ward 8 Night School" given by the Signal Corps Saturday night. Great credit is due Lieut. Carl Stocker to whose untiring efforts the success of the play is largely due. As the German professor he won much applause especially in the song, "Take me back to babyland" in which he was ably assisted by a chorus of four young ladies, in quaint Kate Greenaway costumes, carrying Teddy Bears. A huge bunch of jonquils testified to his ability and popularity. Mr. Ewen was also presented with flowers. No member of the corps received more appreciation than the irrepressible little Gong Sing and his catchy song Chee Wee was enthusiasticaly encored. Each part and make-up was excellently carried out and the songs proved very popular. After the preformance the hall was cleared of seats and dancing was enjoyed by the corps and their friends.

The parts were assigned as follows:

Prof. Muller, director of schools and music—C. W. Stocker.

Prof. Martine, a French teacher—W. M. Safford.

Mickey DeBite, a tough guy—Clarence Pendleton.

Issey Letzesky, "who has a father"—George Breasole.

Gong Sing, "so be"—Ryder Gay.

Guido Caparo—Allyne Litchfield.

Hans Swartzheimer—Gordon Sherwin.

Johnny Slim, "Isn't he?"—Harry Bahe.

Alderman Hogan, Alderman of the ward—Frank C. Ewen.

Baby Chorus—Miss Ruth Wallis, Miss Dorothy Wallis, Miss Hazel Tilton and Miss Ouida Keay.

—It is estimated that the new pay-as-you-enter street cars have lessened the number of accidents in getting on and off the cars by half.

Escort Remains of Officer W. S. Lyons to Grave.

The funeral of Officer William S. Lyons was held this morning from his late home on Miller street, and was followed by services at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock. The services were largely attended, nearly every member of the Police Department being present with Chief of Police Burrell. They escorted the remains from the house to the church, and after the services, to the grave in St. Mary's cemetery. The members of St. Francis court of Foresters were also present.

At the church a requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. William Duffy. The Gregorian mass was sung by the regular choir under the direction of Miss Mary McKay, organist. Mrs. J. F. Fennessey sang the solo parts.

There was a profusion of beautiful flowers which included large set pieces from the Police department and from the Foresters. There were also many smaller pieces from the friends of the dead officer.

The honorary bearers were Officers James W. Murray, Henry F. Corbett and Jeremiah Dinneen, representing the Police department, and John Casey James McNeil and John Joyce, representing the Foresters.

CITY COUNCIL TONIGHT

Water Loan Order Will Probably Be Taken from Table.

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held tonight, and as the meetings thus far this year have been of an interesting nature there will probably be a good attendance of citizens. Few committees have met since the last meeting of the Council, so that but few reports will be received. It seems to be the idea to lay low until after the annual budget is out of the way. It is very doubtful if the budget is reported at tonight's meeting.

The order appropriating $30,000 for the extension of the water system is still on the table, and the chances are that this will be taken up for action again. This order has been debated at length at the two previous meetings, and will probably be debated again tonight if it comes up.

Edward P. Histen, who was elected to represent Ward Two at the special election last Tuesday, will be sworn in and be assigned a seat. He will serve on the standing committee on Sewers and Drains.

MRS. MARY FORD.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Ford, widow of Dennis Ford, who was killed by the cars on the Granite branch last Friday, was held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock from St. Mary's church, services being conducted by Rev. William Duffy. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery. This morning at 8 o'clock a requiem mass for Mrs. Ford was celebrated by Rev. Henry T. Grady at St. Mary's church.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Somerville, Medford, Arlington and Winchester citizens are rejoicing over the averting of the danger for the present of the so-called Chinese wall, the railroad commissioners denying the petition for construction by the Boston, Lowell and Lawrence railroad. Most places as well as Quincy object to Chinese walls, depresion of railroad tracks being universally favored.

Before the $30,000 loan order for water extension is passed by the City Council, it should be amended to include the installation of meters. The law requires that new services and five per cent. of the services unmetered on Jan. 1, 1910, shall be equipped with meters this year. No more should be attempted along that line in 1910 or any other year, because the Daily Ledger has clearly shown that the introduction of meters reduce the city receipts from water, and do not decrease the Metropolitan assessment upon the city. Furthermore, meters are expensive, and it is the exception where extra receipts from individuals have paid for the cost of installing meters. All the manufacturing establishments have now been metered, and also the boarding houses and all places suspected of using a large amount of water, leaving only family houses without meters. Why not reduce the water rates for fully plumbed houses from $16 to $14 or $12? People who are clamoring for meters might then be satisfied, and the city would save the cost of meters.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

We hear much of the passing of the American home, but as long as the individual members o fthe family realize the part they must play in its formation, and appreciate its manifold blessings there is little chance of such a catastrophe. Not only every structure of wood or brick that shelters human beings is a home; love and care and consideration are not found in every dwelling place; but that family circle that lives together in peace of heart and mind, be its habitation a cabin or a mansion has struck the keynote of the true harmonies of home. The demands of modern times, however have sounded the death knell of one of the most attractive features of home life in the winter time—the open fire, whose warmth and cheerful glow forms a center of common interest around which the members of a family are accustomed to gather. It is the most natural thing in the world for the fire to be the focus of the room, and in preparing for the winter home life it should be so regarded if at all possible, and whether a furnace has been installed or not, one room at least should be arranged —the living room, of course—where all may gather around the "real fire" and respond to its comforting influence.—Framingham News.

Nothing on earth can smile but man! Gems may flash reflected light, but what is a diamond-flash compared to an eye-flash and a mirth-flash? Flowers cannot smile; this is a charm that even they cannot claim. It is the perrogative of man; it is the color which love wears, and cheerfulness and joy—these three. It is a light in the windows of the face, by which the heart signifies it is at home and waiting. A face that cannot smile is like a bud that cannot blossom, and dries up on the stalk. Laughter is day, sobriety is night, and a smile is the twilight that hovers gently between both—more bewitching than either.—Henry Ward Beecher.

The Best She Could Do.

"STROLL" OF SOCIALISTS

It Results In Many Being Injured In the Streets of Berlin

Berlin, March 7.—Serious conflicts between the police and Socialists, involving a lengthy list of wounded, were the outcome of most impressive open air demonstrations against the suffrage bill carried out in Berlin and the other cities of Prussia Sunday.

It is estimated that in Berlin alone 120,000 persons took part in what was called a "demonstrative stroll" in various parts of the city.

The police, in the majority of cases, acted with the utmost moderation, obeying the orders to avoid as far as possible using their arms, which were issued by Chief Von Jagow, who recently has been much criticized for his severity.

It was the provincial gendamerie who on this occasion came into the most serious conflict with the crowds.

FREE ON $2000 BAIL

Bank President Says Cullen's Salary Was Enough to Live Upon

Boston, March 7.—John H. Cullen, former teller in the Union Institution for Savings, who is charged with a $1500 shortage in his accounts, was released on $2000 bail.

President Fallon of the bank says that Cullen ought to have been able to get along, even with a wife and six children, on his salary of $2000 a year without stealing.

"I believe Cullen's salary was sufficient to support himself and family," said Fallon. "In view of recent disclosures the inference is that Cullen went outside his natural circle of acquaintances and associated with younger men—single men who have no one to maintain but themselves. It is probable that in trying to keep up his end with such associates Cullen lived beyond his income, with the natural result."

SHOOTING AFTER A DAY OF QUIET

Many Unruly Persons Clubbed by Philadelphia Police

Philadelphia, March 7.—The calm of the quietest day Philadelhpia has known since the car men's strike began was broken last night by a series of disturbances in which three persons were shot, one a girl, fatally.

Many unruly persons were severely clubbed by the police and more than a score of arrests were made.

Conflicting claims still continue as to the number of men who have responded to the general strike call, and there seems to be no present way to obtain accurate figures.

The committee of ten in charge of the organized strike movement claims that 125,000 persons have left their employment to demonstrate their sympathy with the traction men's cause and help them win their fight.

Figures gathered by the police department, however, are cited by Director of Public Safety Clay to support his claim that not more than 20,000 men struck.

RUSH FOR FREE LAND

It Has Begun In Earnest In Eastern Part of Montana

Havere, Mont., March 7.—The rush for homesteads in eastern Montana by 1500 easterners has become the greatest immigation movement ever experienced in immigration in any section of the United States.

Home seekers are locating 320-acre homesteads in every section of eastern Montana along the Great Northern lines, and ninety-four families filed on 320-acre homesteads in this city Sunday. They located at the rate of a score a week at Harlem and Chinook.

Immigration in eastern Montana is regarded as one of the greatest land movements in modern times. It is expected that this movement is the forerunner of a tremendous back to the farm movement scheduled for spring.

MINISTER BARRETT

Says United States Must Awake to Get Trade of South America

John Barrett, who was formerly a minister of the United States to South America, and is now director of the International Bureau of American Republics, was one of the speakers at the recent Waterways Congress. He was reported as follows:

There is not a port or State upon the Atlantic seaboard that is not directly interested in the development of closer trade relations with our Southern sister republics. And yet we are so occupied with our own affairs or so self-satisfied that we do not begin to appreciate the vast importance and immeasurable opportunities for our foreign commerce in the twenty resourceful countries which reach five thousand miles south from Mexico and Cuba to Argentina and Chili.

Considering ways and means of preparing to exploit this field there looms up big this great necessity of improving and extending our inland coast waterways. To prove my contention let me first note a few salient and convincing facts about our sister republics which are not generally remembered by the average person.

In all America are twenty-one independent republics. Of these twenty lie to the south of the United States and speak a different language. They, however, are bound to us theoretically by close ties of similar government, and corresponding interests, and would be closer practically if we would wake up to their progress and possibilities.

These twenty sister republics cover an area three times larger than that of the United States, or about nine millions of square miles. They can boast of a population approximating seventy-five millions, or a total equal to that of the United States at the last census.

They possess every kind of climate and every variety of natural resource —agricultural, mineral, metal, timber, waterpower, etc. They are in the very infancy of the industrial and commercial development, and yet they astonished the world by conducting last year a foreign commerce—that is, they bought and sold with other nations—valued at the immense and surprising total of two billions, one hundred millions of dollars ($2,100,000,000). Of this, the share of the United States was about one-fourth that of Europe, although one-half of it should belong to the United States. In the growth of the future there is room for the trade of both Europe and the United States —both working side by side with legitimate and healthy competition. The more Latin America sells to both, the more she will be able to purchase of each.

This is another critical phase of the situation. The Panama canal will be done in the near future. Before we can realize it, great ocean steam carriers of all nations will be passing through that mighty channel linking the Atlantic and Pacific. In 1915, I am sure, we will be celebrating its completion.

What will we then behold? We will suddenly see near us a vast coast line of opportunty in South and Central America, which heretofore has been absolutely isolated and almost inaccessible because of the distance through the Magellan Straits—a coast line reaching nearly five thousand miles due south from Panama to Cape Horn and yet capable of enormous material development, and another coast line reaching three thousand miles almost due northwest from Panama to the Mexico boundry with California, possessing equal potentialites.

In other words, the Panama canal, in the day of its opening, will put the Atlantic coast of the United States in direct and intimate touch with eight thousand miles of rich coast line, which until that day has been essentially an unknown and undeveloped land.

Think what that means! Shall we awake to it and get the splendid benefits that will result, or shall we roll over and dream about it, while Europe alert to such opportunities, gains and the golden prize of its trade?

Now, my conclusion is brief, but emphatic and logical. If the United States is to get its share of the anual two billion dollar foreign trade of Latin America—if the United States is going to earn its own reward for building the Panama canal and not give it alone to Europe—if the United States is going to secure the preponderating share of the future trade of these eight thousand miles of new opportunities south and northwest of Panama—then it must get to work without delay in deepening old and building new Atlantic Coast waterways so that our shipping and transportation facilities for the handling of our industrial and agricultural products may be improved to the highest point of efficiency and hence enable us to compete successfully with other nations of the world, which are everywhere making the most of inland waterways and coast harbors.

BOAT WITHOUT SMOKESTACKS.

A torpedo boat with funnels, having three distinct advantages over the present type of boat, is soon to be launched at the royal dockyard at Castellamare, in Italy says the Monitor, according to a statement by Commodore Calabritto, director of the dockyard and inventor of the boat.

By means of a special system of electrical ventilators ,the products of combustion are discharged without the need of smokestacks, which, besides, offering a target in battle, also lead during gales to a partial or complete extinction of the furnaces. The new system has the further advantage of permitting steam to be gotten up with greater rapidity. The government is maintaining the utmost secrecy regarding the invention.

BROCKTON CANAL SURVEY.

The Senate March 4th passed to be engrossed in concurrence with the House the bill to extend for two years the time for the payment to the State of the $10,000 advanced for the survey of the Brockton canal route by the harbor and land commission. There was no opposition to the bill at any stage.

FAREWELL TO GORDON.

Tribute Paid to the Former Senator From Mississippi.

To Colonel James Gordon, who recently delivered a memorable farewell speech in the senate and has just been succeeded by Leroy Percy as United States senator from Mississippi, the following poetic tribute is paid:

We're sorry, Cuhnel Gawdon, suh, to say goodby to you.
We have much admired to know you and to hear you talk true blue.
We reciprocate your farewell speech, as fragrant as the breeze
That brings a breath of roses or of sweet magnolia trees.
Though we all fit with you all, suh, and like you all we bled,
And many a time "skedaddled," suh, as you did, too, you said,
We join with you our hearts and hands to honor Grant and Lee—Immortal names now linked in peace for all eternity.

It grieves us, Cuhnel Gawdon, suh, that we, forsooth, must part.
We'll miss the simple eloquence outflowing from your heart,
We'll miss your courtly manners, suh,
we'll miss your gentle ways—
The salt and savor of the south of antebellum days.

And when you're back in Dixieland we'll often think of you
On your broad sunlit savannas, by the banks of your bayou,
Where in fancy at the twilight hour, to lull you to your rest,
You will hear your old black mammy croon the songs you loved the best.

But if again you kindly condescend to come this way
Your "father's house" is open; you'll be welcome night or day
To partake, suh, of its bounty and its hospitality,
Where all now sit above the salt in consanguinity.
But if this parting be the last we give you back your toast,
"Of all the sections of our land we love each one the most,"
And may your days outnumber far this life's allotted span—
Here's to you, Cuhnel Gawdon, senator and gentleman!

—Richard Linthicum in New York World.

GIRL WITH TWO VOICES.

Canadian Lass Stirs Paris by Intonation of Tenor and Soprano.

Dorothea Toye, a young girl from Winnipeg, Canada, aroused great attention recently at a reception given by Ambassador Bacon at the American embassy in Paris.

Miss Toye has two voices, one a three octave soprano, the other a tenor of great power and sweetness. She came to Paris to consult Professor Frank Dossert, director of the National Conservatory of Music, regarding the advisability of an operatic career. When he heard her soprano voice he said she was unquestionably fitted for grand opera. A moment later he was stunned to hear her sing a Pagliacci song. Her tenor recalled Caruso's voice in intonation, phrasing and exact rendering.

Musicians say such a phenomenon is unprecedented in musical history. She can actually sing a soprano and tenor duet with herself. Ambassador Bacon said, "It is the most remarkable performance I ever heard."

It is needless to say that all Paris is talking of her. Personally Miss Toye is a slight girl of singularly bright and winning manner. She is one of eight sisters, all musicians. Physicians as well as musicians are greatly interested in her accomplishments. She has been invited to go to London to sing before the medical congress.

REPUBLICANS KEPT IN LINE

Vote Solidly in Senate For Postal Savings Bank Bill

Washington, March 7.—Dividing upon party lines the senate passed the administration postal savings bank bill, by a vote of 50 to 22, the Republicans voting unanimously for it. All the negative vites were cast by Democrats, Senator Chamberlain of Oregon being the only Democrat in favor of the measure.

As it goes to the house, the bill authorizes the various money order postoffices to accept sums of $1 or more from depositors and to deposit these sums in the local banks, where the money is to remain unless withdrawn by the president in case of war or other exigency.

In case of this withdrawal the funds are to be invested in government securities, but with the proviso that such securities shall not draw less than 2¼ percent interest. The control of the funds is vested in a board of trustees composed of the postmaster general, the secretary of the treasury and the attorney general.

The aggregate balance allowed any depositor is $500 and no person is permitted to deposit more than $100 in any one month. The government is required to pay 2 percent interest and must exact not less than 2¼ percent from the banks, the extra quarter of 1 percent being required for the payment of expenses and losses.

It is calculated that such a law would bring much money out of hiding and result in a fund ranging all the way from $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000.

The passage of the bill is, with the exception of the tariff bill, the first great administration measure to go through the senate and is a distinct victory for the administration and incidentally a greater personal triumph for Secretary Meyer, for it was Meyer who began the campaign for postal savings banks and kept it going.

It was the influence exercised by the president that put the bill through the senate. It was not intended there that the bill should become a law when it was first introduced. Senator Aldrich publicly announced that he was opposed to its passage at this time and thought that it would be wisdom to defer the creation of a postoffice banking system until the monetary commission had made its report.

But the president would not consent to postponement. A postal savings bank system, he said, had been promised the country in the Republican platform and he insisted that the promise must be kept.

Mr. Taft was subjected to an enormous amount of pressure. The opposition to the bill came from the national banks as well as the savings banks.

While the president was subjected to great pressure he was at the same time exerting equal pressure. He kept on saying to senators and representatives that the bill must be passed, The powers that be in both houses were opposed to him. But the president neither lost his temper nor threatened. He kept on smiling and twisting the screws.

Finally the matter resolved itself into the naked proposition—pass the bill or defeat an administration measure that the president insisted must be passed.

Mr. Taft staked a good deal on the outcome. Had the senate by a straight vote refused to pass the bill it would have been a severe blow to Taft's prestige and it would have greatly endangered the rest of his legislative program. Taft took that risk. The result shows that he is a good political strategist.

TOWN MEETING DAY

License Question an Issue In Many Bay State Communities

Boston, March 7.—In 190 Massachusetts towns today is "town meeting" day. Election of town officials and a decision on the local liquor question are the chief issues in most of the towns, although a number, which combine their annual business meeting with the election of officers, will settle upon their expenditures for the coming year.

For most of the 131 towns which do not vote today, election day comes later in the month or early in April.

SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

Pleasant Spring Day Brings Out Large Congregations

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

The preaching Sunday morning and evening was by the pastor Rev. Joseph Walther. Morning subject, "Jeremiah's pointed question to the indifferent.—Sam. 1-12. "Is it nothing to you all ye that pass by?" The same question was put to the congregation. Some startling figures were given concerning the foreign situation. Heathen population is one billion. One minister to one million people. Four souls die to every breath we draw or 1400 every hour without Christ. Are we doing what we can to better the conditions?

The subject of the evening was, "What Christ is able to do and under what conditions."—Heb. 7-25. Christ's character and the ability of Christ were strongly emphasized. It is good to leave behind us the memory of a noble character. Let us link our life up with God. The services of the day were largely attended.

Two solos were very effectively rendered by Mrs. E. V. Estes at the Christian Endeavor meeting.

Six received the right hand of fellowship at the morning service.

WOLLASTON M. E.

Sunday was another red letter day at the Wollaston Methodist church. The attendance at nearly all of the services was record breaking. The Sunday school attendance has increased 40 per cent during the past six weeks.

The love-feast at 10.15 o'clock was full of interest. The subject of the pastor's sermon was "The gospel of the Kingdom."

The Sunday school under the leadership of Mr. J. A. Sedgwick had the largest attendance in its history. Mr. Sedgwick had a new Giant for the children. He called his name "Dis-Hon-Est." He gave the names of his companions, also the names of his father and mother, his brother and sister, and employer.

Miss Rena Chamberlin had charge of the Junior League which was largely attended. Six young men from the Y. M. C. A. of Quincy led the Epworth League at 6 o'clock, taking for their subject, "What are we here for." The service was greatly enjoyed by the large number present.

At 7 o'clock the pastor preached on the parable of the talents, followed by a most impressive service at which 4 were baptized and 16 were received into the church.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

A large congregation was in attendance at the Sunday morning service of the Wollaston Unitarian church and Rev. Carl G. Horst preached from the text found in 2 Peter 1:5-7, taking as his topic "The christian character."

Faith was taken as the corner stone of all the other virtues, the foundation upon which rest, knowledge, temperance, patience and love, for without faith in the home, the commercial life and the world of science we should have no starting point; nothing upon which to build the structure of life.

To faith and virtue must be added the knowledge that is able to adapt work to the existing laws and conditions so as to co-operate with recognized forces; to knowledge, the temperance which means balance and self-control; to the knowledge, which orders itself aright, must be added patience, which tempers all undue haste and sweetens, and ripens the more vigorous virtues by its fine poise and ability to await results.

Then godliness, the uplook, the vision, which makes all men of one brotherhood and produces sympathy which is the oil and wine of life. And all are summed up in the love that suffereth long and is kind, that envieth not and is not puffed up, that beareth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.

TRANSOCEAN AIR LINE.

German Aviator Says He'll Sail Over From Ireland With Passengers.

Karl Leps, a German aviator who professes to have made more than 200 ascents in the last two years in Germany and in one of which he was three days and nights in the air with seven men, arrived at New York recently from Hamburg. He did not bring his airship with him. He said he merely came to select a site to drop on when he flew across from Ireland. That was all he required now.

In describing his airship Mr. Leps said that it measured 7,800 cubic meters and the basket where the aviators sat had fifty cubic feet of space for passengers. In his opinion the Atlantic steamships are doomed. He expects to make his experiment in April from Valentia, Ireland, to St. John's, N. F., with eight men in the airship, and by next December, he says, there will be an airship carrying seventy passengers flying across the ocean at an average speed of fifty miles an hour.

"Zeppelin's airship has 300 horsepower, and Gross' airship has the same amount, but mine has 866 horsepower, with eight motors," said he. "The airship will rest easily on the water when necessary, but I expect to make the trip across from Ireland to Newfoundland in April, 1,600 miles, without a stop."

Shooting Jack Rabbits.

"Jack rabbits in Kansas are just as numerous as they were the day the first covered wagon moved across it toward the Rocky mountains," said a Kansas farmer. "It appears to me they are galloping around in greater numbers than ever. Did you ever try to exterminate a jack rabbit? If you never did you've something to learn about shooting.

"A jack rabbit's movement starts with a spring in the air. He lands on all fours, and the intervening space from the time he jumps and the time he lights is just about nothing, but he covers from ten to fifteen feet with every jump. There's only one way to take 'em alive and that is to leave the top off a pasture well overnight. Next morning there'll be plenty, because jack rabbits will jump into any kind of a hole that's open. They seem to have a fondness for dried out wells. They outrun the average dog with ease, but can't beat the greyhound Shooting them on the run is as difficult as shooting birds on the wing, possibly more difficult. Possibly 25,000 are killed in Kansas every year, and yet they seem just as numerous as ever."—St. Paul Dispatch.

Arrangements have been made for the British team of ten players to be located at the Savoy hotel, in London, which will be in direct communication with New York.

HENS IN EGG LAYING MATCH.

One Thousand to Be Entered In International Competition.

More than a thousand hens from the United States and Europe will meet in an egg laying contest at Mexico, Mo., next fall if the plans of T. E. Quissenberry, secretary of the Missouri state poultry board, are successfully carried out. The competition will be held at the poultry experiment station, which will be built at Mexico and conducted under the supervision of the United States department of agriculture.

The proposed egg laying contest will be conducted along the lines of one held a few years ago in Australia. It will last six months and is intended to demonstrate the enormous possibilities of a scientifically conducted poultry business.

DRAMA OF THE BARNYARD.

Ingenuity Shown In Producing Rostand's "Chantecler."

WONDERFUL DEVICES USED.

Mechanical Inventions For Portraying Characters In Amazing Drama Are Acme of Stage Wizardry—Ingenious Method of Representing Watchdog and Owls.

The secrets of the production of Edmond Rostand's satiric drama "Chantecler" at the Porte St. Martin theater, in Paris, are out. The revelation of the ingenuity displayed in making it possible to produce this drama of the barnyard, with all its animal personages in perfection of makeup and action, makes the achievement seem only more remarkable than when the mere fulfillment was disclosed at the opening performance.

Simple astonishment was the first sensation of the audience at the verisimilitude of the barnyard characters. But no one knew how it had been done. The company of actors and actresses of the Porte St. Martin appeared as roosters and hens and even chicks; there were owls and blackbirds, ducks, geese, rabbits, frogs, pheasants and guinea hens, a peacock and turkeys and the farm watchdog. How was it done?

Months of Preparation.

The thing took months of preparation, and the difficulties to be overcome were innumerable and without precedent. Each character of the drama has to have a separate device invented in order that its impersonation should become possible. Each difficulty was overcome in turn. One of the most difficult of the characters to portray so that verisimilitude should be retained was that of the watchdog Patou. No actor could go through a whole play on all fours and go on doing any acting after the first fifteen minutes. Something had to be done to give the actor an unright position and still have a four legged dog.

The device invented for this character, remarkably well played by Jean Coquelin, while it permitted him to stand upright, still made it necessary for him to mind his p's an dq's during the whole course of the play's action. The dog represented is a shepherd, and the vertical height from head to fore feet is that of a man. Coquelin in this stood up, his head within the casing of the dog's head, but he was compelled to hold his arms slightly backward and his palms turned in the same direction. In each hand he held one end of a steel wire, running over tiny pulleys down the inner side of the hind legs to just below the middle joint. Whenever he started to walk with his own legs he suited the action of the dog's hind legs to his own by means of the wires.

Wonderful Devices.

Of course the kennel for Patou was of corresponding size. This scale was maintained for all the scenery, and to carry out the idea of scale features were introduced in each to emphasize it. The cage for the supposed pet blackbird of the farmhouse was as large as a human prisoner's cell, while an old shoe, supposedly belonging to the farmer and left in the barnyard, was of huge dimensions. Everything was of the size that it would appear to be to the animals of the scene.

While the mechanism devised for Patou was ingenious, that for the owls was a masterstroke of stage invention. The owl, it will be remembered, does not walk, but hops, both feet at a time. Moreover, it is much smaller in size than the rooster. Here were two difficulties, and this is how they were overcome:

A wooden seat was built for the actor, so that his feet and a projecting board at right angles to the seat should just touch the ground. The back board was carved and covered with owl feathers and became the tail of the owl, which in nature just reaches as low as the owl's feet. The rest of the back board propped the actor's back. After fitting on the owl makeup he, seated, was able to hop without much discomfort, his height was materially reduced and when not in motion he could rest easily in a sitting posture.

How the Owls Worked.

The actors playing the parts of the owls had their faces covered with the owl head, but those playing the parts of all the fowl and birds had their makeup so arranged as to permit of their own human faces appearing below the beak. This, apparently incongruous, in actual representation added but to the piquancy of the effect.

The scene in the barnyard is filled with chickens continuously. The representation of these also presented considerable difficulty. One of these difficulties was the tail feathers. In order to appear natural the tail feathers should be almost as high as the head. For the nouspeaking parts it was arranged so that the actors should stand upright, with their heads hidden in the tail feathers and eyeholes invisible to the audience. The heads of the fowl were flexible and were moved at will, particularly for scratching for worms. The chief speaking parts among the fowl had devices for moving the tail feathers. Children took the parts of the chicks.

AN ARMY BREAD A WOMAN BAKES

New Recipe Tested by Commissary Department.

WILL KEEP INDEFINITELY IF DRY

Claim Made For Bread Baked From Formula Devised by Wife of Adirondack Guide—Officers Believe It Will Prove of Greatest Value to the United States Army.

Mrs. Jacob Wetmore, wife of a guide in the Adirondacks, is the inventor of a new bread recipe which army officers of the commissary department at Washington believe will prove of the greatest importance to the United States army. The bread, called "hard bread for campers' use," appears to last indefinitely when baked according to Mrs. Wetmore's instructions and likewise has the advantage of being as healthful, crisp and tasteful as the French breads.

Brigadier General Henry G. Sharpe, commissary general of the army, has had several tests made at Fort Riley and in California. With the added ingenuity of the army bakers the finished products, which are being forwarded to the war department, give promise that the United States army will soon be on an equal footing with foreign armies so far as this important ration is concerned.

Lighter the Batter Gets the Better.

Early last November Brigadier General Sharpe's attention was first brought to Mrs. Wetmore's recipe. It was forwarded by P. L. Hudson of New York. Here is the recipe:

"Make a sponge about 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon by adding a cake of yeast foam (which has previously been softened in a little water) to a batter made of a tablespoonful of mashed potato and a pint of water in which the potato has been boiled, with sufficient good bread flour stirred in so that the batter will drop from the spoon, not run as a liquid. Let this rise in a warm place after giving it a good beating until about 9 or 10 o'clock at night (the lighter it gets the better), then add a pint of lukewarm water, a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of sugar and a bit of lard the size of a hickory nut, though the bread will be as good perhaps if this is omitted.

Cut Into Squares Like Cookies.

"If a bread mixer is used, put all these ingredients into it and add three quarts of flour, measured before sifting, first deducting therefrom the amount used in making the sponge in the afternoon; mix or, if a mixer is not used, knead with the hands until when poked with the finger tip it seems elastic and does not stick to the finger. Cover and let rise over night in a warm place (75 degrees), and in the morning turn out on a board and pound with the back of an ax for twenty minutes, working in all the flour you possibly can. Then roll out about an inch thick with a rolling pin and cut into squares of about two inches, place on a greased baking sheet, such as cookies are baked on, and let rise until nearly twice their height, or until very light.

"Bake about half an hour in a moderately hot oven and then leave in a warming oven or about the stove somewhere to dry out thoroughly for a day or two. Keep in a dry place, and when wanted to use roll one over once or twice in cold water, drain carefully from one corner, place on a plate and in a short time it will puff up much larger and seem like freshly baked bread. This bread will keep indefinitely if kept perfectly dry."

A GILDER MEMORIAL.

Fund Proposed For Civic and Political Research.

A movement has been started for the creation of a permanent memorial to Richard Watson Gilder. The plan is undertaken by a committee of forty-five members, of which A. S. Frissell is treasurer. It is proposed to raise a fund of $100,000 to be known as the "Richard Watson Gilder fund for the promotion of good citizenship." The aim is "to perpetuate and realize his lofty ideals of civic patriotism and to continue the efforts for the improvement of the conditions of civic life which constituted so large a part of his own work."

The plan is to intrust the fund to Columbia university, the income to be used for the support of several fellowships for the pursuit of social and political sciences and for practical civic work. Holders of the fellowships will be known as Gilder fellows and must devote themselves to the investigation and study of actual political and social conditions here and abroad "with a view to securing more accurate and extensive knowledge and to improving these conditions."

A Quaint Epitaph.

Here is an epitaph which may be read in an English churchyard attached to Leamington church:

"Here lies the body of Lady O'Looney, great-niece of Burke, commonly called the sublime. She was Bland, Passionate and Deeply Religious; also she painted in water colors and sent several pictures to the exhibition. She was the intimate friend of Lady Jones. And of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

LONG COAT IS DOOMED.

The Narrow Shaped Skirt Also Gives Up to the Gored Garment.

Unless all signs fail the day of the long coat and narrow shaped skirt is near its end. Soon we shall all be clad in short coats, seven gored skirts and all that sort of thing. To the woman whose means are limited and to the woman who is economically inclined this change in fashion will bring no hardship. The transformation of a long garment into a shorter one is not a difficult matter, not halt so trying as to convert a short one into a longer.

Of course it seldom happens that a renovated garment can be made as smart as a brand new one. When the original lines of a coat are interfered with the result is quite likely to be more or less awkward and unsatisfactory. Despite this fact, there are always a large number of women who are driven by financial reasons to make over everything which can be made over, and there are also some women who have a passion for reconstructing their clothes. This craze is so strong in some women that they would rather change a gown into something worse than to leave it alone.

From time immemorial alteration has been regarded as the especial privilege of the amateur. Nothing could be more absurd. How is it possible for a person unfamiliar with the art of dressmaking to rip up the work of a professional and reconstruct it so that it will look as well as it did originally? Here and there may be found a woman who is capable of making an acceptable gown out of an old one; but, as a rule, it is better to wear a well made and becoming old garment, even if it is not in the very height of the mode, than to run the risk of transforming it into something which is too distinctively homemade.

One may wear a dinner gown, a house frock or a dancing gown that is no longer in the first flush of fashion, but it is practically impossible to feel comfortable in a tailor made suit even slightly out of date. Unfortunately this is the very costume which is hardest for the amateur to reconstruct. First class tailors seem to have conspired to undertake a job of this kind only at a ruinous rate, and the ordinary house tailor or dressmaker is almost certain to make a botch of it. That is one of the things which make a tailored gown a luxury.

It appears now that the coat ending just a little below the hips will be the early spring style. Already three good models have made their appearance. One is narrow, with almost straight underarm seams, single breasted, fastened with three straight bands of braid and buttons placed well toward a plait that runs from shoulder to hem instead of a dart. The sleeves are narrow, the revers run to the waist, and there is a pocket just above the hem.

Another model is much the same, but cut a little shorter. It also has shawl revers and is double breasted below the waist, fastening with two fancy braid pieces. There is an underarm piece set in on the same lines that were carried out in the winter coats. It ends in a point below the waist and runs up to the shoulder.

Still another model coat is cut off an inch below the waist line and has a shaped peplum stitched on under a band. A stitched band outlines a dart that runs down the front, beginning under a wide shawl collar of fur. Above the hem is an oblong pocket flap trimmed with stitched bands. This coat is fastened with three bone buttons below the revers, and the sleeves are long and plain. With each of these coats is worn a tight fitting, narrow short skirt with a deep yoke and plaits put on at the sides, leaving the front and back plain.

The fashion for white fur is at its height. Never before has this color in pelts been so great a favorite, especially among the younger set. Girls are now wearing huge white Cossack turbans of beaver or coney, with a single pink or red rose for trimming; white fox pieces about the neck, and they carry immense flat muffs of white fox lined with pink or violet satin. This attractive fur soils easily, but it may be cleaned successfully without much trouble. EMILY SLOANE.

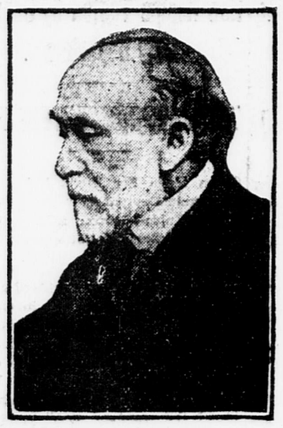
MODERN HAIR DRESSING

has played havoc with the tresses of the fair sex, and druggists everywhere comment on the fact that they are selling large quantities of sage for making the old-fashioned "sage tea," such as was used by our grandmothers for promoting the growth of their hair and restoring its natural color. The demand for this well-known herb for this purpose has been so great that one manufacturer has taken advantage of the fact, and has placed on the market an ideal "sage tea," containing sulphur, a valuable remedy for dandruff and scalp rashes and irritations. This preparation, which is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, is sold by all leading druggists for 50 cents and $1 a bottle, or will be sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.

THOMAS C. PLATT

Noted For His Activity In New York State Politics



DEATH'S CALL IS ANSWERED

Former Senator Platt Dies Suddenly In New York

HAD BEEN SICK MANY YEARS

Mind Remained Active and He Was at His Office Every Working Day—Recognized as One of Country's Most Adroit and Powerful Politicians—Called a Leader by Friends and Execrated by Enemies

New York, March 7.—Thomas Collier Platt, from 1897 until last year a United States senator from New York, died Sunday afternoon at the home of Gustave Abel, with whom he had lived for the past four years.

The end was sudden and peaceful. The senator's last impression of this earth was the sight of his three sons, his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Frank H. Platt; his grandson, Livingston Platt, and Mr. and Mrs. Abel, all of whom surrounded him as he passed away.

Death was caused by chronic and acute Bright's disease, a malady from which Platt had suffered for fifteen years.

Three-quarters of an hour before he expired he appeared to be in moderate health and in possession of all his faculties.

Mr. Platt was president of the United States Express company. Every working day he was at his office and bore his 77 years without hardship. He had planned to return to his work this morning as usual.

With Platt's death goes to his rest the last of the Republican barons.

To his friends he was a leader. To his enemies he was a boss. He was, perhaps, both. He typified all the arrogance of the old feudal lord, trampling out opposition with a ruthless foot. He typified all the gentleness of the graciousness of the old seigneur, lavishing favors on his retainers and rewarding a kindness threefold.

His life contained in it much that was good, some that was bad and some that was unpleasant. He was a man of contradictions. He possessed great strength and great weakness. He was frank and secretive. He was broad and he was narrow. He was as brave as a lion, and yet sometime possessed only the courage of deception.

His victories were always his own. He rose by his own efforts and he fell only when the infirmities of years descended on him, and then by the treachery of those he had made.

He was withal a very great figure in New York state, where he was execrated by his enemies as few men have been. He wrote his name on the history of his native state for a period covering nearly forty years, and when that can be said of a man it must be admitted that he had virtues and that there were strong elements in his character.

Mr. Platt was born in Oswego, July 15, 1833. He was educated in that school which believed "to the victors belonged the spoils" and he gloried in it. He came into politics in the days just after the war, when party spirit ran high. It was that spirit which made the stalwart and the half breed.

Mr. Platt was one of the "306" at Chicago. He was the "me too" butt of the American humorist. No man had such ridicule to live down. No man faced greater humiliations. No man had reason to harbor more bitter resentments. No man had more implacable enemies. He lived the ridicule down; he faced the humiliations with a brave face. He kept alive or stifled his resentments as it suited him, but he punished his enemies when the time or the opportunity came.

BLACK IS DISCARDED

Blue, Pink and Lavender the Latest Colors For Coffins

New York, March 7.—The coffin trust, besides making most of the coffins in which people are buried nowadays, has just branched out and is now leading the world in setting the fashions in coffins. Within six months the fashion in caskets has changed as thoroughly as in clothes.

Three funeral processions moved down the Bowery on their way to the Williamsburg bridge and the cemetery in Brooklyn. The first hearse was drawn by white horses caparisoned in black net coverings. The hearse was black, but through its glass windows could be seen a bright pink coffin, apparently the casket of an adult. The next funeral was that of a half-grown child, and the casket was a bright blue, on which were worked figures of roses and carnations. The third funeral procession followed a hearse in which was a casket of lavender, beautiful, costly and exquisite in workmanship.

ADVANCE IS WORLD-WIDE

United States Not Alone In the High Prices For Meats

Washington, March 7.—Meat prices have advanced in all the principal consuming and producing sections of the world, according to statistics compiled by the department of commerce and labor.

The report shows the chief meat exporting countries of the world to be Australia, New Zealand, Argentina, Canada and the United States; the chief meat importing countries, the United Kingdom, Germany, and in a less degree the other European countries.

All of the meat exporting countries show higher prices per pound in their exports in recent years than those of a decade ago, and all the meat importing countries show higher rates in their import figures and the current market quotations.

"CHECK-KITING" IN CAMBRIDGE BANK

It Has Been Carried on In a Most Adroit Manner

Boston, March 7.—The cases growing out of the wrecking of the National City bank of Cambridge will be presented to the federal grand jury tomorrow by United States Attorney French and Assistant United States Attorney Garland. It is expected that secret indictments will result and that further arrests will follow.

Special Agent DeWoody of the department of justice said that the system of "check-kiting" revealed in the government's investigation by which the bank thefts of nearly $200,000 were covered up was one of the most adroit schemes he had found in his experience as an investigator of embezzlements.

Absolutely no record of the transactions by which the bank lost sums ranging from $1000 to $6000, and aggregating $190,000, in fifty separate transactions, can be found on the books of the institution.

DEATH OF LOUIS JAMES

Heart Disease Carries Off Noted Actor of the Old School

Helena, Mont., March 7.—Louis James, actor, was stricken with heart disease in his dressing room at the Helena theatre and died at his hotel a short time afterward. The company will disband, and Mrs. James will return to her home at Kansas City.

Louis James was one of the best known actors of the "old school." His part was usually that of the tragedian. Before starring himself, he was associated with Lawrence Barrett, Modjeska, Frederick Warde and other stars, taking leading parts, chiefly in Shakespearian productions.

He was born in Tremont, Ills., Oct. 3, 1842. In 1871 he married Lillian Scanlon, who died in 1876. He then married Aphie Hendricks.

NEILL IS EXONERATED

Report Favoring Labor Commissioner Is Accepted by Nagel

Washington, March 7.—Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and labor has accepted the report of a committee of officers of his department that there was no foundation for the charges preferred against Labor Commissioner Neill by Thomas R. Dawley, Jr., formerly special agent of his bureau.

Dawley alleged, among other things, that Neill altered reports on woman and child labor because the facts set forth did not support conditions which he had started to prove.

WHOLESALE POISONING

Charged Against Hyde In Indictments by Grand Jury

Kansas City, March 7.—Dr. B. C. Hyde, husband of a niece of the late Colonel Thomas H. Swope, was indicted on thirteen counts in eleyen indictments returned by the grand jury which has been investigating the Swope mystery for the last three weeks.

The indictments charge first degree murder in connection with the deaths of Colonel Swope and of Chrisman Swope. Hyde is alleged to have given them strychnine tablets. One indictment accuses Hyde of manslaughter in bleeding James M. Hunton, a cousin of Colonel Swope, in a neglectful manner.

The most surprising of all are the eight in connection with the alleged poisoning of the Swope family and visitors and attendants of the Swope household.

Dr. Hyde is accused in these indictments, which contain ten counts, of poisoning with typhoid germs, with intent to murder, Margaret Swope, Stella Swope, Lucy L. Swope, Nora B. Dickson, Georgia F. Compton, Mildred Fox and Leonora Copridge, a colored girl. All these persons were stricken with typhoid fever while Hyde was attending the Swope family.

Three counts in the indictment charge the poisoning of Miss Margaret Swope. The first count charges that he attempted to poison her by administering typhoid fever germs on or about Nov. 25. The second accuses him of trying to poison her by giving a hypodermic injection on Dec. 12. In the third count he is alleged to have attempted poisoning on Dec. 18 by giving her strychnine and other poisons.

Dr. Hyde received the news of the indictment calmly. He affirmed his innocence, and said he was confident a jury would vindicate him.

Disregarding the advice of her attorneys, Mrs. Logan O. Swope laid bare, while giving her deposition in the slander suit of her son-in-law, Dr. B. C. Hyde, the secrets of her household for many years.

She told the story of the courtship of Hyde and of her belief that he had attempted to murder her relatives and at one time tried to poison her. The charge that Hyde tried to poison Mrs. Swope is a new feature in the case.

"On Dec. 12 last he brought me a glass of water that tasted bitter," she said. "I drank some of it, and, noticing the peculiar taste, asked him where he got it.

"'Out of the water cooler,' he replied.

"'He is trying to poison you, mother,' said one of my daughters.

"I demanded that he give me an emetic. This probably saved my life.

"Dr. Hyde married my daughter for money and not for love. He followed her like a hawk would follow a hen. She was his prospective prey."

BULLET IN CHUM'S LUNG

Pistol Cleaning by Lawrence Man May Result Fatally

Lawrence, Mass., March 7.—Leando Ricco, living at 123 Jackson street, was shot through the left lung by a 38-calibre revolver in the hands of his room-mate, Francesco Scarar. He is not expected to live.

According to the statement given the police by the injured man, it seems that Scarar, while cleaning the revolver, accidentally pulled the trigger. The bullet entered Ricco's left side and penetrated his lung. Scarar was not arrested, as the police were sure it was an accident.

THE BRASS BOX.

It Brought About the Speedy Marriage of the Lovers.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

The curio dealer weighed the brass box in his outstretched hand.

"It weighs all of a pound, sir," he said to Hayward. "I bought it ten years ago from the estate of a French antiquary with a lot of other stuff. No one seems to care for it, although I've offered it for almost nothing. It really is a paperweight. You see there is no lock or hinge. It is merely a lump of brass shaped somewhat like an ancient chest. If you care for it you can have it at your own price. It may interest you to know that it was once owned by"— He leaned forward and whispered a few words in his customer's ear.

"I'll take it," said Hayward promptly.

"I thought you would," said the dealer with a nod as he wrapped the brass box into a neat package.

Once in his own rooms Hayward examined the box with interest. It was, as the dealer had said, merely a lump of brass roughly molded into the shape of an ancient chest. The tracings that had once outlined false locks and hinges and nail studded bands were almost obliterated by dirt and discoloration. Restored to its original brightness, it would make a unique paperweight for his desk.

He would reserve the cleaning of the brass box, as he chose to call it, for a rainy evening. Some night when he was not due at Edith's—those evenings were the dullest of the week—he would restore the brass box.

Ten days afterward the rainy evening found him smoking a pipe before a cozy fire. The brass box was within easy reach of his hand, and near by was a drawer full of rags and oil and various chemicals, so he spread a newspaper on the floor and fell to work.

Little by little the discoloration yielded to his efforts until at last the brass box shone forth in the splendor of its primal luster, beautiful indeed.

Hayward admired the delicate engraving that the acids had revealed, and as he turned the box over in his hands the conviction grew upon him that the piece of brass had been intended for some other purpose than that of weighting piles of documents.

"I CAN'T DO IT," HE SAID FRANKLY.

If the curio had really belonged to that beautiful woman, a favorite of kings and whose lightest words had changed the destiny of an empire, as the shopkeeper had hinted, in itself it was valuable as a souvenir of the most famous woman of her time.

With his penknife he idly scraped clean the tracery of a little circle drawn on one end of the box. It was perhaps a quarter of an inch in diameter, and in the center of the circle was a dot. The circle and the dot formed part of a similar decoration that ran around the ends and sides of the box.

As he worked it appeared to Hayward that this circle was different from its fellows; the line was more deeply indented than the light tracery of the others. As he realized this the young man pursued his labors until the point of a fine blade could be inserted to the depth of an eighth of an inch in the aperture.

Examination of the other end of the box revealed the same conditions in the center circle of the row. After diligently cleaning the second circle Hayward now had before him what appeared to be a small round rod running from one end of the box to the other, yet so tightly wedged in as to be immovable by ordinary means. The purpose of this rod was yet to be determined. Its presence there convinced him that the box was indeed a box.

He placed it in his vise and with hammer and tools prepared to force the rod out of the box. It was long after midnight when it suddenly yielded to his efforts and fell to the floor.

Hayward picked it up and carried it to the lamp. It was a small steel cylinder four inches in length, capped on either end by the circle of brass. It was the work of another hour to pry out the rusted cap from one end and reveal a hollow cavity.

From the cavity there dropped a small roll of stiff parchment, yellowed with age and much creased and worn. Hayward's fingers trembled as he unfolded with reverent fingers this missive that had come so strangely to him out of a dead century.

His face paled as he saw the royal crest that topped the sheet and the kingly signature that followed the finely written words. The letter was in French, and as he read the tender, endearing epithets to this woman whom a king had loved Hayward realized that into his alien hands had fallen a great secret which, if revealed, with its hint of plot and counterplot, would prove the literary sensation of a lifetime.

He had but to go forth and say: "See what I have found in an old brass box picked up in an auction room. It is a monarch's autograph letter to his sweetheart. It is as simple and pure in its tender sentiment as a letter that you or I or any other commoner might write, and yet it contains a secret which the world would snatch at eagerly, a mystery for which historians have probed in vain, a doubt which has inspired a mighty volume of speculation! It is here. How much am I offered?"

If he published his find to the world it meant riches to him. It meant more than enough to marry upon and be happy. Edith had waited two years for him to make good the promise of his brilliant college career. Another year or so of upward struggle and he would have arrived at his desired goal. But if in those years he might have Edith by his side!

If he published the letter he had found in the brass box he would be rich. They could be married immediately. Not one man in a hundred would have hesitated, yet Robin Hayward did. He was the exceptional man.

He carried this problem, as he had many others, to Edith herself. The next evening found him explaining his purchase of the brass box and the wonderful secret it contained.

Edith Layton brooded over the royal love letter with tender eyes.

"That is real love, Robin," she said at last. "The poor woman must have treasured the letter. See how it is worn and creased with much reading. She could never bear to part with it, and so she had this box made with the secret cylinder in which to conceal her precious possession. She would not have dared keep it otherwise, and possibly she hoped it would be buried with her."

Hayward nodded. "She died suddenly, you know."

"She probably did not realize that she might be leaving the letter for posterity to scoff at. I know you feel just as I do, Robin. If it would do any good to the world, if it taught a lesson or added to the world's literature—but it does not! What shall you do with it?" Her question came directly at him, as he knew it would come. Her clear gray eyes sought his anxiously, as if she doubted whether he might withstand the temptation.

Hayward stiffened in his chair. "I am tempted to sell it for money, for a price that will enable me to offer you a home worthy of you. That is what I want to do," he said bluntly.

She made no reply. She knew the temptation that assailed him, and she knew the struggle he was making against his better principles.

No man had greater pride in the fruits of his personal endeavor than Robin Hayward. She wanted him to prove his capabilities, not to purchase an easy road to fortune through bartering the frailties of persons long dead. She wanted him to fight a fight and come out victorious.

"We could be married at once," said Hayward, rising and going to her with outstretched hands.

She placed her hands in his. "We could," she said slowly.

"Do you mean it, darling?" he cried ecstatically.

"Yes, Robin."

Five minutes later he was on his way to the door. "I am sure Latham will want the whole thing. You know, he is writing a history of the French courts, and this will be a 'find' for him." He paused abruptly as his glance encountered the stern visage of Edith's grandfather in its gilded frame near the door.

That sturdy American pioneer, Simeon Layton, had asked no odds of any century save his own. No other hands had helped to pile up the immense fortune that arose like a barrier between Hayward and the girl he loved. High ideals, hard work, pluck and steady application had made him a model citizen and a rich man.

With a sudden revulsion of feeling Hayward looked away from the portrait to Edith standing before the fire. She always wore her plainest gowns when Robin came, and now, standing there in her simple white dress, with his modest ring shining alone on her slender hand, she seemed very near within his reach. He would win her by work alone. Every dollar that he earned might pull down a dollar of that great wall of wealth that stood between them.

"I can't do it," he said brusquely. With a single stride he was beside her, and the king's autograph letter fluttered from his hand and fell into the fire. In an instant it was licked into flames and then flew, a gray ghost, up the chimney.

"I was sure you'd do that, Robin," she said, leaning her head against his shoulder. "And now, if you like, I will marry you any time!"

"Dearest, I cannot let you come, and you will miss all this!" He flung his hand toward the richly furnished room. "I must work hard and make you a fortune and then"—

"You will work hard and build your fortune, and I—I will be your apprentice. We will work together. Think how sweet that will be!"

"And we will keep the brass box for a mascot," he said.

BANKER TIED UP AND DISFIGURED

Punished For Being Caught In Home of John Cudahy

Kansas City, March 7.—Finding Jere F. Lillis, a millionaire local banker, in his home when he arrived unexpectedly at an early hour Sunday, John P. WIRES BREAK LONG PLUNGE

Boston Bay Escapes Uunhurt After Falling Sixty Feet

Boston, March 7.—Harry Lewis, aged 10 years, of 3 Humboldt Park, earned the title of the "India rubber boy" when he fell from the roof of his house, a distance of sixty feet, Sunday afternoon and escaped practically unhurt.

The boy was playing with his brother on the slanting roof of a cupola that extends above the two-story house. The younger boy lost his hold and plunged down into the back yard, barely missing alighting on a board fence.

As he fell he clutched at some telephone wires which broke his fall and it is believed saved his life. He was not even stunned.

PERSONAL.

When Ex-Rep. Arthur P. Russell of Quincy, stepped into the position of legislative counsel to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company this year as successor to Charles F. Choate, Jr., he found a pretty large sized pair of shoes waiting to be filled, says Practical Politics, and comments as folows: The indications are, however, that they will be filled perfectly. Mr. Russell made his first appearance before the committee on railroads Wednesday on the bill relative to the abolition of grade crossings. The proponents of the bill had taken over two hours and a half to state their case and the committee wanted to know if Mr. Russell didn't desire to have the opposition heard after the adjournment of the legislature. He replied that he thought he could state his case in a very few minutes. And he did. He didn't take over five minutes and he put the case of the opposition logically and concisely. It wasn't stated so concisely, however, that he didn't show al the weaknesses of the proposed legislation and demonstrated pretty conclusively that the enactment of any such bill would practically stop the work of grade crossing abolition. When he got through and William H. Coolidge started the eminent attorney for the Boston & Maine found that there was practically nothing left unsaid which could be said against the bill. Mr. Russell impressed the committee and the spectators most favorably. It is unusual to hear much comment favorable to an attorney for a corporation among the listeners in a committee room but there was a lot of it favorable to Arthur Russell Wednesday. And the best part of it is that Arthur Russell has worked up to his present position from the office boy for the old New York and New England Railroad company.

Pepys and the Comet.

They were watching a comet in Pepys' day, though Halley at the time was but eight years old. "My Lord Sandwich this day," says the diarist, Dec. 21, 1664, "writes me word that he hath seen at Portsmouth the comet and says it is the most extraordinary thing he ever saw." Again on the 24th: "Having sat up all night till past 2 o'clock this morning, our porter being appointed, comes and tells us that the bellman tells him that the star is seen upon Tower hill; so I, that had been all night setting in order of my old papers in my chamber, did now leave off all and my boy and I to the Tower hill, it being a most fine, bright, moonshine night and a great frost, but no comet to be seen." Later the same day, however, Pepys "saw the comet, which now, whether worn away or no, I know not, appears not with a tail, but only is larger and duller than any other star."

Composer of South Africa's Anthem.

South Africa has a "brand new" national anthem. The country endeavored for some time to secure a composition suitable for that purpose, and out of 150 compositions the work of Berthold Kapolowitz was chosen, and the citizens of Johannesburg had the first opportunity of hearing it performed after it had been formally accepted. The composer is not a professional musician. He is a civil engineer.

—Capt. Charles C. Doten of Plymouth arrived home Friday from his trip in the South and to Panama. He attended the National Editorial Convention in New Orleans as a delegate from the N. E. Suburban Press Association, and from there went to Panama, where he saw the operations on the big ditch.

THE RECORD OF PIERRE P. GARVEN

New Jersey Prosecutor Who Is Fighting Beef Trust.

ONCE A RAILROAD LAWYER.

Power of Man Who Has Had Members of National Packing Company Indicted Is Known to Standard Oil. Fought Political Ring and Was Made a Mayor.

Once among the humblest minions of a great corporation, Pierre P. Garven, who, unaided, has taken up arms against one of the greatest combinations of capital in the world, the beef trust, has within a few days become a figure of national prominence.

Wherever men gravely discuss the cost of living or inveigh against trusts the talk now turns to the young prosecutor of the county of Hudson, N. J., who in Jersey City "doth now the trumpet blow for the giant's overthrow."

He is thirty-seven years of age. His birthplace was the old town of Bayonne, N. J., now chiefly known for the clouds of smoke by day and the pillars of flame by night which issue from the refineries of the Standard Oil company.

The youth of the future "trust buster of Bayonne" was spent in his native town, where he attended the public schools and obtained a good English education. He served for a time as assistant freight agent and was then placed in the auditing department of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. While thus employed he spent his nights attending the law school of New York university and was finally admitted to the bar in his native state. After that he was promoted to the law department of the road.

Attacks Standard Oil.

A Republican in politics, Mr. Garven became deeply interested in the government of Bayonne, which he attacked as corrupt and under the domination of a Democratic ring. It was in this controversy, in which he became one of the leaders, that his qualities as a fighter developed. A man of firm chin and broad forehead is Mr. Garven, and he has the pertinacity of the bulldog when his indignation is aroused. When he threw down the gage of battle to an administration that had ruled for years his friends said to him:

"Pierre, my good young man, you can't do anything about all this. The combination you are going up against is much too big for you."

He lost in the first round and in the second sent the champion of the old order over the ropes and was elected mayor. This was in 1905, and he has been a very active young man ever since. The Standard Oil company was paying fully one-third of the taxes of Bayonne. The young mayor got it into his head that the corporation should pay more. He sent inspectors through the works, discovered property of value not accounted for and raised the appraisal from $7,500,000 to $13,000,000. This was subsequently reduced to $10,000,000, and the men who had been sneering at the young lawyer as quixotic and foolish began to suspect that, after all, he might be able to accomplish something.

Chosen on His Record.

He was not a "new idea" partisan, yet he was active in introducing economies in the administration, especially in the schools.

Some of the things which he had heard about Mr. Garven resulted in Governor Fort of New Jersey appointing him prosecutor for Hudson county. Mr. Fort said at the time:

"I made this appointment not because of my friendship for Mr. Garven, but because I know of no other man in the state more capable of executing the duties of his office and of looking after the welfare of the community."

Mr. Garven on his induction into office fulfilled the expectations of the governor. Then, although, mind you, many of his advisers disapproved of so colossal a task, he began this fight against the National Packing company, alias the beef trust, which has branches in every state in the Union and in every important city and town and does a business of $600,000,000 a year.

Lover of Baseball.

After he was gravely informed that no such thing as the indictment of the directors of such a corporation could happen he saw to it that the grand jury of Hudson indicted twenty-one packers and six corporations on the charge of conspiracy to feloniously and unwarrantably increase the price of meats and poultry. It now remains to be seen how he will emerge from this last struggle with titanic forces.

Mr. Garven is fond of athletic sports. He was president of the Central Railroad of New Jersey Athletic association and was a member of the Central Building Baseball club, composed of employees in the Jersey Central's main New York office, playing first base in all match games. He still keeps his hand in on the diamond and almost invariably carries his favorite baseball bat with him when he goes away on his vacation. Mr. Garven is also a patient amateur deep sea fisherman. He is married and lives with his wife and two daughters at 64 West Fourth street, Bayonne.

REAL FIGHT YET TO COME.

Football Meetings to Date Have Been Preliminary Skirmishes.

EXPERTS TO CLASH AGAIN.

When the Rules Committee Reassembles In New York March 25 and 26 They Will Lock Horns and Tear Game to Shreds, Then Patch It Up Again.

The real changes in the football rules are yet to come. There wasn't even a skirmish at the preliminary meeting held in New York recently. Not until the committee reassembles in Gotham, March 25 and 26, will the gridiron experts lock horns over what shall be done to change the rules of the game. Then there is likely to be a series of interesting sessions, and it need occasion no little surprise if the committee is divided into several camps which exist concerning the merits or demerits of some of the suggestions submitted.

There seems to be a mistaken idea in some sections of the country as to just what the committee did at its last meeting. Contrary to this view, the rules committee did not go on record as favoring anything. What it did and all it did was to receive the hundreds of suggestions submitted by football experts and many not experts from all sections of the country, eliminate those which were wholly visionary and classify into groups those which the committee thought might be workable. But the delegates did not commit themselves to any group in whole or in part.

The committee was disappointed that at this session it did not either actually amend some of the rules or make definite recommendations to this end. Before the delegates were called to order and during the first day of the session they still hoped to take some specific action. It was not until late the first night, when they had discussed the rules until, as one of them said, they were "groggy," that they realized such action was hopeless at this session. Consequently they concluded that the best they could do was to classify the various suggestions into groups and then throw the whole subject open to debate once more.

Although the committee arranged the various suggestions into three groups it did not give its approval to any of them. Its purpose in arranging them into groups was to aid the general public and the football men who will be asked to consider them in formulating ideas that will result in a satisfactory code. Thus those amendments which supplemented each other and which seemed to go naturally together were grouped in one combination. It is quite likely, though, that when the committee meets again several different combinations, not only of the suggestions already made, but of new ideas, will have been worked out. It is not improbable that the new rules when amended will contain one or two features not even discussed at this meeting, though it might be said that nearly every idea ever conceived of was submitted to the delegates.

The general public is most interested to know which of the ideas grouped by the committee is likely to find most favor in their eyes. Although the delegates talked freely enough behind closed doors they would not commit themselves, for publication at least, to any definite plan.

The committee expects and hopes to receive a good many more suggestions from football men and educators all over the country. The delegates expressed themselves as extremely anxious to find out the will of every one interested before taking final action, and it was partly for this reason that it took no definite action at its first session. The football situation now bears some analogy to the recent situation in English politics. As the British ministry let the English public express its approval or disapproval of the budget so the national intercollegiate football rules committee has thrown the whole question once more back to the public for further debate. The committee wants to receive suggestions and criticisms and thinks ample time has been given for every one to be heard. It hopes, and so does every one else interested, that before its next adjournment the tinkering with the rules will end, for this year at least.

FLORIDA MOTORBOAT RACES.

Annual Regatta Promises to Be One of Best Ever Held on Lake Worth.

The officers of the Palm Beach Power Boat association in charge of the four days' regatta which commences March 15 are rapidly completing the details which go to make affairs on Lake Worth, Florida, the successes they have been in the past.

The owners of racing craft have commenced to ship their boats to Palm Beach, so that they can have trials in private before the dates of the races. Among the latest entries are some of the most noted racing craft in the United States, and it is quite possible that the recently exhibited Premier power boat made at Boston will be one of the contenders for the big prize of $2,000 in gold.

Berthollet and Robespierre.

It is said that the celebrated savant Berthollet in the most dangerous times of the republic sustained his fearless love of truth. Some days prior to the ninth Thermidor a sandy deposit was found in a barrel of brandy intended for the army. The contractors, suspected of poisoning, were immediately arrested, and the scaffold was already prepared. Berthollet, however, examined the brandy and reported it free from all adulteration.

"You dare maintain," said Robespierre to him, "that that brandy does not contain poison?"

As his reply Berthollet drank off a glass, saying, "I never drank so much before."

"You have plenty of courage!" exclaimed Robespierre.

"I had more when I signed my report," replied the chemist, and here the matter terminated.

Fiddling and Skating.

The celebrated violinist Joachim during a winter residence in northern Germany was in the habit of watching the skaters on a fine piece of water beneath his windows until one day it occurred to him to try the exercise himself. As he had never yet donned a pair of skates he put himself into the hands of a man who provided skates and instruction in the art on the brink of the water and was soon equipped and started on the ice, the master leading his pupil.

Finding no difficulty in keeping his balance under these circumstances, Joachim felt sure he could go alone, desired his leader to leave him and the next minute was sprawling on the ice on his back.

"Aha!" said the teacher triumphantly as he raised his prostrate pupil "You see it is not quite so easy as playing a fiddle!"

Order in City Council for Its Purchase Would Result in Big Improvement.

Long Drawn Out Debate on Location of Tuberculosis Camp.

A regular meeting of the City Council was held Monday evening at which there was a prolonged debate as to the authority of the City Council in matters pertaining to the Board of Health.

Edward P. Histen, the new member from Ward Two, was present and was sworn in by the City Clerk and assigned to seat 14.

Councilman Cherrington, Loud, Sandberg and Woodward were absent.

A communication was received from the Marshfield Board of Trade relative to the enactment of a law to relieve the tapayers of unjust taxes. Referred to the Executive.

REPORT OF SCHOOL BOARD.

A communication was received from the School Committee in answer to the resolve passed by the Council at its last meeting asking the committee which it desired built first a school building at Wollaston or Montclair. The Committee say in reply:

"That in the fall of 1909 the School Committee asked for a twelve room building at Montclair to provide for that section and to relieve the Quincy, Wollaston and Massachusetts Fields schools, but since that date a pressing demand has arisen for a new building at Wollaston to replace the present one, where the said building must either undergo extensive repairs or a new building must be provided.

The School Committee would recommend treating the Wollaston and Montclair districts as one, and would reconsider its previous recommendation for a twelve-room building at Montclair, and ask for an eight-room building at that place so built that it can be enlarged when demand arises. This would relieve the Quincy school of about one-hundred and fifty pupils.

The School Committee would also recommend a twelve-room building and hall to replace the Wollaston school on the present lot. This would take care of the children to Hancock street down to the Tubular Rivet works thereby relieving the Massachusetts Fields school and obviating the necessity of children crossing railroad tracks at grade since the Beale street bridge is the natural crossing. The School Committee would therefor urge your honorable body to consider these buildings together."

Referred to the Committee on Public Buildings.

PETITIONS.

A petition for the acceptance of Warwick street was received and referred to the Committee on Streets.

A petition was received from the Telephone Co. for attachments on Safford street, Highland and Elm avenues. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received asking the city to take charge of the clock on the Universalist church. Referred to Committee on Public Buildings.

A petition was received for the acceptance of Clairmont avenue. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Moir presented a petition for the acceptance of a part of Belmont street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Moir presented a petition for the acceptance under the betterment act of Royal street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received for the maintenance of a road leading from Owens street to Albertina street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

PUBLIC HEARINGS.

At 7.45 o'clock a public hearing was held on the petition of the Telephone Co. for attachments and underground conduits.

John Hyland representing the Telephone Co., appeared and told what the attachments were for. He was asked a number of questions by Councilman Bryant as to the attachments on Wollaston avenue.

Mr. Hyland said that the wires that connected several parties on this street were run across fields, and that during the storm they were blown down. That the Commissioner of Public Works had granted a temporary location and that the wires were already up.

There was no opposition and the hearing closed. The order was recommitted.

A public hearing was held at 7.59 o'clock on petition of the Electric Light Co. for a location for poles Supt. Austin explained what the location was for.

Councilman Bryant asked as to the trimming of wires and Mr. Austin said his company were ready and willing to go ahead and do all trimming necessary. There was no opposition and the hearing closed. The order was recommitted.

NEW COUNCILMAN.

A report of the result of the special election of March 1, was received and read and the result was declared to have been as read, the new Councilman being Edward P. Histen.

TUBERCULOSIS CAMP.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported ought not to pass on the order requesting the Inspector of Buildings not to issue any permits for tuberculosis buildings for sleeping purposes within 300 feet of any house occupied for dwelling purposes.

Quite a lengthy discussion followed as to the powers of the Board of Health. It was claimed by Councilmen Whiton, Bryant and Smith that the Board of Health was practically supreme and that while the Council might order the Board to do certain things it would not amount to anything.

Councilman McDevitt and Flynn took exceptions to this statement and argued that the Council had the right to request the Board not to issue permits for buildings.

City Solicitor McAnarney when called upon for an opinion, stated that the Board of Health was created by the Legislature and that the City Council could not add to or take from its powers.

Others to speak on the report were Councilmen Smith, Carey and Bolster.

Councilman McDevitt offered a substitute report for the report of the committee that the petitioners be given a public hearing.

Ruled out of order as an order covering the same matter was now before the Council.

The report of the committee was then accepted.

The Committee on Health reported under another order a substitute calling a public hearing for March 21, for the residents in the vicinity of the tuberculosis camp.

This report brought out another long debate on the powers of the Board of Health. It was argued that while the Council could give a hearing it would not amount to anything and would simply be a waste of time. It would be better if the parties wanted to be heard to petition the Board of Health.

Councilman Whiton, Nowland, McDevitt, Smith, Bolster, Bryant, Carey and Richards took part in the discussion.

Dr. Burke of the Board of Health, in reply to a question, said that as far as he knew, his board had not been asked for a hearing.

The Council refused to accept the report of the committee.

PERMIT TRANSFERRED.

Councilman Gardner offered an order revoking the permit of the New York & Boston Dispatch Co. to transport liquor as that company had gone out of business. Adopted.

Councilman Gardner then offered an order granting a permit to the Adams Express Co. until May 1. Adopted.

Councilman Whiton offered an order changing the location of the arc light in front of the Casino at Houghs Neck. Referred to the Executive.

Councilman Carey offered an order for a light on Clairmont avenue and one on Clairmont street. Referred to Executive.

FURNACE AVENUE.

Councilman Smith offered an order appropriating $4,000 to rebuild Furnace avenue and provide surface drainage. Referred to Committee on Streets.

ANOTHER BIG TIME

Annual Banquet of Board of Trade Tomorrow Night

The annual banquets of the Quincy Board of Trade have always been successes, and the one scheduled for tomorrow night should be no exception. The program includes a good menu, notable speakers, and popular music. Because of postponement of the date, so as not to conflict with the banquet to Admiral Bowles, the sale of tickets has not been as large as it would otherwise have been. But the committee hope to sell 300 tickets tonight, and they should sell 500, the limit of the hall.

LOUIS A. FROTHINGHAM.

The Board is working for the uplift of Quincy, and the members have been unselfish in time and money, often times against odds, and should at this time be given more encouragement.

The reception will take place at Quincy Music hall at 6.30 tomorrow night, to be followed by the banquet at 7 P. M. The caterers will be Burleigh & Marstin, one of the firm being a resident of West Quincy, and anxious to please Quincy people. Good music has been secured for the evening. The list of speakers is a particularly strong one, including Lieutenant Governor Frothingham, Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston and Loyed E. Chamberlain, the president of the State Board of Trade.

JOHN F. FITZGERALD

Ladies will be welcome to this banquet and many have already secured tickets. The tickets are $1.25 and may be secured of T. L. Williams or members of the Board of Trade. If possible they should be purchased before 9 o'clock tonight.

—The volume of water annually passing into the sea from this country is estimated at 70,000,000,000,000 cubic feet, of which one per cent. is used for municipal purposes, ten per cent. for irrigation and five per cent. for power purposes.

THE CARE OF THE POOR

Overseer Elcock Gives Talk Before Royal Arcanum

Overseer of the Poor, James H. Elcock, gave an interesting talk Monday evening before Manet council, Royal Arcanum, on the care of the poor. In opening, Mr. Elcock briefly outlined the duties of Overseer of the Poor. One of the principal duties was the matter of settlement of people who apply for aid from the city. This is an important matter and one that the overseers of the poor in every city and town have to look after carefully.

In explanation of the settlement law, he stated, if a man came to Quincy under age and after becoming of age he paid three poll taxes in five years, and during that five years he had not received aid from any city or town or the state, he obtained a settlement, and thereafter became a charge of the city. In looking up these settlement cases it was sometimes necessary to go back for thirty or forty years and trace the ancestors.

In connection with this question he said the assessors in their yearly rounds often came upon families who they know are in somewhat destitute circumstances, and that they would have hard work to pay their poll tax. These people were in danger of becoming city charges, especially so if they paid three poll taxes. In such cases he claimed that the city would save money if the tax was abated, for while at the start the city might lose a $2 tax, in the long run it might save hundreds of dollars in aid rendered.

OVERSEER ELCOCK.

In cases where persons receiving aid having settlement in other places a bill for aid rendered is sent to the town or city where they have a settlement. A State charge was a person who did not have a settlement in any city or town, and in these cases the State had to pay the bill. In relation to these cases he stated that the State had what is known as a State visitor who went from town to town or city once a month and examined every case. In relation to this visitor it was the custom of the state to allow only what they deemed reasonable charges which he claimed was unjust and was what all overseers objected to. He claimed that the State should allow actual charges.

"Often," said Mr. Elcock, "people in Boston see the hospital ambulance come along and take away some person who has been injured and the question had often been asked who

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It would be difficult to estimate the number of people who have remarked, that the office of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company should be removed to make complete the improvemests about the Thomas Crane Public Library. The family of Thomas Crane have been very generous to Quincy in purchasing adjoining houselots, having removed two houses on Washington street and two on Coddington street, but now the beautiful library and grounds are hidden from view as one approaches from the depot and Fountain square, by a small buiding which occupies only 2,834 square feet of land. Quincy owes it to the Crane family to complete the improvement, especially when it can be done for the sum of $4,500. Quincy has in this vicinity a group of public buildings of which it may be proud, and should show its appreciation. Possibly the Quincy Mutual may erect another attractive building nearby if it sells its present lot.

Pleaded an Extenuation.

An Indiana youth had called with a cab to take the judge's daughter to a dance, scarcely two blocks from her home. The judge entered the room where the youth was waiting. Pacing across the room a couple of times with his head bent and thoughts concentrated, he came short about in front of the youth and declaimed:

"Young man, this cab hiring to go two blocks is foolish, unwise, unthoughtful, misguided, unreasonable, lavish—a prodigality—a—a—I am surprised. My daughter is flesh and blood, and she won't melt, and if her gown should be ruined I bought it, and I can buy her"—

"That's all right, judge, but my father is paying for that cab."—Woman's Home Companion.

The Curse.

An Irish authority thus defines as an expert the effects of a well delivered curse: "The belief among the ancient Irish was that a curse once pronounced must fall in some direction. If it has been deserved by him on whom it is pronounced it will fall on him sooner or later, but if it has not then it will return upon the person who pronounced it. They compare it to a wedge with which a woodman cleaves timber. If it has room to go it will go and cleave the wood, but if it has not it will fly out and strike the woodman himself who is driving it between the eyes."—London Globe.

Strict Women Who Love.

The strictest women are at times the most loving. When this happens their attachment is as strong as death, their fidelity as resisting as the diamond. They are hungry for devotion and athirst for sacrifice. Their love is a piety, their tenderness a religion, and they triple the energy of love by enshrining it as a duty.—Henri Frederic Amiel.

Shadows.

The shadows of the mind are like those of the body. In the morning of life they all lie behind us, at noon we trample them underfoot, and in the evening they stretch long, broad and deepening before us.

TO FILE RECIPES.

Reports Saved of Nineteen Lectures, Not One Ever Used.

Many housekeepers clip recipes and directions for cookery from newspapers and magazines and file them away in envelopes and boxes in a useless way. A woman who saved full reports of nineteen courses of cookery lectures and enjoyed her possession confessed that she had never tried one recipe out of all that remarkable collection. In her case it was conservatism that kept her bound to a few methods, but there are other reasons why some women do not try new ways. In some families members are unwilling to eat any dish that they are not accustomed to or that their fathers did not eat before them. In other households time is limited, and familiar cookery is more easily done. This latter reason has some weight, yet the conservative cook is likely to overlook new ways that after a few trials would prove to be shorter or better than the old.

It is strange, but altogether true, that many housewives place implicit faith in rather indefinite recipes for Aunt Jane's cake or Betsy Jones' apple pudding; but, given a rule from one of the modern text books, they will use it with suspicion and will want to add a little more of one thing or cut down another ingredient just a trifle. They seem to resent being told exactly how to do a thing. In their minds the miscellaneous collection, printed and sold for charitable purposes, or the rules for cakes and pies sandwiched between the testimony of miraculous cures are far better authority than the exact formula in the public school cookery text book or of the advanced schools of domestic science.

It is noticed that housewives are especially slow to adopt new methods in breadmaking which take from the process almost all the uncertainty. In fact, it is almost impossible with the modern recipe and a fresh yeast cake to fail in making a light, sweet loaf. In the old way a little yeast and much time were used; in the new method more yeast is taken, and the time from sifting the flour to taking the loaf from the oven is reduced to five hours. "But the bread tastes of the yeast," asserts the unprogressive cook. Just so years ago, conservative men and women, worrying over the passing of the brick oven, were sure that bread baked in a stove tasted of the iron. The best housekeeper selects wisely from the old ways and takes readily to the new that are proved good by those who have superior opportunity for experiment and study. If the science of household economics depended on the average family kitchen for advancement it would do little more than mark time.

Flying Is the Greatest Sport In the World.

By WILBUR WRIGHT, Aeronaut.

FLYING IS THE GREATEST SPORT IN THE WORLD. IT IS LIKE SLEDDING, LIKE MOTORING, LIKE SAILING, BUT WITH INCREASED EXHILARATION AND FREEDOM.

An aeroplane flight, contrary to the general impression, is FAR STEADIER THAN THE FAMILIAR MEANS OF LOCOMOTION. There is absolute freedom from the bouncing of the automobile, the jar of a railroad train or the rolling and pitching sensations of the sea. No matter how many springs or cushions may be added to an automobile, for instance, there will always be some motion.

On the other hand, the seat of AN AEROPLANE IS ALWAYS STEADY. The aeroplane does not jolt over the invisible wind currents, the ruts of the sky. It cuts its way smoothly. Even supposing the plane to be gliding at an angle of 45 degrees, the seat remains fixed. There is, of course, no absolute parallel in surface travel. And, since there is no roll or pitch to the aeroplane, there is NO AIR SICKNESS COMPARABLE TO THE FAMILIAR SEASICKNESS.

LETTERS OF PUBLIC INTEREST

GAS AND ELECTRICITY

Prices Quoted by Teacher of Home Economics.

Editors of Daily Ledger:

In the Patriot of March 5, I was glad to see the article Board of Trade banquet and to know that the high prices of gas and electricity in Quincy was being discussed by the Board of Trade. I would like to correct one error in it, that is the price of gas in Milton instead of $1, per 1,000 feet is but 80 cents which is only a little over one-half the price that the people of Quincy are paying for the same gas. Milton is also paying the same price for electricity that Boston is paying, which I believe now is 11 cents per kilowatt.

I will quote the prices of gas given in one of the leading magazines recently, for all parts of the country. Chicago pays 80 cents for 1,000ft., Washington, 90 cents; West Philadelphia, Baltimore, Minneapolis, Ann Arbor, Clinton and Sioux city, each pay $1; New York and Detroit each pay 80 cents; Rochester, 95 cents; Omaha, $1.15; St. Paul, $1.20; Newark, $1.10; Concord, $1.40; Great Falls and Spokane pay $1.75. I could give many more quotations that I have obtained personally, none of which reach as high a figure as the price charged in Quincy. As may be seen by these figures, we are paying more than is asked in other places with the exception of two cities in the far west.

There are several pertinent questions that might be asked the Citizens Gas Co., but I will confine myself to two. Does it cost more to lay gas pipes in Quincy than in Milton and other places? Should the consumers of gas in Quincy pay for the plant as well as a dividend on the money invested in same? The reply given to me, when I have complained of the high price, has always been: The expense of laying the pipes was so great and the plant so expensive, that the charge to the consumer must be high, for the first two or three years.

If I am not mistaken the three years have now past, and still we are paying the same price. I am frequently asked if gas is more expensive as a fuel than coal. With gas at $1 per 1000 ft. it is less expensive, but with gas at $1.50 (the price paid in Quincy) it is more expensive. I have used gas entirely for cooking for two years, and would not go back to using coal unless obliged to; as it is cleaner, saves time, and is in every way more satisfactory (except in expense.)

As to electricity, I will also make some quotations from the same source. Austin, Minn., pays 8 cents per kilowatt; Passadena, Cal., also pays but 8 cents, Fort Wayne, New York, Scranton, Orange, Plainfield, West Philadelphia, Washington and Minneapolis, pay 10 cents, Toledo, 9 cents, with a 10 per cent discount; Concord 12 cents, Detroit 14 cents, Ann Arbor 12 1-2 cents, Yonkers, 15 cents, Fitchburg 16 cents and Akron, 30 cents. The latter city is the only place quoted that pays more or as much as Quincy, where it is 20 cents a kilowatt with a 15 per cent discount.

Places all about us have lower rates. Braintree has such low rates that it was said to me recently, while lecturing there, that they did not care to have gas brought into the town, if it were not for the high cost of the utensils many would use electricity for cooking. There is nothing better for that purpose, and when we can obtain the current as cheaply as they do in some of our western cities we will see it more generally used.

In Switzerland where the plants are owned by the government it is used even by the peasants for all domestic purposes, such as running the churns, sewing machines, etc., and when we can obtain it as cheap in this country, it will go a long way towards solving the servant problem.

MEMOIRS JUST FINISHED

What Platt Thought of Political Leaders of Recent Years

New York, March 8.—A few weeks ago the late Senator Platt completed his memoirs, which are now on the press. His summing up of the most famous political leaders of recent years made recently is this:

"I regard Lincoln as our greatest president, McKinley as the most lovable, Hayes and Garfield as the most princely, and Grant as the greatest warrior and peacemaker.

"Roosevelt was the best organization governor the party ever had, Cornell the most inconsistent, Black the most stalwart, Morton the safest, Odell the most forgetful, Hughes a tyrant, and Hill was a peanut politician.

"Blaine was the ideal American, Thomas B. Reed the most expert parliamentarian congress ever saw, and Quay was the cleverest politician the country ever produced."

DEATH OF DR. KLOPSCH

Editor Had Raised Millions of Dollars For Suffering Humanity

New York, March 8.—Dr. Louis Klopsch, proprietor and editor of The Christian Herald, died as the result of an operation performed on March 2. He was taken ill three weeks ago at his home with acute gastritis and became gradually worse until he was removed to a hospital on March 1.

It has been said of Klopsch that since he became proprietor of The Christian Herald, in 1892, he has obtained through that organ $3,300,000, and distributed it in international charities. He had been honored by many nations for his efforts in behalf of humanity.

Dr. Klopsch was born in Germany in March, 1852, and came to this country as a young man. In 1886, in this city, he married Miss May E. Merritt, daughter of a clergyman.

KNOX AND HIS BRIDE FLY TO MEET PAPA

Angry Teacher Fails to Have Young Elopers Arrested

Providence, March 8.—Miss May Boller, who on Friday eloped from this city to Montreal and Plattsburg, N. Y., with Philander C. Knox, Jr., the son of Secretary of State Knox, declared to a reporter in this city that on Sunday night she and Knox had been married in Burlington, Vt.

Young Knox and his bride left for Washington last night on the Federal express, presumably to have a heart to heart talk with the secretary of state. On the same train was Principal French of the Morris Heights school, which young Knox had been attending. He was also on his way to see the premier of Mr. Taft's cabinet.

When Principal French was informed that the couple were on the train he became very indignant, and wired ahead for the police to board the train at Westerly.

At Westerly Chief of Police Bransfield himself was on hand, but he was informed that the two newlyweds were speeding to receive the parental blessing. The officer chuckled and withdrew.

Boston, March 8.—Edmund Woodside of Medford, the 18-year-old bookkeeper of the Schwarzchild & Sulzberger company, who disappeared with $2200 of that firm's money and checks, was arrested last evening in a house on Massachusetts avenue.

It is understood that Woodside went to New York city and arrived in Boston again Sunday night. When arrested but $2 was found in his possession.

On Feb. 25 Woodside was given $2200, embracing $250 in money, to deposit in the Shawmut National bank. He failed to reach that institution, and investigation showed he had left town.

SOUNDS DOOM OF INSURGENTS

Taft Gives Evidence That White House Is Going to Rule

Washington, March 8.—With the passage of the postal savings bank bill in the senate with the solid Republican vote behind it, has come a startling awakening here that foreshadows the complete route of the "Back from Elba club" and all other foes of the administration.

The insurgents are apparently doomed in the general upheaval said to be due from the sudden turn of affairs in the White House, by which, say those in authority, President Taft has finally determined to rule things with an iron hand and insist particularly upon the fulfilment of all party pledges.

True, the passage of a bill favored by the president, with the votes of Senators Dolliver, Cummins, La Follette, Beveridge, Burton and Clapp cast for it, is of itself an event of considerable importance after a period of loudly heralded insurgency. But that incident does not stand alone in this first burst of political springtime on the Potomac.

Coming from the house are rumors that there is not the slightest doubt of the postal savings bank bill passing that body. Coming from the senate are reports that when the interstate commerce bill comes to be put to a vote it will pass and Cummins and Clapp may do their worst and Dolliver may talk about the government being run by "amateurs" until the rafters ring.

In plain language, the "insurgent" ice jam seems to be broken. It has not taken anything like as much dynamite as was used at the Herkimer bridge, but the current is passing through.

It is, perhaps, significant that the change came over the senate about the same time that Gifford Pinchot passed from the stage in the investigation of the interior department. The unconscious humor of J. J. Vertrees, counsel for Secretary Ballinger, of addressing the deposed forester as "Mr. Roosevelt" had in it more melancholy association with reminiscences than with aggressive intentions for the future.

Somehow the impression is going abroad that the "Back from Elba club" has been "busted." Those who admire Pinchot for his course in bringing forward the importance of conservation are disposed to let rest in peace the collapse of the movement that was to disrupt President Taft's cabinet and bring confusion and ruin on the Taft administration.

Chicago Widow Sues New York Broker For Breach of Promise

New York, March 8.—"I love you with all my heart. I want you to marry me at once. Please do not spoil my little bubble. Will you? I'll do my best to make you happy. Try me."

This was the way a letter read which was introduced in court by counsel for Mrs. Helen M. Walters, a Chicago widow, who is suing Theodore A. Ryerson, a broker, for $50,000 for breach of promise.

Ryerson admits the engagement, but declares that at the time he asked the widow to become his wife he was not aware that his income was insufficient to maintain a wife in the style in which Mrs. Walters was accustomed to living.

HEAD OF CUSTOMS COURT

Michigan's Chief Justice Now Slated For the Position

Washington, March 8.—President Taft is expected to nominate Robert M. Montgomery, chief justice of the state of Michigan, to be presiding judge of the new customs court, in place of Alfred C. Coxe of New York, who declined the position. When the committee on appropriations refused to fix the salaries higher than $7000, the president withdrew all the nominations, out of courtesy to the appointees, but it is understood that all the other men nominated, except Judge Coxe, have signified that they are willing to serve.

ST. MARY'S GUILD.

The ladies of St. Mary's parish organized what promises to be a flourishing guild on Monday evening, about sixty gathering in the music room at St. Mary's church. These officers were elected:

President—Miss Catherine Shea.

Vice President—Mrs Catherine Teasdale.

Treasurer—Miss Anna Burns.

Recording Secretary—Miss Anna Foley.

Financial Secretary—Miss Elizabeth McNeil.

Directors—Rev. Fr. Grady, Mrs. Abbie Little and Miss Anna Anderson.

Meetings will be held on the second and fourth Fridays in the music room.

A Dr. Johnson Story.

Dr. Johnson had some ideas on education, especially on that diversion known as "learning a piece by heart."

One day Mrs. Gastrel set a little girl to repeat to him Cato's soliloquy, which she went through very correctly. The doctor, after a pause, asked the child, "What was to bring Cato to an end?" She said it was a knife. "No, my dear, it was not so." "My Aunt Polly said it was a knife." "Why, Aunt Polly's knife may do, but it was a dagger, my dear." He then asked her the meaning of "bane" and "antidote," which she was unable to give. Mrs. Gastrel said, "You cannot expect so young a child to know the meaning of such words." He then said, "My dear, how many pence are there in sixpence?" "I cannot tell, sir," was the half terrified reply. On this, addressing himself to Mrs. Gastrel, he said, "Now, my dear lady, can anything be more ridiculous than to teach a child Cato's soliloquy who does not know how many pence there are in sixpence?"

SUNDAY SERVICES

HALL PLACE M. E. CHURCH.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed at the Hall Place M. E. church on Sunday during the morning service. At the close of the sacrament the pastor, Rev. Carl H. Raupach, spoke briefly on "The test of faithfulness," taking his text from St. John 6: 66. "From that time many of His disciples went back, and walked no more with Him." After prayer the choir rendered a very pretty anthem.

There was a decided increase in the attendance of the Sunday school. Junior league was held at 3 p. m. John Pearce led the Epworth League devotional service at 6.15.

The Pastor took for his evening subject "Invited again and again." The text was taken from the 22d chapter of Revelation, the 17th verse, "And the spirit and the bride say come."

At the close of the evening service the president of the Epworth League called a short session of the cabinet.

The regular monthly business meeting of the League was held in the vestry Monday evening. On Thursday evening the league will attend the Pilgrim Union to be held in the Atlantic M. E. church.

CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sunday was a day well spent in the Calvary Baptist church. Large attendance in all departments was evident.

In the morning the pastor spoke on Jno. 19: 30. It being the sixth sermon of a series from the "Seven sayings of Jesus while on the Crose." The word was "It is finished." And the pastor showed how.

First Jesus had finished the work he had come into the world to do, namely: To do His father's will: to bring glad tidings to all; to fulfil Scripture and give His life as a ransom for many.

In the second place, the Jewish age was finished. They had their opportunity and privileges and had rejected them, and when God's Son presented Himself to them, they put Him to death. Since then they have been a by-word and hissing.

In the third place, finished was the atonement for man's sin. The giving of his life as a sacrifice was the end of all sacrifices. "Behold the lamb of God, who beareth away the sin of the word" could be said of Him then, and even now. So that in His death man could be brought into touch with God, as they could before.

He is known as our Father because of the finished work of Christ on the cross, and in doing this gave us a foundation to build our hopes and desires upon. We are not pinning our faith on any dogma or creed or man, but through Christ's redemptive work on Him. God requires faith in His Son's sacrifice as our atonement as essential to our salvation.

TODAY'S COURT.

Salvatore Nigrelli was arraigned for assault with a dangerous weapon on Domenico Bolero at Quincy and held in $100 until Wedensday.

Vincenzo Garless was arraigned for simple assault on Bolero and was held in $100 unti Wednesday.

William T. Ames was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy and John Bracken for drunkenness at Braintree. Both cases were continued until July 1.

—After a most carefully kept record by a Chicago Company it was shown that the electric vehicle was considerably cheaper to operate than the horse drawn delivery wagons and trucks. When it is remembered that the electric vehicle makes a better appearance, travels faster and can be handled quicker and easier there is no question but what it will ultimately displace the horse.

Upon motion of Councilman Smith the order appropriating $30,000 for the extension of the water system was taken from the table.

Upon motion of Councilman Moir the order was amended so as to make the date of the bonds March 1, instead of Feb. 1, and the percent of interest 3 1-2 instead of 4.

The order was then passed to be ordained by a unanimous vote.

BIGELOW PARK LOT.

Councilman Flynn offered an order requesting the School Committee and Committee on Public Buildings of the Council to give a public hearing to the residents of Ward Two, on the site for a school building.

Councilman Bryant claimed the matter of a site for a school building in the Bigelow park district was now before the committee and that the order if it passed would take the matter from their hands.

Councilman Whiton opposed the order.

Upon motion of Councilman Bryant the order was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings.

Adjourned at 10.08 until March 21.

CARE OF POOR

pays the bills. In these cases the hospital authorities go into the history of the party very carefully and find out where their settlement is, and that city or town is sent the bill, and if the party does not pay it the city or town must."

"To bring the matter right home," said Mr. Elcock, "if a party is taken to our own hospital, the same searching inquiry as to settlement is made. If the patient is put in an endowed bed the hospital can not collect from the city or town where the patient's settlement is. Then again, if a patient is a State charge, and after the first week is kept at the hospital as a convalescent, the state will refuse to pay for the time that the patient isis convalescent, putting up the claim that if the patient is able to be up and about the hospital, he is able to be moved to the State hospital."

Mr. Elcock spoke of the various charitable organizations of the city and the great amount of good work they were doing in tiding worthy people over the rough spots, thus preventing them from becoming paupers.

In closing he referred to the Quincy City Home, saying that it was as good as any in the State, and that the unfortunates were well cared for by the city.

Mr. Elcock's talk was very instructive and the members of the organization were given an insight into many matters connected with the care of the poor in cities and towns of which they had previously been ignorant. At the conclusion of his talk he was given a rising vote of thanks.

—W. H. Baron Thoe Schwartzenberg, a direct descendant of house of Schwartzenberg of Holland, son of Baron Ernest Lewis Schwartenberg, born in Wittengan castle in the southern part of Bohemia, has entered the employ of a local broker in Spokane, Wash., as bookkeeper to master American business methods. He left Holland in 1898 and engaged in the nitrate business in South America, afterward traveling all over Europe. Since coming to this country he has visited 40 states and four provinces in Canada, and frankly confesses he did not locate in Spokane to marry an heiress, though he will make investments in real estate for himself and associates in Holland. The baron is highly educated and speaks nine languages, writing six of them. Among his relatives in Germany are several counts and although he speaks of them with a slight evidence of pride, he does not assume any higher place in life than the man who has the everyday title of "mister."

SOME EASTER GIFTS.

Suggestions For Charming Presents of the Useful Sort.

SMART NEW DOLL PINCUSHION

The Hanging Pin Holder an Acceptable Addition to the Dressing Bureau—A French Hatbrush Very Novel and Attractive.

Nowadays presents are being given at Eastertide almost as universally as at Christmas. And as the religious festival is not far distant it is high time to get busy on these little gifts. The suggestions offered are for remembrances of the useful sort that are easily made and not expensive as to materials. Pincushions are acceptable to most women, and the models described are both novel and attractive.

JAPANESE PIN HOLDER.

Blue forgetmenots are painted upon a heavy white satin surface on the French doll cushion. The heart has been sewed together and filled with white lamb's wool, no hard cushion being necessary. After the doll's puffed cap of white satin was made and sewed on an opening at the top of the cushion was fastened round dolly's neck, and blue ribbon rosettes were added as a finish.

The Japanese doll as a pin holder does excellent duty. He is willing and able as well as easy to construct. His separate head, cruel as it may sound, may be bought and fastened to the oblong square of ribbon, which has been stuffed with wool. Ribbon sleeves, sash and bow at the back complete his Japanese outfit, after which he unflinchingly receives whatever pins you give him.

When the small, complete doll is used as a cushion its legs are removed, which is even worse treatment, and the wool filled bag added as a lower section. The ribbon by which the little creature is hung is first fastened round his neck by way of a stock collar.

The heart shaped cushion has been boxed and corded. The box cover requires a box cushion beneath it, and for the benefit of those who do not know let us say that boxing means inserting a strip, wide or narrow, along the edges instead of sewing the back and front immediately together. The process results in a thicker cushion—a more shapely. The cords are merely a decoration. In color the heart cushion is crimson and white, with crimson cord and white ribbons.

A French Hatbrush.

For one of the daintiest hatbrushes you can imagine, select a plain back of irreproachable shape and no ornamentation whatever and with good white bristles.

Before covering the wooden back it may be very slightly rubbed with a fine sandpaper to roughen the surface so that the glue will hold.

Now for the French Louis cover. This is made of corded silk of a deep cream, embroidered slightly with ribbon work in an oblong medallion design. The silk is so cut as to entirely cover the wooden back except on the bristle side, and when the paste is applied to the silk care should be taken that it does not touch the part beneath the ribbon medallion or the top of the brush, but only along the edge of the silk. Do not turn in the edge, but after the glue is dry paste over it a narrow gold lace galloon.

The Lazy Woman's Friend.

the brush and put on her slippers or dust her boots without stooping by means of the long handled implements for this purpose.

Marble Made of Gypsum.

J. M. Bickel of Richfield, Utah, has gone to the coast to complete plans for the erection and equipment of a mill for the conversion of gypsum blocks into marble. He has been working on the details of the process for years and now has it completed. It consists of taking a block of gypsum which is soft and yielding, shaping it to any desired form and when completed submitting it to a chemical bath, by which any desired shade or color can be imparted to it, the chemical converting the gypsum into marble.

Arithmetic by Hand.

We shall never be in danger of forgetting that our ancestors did their sums on their fingers so long as arithmetic retains the word "digits." But modern civilization knows nothing of the elaborate developments of this method. It takes a Wallachian peasant to multiply 8 by 9 on his hands This is how he does it: The fingers of either hand, beginning with the thumb stand for the numbers from 6 to 10. So the ring finger of one hand and the middle finger of the other are stuck out to represent 8 and 9. Counting the fingers remaining on the side farthest from the thumbs he finds them 1 and 2 respectively, and 1 multiplied by 2 gives him the units of his product—2. Then he counts from the thumbs to the stuck out fingers inclusive, finds them 3 and 4, adds these, and gets 7 for his tens. Answer, 72. All this to avoid knowing the multiplication table beyond 4 times 4!

Rose to the Occasion.

Mr. Kajones, who happened to step into the parlor while looking for a book, was just in time to see somebody slip hastily off somebody else's knee.

"Ah, Bessie," he observed pleasantly, "this is a merger, is it? Or is it a limited partnership?"

"Neither, papa," said Bessie, recovering herself instantly; "George is my holding company—that's all."—Chicago Tribune.

BRIEFS.

Cooler today.

Snow is in the air.

John Adams chapter, D. A. R., has given $500 to the Continental hall at Washington, for the bronze bust of President John Adams.

Arthur and Harry Loud are in the West for another carload of horses, which are expected at West Quincy in two weeks.

St. Mary's Guild of West Quincy was organized Monday evening. A list of the officers will appear in the club column of the Wednesday Ledger.

The purchase of Insurance Company lot at the corner of Washington and Coddington streets would complete the great improvement of the grounds of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Now everybody should take hold and make the annual banquet of the Board of Trade tomorrow night another great success for Quincy. It should be remembered that the members are working for the benefit of Quincy, first, last and all the time.

Ladies were crowded out of the banquet to Admiral Bowles, and now they should insist upon going to the banquet of the Board of Trade at Music hall tomorrow night. They enjoy the enthusiasm as well as the men and are fully as interested as the men in improving the city.

The eighth annual concert and ball of the Quincy division of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway employes will be held at Music hall Friday evening, April 8. These affairs have always been red letter nights with the association and the coming event promises to eclipse any previous efforts.

Gertrude A. Boyd Auxiliary to the Spanish War Veterans held a whist party Monday evening in Union hall. There were 18 tables in play. Souvenirs were awarded Frank Smith, C. H. Jones, C. W. Weixler, Mrs. Wardwell, Mrs. L. C. Claflin, Mrs. W. E. Howes, Mrs. E. E. Marnock, Mrs. Henry Allen and W. N. Dorley for obtaining the highest scores.

CONFESSION OF COLEMAN

Throws Light on Operations of Faro Bank Syndicate

Boston, March 8.—The fake faro men of Boston are being protected by their victims. District Attorney Pelletier has found this self-interest and objection to publicity his greatest handicap in punishing men whose bunco work is a marvel of crooked schemes and methods. Men who have been regarded as champions of law and order squirm and object when they become personally concerned.

United States District Attorney French took a hand in the disclosure game yesterday, and for hours he talked with George W. Coleman, the young Cambridge bank embezzler.

How much of the $190,000 robbed from the bank went for election betting and how much for curb stock speculation and how much for entertainment and hig jinks and how much for the fake gamblers was all reviewed and noted.

Both the county and United States attorneys are reported as amazed at the ease with which a scheme, notoriously crooked on its very face, could be so easily employed to separate men of sense and standing from their money. A conservative estimate of the losses very nearly approximates $400,000, and may be more. The hope of the prosecutors is that if the state law is not sweeping enough to punish the offenders the law of the nation will furnish the birch rod to do the whipping.

The county attorney feels certain that the publicity will have this effect to begin with, that the bunco men and their schemes are now discredited and that the systematic crooked work has been stopped.

If the stories heard of Coleman's confession may be credited, the principals in fake faro games will keep from beyond the reach of the law for a long time.

For four hours yesterday Coleman was grilled by United States District Attorney French, and the story, in detail, of his peculations and of subsequently being swindled for a sum that will aggregate nearly $120,000 by the faro bank "syndicate," was literally dragged from him by his inquisitor.

Coleman related in detail his connections with "Big Bill" Keliher, Martin Walsh and another man whom he only knew as "Jack."

His indictment of the faro bank men made clear where the looted bank's funds went.

Coleman told the story over and over after it had been "sweated" from him.

The names of all who took part in the riotous entertainments that he furnished were given to the federal authorities. The men and women who gathered around the bank looter and received money presents or "loans" were included.

Immediately the hunt for the faro men was on. The federal authorities are not given to hysterical running about, but in the same quiet way that they had Coleman come to the office orders went out to the secret service men to round up the men that forced young Coleman to loot the bank of almost $200,000.

So cleverly did the authorities arrange for their interview with Coleman that not a single reporter in the federal building saw him come or go. He sat in District Attorney French's office for four hours and was mercilessly questioned.

Ever since it became plain to Coleman that he would have to face the music he has hoped that the faro men would return the money that they fleeced him out of. With it he could force the government to listen to his plea for mercy.

That is the reason, it is said, that he was so reluctant in revealing how he was fleeced by the "syndicate." He hoped up to Saturday that the money would be returned and he could turn it over to the authorities, beg for mercy and at the same time refuse to divulge the names of the men who had ruined him.

MANUEL TO WED PATRICIA

Announcement of Engagement Is Expected In a Few Days

Paris, March 8.—King Edward arrived in Paris Monday. Although traveling incognito as the Duke of Lancaster, he paid a visit to President Fallieres today, later leaving for Biarritz, where it is believed the engagement of King Manuel of Portugal and Princess Patricia, daughter of the Duke of Connaught, may be formally announced.

Following his visit to Biarritz King Edward will join Queen Alexandra at Marseilles and they will proceed to Lisbon to return the recent visit of King Manuel to England.

TRY TO FORCE TAFT TO END BIG STRIKE

Efforts of Labor Leaders Turn In That Direction

Philadelphia, March 8.—The general strike in this city threatens to spread throughout the state. It is also learned that officials of the American Federation of Labor contemplate calling street car strikes in Pittsburg, Cleveland, Omaha and San Francisco, in an effort to force President Tatt to demand arbitration with the heads of the rapid transit company.

President Greenwall of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor made the declaration that the general strike throughout the state would be declared today at the biennial meeting of the organization at Newcastle.

The strikers say their leaders and associates in the state federation are encouraged strongly by numerous walk-outs of non-union workmen here.

If the computation by the Philadelphia police department is correct less than 20,000 workers have responded to the call for a general tie-up of the city's industries.

Monday was the most peaceful day since the strike of the car men, more than two weeks ago.

CASH LEGACY OF $180,000

It Comes to "Bob" Ingersoll's Widow as Result of a Long Lawsuit

Boston, March 8.—Mrs. Robert G. Ingersoll, widow of the famous agnostic, comes into possession of $180,000 in cash as a legacy from her husband's labors, by a payment made by John H. Leyson of Butte, Mont., administrator of the Andrew J. Davis estate.

Litigation over an old Ingersoll law fee has been in the courts for a long time, the case being that of Cornue, Root, Cummings and Palmer against the Davis estate. Recently the United States circuit court directed judgment for $195,551.98, and Leyson handed Clerk Darling a check for that amount, of which the sum named goes to Mrs. Ingersoll.

FLAMES DESTROY STEAMER

The Manhattan Burns Just After Reaching Portland Dock

Portland, Me., March 8.—Steamship Manhattan, owned by the Maine Steamship company, was totally destroyed by fire. The loss is placed at $250,000. The fire started just after she docked on her arrival here from New York.

Six passengers and a crew of forty men were on the steamer when she caught fire between decks, but, with the exception of one fireman, known as Kapley, who was reported missing, all escaped with the most of their effects. Kapley, it is thought, was burned to death on board.

Won't Submit Proof of Pole Claim

Washington, March 8.—Robert E. Peary has declined, because of contract with a publishing company, to submit his proofs that he discovered the North Pole to the sub-committee of the house naval committee.

Gets $5000 For Loss of Legs

Boston, March 8.—William H. Adams, a locomotive engineer, was awarded $5000 in his suit to recover $100,000 from the New York, New Haven and Hartford railway for the loss of the use of both legs.

CAUSE OF CUDAHY ASSAULT

Banker Paid Attentions to Wife of Kansas City Millionaire

Kansas City, March 8.—John P. Cudahy, the millionaire and clubman, who assaulted Jere S. Lillis, bank president and clubman and former intimate friend of Cudahy, will not talk, referring everybody to his counsel. The cause is the attentions Lillis paid Mrs. Cudahy.

Mrs. Cudahy, in telling of her husband's attack upon Lillis, declared it was the culmination of a long line of brutal treatment. This last act, she said, would result in the separation of herself and her husband.

Lillis will not prosecute his assailant. Charges of disturbing the peace, preferred against Cudahy by a policeman, who interrupted the punishment of the nocturnal visitor, will probably be dismissed with a nominal fine when the case comes to trial March 15. This will end the affair in so far as punishment for Cudahy is concerned.

MOTHERS BEARING TWINS

They Are Included Among the Beneficiaries of Marblehead Man

Marblehead, Mass., March 8.—Because he believed they have never received sufficient credit in the past, the late James J. H. Gregory of this town has included the mothers of twins among the beneficiaries in his will.

Under the terms of his will, which was filed for probate at Salem yesterday, the sum of $1000 was set aside as a trust fund, the income to be divided among the mothers of twins born in this town.

A great liking for children is believed to have prompted Gregory to insert that clause in his will. Though married three times he was never a father, yet all his life he would abandon business cares to take part with children in their games.

MAYORS ELECTED IN MAINE CITIES

Eight Municipalities Controlled by Republicans

Portland, Me., March 8.—In the municipal elections in eleven Maine cities the Republicans elected seven mayors and will control the city government in eight cities. The Democrats gained mayors in Waterville and South Portland, losing control of the city government in the latter city, but winning complete power in the former.

Seven mayors were candidates for re-election and not one failed. The condensed result:

CONFLICT IS EXPECTED

Material Difference In Statehood Bills of Senate and House

Washington, March 8.—Senator Beveridge's committee on territories will vote Friday whether to report the bill admitting Arizona and New Mexico as states of the union, with present indications that the bill will be reported unanimously.

The situation may have been affected somewhat by the straight party alignment which carried the postal saving bank bill through, but it would be by no means settled by the action of the committee on territories.

The two statehood bills which have passed the house vary materially from the senate bills, and a warm contest on the floor may be expected before the territories are admitted, with no certain indications yet that agreement can be reached on all points at issue.

LIMIT ON BIG TRUSTS

Reached When Management of Them Exceeds Ability of One Man

New York, March 8.—Otto H. Kuhn of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., bankers for the late E. H. Harriman, defined on the witness stand here the limits nature has set on centralized finance.

"When an aggregation of roads becomes so great," said Kuhn, "that the management of them exceeds the ability of one man, even if that man is a genius, such a combination is no longer of any economic value."

Monaco Demands a Constitution

Monte Carlo, Monaco, March 8.—Half of the subjects of the principality marched to the palace and waited upon the Prince of Monaco, demanding a constitution, declaring that Monaco is the only absolute monarchy remaining on the face of the globe. The prince promised to consider the delegation's wishes.

ROADS ACTING IN BAD FAITH

Said to Be Planning Mergers at an Alarming Rate

Washington, March 8.—The house committee on interstate and foreign commerce made a most radical amendment to the railroad bill which is at once a blow to the railroads, the desires of President Taft, and of Attorney General Wickersham.

As amended the house bill, which was introduced by Representative Townsend of Michigan, knocks out of the bill the section which was intended to legalize present and prospective railroad mergers. The original administration bill contained the prohibition "That no railroad corporation which is a common carrier shall hereafter acquire, directly or indirectly, any interest of whatsoever kind in the capital stock, or purchase or lease the railroad of any railroad corporation which competes with such first-named railroad corporation."

This section of the bill proved extremely objectionable to the railroad interests of the country. Taft and Wickersham were informed that if it became a law great confusion in the railroad world would result and it would be necessary to dissolve a number of mergers already in effect.

In support of this argument the case of the New York Central was cited. This road owns a majority of the stock of the West Shore, just as the New York, New Haven and Hartford hold a majority of the stock of the Boston and Maine. Under the contemplated legislation these roads would have to dispose of their holdings, probably at a very considerable sacrifice.

This argument was presented so forcibly that the administration bill was amended so that its provisions would not apply to existing mergers and mergers which had begun before the law took effect.

Members of the house committee assert that the railroads have not been acting in good faith since the administration agreed to the modification of the bill, and that several of them have been quietly buying heavily into the holdings of competing companies for the purpose of getting a controlling interest before the Townsend bill became a law.

It is pointed out that instead of putting an end to these mergers the railroads are endeavoring to consummate them at an alarming rate and that having once begun they would be legalized under the terms of the amendment written into the bill by Wickersham at the behest of the railroad officials.

After prolonged debate the committee voted to strike out the amendment proviso and the bill will be presented in the house in its original form.

SCENES OF VIOLENCE

They Cannot Be Depicted In Worcester's Moving Picture Shows

Worcester, Mass., March 8.—Since the recent arrest of a dozen or more young girls on charges of misconduct, the police have been exercising an unusual vigilance over the various moving picture houses in Worcester.

Lieutenant Hall of the police department has been appointed official censor of the moving picture houses. All films have to be submitted to him for approval before they can be shown at the moving picture theatres. All secenes of violence are forbidden by the lieutenant, and as a result the two most important and thrilling scenes in a reproduction of Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" have been placed under the ban.

WHAT TO EAT INSTEAD OF MEAT

Advantages of Vegetarian Diet In Solving Food Question.

HEALTHIER AND COSTS LESS.

Price of Our Eatables Would Be 50 Per Cent Less Than Ordinary Method of Living, Says Eugene Christian. Points Out Need of Finding Meat Elements in Substituted Foods.

By EUGENE CHRISTIAN.

Just now the United States is much agitated over the food question. It is therefore surprising that it required the influence of the dollar mark to cause a great country like America to seriously consider this great problem, and even now it is considered only from a financial standpoint. The indictment against the meat trust is that it has got all the meat. The public cry is, "We want and must have meat, but we will be content if it will give it to us cheaper!" The meat boycott that has spread over the nation does not seem to be for the purpose of permanently abolishing the use of meat and putting in its place a cheaper and purer article of food, but wholly to bring the meat trust to terms.

The chemical laboratory shows that meat is positively injurious compared with vegetable articles containing the same elements of nutrition. Meat contains only two elements of nutrition—namely, protein and fat. The best meat contains but 25 per cent of protein and the average about 18 per cent, while the general average of fat contained in meat is about 9 per cent The balance is water and tissue, which contribute to the body no nourishment whatever, but instead an abundance of uric acid and toxic poisons Each human body weighing 150 pounds makes about two ounces of uric acid every twenty-four hours When we supplement this with the uric acid which is in the flesh of an animal we are apt to suffer from uric acid poisoning, which is so prevalent among nearly all meat eaters. In subsisting upon meat, therefore, we are paying about 25 cents per pound for plain water or nearly a dollar a pound for protein and fat. Many vegetables contain as high as 35 per cent protein, 45 per cent fat, 5 to 6 per cent sugar and about 7 per cent starch, and only from 5 to 8 per cent water—in other words, about 95 per cent pure nutrition—and these same articles can be purchased in the open market at from 1 to 2 cents per pound.

Mistake of Would Be Vegetarians.

The mistake made by those who wish to adopt a vegetarian diet is that they discard meat, which is animal proteids, and do not know how to replace this with vegetable proteids. The body is a chemical laboratory that merely demands certain food elements and nature cares not whether these elements are secured from vegetable or animal sources. The following table shows the vegetable articles that will best substitute meat. Many of them are higher and some lower in proteids than flesh, but those adopting a vegetable diet should exercise some judgment in regard to striking a general balance of about 10 to 15 per cent protein and 6 to 10 per cent fat:

	Protein.	Fat.

He will be best nourished who can best select the articles his body needs governed by age, temperature of environment (whether winter or summer) and work, and combine these articles together at each meal so they will be chemically harmonious and proportion them so that he will not be overfed on some nutritive elements and underfed on others. My experience with many thousand people has proved if these rules or laws were observed that—

First.—Digestion and assimilation of food and excretion of waste would become normal.

Second.—That the body would increase or decrease to its natural weight.

Third.—That the body would rise to the highest degree of vitality and endurance it was capable of taking.

Fourth.—That it would gradually throw off and eliminate nearly all abnormal conditions we call disease.

Fifth.—That the cost of our food would be 50 per cent less than the ordinary conventional method of living.

Sixth.—That it would greatly increase the enjoyment of eating, as it would soon become a most fascinating study, which is always healthful.

Wasteful Method of Getting Food.

All animal flesh must be made from vegetation. The eating of flesh, therefore, is a method of securing the nutritive elements which are in vegetables second hand after they have passed through and been converted by the body of an animal that neither knows nor observes laws of health or hygiene. It is therefore wasteful and dishonest to secure our food in this manner. It is wasteful because the animal gives back only about 25 per cent of the total nutrition that was in the vegetable out of which its flesh was made. It is dishonest because nature contemplated that we would feed our bodies from the vegetable world by our labor, just as the animal does. Eating meat, therefore, involves the question of both theft and murder. The pittance of nutrition that we succeed in getting from animal flesh is in many cases diseased and wholly unfit to be put into the divine temple of the human body. Recent investigations have shown that animals are afflicted with nearly all the diseases human beings have and a great many specialties of their own. It should be remembered that in order to secure the best results from vegetable articles they should be masticated to perfect solution. This will insure perfect digestion, perfect assimilation and will prevent overeating, which is one of the cardinal dietetic sins of the American people.

Meatless Menus.

The following menus will give to the body the same elements of nutrition contained in meat in approximately the right combination and proportions:

For the laborer:

BREAKFAST.

Banana and Cream. Five or Six Dates.
Whole Wheat Bread. Dairy or Peanut Butter. Nuts.
Two Glasses Milk or Banana Coffee.

LUNCHEON.

Home Baked Beans.
Peanuts. Corn Bread.
Soaked Prunes. Milk.

DINNER.

Lentils. Spinach.
Whole Wheat Bread. Nut Butter.
Mixed Nuts. Dates or Figs.
Milk (Buttermilk Preferred).

For the sedative worker:

TRAMP'S GOOD LUCK.

Rescued a Little Girl, and Her Father Gave Him Half His Ranch.

Frank Strome a short time ago was a tramp beating his way westward on a freight train of the Southern Pacific, with El Paso as his destination. Today he owns a half interest in the Valvedere cattle range, in Jeff Davis county, Tex., said to be valued at nearly $1,000,000. It was owned entirely by Samuel W. Jennings.

A few days ago Jennings' seven-year-old daughter was crossing the railroad track with a train a few yards away when Strome grabbed the girl and pulled her from the track. Strome left the scene, but several who witnessed the rescue reported the matter. Soon afterward he was found by Jennings and taken to the ranch, and the other day a deed was filed transferring a half interest in the property to the savior of the daughter of the ranch owner.

RECORD STOP WATCH.

Sensitive Mechanism Marks the Tenth of a Second.

A well known firm of watchmakers in Geneva, Switzerland, has recently constructed a stop watch which registers the tenth of seconds. Hitherto the smallest fraction of time registered by any timepiece has been the fifth of a second, and it was commonly thought that smaller divisions could not be marked owing to the excessively sensitive mechanism that would be required. The watch is fitted with the anchor escapement, and it can be controlled either by hand or by electricity. It has been thoroughly tested, and the experiments have shown that its registration is perfectly accurate.

Ballot Eight Feet Long.

The state secretary's office is beginning to prepare for the state election in South Dakota. The officials and clerks find that the ballot, set in brevier, will be ten inches wide and more than eight feet long. Such a ballot will be hard to issue and even harder to vote. If the use of the referendum continues to grow the ballot will become so cumbersome that many voters will refuse to take it from the judges, and the result is likely to be a light vote on the question of the adoption or rejection of laws.

Covey of Quail as Pets.

Daniel Marlatt, a farmer of Wykertown, N. J., who is known beyond the borders of Sussex county as a relentless enemy of hunters, is now reaping his reward in the friendship of a happy family of quail, which he has cared for at his place all winter and which are now so tame that they will eat out of his hand. Marlatt takes great delight in going out twice a day and calling the birds as he would a flock of chickens.

American Army's New Machine Gun.

The United States army has adopted a new type of machine gun—one so small that it can be carried by a man, or two, with full equipment, can be packed upon a mule. It can be fired from the shoulder and consequently is less subject to capture. Barrels are carried in duplicate and can be instantly changed when they become heated from rapid firing.

HER CHAUFFEUR.

How a Girl Worried Her Family by Loving an Auto Driver.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

"Cab!" called a young girl standing on a curb on F street, Washington.

A chauffeur sitting in an auto on the other side of the street caught her eye. She was very stylishly dressed, very pretty, and, although attractive, the chauffeur looked at her for a moment without replying to her summons, then, as if obeying an impulse, drove his auto to the curb on which the young lady was standing.

"Are you engaged?" she asked.

"No'm."

"I thought you were from your not answering my call at once." She stepped into the auto. "Take me to —— Massachusetts avenue."

"Yes'm."

Formerly all the unfortunate love affairs and misalliances with manservants occurred between the pretty daughter of the house and the family coachman. In these days of motors the coachman has given place to the chauffeur. From the moment Miss Flora Denton, the daughter of a rich congressman who had recently been elected from the middle west, set eyes on the chauffeur there was trouble in store for her.

HE WAS SITTING IN HIS SEAT, UNCONSCIOUS.

"I presume you know all about Washington," she said, leaning forward on her seat. "I don't know my way anywhere. We came only yesterday."

"I'm pretty familiar with the streets. I have to be to drive an auto."

"What a rich, deep voice!" said Miss Denton to herself, then aloud: "I want some one I can trust to take me about. If you will tell me where I can call on you I'll have you regularly."

The chauffeur did not reply at once. When he did he said:

"Call up telephone No. 6842."

Miss Denton took a pocketbook from a little bag hanging to her wrist, from which she drew a card and on the card wrote the telephone number.

"Who shall I ask for?" she said. "I suppose there are other autos there."

"Say you would like to speak to Drake."

"Very well; here we are—the dark stone house over there. What's the fare?" she added as she alighted.

"If I'm to drive you regularly you might pay at the end of the month," replied the obliging chauffeur.

"That'll do very well, if you're satisfied. Perhaps you'd better come tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock to take me for a ride."

"All right, ma'am."

When 3 o'clock the next afternoon came Miss Denton was at a front window in auto costume, drawing on her gloves while waiting for the chauffeur. He drove up punctually and, not knowing that the lady was looking at him, stepped out of his machine and, walking up to the door, rang.

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Miss Denton. "He walks like a ramrod. I believe he was a soldier before he became a cab driver. Just look at those shoulders! It's a wonder they don't pull him over backward."

She met him at the door with a smile, but suddenly repressed it, remembering his station. She asked him to take her across the Potomac. He did so, and once away from the city they spun along merrily. Reaching an old bridge over a shallow creek, he said:

"If I could trust that bridge I would take you back by way of Arlington."

"Cross it. I'll take the risk."

"I doubt if it will hold under the weight of this machine. It's off the main road and not intended for general use."

"Try it."

"I think I'd better not."

Miss Denton sniffed the air. "I had an idea that you were a soldier before you became a chauffeur. I'm surprised at your timidity."

He made a dash at the bridge, hoping for safety in speed. They had got nearly over when it broke under them and down they went.

Fortunately the distance to fall was not great, and the machine remained right side up. But a falling beam struck the chauffeur on the head, and when Miss Denton, who had scrambled out on to dry land, turned to look at him he was sitting in his seat unconscious, with blood streaming down over his face.

At the moment there came the honk of an auto horn, and Miss Denton ran to the main road and signaled for the driver to stop, and two men who were in the machine came to her assistance. They got the chauffeur out, brought him back to consciousness and kindly offered to take both back to the city. As for the auto, it was not to be moved at once.

When they reached the city the chauffeur was about to tell them where to take him when he was forestalled by Miss Denton, who insisted that the accident having been her own fault, he should go to her own home. He demurred at this, saying they would go there first; then he wished to be left at his room. When they reached —— Massachusetts avenue the lady's father, seeing from a window that something was wrong, went out and when informed of the facts directed that the chauffeur come inside, at any rate temporarily. So the man walked in, refusing support, and was placed in an easy chair and given a stimulant. He declined to have a physician called.

A week later Mr. Denton said to his daughter: "Pussy, I think it's time that your chauffeur go back to his garage. He's all right and by hanging around here is losing money every day. I had his auto sent for, and it has been put in order. The bill will come to me."

Miss Denton told the chauffeur what her father had said, softening the invitation to depart as well as she could. The young man bade her goodby, looking longingly into her eyes, while her hand lingered in his, and said:

"If I weren't only a chauffeur!"

He stopped and, turning away, left the house.

The father of Miss Flora Denton, being a shrewd observer of what was going on about him, saw very plainly that his daughter was in danger of a complication that would wreck the peace and comfort of the family. He gave her orders that when she wished an auto she should call him up on the telephone and he would send her one. The girl must either obey or admit that she was desirous of riding with an especial chauffeur, which would be giving away her case. She longed for a spin with the driver of her choice and since she could not ride with him would not ride at all. But she went often to the business portion of the city and kept a sharp eye open for a familiar face belonging to her own especial chauffeur.

Then came the first important social function since Congressman Denton had taken his seat in the house of representatives. The president was to give a reception, and the Denton family were to attend. Mrs. Denton, who was greatly worried about the chauffeur episode, was anxious that her daughter should go about, hoping that the impression made by a common cab driver might be eradicated by some young man of prominence. Washington was full of officials, some of whom were quite young enough for her daughter to marry, and the place literally swarmed with army and navy officers. Mrs. Denton, therefore, got out Miss Flora's most becoming costume and endeavored to excite an interest on the part of her daughter in this her first appearance in Washington public social life.

But the girl was languid and listless. In vain her mother told her of the great people she would meet—young men some of whom were already political leaders, the generals, the admirals and the junior officers near her own age. Flora made no objection to going among all these people, but there was none of that enthusiasm to be expected in a young girl on whom fortune had bestowed such advantages. Finally the mother, losing patience, exploded:

"I do believe you're gone on that cab driver!"

This was the feather that broke the camel's back. Flora burst into tears and, going to her room, locked herself in.

However, when the time came to dress for the president's reception she permitted her maid, her mother supervising, to arrange her costume, and it must be confessed that she looked ravishing. Even the tinge of melancholy in her eyes was becoming.

A throng of people in evening dress were at the White House waiting the entrance of the president. There were members of the cabinet, senators, generals and admirals—indeed, the governmental magnates of the nation. Their wives and daughters, dressed in silks and satins, in laces and feathers, stood with them, forming lines on either side of a passageway along which the president was to proceed to the position in which he would receive his guests. Congressman Denton, his wife and daughter stood among the rest. Presently there was a flourish of musical instruments, and two young army officers marching abreast led the procession escorting the chief magistrate.

"Pussy," said Mr. Denton, "that officer on the right looks for all the world like your chauffeur."

Feeling his daughter's hand clutching his arm, he turned and saw her in a fever of excitement. When she could catch her breath and articulate she whispered:

"Oh, papa, he is my chauffeur!"

"He isn't," protested Mrs. Denton, who had noticed the young man and overheard what her husband and daughter had said.

But when the young man passed within a few feet of them and gave them a smile in which was expressed his satisfaction at having duped them there was no further doubt as to his identity. When a few minutes later he joined them and Flora asked reproachfully, "Why did you do it?" he replied, "I didn't; you took me for a cabman, and I didn't tell you I wasn't one."

Mrs. Lieutenant Drake of the artilery is now stationed at one of the southern forts.

New Tents For American Army.

A new tent, known as the "pyramidal" tent, has been adopted for the use of the regular United States army, the issue of which will commence when the available supply of conical tents shall have become exhausted. It is estimated that the present supply of conical tents is sufficient to meet the demands for a period of eight to ten months.

The kidneys are overtaxed;

Have too much to do.

They tell about it in many aches and pains—

Backache, sideache, headache.

Early symptoms of kidney ills.

Urinary troubles, diabetes, Bright's disease follow.

A Quincy citizen tells here the way to keep the kidneys well.

Mrs. George McDonald, 133 1-2 Quincy Street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I have more faith in Doan's Kidney Pills than in any other remedy I have ever known of and it gives me great pleasure to publicly recommend them. For at least six months I was feeling all out of sorts as the result of kidney trouble. I became tired easily and had but little strength or energy to do my housework. Pains through the small of my back annoyed me a great deal. A friend, knowing of my condition, advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a supply at the Cox Drug store. A short time after beginning their use, I was helped and I now feel like a different person."

Possibly it might be good judgment not to order one for every asylum, even in Bryan's own state, until there had been a thorough test of the cure.—Boston Record.

A MURDER PREVENTED

Arrest for Assault With a Dangerous Weapon

Salvatore Nigrelli was arrested by Inspector Goodhue at 6 o'clock this morning on a warrant charging him with assault with a dangerous weapon on Dominico Bolero at Quincy. He also arrested Vincenzo Garless for a leged assaults took place last Sunleged assauts took place last Sunday in the vicinity of the Mount Wollaston cemetery. It seems the parties, who reside on Canal street, had a wordy war during the morning and a little later Nigrelli went to Bolero and wanted to make up which the latter did. Nigrelli then suggested taking a walk as the day was fine. Bolero agreed and the two started toward the cemetery. When near there Bolero says that he was surrounded by a crowd and that Garless knocked him down and that when he got up, it was to look into the muzzle of a revolver held by Nigrelli who threatened to kill him. His cries attracted the attention of other people who rushed over to where the men were and probably prevented a murder.

This morning Inspector Goodhue and Bolero hid in a house on Franklin street, and as Nigrelli passed on his way to work he was pointed out to the officer who arrested him. While at the station Garless came into bail his friend out, and he also was put under arrest.

The two men were arraigned in court and their cases continued until Wednesday, Nigrelli under $500 bonds, and Garless under $100 bonds.

TALK BY RUBBER KING

Tells Men's Club How Old Rubber is Utilized

Although disappointed in the speaker secured for Monday evening the Men's club of Christ church were fortunate in securing as the speaker of the evening James Stedman of Braintree, known as the rubber king. Mr. Stedman gave the club an unusually interesting talk on rubber, telling of the various processes through which it passes from the time it was taken from the tree until it was put upon the market in the form of rubber shoes, automobile tires, etc., in fact everything in the commercial world for which it is used.

He spoke particularly of the use of old rubbers for which there was a good market. Mr. Stedman has recently opened a manufactory at Braintree where he puts old rubber through a chemical process so that it is again made marketable. At the conclusion of his talk he was given a vote of thanks for the interesting and instructive talk which he had given them.

During the social hour which followed the club discussed the arrangements for the annual vaudeville show and dance to be held at Music hall.

Refreshments were served during the early part of the evening by Henry P. Furnald.

NEW CHURCH CAMPAIGN

Successfully Inaugurated at Atlantic Last Night

The seven-day campaign at the Atlantic Memorial church began most auspiciously Monday night, with a dinner given by several ladies of the parish.

Promptly at 7 o'clock twenty-two men sat down to a delicious five course dinner ,the men being: Cream of pea soup, roast beef, mashed potatoes, tomato macaroni, radishes, cranberry jelly, salmon salad, cheese straws, ice cream, cake, crackers, cheese and coffee.

At each plate a bouquet of carnations was laid.

By 9.30 o'clock $2,000 had been pledged just among those present and the men went out to move the hands of the clock forward amid cheers and vigorous ringing of the church bell.

The campaigners are to meet each night this week at 9 o'clock to move the hands of the clock. Some ladies will be present to serve a lunch. Such great enthusiasm has been displayed already that the sum will probably be quickly realized

The ladies who planned the successful dinner were Mrs. William Cummings, Mrs Chase Pope, assisted by Mrs John Welsh, Mrs Henry Von Emden and the Misses Lulu Kolb and Annie Harding

REACH'S 1910 GUIDE.

Reach's Official American League Guide for 1910, published by the A. J. Reach Company, of Philadelphia, and edited by Mr. Francis C. Richter, of "Sporting Life," is out, and is, as usual, first in the field, thus making it the harbinger of the base ball season. It can be said without any qualification that, excellent as all of the editions of the Reach Guide have been in recent years, the 1910 Guide is the best book of the kind ever issued by this or any other publisher. The special distinction of the 1910 Guide is, next to the text, quality of paper used and the number and beauty of the engravings furnished, the world's championship series being especially well dowered with splendid action pictures. The American League Guide for 1910 is in all respects a first-class hand book for the National game and a decided credit to the American League and to the publishers, the Reach Company. This is the ninth annual issue of the Reach Guide as the official hand book of the American League and the twenty-eighth consecutive year of its publication as a book of record and reference for the entire base ball world. The Guide contains the new uniform Playing Rules Code for 1910, and the 1910 championship schedules of the American League and National League. In short, everything of interest or value either for record or reference will be found within the covers of this great book.

An Ambidextrous Pitcher Bobs Up.

Now, what will the rules committee do about this? Here is a pitcher whom Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Americans, signed up for the coming season who is going to mix them up with either hand. And here is what is said about him:

"Charley Friene has come to terms with Connie Mack and signed his 1910 contract. The Philadelphia club will have in Friene a young pitcher of unusual ability. He is an ambidextrous thrower. There are few pitchers who can shoot the ball over the plate with either hand, but Friene has done it. He has pitched part of a game with his right hand and finished up with his left. It is only when he is tiring or has some dangerous southpaw hitter that he smokes them over with his left. John Reilly discovered the youngster, who is a graduate of Santa Clara college, and recommended him to Connie Mack."

PREPARE FOR OLYMPICS.

Athletes on Other Side Ready to Send Teams to Athenian Games.

The Olympic games are to be held at Athens this spring despite the reports to the contrary, and not a few of the athletes on the other side of the water are making preparations to be there. Last fall the English Amateur Athletic association decided not to send a team, and now it is said it has not changed its policy, but has announced that if the athletes care to go they are at liberty to do so at their own expense.

The first country to make a definite move for the Athenian games is Australia, and the antipodes will send Wood and Sime for the Marathon race.

Except President Taft might order a team to be mustered here, there is hardly any possibility that America will be represented. Professor Sloane of Columbia university is the American representative of the international Olympic committee, and it is not known what his views are about sending an American team to Athens. The Amateur Athletic union could muster a team, and so could the Intercollegiate association, but any foreign mixtures around April or May would interfere with the dual college meets and the championship, so that the college man would be out of it for Athens. In 1906, when America sent a team, the men were not the best in the land, but nevertheless they won the point of honors, and no doubt as good a team if not better could be mustered now.

Only recently President Taft recommended congress to make a grant of $50,000 to send the athletes to the Vienna exposition games next summer. The trip to Vienna for about forty men would not use up half of the sum, and there would be plenty of money to send the boys down to Athens. They could go to the Grecian capital first and take in Vienna and all other games worth attending on their way home.

NATIONAL GOLF TOURNEYS.

Philadelphia, Brookline, Mass., and Flossmore, Ill., Awarded Fixtures.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the United States Golf association in New York recently dates for the three national championships were assigned as follows: The open at the Philadelphia Cricket club, June 17 and 18; the amateur at the Country club of Brookline, Mass., Sept. 12 to 17, and the women's at the Homewood Country club of Flossmore, Ill., Oct. 10 to 15.

An enthusiast in Sydney, Australia, writes Secretary Wilson that he contemplates bringing a team of six amateur golfers and four lawn tennis players to this country next year. His idea is to start in the spring in southern California and close at Boston or Newport in August. Included in the tennis team would be Brooks and Wilding.

Hold Big Athletic Meet In Philadelphia.

It was decided at the annual meeting of the Intercollegiate association recently that the intercollegiate track and field meet will be held this year on Franklin field, Philadelphia, and that the 1911 meet be held in Syracuse, the Syracuse university having extended an invitation to hold the 1911 meet in that city. Colgate and Wesleyan were admitted to membership in the association by a unanimous vote.

FUTURE SPORT EVENTS

The eastern intercollegiate gymnastic meet will be held at Princeton, N. J., March 25.

The eastern thoroughbred horse racing season will begin at Aqueduct, N. Y., April 15.

The annual ocean yacht race between San Francisco and Honolulu will be started from San Francisco July 4. Among the boats entered is the Lurline, twice winner of the event in the past.

The Belgium golf championship will be held on the links of the Royal Golf Club de Belgique at Brussels on Thursday, June 2, two days after the conclusion of the French open championship at La Boulie.

The Mexico Country club will be represented this year at the open golf championships of Great Britain by William Smith. The contests will be held over the links at St. Andrews, Scotland, starting June 20.

HOW TO SELECT FISH.

Skin Should Be Bright, Eyes Full and Gills Pink.

In purchasing fish, says Marion Harris Neil, principal of the Philadelphia school of cookery, freshness is the necessary desideratum. The chief points to notice are fullness of the eye, pinkness of the gills and brightness of the skin. Fish if in good condition will keep firm under pressure of the finger, and the smell, though fishy, is not unpleasant, but this cannot be depended on, as the use of ice may cause deception on that point. In purchasing cod the freshness may be known by the bluish tinge of the flesh and the slightly iridescent hue of the part cut.

If the flesh be yellow do not buy it. Flat fish should be selected by their thickness. Fresh smelts have an odor of newly cut cucumber, which they lose within twelve hours after being cut. Fresh salmon has between the flakes a creamy white curd, which solidifies in twenty-four hours. It should be well covered with very bright scales, and the flesh should be of a bright red color. Halibut is a wholesome fish. It should be of middling size, thick and of a creamy white color. In choosing lobsters take the tail and pull it away from the body. If it is elastic and springs back, the lobster is fresh; if not, it is stale. Lobsters and crabs are tested by weight, those of medium size having the finest flavor. The varieties of fish available for food in this country are numerous and excellent; those containing the least fat are the most easily digested. The flesh of fish contains fibrin, gelatin and albumen in small proportions, mineral matter and water in larger.

All fish out of season are unwholesome and sometimes positively injurious. It is said that fish are fully as nutritious as animal food, and, though they may not have such a satisfying effect upon the stomach, that arises from their being so easily digested. The following are two fish recipes which Miss Neil recommends:

Casserole of Fish.

Pound half a pound of cooked white-fish and add a slice of bread which has been soaked in a little milk. Beat well together and put through a chopping machine, then through a sieve into a basin. Add two eggs, one heaping tablespoonful of finely chopped cooked meat (which may be omitted), one tablespoonful of melted butter and salt, butter and paprika to taste. Mix well.

Decorate a well buttered fish casserole, mold with sliced potatoes, pour in mixture, press down well and cover with a buttered paper. Set in a pan of boiling water and bake in a hot oven for twenty minutes. Serve hot with Dutch sauce.

To make the sauce melt one tablespoonful of butter in a small saucepan; stir in one tablespoonful of flour, blend well together, then add gradually half a pint of milk; boil three minutes; add one tablespoonful of vinegar, one teaspoonful of mustard, a little salt and yolks of two eggs. Stir till it thickens, but do not allow it to boil, then serve.

Codfish Souffle.

Twelve ounces of codfish, freed from skin and bones; one gill of cream, one gill of fish stock or water, three eggs, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour and seasoning.

Pound the fish in a mortar and rub it through a fine sieve into a basin. Melt the butter in a saucepan, stir in the flour and mix over the fire for several minutes without letting the flour get brown.

Moisten with the fish stock or water and continue to stir until the mixture becomes a smooth paste, then add it to the pounded fish; beat in the eggs one by one, add the cream and season with pepper, salt, nutmeg and paprika. Put this into a well buttered souffle tin, cover with a greased paper and steam or bake for forty minutes. Turn out on to a hot dish and serve with tomato or anchovy sauce. This may be poured round the base of the fish or over the shape.

Monk's Cloth.

Some persons give it a hasty look and call it burlap, but it is monk's cloth, a fascinating piece of goods—the decorator's particular joy and delight—made of a coarse, ecru colored hempen stuff woven in a basket pattern, very heavy and so durable looking that it even suggests itself as a possible rug for the little used guest room.

It really is more suited to screen covering, in which capacity it has actually been stenciled. It is used for hangings and table scarfs, for couch covers and wall decorations. Its edges are treated to hemstitching, or else a little wider space is drawn and threaded with large opaque beads in all the shades of yellow and Indian red or in dull blue with burnt orange.

This monk's cloth is a most attractive material in the eyes of those who have been trained to regard a quiet tone as the fitting background for rich pottery, gay cushions and bright pictures.

Yorkshire Pudding.

For the Yorkshire pudding sift three cupfuls of flour and add three cupfuls of milk and three eggs. When the milk and flour have been mixed to a smooth paste drop the eggs in one by one without whipping them or separating the yolks from the whites. Beat the batter well after the eggs are added. Putting the eggs in whole and then beating the batter gives it a light, puffy appearance when baked. Add a pinch of salt and pour the batter into the pan with the roast beef, where it will catch all the savory drippings. If, however, there is much gravy in the pan remove some of it before putting in the pudding lest it become soggy. It will bake and brown in about half an hour. No more pudding than can be eaten should be made, as it is not good cold and cannot be satisfactorily reheated.

The Geese Were Duck's.

The following little incident took place awhile ago at a Northeastern station in Yorkshire:

Some geese had strayed on the railway and were observed by a traveler, who, fearing that they might be run over, said to one of the porters on the platform:

"Who owns the geese, my man?"

"Them's Duck's," the porter replied.

Again the question was asked, with the same reply. Somewhat annoyed, the traveler called the station master and told him the story, stating that he full well knew the difference between geese and ducks.

The station master laughingly replied: "The man is quite right. Those geese are Duck's. They belong to Mr. John Duck, the farmer."—London Tit-Bits.

THE LEGISLATURE MEETS AT WOLLASTON

President Treadway and Speaker Walker Guests of Wollaston Unitarian club

State Finances and Increasing Debt Sharply Criticised

The Wollaston Unitarian club, which as President Hultman said has been singularly fortunate in its choice of speakers the past season, was doubly fortunate at its meeting on Tuesday night, when the gathering was addressed by two of Massachusetts' leading political lights, President Allen T. Treadway, of the State Senate, and Hon. Joseph Walker, speaker of the House of Representatives of Massachusetts.

Both confined themselves to one subject, the Legislature, and while President Treadway devoted his remarks to those of a descriptive and laudatory nature, Speaker Walker brought forward some rather radical suggestions regarding the State's financial plans.

In opening, President Treadway referred to himself as an ardent advocate and a thorough believer of all forms of organization, be they church, state, social or political.

Some people, said Mr. Treadway, took occasion to refer to the politician in a derogatory way, but it must be remembered that the public man must do his duty, not only to himself but to the state and nation.

Referring to the countryman who said that politics was not a profession but a disease, he said that it was a disease with which we should all become inoculated.

The State is no generality or nonentity, but a live being composed of your individuality combined with many others. It is only by knowing what the State stands for that interest may be stirred up in the individual citizen.

Mr. Treadway then proceeded to give some idea of the constitution which, with the exception of 37 amendments of minor importance remains the same as when it was adopted in 1780. He spoke of the Legislature as the general court to which any citizen may bring any suggestion or grievance, and not only be assured of its being received and referred to a committee, but that a report be made to one or the other of the branches. If an adverse report is brought it must be accepted by both branches. This prevents certain evils that crop out in other states, and also the possibility of "pigeon holing" as in the state of New York.

SPEAKER WALKER.

Your representatives, by becoming members of the Legislature, do not become your superiors, but your servants and agents. As soon as a representative gets the idea of his superiority his usefulness is ended. As a rule they are anxious to know and carry out the wishes of their constituents. Massachusetts is to be congratulated that the Legislature represents as a body the individuality of its citizens.

President Treadway devoted some time to the routine problems which come before the Legislature. He told in what manner, 12 millions of dollars each year are spent in the maintenance of the State including charities, civic betterment, education and the like. He also told of the means of revenue, the laregst one item being the tax on savings bank deposits. Some come from license fees, inheritance tax and the direct State tax.

Other matters were taken up, including the conservation of natural resources, State highways and the importance of the ways and means committee in checking expenditures.

Mr. Treadway spoke in favor of the bill before the Legislature permitting the New Haven road to construct street railways in Massachusetts. Although not speaking in favor of any particular bill, he was in favor of some legislation along the line of the Canadian idea of the settlement of labor troubles by compulsory investigation.

Speaker Walker after a brief outline of the fundamentals of government, described the various checks and breakwaters, provided for too radical public opinion. He belived that the only cure for loss of confidence in legislators is to elect men of trust who truly represent the people. He declared himself a conservative in direct nomination but thinks it time senators and representatives were elected under the direct nomination system. The real question is whether or not the district backs up the representative.

Mr. Walker mentioned evils and undue influence that might be brought to bear under the convention system. He told of deals that could be carried through in local conventions. Direct legislation however, is a dangerous question for we cannot restrain ourselves as easily as we can our representatives. We must go slow with the will of the people.

Speaker Walker sharply criticised the State finances, which he declared a most important question, and the method of spending money faster than the population and wealth increased. This continual borrowing of more money each year in order to keep the State tax down is not frank. At present there is no adequate check, as the whole budget for the year does not come before any one person or committee at the same time.

In the Legislature, the question is not, Can we afford it, but is it a good thing. He spoke of the tendency to bring more burden on the State each year by the borrowing of money and keeping the direct tax down. Of course this made the year show up well and the blame of the large debt was put on the past administrations. It is now time this debt increase was realized and carefully considered.

Speaker Walker deplored the increasing amounts being expended in State aid, forestry, etc. The time will come, he said, when our resources will be seriously crippled. He would have the budget tabulated in the State Auditor's office, and given to the Governor to make recommendations. In this way someone is made responsible, and the extravagance is checked. In this manner the interest and sinking fund charges which so increase the debt will not come in the "black door," as it were.

A rising vote of thanks was tendered the speakers. A nominating committee was appointed by the chair. The usual roast beef supper was served.

CLASS MEETING.

The eighth grade of the Coddington school held a class meeting in the school hall Tuesday afternoon presided over by the president Alice Nelson. Reports were read by the secretary and treasurer and a class pin was discussed, a diamond shaped pin being chosen.

After the business an entertainment was given as follows: piano solo Dora Groboskie: duet Dorothy Sweetland and Bartlett Spooner, accompanied at the piano by Miss Hunt; reading by Leo Powers and a ghost was told story by Mr. Beatly.

The afternoon closed with refreshments of cake, candy, peanuts and lemonade. These meetings are very enjoyable and help to draw teachers and scholars nearer in the every day routine of school life.

First Annual Banquet of Brotherhood at First Presbyterian Church Last Night

Success in every way marked the banquet at the Water Street Presbyterian church Tuesday evening. The banquet was given by the Brotherhood of the church, and they with their ladies to the number of over two hundred sat down to an appetizing supper of cold meats, rolls, coffee, etc., at 6.30. One of the pleasing features of the evening was the opportunity the club had of meeting their former pastor and his wife, Rev. N. J. Sproul, who is now located at Newport, R. I. An orchestra furnished music during the banquet.

Supper over, John Bissett, president of the club, briefly welcomed the members and their ladies, and then introduced as the master of ceremonies, Rev. James Matheson, the present pastor of the church. Rev. Mr. Matheson spoke briefly, and then introduced Rev. Mr. Sproul, who spoke on the force of the church. Other speakers were Rev. Mr. Rommer, of Elizabeth, N. J.; Rev. A. M. Thompson of the United Presbyterian church; Rev. R. J. Davis of the Calvary Baptist church; John Munn, Alfred Bishop and Councilman Alexander Clark.

The speaking was interspersed with a pleasing musical program that included vocal solos by Mrs. Robert Grant and Miss Minnie Miller, a vocal duet by Miss Margaret Michael and Miss Helen Troupe, and a violin solo by William Pratt.

TODAY'S COURT.

Domenick J. Marcella was fined $5 for peddling without a license at Milton.

Louise Duff was arraigned for a statutory offence at Quincy, and was held in $300 until Thursday for a hearing.

The continued cases of Salvatore Nigilli for assault with a dangerous weapon and Vincenzo Garles for assault on Domenico Bolero at Quincy were heard. Both defendants were found not guilty and were discharged.

—The ministry has seldom drawn its recruits from the homes of wealth or of culture. The middle and lower strata of society have long furnished to the Church the vast majority of its servants. As a modern instance, take a sample group recently examined by the Presbyterians. Of 348 candidates, 172, to nearly one-half, were the sons of farmers. There were forty-four ministers' sons and the fathers of the rest were in twenty-five different trades and occupations nearly twenty per cent being laborers. Such evidence, coming from a denomination of fully average prosperity, is notworthy.—New York Evening Post.

BANQUET THIS EVENING

Board of Trade Favored with Fair Weather

Such has been the demand for tickets to the Board of Trade banquet the last 24 hours that the telephone of T. L. Williams is now out of order. It will be possible to purchase a limited number of tickets at the door tonight, but to be safe, tickets should be purchased at the earliest possible moment.

Last year the Board of Trade had a stormy night for their banquet, but this year the indications are for pleasant weather and seasonable temperature. The record attendance of 285 at these banquets should be surpassed tonight.

Mayor Fitzgerald returned from his Southern trip last night, and is expected as the principal speaker. Other speakers will be Lieut. Gov. Frothingham, President Chamberlain of the State Board of Health, Mayor Shea and President E. R. Stone of the Quincy Board of Trade.

The committee report quite a demand for ladies' tickets, so that a large attendance of ladies is assured. The reception is announced for 6.30 and the banquet for 7.

PARENTS' NIGHT AT Y. M. C. A.

Address by Superintendent of the Chelsea Schools

Tonight at the Y. M. C. A. is the annual "Parents' Night." The program is stronger than that of last year, and from all appearances will be even better than the previous ones and that means a good deal. A gymnasium exhibition is to be given by the boys, after which all will go to the hall, where B. C. Gregory, Superintendent of Chelsea schools, will give an address. The boys of the cabinet will report on the year's work. J. A. Sedgwick will preside. An informal social will take place at the close of Mr. Gregory's address. The committee in charge includes: J. A. Sedgwick, C. A. Randall, W. F. Blake, Delcevare King, T. B. Pollard and R. J. Davis. Everybody in Quincy interested is cordially invited to attend.

—Previous to 1800, tallow tips and wax candles were the only sources of light; then came gas lighting and about 1850 the oil lamps came, becoming very widely used in the sixties. In 1876 the first arc light was used in a lighthouse and later they were installed for street illumination. The incandescent lamp was discovered by Edison in 1880 and the latest development in electric lighting, the new metal filament lamps, is only about a year old.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Sure thing spring is here for the sap has begun to run in Vermont. The first run of syrup brought $1.40 a gallon the highest price on record.

And now they say that the ladies Easter hats are to be wider and higher than ever—that is wider across and higher in price. Is it possible to go farther in either direction?

Now that Overseer of the Poor Elcock has entered the lecture field his services will be much sought by clubs and societies. Mr. Elcock has proved himself to be the right man in the right place. He has made a careful study of the laws relating to the care of the poor and his talk last Monday evening before the Royal Arcanum gave many facts of interest about that subject that were not generally known. The city's interests are well guarded by Overseer Elcock.

Brockton is to hold Merchants' week in June this year, at a time when the rare days come that tempt the people to be out on the street and yet which are not so warm that they keep the people from entering the stores and buying. In many ways a great success last year, it is expected that 1910 will see it beaten in every respect. The merchants approach the matter now with the teachings of experience added to what they knew before the first venture started. It has become an annual city feature and a successful one.

BOGUS TOWN BONDS

They Are Bought by a New York Broker, Who Stands to Lose

Swanton, Vt., March 9.—Three bogus bonds of the town of Swanton of $1000 each, purporting to be of an issue of thirty years ago, have come to light. They are in the hands of a New York broker, who bid them in at an auction sale in that city. The loss will be his. The town cannot suffer.

The bonds are in the correct form of the issue of which they are supposed to be a part. This issue, however, has been entirely refunded and all the legal bonds cancelled. The bogus bonds are signed by a board of three selectmen which never existed here. They are countersigned, too, by a treasurer who never held office in Swanton. None of the names on the bonds are familiar here.

LIFE STORY OF THOMAS C. PLATT

Former United States Senator Once a Genius In Politics.

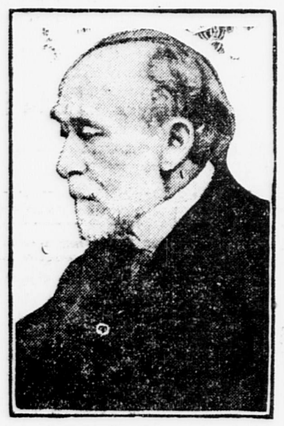
GREAT STUDENT OF DETAIL.

Remarkable Character of New York's Former "Easy Boss," Who Shaped Notable Careers—Striking Incidents During His Many Sided Life.

With the recent death of Thomas Collier Platt, thrice United States senator from the state of New York and once its "easy boss," who began life as a drug clerk at Owego, N. Y., and ended it in the humble home of paid attendants after a career as a maker of political history, there passed the last of the old time party bosses. Few men so nearly approached greatness without really becoming great. A great student of detail and an organizer of unmistakable genius, Mr. Platt attained a prominence and influence that few men contemporaneous with his time ever realized.

At the height of his career a dozen or more years ago he made presidents, or at least contributed more than any other man in politics to the achievement. He selected candidates for governor and minor federal and state offices and dispensed patronage with the profligacy of a sovereign. Yet at the end he could not command influence enough to secure the appointment of a clerk.

A more chronological history of the life of Platt would encompass every phase of political life from the organization of a convention in an obscure country town to a battle royal with presidents of his country. There were as many sides of his remarkable character as there are faces of a five carat diamond. He was a poet of no mean pretensions, a philosopher to the point of being a good loser, an autocrat when in the heyday of his power, a gambler of nerve in the chances he took, political and otherwise; a financier of no mean ability and a jovial companion when he chose to be.



THOMAS C. PLATT.

Mr. Platt was one of the founders and charter members of the "Amen Corner." He was responsible for its name when he emerged from the obscurity into which he had been plunged by the most sensational incident in his political career—his defeat for the United States senatorship after he and the late Roscoe Conkling had resigned from the senate and had sought vindication by re-election, which was denied both.

Most Powerful of Bosses.

Mr. Platt got back to the senate years after Conkling died, and until the ascendency of the star of President Theodore Roosevelt through the assassination of President McKinley he was undoubtedly the most powerful political boss in the United States. Honored, respected, autocratic and resourceful, his orders were obeyed without question, his counsel sought and accepted by the most powerful officials and financiers in this land. With the rising of the star of Roosevelt began the eclipse of Mr. Platt as the boss. He had shunted Roosevelt into the vice presidency of 1900 to get him away from the governor's office, where he had become troublesome to corporations and bosses.

The death of President McKinley took Roosevelt to the White House. From that moment the decrease in the power of Platt began. Roosevelt immediately inaugurated his scheme for reorganizing the party machinery in New York. Mr. Platt's requests and commands were ignored, and during the last three years of Roosevelt's term he and Platt were not on speaking terms.

"Well, Roosevelt Is Going Too."

One of the pathetic incidents of Mr. Platt's life occurred a year ago on Thursday, March 3, when he sat muffled up in the alcove of a window of the capitol at Washington and witnessed the departure of the retiring president through the snow bound streets. Platt was finishing his public life the same day. As he saw Roosevelt ride away surrounded by 2,000 men wading ankle deep in the slush he smiled grimly and said: "Well, he's going too. That's something. I will never come back, nor will he."

Mr. Platt made a business of politics. There was little if any sentiment in his promotion of men and measures. He turned men away with little ceremony unless he believed they could add to his own prestige, yet he always remained friendly with them and usually kept his word once it was given. He was a man of few words and was not particularly interesting as a companion unless he wanted to be. He was a most eloquent listener. When he reached a decision he gave it rapidly and with finality. He watched the trend of public sentiment with the vigilance of a hawk.

It was at Owego, in Tioga county, N. Y., that Mr. Platt was born seventy-six years ago July 15 last. He went into the drug business and married when twenty his cousin, Ellen L. Barstow. She was the one "boss" that the old time "easy boss," as he was called, ever feared and respected. While she lived her distinguished husband steered clear of the domestic breakers that afterward caused him so much trouble and his relatives deep humiliation. Mrs. Platt was a woman of almost as much force and character as her husband. She knew how to handle him and was almost as good a politician.

With her Mr. Platt embarked in business and politics in the early days of the Republican party. His first vote was for Fremont and Dayton. He cast his fortunes with the Republican party then and never wavered in his allegiance. His first public office was in 1872, when he was elected to congress. He was re-elected in 1874. He was never conspicuous for any great achievement as a legislator, but became intimate with Conkling and began to exercise influence in the politics of the state.

The Quarrel With Hayes.

He and Conkling quarreled with President Hayes over patronage, and at the next state convention Mr. Platt, as chairman, denounced the president. Going to New York city in 1879, he (Platt) became secretary and treasurer of the United States Express company and a few years later its president, an office he held until death. He moved to New York and took an active hand in politics, becoming a "stalwart," as opposed to the "half breeds," who were led by W. H. Robertson, William M. Evarts, Cornelius N. Bliss and Elihu Root.

In 1881 Mr. Platt had achieved such great influence he was elected to the United States senate and became the associate of Conkling. He served only a few months when Conkling had a row with President Garfield over the appointment of Mr. Robertson as collector of customs at New York. Conkling told him he intended to resign. "Me, too," said Platt, and for many years he was known as "Me Too Platt."

Seeking re-election with Conkling, both were defeated after a long session, during which there were many scandals. He took his defeat with the stolidity of a philosopher and immediately turned his attention to business. He accumulated a reasonable fortune and appeared to forget politics. But during the administration of President Cleveland he began to rally around him the remnants of the tottering Republican machine, and in 1889 he forged to the front as a political chieftain.

He forced Warner Miller to accept the nomination for the governorship and made no concealment of his activity in accomplishing the defeat of his party candidate by Governor Hill as a rebuke to the pretension of Miller, who, with Judge Latham, had succeeded him and Conkling in the senate. The opposition of Miller was also responsible for President Harrison's refusal to appoint Mr. Platt secretary of the treatury. During the early nineties Mr. Platt was occupied in building up the state machine he dominated for many years afterward.

Back In the Senate.

In 1896 he was in full power. He and Quay undertook to prevent the nomination of McKinley, but the superior generalship of Mark Hanna defeated them. One thing Mr. Platt accomplished was to compel the insertion of the "gold plank" in the platform adopted by the convention. The year following he was elected to the senate. He was re-elected six years later. He made no objection to the appointment of Elihu Root and Cornelius N. Bliss, his old time enemies, to the cabinet and devoted himself to the maintenance of the state machine.

When he found it expedient to nominate Roosevelt for the governorship he did so to save his party, though he did not like Roosevelt. Judge A. A. Van Wyck was the Democratic nominee and looked to be the winner, and Croker's refusal of a supreme court nomination to Judge Daly on personal grounds was always regarded as having been responsible for Van Wyck's defeat, and Roosevelt won by 18,000. He wanted a renomination, but Mr. Platt wanted to get rid of him.

Odell Begins to Harass Him.

He offered Roosevelt the vice presidential nomination. Roosevelt refused it. Platt and Quay decided to nominate him anyway, and he was named. Mr. Platt then selected B. B. Odell, Jr., as the candidate for governor. Odell was elected and at once assumed the active direction of the party. Odell forced his renomination and prevented Platt from placing George R. Sheldon on the ticket for lieutenant governor.

Hemmed in by opposition at Washington and Albany, Mr. Platt's power began to wane. He made his last stand trying to force the nomination of Timothy L. Woodruff for governor in 1904. Odell, in full power, prevented it and named the late Frank W. Higgins, who immediately turned against Odell. From that time on Mr. Platt exercised little if any power, and his declining years and ill health hastened his retirement.

LETTERS OF PUBLIC INTEREST

ON BUSINESS BASIS.

Editor Daily Ledger:

In your issue last week, I notice an item in reference to poorly paid taxes in the City of Quincy. I would like to ask, through your paper which I have taken for twenty-five years, why our Mayor and Tax Collector do not get after the delinquents who are in arrears. During Mr. Cunningham's reign as Tax Collector for the city of Quincy he didn't make any distinction, but he made everybody pay up.

You will pardon me if I ask why the City of Quincy shouldn't be run on a business basis? Why shouldn't the Mayor and Tax Collector get on to their job?

BOSTON AUTO SHOW.

Enthusiasts Unanimous in Praise of Decorative Scheme and of the Great Variety of Exhibits.

The joys of "auto week" commenced Monday at the Boston Automobile Show with unprecedented promise of varied delight for the thousands of automobile lovers from far and wide for whom this year's unequalled show will hold the centre of the stage in a way that will long be remembered.

No auto shown ever equalled this, either in size, in variety of exhibits or in excellence of display and tastefulness of setting. So say the visiting manufacturers from all over the land and so say the 200,000 others who, during the next few days will view the more than 360 separate exhibits that crowd every inch of the 107,000 feet of floor space, an area that in itself dwarfs the great exhibitions held at Madison Square Garden and at the Chicago Coliseum.

Boston may well be proud of this greatest automobile achievement, and may well praise the several members of the Boston Automobile Dealer's Association and Manager Chester I. Campbell who planned it all, and enabled this city to "put it on" the other great automobile towns in the way of an auto exhibit not only greatest, but the finest ever.

The automobile enthusiast will see at this exhibit the latest and the best and the all in auto achievement. The 360 separate exhibits include nearly 110 pleasure cars of different makes, and nearly 50 makes of motor-cycles cars, some 16 makes of motor-cycles and a bewildering display of accessories of every kind that make for comfort and pleasure in motoring. There is hardly a single manufacturer of automobiles or auto sundries in the United States who is not represented in this auto show. To add to the pleasurable setting of the exhibits, three orchestras, in the basement, in the exhibition hall and in the grand hall play throughout the evening.

WRONG NURSERY.

An anxious mother determines to ring up the Day Nursery to ask for some advice as to her child. Calling the nursery, she is given Gottfried Gluber, florist and tree dealer. The following conversation ensues:

"I called for the nursery. Is this the nursery?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"I am so worried about my little Rose."

"Vat seems der be der madder, eh?"

"Oh, not so very much, perhaps, but a general listlessness and lack of life.

"Ain't growin' right ,eh?"

"No, sir."

"Vell, I vill dells you vat to do. You take der scissors und cut off about two inches from der limbs, und—"

"W-h-a-t?"

"I say, dake der scissors und cut off about two inches from der limbs und den turn der garten hose on it for about four hours in der morning—"

"W-h-a-t?" and the receiver vibrated at her very tone.

"Turn der garten hose on it for about four hours in der morning, und den pile a lot of plack dirt all around und shprinkle mit insegt powter all ofer der top—"

"Sir-r!"

"Sprinkle mit insegt powter all ofer der top. You know it is usually noddings but pugs dot—"

"How dare you, sir? What do you mean by such language to me?"

"Noddings but pugs usually causes der troubles, and den you vant to vash der rose mit a liquid breperations vat I haf for sale here."

"Who in the world are you anyway?"

"Gottfried Gluber, der florist."

"O-o-o!" rather weakly. "Goodbye."—The Gentlewoman.

COUNTERFEIT DEN IN BOSTON

United States Officers Make Unexpected Descent Upon it

Boston, March 9.—A gang of counterfeiters, composed of well-known Boston men, who have been carrying on their operations almost within the shadow of the federal building, were last night pounced upon by United States officers, who gathered in supposed members in various parts of the city.

The men arrested are: Frederick Hartung, 30 years old; William Sample, 41 years old, and Robert E. Sample, brother of William. Their capture followed a raid made at 185 Franklin street by four secret service agents and three United States deputy marshals.

A counterfeiting plant was found in the Franklin street building capable of turning out the spurious 1908 ten-cent pieces which have been flooding the city.

Willim Sample, who is a watchmaker and jeweler, was taken into custody at the plant. When searched four of the spurious coins were found in Sample's pockets.

Robert Sample, who is a jeweler, was arrested at his home in Dorchester, where he is ill with rheumatism. Owing to the fact that he was unable to leave his bed, a guard was established about his home, which is a three-apartment house. Robert has a wife and two children.

Hartung, who is a die maker, was arrested at the automobile show.

The building where the plant is located is in the very heart of the down-town business district. Its proximity to the postoffice, where secret service agents are located, would be sufficient, it was believed, to keep all but the most daring counterfeiters away.

That very belief apparently was taken advantage of by the men to ward off suspicion from their plant, which was concealed first in a small room on the seventh floor and rear of the building at 110 High street. The building was presumably devoted to workshops for inventors.

After the business had gotten a good start it was moved to 185 Franklin street, to the third floor front, where a sign on the door read, Sample & Hartung, mfrs. jewelry novelties. The room, which is of good size, was partitioned, and the anteroom contained the plant. The outer door was fastened with a Yale lock and the inner door also. A buzzer announced to those within the opening of the outer door.

The plant consisted of a seven-foot press, a rolling machine, a gas forge and an air blower. In a small safe in one corner of the room about ten pounds of raw silver and two pounds of copper alloy were found.

Although the coins are spurious they are actually worth more than the regular government coins. The law provides that silver 10-cent pieces shall contain only nine-tenths of their weight in silver. This is due to the fact that they were all made from sheet silver, which is always made slightly above the legal standard.

Out of one ounce of this silver, which the counterfeiters purchased at 54½ cents, a pound were made, so that the profit was about 100 percent on each dime.

The raid and the arrests were the result of a fine piece of detective work. For over three months Chief Murphy has had the men trailed from their home to the counterfeiting plant, and back again, through the shopping district, and even to the restaurants which they patronized, without arousing the slightest suspicion that they were being followed. The arrests yesterday were made almost simultaneously, so that the victims were taken thoroughly unprepared.

Discussion relative to another club of women is in the Brockton air. The original organization, now twelve years old, has 600 members. An attempt to enlarge this to one thousand failed, at the last annual meeting. As there are nearly 400 names on its waiting list, it would seem as if there is room for another club. The call seems to be for more civic work. Any city devoted largely to manufacturing, needs a municipal league or some similar organization.

Mrs. Harry W. Flagg of Brockton, treasurer of the State Federation sailed this week from New York for Trinidad. She will visit Dutch Guiana, the Barbadoes, Venezuela, Colombia and Colon, returning by way of Panama, Kingston and Jamaica. QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

Not only club members but several teachers and educators were present Tcesday afternoon at the regular meeting of the Qcincy Women's club, which was in charge of the Education committee and an open meeting.

Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, president, called the business meeting to order at half past two. Reports by officers were followed by committee reports.

Mrs. Charles Bickford for the Art and Literature committee said another group was to be made up to visit the Art Museum in Boston on March 15. Any one wishing to go should hand their name to the committee. A bulletin board had been placed in the reception room so that members may be informed on club work, classes, etc.

Mrs. Mary L. Wade for the Home Economics committee said a lecture was to be given at the clubhouse on March 29 at 3 P. M. under the auspices of the Consumers' League. Proper sanitary conditions in the making of garments is something all women should be interested in and Mrs. Wade hoped club members would plan to attend the lecture. The exchange would be open after the meeting for the sale of home cooking, etc.

Mrs. W. H. Doble for the Music committee, said preparations were going on for the operetta "Pinafore" to be given this spring. A rehearsal will be held Saturday afternoon at 2.30 at Colonial hall.

Mrs. Robert E. Park, for the Program committee, spoke of the children's part y to be held at the clubhouse Thursday afternoon, March 24, at 3 o'clock. It would be a masked party with dancing and some one to tell stories to amuse the younger children. Club members wishing to invite a little guest could do so by notifying her. Members could use their own calling cards for tickets, writing the name of their little guest on it.

Mrs. W. W. Whitcher for the Visiting Nurse reported 90 visits made by the Nurse in February, with calls from 11 doctors. The supply closet was to be furnished and half worn underclothing, sheets, slips, etc., were solicited. Mrs. H. E. Ricker had consented to take charge of the closet and would keep a record of all articles. The diet closet was found very useful by the nurse and contributions of jellies, malted milk, etc., would be welcome. Mrs. Whitcher said that she in company with the Visiting Nurse had visited the public schools in Boston with Dr. Carley to get an insight into the medical work in the public schools, in preparation to starting the work in the Quincy schools.

Miss Harriet E. Turner, for the Philanthropy committee, spoke of the girls' club. Hoped club members would take an interest in their offspring and attend some of the meetings. The social meetings were held at the clubhouse the last Saturday evening in the month. The Young Women's club were to have an exhibit at the clubhouse on Reciprocity afternoon, showing the work of the classes in millinery, dressmaking, stenciling, etc.

After committee reports the question of renewing the lease of the clubhouse was discussed and it was voted to renew the lease under certain conditions. The committee to confer with the Brackett Trust is made up of Mrs. H. J. Gurney, Mrs. F. S. Davis, Mrs. Wilson Marsh, Mrs. Theophilus King and Mrs. E. W. Sheppard. This brought the business session to a close.

The program was in charge o fthe Education committee, Mrs. John D. Mackay, chairman, and opened with a group of piano selections by Mrs. Joseph S. Evans of Woodward avenue. Mrs. Evans gave pleasing interpretations of Schuman's "Aufschwing," "Warum" and "Ende von liede," receiving hearty encores.

In introducing the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Mackay said: "There has never been a time in the history of our race when that thing which we call education was lightly regarded. Even through the dark and middle ages when the average man was in dense ignorance he looked upon those who kept the lamp of learning burning, as beings set apart.

In our own happier age the man whose mental faculties are trained, is the man of the hour, to whom we confidently turn for leadership, whether we need a statesman, a warrior or a civil engineer

The man who knows is the uncrowned king, who receives the homage that is sincere and lasting. The Wright brothers in their splendid attempts to solve the problem of aerial navigation, Doctor Lorenzo, showing us what can be accomplished in the way of bloodless surgery, the physician emerging from his laboratory with a serum or other valuable discovery, the engineer draining a swamp or irrigating a desert or building a Panama canal—all these are simply exemplifying to us that in the physical and material world as in the realm of methaphysics mind triumphs over matter; in other words they are giving to us the fruits of ripe scholarship—the results of their education.

And when we follow the words of a Milton, a Shakespeare or any other master in literature we are simply hearing testimony borne to education—its value and its blessings. The subject is ever interesting and ever new.

The lecturer o fthe afternoon will deal with some phase or aspect of education, which one, I do not know, but we know enough about the speaker to be assured that his message will be worth receiving.

I am aware that it is quite the custom to relate the achievements and accomplishments of the speaker, when introducing him but I am also sensible of the fact that introductions of that character are distasteful to a scholar; and our guest is a scholar. I shall therefore content myself with simply introducing as the speaker of the afternoon, Dr. Frank E. Spaulding, Superintendent of Schools, in Newton.

Dr. Spaulding's subject was "Education as a Business." He thought business principals should be applied to education as well as to things commercial. This was an age of business. Are we making progress in education? He believed in projecting an idea ahead and working up to it. Dr. Spaulding said we were not doing as big a work along educational lines as we thought. The money expended in this country for education was small. Could not compare with output for tobacco and candy. He spoke of the salaries paid teachers and the need of their being better paid. Did not favor more for some teachers. Believed a larger salary should mean better service. That a teacher receiving a thousand dollar salary should give that value of service or more.

Dr. Spaulding gave many statistics in illustration of his ideas which space forbids us to go into in detail.

After the meeting many took the opportunity to greet Dr. Spaulding and discuss with him personally many of his ideas on education.

The next meeting will be reciprocity or guest afternoon when other clubs will be entertained.

Mrs. Walter E. Blanchard, club treasurer, is much pleased at the way in which club members are paying their dues and she already has a goodly sum in hand.

—The work of compiling a magnetic survey of Africa has been practically completed.

Important Announcement

BY JOHNSON BROS.

Why and How We Shall Reduce Our Prices April 1st. 1910.

AFTER a careful study of the credit business for a number of years, and the same of the cash business for the past two years, we have decided that for the mutual benefit of the buyer and seller, beginning April 1, we shall turn our business into a strictly cash business. Our experience and close study of the wants of the people for the past thirty-five years has put us in a position to judge, and we have decided that low prices and high quality can be obtained in no other way than by a strictly cash proposition, as a credit store cannot possibly compete successfully with a store that is handled on a strictly cash basis, as there is a great expense attached to a credit business, which we wish to curtail, and our curtailing means much lower prices to the trade. Under the credit system there is always a proportion of bad bills which must be taken care of in our scale of prices. Under the credit system you are helping to pay the bills of those who do not pay themselves. The method of sending teams to take orders daily is very costly. We figure it costs us eight cents per call. If our clerks make from one hundred fifty to two hundred calls daily the expense of these calls must be added to the prices of the goods. The salaries of bookkeepers and other expenses of accounting and collections must also be taken care of. We propose to eliminate these items of expense, and correspondingly reduce the prices of our goods. We will deliver orders sent to us by mail, telephone or left at the store, and we intend to show the people of Quincy and surrounding towns what a really cash store can do for them. We intend to place on sale a certain day of each week some staple article from our stock at absolute cost, something different each time. Remember, one of the most important things in this change will be the keeping up of our quality for which we have so long been popular. We shall try to give even better quality if such a thing is possible, and we shall hammar the prices down hard—for cash.

We will pay cash for our goods, by so doing get all the cash discounts from the wholesale trade, and we intend that our trade shall benefit by it, and by owning our own plant it will not be possible for any concern in our line of business to undersell us, when you take into consideration our reputation for quality. We have one of the best equipped stores in our city, also the cooperation of experienced clerks which all go to make Johnson Bros. an ideal firm with which to trade. All orders will be delivered with care and promptness by our new Automobile system, which we will place at your service and which is being practised by nearly all the up to date concerns throughout the country. Customers not caring to pay cash every time they come, or send to the store can if they wish make a deposit with us, and when they have taken up all their deposit will be notified. At the prices we shall ask and the quality of our goods, we must insist on a strictly cash transaction, for at the present age of high prices a credit store can do nothing to lessen the expense of living for its customers, as the increasing expense of carrying on a credit business places low prices out of the question.

The credit dealer must realize a larger percent of profit than a cash dealer, as his expense account is more than double, so we decided that the only way we can help our customers and all careful buyers, is to establish a strictly up to date cash store, for there is no other way that we can afford to cut the prices for the mutual benefit of all. Hoping that this will meet with thoughtful and willing cooperation, we remain,

Respectfully,

JOHNSON BROS.' MARKET,
City Square

TOLD WHERE MONEY WENT

Coleman's Stealings From Bank Approximate $180,000

Boston, March 9.—United States District Attorney French Tuesday afternoon gave out the only statement authorized by him relative to the visit of George Coleman to his office. It is as follows:

"Mr. Coleman made what he declared to be a complete statement of the manner in which he defrauded the the bank, which accords with the statements as to his method heretofore published. He also stated what became of this large sum of money, approximating $180,000. His statement was not procured by any urging on my part, and was made by the advice and wholly in the presence of his counsel, Mr. Winslow. The only other persons present were Assistant United States District Attorney William H. Garland, and Miss Locke and Mr. Shea, who took his statement in shorthand.

"I do not deem it proper at this time to give out a full statement of what Mr. Coleman said. I do not acknowledge the accuracy in any particular of the reports of the interview as published in the papers. Such reports were not based upon any statement given by me or with my knowledge or authority."

In the two and a half hours which Coleman spent with French, the former bookkeeper of the National City bank of Cambridge is supposed to have divulged his relations with the faro swindlers, to whom he is accredited with having lost a large sum of money. Hitherto he has kept silent on his alleged faro operations, other than to deny having been duped by any such game; but Captain Hurley of the Cambridge police made the significant statement that the accused would tell the entire truth and not deny anything when the proper time came. He also expressed the belief that if Coleman had not met the faro gang he would still be an honest bank clerk.

This is in line with the opinion of a number of Coleman's friends, who thoroughly believe that it was not stock market deals or spendthrift habits that resulted in young Coleman's downfall, but solely the result of his falling in with the wiles of the faro operators. The leaders of this gang are said to have nearly all left the country.

Wilson W. Lockhart, who was arrested on the charge of having aided and abetted Coleman, was released after his bail had been reduced by Commissioner Hayes from $30,000 to $15,000.

National Bank Examiner Hann of Baltimore has completed his examination of the books at the National City bank of Cambridge, made for the purpose of ascertaining if Examiner Pepper was negligent in his last regular examination of the bank's books. Hann went to Washington and will have nothing to say until he has made his report to the comptroller of currency.

There is reason to believe that no further arrests are to be made at present, notwithstanding Coleman has made a complete statement to the United States district attorney.

COTTON SEED FLOUR

Novel Cereal Said to Have Many Points In Its Favor

Washington, March 9.—That the cotton plant is capable not only of clothing, but feeding in large part the people of the south, was the statement made to Secretary Dickinson by his nephew, who resides in Ennis, Tex.

He has informed the secretary of the shipment to him from Texas of samples of cotton seed flour, bread and cakes. This food has been privately tested for years and the secretary's nephew wishes him to test it.

The cost of cotton seed flour is said to be only 50 or 75 percent that of cereals, while its nutrintive value is declared to be from five to seven times as great.

Double Murder and Suicide

Ithaca, N. Y., March 9.—As the result, it is said, of a family quarrel, William Davidson, a farmer, struck his father-in-law, Julius Teet, with the butt of a shotgun, killing him instantly. He then cut his wife's throat, and, after making sure she was dead, blew out his own brains.

INSANE MAN RUNS WILD

He Kills a Policeman and Shoots Two Other Persons

Bridgeport, Conn., March 9.—G. C. A. Muller, for a time confined in an asylum, drew a revolver upon Officer Dietz of the traffic squad and killed him. Turning around to the startled people on the sidewalk, Muller let go all the cartridges in his weapon and then with a shriek and flourishing the gun over his head, started on a run through Main street.

One bullet hit Charles Doherty and wounded him, though not seriously. Another missile prostrated Leopold Rago and it is feared he will die.

Three officers with drawn revolvers started in pursuit of Muller, and in a few moments a number of other officers and an ambulance, with scores of citizens, had taken up the chase. After a long run Muller was captured, having no more ammunition with which to fight. Muller was locked up.

BROKEN TROTH IS ALLEGED

Boston Woman Sues Portland Man For Breach of Promise

Boston, March 9.—Miss Marion Orr of this city, 23 years old, appeared in the superior court to prosecute a suit brought by her for breach of promise against William Wood of Portland, Me.

The case has several sensational features for, besides the sum she asks as heart balm, Miss Orr also sues for an additional $10,000 on the claim that she was attacked and injured by Wood on Nov. 6, 1906. Her father is also a party to the suit, he putting in a claim for $10,000 damages, through the alleged loss of his daughter's services and the cost of medical attendance.

Wood is 34 years old, unmarried, and is said to be worth $500,000.

STRIKEBREAKERS SHOOT SIX PERSONS

Arouse Anger of Crowds and Car Wrecking Is Renewed

Philadelphia, March 9.—Six persons were wounded last night by bullets fired by a party of alleged strikebreakers who rode wildly up and down Frankford avenue in a trolley car and shot into the crowds that lined the sidewalks.

After one of the most uneventful days since the beginning of the strike, the stoning of cars was renewed along Frankford avenue, the principal thoroughfare in the mill district in the northeast.

A stone thrown by one of the crowd injured a strikebreaking motorman. Infuriated at this about fifteen of his armed comratdes took out a car. As it sped down Frankford avenue bullets were rained at the jeering crowd.

After reaching Alleghany avenue the car was switched to the northbound track by its crew and the dash back to the barn began. So swiftly was it driven that before the crowd realized that it was coming back, it had sped past them and into the barn again.

The shooting of inoffensive bystanders worked the crowd to a high pitch of excitement, and as other cars came down the street the mob wrecked them, in several instances leaving only the trucks on the rails. About a dozen arrests were made.

Pittsburg, March 9.—Details of the settlement of the Hartje family troubles, made public here, caused as much surprise as anything since the case was up for trial some years ago.

By the agreement between the paper king and his wife, Mrs. Mary S. Hartje, who did not yesterday open her suit for divorce from him, Hartje will pay the wife $25,000 in cash and will set aside for her $150,000, from which she will derive the income for life, no matter whether she divorce him and remarry or not.

Sixteen-year-old Scott Hartje will leave his mother and enter the business house of his father, while the daughter, Mary Louise, is to choose between her father and mother.

DEATH OF CUE WIZARD

Schaefer Was Undisputed Champion at Billiard Game

Denver, March 9.—Jacob Schaefer, the noted billiard player, died Tuesday afternoon of tuberculosis, at the age of 54 years. He was born in Milwaukee, but raised in Leavenworth, Kan. Schaefer took naturally to the cue, and at the age of 14 was the boy wonder of Kansas. Until his retirement within the past year Schaefer was considered the most expert cue manipulator in America.

Jacob Schaefer held every billiard championship of the world known to the profession, from the straight to the three-cushion caroms. This fact demonstrates the versatility of the man. Strange to say, his last big match was for the 18.1 championship. He beat Willie Hoppe for the honors in Chicago four years ago. He relinquished the title later on account of poor health.

ELOPERS "GET THE HOOK"

Parental Blessing From Secretary Knox Is Not Forthcoming

Washington, March 9.—The marriage of Philander C. Knox, Jr., has not made a "hit" with his family, he announced after the door of his father's house had been closed in his face and he and his bride were told to go back "where they came from."

Instead of a flood of congratulations and "bless you, my children," Secretary of State Knox was extremely wrathy when his son called to "square things," and expressed his feelings over the elopement with extreme vigor, so the bridegroom rejoined his bride at the Arlington, where he had left her with her mother, and now the bridal party will go back to Providence, and the groom is going to work, if he can find any.

WAR OF REVENGE FEARED AT TAMPA

Detectives Report Ominous Signs From Black Belt

Tampa, Fla., March 9.—With three negroes and two white men killed, as a result of a dispute over wages between a contracting superintendent and a negro laborer, this county is in a state of terror for fear that the black belt, in revenge for the murder of the three negroes, will start more shooting of deputy sheriffs.

The wrath of the whites seems to be assuaged by the three negro deaths, but the two white men killed does not seemed to have satisfied the negroes, according to ominous signs said to have been noted by local detectives. The whites, especially the women, are alarmed, fearing a new outbreak.

The dead so far are Samuel Stribbling, contractor's superintendent; Deputy Sheriff Edward Matthews; Wade Ellis, negro; Sam Ellis, negro; unknown negro.

Deputy Sheriff Morgan is probably fatally injured and Deputy Sheriff Burnette is badly wounded.

SALISBURY BEACH "WET"

Flop From No License Means Big Business During the Summer

Salisbury, Mass., March 9.—The counting of votes on the license question in the town election, bringing out the fact that Salisbury went over to the wet column by a margin of twenty-nine votes, has brought forth predictions that Salisbury Beach will be the mecca for thousands this summer, as liquor will be served there.

The prohibition element is greatly stirred over the blow that the cause of no license has received. Outside of Gloucester, Salisbury will be the only place between Boston and Portsmouth where the thirsty individual may have what he calls for in the nature of alcoholic beverages.

PUBLICATION OF POLAR DATA

Would Embarrass Peary In Arrangements With Publishers

Washington, March 9.—Representative Roberts of Masssachusetts still continues to be the storm centre in the house sub-committee on naval affairs around which the controversy over honors to Commander Peary rages. He has been joined by Representative Macon of Arkansas.

Full copies of the complete Peary records, including a reproduction of the famous diary, have been taken into the committee room and would have been shown the committee by Professor Gannett had not the questions of Roberts made it evident that the Massachusetts member would insist upon the publication of the data which the explorer has the right to keep confidential for the present, as his own property.

When the official report of the Peary soundings was made to the department of commerce and labor, Peary requested that the details be kept confidential for the present, and the department complied with his request. These, however, are official records and there would be more sound reason for demanding their publicity than in the other case. The Peary records are the explorer's own property and congress can demand them only at the expense of a courtesy which has been shown the explorer by the scientific societies of the world.

Under the circumstances, it is still a question whether Peary will appear personally before the committee. He was strongly inclined to do so until the meeting of Monday afternoon, when it became evident that he must be able to trust implicitly the word of all the members of the committee if he were not to be embarrassed in his arrangements with his publishers by the publication of his data.

It is further urged that no other man entitled to the thanks of congress ever before has been requested to appear before congress and justify his own worthiness for recognition. While Peary appears willing to submit all his data to congress on the condition that his request of confidence be respected, it is another matter that he go before the subcommittee in person, and thus inadvertently place himself in the position of an applicant.

Following the appearance of Representatives Alexander of New York and Hobson of Alabama before the sub-committee of the house naval affairs committee, Peary may be permitted to submit in confidence his data substantiating his claim to that honor, and probably will be duly rewarded by congress. Representative Alexander made a statement to the committeee of the reasons why Peary is not able at this time to make his data a matter of public record.

Despite the opposition manifested in some quarters when the proposition was first made that Peary's records must be submitted confidentially, committee members evinced a change in sentiment, and it is now quite probable that the position advanced by Peary will eventually be approved by the sub-committee. Alexander's statement is understood to reflect the views of the explorer in regard to the prior claim of the publishers with whom he had contracted before the present movement in congress was inaugurated.

SECRETARY MEYER

Head of the Navy Is on the Warpath

MEYER AFTER ROGERS

Secretary Tells Taft That Admiral Is Guilty of "Impertinence"

Washington, March 9.—As the result of a peronal clash, Secretary of the Navy Meyer has sent a letter to President Taft accusing Paymaster General Rogers of "impertinence," and asking that Admiral Rogers be reprimanded.

It will be remembered that Rogers, together with Admiral Capps, comprised what may be called the opposition to the navy reorganization plan, and the two bureau chiefs in their testimony did not hesitate to express their hostility to the policy proposed. Rogers, in particular, was vigorous of speech and there were many assertions that it would be impossible for him and Meyer to live under the same naval roof.

NATION'S NOTABLES AT BIER OF PLATT

Simple Burial Service In Presbyterian Church at Owego

Owego, N. Y., March 9.—Noted men of all parties, delegations of representatives and senators from Washington, delegations from the assembly and senate at Albany, and hundreds of prominent financiers and business men of the country assembled here this morning to follow the body of Thomas Collier Platt to its resting place alongside the graves of his father, grandfather and other kin in the little cemetery here.

While the funeral of Platt was without display or ceremony it was one of the most notable ever held in the state. Because of the number of state and federal officials who attended it practically suspended legislative business.

At 10:30 o'clock this morning a burial service was held in the church. It was read by Rev. Dr. Young, the pastor, an old time friend of the senator. Then the body was conveyed to the grave.

AN OCEAN YACHT RACE

Taft Approves Plan to Have Chief Trophy Named For Him

Washington, March 9.—"The President's Cup" will be the name of the trophy to be awarded the winner of the ocean race of the Atlantic Yacht club this summer from some point in England to Sandy Hook. The club officials were anxious that President Taft allow the trophy for the winner to be named for him. The president agreed that the trophy be called "The President's Cup."

It is the purpose of the club to vary the usual arrangement in international races of starting the contest upon this side of the water. Just what point will be selected as the starting point is not determined. This and many other details remain to be settled.

Work For Suffrage Has Proved Too Strenuous For Mrs. Belmont

New York, March 9.—Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont has broken down from overwork and will not be able to attend the hearing at Albany on the suffrage amendment. She was ordered to Europe by her physicians for rest, but the order of banishment has been revoked until her strength shall be sufficiently improved to stand the journey.

There is a rumor that Mrs. Belmont will be a candidate for the presidency of the National Suffrage association, which holds its annual election in April.

SMART SPRING FROCK

The Hat Question Less of a Bugbear This Season.

MORAL OF THE BLOTTER.

Things Small In Themselves, but Large In Effect Upon Comfort—A Unique Booth For Fair—Modish Collar Made From Scraps.

Dear Elsa—Margaret, you remember started a year ago to girdle the earth not, though, in forty minutes, like our friend Ariel, for she has just arrived in little old New York. Yesterday I was one of a large luncheon party, at which Margaret was the guest of honor, and she showed her appreciation of the compliment paid her by wearing her very best spring costume, over which all the others at the party raved. I made mental notes of the creation to aid me in copying it, a safe and legitimate procedure, for Margaret lives in Chicago. Probably you would like to hear about this Rue de la Paix composition? The material was a delicious shade of gray oatmeal cloth. This, you must know, is one of the loosely woven fabrics on the hopsacking order that are to be popular this season. The skirt was plaited in front and at the back had gathered breadths. From the back seam a wide strap of cloth was brought around halfway up the skirt to the front, where it buckled over the left knee, confining the front plaits and full back in such a way as to give an extremely slim appearance to the wearer. The coat was shorter than usual, ending just below the hips, and was heavily embroidered in silk that exactly matched the peculiar lava gray of the material. The buttons were of lava set in silver, and the hat had a turban brim of rough gray straw with whirligig crown of tulle to match the smoky gray plumes at the side. A velvet bag, embroidered like the coat, hung on oxidized silver chains from her arm.

HAT FOR EARLY SPRING.

Easter coming so early this year, we are thinking of spring and summer clothes rather sooner than usual, and some women who like to be in the vanguard of fashion are actually wearing straw hats, but this, of course, is exceptional. Still, the shops are showing all their new millinery, and lovely it is.

If these advanced styles in millinery tell a true story, the season will prove a blessed relief to the women to whom of late the hat question has been a genuine bugbear. While extremes may always be found—the airship and French cook chapeaux head the list this spring—the reign of the freakish and spectacular is no longer supreme. There are a gratifying number of models which are pretty and becoming.

Malines is a fine choice for the trimming of one's first spring hat, and cleverly arranged loops and twists of malines often take the place of feathers and aigrets, invisible wire being used to keep them in place.

Some of the new headgear looks like a flower garden and recalls to one's mind those famous lines from the "Mikado" with this variation:

The flowers that bloom on her hat, tra, la,
Have nothing to do with the earth.

The big hats of the season are all turned up somewhere to give a glimpse of the face. This is an excellent plan as it is rather disconcerting to talk to a hat, even though assured that there is a listener underneath. Some of the hats have the cavalier swoop on the left side, others the Napoleonic up turned brim at the very front, while the very newest are tipped up in the back, where all the trimming is piled high.

In ribbons, shot effects are to be much used, and the same vogue extends to feathers and satin crowns. Blue-green and green-brown are evidently favorite combinations, and with them are worn two shaded quills or feathers. For real dressy hats I saw some stunning things in gold and silver, the gold creation having a white straw brim and the silver a black one. But I reckon you have heard enough about hats for awhile, and I do hope you'll like the sketch of the model I am inclosing.

The Moral of the Brown Blotter.

For the last few weeks I have been driven almost crazy by having to encounter a glaring white blotter every time I sat down to my desk. The hideousness of the thing seemed to leave my mind the instant I got away from the offending object. Today when I began writing to you I found that some one had replaced the soiled white affair with an artistic brown blotter. The blotter is a ridiculously small matter, but it is typical of a great many other things, small in themselves, but large in their effect upon comfort.

There are the doors that harass the nerves with their squeaking when a drop of oil would right them and spare the ears, and there is the reading light placed too high or too low. It has been so for months, perhaps years. A half hour of work would right it and in place of a little aggravating discomfort would be the satisfaction of a light that was right. Yet who takes the necessary half hour?

There is the same old hunt for a postage stamp when a stamp box in a fixed place would be so easy to arrange. But why continue the list?

A Unique Booth.

We are going to have a fair during Lent for a local charity, and one of the booths is rather unique, I think. Outside of the booth is a sign that reads: "Stockings darned, 5 cents a hole. Mothers of families, come to the fair and bring your darning bags." The adult class of the Bible school is to have charge of the booth, and the space inside is to be filled with "mothers in Israel," all of whom are to wear "specs" and are to darn the family stockings. A pretty clever idea, isn't it? At another booth the girls are to make welsh rabbits, serving with the rabbits biscuits, pickles and olives.

A Dutch Collar.

I saw a beautiful Dutch collar recently that was made from the veriest scraps of insertion and lace and fine embroidery. First the collar was cut in paper and then covered with alternate strips of the lace and embroidery, so that not an inch was wasted, as would have been had the pieces been joined before the collar was cut. Besides, by the latter plan certainly double the quantity of the material would have been required. The collar was finished with a tiny lace frill all round the outer edge. As low neck frocks are to be as smart as ever this summer, the hint is worth while passing along. Your very devoted,

MABEL.

TAFT'S FANCY STEPS.

After Speaker Cannon's Highland Fling President Danced a "Hoe Down."

While more than fifty guests looked on laughingly and applauded, Speaker Cannon tempted President Taft the other night into a test of terpsichorean agility in the east room of the White House at Washington. Both stopped panting when the trial was ended, but the opinion was unanimous that the honors on fancy steps were even. The dancing followed a dinner given by the president to Uncle Joe, said to be the first formal affair ever accorded a speaker of the house of representatives by a president.

The dinner ended the company went to the east room. An orchestra played a gentle waltz, and the president led off with Mrs. Joseph H. Gaines, wife of the representative from West Virginia. The speaker, with Mrs. Laughlin, a sister of Mrs. Taft, glided out on the polished floor in the wake of the chief. Then the dance was on.

In the intermission, however, when the orchestra struck up a lively tune Uncle Joe stepped briskly into the middle of the room and brought his heels together sharply. There was a patting of gloved hands, and voices called encouragingly to the guest of honor. In a moment the speaker's heels were twinkling in a brilliant highland fling.

"Excellent, eh?" he called exultantly to Mr. Taft. "I was something of a dancer when I was a youngster."

For answer the president stepped smilingly forward, and those who were present say the two executed several steps of an old fashioned "hoe down" that delighted every one.

WATERMELON VINE IN AN EAR

Removed From Head of Man Who Thought He Had a Tumor.

Agriculture has reached such an advanced stage in Denver that watermelon vines are being grown in men's ears. That was discovered recently by Dr. Black. He removed from the ear of Richard Johnson a watermelon seed which not only had taken root, but also had sprouted. In fact, the seed, the many yellowish roots and the sprouts filled the ear cavity. Johnson had no idea he was being used for a watermelon patch.

He went to the doctor convinced fully he was suffering from a tumor. That diagnosis of his ailment had been made by other doctors, but Dr. Black is enough of a farmer to know a watermelon vine when his probe strikes it, and he relieved Johnson in short order.

Johnson has no idea how the seed got in his ear. He thinks he has carried it since last summer, because it was early last fall that his ear first began to trouble him. Several times before he went to Dr. Black he suffered such agony he was on the eve of going on the operating table to have the "tumor" removed.

DEER FARMING TO HELP MEAT

Dr. Merriam Says It Can Be Carried on Almost Anywhere In America.

Deer farming can be carried on profitably almost anywhere in the United States and may offer a solution of the high price of meat problem, according to Dr. C. Hart Merriam, chief of the biological survey, who testified the other day before the house committee on expenditures in the department of agriculture at Washington.

"Deer will thrive and multiply on waste land," said Dr. Merriam, "and can be raised easier than cattle. Twenty deer can be raised on ground that will support only one cow. All that is needed is a fence to keep the deer in and their enemies out."

According to Dr. Merriam, wolves are increasing in the United States, and their annual depredations in the great cattle herds in the north and northwest amount to $13,000,000 a year.

INVENTORS TO COMBINE.

Will Hold a Congress In Rochester In June—Want New Standard.

The international congress of inventors will open in Rochester on June 13 and continue for five days. Several of the most prominent inventors of the United States have promised to attend, and some of them will bring some of their new devices for exhibition.

Many matters demanding the attention of the inventors will be brought up at the convention. The manner in which business is conducted by examiners in the patent office in Washington will be investigated, and an endeavor will be made to obtain the establishment of a standard for the United States patent.

Top Spinning Stunt.

The Italian boys in New York city have introduced a new stunt in top spinning. The trick is to pick up the spinning top between the fingers and drop it so that the steel point shall strike a button on the ground. If you think that's easy, just try it. Failure to hit the button forfeits the top to the other boy in the game. The Italian boys are experts at it and are accumulating a heap of American tops. The children from Italy usually have tops painted green, the national color.

Cowboys to Use Automobiles.

Cowboys mounted on ponies will soon be supplanted by automobiles on the larger cattle ranches in Texas, according to an announcement made the other day at Chicago by the representative of a Texas ranch owners' organization. He said that automobiles were so constructed now that their use over the ranges was practical. Already 200 machines have been ordered shipped from Chicago and New York to various Texas points.

TRAINERS AND JOCKEYS ABROAD

Forty American Horsemen Hold Big Jobs on Foreign Tracks.

M'CORMICK'S LARGE STABLE.

Famous New York Turfman Who Carried Off Principal Events on German Turf Last Season Will Handle Forty-two of Emperor William's Horses.

There will be so many American trainers and jockeys in the paddocks and on the race tracks of England, Germany, France, Austria and Russia this season that the Yankee tourist will think when he greets them that Sheepshead, Belmont park or Saratoga, N. Y., has been transplanted. Nearly forty trainers and horse pilots have found profitable positions abroad and are earning fame in the lands of the stranger.

Here is a list of the men and boys who are at present abroad or who will be this summer: Trainers—James H. McCormick, Andrew Joyner, Eugene Leigh, Fred Burlew, John Campbell, Howard Lewis, M. Daly, William Duke, J. McIntyre, J. Davis; jockeys—Danny Maher, H. Radtke, F. O'Neill, W. Shaw, Walter Miller, Lucien Lyne, J. Hilderbrand, J. Sumpter, "Skeets" Martin, Milton Henry.

It is possible that Phil Chinn, the noted western turfman, may race his horses on the French tracks this season. His jockey, Vincent Powers, will accompany him if he decides to go.

The leaders of this "foreign invasion" are McCormick, Joyner, Leigh,

VINCENT POWERS, WHO MAY RIDE IN FRANCE THE COMING SEASON.

Duke and Burlew among the trainers and Maher, Miller, Shaw and O'Neill among the jockeys. McCormick will train for Baron Oppenheim and Herr Haniel, Joyner for Harry Payne Whitney, Leigh for E. Fusekof, Duke for W. K. Vanderbilt and Burlew for Herman B. Duryea. Maher will ride as a free lance, with many engagements already assured for the big turf classics of England on the most notable horses that achieved fame last year. Shaw is under contract to Baron Oppenheim, Miller is engaged to Herr Haniel, and O'Neill will sport the white and black colors of W. K. Vanderbilt.

Jimmy McCormick, who carried off the principal events of the German turf last season, has now one of the largest strings of thoroughbreds that he has ever had under his personal supervision—forty-two. His racers in number are second to those owned by the imperial stud, in which Emperor William and the crown prince are more or less interested.

These horses are the get of many of the English and French champion racers of recent years. Such stallions as Ard Patrick, Galtee More, Saphir, Florizel II., Saraband, Joyful, John o' Gaunt, Ajax and William III. are represented. This is mute testimony in behalf of the class of thoroughbreds that take part in the struggles for the money hung up by the various racing meetings in Germany.

This money of the Germans is well worth striving for. During his first and only season on the other side of the big pond his horses won enough money to place them third on the list with nearly $100,000 to their credit. The imperial stable was the largest winner, with nearly twice that amount to its credit. The genial little New York trainer is sanguine of better results this year. He was a stranger in a strange land in 1909, and in spite of all his efforts his Hibernian tongue was unable to master the language he was forced against. Now that he has learned his way "around the ring," as he says, he expects to come back next winter with a better rating. And when Jeems "expects" to do anything he seldom if ever trips over his anticipations.

In the Grand Steeplechase de Paris, worth $25,000, which will be run at Auteuil Sunday, June 19, the American trainers Leigh, Davis, Burlew, Campbell, Lewis and McIntyre have many representatives. Leigh's string is headed by Dandolo, concededly the best steeplechaser in France. This horse is owned by E. Fischof, a man well known in American and French art circles. Dandolo has triumphed in this big cross country event, and in spite of his old age is top weight. He is one of the surest jumpers that ever looked through a bridle.

RUBE'S SPORTING CHAT

The bowling match scheduled to be rolled at Grant's Quincy alleys Monday evening between Grant and Dahl of Quincy and Poland and Lyons of Norfolk Downs did not take place owing to several unlooked for reasons. Mr. Lyons was under the weather but Poland put in an appearance only to find that the Granite street alleys were closed, the heating apparatus being out of order, and Grant was in Boston to see about getting it in order again. Both have agreed to call off the match scheduled for Friday night of this week and meet in their first contest next Monday evening at the Granite street alleys when everything will be in order.

SPEAKERS TONIGHT.

The speakers tonight at the Board of Trade banquet will be:

Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston.
Lieut. Governor Frothingham.
President Chamberlain of State Board.

When Wives Were Sold.

When the war between Britain and France ended in 1815 many of the English soldiers found that their wives had married again in the belief that they were widows. The formal selling of the wife was regarded among the ignorant as a legal solution to the problem thus presented, and it is said that the authorities of the day deemed it best to shut their eyes at the proceeding. A certain amount of formality had to be observed, however, before the sale was considered legal even by the most ignorant. A Yorkshire writer mentions two conditions which must be carried out to make a satisfactory sale—the price of the wife must not be less than 1 shilling (24 cents), and she must be delivered to her purchaser with a new halter around her neck. The same writer records the case of the woman who zealously preserved the receipts for herself as a proof of respectability.

An Exception.

She (protestingly)—That's just like you men. A man never gets into trouble without dragging some woman in with him. He—Oh, I don't know. How about Jonah in the whale?—Boston Transcript.

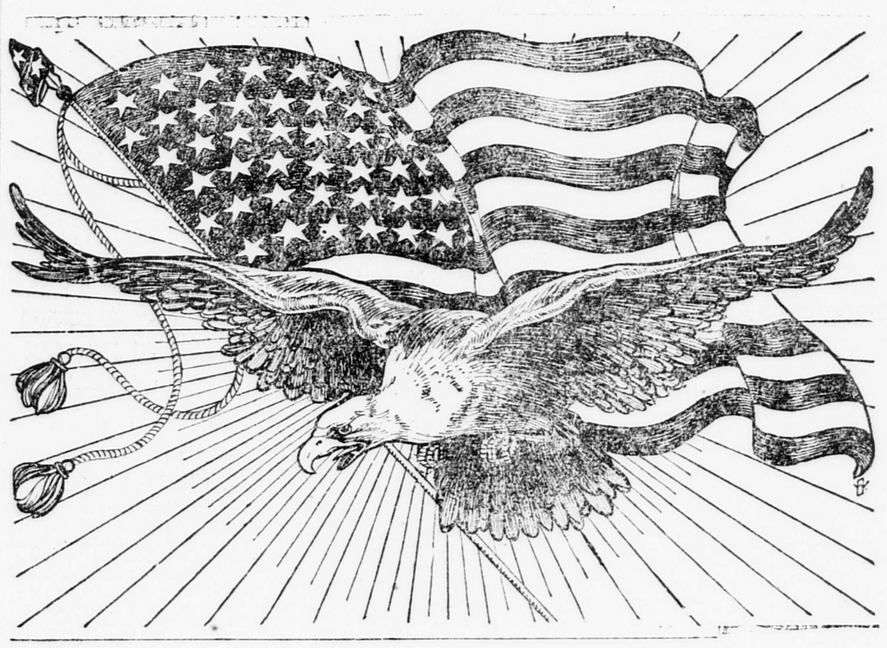
INLAND WATERWAYS AND SHIP SUBSIDY

Advocated and Endorsed at Annual Banquet of Quincy Board of Trade

Lieut. Gov. Frothingham and Mayor Fitzgerald Speakers



Another success for the Board of Trade and for Quincy! The annual banquet on Wednesday evening at Music hall was a rouser. As at the recent banquet to Admiral Bowles, one felt that it was worth while being present, to become imbued with the enthusiasm of the occasion, and to cooperate in the movement for the uplift of Quincy. Not only to boom the city but New England.

Nearly 300 prominent business men of the city and their ladies were in attendance. The hall was prettily decorated with American flags and bunting, and the platform with ferns. On the head table was a bunch of long stemmed pinks and several flowering plants, and on the other tables were plants and lighted candles.

The blessing was asked by Rev. Dr. Hardy, pastor of Bethany Congregational church. A good menu was served at 7 o'clock by Burleigh & Martin, including turkey, ham and tongue, mashed potatoes, lobster and chicken salads, fritters, ices and sherbet, cake, coffee and rolls.

All the advertised speakers were present and also Mayor Shea and J. Stearns Cushing, the member of the Governor's Council from this district, and all had a message for Quincy.

PRESIDENT STONE.

President Eugene R. Stone welcomed the large assemblage and the distinguished guests. He claimed the Board of Trade had done a good deal for Quincy, and was entitled to the hearty cooperation of all. Quincy has great opportunities in its water front and its granite hills. No other city in the Metropolitan district was so favored. Our shipyard takes big contracts from foreign countries as well as the United States. Then there are the Tubular Rivet works, and the Boston Gear works, etc.

Mr. Stone believed Quincy should develop its water front. It should have a railroad from the quarries to the water, that our granite may compete with the world. All parts of Quincy must act as one city, and the result may be surprising.

MAYOR SHEA.

Mayor Shea said the Board of Trade had a grand opportunity in Quincy in the next few years. The city is growing rapidly, and we must make preparations for a large population. We have an area three times as large as Cambridge. As recommended in my inaugural, Hancock street should be widened from City Square to School street, and also School street this year. A new avenue should be built from near Music hall to South and West Quincy. Large appropriations should be made for water and sewer extensions and new streets. Quincy should appropriate $15,000 this year for permanent sidewalks. Quincy is destined to be a big city, and questions should be treated in a broad sense. He advocated the election of Mayor for two years, and a reduction of City Council to 9 or 7.

LT. GOV. FROTHINGHAM.

The Lieutenant Governor said he was happy to be home again, as he had many associations with Quincy, and was a former pupil at Adams Academy. He paid a tribute to the late Dr. Everett and recalled reminiscences. He observed also that Quincy had grown by leaps and bounds.

Referring to strikes, he said, we look with compassion and disapproval at Philadelphia, and we earnestly wish for a time when the third party to the dispute—the public—shall be considered. We should insist on arbitration. It was possible in some way to bring parties in dispute together and settle difficulties before a catastrophy. Mr. Frothingham modestly referred to his part in securing a settlement recently at Ludlow.

He said the State had always taken pride in the granite quarries of Quincy, and was glad to see that shipping was revived here. He hoped soon that Quincy would be building ships of peace to carry our commerce to South America and other countries. (Applause.)

The Lieutenant Governor hoped that the railroad through Quincy would soon be operated by electricity; and that grade crossings would be abolished. Nothing was impossible with united effort.

COUNCILLOR CUSHING.

J. Stearns Cushing of the Governor's Council, had some good natured comments concerning his office. He knew of the good work that boards of trade could accomplish, having been the first president at Norwood. He told of the advantages. His reference to his first meeting with Mayor Shea at a Turkish bath room was amusing.

Mr. Cushing had a tribute for Gov. Draper. He said the people little realized what their chief executive was doing for the people of this State; he was an earnest, honest, fearless worker for the people; not for party or clique. He was a fine business governor.

JUDGE CHAMBERLAIN.

Inland waterways, as handled by President Chamberlain of the State Board of Trade, is not a dry subject, for he brought it home to all present. We must work through such organizations as the Board of Trade. Transportation is today the vital question. The railroads have become powerful because of the right we have given them, and now it has become a question whether or not the railroad that we have placed here is organized solely to pay dividends to its directors, or do they owe a duty to the people by giving reasonable and proper rates to those who gave the railroads the right by which they exist?

New York and Boston are the great railroad centers of the east, but New York by reason of the Erie canal and the Hudson river was able to outstrip Boston in the race. Judge Chamberlain did not think the Buzzards bay canal was the feasible route as compared with the Taunton, Brockton and Quincy route.

Times have changed. The country has expanded to the West and New England is now in the corner. If we are to retain our industrial prominence we must develope our transportation facilities. We cannot afford to longer depend on the railroads. The speaker showed wherein the inland water way route could be opened up and its advantages, and how it would regulate the railroads. If we had more Mr. Cranes we could do something. (Applause.)

The conditions were ideal for the canal proposed from Taunton river to Fore river (Applause.) If built it would mean much to Quincy and Boston. Surveys were now being made by the government. It was necessary to interest the Board of Trade throughout New England. (Applause.)

MAYOR FITZGERALD

Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston entered the hall during the early part of the address of Judge Chamberlain, and received a warm greeting. James F. Burke led in giving three cheers.

Mayor Fitzgerald endorsed the stand of Judge Chamberlain. He commented on the fact that Boston capital was not interested in the Cape Cod canal which meant so much to Boston, but left that to New York. If Boston men would invest their money developing Boston and New England, he said, this section of the country would be in the position where it ought to be as one of the leading cities on the Atlantic seaboard.

"My recent trip to Cuba convinced me that great opportunities are available for trade between that island and Boston. Cuba produces many things that we need, sugar, tobacco, rice and fruit of all kinds, while we are manufacturing things that Cuba needs—shoes, clothing, furniture and articles of every description. There is a differential of 30 percent on Cuban products entering the United States and United States products entering Cuba.

"Little has been done toward the cultivation of this field and every encouragement should be extended it by business and trade organizations. One steamship line is already operating between Boston and Cuba and I believe that the business men of Boston and Quincy would do well to cooperate in every way toward making it a success. One boat is operating now and if this proves profitable another will be put on.

"If service can be maintained between Cuban ports and Boston, why not between Mexico, the Argentine Republic and Brazil. There is no reason why steamers could not be run between Boston and every port in the West Indies and South America. (Applause.)

"The present mail subsidy bill before congress ought to receive the careful consideration of commercial bodies in all the Atlantic seaboard cities, with a view to advising their representatives in congress as to the probable effect of the measure upon business generally.

"It's passage will mean the opening up of new mail lines between our Atlantic and Cuban and South American ports, and if the measure proves successful it will mean a large United States merchant marine, with an enormous increase in our commercial activity. The number of American

AMENDMENT OFFERED TO RIVER AND HARBOR BILL

For Important Survey of Fore River for Straightening the Channel

Commissioner Crane Successfull At Washington

COMMISSIONER CRANE.

Many missed Frank Fessenden Crane at the Quincy Board of Trade banquet but the following special dispatch of Wednesday from Washington to the Transcript explains all. It was important that there should be no delay and Mr. Crane cut out the banquet, and evidently made good at Washington.

That the Fore River Shipbuilding Company of Quincy, Mass., may not find itself in the plight of building battleships for Argentina so large that they cannot be got down to the sea, Congress will be asked to improve Weymouth Fore river. Frank Fessenden Crane, commissioner of water-front of Quincy, is in Washington today, and as a result of his visit, Senator Lodge offered an amendment to the river and harbor bill directing a survey of the river for about a mile and a half below Quincy Point bridge.

In a letter to Senator Lodge, Mayor William T. Shea and Eugene R. Stone, president of the Quincy Board of Trade, describe the conditions and request an appropriation of $115,000 for straightening, widening and dredging.

By Act of March 3, 1905, an appropriation was made for the improvement of the channel from the bridge to about a mile and a half below the bridge, making the channel 300 feet wide and 18 feet deep at low water, on condition that the State would assume the maintenance of the improvements already made by the Government. The condition was accepted and the improvements were completed in 1907. The traffic has increased rapidly since then, and consists of an annual tonnage of coal coming to Quincy of 141,000 tons, and 6265 tons of lumber and miscellaneous cargoes.

Among the vessels which the Fore River Shipbuilding Company has built and worked through the channel are the battleships Vermont and

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

No editorials are necessary today. Everyone should read and reread the addresses at the Board of Trade banquet last night and become imbued with the spirit. It's in the air that Quincy will soon become a big city.

Quincy should tender a complimentary banquet soon to Commissioner Frank Fessenden Crane, in appreciation of the big work that he is doing for the city. Why not another grand time next month. Patriot's day would be a good date.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

A decrease of six per cent in the number of sailors throughout the country in 1907 is shown in the U. S. census bureau's forthcoming report on the statistics of the 158 largest cities, which had a population of over 30,000 each that year. The report, prepared by chief of division E. H. Maling contains complete statistics of the number of liquor licenses in force at the close of the license year in each of the cities and the number of inhabitants to each dealer selling liquor by the drink. More than one-fourth of such dealers in the 158 largest cities were reported from New York and Chicago the cities of over 300,000 population with the smallest number of saloons were Washington (521) and Pittsburg (818). In cities of this class, the largest number of saloons in proportion to the population were in Milwaukee and New Orleans where, in the former, there was one dealer to every 142 inhabitants and, in the latter, to every 200 inhabitants. The number if inhabitants to every dealer in Philadelphia was 761, and in Boston 738. The other cities having less than 200 inhabitants to each dealer were Galveston (134); East St. Louis (143), Mobile (153), Houston (158), Hoboken (168), Sacramento Calif., (188), San Antonio (179) La Crosse, Wisconsin (183), Springfield, Ill., (188), and West Hoboken (191).

The smallest number of saloons in proportion to population is shown for the cities of Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, and the largest for those of Texas, Ohio and Wisconsin. In comparing the number of retail dealers in 141 cities reporting for both 1907 and 1905, it is shown that there was a decrease of six per cent. in the number of saloons in 1907. The decrease was general in nearly every part of the country, except the Rocky Mountain and southwestern states.—Framingham News.

This coming spring and summer will witness the most remarkable war that has ever been waged in this country—a campaign against the house fly. A concerted, nation-wide attack is planned, according to statements made at Washington by Chief Entomologist Howard. Not only will the Department of Agriculture busy itself in this fight, but many other agencies will cooperate.

A few years ago such a warfare might have been smiled at. But that day has passed. Not only is it no laughing matter, but there is a general realization that it is of tremendous importance to health and that a great deal may easily be accomplished by concerted action. Without the house fly, typhoid would probably be largely wiped out in this country. Such an end alone, if accomplished, would mean more than can be estimated from a hygienic and economic standpoint.

It is but a few years ago when the Western Hemisphere was reeking with yellow fever. Today, this disease has been almost stamped out by the destruction of the yellow fever mosquito. A campaign against the malaria-carrying mosquito has been begun that promises to be of even more importance than the one which has been waged successfully on the yellow fever mosquito. Already, much has been accomplished against malaria in the Panama Canal Zone.

With the whole nation aroused against the house fly, that troublesome pest will go; but to carry out the work successfully the opposition must be vigorous and united. A little skirmishing here and there will not suffice. —Boston Journal.

AMENDMENT OFFERED

North Dakota, but their delivery has been made only with the greatest precautions. Special buoys have been placed and tugs used to assist in making the turns. With the increasing size of modern battleships there is actual danger of reaching a size which would be impossible to get through the channel to the open sea.

SENATOR HENRY CABOT LODGE.

It is desired that an acute bend one-half a mile below the bridge be straightened and "channel rock" be removed. It will be necessary also to widen the draw and to utilize the channel on the Weymouth side.

Senator Lodge has offered a second amendment directing a survey of the South Channel of Mystic river for the purpose of making further improvements. No appropriation for anything but the survey can be secured this year, but the Argentine battleships will be several years in building.

Useful Meat Chopper.

The meat chopper will soon save more than its cost by enabling one to use cheaper cuts of meat and to utilize leftover meats. Raw beef run through it is a pleasant change from plain steak. It should be well seasoned with salt and pepper before chopping and should have a little fat mixed with the lean. Drop the little rolls just as they come from the perforated plate of the chopper on a very hot pan, with a little butter. Stir lightly a moment or two and serve quickly on a hot plate. To use remnants of roasts, steak or any nice cooked meat put them through the chopper and mix with an equal measure of breadcrumbs. Season with salt and pepper. Some persons may like herbs. Moisten with any gravy or stock you may have or with cream, making a little more moist than you would dressing for poultry. Put in a skillet or thick pan, cover closely with a plate and bake in the oven until well heated. Twenty minutes or half an hour is about right. After a few trials, possibly the first time, any one may succeed in making this very nicely. Another favorite way of using meat, especially cooked ham, is to cut it in small pieces, heat lightly and break over it one egg for each person to be served. When the eggs begin to set, cut across them and stir carefully so as to preserve the distinct yellow and white of the eggs. Serve at once.

The Beauty of Pansies.

Pansies, as a rule, are difficult flowers to arrange. The stems are short, and the dear little heads of the flower are apt to twist about in a most provoking fashion. The illustration shows a delightful solution of the trouble of arrangement. A small bowl is filled with wet sand, which gives a firm foundation in which to place the frail stems. Pieces of the plant's own foliage are placed among the flowers, but any kind of substantial foliage may be chosen instead. The best time to plant pansies is early in March, and an abundance of bloom will follow the same season.

—Fine grades of paper are now finished on electrically heated rolls. Electricity is being used extensively throughout the manufacture of paper and its products.

WILL $4500 PAY THE BILL?

Insurance Company Not Anxious to Sell Lot

The officials of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company were surprised when they read in the Daily Ledger that the City Council proposed to take their business site, and have no knowledge of the move except what was given in the Ledger.

Charles A. Howland the president of the company was interviewed by the Daily Ledger. He said he was taken entirely unprepared. Thought the sum of $4,500 proposed in the order was ridicuously low. Supposed the city could take by eminent domain if it so decided.

Asked what he considered a fair sum for the city to pay for the property, he was non-committal, but said the company would talk it over with the committee of the City Council. He had nothing further to say at this time.

The lot of the Insurance company is almost triangular in shape ,containing only 2,834 sjuare feet. There are less than 40 feet on Washington street, and about 115 feet on Coddington street. The building abuts the line on Coddington street, and also the Public Library grounds.

The $4,500 named in the order would allow $1,500 for the building ,and over $1 per square foot for the land. The building could be moved and continued in commission as an office, or converted into a dwelling house.

The removal of the building seems necessary to complete the improvements which the family of Thomas Crane have so generously inaugurated. At the outset the town paid $10,000 for less than half the present area of the Library grounds, a rectangular lot with a frontage of about 200 feet on Washington street and 200 feet on Spear street ,the house of Dr. Woodward being removed.

The family of Thomas Crane at their own expense erected the beautiful Library building, and recently enlarged it to twice its original size. The family also purchased two estates on Coddington street and removed two houses, and two estates on Washington street where they also removed two houses. The Library and Library grounds are now the most attractive spot in Quincy but the small building of the Insurance Company hides them from view.

The building also obstructs the view of Coddington street from Temple street, and the view of Temple street from Coddington street. If the lot is thrown into the street, the line from Temple street can be straightened and children going to school via. of Temple street will not be in the street so much. Coddington street people will also have a more direct route to City Square. Other advantages might be enumerated. The Daily Ledger would like to publish letters relative to this improvement from interested persons.

SAN JOSE SCALE.

The State Board of Agriculture will hold a demonstration of the best means of spraying for protection against the San Jose scale at the farm of Edmund Mortimer, at Grafton on Friday, at 10.30 A. M. The scale forms the greatest menace to our orchards of any of the insects infesting them, whole orchards in many cases being killed before their owners know they are infested. This is the first field demonstration against this pest to be held in Massachusetts and is the beginning of a campaign of education on these lines by the Board of Agriculture. Mr. Mortimer's farm is reached by trolley from Worcester cars leaving Worcester at fifteen minutes past the hour.

A Great Mystery Solved.

How many hairpins does a woman use when doing her hair? The hairpin editor has investigated and makes this report: "She uses just as many as she has. If she has only two hairpins she makes her hair stay up with two, but if she finds twenty in the top bureau drawer she uses all of them."—Atchison Globe.

Bad Breath

I therefore let you know that I shall recommend them to any one suffering from such troubles."—Chas. H. Halpern, 114 E. 7th St., New York, N. Y.

A Vampire

How His Old Father and Mother Stood by Their Son Even to Giving Up the Farm.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

They say that doctors and clergymen see more of humanity as it is than any other class of men, but I question if the endless panorama of incidents typifying the different phases of human life is witnessed by any class that every day passes before bankers. Sometimes whole stories are enacted before us spread over a term of years. I am the repository of one such story that I watched from its beginning to its climax.

One afternoon a weather beaten old farmer with silky white hair scattered over his head came to my desk and, pulling out a wallet, asked for a draft on Denver for $200 in favor of Thomas Williams. He counted out the money, and then, having nothing to do while the draft was being prepared, began to tell me the beginning of this story.

"I'm sendin' the money," he said, "to my boy out in Colorado. He went out there a year ago, takin' some money with him that I give him, but he hasn't had much luck, and it's all gone. First he got sick; then when he got well he went prospectin' and struck somepin that looked good, but some other fellers jumped his claim, whatever that means, and took it all away from him.

"Then Tom got sick ag'in and went to a horsepittle and stayed there three months. Now he's got out of the horsepittle and lookin' about for somepin. I'm sendin' this money to give him a chanct. Tom's his mother's pet, and she lays awake nights worritin' about him. I'm mighty fond of the boy myself somehow. He was always a smart little chap—took lots of prizes and things at schule.

"When he got old enough to work I wanted him to help me on the farm. He tried it for awhile, but I see purty quick he didn't take to it. He was too smart to be contented to follow a plow same 's his father, who didn't never get no eddication. So I says to him one day: 'Tommy, reckon you'd better go to the city and work that a-way. This don't suit you.' He was mighty well pleased at that. It almost broke ma's heart to part with him, but she knowed it was better for him and let him go.

"Tom didn't like it in town so well as he thought he would. Leastaways he didn't stay long in the place he went into. They must 'a' thought a heap of him, though, for they raised his salary twice, so he wrote me. But he got into a fight with one of the head clerks and got himself discharged. He said the head clerk accused him of stealin' some money.

"Tom was allus an ambitious little chap, and after leavin' his place he concluded he'd go west and try and do somepin big, for ma and me agin we got too old to work. So we scraped up $500 and give it to him, and he"—

At this moment a clerk laid the farmer's draft on my desk, and the first chapter of his story was finished, for he began to count over his soiled and torn bills, now and again wetting his thumb on his lip as he turned them up. Then, leaving them to me and carefully folding his draft, he put it in his wallet, crammed the wallet down into the bottom of his pocket and with a "Goodby, Mr. Cashier," left the bank.

The second chapter of the story is very short. There is hardly enough in it to make a chapter, but there is a good deal beneath the few words required to tell it. A girl of eighteen came to the bank, laid down $24, nearly all in silver coin, and asked for a draft to cover the amount.

"To whom will you have it made payable?" I asked.

"Tom Williams," in a soft voice, almost a whisper.

I ordered the draft made out, and the girl stood waiting. Unlike the farmer, she didn't tell all I would have liked to know, so I asked:

"Is Tom Williams your brother?"

"No," she replied, looking down on the floor.

I had not liked the indications as to Tom's character as they appeared in his father's account of him, and now that money was going to him from his sweetheart I began to despise him. I handed the girl the draft and had a good opportunity to study her, for she never once looked up at me. She went out with it hugged up against her heart, as though she loved it because she had saved it for Tom.

My next visitor in behalf of Tom was his mother. She stood by my desk emptying on it from a carpetbag a lot of bills and silver and copper coins. Not knowing who she was, I asked what I should do with the money, and she said, "Send it to Tom." By this time I was not likely to forget Tom and asked if she wished a draft for Thomas Williams. She said she did. I turned her funds over to a clerk to count, and he reported that they amounted to $643.47. I ordered the draft to be made out, placed a chair before the old lady and said, with a view to my enlightenment:

"Mr. Williams pretty busy nowadays?"

"No, pa ain't busy. He's sick. I wish we had our boy here to help us. He's out in Colorado perspectin'. He says he's struck a mine or a-goin' to strike a mine or somepin and wants some money for grub stakin' or somepin like that. We're sendin' him all we kin jest now, but hope to send him some more bime by. We had some money saved up for old age, but we've been a-drawin' on it for Tom, and this is all there is left."

When she went out with her draft I found myself boiling with indignation at this worthless scamp, who was sucking the lifeblood out of his old father and mother—even his sweetheart.

There was a visit from the sweetheart after this to ask for a draft of $18.50, which convinced me that Tom had accepted the last amount she had sent him. Then one day the old farmer came in pale and trembling, evidently just out of a sickbed, with the check of a mortgage company for $1,000. He asked for a draft in exchange for it payable to this vampire of a son. We bankers make it a rule to mind our own business, but I had reached a point where I could no longer refrain from warning this poor old man.

"So you have mortgaged your farm to send money to your son?" I said.

"Yes; Tom's in powerful need of money. The mine he thought was goin' to turn out so fine petered out. He says it closed up as he went down instead of openin'."

"And you lost all the money you sent him for the development?"

"Yes, we lost it," replied the old man with a tremulous voice.

"Aren't you afraid you'll lose this too?"

"I dunno. Tom's got another mine. He says he's sure o' this."

"Of course it's no business of mine, but I don't like to see you, an old man, mortgaging your farm to send money to a son who should be giving you money instead of you giving it to him. Suppose you can't pay the interest on the mortgage when it is due. You will lose your farm."

The old man stood wiping his face with a bandanna handkerchief, the picture of misery.

"I know what yer mean," he said, "but ma she won't keep back anything the boy wants. She never did. I always told her she'd spoil him."

"I'm afraid she has spoiled him. You should know that your son is not wasting your money at gambling or something like that and telling you that he's on the verge of making a fortune in a mine before risking any more money on him."

"That's what I tell ma."

At this moment the draft was laid before me, but instead of handing it to him I said:

"Hadn't you better think this over?"

He stood, his eyes fixed on vacancy, slowly swaying or tottering, and I knew there was a great contest going on in his mind. His love for his boy conquered.

"I'm 'bliged to you, Mr. Cashier, and mebbe you're right, but I allus believed in my Tom, and I can't go back on him now."

I handed him the draft, and he scuffled slowly out of the bank.

The old man must have borrowed all he could on his farm, considering the transaction as a sale, for he failed to pay the first interest that fell due on the mortgage. I knew this, because I saw in a newspaper a legal notice of foreclosure proceedings on his farm.

"Well," I sighed, laying down the paper, "the old man has given his home to his reprobate son; he has nothing more to give. I shall not suffer again at seeing him come into the bank to do what I can't prevent his doing."

The same day I met the young girl on the street whom I was sure was Tom's sweetheart. I stopped her and asked:

"Is Farmer Williams turned out of house and home?"

"Not yet, sir."

"But he will be?"

"I suppose so."

"Has his son sent him anything to help him?"

"No, sir. He wrote to say that he was awful sorry to see the farm go, but he could not help it."

"H'm. Do you think a son who will treat his father and mother like that would treat a wife any better?"

Tears came into her eyes. I was ashamed at giving her this useless pain. I walked on.

About a month after this a strapping young fellow with a fine, manly face came into the bank and said he wished to open an account. I assented, and he made a deposit of $49,506.

"Will you please leave your signature in this book?" I said. He took up a pen and wrote:

"Thomas Williams."

"You Tom Williams?" I exclaimed.

"Yes. What do you know about me?"

"Son of Farmer Williams?"

"Yes."

"Sold your mine?"

"Yes; I've sold a mine in Colorado, or two-thirds of it. This money I'm leaving with you is the first cash payment; there are two others of $50,000 each."

"Has your father's farm gone to the mortgagee?"

"No; I'm in time for that. I was afraid I wouldn't be, though. Anyway, I'd have bought it back. If it hadn't been for the money father sent me I couldn't have carried the deal through. I expected the farm to go for the mine."

"And the young girl to whom we gave drafts payable to your order?"

He colored and said: "It's in with the rest, but she and I'll be one anyway. I shall transfer two-thirds of this deposit to father. I took him and mother in for thirds."

I went to see the old farmer and his wife and found them jubilant. "I told you I had confidence in my boy," the farmer said. "He was always straight."

I attended Tom Williams' wedding and kissed the bride. I couldn't help it.

—After a most carefully kept record by a Chicago Company it was shown that the electric vehicle was considerably cheaper to operate than the horse drawn delivery wagons and trucks. When it is remembered that the electric vehicle makes a better appearance, travels faster and can be handled quicker and easier there is no question but what it will ultimaely displace the horse.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL

Items of Interest to Students and Graduates

The principal topic of conversation at the High school is the meet a week from Friday. Those planning to contest must make entries before this week Friday with Mr. Currier of room 2. The fee for entering is ten cents, but for thirty-five cents one has the privilege of going into all events. The proceeds are for the track team, of which Franz Marceau is captain. The events are: A potato race; novice, handicap, scratch, and Freshman twenty-yard dashes; a sack race; shot put; high jump; running, broad and standing jump. Also a tug-of-war. Probably the representatives of the Freshman for this tug will be E. Rich, E. Church, White and Johnson; of the Sophomores—H. Trask, W. Edwards, Scanlon and E. Prout; for the Juniors—H. Prout, P. Rice, J. Hill and H. Hill and for the Seniors R. Bates, L. Brown, C. H. Kendall and F. Veale. The pulls will be for two minutes. First the Freshmen and Sophomores will meet, then the Juniors and Seniors and then the finals between the winners.

Monday the Athletic committee meet to arrange the handicaps. Unofficially it is said, that the scratch men of the event will be Russ Bates in dash; Harold Hill in high jump; Harold and Everett Prout in twenty yard and potato race; Harold Prout in standing jump; Everett Prout in broad jump.

• • •

The Juniors are looked upon as the probable winners of the meet with the Sophomores a close second in points. The different classes are using the floor daily in preparation of the meet.

• • •

The track team will be out soon coached by Mr. Blazo, who was a member of the Harvard track team. The committee is trying to arrange meets with Cambridge Latin, Powder Point, and some other schools. Next week's meet will act somewhat as a tryout. "Babe" Marceau and his team should "make good" with the wealth of material. It is rumored that some schools do not wish to meet Quincy High because of Marceau, for they consider him a team in himself.

• • •

A meeting of those who are trying for positions on the baseball nine was called Tuesday afternoon in the gymnasium. A good number responded. Among those who came out were M. Chapman, P. Rice, G. Holteen for pitcher; H. Chapman, G. Barry, Johnson and Arthur for catcher. Russ Bates will probably be on third bases while Manning will have his old place at second. The rest will be new men. Prospects augur a good season. The Old Colony grounds are leased. The price of the season tickets will be one dollar. Thus one of the difficulties, that of raising money for the expenses, will be obviated. Formerly the money necessary for the season's work has been raised through subscriptions and dues, and the sale of score cards. Now those only who enjoy the games will pay the expenses. It is to be hoped that the support previously given to the team will be continued. With Manager Veale's fine schedule, the games will undoubtedly be well worth seeing. The beauty of the schedule is that they are nearly all at home.

The basket ball team of the Galahad club of Christ church, which is composed principally of High students, will play the Cambridge Galahads March 15. The players are: H. and E. Prout, H. Miller, H.Fanacke and J. Smith, with Townsend as coach.

• • •

Harold Prout, Q. H. S. '11 is captain of their baseball and track teams, and invites challenges, addressed to him.

• • •

The Galahad will give plays the 30th and 31st of March, "The Striped Sweater" and "The Loan of a Lover." The following High students will take part: H. Prout, tramp; E. Prout, Chinaman; P. Halvosa, sheriff; T. Veale, the uncle.

• • •

Tonight Mr. Holbrook, teacher of Latin, speaks to the Galahad club.

• • •

Some of the students, for the most part Juniors, have formed a walking club called the "Appalachian Walking club."

The basket ball players took a trip to their retreat ,a cottage at Houghs Neck, Saturday and Sunday, as a windup of the basket ball season.

The Athletic committee have decided they will not present sweaters with "Q's" to the basket ball players, who have been so successful this season. The committee felt that such an action would practically make the players professionals for the cost of proper sweaters would be the equivalent of over $5.00 in payment.

Towns containing 500 families are required to maintain high schools. Other towns may maintain such schools; and a town of less than 500 families maintaining a high school of its own and employing at least two teachers therein may receive annually from the Commonwealth toward the support of such high school, if it be approved by the State Board of Education ,the sum of $500. But no town valuation of which averages a larger sum for each pupil in the average membership of its public schools than the corresponding average for the Commonwealth shall receive money from the Commonwealth under the provisions of this section.

Towns of less than 500 families which do not maintain high schools are required to pay for the tuition of children residing in the town who, with the previous approval of the school committee of their town, attend the high school of another city or town. A town whose valuation is less than $750,000 is entitled to reimbursement from the Commonwealth for amounts thus paid for the tuition of its children in the high school of another city or town; and a town whose valuation exceeds $750,000 but whose number of families is less than 500, is entitled to reimbursement from the Commonwealth for one-half of the amount thus paid another city or town.

The Haverhill Gazette comments editorially on Training School Children for Practical Life as follows:

"While the manual training school propositions are invoking discussion, not only in Haverhill, but in other industrial cities of the commonwealth, it is interesting to observe that Maryland is going about it to see that the children who leave its public schools have some preparation for that work in the world they will have to do.

"A legislative commission headed by Dr. Grady of the naval academy hopes to report a plan to this end at the legislative session of this year. To inform itself of conditions elsewhere, the commission is sending inquiries to the educators of the country seeking intelligence as to the extent of manual training and domestic economy departments and the methods in vogue for training school boys and school girls in practical things. Probaly the first school in the country devoted to manual training was established in 1884 in Maryland. It is proposed to incorporate the system in all the schools of all the cities of the state. And it is planned to do this, not incidentally as it has been done all over the country, but actually with a view of doing something to train the youth of the state that they may be useful when they leave school.

"Contemplate a child coming out of school to make a living, says the circular sent out by the Maryland commission. If his education is to stop at any single point, he should have been taught something to help him in the struggle of life. No system of education is logical which undertakes to carry a youth as far as he has to go through school and drops him without having done anything to teach him how to do that which will most probably aid him to make his daily livelihood. After years spent in school, boys and girls—yes, graduates of high schools and colleges—find that they have not been trained to do any one thing well. Certainly there is but little value, economic or otherwise, in system of education which fails under such a test.

"It is estimated that of the 13,000,000 men between 21 and 35 engaged in work in this country, not five percent received in the schools any direct preparation for their vocations. In view of the fact that but 8 per cent of those who graduate from the elementary schools enter professional and commercial pursuits ,and the remaining 92 percent support themselves and their families by such work as their hands find to do, it would seem to be a matter of importance to the community to teach the boys and girls in the schools at least a little of that which will be of immediate and permanent practical value to them Most children leave school before they are 17. Maryland indicates a disposition to do something for them."

The Highland club, composed of High school pupils, will hold a dance at Wollaston hall March 17.

WON'T APPLY FOR DIVORCE

Mrs. Cudahy's Love For Children Prevents Such Action

Kansas City, March 10.—Overtures made to Mrs. John P. Cudahy by relatives and friends in an effort to effect a reconciliation between her and her husband, the son of the millionaire packer, induced Mrs. Cudahy to make a statement in which she declared in a vehement manner that a reconciliation was impossible.

Her stand is taken not alone because of the insinuation he has cast against her honor, but because, as she said: "I have stood all the brutality that should be one woman's share in life."

She reiterated that she would not sue her husband for a divorce because of her love for her children. Nothing in the world, she averred, however, could induce her to live with him again, or even talk to him. She characterized his attack on Jere S. Lillis, whom he found in his home, as cowardly and unjustified.

Mrs. Cudahy, besides spurning the offers of reconciliation, made a statement in which she defends Lillis, saying that she is deeply grieved that his innocent friendship with her should have made him "the victim of such a wanton and cowardly attack."

Cudahy may have failed in his design to disfigure Lillis for life. At St. Mary's hospital it is stated that his lacerated face probably will heal without leaving a scar or mark. Only from the long gash on the left cheek is a scar feared.

"Mr. Lillis' condition is very favorable," Dr. Ayer said. "He is doing nicely. If his face shows any marks of the knife at all they will be slight."

Cudahy still refuses to discuss the case, while Lillis is not able to talk. His mouth is so lacerated that he can barely reply in whispers to the questions asked him by his doctor.

John Moss, the Cudahy chauffeur, is still missing. The police are making no further effort to arrest him, in spite of the fact that he is said to have taken an active part in the assault on Lillis.

It is reported that the police commissioners probably will investigate the conduct of Policeman Underwood, who refused, it is said, to untie the cords with which Lillis was bound until a doctor arrived. Failure to arrest the chauffeur and his subsequent report of the affair may be made subjects of inquiry.

SUTTON CASE REOPENED

Congressional Resolution Calls For Investigation Into Death of Officer

Sutton, a lieutenant in the marine corps at Annapolis, Oct. 13, 1907.

An appropriation of $25,000 is urged to defray the expenses of the proposed inquiry. Members of his family endeavored to fix the responsibilty for his death upon his companions on the night of his death.

TOWN ACCOUNTS SHORT

Expert Accountant to Go Over Books of Wenham's Tax Collector

Wenham, Mass., March 10.—The selectmen of this town last night stated that the town was $746.49 short in its taxes. Frederick P. Stanton, who, after ten years of service, resigned his position last year, claims that it is not fair to charge this deficit up to him, until the town secures the services of an expert accountant to go over his books.

This the selectmen have consented to do. A public meeting in regard to the matter will be held at the town hall tonight.

BRIEFS.

A basket social will be given by the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church, March 18, at 7.30.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Bethany church will hold a social for members and friends this evening at 7.30 o'clock, in the church chapel. There will be no admission fee and all are invited.

The granite polishers of the city put into operation a new sale of prices this month. The new scale is practically an increase for five per cent. for polishing, the price being raised from 65 to 70 cents per foot.

A large and powerful automobile truck for the hauling of granite from the quarries is to be tried out next week by the Quincy Quarries Co. It is claimed that not only can granite be transported much quicker by the auto truck than by the old-fashioned horse stone team, but that in the long run it can be transported much cheaper.

The annual reunion of the three branches of the granite workers of the city will be held tonight at Hibernian hall and promises to be a grand event. The affair will practically be confined to granite workers, the only outsiders being Secretary-Treasurer Duncan and Mayor Shea, and W. T. Spargo and Andrew McIntosh, the two pioneers of the city in the union of granite workers; John C. Murray, president of the Granite Manufacturers' association; and John L. Miller, president of the National Retail Dealers' association.

Naval Committeemen Stand Pat on Peary Matter

Washington, March 10.—Robert E. Peary will have to submit to the house committee on naval affairs proof of his discovery of the North Pole before that committee will take favorable action on the bill intended to reward him with the rank of rear admiral.

This action was decided upon at a meeting of the committee, and on the motion of Representative Bates, (Pa.) the committee is already on record to the effect that any evidence presented by Peary in support of his claim to discovering the pole will be made public. Peary has declared his magazine contracts make it impossible for him to agree to any proposition looking to the publication of his records until his magazine articles are finished.

It seems probable, therefore, that there will be no Peary legislation at this session of congress. Representative Englebright (Cal.) was the only member of the committee who protested against the Bates motion.

Mr. Macon (Ark.) attacked the statements made by Peary in support of his claim to have reached the Pole. It was the most severe attack on the explorer yet heard. Macon directly charged that Peary did not actually reach the North Pole. In the course of a long statement Macon said:

"Peary says he went to the Pole in five days (132 miles), making an average of 26.4 miles per day on the way there, and returned in three days, making an average of 44 miles per day and 26.8 per day from the Pole to Cape Columbia (16 days, 416 miles).

"Peary says in his statement that on April 6, the day he arrived at the Pole: 'In twelve hours we made forty miles' (the table makes it thirty-five nautical miles).

"Whatever may be truth regarding this matter, it would seem clear that Peary should furnish some clear explanation of this miraculous performance.

"Weston, a trained athlete, the greatest known walker in the world, traveling over smooth, graded roads, railroad grades and paved streets, did not make the distance from Boston to San Francisco, about 4000 miles, in 100 days, or make an average of forty miles per day, yet he availed himself of weather conditions, resting up in stormy weather, and traveling on good roads.

"Peary claims that he, with three untrained Eskimos bundled in Arctic clothing, driving the same dogs all the way, hauling loaded sleds over ice and snow, walked a distance of 545 miles, averaging 26.4 miles per dty, reaching and leaving the Pole, made an average of 43 miles per day, and three of the four days made 44 miles a day (nautical miles).

"Could he physically have done this? Could his Eskimos possibly do this? Could his dogs possibly do this, dragging loaded sledges all the way? Could Weston himself have done it, with such underfooting and under such conditions as existed, compared with his best efforts actually reported? Could he have done it between Boston and San Francisco if there had been slippery ice with yielding snow on the roads every foot, all the way, traveling every day, regardless of the weather?"

"I am absolutely opposed to congress granting any award to Commander Peary, unless his proofs are made public," declared Representative Roberts of Massachusetts, a member of the sub-committee. "No doubt the members of the committee wouldn't be able to tell anything about Mr. Peary's records even if they were submitted to us, for we are not scientists, but at least the country would be given a chance to know why we are honoring him.

"There is nothing whatever before us to show that Mr. Peary has discovered the Pole, further than the statements of certain gentlemen that he did. How could members of this committee go into the house and support any bill which they presented when they had no facts to back it up? We would be in a ridiculous attitude."

FALL RIVER MILL "GUILTY"

Convicted of Violation of Fifty-Six Hour Law and Is Fined $50

Fall River, Mass., March 10.—The first case on a charge of violation of the fifty-six-hour law was tried here before Judge McDonough. The alleged violation was at the Davol Mills, Feb. 24. Miss Mary E. Halley of the state police was the complainant, and Richard G. Riley, superintendent at the Davol, was made the defendant.

The charge was that the machinery was started five minutes ahead of the time scheduled in the mills on the date named, and that two women speeder tenders were working. It was shown that these women were employed less than fifty-two hours a week, quitting at 5:30 in the afternoon on five days and at 10 on Saturday morning. No other defense was taken.

A verdict of guilty was imposed because they were allowed to work outside the posted schedule time. A fine of $50 was imposed and an appeal taken.

BRIDGE IS DYNAMITED

Troops Ready to Suppress Disorder at Corinth Paper Mills

Corinth, N. Y., March 10.—Nine armed strikebreakers, brought here by the International Paper company, were arrested last night by the village police, charged with carrying concealed weapons, and locked up.

Twice yesterday dynamite cartridges were exploded under a railroad bridge over which strikebreakers must pass to enter Corinth. The damage was slight, owing to scanty knowledge of how to handle dynamite.

Company L, Second regiment, N. Y. N. G., is stationed at the mills to suppress disorder in case strikers or sympathizers resist an attempt to smuggle in nonunion men under cover of darkness.

COMMERCE COURT PROJECT MAY DIE

Taft Must Work Hard to Overcome "Jolt" In the House

Washington, March 9.—The administration railroad bill has received another jolt at the hands of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce. An amendment was tentatively agreed upon which, in effect, would deprive the court of commerce of the business necessary to justify its existence.

The president and attorney general are particularly anxious to have a court of commerce, and the minority report of Senators Cummins and Clapp, presented to the senate, set forth that there would not be enough business for presentation to the court to justify its creation.

The bill introduced in the house by Representative Townsend sought to overcome this objection by having sent to the proposed court of commerce certain specified business which is now under the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission.

Chairman Mann, in addition to being opposed to the court of commerce, is insistent that there should be no interference with the powers of the commission. He is supported in this contention by the Democratic members of the committee, and by one or two Republicans.

It is believed that the bill will be amended as desired by Mann and the Democrats, unless President Taft succeeds in winning over recruits for the court of commerce.

NON-UNION MEN JOIN STRIKERS

Labor War In Philadelphia Is Given New Impetus

Philadelphia, March 10.—Promise of help from without and development of strength in its own field, which appeared to take even its most confident leaders by surprise, has injected new life into the Philadelphia general sympathetic strike movement.

The labor campaign received its strongest impetus from the action of the State Federation of Labor convention in Newcastle, in declaring that a state-wide and even nation-wide tieup of industry would not be too great a price to pay if necessary to insure success to the local cause.

Added to this came the revelation that the union labor movement in sympathy with the striking employes of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company was strong enough to invade what was supposed to be a secure citadel of the opposing forces and open an admittedly wide breach.

The success of the strike leaders in inducing something over 1000 employes of the Baldwin Locomotive Works to walk out yesterday afternoon, following the morning desertion of possibly as many more, was the most striking development of the day in the local situation. The Baldwin plant is an open shop.

The strike leaders, however, were seemingly satisfied that they had won their most important victory, and last night announced that not only had hundreds of men from other plants joined the ranks of the strikers, but that the next day or two will witness even more important accessions to their ranks.

To the threat of a country-wide strike if the local traction heads did not agree to arbitration with their men, the officials of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company made curt response, announcing that it had said its last word on arbitration and that if the wide-spread strike depended on its yielding to the arbitration demand, the strike would have to come.

Other evidences, too, were given by the city's employers of labor of many classes that there was confidence in their ranks that a national strike could not, or would not, be forced, and that the sympathetic movement in the city, portentious as it now appeared, would wear itself out. Several firms announced that their hands were returning to work, and others announced that they were content to wait and let time work for them.

Wednesday was without disturbances of consequence and the only outbreak was a minor disturbance or two in the Kensington shop district. No one was reported injured.

HELD IN $10,000 EACH

Sample and Hartung Arraigned on Charge of Counterfeiting

Boston, March 10.—Two of the three alleged counterfeiters, William Sample and Frederick Hartung, were held in $10,000 each by Commissioner Hayes for a hearing on March 17. A plea of not guilty was entered for each defendant.

Robert E. Sample, a brother of William, who is also under arrest, was not brought before the commissioner because of illness, and the secret service men have a guard about his home. He will be arraigned as soon as he is sufficiently improved to stand the trip to the federal building.

PRIZES FOR DESIGNS

To be Used in Advertising New England

The Pilgrim Publicity Association, representing the advertising interests of New England, offers two prizes, one of $75.00 and one of $25.00, for special designs to be used in connection with the work of the Association in a campaign of advertising to be inaugurated shortly for the benefit of New England-made goods.

Any person of artistic ability is eligible for the competition. The design required is an artistic decoration for a series of advertisements to be used in the near future. The drawing may be made in pen-and-ink, wash, crayon, pencil, or may be modeled in low relief.

The series of advertisements for which this decorative design is wanted is intended to emphasize the industrial supremacy of the New England States. The Association believes that New England is the logical center for manufacturing industry, and that New England always has been and always will be the source of manufactured goods of the finest quality and merit. The design, therefore, should be something symbolic in character, and we should prefer that it express idealism rather than mere commercialism, and so harmonize with text matter of the advertisements.

All those who wish to know more about the particulars of the competition may obtain circulars and conditions by writing to Mr. D. N. Graves, 95 Milk street, Boston, Mass. Copies of the text matter with instructions in reference to size and other information in regard to the contest will be mailed upon request. Those interested are urged to write at once.

WAR ON OIL TRUST

Department of Justice Files Its Brief With Supreme Court

Washington, March 10.—"Either the Sherman act should be repealed or it should be enforced in a manner to make the people respect it."

With this declaration of its guiding principle, the department of justice filed with the supreme court of the United States a thousand-page brief in support of its petition that "Standard Oil" be dissolved as in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The brief will be the foundation of the government's oral argument at the hearing of the case by the supreme court next Monday.

King Buys American Apples

Washington, March 10.—"The King of England buys some of his apples in New York state," declared a witness before the house committee on agriculture at the hearing on the bill to establish standard grades for apples and standard packages for transporting apples.

RIOTING CONTINUES

Feeling Against Americans In Bogota Is Very Bitter

Bogota, Colombia, March 10.—The rioting which began with a quarrel between the American street railway manager and a police officer continues. The anti-American feeling is intense. The mob which forced the suspension of street railway traffic committed further violence and the American manager was forced to seek safety at the United States legation.

The government is taking every precaution to safeguard American lives and property. A large force of police is stationed in the vicinity of the American legation.

Humor and Morality.

We have extirpated gross humor from our modern literature, but we must not suppose that we are therefore more moral than the Elizabethans, whose literature was full of gross humor. It may be that we are only more afraid of ourselves and each other. This kind of fear is destructive not only of gross humor, but of humor of all kinds. In its essence humor is brave as it is honest, but with cowardice and dishonesty there come base substitutes for it, substitutes that make fun of noble things with a humorous air, and so bring humor itself into discredit.—London Times.

CUSTOMS COURT JUDGES

Montgomery of Michigan Is to Be the Presiding Officer

Washington, March 10.—President Taft sent to the senate the following nominations for the new customs court of appeals:

Chief Justice Robert M. Montgomery of the supreme court of Michigan, to be presiding judge. Associate judges: William H. Hunt of Montana, James F. Smith of California, Orio M. Barber of Vermont and Marion Devries of California.

Nominations for this court were made by the president several months ago, but they were withdrawn when he found that congress would persist in cutting down the proposed salaries from $10,000 to $7000 a year.

When the court was first named Judge Coxe of New York was selected as presiding judge. With the exception of Coxe, the court is the same as at first chosen by the president.

TARIFF CONCESSIONS

Uncle Sam Expects That Some Will Be Made by Canada

Washington, March 10.—The announcement is made at the state department that Mr. Pepper and Mr. Emery, the tariff commissioners from the United States to Canada, who have been conducting negotiations in Ottawa with the Dominion officials, are returning to Washington, and upon their arrival here will report to the state department.

The statement is made that notwithstanding the reports indicating an unyielding attitude by the Canadian authorities and an unwillingness to look upon this country's minimum rates as an equivalent of the lowest rates of Canada, this government expects that when the situation is fully understood the government of Canada will be willing to make fair and reasonable concessions.

BEGUN HIS THEFTS EIGHTEEN YEARS AGO

Hall Robbed Southbridge Bank When First Employed

Southbridge, Mass., March 10.—John A. Hall, deposed treasurer of the Southbridge Savings bank after defalcations of $640,000 were discovered, began to steal from the bank even before he was promoted to be treasurer. This fact was divulged by the legislative committee investigating the bank, who found a shortage of $20,000 before he became treasurer.

Hall, the experts have found, took $100 in the first month that he worked in the bank eighteen years ago while a young man of 26. The theft was never discovered by the bank officials and evidently induced Hall to believe that he could go on at will stealing, for he had taken $20,000 when he was promoted from a clerkship.

HER BRAIN AFFECTED

Prima Donna of Boston Opera Falls Unconscious In Street

Boston, March 10.—Mme. Mathilde Lewicka, one of the soprano singers of the Boston Opera company, was picked up unconscious on the sidewalk outside the opera house in a serious condition. Dr. DeAmezage, who is attending her, says that the singer has broken down because of the hard work of the season and overstudy and that her brain is seriously affected.

When the prima donna was brought into the opera house she appeared to be dying. For some hours it was believed that her condition was critical, but Dr. DeAmezage says that he believes that eventually she will recover.

GOING TO WORK HARD

Young Knox Tells Newspaper Men of His Plans

Providence, March 10.—Philander C. Knox, Jr., and his bride, who was Miss May Boller, arrived here and were whirled in a taxi to the latter's apartments, 147 Benefit street, where she lived before the elopement to Burlington. Knox said determinedly to a party of newspaper men:

"I'm going to make a man of myself. I'm going to work hard. I love my wife. I've something to live for now, something worth fighting for. I married the girl I loved. She is worthy of me."

EXPELLED FROM A PUBLIC SCHOOL

Girl Brings Suit Against City and Is Awarded $1075

Fitchburg, Mass., March 10.—The jury in the case of Pauline Jones vs. City of Fitchburg, an action to recover for her expulsion from school, returned a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $1075.

The girl was a pupil in the Ashburnham street school, where George F. Hopkins was principal. She was assigned as police officer in the school city and was held responsible for all acts of lawlessness which took place in the school. Later she resigned her position as police officer because of the trouble she had with the principal. The resignation was refused by the principal, who informed her that she must remain a police officer or else leave the school. She left school and never returned.

Suit was brought against the city for her unlawful expulsion on the ground that the girl was prevented from obtaining an education. It was claimed that the school city was not part of the regular school work and that she could not be compelled to do the work of a police officer if she refused to do it.

SHELLED AND FROZEN

Four Tons of Bad Eggs Seized In Storage Warehouse at Boston

Boston, March 10.—Federal authorities seized more than four tons of decomposed eggs at the Quincy cold storage warehouse which had been shipped by the Max Matler company of Chicago for use in Boston bakeries.

The eggs had been shelled, put into 574 cans and frozen. The value of the shipment is $1500, but would be worth $3000 if the eggs were fresh. If confiscated, the food inspectors will denaturize the eggs by means of carbolic acid and sell them to tanners for leather finishing.

New Bedford, Mass., March 10.—Alonzo H. Hammond of Acushnet has brought suit against William C. Worden of this city, alleging the alienation of the affections of his wife and seeking damages of $5000.

Mr. and Mrs. Hammond are of middle age, have been married thirteen years and have one child. Worden in his defense maintains that the Hammonds have been separated for nearly a year, and that the wife left her husband of her own accord.

London Feeds 40,000 Children

London, March 10.—More than 40,000 schoolchildren in London are fed at public expense. Experts testify that without assistance the needy little ones not only would be unable to study, but would be in peril of starvation.

VALERIA AND THE SPICE MAN.

The Romance That Was Woven Into a Rag Carpet.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

When Valeria Bird was thirty-five years old she emptied all her closets and wardrobes and spread the contents about her room—over the chairs and on the bed or wherever space afforded.

Like all the Birds, Valeria was fond of dress, and "the summer I had the pink organdie," "the winter I wore the green cloak" and other instances were fixed dates in Valeria's memory. Valeria's clothes formed the calendar of her years.

"It's all they're good for," she said decisively. "I'll cut them into carpet rags and make me a handsome carpet. There won't be another like it in Littleville."

And there wasn't another one that compared with Valeria Bird's rag carpet when it was woven and in place on the sitting room floor. Out in the woodshed was an old loom—Uncle Joshua Bird had been a famous weaver in his day—and Valeria had learned how to operate it in the face of Aunt Susanna's strong disapproval.

"You'll spread your feet all out of shape working that treadle. Your Uncle Joshua had that foot to the end of his days from that old loom! You better take it over to the blind weaver. He can do it first rate so long as it's hit or miss"—

"'Tisn't going to be hit or miss," said Valeria stubbornly. "No one could make it this way but me."

When it was completed and the breadths sewed together it made a large carpet, for Valeria had had many garments. Aunt Susanna peered curiously at the intricate pattern.

"I never see a rag carpet like that. What's that little white square in the middle breadth, and how did you fix it so's all those different colored stripes would make squares outside each other? And the outside border is black! That's real tasty!"

"HAVE YOU LOST ANYTHING?" SHE ASKED SHARPLY.

Valeria smiled proudly. "The white square in the middle is made out of my little frocks, and each stripe outside of it is a year of clothes."

"And every year the stripes are wider, showing how extravagant you are getting. But don't tell Tom, Dick and Harry all about those stripes, because any fool could figure out how old you be." Aunt Susanna's voice dropped to a secretive hiss.

"Humph! I don't care who knows how old I am," replied Valeria contemptuously.

Mrs. Bird pursed her lips mysteriously. "There ain't a soul in Littleville that knows how old I be," she muttered. "If you want to be stamped as an old maid, Valery, just run around and tell how old you be."

"I want to be an old maid," said Valeria calmly as she placed the walnut center table exactly over the white square in the new carpet. "I'd rather be Valeria Bird and die unmarried than to change my name to any other. Think I'd change my name to Jones or Gibbie or Riddle or Smith? Humph!"

Just as Valeria Bird sniffed contemptuously some one rapped smartly at the side door, and Aunt Susanna creaked across the floor to admit a tall, broad shouldered man with thick hair plentifully sprinkled with gray. He was indeed very handsome, and perhaps his good looks found expression in his kindly eyes and firm mouth as well as in the physical beauty of these features. He removed his hat with a friendly smile at Aunt Susanna.

"I'm selling spices, ma'am. Perhaps you would like to give me an order. I bought out William Riddle's business, and I've got a perfectly fresh stock."

"Come right in," said Mrs. Bird cordially. "I've got to go down to the missionary society, but Valery will give you an order. She had it all made out for Billy Riddle. Where's Billy gone?"

"Billy got the gold fever. He's gone out to the Klondike," replied the spice man, wiping his feet carefully on the doormat and then tiptoeing across Valeria's new carpet to a vacant chair. His eyes followed Valeria's disapproving glance to the floor, where his shoes had left dusty footprints on three years of her life. "I'm very sorry," he said calmly, taking an order book out of one pocket and a fountain pen from another. He looked expectantly at Valeria, and his eyes lingered on her soft masses of brown hair and her tender blue eyes.

The tender blue eyes changed to steel gray when they encountered the gaze of the spice man, and a flood of color invaded the cool cheeks to her little ears. Valeria Bird had met that same glance in the eyes of many men, but never before had she lost her composure.

Overhead Aunt Susanna's heavy bulk shook the ceiling as she hurried to and fro in her preparation for the missionary society. Outside in the grapevines late robins were feasting on the luscious clusters, and their sweet songs were reminiscent of earlier springs when Valeria had worn pale blue gowns and held her proud little head aloof from all suitors, reserving herself for some ideal being, one who was handsome and gifted and whose name might be "Montfort." "Valeria Montfort" sounded even a little better than Valeria Bird.

"I want some cinnamon and mace," she said at last, "and a bottle of vanilla and some nutmegs."

The spice man closed his book and arose to go. "Thank you, ma'am," he said, with hat in hand. "I'll deliver the goods day after tomorrow. Good afternoon."

"Wait a minute and I'll pay you," said Valeria, leaving the room.

When she returned the spice man was crawling about the floor on his hands and knees, examining the stripes with strange intentness.

"Have you lost something?" she asked.

He scrambled to his feet, looking very much ashamed of himself.

Valeria watched him climb into the shining wagon at the gate, and when it had disappeared in a cloud of dust she turned and looked at the carpet. For what had the spice man been seeking? Save for additional traces of sand on the carpet she could see nothing. Her housewifely soul decimated against the untidy floor, but she did not brush the sand away.

At tea time Aunt Susanna rustled home from her society meeting. She untied her bonnet strings with impatient fingers as Valeria brought in the teapot.

"I heard all about the new spice man, Valeria," she said breezily. "He's from Comcomupus way, and he's a distant relation of yours too. His mother was own cousin to your mother. He ain't never married. He's always lived on the home place and farmed it till last year his mother died, and he's been looking to buy a good business. He"—

"What is his name?" asked Valeria, quietly sipping her tea.

Mrs. Bird hesitated with spoon poised above the sugar basin. Her little dark eyes fell before Valeria's inquiring gaze.

"John Smith—John James Smith—and it's a very good name, too," said Aunt Susanna defiantly.

Valeria said nothing.

The next time the spice man called Valeria was alone. When he had set the small packages on the table he said:

"I guess you think I ought to explain what I was looking for that day when you found me on the floor. I was wondering if there was a stripe of pink that had some cloth in it—pink with little white stars on it." He paused and flushed slightly.

Valeria nodded. "There is a piece like that. I used to have a dress like that when I was fourteen years old. All this carpet is made out of my clothes."

Mr. Smith's face was eager and glowing now. "I met you once years ago. You was wearing it. I never forgot your face. I was driving a young colt, and you was scared when the colt shield, and you ran to the side of the road and dropped a basket of eggs, and"—

"And you got down and picked up the whole eggs and gave me 50 cents. I've got the 50 cents now," exclaimed Valeria animatedly. Like an instantaneous photograph she saw the tall, handsome young man who had come to her assistance that long ago day, whose appearance had taken her girlish fancy and had forever after remained her ideal. And in her dreams she had named him "Montfort."

"Why did you keep the 50 cents, Miss Valeria?" asked the spice man curiously.

"I thought your name was Montfort," said Valeria impulsively.

He laughed heartily. "It's just plain John James Smith," he said, with a certain sturdy pride in his tone. "Now, I wonder if you wouldn't just give me a little piece of that pink calico. I want it for something," he added slowly.

Valeria flushed and then knelt down on the floor and sought the pink stripe with the white stars. Recklessly she pulled it out, and the spice man's pocket knife severed a generous sample, which he stowed carefully away in his pocket.

"Shall I come every week?" he asked, pausing in the doorway.

"Yes, do," said Valeria, with a flush.

When Aunt Susanna came home Valeria was sitting with idle hands beside the window.

"For the land's sake! Somebody has tracked fresh mud all over your floor, Valery. This carpet won't last no while if you ain't more careful."

Valeria Bird looked down at the thin pink stripe at her feet. "I don't care," she said, with a dreamy smile.

"For the land"— began Aunt Susanna again; then she looked at Valeria and did not finish the sentence.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

Health Is Worth Saving, and Some Quincy People Know How to Save It.

Many Quincy people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is a Quincy citizen's recommendation.

Nicholas Albanese, 16 Gilmore street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I was annoyed by attacks of backache for some time, often while at work sharp, shooting pains darted through my loins, causing me great misery. I also had dizzy spells and my sight seemed to be affected. I tried many remedies, but did not receive relief and as a last resort, I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I procured a box at the Cox Drug Store and in a short time after using them, I was helped. I have no hesitation in giving Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for my cure."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Here is something for the Board of Trade and Merchants' Association to take up.

The Coddington school basket ball team has certainly had a good season this year ,their first year at basket ball. The first game played was at the Willard school when they beat the Willards 22 to 3, in a one-sided game. Then the High school freshman team beat the Coddington's 8 to 6. The High team was 30 pounds heavier than the Coddington. Then they won from a team at Houghs Neck, and from the juniors of the Y. M. C. A. This makes 3 won to 1 lost.

FUND GROWS FOR NEW CHURCH

Over $3,200 Now Pledged for Atlantic Edifice

The hands of the large clock on the Atlantic Memorial church are moving forward periodically and there seems to be but little doubt but at the end of the seven days' campaign an amount will be raised sufficient for the building of the new church. On Monday evening when the campaign started the sum of $2,000 was quickly pledged and the hands of the clock moved forward to that figure.

The campaign committee met again Tuesday evening and after partaking of refreshments committee reported that $710 had been pledged during the day and the hands of the clock were moved forward to the $2,710 mark. Everybody felt greatly encouraged with the day's work and all started out with a will for Wednesday's canvass. Wednesday evening the committee again met for supper and the smile on the faces of the committee showed that the day's work had been a fruitful one.

One by one the gentlemen of the campaign committee reported and when the sums were footed up it was found that the day's work had netted another $500, swelling the grand total to $3,210. The hands of the clock were pushed along to that figure, and that is where they stand today.

Tonight the committee hope to be able to push the hands to the $4,000 mark, if not beyond it.

PARENTS' NIGHT AT Y. M. C. A.

Chelsea Superintendent Speaks on "The Boy."

The "Parents' Night "held at the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening was a great success. At quarter of eight about two hunderd people went into the gymnasium where they watched the work of the Juniors for about a half hour. The work consisted of a maze run led by Sturgis Hunt, a sash drill led by Ralph Prout, apparatus work in three squads, and at last the elephant.

From the gym everybody went to the hall, where a most enjoyable program had been arranged. W. F. Blake presided. Reports of the season's work so far were given by Alex Mundie, Henry Trask, Clarence Cassidy, Howard Cantley, Alex Robertson, Howard Pratt, Charles Bishop.

After these reports B. C. Gregory, superintendent of Chelsea schools spoke on "The Boy." The address was appreciated by all. At the close of the address an informal social hour was spent and an inspection of the building, the swimming pool coming in for its share. It was one of the delightful evenings o fthe year and much credit is due the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. for their share in making it so.

GRANITE CITY WHIST.

Good scores were the rule Wednesday evening at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club. Seven tables were in play, the high scores being secured by Charles C. Hearn and George T. Magee, the former received 66 per cent and the latter 64 per cent. It is probable that the weekly tuornaments will be discontinued after the present month and there is considerable interest as to who will receive the prizes for the best scores of the season. These prizes are valued at $10 and $5 and a player to be entitled to them must have played at least 80 per cent of the tournaments.

HIGH COST SHOES.

People often tell stories about high cost of shoes, but it remained for William E. Cooper of Bigelow street, a representative of the Ralston Shoe Company, to carry off the palm. When Mr. Cooper starts on his trip next week he will carry among his samples a pair of shoes that sell for $50 per pair at wholesale. The shoes are what are known as patent leather. The high cost however is due to the fact that in the heel of each shoe is a $20 gold piece. The buttons on the shoes are also solid gold and there is also a row of gold braid up the front of the shoe. In addition to this, the lining of the shoe is gold leaf. The shoes are certainly very handsome, but rather too expensive for most people to wear every day.

HOUGHS NECK BOOM.

There seems likely to be considerable additional building at Houghs Neck the coming season, for a large tract of beautiful building land is to be cut up into house lots and put on the market. The lot in question is what is known as the Cavanagh lot, about which so much was heard at the time the site for a school lot was under consideration by the City Council. The lot in question is situated on Sea street near the fire station and comprises a number of acres. Mr. Cavanagh has been granted a permit by the Inspector of Buildings to erect an office building on the lot, and it is understood that there will be quite a land boom in this section this summer.

Fire Prevention Among Pines.

Pines protect themselves against forest fires in a remarkable manner. For four or five years the stems of the infant trees attain a height of only as many inches above the soil. During this time their bark is extraordinarily thick, and that alone gives some protection. But, in addition, the long needles spring up above the stem and then bend on all sides in a green cascade which falls to the ground in a circle about the seedling. This green barrier can with difficulty be made to burn, while the shade that it casts prevents inflammable grass from growing near the protected stem. The officers of the forestry service at Washington are of opinion that it is owing to this peculiar system of self protection which the pine seedlings have developed that the growth of evergreen oaks in Florida has been restricted in regions where fires have raged, while pine forests have taken their place.—Harper's Weekly.

ALL STAR ICE HOCKEY TEAM.

Some Difficulty Experienced In Selecting All Collegiate.

YALE MEN GET THREE PLACES

Eli Players Placed at Point, Rover and Left Wing—Peacock of Princeton Best Goal Tender In the Country. Cresswaller of Cornell a Star.

All Intercollegiate Hockey Team For 1910.

Peacock, Princeton	Goal
Johnson, Yale	Point
Read, Princeton	Cover
Martin, Yale	Rover
Hicks, Harvard	Center
Cresswaller, Cornell	Right wing

Selecting an all intercollegiate ice hockey seven for the season of 1910 is a difficult task, not because there were so many star players for each position, but because all the teams showed deplorable weaknesses in the same spots. It has thus been found necessary in two instances to shift players, a thing which under more favorable conditions would not even have been considered.

In searching for a point and a left wing none could be found who had shown that he was worthy of the honor. All of the colleges were particularly weak at left wing. In the majority of instances right hand shots were being played in that place, and the result was that they had to loft the puck whenever attempting to shoot.

Heron, who played center on Yale, can shoot from either side and has a good enough hockey head to soon adapt himself to playing the wing. For this reason he is awarded the place.

At point there were several mediocre men who might have been picked, but to really get the best possible team together—and that is the object—Johnson of Yale was shifted from cover to point. Johnson at cover was not as good as Read, and yet he would make a better point than any of the men playing the position regularly.

There can be no question about Peacock's being the best goal tender in the colleges, and in the estimation of many he is the best man in front of a net in this country. He would rank among the best in the Dominion of Canada. Read far outclasses any of the covers. He not only plays a sterling game on defense, but can carry the puck when occasion arises.

With one exception the best college forwards were all to be found in the center of the ice. The exception was Cresswaller of Cornell. At right wing he had no peer in the college ranks. All season he played an aggressive game. He shoots well, carries well and falls back to help out his defense in finished style. Furthermore, he is a fast skater.

For the positions of rover and center there were several good men, and to make these selections was no easy matter. After considerable study and carefully watching, however, it was decided that Hicks of Harvard at center and Martin of Yale at rover were the proper choices.

Kay of Princeton is a good man and will show up well next season, but he is not as aggressive and effective in his play as Martin, although a better shot. Martin had not reached his real form in the Yale-Princeton game, the Bulldog's first league match, but after that he showed steady improvement in his work. McKinney of Princeton also came in for a lot of consideration.

There were no left wings worth while. The majority of them were not even mediocre. They filled in to make full sevens, most of them, but that let them out. Heron is a hockey player whose experience and use of his head have made him a valuable man to any team. His duties as captain of the Yale team and the fact that, with the exception of Johnson, his defense was weak kept him from playing his best game. He fell back invariably without completing a rush up the ice for the reason that he feared he would not be able to do so if the puck were taken away from him and his opponents got a chance at his goal.

Curious Styles of Letter Endings.

Any one in the habit of perusing old letters is struck with the tone of great humility and deference which pervades the correspondence of our ancestors.

A few specimens of the style of beginning and ending letters may prove interesting as in striking contrast to the lacouic "yours obediently," "faithfully" or "truly" of the present day. It would certainly be difficult to match the following subscription of a letter from the Duke of Shrewsbury to Sir Thomas Hanmer, dated September, 1713: "I desire that you will believe that, wherever I am, I shall always endeavor to deserve and very much value your friendship, being, with a sincere esteem, sir, your most faithful and obedient servant, Shrewsbury."

Frequently one meets with bellicose subscriptions, as in the case of the Earls of Hutly and Errol, who in 1594 threatened "awful consequences to the magistrates of Aberdeen unless they released certain gentlemen imprisoned in their city and inscribed, "Yours as ye will, either present peace or weir."

To Cook Cereals Perfectly.

To cook oatmeal or any kind of cereal as thoroughly as it needs to be cooked requires more time than can usually be given in our hurried breakfast getting, and not all of us are blessed as yet with a fireless cooker to do the work overnight.

So the best substitute is to put the cereal on the stove at supper time, let it come to a good boil, then turn the fire out and leave it in that same spot until breakfast time without lifting the lid. The heat already generated will finish cooking the grains so that all that needs to be done in the morning is to stir it from the bottom, add a little water possibly and reheat for serving.

Of course the vessel must be of crockery, enamel (in which there are no breaks) or aluminium for the food to be left in it so long, and the lid must be as tight as possible to retain the steam which does so much of the work. But this method is a great time and gas saver, and the cereal is much more digestible than when cooked by quick boiling. It is the fireless cooker idea applied to common utensils.

—Whatever goes up must come come down, but meats, shoes, and many other necessities seem to have the law of gravity pretty well bluffed.

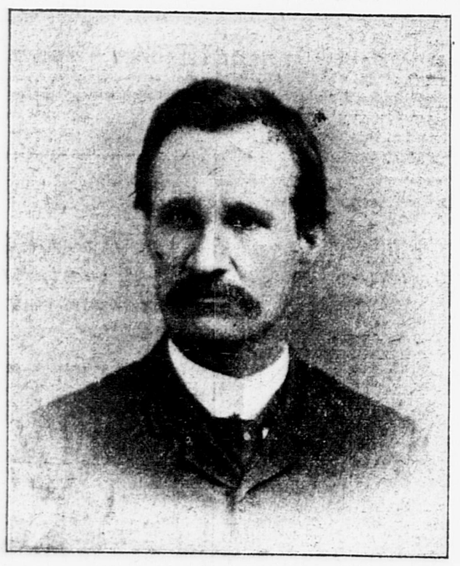
GRANITE UNIONS OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Congratulate Themselves on the Success of Labor Movement Started in 1887

Manufacturers of Today Were Among the Organizers



WILLIAM T. SPARGO.

The three branches of the Granite Cutters' International Association celebrated the thirty-third anniversary of the institution of the organization by holding a banquet in the A. O. H. hall on Thursday evening, and the affair was one of the best of the kind ever held in this city. A reception was held in the lower hall from 6 until 6.30, at which time the members of the organizations and their guests went to the upper hall where many of the good things of life were spread very enticingly on the tables. At exactly 6.45 International President Thomas Johnston invited all to join heartily in singing "America," and then sat down to partake of the viands before them.

MENU CARDS.

The menu cards were gems of the printers' art, and show that considerable thought was expended on the make-up of same; and as these menu cards came to the members and guests in the nature of a surprise, great interest was manifested in them and as each of the names of the invited guests of the evening, also names of the local officers appear on the menu cards, each name aptly connected with some Shakesperian quotation, which in every instance fitted the person to whose name it was attached, it can readily be seen that in addition to being something worth keeping as a memoir of the occasion, the menu card is one of the cleverest things ever got up in this city.

FRIENDS OF UNION.

After doing ample justice at the table, the cigars were passed around and all proceeded to the lower hall where Toast-master Thomas Johnston took charge of the oratorial part of the banquet. The first speaker was His Honor the Mayor William T. Shea, and as we all know he is nothing if not entertaining as well as instructive. The next speaker was J. C. Murray, President of the Quincy Manufacturers' Association, and he spoke very clearly and concisely about the good feeling which exists between employer and employe in this city, and we know that President Murray deserves credit for what he has done in order to attain this end. The next speaker was William T. Spargo, and the reception which he received from the audience must have made him feel that he at least has a very warm corner in the hearts of our Quincy granite cutters.

MEN WITH COURAGE.

The work which men like Mr. Spargo and Andrew McIntosh, Sr., did in the early days of the organization, when a man had to have courage to be a union han, has apparently not been forgotten by the Quincy unionists. In 1877 the views of mankind were not so tolerant as they are today, and a man who advanced the cause of the trade unionist at that date was looked on in much the same manner as we would look on anyone who advocated the ideas of such a personage as Emma Goldman.

Times have changed since then, and what has transpired since March 10, 1877, clearly shows that men who had the principles of Messrs. William T. Spargo and Andrew McIntosh, Sr., were doing the right thing in advocating the organization of men, so that the collective bargain could be made instead of dealing individually.

Mr. Spargo was working towards this end on Clark Island, Me., in fact he was the first president of [illegible] any branch of the new organization, instituted at Rockland on March 10, 1877. Mr. McIntosh was working with the same end in view at Spruce Head, Me., and to anyone interested in these things, the minute books showing the transactions of the meetings at that time and which show that the two men mentioned took a very prominent part in the organizing of the G. C. I. A., will be very interesting reading.

TO THE POINT.

J. L. Miller, President of the Retail Dealers' Association, made a lengthy speech in his usual terse manner ,everything being from the shoulder and to the point.

The next speaker introduced was William H. Fraser, Secretary of the Seaman's Union, and he clearly showed that the aims and projects of all laboring men are practically the same, although different methods are adopted to gain the object in view, and what might appear to be the proper method in a sailor's mind would not be exactly the right thing in a granite cutters' mind, but nevertheless he showed that we should have a spirit of tolerance for each other's views and should act accordingly.

A REVIEW.

International Secretary-Treasurer Duncan of the G. C. I. A. was the last speaker, and it is needless to say he received rapt attention. He gave a synopsis of the events which have happened since the inception of the G. C. I. A. in 1877. He paid a great tribute to the men who did and dared in those early days, and also paid his respects to compulsory arbitration.

The rest of the evening was spent in listening to song and story, and everyone present is of the opinion that a high-water mark has been set in this city for anything in the shape of a banjuet, and in the language of the street, "in order to beat the banquet of March 10 the organization attempting to do so will have to go some."

THE COMMITTEE.

Great credit is due to the committee of arangements, particularly Harry Brooks and Alex W. Russell and their able corps of assistants and of the entertainment it is the opinion from the remarks heard at the close of a large number of the members of the organization that several of the men who made the banquet a success have missed their vocation.

President P. A. O'Neil of the Tool Sharpeners' Union, and Secretary James Reid of the Polishers' Union, were very much in evidence, and the success of the affair was due in no small degree to their efforts.

LAST MEETING.

The last meeting of the year for younger boys will be held at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday morning at nine o'clock. Dr. T. C. Barbour is the speaker and no words are necessary to tell what he is. The best and biggest meeting of the year is expected and every boy in Quincy should be on hand. The social which is to be held for the fellows attending tomorrow's meeting will be announced at the meeting.

THOMAS PIERCE.

The funeral of Thomas Pierce, who died Wednesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Simon F. Little, at 16 Verchild street, was held this morning and was largely attended. A requiem mass was celebrated at St. John's church at 9 o'clock by Rev. John J. Coan. The Gregorian mass was sung by the regular choir. At the offertory Miss Mary Burns sang "Pie Jesu" and after the mass, Miss Josephine McCarthy sang "Libera." The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery the bearers being Bernard Donaher, Martin Smith, Peter Rossa, Michael Horrigan, Daniel J. Ford and Stephen B. Little.

Mr. Pierce has been a resident of Quincy for upwards of 60 years. His business was that of a currier ond for 35 years he was connected with the firm of Adams, Lowe and Norton. He retired from business about ten years ago. His wife passed away several years ago. He leaves two daughters and four sons, Mrs. Simon F. Little, Mrs. Andrew M. Dean, William T. Pierce of Brockton, Joseph M. Pierce of New York, Stephen A. Pierce of Wilton, N. H., and Frank P. Pierce of Quincy.

—Mr. Peary is not the first to discover that American hero worship is more or less erratic in its manifestations.—Washington Star.

COMING AGAIN TO QUINCY

Mayor Fitzgerald and Family to Attend Launching

Admiral Bowles, the president of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, was much pleased with the speech of Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston at the Quincy Board of Trade banquet in favor of a ship subsidy, and promptly called at the Mayor's office within 24 hours and told his honor so. He also invited the Mayor and his family to be his guests on Saturday at the shipyard at Quincy, and requested that the Mayor's daughter, Miss Eunice May, should christen the submarine Salman to be launched that day at 11 A. M.

JOHN F. FITZGERALD

The Mayor accepted the invitation and will probably make the trip by automobile. Miss Fitzgerald is ten years old. It is not intended to have a public launching, as submarines are very small compared with the battleships built at Quincy, but as sponsor, Miss Fitzgerald will become eligible for the National Society of Sponsors of ships for the United States navy. Quincy people are glad to have Mayor Fitzgerald interested in the success of the Quincy shipyard.

HOPEFUL OF $10,000

For a New Congregational Church at Atlantic

The hands on the dial in front of the Memorial church at Atlantic now point to $3,800, indicating that amount has been pledged toward the new church building which the society desires to erect.

The committee on raising funds met as usual Thursday evening and after partaking of an appetizing supper, that had been prepared by the ladies, reports were called for. Each gentleman of the committee told briefly of his work during the day, the total being about $600, which added to the amount previously pledged brings the grand total up to the figure mentioned above.

The goal for the week's campaign is $5,000 and as much more as possible. If the sum of $5,000 is pledged, the society will have a fund of $10,000 as the Boston conference will contribute dollar for dollar up to that amount. As the committee have two more days in which to canvass not including Sunday, it is fully expected that the required amount will be raised. ARRESTED ON SUSPICION

Plead Guilty When Arraigned in Court

Officer Duane performed a good piece of work early this morning when he held up a young man at Dobles corner and sent him to the police station as a suspicious character. Officer Duane has seen the fellow a number of times of late, and every time he has had some bundles of clothing in his arms. There was nothing particularly suspicious about the fellow, however, at those times, and he was allowed to go his way.

This morning however, it was different. The officers saw the man leave the last outward car and an hour later, or about 1.30 he met him coming down Franklin street with a lot of clothing under his arm. The fellow could not give any satisfactory explanation of how the clothing came into his possession so the officer called the wagon and sent him to the station. There he wasn recognized as a man whom the officers have been looking for, and for whom they held a warrant charging him with breaking and entering and larceny.

The young man gave his name as Sam Cutler, his age as 18 years, and his present residence as Jackson street. An examination of his bundle showed that it consisted of a shirt, a suit of clothing ,and two coats, all valued at $15. Later investigation brought out the fact that the goods belonged to Louis Berman of 98 Franklin street, who drives a team for the sale of dry goods and clothing. The goods found on Cutler had been taken from Mr. Berman's team in the stable. Entrance to the stable had been gained by the young man through the cellar. From there he had crawled through the scuttle hole to the stable floor and had then forced the small lock on the back part of the team.

Mr. Berman says that the young man came to Quincy from New York in February, and boarded with the family that occupied the upper tenement of his house. Almost immediately with his arrival he began to miss things, but was unable to trace their disappearance. On the morning of February 28 he discovered that the store room of his house had been entered the night before and goods to the value of nearly $50 taken. These goods included two fur muffs, a fur collar, 65 yards of cloth, five pairs of underwear and a lot of handkerchiefs. Entrance to the store room had been obtained by forcing the lock on the door.

Suspicion was directed to Cutler, and aw arrant was sworn out and given to the police, who have been looking for him ever since, but had been unable to locate him. After the break the family in the upper tenement moved to Jackson street and evidently Cutler went with them, but he has managed to keep out of sight, during the day time, only making his appearance at night. He evidently was not familiar with the saying, that that a pitcher that goes to the well too often sometimes gets broken, for after moving away he continued his nightly visits until at last he fell into the hands of the people he was trying to avoid.

While at the police station he admitted making the breaks, and further said that he was out on parol from a New York institution.

He was arraigned in court on two complaints for breaking and entering and larceny, and pleaded guilty on both. The court held him in $1,000 for the grand jury.

TODAY'S COURT.

Thomas Buckley was fined $15 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Sam Cutler was arraigned on two complaints for breaking and entering and larceny at Quincy and held in $1,000 for the grand jury.

—$275,000,000 annually sent abroad by immigrants, says the Immigration commission. If Uncle Sam's boys were not too proud to get their hands soiled we would not have to support some other fellow's father across the sea.—Beverly Times.

FIGURES SHOW A VERY RAPID GROWTH

Twice As Many Births As Deaths in the City of Presidents Last Year

Net Gain of 2171 During the Last Five Years

The year 1909 was a banner year for births in the "City of Presidents," a total of 934. This was 20 in excess of 1908 which held the record, 129 in excess of 1905, and 178 more than in 1900.

During the year 1909 there were recorded 463, which was two less than in 1907, only 30 more than in 1905, and 98 more than in 1900.

Quincy is making large gains from vital statistics alone, as will be seen from the figures below, which give the number of births and deaths each year, and in the third column the gain of births over deaths:

	Births	Deaths	Gain
1880	274	226	48
1885	393	230	163
1890	546	380	166
1895	655	363	292
1900	756	365	391
1901	748	343	405
1902	791	450	341
1903	789	407	382
1904	800	393	407
1905	805	433	372
1906	893	447	446
1907	888	465	423
1908	914	455	459
1909	934	463	471

It will be observed that in 1880 there were but few more births than deaths, but that the number of births have increased much faster than the number of deaths, until in 1908 and again in 1909 there were over twice as many births as deaths.

In the last five years the births exceeded the deaths 2,171 and in ten years they exceeded the deaths 4,097.

At the last census in 1905, Quincy had a population of 28,076. If the gain of 2,171 by vital statistics alone is added, the population would be 30,247. But the gain by new residents is always larger than from births, so a conservative estimate would give Quincy a population today of 33,000 to 35,000 and it may go higher.

Those who think Quincy has been making slow progress should carefully study such figures as are presented above. Very few cities or towns can show such a large increase in 10, 20 or 30 years.

A DOUBLE IMPROVEMENT

Good Suggestion From a Reader of the Daily Ledger

Editor of Daily Ledger:

If $4500 is not enough, as intimated in the Daily Ledger of Thursday, to purchase the Insurance Company lot to improve the Thomas Crane Public Library, I have this suggestion to make. That if the company will purchase the Nightingale estate, at the corner of Washington and Temple streets, and improve it with an office building, that the city increase the order to $5,000 to pay for the Insurance Company lot.

This two great improvement will be accomplished at once. Not only will the library and the city be improved, Quincy Mutual will secure a modern office building. There should be no attempt to force the company to sell, but the directors are progressive business men interested in the city as well as the company, and I believe they will cooperate in this great improvement.

Now that the motto of Quincy will be: "Excelsior—still higher—ever upward"—and failure is impossible where there is united effort, let us get together and improve our city. The order begins at the right place.

NAVY TO MAKE TESTS.

Does the depth of the water over which a vessel is steaming affect the vessel's speed? To answer this query the navy department has ordered a series of tests over the Rockland, Provincetown and Delaware breakwater courses. During the the standardization trials of the battleship Michigan over these courses, records useful in solving this problem will be compiled. Similar records will be made during the trials over the same courses, of the battleships North Dakota and Delaware. Later the torpedo boat destroyer Reid and Flusser will be put through tests.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Enter base ball and outdoor meets; exit basket ball and indoor meets.

March did not come in like a lion, but it brought base ball. This pays up for the late season last year.

Wonder if Congressman O'Connell will have the arguments of Mayor Fitzgerald in favor of a ship subsidy read in Congress? We welcome the Mayor as a convert to this movement and hope the three Boston Congressmen will also fall in line. Goodness knows American shipping needs assistance.

The grand banquet of the granite cutters on the anniversary of their union is another example of success in Quincy. It was a success as a reunion and banquet, and it is very evident that as a labor organization that the Quincy union has grown and flourished and achieved success. Under agreements for a long term of years there are few labor disturbances in this city, and the granite business is more prosperous than it was a few years ago.

A Boston paper in its comments on the Board of Trade banquet says, "Quincy gets the greater bee." Yes we have been getting it for some time. The census of 1905 will show a gain in population from 28,076 ti 35,000 in five years, about 25 per cent. In the five years from 1900 to 1905, Quincy gained from 23,899 to 28,076, over 17 per cent. Since the adoption of the city charter in 1888 Quincy has increased in population from 14,000 to 35,000. Quite an increase for 22 years.

The Committee on Licenses of the City Council will give a hearing Mar. 22, to the pastors of the several churches of the city and to the several temperance societies, on the matter of granting permits to transport liquor into or in the city of Quincy, during the coming year. All of the existing permits will expire on May 1, and after that date it will be unlawful to transport liquor without a permit. It seems to be the general sentiment that the number granted this year should be less than last year. Most people think that not more than twelve should be granted.

Some think that since the new Quincy freight yard was established that an avenue from Hancock street to South and West Quincy, as proposed by Mayor Shea, is impracticable. A few years ago it might have been laid out a little more direct, but reference to the map will show that it is feasible to follow near the course of Town brook from Hancock street opposite Cottage avenue to Water street at the junction of Brook street, forming a continuation of that street. At the present time the city has a main sewer laid along this line. It would be necessary to elevate the railroad tracks where they cross Town brook, or a little distance to the north, but at present the tracks are over 13 feet above the water in the brook. Possibly the straighest and best route would be from Hancock street at Revere road, as no curve or angle would be necessary to reach Fort square at the junction of School and Fort streets. Revere road is more of a thoroughfare than Cottage avenue, both toward Town river, Quincy Point and Houghs Neck. It is also one of the streets which should be widened and improved.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

Speaking of an episode in the latest interesting elopement case, a newspaper headline loudly remarks this: "Knox Denies That His Bride is a Shopgirl." Oh, days of sorrow! Has it come to this in America, that when a fellow whose father has made some money gets married he has to rush to the newspapers to explain that his wife is not a woman who works? There are many men who have married women who work and who have lived happily a long time after—in fact there are quite several such instances, as it were. Young Knox was turned down by his parents, and a story says he may have to go to work. That will be even worse to a man of his apparent stripe than having a wife working. There are millions of women working in this country, shopgirls and others, and they seem to be reasonably popular, healthy, happy and able to get through the world very comfortably, anl agreeably.—Brockton Enterprise.

The petition for a reduction of the salaries paid to the board of control in Chelsea, which has been circulated in this city and presented to Gov. Draper, undoubtedly represents a growing sentiment that it is costing too much money to conduct the municipal business. The cost and system of running the departments having been fixed by the board of control the petitioners have decided to get after the board by appealing to the governor. They feel that the board of control has not risen to the occasion or the opportunity to reorganize the work of the departments with a view to getting the same or greater efficiency for less money but, on the other hand, have permitted the cost of doing the public business to creep higher and higher, until they think it is far in excess of what it should use.—Chelsea Record.

"I don't remember" is a very common evasion, often heard in the courts. A failure of memory is a favorite resort of those who really recall something that would hurt the case. Judges sometimes hold for a jury trial on a charge of perjury witnesses who they believe have violated their oath by withholding what the court is entitled to hear. A New York judge has adopted another plan. He held that a judge may summarily punish a witness who says "I don't remember" by committing him to jail for contempt of court. This is an important ruling, and may bring about a better state of things. The decision was made by Judge Coxe in the United States Court of Appeals, at New York. The lawyers say the ruling is one of the most important decisions in the interest of creditors of bankrupts since the enactment of the bankruptcy law. It would seem to be a pretty good rule to apply in other than bankruptcy cases, and it probably will be so enforced.—Lynn Item.

KILLED BY EXCESSIVE JOY

Woman Drops Dead as $5000 Is Handed Over to Her

South Norwalk, Conn., March 11.—"Killed by excessive joy" was the verdict in the case of Mrs. Mary E. Hendrick, who dropped dead here.

Mrs. Hendrick had just received $5000 in cash for some property from Zenus C. Bush, the purchaser. As the bills were counted out in her hand her face flushed and when the last yellowback dropped Mrs. Hendrick gave a sigh and sank to the floor. She never spoke or moved afterward.

The coroner states that joy stopped her heart's action. Mrs. Hendrick, who was 50 years old, left a large family.

Schoolboy Logic.

"Should women have votes for parliament? Give your reasons for and against." This was a question asked of schoolboys in a recent examination in England. One boy replied: "No, because if they did they would want to get into parliament and then they would pass a lot of silly laws, such as that a man was not to smoke before his wife or that wives were to have Wednesdays and Thursdays off and then the men would have to stay at home and mind the children."

A logical answer to the question, "Why does a kettle sing?" was furnished by a boy who wrote, "Because if it did not you could not tell when the kettle was boiling." Asked to explain the initials "C. O. D.," one boy replied that they stood for "collector of debts," and a second said "cod-liver oil drink."

Another enterprising youth described a sleeping partner as "a man who goes to sleep when playing bridge." Asked how he would mend a puncture in a bicycle tire, a boy's answer was to the point, "I would get a box of stuff that you do it with and stick it on."

Importance of a Word.

If you should write a letter to the man who is chief magistrate of this republic you are at liberty to address him as "The President, Washington, D. C." That will be sufficient. He is not "his excellency," as is the supreme executive magistrate of Massachusetts, nor "his high mightiness," a title which, they say, sounded pleasing to the ear of the Father of His Country. But if you should write a letter to the secretary of state of the United States, whom the plain "president" appointed to the job, prepare to dip your pen in honorific ink. While the chief magistrate is plain "president," without any titular epaulets, his secretary of state is "the honorable secretary of state." It will not do to address him as "the secretary of state" simply. He is something more than that. The etiquette of the state department requires that the word "honorable" be prefixed to the word "secretary."—Boston Globe.

SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Annual Meeting of the Quincy Choral Society

The annual business meeting of the Quincy Choral Society on Tuesday evening officially closed the season's work. President Pollard presided, and after the minutes of the last meeting had been read and the reports of the treasurer and secretary accepted, he read an interesting paper containing many valuable suggestions for the coming season and thanking all who had assisted him in his many duties.

The treasurer's report announced all bills paid, and a balance on hand to begin next season's work. This fact goes far towards proving that the Choral Society has come to stay, and that the business methods upon which the society is founded are of sterling worth. The recent success of the Messiah concert excelled that of last year in just such proportion as the Messiah music excells that of the Elijah, and makes a proud record for so young a society.

The thought of co-operation and of interest which is represented by the guarantor's list is no small factor in this successful work. A letter from one of the guarantor's was read to the society, in which the writer asked whether the series of rehearsals had represented to the chorus a session of hard study, of severe preliminary training for which, perhaps, the grand success of the concert might seem to them but a small reward. This is the general idea in regard to study of this kind and in many societies it has proven to be so, but the members of the Quincy Choral society are unanimous in saying that every rehearsal was to them a pleasure as well as a period of study. Perhaps this is the highest praise a society could bestow upon its conductor if the matter were so presented for official vote, for it is the conductor alone who can make or mar these periods of study.

The Quincy Choral members always desire to entertain their conductor at the yearly meeting when they may have time to personally express to him their pleasure in the season's work, but the many business engagements of Conductor Wonson at this time made it impossible to arrange any date when he could attend. A letter was read which expressed his regret and also assured the members of the high regard he has for them. Mrs. Wonson was a special guest of the society at both the business session and the social hour following.

The election of officers was the last business transacted ,after which refreshments were served by a committee of ladies under the direction of Mrs. George H. Ryder and Mrs. A. Louise Rice. Sociability reigned supreme ,and a half hour of dancing to the somewhat classical piano music contributed by Wendell H. Luce and Miss Sarah Thomas made a jolly ending to the second annual meeting.

Officers for the coming year are:

Thomas B. Pollard, president.
Dr. George H. Ryder, vice president.
John F. Hunt, treasurer.
Mrs. Irene C. Tirrell, secretary.
Directors with above,—Frank W. Crane ,Albert L. Hayden and Mrs. Edith Cary Page.

GAYNOR DINES ALONE

His Chair of Honor Vacant Because Others Were Lionized

New York, March 11.—Mayor Gaynor's chair of honor in the center of the guests' table at the alumni banquet of the New York University Law School stood vacant last night, while the mayor ate his dinner alone in another room of the Hotel Astor and then paid for it himself.

When the mayor arrived at the banquet hall at 6:15 he found a reception in progress to Governor Weeks of Connecticut and the bench of Connecticut, which would last until 7:30, whereupon he departed.

At a recent dinner of the Suffolk County society, a Long Island organization to which the mayor was invited, he stalked out because when he arrived late he was not immediately received with sufficient formality.

RETIREMENTS ARE EXPECTED

All of the Members of Taft's Cabinet Are Not Happy

Washington, March 11.—How long will the Taft cabinet hold together in its present form? This is one of the interesting questions which Washington is quietly debating with some expectancy that it will be answered within the next three months.

The discussion first touches Secretary of War Dickinson, the one thorough Democrat in the cabinet, whose candidacy for the senate, if announced, would be received with acclaim in Tennessee, where the McGavock family, from which he springs, is one of the local institutions.

The secretary of war is one of the ablest lawyers in the cabinet, but his work as secretary of war is not such as he would select if he were choosing for himself, while he holds the place at great sacrifice of his personal comfort and fortune. Dickinson could retire gracefully from the cabinet to run for the senate, whereas a withdrawal having no apparent cause but his own personal convenience might be more awkward, politically speaking.

The Ballinger boom for senator from Washington was a very genuine article while it lasted, but it met the two obstacles of a refusal of Ballinger to retire while under fire and later the disinclination of Washington Republicans to disarrange their own political slate to accommodate the secretary of the interior. It is felt by Ballinger's friends, however, that cabinet life will have but little attraction for him after the investigating committee has made its report.

Important opinion here is to the effect that the Pinchot charges will not be sustained, not because the committee has any pre-conceived purpose to exonerate Ballinger, but because Pinchot and his witnesses have failed to show anything but insinuation and inference that Ballinger has been guilty of, or contemplated any wrong doing. This is the judgment, at least, of the newspaper men who have attended the trial, and they, as a rule, are as unprejudiced in their opinions as they are competent to reach accurate conclusions.

But the episode, to say the least, has not increased the influence of Ballinger as a cabinet officer or added to the confidence the public had in him before the Pinchot charges were made, and as a brisk law practice awaits him at any time, Ballinger's retirement from the cabinet in the reasonably near future would not be surprising.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has intimated several times his intention to engage in business when an opening offered, and should he announce his intention to retire from public life, no very strong pressure would be exerted to retain him in his present position.

The name of the postmaster general is heard much more frequently in connection with the politics of the administration than with the business of his office, yet his advice as a politician is not sought by the Republican leaders here, and he has by no means a determining influence at the White House, outside minor matters or such as relate to his own department.

Of all the members of the department, Hitchcock probably is least in touch with men of prominence in Washington, while the evident purpose of congress to reorganize his department before long will impair its attractions from the political point of view.

QUINCY OF YEARS AGO

Anxiety for Many Years That Granite Would Be Exhausted

(Historical Paper No. 10.)

The first building of any architectural pretensions costructed out of Quincy granite, says Pattee's History, was King's Chapel, erected on the corner of School and Tremont streets, Boston, Massachusetts, in 1752. Divine service was first held, Aug. 21, 1754. This church was built of coarse, rough boulders, scattered about and dug out of both the North and South Commons. Syenite of the North Commons, even at this early period, was considered more suitable for building purposes and a higher price was charged for it. The method of splitting this material for the construction of this church was in the most primitive and curious manner. It was accomplished by heating the stone, by building a fire upon it, and then letting large iron balls fall upon it. Mr. John Hayward and Mr. Hunt, of Braintree, received the contract for furnishing the material for the erection of this edifice.

The John Hancock house that stood just south of the State House, on Beacon street, Boston, was built of the same kind of stone. This house of Gov. Hancock was taken down some years since.

In 1774, the old powder house which stood on the northwest corner of a lot of land belonging to the celebrated artist, Copley, in what was at that time called West Boston, near Pinckney street, was built of this material, and its walls were constructed seven feet in thickness.

Some years previous to this time, the method of disposing of these stones, and also preventing the exhaustion of these rough, coarse boulders for building purposes, was the great topic and exciting question at the annual town meetings, and gave the town orators an opportunity to display their powerful eloquence, and the magistrates and lawyers, with their usual profundity, to enlighten the citizens on the laws of trespass and the rights of commonage.

At length the inhabitants became somewhat alarmed that the drain created by the use of these boulders for building, would not leave them enough to build a common stone wall, or construct a house cellar. To protect themselves from these invasions upon their property, they established the following rules:—

"1715. Voted, That no person shall dig or carry off any stone on said commons or undivided lands, upon any account whatever, without license from the committee hereafter named, upon penalty of the forfeiture of ten shillings for every and each cart-load so dug and carried away one-quarter part to be paid to said committee in full satisfaction for the use of the town. The instructions to the committee were as follows:—

"First.—That the committee shall give no license to any and every person to dig or carry off any stone from said land, to make sale or merchandise thereof, without the town's direction.

"Secondly.—That the committee may and shall license to any and every person in the town for such a quantity of stone, as he or they shall stand in need of, for their own proper use in the town.

"Thirdly.—That the committee shall or may seize all stone that they shall find dug or carted on and off said common lands, the digger or carter whereof is not known, and the same disposed of to the best advantage for the town, by sale or otherwise, deducting one-quarter part thereof to themselves, in full satisfaction as above said."

For years after, the same complaint was made at the annual town meetings, that it was impossible for the town to enforce the rules they had adopted.

The inability to execute these regulations was probably caused to some extent by the more liberal views of its citizens who opposed it, and who were not in harmony with those who advocated and sustained these rigid rules. They doubted the feasibility and justice of passing such onorous laws, depriving them of the use of the stone for common purposes, and at a meeting held in 1729-30, they were prompted to dissent from the action of the meeting. This, eventually, no doubt, was the cause why the town was obliged to sell the North and South Commons in 1762 and 1765.

1729-30. At this meeting it was voted, "That no person be allowed from henceforth to take stone for his own use from off the common for building, fencing or the like, without first giving notice to a committee by the town appointed, of his so doing and rendering a true account of their quantity, and how he disposed of them. Then voted, that there be five persons or a committee, any three of which shall be a quorum, and but three paid. The following persons being then nominated to be the committee, were voted for singly, viz.:—Mr. Thomas White, Mr. Benjamin Luddin, Mr. Benjamin Neal, Mr. Joseph Crosby and Mr. Ebenezer Thayer. Against the vote and order above said, after some of them had been decided by polling, and after one of the committee was chosen, the following entered their dissent:—

"Joseph Pray, Christopher Webb, Moses Belcher, Jr., Moses Paine, Thomas Copeland, Stephen Cleverly, Samuel Arnold, Joseph, Tower, Samuel Cleverly, John French, Moses Belcher, Joseph Brackett, Moses Paine, Jr., Dependence French, William Belcher, Ephraim Arnold, John Curtis, Nathaniel Belcher, Elkanah Wales, Abijah Allen, Benjamin Allen, Jr., Benjamin Paine, Jonathan Hayden."

Not much thought had been given to the stone quarries until the early part of the Nineteenth century, when Jackson Field, Josiah Bemis, Wm. Wood and Wm. Packard first began to open quarries for the purpose of carrying on the stone business. They may be considered the first persons who established the stone business in a legitimate manner in this town, but it was in a very small way, as there was no great demand for large building stones; and if there had been, they would not have been able to supply the material for the want of proper apparatus and machinery for lifting and hoisting large blocks of granite. The stone quarried at this time was principally for underpinnings, door steps, etc.

A Diplomatic Official.

During the reign of Emperor Napoleon III. he and the empress visited Normandy and had arranged to spend a couple of days at Evreux. M. Janvier de la Monte, who was the prefect, learned that the revolutionaries intended to hiss the sovereigns as they passed, and so he summoned the leaders of the movement and told them that he knew of their plot. "If you carry out your plan," said he to them, "you will get six months in prison. If you do not your friends will accuse you of cowardice and treason. As a way out of the difficulty I propose to lock you up at once until the emperor has gone." The conspirators accepted the terms offered them, and so the emperor was greeted only by cheers, as the revolutionaries, frightened at the arrest of their chiefs, had not dared to utter a sound. After the emperor and empress had gone the prefect went in person to release his prisoners, who had had such a pleasant time that they greeted him with cries of "Long live the prefect!" to which M. Janvier de la Monte, who was a man of wit, replied, "My friends, do not overdo it."

PROMINENCE OF HANCOCK IN REVOLUTIONARY TIMES

One of the Illustrious Sons of Quincy Whose Head Was Sought by British Army.

First Signer of Declaration of Independence, First Governor.

MASSACRE ORATION OF JOHN HANCOCK
MARCH 1774.

"I have from the earliest recollections of youth, rejoiced in the felicity of my fellow-men; and have considered it as the indispensable duty of every member of society to promote, as far as in him lies, the prosperity of every individual of his species but more especially of the community to which he belongs; and also, as a faithful subject of the state, to use his utmost endeavors to detect and defeat every traitorous plot which its enemies may devise for its destruction.

"Security to the persons and property of the governed is so obviously the design and end of civil government that to attempt a logical demonstration of it would be like burning tapers at noonday to assist the sun in enlightening the world; and it cannot be either virtuous or honorable to attempt to support institutions of which this is not the great and principal basis."

WHEN QUINCY BECAME TOWN

Was Governor of Massachusetts

First Governor under

The Constitution

In its interesting series on the "Leaders of American Independence" by Ernest C. Moses, the Christian Science Monitor of Saturday published the following sketch of John Hancock born in Quincy:

Among the noble characters written into our national and commercial history with indelible tracings of grandeur and self-sacrifice for the common good is the unfading lifework of John Hancock, merchant prince and patriot, of Boston. Let us renew our acquaintance with the aristocratic importer who was called "the Alcibiades of the rebellious little Puritan town" in Massachusetts. His memory holds much of instruction and of encouragement to all modern business men who would break through their limitations into larger fields of civic duty and expansive benevolence.

Aspersion of the characters of the great founders of our national life accomplishes nothing. The recognition and contemplation of the good they brought out should broaden the horizons of individual patriotism and thus enlarge the boundaries of national usefulness at home and abroad. Such objects should be the only legitimate reasons for reviewing the characters and works of the founders of our nation.

Hancock was the son of a poor clergyman who passed away while he was a mere child and left a wife and three children to the tender mercies of friends and relatives. In those days the next of kin and loyal friends constituted an informal association of insurance without certificate or premium; and John Hancock's boyhood days came under such protection. He soon went to live with his uncle, Thomas Hancock, in the family mansion on Beacon street in Boston, where his opportunities for advancement were indeed very liberal.

Early in life he showed a great fondness for the practice of penmanship and for signing his name. Tradition tells us that when he frequently visited the home of another uncle at Bedford he was permitted to play with a quill and the "inkstand dish." Thus he learned the art of lettered expression and the distinguished stroke of signature, by which later "he wrote his name where all nations should behold it, and where all time should not afface it."

The young Hancock was taken into counting house of his uncle at the age of 17 years, and he displayed a particular aptitude for commercial affairs In 1763 after many years of close devotion to business, in which he exhibited excellent judgment and uprightness of character, John was taken into partnership with his uncle, and the firm became Thomas Hancock & Co. It was a business of general importing of whale fishery products and other commodities. The establishment maintained wholesale warehouses on Hancock's wharf (near North street) in Boston and several retail stores throughout the city. The uncle passed away a few years later and left the nephew an estate valued at $350,000, which made John Hancock the leading man of wealth in Massachusetts.

PUBLIC SPIRITED.

As the young merchant was naturally public spirited he soon became acquainted with Samuel Adams (1706) and other political lights of the day, and his counting room became a chief rendezvous for the patriots of Boston.

In March 1765 Hancock was chosen to succeed his uncle in the position of selectman for the town of Boston. From this beginning for about one-third of a century he was a most faithful and conscientious servant of the people, and one whose memory American posterity should delight in revering. He served his state for eight years in the Legislature, frequent moderator of important meetings in Boston, representative in Continental Congress, two and one half years president of that body, 11 years Governor of Massachusetts and chairman of its constitutional convention.

In 1765 when the British ministry gave its sanction to an enforcement of eorge Grenville's Stamp Act in the American colonies many of the Tory merchants along the seaboard were in favor of submission, because they feared the consequences to their own mercantile interests if they resisted. But the men of higher motives, including John Hancock, took a firm stand against any tax impositions not having the authority of uninfluenced American consent. The Stamp Act was repealed during the following year (March 1766) and it was more due to the work of the merchant patriots in America in corresponding with their creditors and purchase houses in London than to any open hostility in the colonies.

STAMP ACT.

In this matter John Hancock was a strong factor in showing the English merchants how short-sighted was the ministerial policy which would cripple commerce by exacting an unlawful tribute from the infant mercantile interests of the new world. A reference to one of Hancock's letters will prove interesting. On Dec. 21, 1765, Hancock wrote to Devonshire & Reeves, London, as follows:

"I have sent you so fully my sentiments on the subject of the Stamp Act that I need not add more to convince you that it's highly disagreeable to the whole Continent and I have strong hopes that the Parliament will relieve us.

"Inclosed I send you small order for goods to be sent me by the first Spring Ship in case the Stamp Act is repeal'd, but if the act be not repeal'd, I must desire you will not send me one article in the Invoice. This is in consequence of the United Resolutions of the merchants here and the other Trading Towns, and I have wrote to all my Correspondents in London to the same effect. If the Stamp Act is repeal'd do let the goods be well put up and charged at the lowest price for which I will make you a punctual remittance.

"I wish you health and happiness and am Gent'n, Your most obed't serv't, JOHN HANCOCK."

On May 16, 1766, a copy of the repeal of the Stamp Act was received in Boston by a vessel of which Hancock was a part owner and great rejoicing followed all through the province.

CALLED A REBEL.

In 1775, while the Continental Congress was in session in Philadelphia, General Gage issued a proclamation in Boston offering pardon to all rebels except Samuel Adams and John Hancock, "whose offenses are of too flagitious a nature to admit of any other consideration than that of condignn punishment."

When Peyton Randolph of Virginia retired from the position of president of this Congress John Hancock was presented as being most suitable for the position and most acceptable to the Southern delegates, with whom neither of the Adamses were said to have been popular. So the Boston merchant prince was selected and when Benjamin Harrison conducted the new president to his chair, he remarked: "We will now show Britain how much we value her proscriptions."

During the most critical period in the existence of the general Congress Hancock served as its president with much dignity and good judgment.

Some writers have attempted to show that there was an unkind feeling between Hancock and General Washington. But the facts brought to light only give additional luster to the nobility and patriotism of the great merchant. While he was president of the Continental Congress in Philadelphia during the occupancy of his home city by the British troops, reports came to him of the possibility of an attack on Boston by the American army at Cambridge. Much of the merchant's possessions were in that city; but he bravely set aside his solicitude for personal interests and he wrote Washington in December, 1775, the following courageous letter:

EVACUATION OF BOSTON.

"For your future proceedings I must beg leave to refer you to the enclosed resolutions. I would just inform you that the last resolve relative to an attack upon Boston, passed after a most serious debate in a committee of the whole House. You are now left to the dictates of prudence and your own judgment. May God crown your attempt with success. I most heartily wish it, though, individually, I may be the greatest sufferer."

The noble patriot thus showed that he would not put a straw in the way of free action by the American general, if the latter should determine that the cause would be best served by occupying Boston. On March 19, 1776, Washington had the pleasure of notifying Hancock that the foreign troops had evacuated Boston and that his property was practically intact.

After Jefferson's Declaration of Independence was considered by the Continental Congress and adopted on July 4, 1776, a printed copy was issued bearing the typographical signature of Hancock as president of Congress, and of Charles Thompson, its secretary. This sheet was sent by Hancock to General Washington to be read to the troops, and another copy was read to the populace a few days later in Philadelphia. On Aug. 2, 1776, after the engrossed copy of the document was prepared it was signed by all the members then present and the signature of John Hancock was the first to be affixed.

THE DECLARATION.

It was this bold dash of the pen standing out so clearly and elegantly in every facsimile of the Declaration which has given Hancock's name so much superficial fame in our history. The real circumstance above and beyond his famous conventional attestation, however, was the fact that he was president of the most august body of patriots which civilization had ever witnessed up to that date. It was the fact of its being the first signature to a wonderful document, the real texture of which was composed of the elements of justice ,truth and benevolence spread on its broadside as an inspiration of wisdom from above. That is the fact which has made the signature of John Hancock to the American Magna Charta one of the most celebrated in all our political history.

The grandeur of Hancock's patriotism is evidenced in this appeal to the thirteen states composing the federal Union, Sept. 24, 1776. He wrote:

"Let us convince our enemies that we are entered into the present contest for the defense of our liberties, so we are resolved, with the firmest reliance on heaven for the justice of our cause, never to relinquish it, but rather to perish in the ruins of it. If we do but remain firm—if we are not dismayed at the little shocks of fortune, and are determined at all hazards that we will be free—I am persuaded under the gracious smiles of Providence ,assisted by our own most strenuous efforts, we shall finally succeed, agreeable to our wishes, and thereby establish the independence, the happiness and glory of the United States of America."

FAMILY MAN.

The merchant prince, like most of his compatriots, was an ardently affectionate family man. He was very devoted to domestic interests and to his wife, Dorothy Quincy Hancock. During their long separations he was very attentive in correspondence, always closing his letters with tender expressions of affection.

In a long letter written to the little wife in March 1777, he tells her much of the affairs of the day and closes with trese words: "Never fear, we shall get the day finally with the smiles of heaven. Do take precious care of our dear little Lydia. Adieu. I long to see you. Take care of yourself. I am, my dear girl, yours most affectionately." Another letter of the year following while he was at Yorktown addressed to "Dearest Dolly," closed with "my best wishes ever attend you for the highest felicity and I am, with utmost love, yours for ever."

The true greatness of this merchant patriot of '76 found a glowing expression in his delicate, loyal regard for the simple commonplace attentions which sweeten the matrimonial relation. It was Hancock's recognition of the so-called "little things" of the day which made his wedded life an opportunity for unselfish development and corresponding happiness. The counterfeit greatness which is grandiose to the outer world and forgetful and unlovable with the domestic circle was not the currency with which he settled the exchanges of his human relations.

LIBERAL AID.

Among the great deeds accredited to John Hancock was the liberal aid advanced from his personal means to bring about the much-valued assistance of France in winning American independence. When the government was about destitute of credit or cash, Hancock fitted out a frigate at his own expense to carry Laurens as diplomatic representative to the French court. Through the work of Colonel Laurens the influence and assistance of the French king was secured, and this generous cooperation did much to establish the final victory of the American cause.

It has been alleged that John Hancock misappropriated the funds of Harvard University while acting as its treasurer. For about 20 years he served in this office, and it was during the period when he was giving nearly all of his time to the federal union and his state. His business is said to have suffered much on account of his devotion to the interests of the commonwealth. Misunderstandings arose between the Harvard corporation and Hancock and their relations were quite strained at times.

All this occurred during the most critical period of our early history when it was extremely difficult to do business, because of the unsettled conditions of our laws and monetary affairs, and when Hancock was heavily charged with state responsibilities of great importance.

Some idea of the bad state of our money standards can be gained from the records of the University which show that in 1780 to pay a professor of divinity whose yearly compensation on a gold basis was about 87 pounds, it required 9.192 pounds of Continental paper money ($46,000 per annum).

Hancock's life seemed in his latter days to pass under a cloud of business and physical depression, and he passed away prematurely in 1793, without having settled his account with the university, although leaving ample means for that purpose. According to Josiah Quincy's History of Harvard University (Vol. 2, p. 205) his heirs paid nine years' interest on the indebtedness in 1795, and a few years later they paid the university the entire principal amount.

NO BREACH OF TRUST.

The writer finds no record of any breach of judiciary trust on the part of John Hancock. But it appears that an ungrateful populace, moved often by jealously and having no idea of the great man's problems and burdens, tried to load strange eccentricities on his character. It was alleged that he was "spoiled by popularity" and it is possible that his life work was somewhat flecked by such a coloring. But when measured in comparison with the great good he was instrumental in bringing out for his state and nation these minor items should have no force.

We can cite no better authority for a just estimate of the nobility, honor and business character of John Hancock than the man who was his childhood friend, his companion in young manhood and his co-worker for a quarter of a century in the American cause. John Adams wrote of Hancock in 1818: "I can say with truth that I profoundly admired him and more profoundly loved him. . . . I knew Mr. Hancock from the cradle to his grave. He was radically generous and benevolent. He became an example to all young men of the town. Wholly devoted to business, he was regular and punctual at his store as the sun is in its course . . Though I never injured or justly offended him and though I spent much of my time, and suffered unknown anxiety in defending his property, reputation and liberty from persecution, I cannot but reflect upon myself for not paying him more respect than I did in his life-time. . . Nor were his talents inconsiderable. They were far superior to many who have been much more celebrated. He had a great deal of political sagacity and penetration into men. He was by no means a contemptible scholar or orator."

A Fish With Teeth on His Tongue.

The biggest of fresh water fishes, the "arapaima" of the Amazon, in South America, which grows to six feet in length, has teeth on its tongue, so that the latter resembles the file and is used as such. Some kinds of trout also have the same peculiarity. Fishes that swallow their prey entire have their teeth so supported on flexible bases as to bend backward, but not forward, in order that their victims shall not escape after they have been once seized. In ages gone by there were ferocious sharks, seventy feet in length, such as would make a mouthful of you without blinking. Plenty of their teeth have been found which are five inches long, whereas the biggest of the teeth belonging to sharks that exist at the present day are one and a half inches long. Speaking of extinct creatures reminds us that all of the early birds—those of early geological times, that is—had teeth, with which they captured the early worms of the same period. Being descendant from reptiles, it is natural that they should possess a dental equipment, but when they ceased to be carnivorous they had no teeth any louger.

Perhaps.

"I don't have no opinion of these newfangled women's notions," said Mr. Hyde when his wife timidly expressed her desire to join the Woman's Self Improvement society.

"But we learn so much there," ventured Mrs. Hyde.

"Don't believe it!" snapped Mr. Hyde. "Women don't know much, that's a fact, but let 'em stick to their domestic duties and learn them. That's my opinion. Let 'em follow St. Paul's injunction—stay at home and ask their husbands if they want to know anything."

"But, John"—

"I've settled it, and that's enough, Jane."

"But, John, that's what women have been doing all this time, and perhaps that's the reason they don't know much."

And then Mr. Hyde threw his boot at the cat and boxed Freddy's ears for grinning.—Pearson's.

An Eye to Business.

One day a man with a case full of handbills entered a restaurant in Cincinnati run by an astute old German.

"Vot haf you dere?" the latter asked as he observed the man about to display several of the bills on his walls.

"Railway circulars—excursion."

"Oh, ho," exclaimed the proprietor, "one of dose cheap ten day exgursions! Go avay cheaper vot you stay at home, eh?"

"Exactly," said the bill man.

"Und you vant to hang dem up here?"

"Certainly. You've no objection?"

"I haf most clear obgections," said the German decidedly. "Dake dem avay! Do you dake me for a fool man, dot I vould vant my customers to read dose bills und den go avay und eat at some cheap place for ten days?"—Detroit Free Press.

Pigeon Whistles of Pekin.

The smallest musical instruments in the world are the pigeon whistles of Pekin. They are made of thinnest bamboo and tiny gourds scraped to paper-like delicacy and fastened beneath the tail feathers of the carrier pigeons. As the birds fly through the air these instruments emit a weird aeolian melody like the harps of fairyland. Every morning and afternoon the vault of Pekin's sky is swept by these sweet, mournful notes as the birds fly to and fro, carrying messages to the bankers, the merchants, the lawyers, invitations, letters, stock quotations, a system older than the telegraph or telephone or the oldest letter service, as old as time itself. There are some twenty different kinds of pigeon whistles, some of them simple bamboo tubes with but one top and some as elaborately constructed as miniature organ pipes. They are all of featherweight lightness and when held in the hand and swept through the air emit the same delicate whistling notes as when borne through the upper atmosphere by the carrier pigeons.

BRIEFS.

Founder's day exercises of the Woodward Institute will be held this evening at Woodward hall. The program is largely of a musical nature.

The unique picture posters advertising the street railway employees' ball April 8, are the work of H. S. Child, the cashier at the Quincy office of the street railway.

Mayor Shea will probably fill the vacancy in the force of regular patrolmen, caused by the death of Officer Lyons, this week. The vacancy will be filled by promotion from the reserve list. The officers on the reserve force are Thorne, Phillips, Duffy, Whelan, Corbett, Farrell, Avery and Duane.

"Then and now at Khartoum" will be Rev. E. A. Chase's subject at the Wollaston Congregational church Sunday morning. The music will include: Trio, "Lift Thine Eyes," Mendelssohn's Elijah; duet, "My Song shall always be Thy Mercy," Mendelssohn's Hymn of Praise; solo, "As the heart desireth," with cello obligato, Allitson.

General Superintendent Conway and Division Superintendent Gammons of the Old Colony street railway attended the dinner of the Massachusetts Street Railway association at Young's hotel, Boston, this week. The speaker was Prof. McMellin, who accompanied Commander Peary in his dash to the North Pole.

Several patterns of drinking fountains are being tried out in the public school buildings. These fountains do away with the use of cups and are operated by the pressure of the hand on one side of the fountain which causes a small stream of water to bubble up. They are self cleaning and the danger of contamination is entirely eliminated. It is probable that these fountains will eventually be installed in every public school building in the city.

INSANE, SAYS HIS MOTHER

Son of Popular Clergyman Is Held on Forgery Charge

Yonkers, N. Y., March 11.—Philip Germond, a son of the late Rev. Philip Germond, is in jail, charged with cashing a check to which he had forged his mother's name. Mrs. Germond, who lives only a stone's throw from the Nepperhan Heights Memorial Methodist church, which was erected in honor of her husband, is prostrated with grief and declares her son is insane.

In the Christian Advocate last month Mrs. Germond published a warning against cashing checks for her son. She says she will move to have him committed to an asylum.

—Eat more winter vegetables," said the doctor. "Vegetables will do you more good than all my drugs. Cabbage and cauliflower purify the blood. Beets are nourishing and will put weight on a lean man. Carrots will clear up your muddy complexion and parsley will sweeten your mouth. Celery is good for rheumatism and cress will tone up your stomach especially if you take it with mustard dressing. Onions will make you sleep; they'll check, too, those nasty winter colds of yours. Above all, eat plenty of spinach and turnips. They not only ward off gout, but they tone up the kidneys and they're highly diuretic."

DEATH SIGN BLIGHTS MIND

Witness Overcome When He Sees a Black Hand Signal

New York, March 11.—Strict observations of Pasquale Oechionero are being made by physicians in Bellevue hospital to determine whether he has been driven insane by the fear of death, as a result of a death sign that is alleged to have been made to him while he was testifying against some countrymen on trial for slashing and robbing him, before Judge Rosalsky, in the court of general sessions.

When Ochionero first went on the stand he gave his testimony quietly and without reservation. Soon he became excited and evidently inspired with fear. Rosalsky noticed one of the defendants making a sign to the witness with his hands. After the sign had been made twice the witness became livid. He seemed dazed and dumb.

Judge Rosalsky threatened to send him to prison unless he testified, but the threat had no effect. Then a fine of $250 was imposed for contempt of court. That also failed to open his lips. Finally the man was committed to Bellevue to have the physicians determine whether he had been shocked into a state of insanity.

Just what the sign meant that sealed Ochionero's lips no one could tell. When the sign was given Dominico Zerto, a relative of the complainant, whom he called "Uncle," was on trial with Emilio Falcone for the robbery.

Judge Rosalsky, on the alert because of the queer conduct of the complainants, watched the defendants. He saw one of the defendants lift his arms above the counsel table, fold his fingers, then for a moment twirl his thumbs, then bring them to a halt. This was done several times, and the judge noticed that at each movement Oechionero's face blanched and he seemed tongue tied.

When Zerto and Falcone were placed on trial Rosalsky first took the testimony of the policemen, and the Oechionero was called. He identified his watch and a stiletto found near the scene of the attack, and was asked who it was that stabbed him. Then, as his eyes rested on one of the defendants who gave the sign, he began to tremble and mumbled that he would not teli, even if he were paid $4,000,000.

During a recess Rosalsky talked with Oechionero, who said he was not afraid of the defendants, but he knew they had many friends and he feared them. Again he repeated that when his arm was all right he would tell all, if he pleased. He evidently meant that with his arm still in bandages he would be unable to defend himself if attacked.

LEAVES BUT $125,000

Platt's Holdngs In United States Express Company Only $15,000

New York, March 11.—The will of Thomas C. Platt will be filed in Tioga county this week. No estimate of the value of the estate has been made public, but it is said to be comparatively small, totalling, it is now estimated, not more than $125,000. His United States Express company holdings amount to only $15,000.

It is predicted that Frank H. Platt will be made president of the company at the next meeting of the directors, if he wishes to accept the office.

Seattle, March 11.—The Potters field will be the last resting place of twenty victims of the Great Northern railroad avalanche disaster at Wellington, the coroner says.

The bodies recovered are clad only in sleeping car garments, or are nude, and identification is almost impossible. There are six unidentified bodies in the Seattle morgue and more are expected.

RUN ON CLEVELAND BANK

Great Crowd of Women, Mostly Foreigners, Clamoring For Money

Cleveland, March 11.—With thousands of panic-stricken depositors clamoring at its doors the Bank of the Society for Savings faced the second day of a run which apparently has for its basis merely vague rumors. Ninety percent of the frightened throng which surrounded the building were women, and nearly all were foreigners.

The bank officials are unwilling to estimate the amount of money which has been paid out, but they reiterate that the bank is fully capable of meeting all demands.

The scenes about the bank were extremely picturesque. Outside, the long line of depositors, herded by a hundred policemen, chattering volubly in half a dozen languages.

FOSS FOR CONGRESS

Issues Upon Which He Will Try to Defeat Buchanan

Boston, March 11.—Eugene N. Foss has agreed to run for congress on the Democratic ticket against W. R. Buchanan in the Fourteenth Massachusetts district.

Democratic leaders are jubilant at the decision of Foss, because they realize that it means a battle worth while in the Fourteenth district, with great effectiveness for the party elsewhere in the state, and with a probable effect upon the politics of the country.

Mr. Foss' letter of acceptance deals with the "high cost of living" issue, the Payne-Aldrich tariff law and Cannonism. Foss is a millionaire manufacturer.

EVENTS PRECEDING MURDER OF GLOVER

Hattie Le Blanc Was Jealous, According to Widow's Story

Cambridge, Mass., March 11.—Mrs. Lillian M. Glover told Judge Mcintire in the probate court that on the afternoon of her husband's murder Hattie Le Blanc had a jealous quarrel with Glover. He had telephoned Hattie from Boston, she said, to tell her to get ready for a football game. Later, in company with Mrs. Glover, they were witnessing the game from an automobile.

George Freeman and his wife were seated in their carriage not far away. Glover began to play with a flag Mrs. Freeman had in her carriage, and Hattie, turning to Mrs. Glover, said: "Tell him to stop making love to Mrs. Freeman."

When some candy was passed later, Mrs. Glover said Hattie was so angry at Glover that she slapped the box aside and refused the candy.

Then, later at the laundry, Glover came out with some bundles to the machine. Hattie was sitting on the side nearest the laundry. Glover asked Hattie to move over. The French maid looked at him, said Mrs. Glover, without saying a word, and refused to move.

WITH $1,000,000 CAPITAL

Big Fine Goods Plant Being Promoted at Fall River

Fall River, Mass., March 11.—Papers are being circulated here for subscriptions for stock in a new fine cotton goods mill. James Sinclair, head bookkeeper of the Wampanoag mills, is prominently identified with the promotion, and is named as the probable treasurer, if the project is successful.

It is planned to organize a corporation with a capital of $1,000,000, and to construct a fine goods mill of 50,000 spindles capacity. The men interested in the move are all of Fall River.

Bullet In His Head

Providence, March 11.—A three-day search for Charles F. Buffum of Pascoag was ended when his body, with a bullet hole in the head, was found on the edge of the woods in Burrillville.

STRIKERS ARE BEATEN BACK

Not Allowed to March on Philadelphia City Hall

Philadelphia, March 11.—The sixth day of the general strike in sympathy with the striking carmen of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company witnessed but one incident of importance, an attempt to make the center of the city the scene of a big demonstration in aid of the strikers' cause.

The police blocked the attempt by "high-handed methods" and "brutal, unwarranted force," the strike leaders claim in statements issued last night; by "lawful and justifiable means" and with "no more force than was necessary" to check what might have been a serious disturbance of the peace, the authorities assert.

"March on the city hall" is a slogan which has been heard before in disturbances here. Suspecting that the crowd of 10,000 or more persons who had been prevented from holding an open air meeting in the National league baseball park would take up the indicated line of march, the authorities took efficient measures to prevent the invasion of the city's central districts by what it was feared might prove a turbulent mob.

Lines of police with active clubs partially halted the marchers on their way down Broad street, more than two miles from the objective point, and a mile farther down they broke up the parade altogether. Half a dozen persons were injured in the onslaught and twenty arrests were made.

Crowds of unwonted proportions thronged the spaces about the city hall until well toward nightfall, but there was no organized demonstration.

There were a few scattered points where disturbances of minor character broke out Thursday. Flying stones broke window glass in a number of cars. But more cars were operated than on any other day since the strike began—1140 the company reported.

Spread of the general strike to a state-wide extent is still considered a distant possibility.

The strikers gained yesterday by accessions from the Baldwin Locomotive Works of upward of 500 men. On the other hand, various manufacturers reported the return to work of many hands who had gone out. An obvious defection from the strikers' ranks was that of 100 or more taxicab chauffeurs.

MUTINY ON DREADNAUGHT

Fifty English Firemen Quit Brazilian Warship at Norfolk

Norfolk, March 11.—Mutiny has broken out on the Brazilian dreadnaught Minas Geraes, one of the world's largest fighting vessels. Fifty English firemen walked ashore here, declaring that they had been denied liberty and that their food was bad and their clothes were unfit to wear. The firemen were shipped in England, where the vessel was built.

The Minas Geraes came here to take to Brazil the body of Ambassador Nabuco, who died in Washington.

IN THE THEATRICAL WORLD

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Henry B. Harris will present "The Traveling Salesman," James Forbes' latest comedy success with the original New York and Chicago company and production, at the Hollis Street Theatre for two weeks commencing Monday, March 14th. The first act of "The Traveling Salesman" shows the interior of a railway depot at Grand Crossing, a little town in the Middle West. It is here that Bob Blake, the traveling saleman, makes the acquaintane of Beth Elliott, the pretty telegraph operator and ticket agent. Beth is possessed of a piece of barren and untillable land, which suddenly become of immense value because it is necessary to a scheme of improvement the railroad company desires to carry out. Martin Drury, who is Blake's employer, becomes possessed of the knowledge that the railroad company is to make the improvements, and attempts to defraud the girl of the property through a perversion of the laws governing the sale of land by the township for unpaid taxes. It is Blake's aim to defeat this scheme, and the predicament he finds himself in, through his impetuous and misvalued egorts furnish the necessary dramatic thread for Mr. Forbes' comedy, which aims chiefly at a humorous exposition of the characteristics of the modern drummer. The second act which transpires in Blake's room in the Elite Hotel, is said to be as unique a portrayal of "life on the road" as was the second act of "The Chorus Lady" in illustrating "life behind the scenes."

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The coming of Mrs. Eva Fay to Keith's next week will be one of the most important events of the season. Mrs. Fay's name is well known through America and the English speaking world as the greatest exponent of the physic art now extant. She may not be the first in this line, physics date back for centuries, but it is credited that this modern seeress has accomplished many of the greatest feats in the history of telepathy. For 30 weeks she kept all New York in a state of continual excitement and in the various cities on this continent in which she has appeared, she has left in her wake a host of converts to a belief in the existence of the sixth sence. Thousands of alleged exposes have been printed about her, but her wonderful powers continue unabated. During her engagement at Keith's she will answer all questions that may be asked her. Some of the things Mrs. Fay has told peonle in her audiences have been of the most amazing character. She will be a feature of another remarkable bill, which has been making Keith's the centre of attraction in Boston this winter. It will include Jack Wilson, that remarkable extemporaneous comedian, who will probably have something to say about Mrs. Fay; Stuart the "Male Patti," who comes with a score or more of beautiful French gowns; Griff the English clown juggler; Hassan Ben Ali's Arabs; Mignonette Kokin, the singer and dancer; and Baletti's Baboons, in an amusing comedy called "In a Barber Shop."

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Tom Moore, a hero in real life, and the greatest of Irish poets, makes an admirable hero for a play. Some years ago Theodore Burt Sayre wrote a comedy entitled "Tom Moore," based upon certain incidents in the poet's life and Andrew Mack starred in it with no little success. It is this play that John Craig has chosen for the coming week at the Castle Square, and he has chosen it so that its performances may fall on and around St. Patrick's Day. The play itself contain many bright examples of Irish wit, and not a little Irish adventure. Tom Moore himself is made a kindly, a romantic and a sympathetic personage. He was a gallant as well as a troubadour, and in the course of the play he finds that life is not so easy for him as he had imagined in his youth. The first act takes place in an Irish village, where Tom is in love with the pretty schoolmistress. A year later we see him in a garret in London, the third finds him in favor with the Prince of Wales, and at the end he is made poet laureate, and everything is serene. Mr. Craig will have the best of roles as Tom Moore, and he will impersonate the gentle, happy-go-lucky poet to the life. There is no doubt that he will successfully represent the poetic side of his character, and of course he will be inimitable in the love scenes. Bessie Duke, the heroine with whom Tom falls in love, will be acted by Mary Young, and there will be a lengthy cast. The scenery will be beautiful and picturesque. "Tom Moore" will run at the Castle Square only one week, and it will be followed by the French farce, "The Marriage of Kitty."

BOSTON THEATRE.

Beginning Monday evening, March 14th, "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge", the reigning success for over six months at the circle Theatre, New York, comes to the Boston Theatre with all the spectacular splendor and great company of comedians, show girls, chorus people and ballets that has made this piece such a sensation in the Empire city. The story has to do with the night life of Paris. The young King of Orcania is in Paris finishing off his education previous to his assuming the more serious occupation of ruling a province. The young Prince is followed by his bride-elect, the Princess Marotz, but he is saturated with the gayeties of Paris and the poor Princess is too tame for him. So, seeing that he is in love with gay femmes of the Latin quartr, she assumes the role of an absent queen of that section, and as Queen of the Moulin Rouge wins back the Prince by her abandon and high spirits. A most remarkable stage picture is evolved by the light effects over the City of Paris. Another striking feature is the conclusion of act two when "floats" each containing the prettiest model of the studio, are shown as they circle around the Moulin Rouge and are afterward thrown into the Seine. There will be regular matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

"The Midnight Sons" that whirlwind of mirth, beautiful girls, rich costumes good taste in color, unique scenic effects, specialties and songs, including "Rings on my fingers, bells on my toes", began its second month of phenominal success at the Shubert Theatre, Boston, Monday night. It is the same old story of "all sold out" at the ticket window by 8 o'clock and late comers have to stand. It is much more convenient to take advantage of the fact that seats are on sale two weeks in advance. There are many important features, but the ones always sure to please are the realistic theatre scene, the stage dinner with 100 diners, the funny shoe store scene and the illusion of the Pulman train going at the rate of a mile a minute. Lew Fields evidently had certain main principles in mind when he produced this mammoth musical comedy—to construct a musical play on a big scale, bigger than anything ever done before. He made his production along beautiful and massive lines, with the main idea of having a show of almost continuous laughter. The background is a series of gorgeous stage pictures with big mechanical effects, and altogether it is easily the biggest and best musical comedy production ever seen in Boston.

AMERICAN MUSIC HALL.

The season of Lent seems to have no appreciable effect either on the audiences which throng to the American Music Hall weekly or the remarkable all star bills which the management of that popular play-house is consistently presenting. For next week another aggregation of top line features will be seen. Thousands of Bostonians are already familiar with the sensational Parisian sketch "Ma Gosse" which last week fairly took the town by storm. It was not the original intention of the management to hold this act over but there was such an eager demand on the part of the public to see it again that no other course was open. La Deuse "De Noire" or "Black Dance" is the only one of its kind ever seen in Boston. As an exhibition of terpsichorean art it is without parallel on the stage. The sketch is also instructive in that it presents a clear picture of the underworld of Paris. Another welcome feature will be Henry Lee one of America's most popular actors presenting his famous impersonations of great men past and present. Among those of whom he will give speaking likenesses are Mark Twain, Emperor William II., Hon. Joseph Cannon, Gen. U. S. Grant, Gen. Robert E. Lee, Theodore Roosevelt, Hon. Richard Croker and Oscar Hammerstein.

ASKED TO SOLVE HERRING PROBLEM

Treasury Department Up Against a Tough Proposition

Washington, March 11.—Complaining that the government has placed itself in the position of contending that fish should be frozen before being caught to be "naturally frozen," a Boston firm of fish dealers has asked Representative Roberts (Mass.) to protest to the treasury department against a recent ruling.

The letter says that the treasury department held that fresh herring, naturally frozen, was not dutiable as frozen fish at ¾ of a cent duty per pound, but that this was modified by a letter on March 5 from the department addressed to the collector of Boston, saying there seemed to be some misunderstanding.

This latter letter held that fish frozen in tubs or on decks of vessels after they have been caught cannot be classed as "naturally frozen," and therefore are subject to the old duty of ¾ of a cent a pound.

THE BOGOTA RIOTS

Not Regarded at Washington as Having Special Significance

Washington, March 11.—There is no likelihood that any serious complications between the United States and the government of Colombia will result from the action of a mob in Bogota in stoning the American legation building in that city.

State department officials are not inclined to attach any special significance to these acts. They regard them as those of an irresponsible mob. The government of Colombia has already assured the American minister of full protection.

Bogota, Colombia, March 11.—The anti-American rioting has ceased. All of the Americans here are safe.

STICKS TO HUSBAND

Mrs. Hyde Turns Against Mother In Swope Poison Case

Kansas City, March 11.—It has developed that during the trial of Dr. B. C. Hyde on a charge of poisoning Colonel Thomas H. Swope the prosecution will attempt to show that, following a suggestion made to her, Mrs. Hyde bequeathed all her property to her husband.

Under the will of Swope Mrs. Hyde is a beneficiary to the amount of more than $300,000. She is standing by her husband against her mother, Mrs. Logan O. Swope, who is backing the prosecution.

TWO HUNDRED SLAIN

Tribesmen Fare Badly at Hands of French Troops In Morocco

Tangier, March 11.—News of a terrific battle between a handful of French troops and 800 Zair tribesmen has reached here. The native forces lost 200 killed and wounded, it is reported, but the French had no casualties.

The tribesmen attacked the advanced posts of General Moiniers north of the Shawia frontier, but were repulsed.

FOREIGN LINES ARE TAXED

Steamship Corporations Touching Our Ports Come Under the Law

Washington, March 11.—Foreign steamship companies whose vessels ply between American and foreign ports are subject to the law imposing a tax of 1 percent on the net incomes of corporations, according to an opinion rendered by Attorney General Wickersham.

Foreign corporations operating in this country are required to pay a tax on their net incomes from business transacted and capital invested in the United States.

MOTHER INSTANTLY KILLED

Minister Is Critically Injured When His Horse Runs Away

Providence, March 11.—Rev. Theophilus H. Root, pastor of the Wood River Junction Congregational church, was probably fatally hurt and his mother, Mrs. Mary E. W. Root, was instantly killed in a runaway accident while returning in a carriage from a parishional call.

A stray dog, which barked at the horse, was the direct cause of the fatality. Mrs. Root was thrown out and landed on a sharp stone at the road side, dying almost instantly. She was 73 years old.

Mr. Root tried to pull up the frightened animal, but failed, being thrown out himself a few feet further along the road. He is in a critical condition.

NEW MOVE OF LIBERALS

Ask Supplies For Six Weeks Instead of Six Months

London, March 11.—The ministers adopted a new device in the war between the lords and commons, by asking parliament to vote supplies for six weeks only, instead of for from four to six months, as has been the practice for the last fifteen years.

The fact is not concealed that this device is intended to keep the power of the purse in the hands of the house of commons, in readiness for a fresh constitutional crisis, which is expected in May when the lords probably will reject the resolutions curtailing their power of veto, so as to bring about the resignation of the government.

If supplies were voted for six months, Mr. Balfour could then take office and carry on the government, but with the necessity of coming to the house of commons for a new vote on supplies he would be defeated.

AT THE AGE OF 102

Faithful Old Servant of Roosevelt Family Dies at Oyster Bay

Oyster Bay, L. I., March 11.—Alfred Davis, a negro pensioner of Theodore Roosevelt, died last evening at the age of 102 years.

Davis entered the employ of Colonel Roosevelt's father upward of fifty years ago and remained in the employment of the family until old age impaired his faculties. Of late years he had been cared for by a pension paid by Colonel Roosevelt.

GETS NINETY-NINE YEARS

Sentence Imposed Upon Negro Who Attacked Six White Girls

Kansas City, March 11.—William Jackson, negro janitor, charged with attacking six young white girls, was convicted in the criminal court and sentenced to ninety-nine years' imprisonment.

Weavers Granted a Raise

Rochester, N. H., March 11.—The twenty-five weavers whose strike at the mill of the Cocheco Woolen company here caused a shutdown of the plant and rendered 200 operatives idle, were granted an increase in wages of about 11 percent. They returned to work this morning.

KIDNAPPER HAS THREE HELPERS

Takes His Two Children In Absence of Their Mother

Boston, March 11.—An impending divorce suit instituted by Mrs. Franklin H. Warren had a highly sensational turn yesterday afternoon, when her husband, a business man, stole two children from the home of his mother-in-law at 43 Stanton street, Dorchester, during the absence of Mrs. Warren.

Three men accompanied Warren in a taxicab to the residence, which is in a fashionable section of the district.

Although Mrs. A. H. Gillis, the mother-in-law, attacked the men single handed and roused the neighbors with her outcries, the abductors vanished in the same quick way that they had descended on the house.

Access was gained to the house through subterfuge. Under pretence of looking over the property, which is for sale, two of the men, who accompanied Warren, were admitted by Mrs. Gillis, Warren remaining hidden in the taxicab until later.

The police were notified and detectives scoured the city last night in an effort to gain a clue of the whereabouts of the children, who are Adrienne, aged 4, and Phyllis, 3 years old.

NEW COUNCILMEN.

Councilman-elect Washington G. Woodward of Ward Six, who has been in Jamaica since late in December has arrived home and will make his first appearance at the Council meeting of March 21. Councilman Woodward who is connected with the firm of Lynch & Woodward ,the heating company, went to Jamaica to superintend the installation of a large heating plant. He did not expect to be away long, but owing to unfortunate delays he was not able to return. Although far away from home he has kept himself well informed of what was going on in Quincy, and says that when the papers arrived giving account of the severe storm of Dec. 26, he sat under a palm tree and read all about it. He, however, is glad to get home, even if the weather here is not quite so balmy as in Jamaica.

MILITARY CONTEST.

John Adams commandery, Knights of Malta, had a very instructive meeting at their regular convocation in Greenleaf hall on Thursday, the companions being called to arms promptly at eight o'clock. After the business of the evening had been transacted, there was an exhibition of a military contest as given the days of yore, which was done in a very able manner by two sir knights. Plans were also drawn up for the formation of a regular malta degree team. At the next regular convocation, March 24, Grand Deputy Bamford and staff will install the officers for the ensuing term. Many of the grand officers are expected to be present at this occasion.

A LIVE FIRM.

We have all seen the name, Scammell & Sons upon an auto as it passes through our streets and read their advertisements in the Ledger but it is safe to say few realize what experts they are in the repairing, painting and selling of autos.

Mr. Scammell has been engaged in the carriage building for twenty-seven years and about a year ago decided that the automobile was here to stay. He accordingly went ahead and planned to build a garage and auto repair shop. These were speedily completed and he began to advertise these facts. Slowly the work began to come and as the days went by it kept rapidly growing. His help could not do the work and more was added until today when a representative of the Daily Ledger called at the plant he found fully a score of experts engaged in the various branches of the business.

One thing that impressed our representative was the car being built for Johnson Bros., Quincy's leading marketmen and grocers. This car which is rapidly nearing completion instantly conveys the thought of speedy delivery and the firm of Johnson Bros., will surely be big gainers in adding such a valuable acquisition to their up-to-date methods.

Another body for the Abbott & Miller express is being built here besides countless repair and painting jobs which are in the garage awaiting their turn.

Mr. Scammell is sole agent for this entire district, as far south as Brockton, for the Fuller car and is very desirous of having all those who attend the auto show glance at the Fuller exhibit especially the grocers, etc., for this car is recognized as the one adapted to their many stops and starts. In summing up the visit the Ledger man says he was agreeably surprised to see such a live concern in our city and also pleased to know that the firm of Johnson Bros. have started right by buying their car of a Quincy man. This is a move many more should follow and we hope that if other cars are ordered that Quincy men will be given an opportunity to make them. Trading at home is what makes a city prosperous.

—When John Adams said that the Fourth of July should be celebrated with fireworks and the discharge of guns he did not necessarily advise that the celebration should be conducted entirely by little boys or even by half-grown amateurs. Fireworks and salvos of artillery are a very stirring and appropriate means of celebrating Independence Day, but it does not follow that every boy should be equipped with the means of blowing out his eyes, killing his companions and setting fire to the neighbor's house. These instrumentalities of glorification should be intrusted to competent and responsible persons, and used in open spaces, not in the streets and the yards of houses.—Philadelphia Record.

RUBE'S SPORTING CHAT

Hats off to that athletic committee at Quincy High school. They can well be termed a committee that "do things." Their plans for the meet to be held Friday afternoon, March 18, will meet with approval of all, and I look to see the High school the mecca for all lovers of sports a week from today.

* * *

The auto is king. A more enjoyable and healthy sport would be hard to find, and it is indeed a good sign to see more enjoy it annually.

* * *

The championship bowling match will come off Monday evening between Poland and Lyons, and Grant and Dahl, at Grant's Granite street alleys. Lyons is again in condition and the heating apparatus in the local alleys is in order, so everybody who attends will see a red hot match.

* * *

Basket ball is going, baseball is coming. Are you satisfied ?

* * *

The boxing game is much in the public eye, just at present, owing to the Jeffries-Johnson proposed match and the weekly events at Brockton and Boston. Knowing many in Quincy to be interested in this, I desire to call the attention of a few of you older ones to the fact that the late lamented "Johnny" Griffin, who had hosts of friends in Quincy, died in Brockton eight years ago last Saturday. Johnny's memory will ever live for he was one of the squarest and most honest fighters ever known and a champion in his class too.

The Quincy Old Colony league baseball club is very much in the limelight. Bjorkland informs me he has secured the Boston team of the United States league to play at the Water street grounds on the afternoon of April 19, (Patriot's day.) The directors plan to have the grounds in tip top condition at that time. They have filled in the left and right fields with granite chips and plan to roll these into the ground and cover the chips over with dirt and plant grass seed. It is safe to say we will not see the outfielders come in covered with mud as we did last season. The plans for the drama are under way and rehearsals are being held. It is planned to give the show in April. Bjorkland says he will use nearly all old faces in the coming game with the Boston U. S. team with exception of the twirler, who will undoubtedly be "Andy" O'Connor of New Bedford. He forferly was with Randolph in this league, going from there to the New York Americans at the end of the 1908 season, but was not fast enough. He should make good here and stay, and we all hope he is a free agent that the Gilroy case is not repeated.

RUBE.

Judge—"Mr. Clerk, will you please repeat the name of the complainant in the case you have just called?"

Clerk—"Wun Lung, sir."

M'FARLAND AFTER WOLGAST.

Chicago Lad Will Try Hard to Get on Match With New Champion.

Packy McFarland, the Chicago lightweight, who failed to get on a fight with Freddie Welch, the English champion, while abroad, has announced that he will sail for home shortly and try hard to get a match on with Ad Wolgast, the new holder of the world's title.

In many quarters McFarland is looked upon to have an excellent chance of taking away Wolgast's scalp. He is one of the cleverest boxers that ever pulled on a glove and has a knockout wallop in either hand. His only trouble in getting on a match with the latter is that he may experience some little difficulty in making 133 pounds ring side.

CHESS EXPERT COMING.

Schlechter, Famous Master, Plans to Visit America In May.

Next to Dr. Emanuel Lasker, Carl Schlechter, the unobtrusive Viennese master, occupies the central position in the world of chess today. His stand against the champion in the great match recently concluded at Berlin is unparalleled in the annals of match play since the late William Steinitz was dethroned by the present incumbent.

Although Dr. Lasker retains the title of world's champion, and, in view of the fact that he evened the score at the eleventh hour, commands the same respect he ever did, Schlechter ranges up alongside of him an impressive figure, greater than that of any of the other masters living today. Dr. Lasker himself has been generous enough to acknowledge the greatness of his recent antagonist.

According to a cable received from Berlin, Schlechter contemplates coming to this country in May for a tour He has been here but once before. when he came to play in the international masters' tournament in 1904.

BRITISH POLOISTS COMING.

English Team to Play In Point Judith (N. Y.) Tourney.

The reorganized Point Judith Polo club of New York has adopted the schedule for the season. The tournament will begin July 23 and close Sept. 3. The chief interest in the tournament is the coming of an English team and the senior and junior championships. The Britishers are scheduled to meet Burlingame, Wanderers, Philadelphia, Meadowbrook, Point Judith and Rockaway in addition to taking part in the open championship. The first game of the junior championship is scheduled in New York July 25

Sports In Short Meter

Jeffries' supreme courage and ability to take a terrible beating will bring him through a winner in his Johnson bout, urges Frank Gotch.

Sidney Pixotto, president of the Pacific association of the Amateur Athletic union, is organizing a governing body in amateur athletics in the Hawaiian Islands.

The world's figure skating championship at Davos has been won for the ninth time by U. Salshow of Stockholm, Herr W. Rittenberg of Berlin being second in the competition.

Four of last year's Chicago Americans have now been let go. Jakey Atz, George Davis, Frank Isbell and Barney Reilly are the men to get the official ax. Who will be next when the recruits show their skill?

There will be entered in the small boat classes at Monaco this spring a British hydroplane that is said to have attained the speed of 38 knots an hour. The craft is named Flying Shoe and is fitted with a seventy-five horsepower engine.

There will be an ocean motorboat race from Havana to Atlantic City this summer. The contests will bring the craft home after the Philadelphia to Havana race ends. The Seaside Yacht club of Atlantic City has offered a $500 cup as a trophy.

FOUNDER'S DAY AT THE WOODWARD

Pupils Present Musical Program on Anniversary of Birth of Dr. Woodward.

Endowment Fund of the School Now About $300,000.

The finest musical program ever presented by the pupils of the Woodward Institute was given last evening, the anniversary of the birth of the founder, Dr. Ebenezer Woodward. The pupils were assisted by three recent graduates of the school Miss Teresa Keating, '06, Miss Maud Elizabeth Read, '07, and Miss Ruth Penniman, '08. The concert was given under the direction of Mr. John D. Buckingham, for many years director of music at the school. Because of this long service Mr. Buckingham has brought the musical department of the school to a high standard and teacher and pupils came in for considerable praise.

As usual at the Woodward the attendance was large, being limited only by the capacity of the hall. The large picture of Dr. Woodward over the platform was entwined with green vine. The platform was enlarged for the occasion to accommodate two grand pianos, and several pretty palms along the front made it an attractive scene.

The 150 pupils who comprised the chorus marched in at 8 o'clock and occupied seats in front of the platform.

The program was a varied one, as will be seen, including choruses and solos, instrumental numbers on piano, violin and violincello, and readings. It is given in full:

Chorus
a. Bolero Verdi
b. Maiden and Nightingale Renard
Pianoforte
Fantasie in C minor Mozart
Miss Amy Elizabeth Fallon '12
Violin
a. Salut d'Amour Elgar
b. Mazurka Mjlinski
Miss Ruth Keating '10
Chorus
The Little Bird Soderberg
Solo by Miss Esther Dasha '12
Recado for Piano and Orchestra—op. 56 Hummel
Miss Ruth Penniman
Orchestral part supplied on second piano
Soprano Solo
a. Sombre Woods Lully
b. Irish Folk Song Foote
Miss Teresa Keating
Violin obligato by Miss Ruth Keating
Reading
a. The Courtship of Miles Standish Longfellow
b. An Old Sweetheart of Mine Riley
Miss Maud Elizabeth Read
Violincello Solo
Alla Follacca Goltermann
Miss Marion Moorhouse '10
Chorus
Rockin' Time Knox

All the numbers were very pleasing but none will be mentioned in particular. When a school can present such a fine program among its own pupils it is certainly making a success of music and readings.

Dr. Woodward was born March 12, 1791, just 119 years ago. He was graduated at Dartmouth College in 1817. He began the practice of medicine in Quincy, April 1, 1823, and continued until his death May 21, 1869, at the age of 71. He married Mary Ann Wroe, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Greenleaf, who survived him eight months. They lived on Washington street, on the site of the Thomas Crane Public Library, and when the library was erected, the house was moved to Hancock street, opposite Music hall, and is now owned by Miss Emily Wilde. The endowment fund of the school now amounts to about $300,000, the school being only for girls born in Quincy. Dr. Woodward died without issue.

—An English board of trade man who has been visiting this country, says he cannot understand why it is that bread in England is sold at one-third the price that is paid in this country. That is not so difficult to understand as it is to understand how the English people can put up with the stuff that is sold in that country as bread. It would be dear at any price.—Banker and Tradesman.

RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS

To Give Houghs Neck People a Public Hearing

The Board of Railroad Commissioners will give a hearing at its office in Boston on Tuesday, March 22, at 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon on the petition of the citizens of Houghs Neck for improved street car service.

This is the petition that first went to the City Council. The petitioners asked for ten minute service during the summer months and half hour service during the winter. It also asked for a larger feed wire for the proper service and lighting of cars, and that cars be run the whole length of the line.

On the two latter articles it was agreed that they were to be taken care of immediately. As for the frequent car service the company refused cars as often as desired, on the ground that the patronage did not warrant it, and that it would be impossible to run cars on ten minute schedule for lack of sufficient patronage and trackage.

The City Council refused to take any action on the petition but gave the residents of that section of the city permission to petition the Railroad Commissioners. The question of the service to this section of the city was gone into thoroughly by a special committee of the City Council, and its action was the result of the information brought out at that hearing.

A lunch was served and the cake was distributed among the guests, who on retiring to their homes wishing Harold many happy returns of such pleasant occasions.

MAYOR'S DAUGHTER SPONSOR FOR SALMON

Mayor Fitzgerald and Mrs. Fitzgerald Witness Event at Quincy Shipyard

The Submarine Took a Beautiful Dive Into the River.

The submarine Salmon, the last of a fleet of seven of this class of vessels built by the Electric Boat Company, for the United States navy, was successfully launched shortly after 11 o'clock today. Although the launching was a private one, the fact that a daughter of Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston was to be the sponsor of the boat and that His Honor would be present, made the launch more of interest than usual.

Mayor Fitzgerald accompanied by Mrs. Fitzgerald, Miss Agnes Fitzgerald, Miss Eunice May Fitzgerald, Master Fred Fitzgerald and Miss Ruth Beirermeister, a friend of Miss Eunice composed the launching party. They arrived at the plant at 10.40, having been brought from their home in an automobile. They were received by President Bowles and immediately escorted to the launching stand that had been erected about the bow of the submarine.

There they were met by L. Y. Spear, president of the Electric Boat Co.; Lieut. Commander Orrin G. Mirfin, inspector of machinery, U. S. N., who is to be the chief engineer of the North Dakota when she goes into commission; Naval Constructor H. G. Gilman and T. F. Bailey, Chief Engineer of the Electric Boat Co.

In addition to these there was quite a large party gathered in the shed where the submarines are built. These included a party of sixteen young ladies from the Quincy Mansion school, in charge of Miss Kennedy, who were greatly interested in the launch.

As the launching party approached the launching stand they were held up by a small army of photographers. They readily posed for their pictures. First Miss Eunice was photographed, then a group picture of Mayor Fitzgerald, Admiral Bowles and Miss Eunice was taken.

Preparations for the launch were commenced as soon as the party arrived, and for a few minutes all that could be heard was the merry tap of a hundred hammers in the hands of the workmen, as they drove the wedges home that lifted the boat from the blocking. Then came a loud shrill whistle, and in a second all was silent. A second later another whistle was heard, followed by the sound of the saws as they went through the sole piece ,the last piece, the last piece of planking that held the submarine in check. As soon as this was sawed through, the boat began to move, slowly at first and then gaining speed every second. At the very first move of the vessel, Miss Eunice hit the bow of the boat a crack with a bottle of Mumm's extra dry, and as the sparkling liquid ran down the sides she said in a clear voice, "I christen thee, Salmon."

It was 11.19 when the vessel begun to move down the ways and thirty seconds later she was riding gracefully in the river.

The vessel slid gracefully down the greased ways, and dived beautifully into her native element. It seemed at first as though her stern would go to the bottom, but she rose gracefully and was soon floating in the fitting out dock, where she was taken by tugs.

The launch over, the launching party was escorted to the annex where a luncheon was served.

There was probably no prouder girl than was Miss Eunice as she stepped from the launching stand, her arms encircled about a handsome bouquet of pink roses, which had been presented to her by Admiral Bowles just before the launch.

—O, you February! We had 63 varieties of weather in that short month, and now March enters with promise of continued climatic vaudeville. Most of us will welcome the April showers and a whole lot of us will look forward with anticipated pleasure to lovely May. Welcome, gentle Spring!—Mansfield News.

Important Announcement

BY JOHNSON BROS.

Why and How We Shall Reduce Our Prices April 1st, 1910.

AFTER a careful study of the credit business for a number of years, and the same of the cash business for the past two years, we have decided that for the mutual benefit of the buyer and seller, beginning April 1, we shall turn our business into a strictly cash business. Our experience and close study of the wants of the people for the past thirty-five years has put us in a position to judge, and we have decided that low prices and high quality can be obtained in no other way than by a strictly cash proposition, as a credit store cannot possibly compete successfully with a store that is handled on a strictly cash basis, as there is a great expense attached to a credit business, which we wish to curtail, and our curtailing means much lower prices to the trade. Under the credit system there is always a proportion of bad bills which must be taken care of in our scale of prices. Under the credit system you are helping to pay the bills of those who do not pay themselves. The method of sending teams to take orders daily is very costly. We figure it costs us eight cents per call. If our clerks make from one hundred fifty to two hundred calls daily the expense of these calls must be added to the prices of the goods. The salaries of bookkeepers and other expenses of accounting and collections must also be taken care of. We propose to eliminate these items of expense, and correspondingly reduce the prices of our goods. We will deliver orders sent to us by mail, telephone or left at the store, and we intend to show the people of Quincy and surrounding towns what a really cash store can do for them. We intend to place on sale a certain day of each week some staple article from our stock at absolute cost, something different each time. Remember, one of the most important things in this change will be the keeping up of our quality for which we have so long been popular. We shall try to give even better quality if such a thing is possible, and we shall hammer the prices down hard—for cash.

We will pay cash for our goods, by so doing get all the cash discounts from the wholesale trade, and we intend that our trade shall benefit by it, and by owning our own plant it will not be possible for any concern in our line of business to undersell us, when you take into consideration our reputation for quality. We have one of the best equipped stores in our city, also the cooperation of experienced clerks which all go to make Johnson Bros. an ideal firm with which to trade. All orders will be delivered with care and promptness by our new Automobile system, which we will place at your service and which is being practised by nearly all the up to date concerns throughout the country. Customers not caring to pay cash every time they come, or send to the store can if they wish make a deposit with us, and when they have taken up all their deposit will be notified. At the prices we shall ask and the quality of our goods, we must insist on a strictly cash transaction, for at the present age of high prices a credit store can do nothing to lessen the expense of living for its customers, as the increasing expense of carrying on a credit business places low prices out of the question.

The credit dealer must realize a larger percent of profit than a cash dealer, as his expense account is more than double, so we decided that the only way we can help our customers and all careful buyers, is to establish a strictly up to date cash store, for there is no other way that we can afford to cut the prices for the mutual benefit of all. Hoping that this will meet with thoughtful and willing cooperation, we remain,

Respectfully,

JOHNSON BROS.' MARKET,

City Square

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

That was a substantial way one of the guarantors of the Quincy Choral society took to show his appreciation of their work.

Following out the suggestion of Mayor Shea, for a wide thoroughfare from Quincy to South and West Quincy, the Daily Ledger finds that if a rule is laid upon a map of the city of Quincy that a straight line from Hancock street (opposite Revere road) to Water street (where path leads to the John Hancock schoolhouse) would pass through the Bailey estate on Fort and School streets. With this exception the only buildings in the way would be the bakehouse stable on Hancock street and a building on Water street. The John Hancock school lot would then be upon this thoroughfare.

The disfance between these two points is about 3,600 feet and would develope considerable vacant territory, and would provide the direct thoroughfare desired. The distance from City Hall to Cross street by this route would be about 9,800 feet, about the same as by the circuitous Granite street today.

It is possible by this route to lay out a street as wide as desired without damage to any estate, and if built under the betterment act the betterments received should almost offset the land takings.

Other avenues could radiate from this thoroughfare; one to Quarry street and one to Brook road, which would give a direct route between the granite quarries and the stone sheds, and from both quarries and sheds to Hancock street and Town river or Quincy Point.

From the point on Water street, near the John Hancock school, where the thoroughfare intersects, there should be a continuation across Water street to intersect Roberts street and thence to Centre street and the Granite Branch railroad, where there is considerable land to be developed.

Coming back to the starting point, Revere road should receive attention. The wide thoroughfare should be continued through Revere road. Canal street and Valley street to Merrymount park and the Metropolitan parkway to Boston. This would also intersect the boulevard to Houghs Neck. The plan is worth considering.

DIED UNKNOWN IN THE WEST

Identified as George P. Floyd Formerly of Quincy

A dispatch from Minneapolis reports the sudden death in that city on Sunday of George P. Floyd, whose body was for several days unidentified in the morgue. He was well known in Quincy, where he resided at one time. Mr. Floyd married Relief B. Field, a sister of George H. Field and John Q. A. Field. He left Quincy, however, before the Civil war, and although he made occasional visits east, he never returned here to live. He went West with George French, at one time the proprietor of the old Hancock House. They opened a hotel in Chicago, known as the Riggs house, which became famous as a hotel in its day.

He is survived by a widow and four children, Frank H. and George, who are supposed to be in New York, Mrs. Kline and Miss Minnie Floyd, who reside in Dorchester. He will be buried at Detroit.

Mr. Floyd was famous as a horseman and his name was especially well known in Kentucky and other parts of the South in this connection. He was an authority on breeding and pedigree and wrote voluminously for horse journals. He was the owner of Belle Franklin, one of the most famous mares of her day and the maternal founder of the well-known Jay Bird breed of horses. Mr. Floyd lost all of his horses in the South at the time of the Civil war.

CHORAL SOCIETY APPRECIATED.

The Quincy Choral society has received many gracious messages commending the work of the past season, but it remains for Mr. L. Dowley Williams, a guarantor and also an honorary member of the society to add a crowning touch of approbation that will encourage officers and members alike to greater effort for the success of next season's work. Mr. Williams not only wrote a letter approving the work already accomplished, but also enclosed a check for $50.00 to be used in preparing for next season's concert. His splendid ability to adjudge the merits of any musical performance makes his commendation of especial value to the singers, and the generous spirit which prompted him to add so substantial a testimony of his interest will be appreciated not only by the society but also by every friend interested in its welfare.

CALLS PEARY SELFISH

Henson Registers a Kick Against Alleged "Shabby Treatment"

Syracuse, N. Y., March 12.—Matt Hensen, lecturing in this city on his trip to the North Pole with Commander Peary, expressed indignation at what he termed Peary's "shabby treatment" of him since their return to this country.

"I am very much surprised at him," Hensen said. "Since we landed in New York on Oct. 3 he has paid no attention to me, and has not even communicated with me. After the hardships we went through together and the work I have done for him, not mentioning the number of times I actually saved his life, I think he should do more than he has.

"It is all on account of his selfishness. He wants everything for himself and evidently begrudges me what little success I have been having with my lectures."

SLAVE TRADER SCORED

Too Vile to Associate With Convicts, Declares New York Judge

New York, March 12.—"You are such a low, vile creature that I believe the convicts in Sing Sing prison, where you are going, will shun you as they would the plague, saying, as in days of old: 'Room for the leper, room.'"

This severe castigation was hurled by Judge Foster at Charles R. DeWolfe, a self-confessed white slave trader, who came up for sentence for slashing the throat of Flora Thompson, whom he brought from Boston.

DeWolfe was given a term of not less than two years and three months, or not more than four years and seven months.

The Wollaston Kindergarten committee announce a meeting on Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the vestry of the Congregational church. Miss Caroline D. Aborn Director of Public Kindergartens in Boston will be the speaker. Miss Aborn's subject will be "The story as a factor in the spiritual life of the child." The public is cordially invited to attend this meeting.

NO ARREST IS MADE

Lumber Dealer Fatally Wounds Former Employe With a Club

Norridgewock, Me., March 12.—Threatened, it is claimed, with assault by Ernest Warren, a former employe, George Harlow, a lumber dealer, knocked the man down with a club, fracturing his skull and injuring him so severely that he may die.

Harlow told the authorities that he had discharged Warren, who had worked at Harlow's sawmill at Martin stream, three miles from here.

After his discharge, Warren, according to Harlow, drank heavily, and while intoxicated attempted to attack his former employer.

Harlow was forced to strike him in self protection, he said. No arrest was made, the authorities accepting Harlow's version of the affair.

REAL CANADIAN NAVY

Passage of Bill Creating One by and For the Dominion

Ottawa, March 12.—The Canadian government has carried through the second reading of its bill for the construction of a Dominion navy by a solid party majority of forty-one.

The measure has been unsuccessfully fought by the Conservative opposition for a month, first by an amendment substituting a contribution to Great Britain of two dreadnaughts, then by a proposed plebiscite on the question of the building of a Canadian navy, and finally by a motion to kill the bill.

The last vote finally and irrevocably commits the Canadian government to the creation of a navy independent of Great Britain.

POLICE HUNT FOR WOMAN BOOKKEEPER

Disappeared When Accounts Were to Be Examined

Worcester, Mass., March 12.—Miss Mary B. Kane, who for twelve years was bookkeeper of the Hyland Mattress company, is among the missing. Her books are being examined by auditors. While no shortage has been detected, the auditors says they are unable to reconcile the statements of the books with the vouchers, because of the laxity with which the books were kept.

Miss Kane dissappeared at a time, it is said, when she knew that the company contemplated making an assignment to its creditors, which would ultimately result in an examination of her accounts. Captain O'Day of the Worcester detective bureau has been requested to apprehend the missing bookkeeper.

Immediately after Miss Kane's disappearance, the Hyland Mattress company made assignment to its creditors.

STATEHOOD BILL FAVORED

Mexican Voters In New States Are Not to Be Disfranchised

Washington, March 12.—The Arizona and New Mexico statehood bill has been ordered favorably reported by the senate committee on territories. Amendments were adopted which will permit all citizens who have resided in the territories for one year or more to vote on the ratification of the constitutions of the proposed states.

The effect of this will be to enact election qualifications in the form in which they existed prior to the recent acts of the territorial legislatures, which had the effect of disfranchising certain classes of citizens, notably Mexicans.

VIGOROUS RUN IS ENDED

Cleveland Bank Peddled Out Money In Record Time

Cleveland, March 12.—After as vigorous a run on a banking house as has ever been known in Cleveland, the depositors of the Society for Savings regained their equilibrium, and the panic is over.

In the two days and a half that the run lasted, $1,250,000 was withdrawn, at the rate of $1225 a minute. As the majority of the depositors affected were small ones, hundreds amounting to less than $100, the record made by the bank in handling this withdrawal is regarded as remarkable.

Rough Riders to Greet Roosevelt

Oklahoma City, March 12.—Charles E. Hunter, commander of the Rough Riders, has issued a call for every member of the regiment to meet in New York city on June 16 to join in welcoming former President Roosevelt on his arrival from Africa. The Rough Rider veterans number about 600.

Will Fight Wright Suits

Paris, March 12.—Henry and Maurice Farman announce their intention of sending a lawyer to the United States to aid them in contesting the suits for the infringement of patent rights instituted against the aviators by Wilbur and Orville Wright.

Reservoir Gives Way

Denver, March 12.—The reservoir of the Julesburg Reservation district gave way, flooding a large section and causing much damage.

QUINCY PLAN IN FAVOR

Gives Banquets to Men Who Do Things

The Lynn Item comments as follows:

The Commercial Bulletin says that Quincy has discovered a better way to boom business than the dinner habit. Admiral Bowles, who is the head of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. needed new business for his plant. He did not ask the business men of Quincy to hold a public meeting or to give a banquet, but he packed his grip, went to South America, where the business was, made it his business to get the business, got it and brought it home with him. That is how it happened that Massachusetts is building ships for South America.

The Bulletin says that "Sixteen political campaigns and 45 banquets to owl-eyed statesmen have not accomplished as much for the business of Boston harbor as this simple sailor has done by smart, direct canvassing." But Admiral Bowles has a better chance to get business than the men of Boston referred to by the ex-Governor.

Still, it is his personal equation that solves the problem. Banquets have their uses and public meetings are not to be despised, but after all it is the hustler who gets right out and hustles that produces results. The Bowles idea is not overlooked in Lynn, and our Board of Trade is not satisfied with merely dining and addressing those who are in a position to help our city and secure improvements.

A town or a city can only progress by the use of methods which brings success to private enterprises. When a man or a body of men is found who are willing to help along public enterprises they should be encouraged rather than criticised and obstructed. The community which backs up such men is bound to prosper. It will progress where indifferent communities can only exist.

Quincy, however, was not unappreciative of the work done by Admiral Bowles, for last Tuesday night the people of the city gave him a great reception. And well they might, for about $3,000,000 in wages alone will be disbursed by his company in the next two years.

Quincy gives a banquet, but it is to the man who does things, and not to men from whom they expect things and are sometimes disappointed.

NEW BRITISH WARSHIPS.

The British Navy estimates for 1910, which have just been issued by the Admiralty, provide for an expenditure of $203,018,500, an increase of $27,805,000 over 1909. The increase in almost wholly taken up by shipbuilding armaments authorized by Parliament before dissolution. The new programme provides for five large armored ships five protected cruisers, twenty destroyers and a considerable number of submarines. By April 1 there will be under construction seven battleships, three armored nine protected and two unarmored cruisers, thirty-seven destroyers and nine submarine.

BATHHOUSE WANTED.

It is perhaps not generally known that there is a bill before the Legislature calling for an appropriation of $10,000 to erect a sanitary building on the Quincy Shore boulevard at Wollaston beach, and that a hearing has already been held on the bill. It is understood that an effort is being made by some in the legislature to cut the amount to $5,000. A sanitary building on the shore of Wollaston beach is something that has long been needed, and the bill ,if it does not already provide for it, should be amended so that it should include a public bath house.

There are a number of private bath houses along the beach at the present time about which have more or less trouble with the park commission, and it has been rumored that this year the owners of these bath houses will be obliged to move them quite a distance back from the beach. If not too late ,the City Council should instruct the representatives from Quincy not only to vote for the $10,000 bill, but to see to it that the bill carries with it a provision for the erection of a bath house.

TO STOP NOTARY FRAUDS

No More Certificates In Bay State Without Rigid Examination

Boston, March 12.—Governor Draper and his executive council have shut the doors against the appointment of any more notaries public without a rigid examination and investigation. The action of the council will have international significance.

The reason for the action is on account of the discovery that wholesale frauds are beng perpetrated by numbers of newly made American citizens upon their countrymen.

In France and Italy a notary is held in as high esteem as a judge. The Massachusetts certificate, engraved and signed by the governor with the seal of the commonwealth, is quite as imposing a looking document as a certificate of admission to practice in the supreme court of the United States.

NOT WORRYING OVER IT

New York Assemblyman Receives a Real "Black Hand" Letter

New York, March 12.—Assemblyman Walker of the Fifth assembly district has received a letter in which he is warned that he will be murdered unless he abandons a bill which he has introduced in the legislature to amend so as to prohibit marriages "between the white, or Caucasian, race and the black, or negro, race." The letter, dated New York, says:

"If your bill to prevent negroes and whites from exercising their personal liberty to marry becomes a law, you and your family will be killed. You will be as helpless as the negroes whom you persecute. X. R."

Mr. Walker says he is not greatly worried.

TOWN PRODUCE SOLD, NO RECORD KEPT

Other Irregularities Are Discovered In Southbridge

Southbridge, Mass., March 12.—Further complications in the accounts of John A. Hall, ex-town treasurer and ex-cashier of the Southbridge Savings bank, are indicated in the second report of Accountant Campbell to the selectmen. These suggested irregularities are in the collection of sewer assessments, which were left with Hall for collection. Campbell finds that there is nothing to show how much money in sewer assessments has been paid or remains unpaid.

Mr. Campbell also finds that the overseers of the poor have no adequate accounts, and that there is no record of the amounts received for produce raised at the town farm, neither is there any account of expenditures.

Other irregularities are pointed out in the highway department, where it appears that one official received pay as highway surveyor and pay for contract work, as well as pay for himself and a team for all but six days of last year.

Meyer Gives the Navy Service a General Shaking Up

Washington, March 12.—The approaching retirement for age of Rear Admiral Swift, commander of the Charlestown navy yard when the fracas occurred in a ballroom which resulted in the famous court martial of Paymaster Auld and Surgeon Robnett, caused a shift in navy circles yesterday. Secretary of the Navy Meyer changed eight rear admirals and three captains.

Rear Admiral Swift is assigned to special duty at the navy department. How long this will continue is unknown, as March 17 is the date when the admiral was expected to be retired for age.

RECONCILIATION IS PRICE OF CHILDREN

Warren Expresses Penitence and Love For His Wife

Boston, March 12.—"I took the children because I cannot live without you. If you will agree to a reconciliation I will return with Phyllis and Adrienne."

This was the message which Franklin H. Warren, the Broad street business man, sent to his wife, whose pending divorce suit resulted in a kidnapping in Dorchester.

There was no address given to which Mrs. Warren might send a reply. Instead, she was told that lawyers representing Warren would communicate with her attorneys, and that if her decision was favorable the children would be returned. Warren also made the stipulation that he would come with the children. He expressed penitence for what had happened and declared that if again acknowledged as her husband he would prove himself worthy.

Mrs. Warren is undecided as to her course. If, after several days, a search for the children proves unavailing Mrs. Warren will, it is said, agree to a reconciliation for the sake of her children.

POLICEMEN ON STRIKE

They Object to "Slicking Up" and Quitting the Use of Tobacco

Rutherford, N. J., March 12.—The police force of this city has gone on strike and the city is being patrolled by members of the fire department.

The eleven policemen objected to orders compelling them to purchase spring helmets, keep their shields and buttons polished and prohibiting the use of chewing tobacco while on duty.

They refused to go to work, and the mayor suspended them and called for volunteer policemen from the fire companies. Fifty men responded, but only twelve were selected.

By our lonely fireside
There stands a vacant chair
He who so long filled it
Is an angel fair.

Fitted fair for Heaven
Then to dwell with man
God who gave him to us
Call him home again .

He was gentle, pure and lovely
Humble, meek and mild
Pure and uncomplaining
Was this little child.

Loved by all that knew him
Good beyond compare
All that is left to us
Is his vacant chair.

John W West of Commercial street was so unfortunate as to have his office burnt out in the fire on Summer street, Boston, last Sunday.

The recent rains have put the river above the high water mark and hardly a person passes over the bridge on Commercial street but stops to look at it as it dashes madly through the culvert. It is a sight worth seeing.

Miss Frederika Parker had a very agreeable surprise party. She was getting ready to go out to attend a surprise party of one of her friends, when 18 of her classmates and friends dropped in and presented her with a handsome locket and chain. At the conclusion of the exercises Mr. Loud has consented to give a short recital.

—The boards of trade in all Maine cities have undertaken a crusade to reduce the selling price of potatoes after they have left the farms'. It is significant that such a move is undertaken. It is unlike any other on the list. The commercial men claim that the dealers have affixed fancy prices to Maine potatoes this season that are not warranted by the selling prices accepted by the producers. Maine is a thinking State.—Worcester Telegram.

The monthly meeting of the Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church will be held Tuesday evening at 7.30 in the parish house.

The Old Colony Street Railway Company has purchased six acres of land in Brockton next to the Brockton Fair grounds, on which they will erect a large car barn.

To conduct the business of Christ church more systematically the vestry has divided into the following committees: Church and grounds, Messrs. Holden, Stedman, Holbrook; purchasing agent, W. W. Osborne. A meeting of the committees will be held Monday evening.

Reapers' circle of Christ church has arranged for an entertainment on Easter Monday evening when Miss Rosabelle Temple of Boston will give a musical lecture.

The Wollaston Kindergarten committee extends a cordial invitation to friends to attend a public meeting to be held in the vestry of the Wollaston Congregational church on Monday evening, March 14th, at eight o'clock. Miss Caroline D. Aborn, Director of Public Kindergartens in Boston, will speak, her subject being, "The Story as a Factor in the Spiritual Life of the Child."

Starr Murphy Says Charity Is Thus Best Bestowed

THE ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION

Desire to Avoid Limitations In Benefiting Humanity Throughout the World—Philanthropy to Be Carried On In Strictly Business Manner—Senate Committee Unanimously In Favor of Bill Reported by Gallinger

Washington, March 12.—Philanthropy which will be systematic, scientific and world-wide in its scope is the object sought by John D. Rockefeller by means of the Rockefeller Foundation, according to Starr J. Murphy, a member of the general education board, who appeared before the senate committee on the District of Columbia in support of the bill introduced by Senator Gallinger incorporating the Foundation.

Mr. Murphy not only explained the motives which actuated Rockefeller in proposing to distribute on a more elaborate scale than has heretofore been attempted, but discussed the criticisms which have been directed at the bill since its introduction in the senate. He was unable to enlighten the committee as to the amount of money which Rockefeller would ultimately place at the disposal of the officials of the Foundation, but expressed the opinion that if precedents counted for anything the funds would be ample to enable the Foundation to carry on its work throughout the world in a most satisfactory manner.

Mr. Murphy told the committee at the outset of his remarks that the language of the incorporating bill was necessarily indefinite, because of the desire of the donor to have the scope of the proposed work to be without limitation of any kind. That the bill was not unprecedented, said Murphy, was indicated by the fact that it was almost word for word like the act under which the general education board was incorporated, the only changes made being those necessary to allow the Foundation to enter into almost every field of endeavor for the benefit of humanity.

Mr. Murphy explained to the committee that it was the intention of Rockefeller to have the Foundation which bears his name prepared to cope with the situations as time goes on.

"The charities of the nineteenth century," he said, "will not be the charities of the twentieth century. The dead hand should be removed from charitable bequests, and they should be left in the hands of living men. It is impossible to define the scope of the work proposed by the donor, and it is his desire to avoid limitations.

"There is more danger in giving unwisely," said Murphy, "than in not giving at all. The donor of this Foundation always insists upon the same investigation and care in his works of philanthrophy as he demands when making a business investment from which he expects cash dividends. In this instance he expects that his dividends will not be in cash but hopes to get dividends in the shape of the welfare of humanity."

After Murphy had concluded his statement to the committee, Senator Carter mildly objected to a provision of the bill which exempted from taxation personal property. Murphy said it was not the intention of the drafters of the bill to convey that idea, only on the District of Columbia, territories and all places where the federal government exercised jurisdiction. He added that there would be no objection to amending the bill for the purpose of making that clearer, and this was done at an executive session of the committee, immediately following which the committee voted unanimously to report the bill favorably to the senate.

ARBITRATION IS DEMANDED

Philadelphia Strikers Turn Their Attention to Washington

Washington, March 12.—The president has received an appeal from E. E. Greenwalt, president of the State Federation of Labor of Pennsylvania, requesting federal intervention to terminate the strike in Philadelphia.

Similar telegrams are understood to have been received by Senators Penrose and Oliver.

The president will refer the matter to the department of commerce and labor, with the direction that Commissioner of Labor Neill shall make an immediate investigation and report for his guidance.

The telegrams sent to the two Pennsylvania senators are identical, and are as follows:

"Justice, as well as we, demand that the carmen's strike in Philadelphia be submitted to arbitration at once, and that as an official representative of the people of Pennsylvania you immediately use your official influence toward this end."

Both of the Pennsylvania senators are in New York and are not expected in Washington until Monday. It will be impossible for them, therefore, to take any steps in the matter before that time.

It is the impression here that Neill will be dispatched to Philadelphia to make a personal investigation of the strike conditions for the president. The government may be influenced to intervene if Neill finds that such a step is advisable.

Call For Arbitration

Philadelphia, March 12.—The demands for arbitration of the differences between the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company and its 4000 or more striking employes have become insistent, from within Philadelphia and outside of it.

Everywhere it is recognized that the failure to arrive at an arbitral agreement is the only thing which stands in the way of a speedy calling off of the sympathetic strike which has practically paralyzed the city's industrial life, and which the labor leaders again threaten they will extend if the deadlock continues.

Those threats, perhaps, are the very things which stand in the way of an amicable adjustment. The "vested interests," as they are sometimes slightingly alluded to by partisans, but nevertheless, under present conditions, a decided factor in the situation, resent the hint of coercion.

At a representative meeting of business men the call for arbitration was they keynote of a two and a half hours' debate, which culminated in demands upon both local and national influences to set in motion forces to bring the traction dispute before mediatory tribunals for settlement.

TRENTON STRIKE ENDS

Street Car Men's Demands Granted After Two Days' Battle

Trenton, March 12.—The strike of the employes of the Trenton Street Railway company, which has been in force two days, was settled last evening, the men getting practically everything they asked for. The demand was for an increase of 18½ to 23 cents an hour. This was granted.

All of the strikers are to be reinstated and all future grievances be submitted to arbitration between accredited officials of the company and employes.

Union Men Walk Out of International Plant at Bellows Falls

Bellows Falls, Vt., March 12.—Obedient to orders received from the Papermakers' union headquarters in Watertown, N. Y., 250 union employes at the local plant of the International Paper company went on strike.

The strike, while primarily an extension of the walkouts at the International Paper company's New York state plants, also involves local grievances which the strikers here wish to have corrected.

TIMOTHY D. WOODRUFF

MACHINE WINS IN NEW YORK

Cobb Installed as President Pro Tem of Senate

RAP AT ROOT AND HUGHES

Their Appeal, as Well as Influence of Federal Administration at Washington In Behalf of Hinman, Unable to Overcome Forces Headed by Woodruff—State Senators Resent "Butting In" That Might Discredit Them

Albany, March 12.—Senator George H. Cobb of Watertown was formally elected and installed as president pro tem of the senate yesterday. Obeying the decision of a caucus the Republican members voted for him unanimously, but those who fought his selection for six hours Thursday night made it clear that they would not have favored him yesterday if they had not felt bound by caucus action.

In accepting the office, Cobb made an absolute declaration of independence. To the great surprise of those who remembered the statement he issued Thursday afternoon declaring his respect for Senator Root, he said yesterday: "I owe allegiance to my constituents and to this senate and to no other person or persons." The Root-Hughes senators took their medicine with wry faces.

The telegram which United States Senator Root sent from Washington, urging the election of Senator Hinman, the appeal in Hinman's behalf by Governor Hughes at the eleventh hour, and the influence of the federal administration at Washington, proved unavailing against the organization forces, headed by Chairman Woodruff of the Republican state committee.

The result of Cobb's election are far-reaching. Although, ostensibly, Cobb's victory is a triumph for Woodruff and the state organization, the beaten side declares that Woodruff's influence was less responsible for what happened than the will of the individual senators.

Viewing the battleground, some of them confess that Root had made a mistake in conveying his orders to elect Hinman in so open a manner.

The publicity given Root's telegram of Tuesday night was intentional; its object was to show the people of the state that affairs at Albany were most unsatisfactory to the party leaders and to Hughes and that there must be a new deal. The state senators, however, bitterly resented dictation in a manner that might discredit their own importance and authority with their constituents.

Ever since Governor Hughes took office an effort has been made to break up the coalition of the local bosses. How well this effort succeeded was one of the things shown by Cobb's election. Having destroyed the power of some of the county and district leaders, the administration at Washington found itself without means to reach the state senators. The local leaders who have retained their power rallied around Woodruff, and Cobb was chosen not so much because the organization regarded him an ideal candidate as because he was the strongest weapon with which to defeat Root and the governor.

How much Cobb's victory has gained for the old regime is difficult to settle. Whether it has strengthened the weakening grip of Woodruff to the extent of assuring his re-election is a proposition few of the senators feel ready to affirm.

Many a Quincy Reader Will Feel Grateful for This Information.

When your back gives out;
Becomes lame, weak or aching;
When urinary troubles set in,
Your kidneys are "in a bad way."
Doan's Kidney Pills will cure you.
Here is local evidence to prove it:

Mrs. F. Olsen, 197 Whitwell Street, Quincy, Mass., says: "For some time my back was weak and gave me a great deal of trouble. I could not sit up in a chair for more than a few minutes at a time without having severe pains in my back. I was also subject to headaches and dizzy spells and at times was very nervous. I was becoming discouraged when Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention. I procured a box at the Cox Drug Store and through their use received immediate relief. I did not expect to be speedily cured, as my condition was so serious, but I can say that the results could not have been more satisfactory. In a few weeks I was restored to good health. Doan's Kidney Pills certainly have my highest endorsement."

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Shrill Shrieking Honk-Honk Contraptions Startle Bay State Solons—A Great Summer School That Will Keep Open All Winter—Automobilists Make Lively Times on Boston's Avenue of Many Religions—Outlanders from Manywhere Form Cosmopolitan Club—A Connecticut Choral Club Honors a Boston Trained Composer.

Lament the passing of the horse again. Our equine friend had little consideration in the Hub this week, with two automobile shows in full swing. The extensive floors of the Mechanics building were insufficient to accommodate all who clamored to exhibit their machines, so that those who were unable to get space opened an "over-flow" show in the old Museum of fine Arts, Copley square, but a few steps from the Mechanics building. With honking and tooting of machines giving demonstration trips about the neighborhood, and the constant surging of the crowds of spectators between the two exhibitions the avenue of many religions lacks what you would call a Sunday aspect.

Boston may be provincial but it at least has a Cosmopolitan club, just organized at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, with a membership now numbering over 50 students, all of whom hail from distant climes. The club was formed for purpose of obviating the loneliness which is inevitable for foreign students in a strange country, many of them speaking few or no English words.

Democracy is notable in the selection of officers. The president of the club is Eugene Olaf Christiansen, of Norway, the two vice presidents being Manual Adrian Navarro of Quito, Equador, and Heenan Fungching Shen of Foochow, China. The secretary-treasurer is David St. Pierre Gaillard of Culebra, Panama, while Dean Alfred Burton of West Newton, Professor Desire Despradelle of France and Gorton James of Brookline make up the council. One-third of the membership may be composed of Americans, and the waiting list for admittance to this club is a long one. There are royal good times at the rooms on Boylston street near the Institute, and nothing but the best of fellowship between the representatives of the many foreign nations.

Pride in Boston trained musical composers Hubbites have a right to feel, for some such glory as the great literary people of fifty years ago brought to the American Athens is now conferred by distinguished musicians. One of the latest to be specially honored is Henry Hadley, chosen to receive the $1,000 honorarium which the Litchfield County Choral club appropriates for a choral or orchestral work to receive its initial performance at one of the club's concerts. Mr. Hadley's new work will be the third of this Connecticut organization's series, the two previous works having been written by Horatio Parker, professor of music at Yale University, and George W. Chadwick, director of the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston. Mr. Hadley, who is now settled in the northwest as conductor of the Seattle symphony orchestra—a good example of the opportunities that come to the well educated young American musician these days—is distinctly of the New England Conservatory school of composers. He was born in Somerville in 1874, where his father was a well known professional musician. He studied composition with Mr. Chadwick in Boston and later went abroad. He taught for a time at St. Paul's school, Garden City, and for a number of years was conductor of the opera at Mayence, Germany, where his opera "Safie" was produced. Still in his thirties, he has written overtures, symphonies, cantatas, and more than 150 songs. His tone poem "Salome", a vigorous work for orchestra based on the tradegy of that name, has an international reputation. He has taken the New England Conservatory prize for composition, the Paderewski prize and, last year, one of the prizes offered by the National Federation of Musical Clubs, the other prize going to Arthur Shepherd, a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music and a member of its faculty. That a musician with a series of successes to his credit should be selected by the Litchfield people is only natural. The prizes offered by the musical profession these days are such as to make young Americans take notice.

A new scheme to benefit sufferers from the good old summer days is advocated by a leading Boston architect. This ingenious man would utilize the roofs of the city ferry houses on both sides of the harbor for recreation spots where those people who cannot leave town may at least get a refreshing breath of air and a bit of relaxation as they watch the big and little boats make their intricate way in and out of the harbor. Strangers are often surprised to note the number of clerks, shop girls and other toilers who seek the edge of the harbor in the hot weather, invading the piers, hanging over the bridge railings and seeking out every foot hold where a cooling breeze may be expected to find its way. Mr. Newhall, the architect who has this proposition in mind, sees no reason why the roofs of the ferry house or any other buildings suitable could not be arranged at small cost as roof gardens for those who most need them. The North End pier and the Marine Park pier have indisputably demonstrated the need of such breathing spots.

The sacred right of splitting ears has been called into question in Massachusetts. The Solons on Beacon hill who compose the committee of roads and bridges have been treated to an anomalous entertainment at a hearing in the interest of a bill to prevent certain kinds of automobile horns and screechers. They had to listen to a roof raising demonstration. This ordeal may be imagined. The familiar "honk-honk" is bearable, but some of the ingenious contrapations gotten up to clear the road of disregardful pedestrians are enough to make a man with heart trouble drop dead in his tracks. Some of the musical horns which resemble bugle calls, modulated orchestras, and which if kept going long enough might perform whole symphony concerts are not in the least objectionable, but the people of the Hub are hoping fervently that the outrageous nuisances attached to some of the "devil-wagons" may be finally disposed of. Steam locomotive and fire engine whistles, to say nothing of piercing sirens, are not conducive to calm and restful slumber in the early morning hours.

The workshop laborer's college education is foreshadowed in the plans of certain distinguished educators hereabouts. Erclusive old Harvard has started a "department of university extension," and this is but the beginning of a combination of the brains of Harvard, Boston university, Technology, Tufts college Simmons college, Wellesley college, Boston college, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and last, but by no means least, the Lowell institute. The idea is to make the "summer school" a practical winter school—a gathering place for all that the great educational centres can furnish. Here the boy or man who wants more than a common school education, but who cannot go to college, may obtain the knowledge he requires, and may receive his training from the highest educators of the land. The first step in this direction was taken last fall by President Lowell of Harvard university. The establishment of the new department at Harvard is the outcome of the investigations of his committee. Beginning with September, 1910, the office boy, the laborer, the apprentice, may obtain by work out of his shop hours, an education equal to that of the wealthy man's son.

RUBE'S SPORTING CHAT

The recent performances of our idol, "Babe" Marceau, recalls to several of the older readers of this column, some of the great matches they used to view in the Town Hall (now City Hall) when "Dennie" Carney, Frank Wall and other lesser lights lined up. Those days of the running matches, square heel and toe walking contests, were happy ones and many would like to see them again in vogue. "Dennie" Carney, by the way, lives in South Braintree and today is the picture of health.

Weymouth gained another point on Norfolk Downs in the Old Colony bowling league games this week, and now has a seven point lead over the ones we are rooting for. The Weymouths must take an awful slump to let us win out, but win or lose, the Downs boys have made a fine run for the prize in the face of many hardships.

John J. McGraw's official baseball guide for 1910 just published is one of the most complete books of the kind ever issued. It contains everything that is of interest to the enthusiasts and a special feature is a chapter on the famous spit ball, with illustrations showing how that wonderful curve can be mastered. The guide has many full page illustrations and contains instructions how to play every position on a nine, and a feature is made of the art of pitching a curved ball. It has all the official rules for the post-season championship games, schedule of the season's games, averages and standing of all the leagues. It is No. 18 of Fox's Athletic Library and will be sent to any address for 10 cents with 4 cents extra to pay postage, Address, Richard K. Fox, Franklin Square, New York City. Better send for one, they are "all to the good."

Will Poland and Lyonsand Grant and Dahl be ready with their five spots Monday evening? The championship must be decided now, and the team that quits should be counted out of all future contests. Come on boys, pick out your balls and let us hear them roar previous to the music of the pins as they drop.

The Coddington school is to be congratulated upon having such a fine headmaster as Mr. Bentley. He recently issued a call for candidates for the baseball nine and 28 responded. Let us also hope Dr. Smith's idea of forming a grammar school league succeeds. If I can help it let me know.

Harold Prout, Q. H. S. '11, wants the other class teams to challenge the 1911 baseball and track teams. What is the matter with the others, afraid to take a beating?

John B. Bjorkland, the manager of the Quincy club, has been appointed an electrical draftsman in the department of the schoolhouse commission, Boston, by Mayor Fitzgerald. Bjorkland is the supporter of a crippled father and surely deserves all the good things said about him. It is not good luck that follows him. It is that live or die spirit.

RUBE.

—A decision has been handed down by the full bench of the Supreme Court to the effect that the New England Sanitarium, located in the Middlesex Fells, is a charitable institution and is exempt from taxation. Under that decision the town of Stoneham will have to refund $2,500 tax money paid by the institution under protest in 1907.

PICKPOCKETS

known in police circles as Big Nose Brown; James Grant, who claims his home in Boston and James Ryan who says that his home is in Keene, N. H., and that he has been in Boston but a few days. He claims that he does not know the other two men and that he was thrown among them accidentally.

Suspecting that pickpockets might visit the Fore River this morning, to work the crowd about the launch, Inspector McKay and Officer Larkin were among the witnesses and mingled with the crowd. Both were in citizens dress and their appearance therefore would not excite any comment.

They got their eye on the trio at the works and when they left to take a car for Quincy the officers followed them. The men boarded the car due to leave Newcomb Square at 11.55. This was a small car and was crowded to the doors, the fare register recording 75 passengers.

The two officers rode on the rear platform and kept their eyes open. It is alleged that they saw the men trying to work the crowd, and they made ready to nab the men, intending to apprehend them when the car reached Quincy. Just after leaving the Scammell turnout, one of the men left the car. This is the man the officers allege that tried to part one of the passengers from his money.

As soon as the man left car, which was then in motion, Inspector McKay jumped after him and gave chase. Dan does not claim to be a sprinter, but he was soon able to overhaul the fellow and place him under arrest. The chase although brief was exciting and the crowd on the car watched it with interest.

When the car reached the Daily Ledger office the other men tried to get off, claiming that they were anxious to get the 12.12 train for Boston. Owing to the crush however they were kept on the car until City Square was reached where Officer Larkin nabbed them as they left the car. Grabbing them by the collar, one in each hand he marched them to the patrol box and sent them to the station.

Boston and suburban towns are overrun with the light fingered gentry just at the present time, and it was only a few days ago that passengers on a Wollaston car were relieved of their valuables by pickpockets. The officers have ,therefore, been on the lookout for suspicious characters, and it was for this purpose that they decided to take in the launching this morning. The three men will be arraigned in court Monday morning.

TODAY'S COURT.

WHY SOME ARE BALD.

Seeing Thomas Bone, the missionary, approaching one day, one of a group of sailors announced his intention of having some fun. He stepped forward and removed his hat, revealing a perfectly smooth crown, and asked:

"Can you tell me why my head is so bald, while all my companions have plenty of hair?"

"I don't know," was the smiling reply, "unless the reason given me the other day by a farmer would apply, that an empty barn is not worth shingling!"—Youth's Companion.

Knicker—"Strange they didn't name the baby after its rich uncle."

Bocker—"No; he looked at it and said he'd give them $10,000 not to."—Harper's Bazar.

Vol. 24 No. 61 QUINCY, MASS. MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 14, 1910 PRICE TWO CENTS

ALLEGED PICKPOCKETS ARRAIGNED IN COURT

Two Men Held for a Hearing Next Monday---Third Man a Witness

Thought to be Connected with Wollaston Car Thefts

Edward B. Howard and James Grant, two of the three alleged pickpockets arrested Saturday by Inspector McKay and Officer Larkin, were arraigned in court this morning. The third man James Ryan was released Saturday but was in court this morning as a witness.

Howard and Grant were each arrainged on two complaints, one for larceny from the person of W. J. Berry and the other charging them with being vagabonds. The two defendants were represented by William F. Murray of the Governor's council, who waived the reading of the complaints and pleaded not guilty. The cases were then continued until next Monday each defendant being held in $1,500.

Ryan, the third man, was evidently a victim of circumstances. His home is in New Hampshfre and he was a guest of his uncle, Sergt. Harmon of the Somerville police force. Learning that there was to be a launching at the Fore River Saturday he decided to come out and see it. He was unable to gain admission to the yard. He saw four men, two of whom were the defendants Howard and Grant, near the office of the Fore River, and thinking them reporters decided to remain near them, hoping to be able to gain admission to the yard. He, therefore saw more or less of the actions of the two men and when the arrest came, he being near them, was unfortunate enough to get arrested.

He communicated with his uncle Sergt. Harmon, who came to Quincy and after explanations he was released with the understanding that he should be produced in court this morning as a witness.

The other witnesses against the men were W. J. Berry, who had his pocket picked a week ago Sunday on the car between Quincy and Neponset, and Conductor Beck of the car. It is understood that both Mr. Berry and the conductor recognized one of the two as being one of the parties who committed the pocket picking on that car.

Another witness was a Mr. Brown, the local representative of the Bethlehem Steel Co., who was unfortunate enough to be the victim last Saturday to the tune of $130. Mr. Brown came to Quincy on the 11.55 car via way of Quincy avenue, but did not miss his money until he had reached the hotel. He was one of the passengers who tried to leave the car in front of the Daily Ledger office. There was a mixup and he was unable to leave as he desired but was pushed back into the car. It is thought that this was the time when his pocket was picked.

It is evident from the statement of the Ryan boy that there were four in the gang and that two of them evaded the police and got away. It was probably one of these two who got Mr. Brown's money. Mr. Brown looked over the two men in the cage at the court this morning, but did not state whether he recognized them or not.

Since the announcement in Saturday's Ledger of the arrest of the two men on suspicion of being pickpockets, several cases have come to light of Quincy people who have been the victims of this class of thieves. Some of theses persons think that their pocket was picked in Boston and others that they had their property taken on the local street cars. It is probable, however, that all of the thieving was done in Quincy as the city has evidently been the stamping ground for a gang of pickpockets since the night of the banquet to Admiral Bowles.

Just what evidence the police have against the two men was not given out but will probably come out at the hearing next Monday.

YES, BOOM NEW ENGLAND

Not Only in Shipbuilding But in Apple Growing

New England-grown apples, large and rosy and with a flavor that growers in other sections have sought in vain to secure, are being exhibited by the Boston Chamber of Commerce in a prominent window on Washington Street. They prove that New England can hold her own in competition with the West when western methods are used, and they offer an incentive to commercial orchardizing in many places in this section where it has not yet been tried.

The exhibit is drawing crowds daily, and many persons are taking away copies of the report on "The future of the New England farm" issued by the Chamber's Committee on Agriculture. In connection with this apple exhibit, the Chamber has posted signs giving convincing statistics of the profits that growers in all six of the New England States are making.

As a result of its investigations, the committee on agriculture has become very optimistic in regard to the future of agriculture and horticulture in New England. The committee has found scattered through different States and in a great variety of sections, many instances of positive success, where farmers, particularly those who specialize, are really making money, and a good deal of money, today. These are men each of whom have adopted some one branch of farming and have made it a careful study, so that they have become experts in that particular line and have carried it to a high state of perfection.

The committee has especially investigated apple raising, and found that there seems to be no question that all the New England states have successful orchards, but that these are scattered. For instance, a farmer in Charlotte, Vermont, on 100 acres of apples has received a gross income of $18,000 in 1909, which, estimating his expenses to be about $4,000, shows a net margin of about $14,000. He writes also that 40 acres of this orchard has not yet come to its full maturity and he expects better figures later on.

There are numerous other instances of very successful apple raising on both large and small scales. For instance, the town of Buckfield, Maine, has shipped over 10,000 barrels of apples in 1909 while the value of apples shipped from Shelburne Falls, Mass., on this crop is $100,000.

The hope and desire of the committee is that the farmers of New England who have from one to ten acres of apples will deem it worth while to adopt modern methods and renovate them, for it is proven beyond a doubt that orchards thus brought up by modern methods can be made to yield a gross income of from $200 to $300 an acre in three or four years.

It is evident that if New England agriculture is properly advertised the value of our farm lands will increase, for information has come from the Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture of Vermont, that some twenty farms have been bought in Vermont by people coming from western states.

The tide has actually turned, and it is reasonable to suppose that the western farmer will look toward the East in the very near future, rather than pay the extremely high prices for western land. All that is necessary is to advertise the great possibilities here so close to the great markets of the East.

The western fruit growers have organized themselves into associations not only for the sale of fruit, but for advertising and sale of land; and they have carried that system to an extremely high point of excellence. If we could do one-fourth as well in advertising our New England opportunities there would be a sharp demand for our farms here in the East. Just as soon as our city people realize that there is money in farming it is self-evident that they will turn in that direction.

STEERING GEAR SMASHED

Collier Everett Will Require New Steering Engine

With her steering gear smashed the big collier Everett, owned by the New England coal and coake company, which left Boston Saturday morning in command of Capt. Abbott for Baltimore, returned to port early Sunday morning and, assisted by the tugs Zetes and Emily, was pushed into a berth at Commonwealth docks, South Boston, says the Globe.

The accident to the vessel occurred at 3 P. M. Saturday in Pollock rip slue. The steering gear was smashed to pieces, presumably because of some flaw in the casting, and the vessel for a time was not under control. Both the steam and the hand gear were smashed.

Capt. Abbott worked the vessel out of the slue and she stopped for half an hour until a makeshift was rigged. Then by means of tackle attached to the port and starboard windlasses aft and run over the stern to the rudder the big collier was again under control.

It was delicate work putting about and returning to Boston. Men were stationed at both winches, together with engineers to work the winches. The course was shouted from the bridge to the men at the winches, who repeated the orders to the engineers.

Off Cape Cod the vessel encountered a severe gale from northeast, but she came through without further mishap and anchored off the light ship at 2 yesterday morning. At daylight she started for the upper harbor and was met off the dock by the tugs, which assisted her in berthing.

The steamer will require an entire new steering engine. She will be delayed here several days.

EIGHTY-FIFTH BIRTHDAY.

An interesting gathering of children, grand-children and great grand-children, representing four generations, gathered at the home of Thomas Magee, Merryomunt road, Sunday to help him celebrate his 85th birthday anniversary, which occurs March 14. Although expecting that some of the family would call during the day he was somewhat surprised when they began to arrive one by one until at last all were present. Dinner was served at 1.30, and as the last course was reached an immense birthday cake was brought on. This cake was elaborately frosted in the centre being the initials "T. M. 1825-1910." Later in the day the interesting group was photographed. Mr. Magee was remembered with a number of pleasing gifts. Although well along in years Mr. Magee enjoys fairly good health and takes as lively an interest in current events as ever.

DONALD McKENZIE.

Donald McKenzie one of the old-time granite cutters of Quincy, died on Saturday at Dorchester, where he has resided since his daughter has taught school in Boston. His son will be remembered as one of the honor pupils at Quincy High school in 1897. In 1902 when he graduated from Boston University he was regarded as the best Greek and Latin scholar sent out from the school. Later he was master of a High school in Porto Rico, and is now in the Philippines. The funeral of the deceased will be held on Tuesday at 59 Adams street, Dorchester, at 2 P. M.

BRIDESMAID ALSO MARRIED

But Quietly Sought Out Another Minister and Surprised All

The home of Mrs. C. J. Miller, Upland road was the scene of a very pretty wedding Saturday night, when her daughter Miss Dulah Catherine Miller was married to Mr. Robert Bruce Acker of Southold, Long Island. Miss Miller was formerly stenographer at the Y. M. C. A. and Mr. Acker is employed by Fore River Shipbuilding Company.

The Quincy Mandolin Club furnished music during the evening and promptly at eight o'clock the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin were heard. Miss Miller was preceded by her little niece, Alice Miller, as flower girl, and by her bridesmaid Miss Helen B. Kingman. Mr. Victor E. Miller, brother of the bride, accompanied her and gave her away. The groom entered by a side door with the best man Mr. Walter H. Bentley. Rev. Mr. Nies former pastor of Miss Miller's performed the ceremony.

The bride looked charming in her gown of white satin and she carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid wore old rose satin and carried pink roses. The little flower girl carried an armful of carnations.

Among the guests were the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Acker from Long Island. There were many pretty and useful gifts. An original poem by Mrs. M. S. Kingman was appreciated.

Adam in Paradise he roamed,
Alas! Alas! he was alone:
The Lord he saw his lonely state,
And straightway planned for him a mate.
And in the gift he did rejoice
But then you see he had no choice;
No other maid the earth had trod
Unless she walked in My-tic Nod.
Centuries have passed and in this age
The parties they are long engaged
They wait and wait the happy time
To have things suited to their mind.
Tonight a newly-wedded pair
Have pledged their love and lives to share;
We wish them joy and future bliss,
To far exceed the joy of this.
That plenty, love and peace appear
Upon the threshold of each year:
And all things suited to their mind
An Eden in their home to find.
To end it thus I would not dare,
And may God lead this wedded pair;
And Father from thy lofty height
Look down and bless the loved tonight

During the evening refreshments were served, and at 9 o'clock considerable excitement was noticeable as to how the newly married pair were to leave the house. In the midst of the confusion the bridesmaid, Miss Kingman of Maple street and Mr. Benjamin B. Baltzer of Merrymount road left the house quietly and taking an automoble went to Dr. Hardy's residence on Foster street to be married. They were followed in a few minutes by Mr. and Mrs. Acker, who were witnesses of the second ceremony. Miss Kingman was accompanied by her sister Miss Charlotte R. Kingman. The second ceremony was a surprise to everyone although the guests at the first wedding had been told that there was a surprise in store for them.

After the wedding both couples left for their wedding trip, and upon their return will reside in Quincy.

—Previous to 1800, tallow dips and wax candles were the only sources of light; then came gas lighting and about 1850 the oil lamps came, becoming very widely used in the sixties. In 1876 the first arc light was used in a lighthouse and later they were installed for street illumination. The incandescent lamp was discovered by Edison in 1880 and the latest development in electric lighting, the new metal filament lamps, is only about a year old.

QUINCY MAN VICE PRESIDENT

Catholic Federation Takes a Bold Stand

Norfolk county was entitled to 18 delegates at the Federation of Catholic societies in Boston on Sunday and Quincy sent James F. Burke, N. J. Nyhan and James H. Cunningham. Mr. Burke took a prominent part being chairman of the committee on credentials, chairman of the committee on resolutions and was also elected fourth vice president. Resolutions were adopted protesting against all indecencies and anything suggestive of indecency whether it be the stage, moving picture shows, bill boards, postal cards, books or newspapers. We will oppose all unscrupulous men or corporations who are seeking to enrich themselves by providing the indecencies which are put upon the stage and in the moving picture shows whose effect is to corrupt and debase the minds of those who witness them.

Archbishop O'Connell made a vigorous address, pointing out the political mission of the federaation and predicting that in a few years, certainly before it is time to elect another mayor of Boston it will accomplish great results toward purifying state and municipal governments. He also uttered an emphatic protest against the dominance of wealth and urged his hearers to stand forth in honest poverty and meet face to face the mammon in these days when money and all it can purchase is struggling for complete mastery over every phase of human life.

—When the new Massachusetts state college is open for business and a student, without interference with his daily occupation of earning a living, can get an A. B. degree in four years and at an expenditure of about $42.25 a year, perhaps diplomas will become as "thick as autumnal leaves that strow the brooks in Vallombrosa." It is an inviting future that is beckoning Young America.—Christian Science Monitor.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Still they occasionally refer to Philadelphia as "the city of Brotherly Love."

President Taft says he wants to "make good." Make whom good? Surely not Uncle Joe Cannon.

Secretary Meyer will have to be careful not to build his battleships too large for his oceans.

Senator Lodge naturally is indignant at the people who try to haul the tariff into the cost of living investigations.

Mr. Fairbanks has been in Paris three days, and yet war has not broken out between France and the United States.

There are in the United States Senate several men who we are almost sure George Washington would disapprove of if he were here now.

Congress, should exercise moderate discretion in seeing that it does not start so many investigations that they will get in each other's way.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

Those who consider spelling of small account would not be pleased to see the newspapers as careless as themselves in the matter of orthography. To receive a well written letter with the words misspelled gives the correspondent more or less of a shock, and wonderment is expressed that the writer knew no better. Who is to blame? The schools, of course. It was an unfortunate innovation on the school system when the children were taught to read by sight, taking the words without reference to their parts. From the time that this idea was adopted may be noted the decadence of spelling. The boys and girls who went to school a generation or more ago were carefully trained in the art of correct spelling, and today they would not fear the children in any competition like the spelling matches of long ago. Occasionally there is a revival of that exercise, simply as an entertainment or a reminiscence, but it would be a good thing if it could be re-adopted as a part of the regular course of instruction in the schools. Some of our educators are returning to the old system, and we have seen a statement that a country superintendent of schools in another State has planned spelling bees to be held in his jurisdiction, and he has prepared a spelling book for the students to use in the contests. A typewritist who is a poor speller is a burden on her employers, and in endeavoring to perfect herself she realizes the mistake that caused her to neglect this useful branch of knowledge during her school life.—Lynn item.

The lovers of international peace in this country particularly, are up in arms, strange as that may seem, against the increasing size of our naval armament. They apparently forgot that the United States has for several years been embarked upon foreign policy of considerable magnitude.

If it was only a question of coast protection, we might stop building battleship and depend upon fortifications with flying machines in reserve, but we have islands to protect—Porto Rico, the Philippines, and the Hawaiian group—and in a few years we shall have the Panama canal on our hands. Without a navy of sufficient strength we would stand in constant danger of losing the Philippines, to say nothing of the other island possessions. A little war hatched up over night would be sufficient for the navy of some foreign power to convoy a fleet of transports to Honolulu to take possession. On the other hand, a navy that could be relied upon to give a good account of itself would act as a peace maker.

Of coures the anti-imperialists will argue that without the island possessions, the necessity for their protection would not exist. This is all too true, but if the United States is to continue as a world power she will have to maintain her naval strength.—Banker and Tradesman.

Some of the cars on the Old Colony road are being equipped with seats for the motormen. Rather an improvement over the old plan of having the motormen standing on their feet practically all day. Life for a man in the front of the car is a little more human than it was in the days of the old horse cars, with windswept spaces on which to stand, no vestibules, and only a moment's chance now and then to pop into the car and try to get warm beside a badly fed and sulky stove.—Brockton Enterprise.

With the rush and the turmoil of city and of modern life, sensible men and women are beginning to realize that we need just a little more time for the soul.

All of us need to get in touch with "ourselves" once in a while at least. The announcement a few days ago that a new organization had established headquarters, and that one of its objects was to permit people to come there daily for meditation, is distinctly in line with the movement that makes for more sanity in our lives, lives warped and destorted and crushed out of shape by the mad rush for money, fame or position.

Catholic churches and some Episcopal churches in large cities have long made a feature of opening their doors during the day to men and women anxious or eager to breathe at least for a few minutes the sweet balm or religious meditation, and other churches have done the same thing.

It's a good thing to pray; it's proper to attend church services on Sunday morning and evening, but it is a fine thing, and one that supports much the tired soul, to withdraw just a little while each day from the cares and worries of business or profession to get "in touch with the Infinite."—Beverly Times.

Comparatively few people who live in cities, and depend upon purchasing their necessary table supplies in the daily markets, have given much thought to one change which has occurred in recent years which may have affected the price of vegetables and other products of the soil. That change, which has been common with a good many cities, is the purchase and occupation as suburban homes of considerable tracts of rich land, situated from two to four miles from the city and the conversion of these tracts formerly kept under intensive cultivation, into grass plots, lawns and woodland. This has had the effect of withdrawing such conveniently located tracts from productive cultivation by farmers and gardeners, who have, in consequence either abondoned their calling or been forced to prosecute their business at points more distant from the city markets. This latter course has involved more expense in delivery of products, greater difficulty in obtaining reliable labor at reasonable prices, and more expense in hauling from the city the fertilizer necessary to keep the soil at a high point of productiveness.—Framingham News.

POSTOFFICE QUARANTINED

Railway Clerk Stricken With Smallpox While on a Train

St. Albans, Vt., March 14.—The discovery of a case of smallpox in Georgia, a town a few miles from here, has resulted in the quarantining of the postoffice here.

The victim is Charles Metcalf, a United States railway mail clerk, who was taken violently ill while returning from Boston on a Central Vermont train. Metcalf is employed on trains that run between here and Boston.

Several persons who were on the train the day Metcalf was taken ill have been vaccinated.

A CORNER IN PORK

High Prices Are Thus Explained by a Western Newspaper

Omaha, March 14.—The Omaha Bee states that a corner in pork is being engineered on the Chicago board of trade and that the high price of hogs is due to this movement rather than to any law of supply and demand.

The report is made, says The Bee, on authority of members of the South Omaha livestock exchange.

Publicity Bill Reported Favorably

Washington, March 14.—The McCall bill providing for the publication of campaign contributions was reported favorably by the house committee on election of president, vice president and representatives in congress. The Democrats voted solidly for the bill, while the Republicans were divided.

Bleached Flour Prosecution Dropped

Council Bluffs, Ia., March 14.—Pierce Butler, special counsel for the government, dismissed what are known as the "bleached flour" cases in the federal district court.

Train Kills Aged Man

Millis, Mass., March 14.—William Bonsil, aged 73, was struck and instantly killed by an express train while walking on the tracks here.

FOOD SUPPLY TO BE CUT OFF

Strikers Now Plan to Starve Out Philadelphia People

Philadelphia, March 14.—In its efforts to demonstrate the strength of organized labor and to make stronger the sympathetic strike the Central Labor union has directed all milkmen, bakers, grocery clerks and other dispensers of the necessities of life to remain away from their usual vocations today, and until the grievances of the striking car men shall have been adjusted.

It was also resolved that union members withdraw all their money from the banks. Their sympathizers, whether organized or not, are asked by the promoters of the sympathetic strike to do likewise.

The leaders of the sympathetic strike say that when they endeavored to conduct the movement with some regard for the convenience of the general public, Director of Public Safety Clay and others belittled the effect of the strike. They say they are now determined to draw their lines closely during the present week, the second of the general strike.

The union drivers of milk and bread wagons were called upon to strike today by the resolution adopted by the Central Labor union. The grocery clerks, 1000 of whom organized Sunday, will quit tonight. Anyone working Tuesday in any line of employment will be considered non-union men and expelled from the union of which they are members.

Pressure was brought to bear on the brewery workers and their representatives voted to join in the general strike despite the orders of their national officers.

The committee of twenty-five, appointed by the convention organized by the United Business Men's association, held a long session but was unable to find any solution of the troubles Philadelphia is undergoing.

No serious disturbances were reported from any section of the city, and Director of Public Safety Clay said that everything was quiet and peaceful.

Two of the four mediums by which it was hoped that a settlement of the strike might be reached are practically removed as possibilities.

It was hoped that either President Taft, the bankers of Philadelphia, the National Civic Federation or the local councilmanic bodies would find a way to lend a hand toward stopping the strife. The first two have been virtually abandoned.

Word comes from Washington, on seemingly good authority, that the president, through the department of commerce and labor, could not see his way clear to intervene. The reason given was that the trouble is purely of a local character.

All bankers seen regarding the suggestion that financial interests take up the question of settling the strike, declared that the bankers of the city probably would keep their hands off the fight.

Whether the National Civic Federation will agree to take up the strike settlement and the councilmen can be forced to take action remains to be seen. The Civic Federation has declined to act unless both parties appeal to it.

HUGE STRIKE THREATENED

Twenty-Five Thousand Railroad Firemen May Be Ordered Out

Chicago, March 14.—The threatened walkout of 25,000 firemen on practically all the railroad systems between Chicago and the Pacific coast reached an acute stage when W. S. Carter, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, formally notified the railroads that if the entire controversy were not submitted to arbitration a strike would be inevitable.

Carter's letter of notification was indorsed by the brotherhood's committee, which represents the firemen on about forty-seven railroads west, northwest and southwest of Chicago. The letter was sent to W. C. Nixon, general manager of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad, chairman of the railroad general managers' committee.

Mangled In Runaway Accident

Waltham, Mass., March 14.—Thomas Churchill, aged 45, is dying from injuries received when he was thrown from a carriage in which he in his wife were driving. Churchill was dragged dangling at the frightened horse's hoofs for fifty yards, and was finally run over by the carriage.

—"You can't multiply nights by cats and get eternal bliss." Well, no, I should say impossible. One night multiplied by one cat can start the average man on the down-hill road where endless bliss is an unknown quantity. What then would nights multiplied by cats equal?—Sciolus of Milford.

SCHIFF ON FAR EAST PROBLEM

The Banker Tells Why He Sounds Japan Warning.

Jacob H. Schiff, the New York banker, who made the startling declaration at the Republican club luncheon in New York the other day that a conflict between Japan and the United States was inevitable, recently reiterated his views in a written statement.

The banker's statement and his attitude at the present time are considered particularly significant in view of the fact that in his public utterances he has always been most friendly toward the mikado's people. Less than two years ago at a banquet in honor of Baron Sakatani he stated that the thought of war between the nations in question could only be conceived by a stupendous stretch of the imagination. Mr. Schiff also helped finance Japan in her war with Russia.

Here is what Mr. Schiff said at the luncheon:

"The most difficult problem we have to deal with is the far east problem. I am sorry to have to say it, but we are in danger of war over this same question. As a friend of Japan, one who helped to finance its late war, I regret this inevitable conclusion. During the last few weeks it has developed to my personal mortification that Japan has joined hands with the enemy of all mankind—Russia.

"Russia and Japan have evidently one purpose—at present, at least—and that is to keep China as a lesser state. And perfidious Albion, which has always professed to be an enlightening friend of mankind, is a party to this coalition. If we are not careful, if we do not show the right statesmanship, we will be drawn into a controversy with this arrangement in a most disagreeable manner.

"Heretofore we white men have said, 'We are Caucasians and they are yellow men.' And we have expected them to accept this and bow to us accordingly. This they are not going to do. They have prejudices of their own—those born of their ancient civilization. A conflict with them is inevitable."

Mr. Schiff when seen at his home was reluctant to discuss the matter further at the present time. The only statement he would consent to make for publication was reduced to writing by himself and is as follows:

"Mr. Schiff's remarks have been based solely upon his own observations and a close study of the situation and not upon any special information. He has spoken of a coming struggle, but not of war, and has simply desired to arouse the people of the United States to the necessity of properly meeting the situation in a spirit of righteousness. Because of this he ended his remarks with the words of the prophet, 'Not by right and not by power, but in my spirit, saith the Lord.'"

KLOPSCH, THE HUMANITARIAN

Proprietor of a Christian Paper Who Distributed $3,000,000 In His Life.

Since Dr. Louis Klopsch, who recently died in New York, became the editor and proprietor of the Christian Herald in 1892 it is estimated he had through his paper raised and distributed over $3,000,000 in international charities. His death took away one of the foremost of the present day humanitarians, a man known in the far corners of the earth for his work in relieving suffering and want.

Dr. Klopsch was a native of Germany and was born in 1852. He was educated at the public schools there. On his return from Palestine in 1890 he became interested in the Christian Herald, of which he became the proprietor. In recognition of his relief operations in the Russian famine of 1892 he was received by the czar of Russia. In 1898 he received the official thanks of the English and Indian governments for services in behalf of famine stricken India in 1896, when he sent a cargo of corn and money aggregating $400,000. In 1898 President McKinley appointed him one of three United States commissioners charged with the relief of the starving reconcentrados in Cuba, for which purpose he raised nearly $200,000.

He visited in 1900 the famine and cholera fields of India and to relieve the distress raised through his paper in a short period nearly $700,000. In 1901, in response to an appeal from Li Hung Chang, he raised and sent $80,000 for the starving people in the province of Shensi, China. Three years later he raised $25,000 for the famine stricken districts of Finland and Sweden.

Dr. Klopsch was received in private audience by Queen Alexandra, King Christian of Denmark, the king and queen of Sweden and the empress dowager of Russia. In 1907 Baron Takewo Ozawa, personal envoy of the emperor and empress of Japan, decorated him with the Order of the Rising Sun in recognition of his paper's efforts toward famine relief in Japan. Dr. Klopsch was the originator of the Red Letter Testament and the Red Letter Bible.

In 1886 he married Miss May E. Merritt, daughter of the Rev. Stephen Merritt.

Woman's Daring Feat In Music Hall

An exciting music hall "turn" which will be known as the "human cup and ball" has been rehearsed in a shed in the outskirts of Paris. A woman is shut inside a huge wicker ball, which is then rolled down a steep inclined plane, terminating in an upward bend. The ball shoots with lightning speed down the slide and is hurled up into space and caught by an elevated bowl shaped receptacle twenty-five feet away.

THE OCEAN MAIL BILLS

That of Senator Gallinger Would Stimulate Shipbuilding

An editorial in the Boston Transcript gives a clear understanding of the so-called ship subsidy bills before Congress. It reads:

Two distinct ocean mail bills are now before Congress. The later of them, introduced by Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, and favorably reported to the Senate, differs from the Humphrey bill before the House in that it is in form a mere amendment of the present ocean mail law of March 3, 1891. This Gallinger bill provides for an increase in the compensation offered to mail carrying steamships of the second class of from 16 to 19 knots, and of the third class of from 14 to 15 knots on routes to the Isthmus of Panama or on routes more than 4,000 miles in length to South America, Australasia, Japan, China and the Philippines.

Except for the provision for Isthmian routes, this is almost identical with the ocean mail bill which, after having passed the Senate without a division, was narrowly defeated last March by three votes in the House of Representatives.

Such a bill as this would give Boston a chance to secure direct and swift steamship service under the American flag to the Panama region and to Brazil and Argentina. It would necessarily stimulate New England shipbuilding, for steamships of the size and speed requisite for these long ocean mail routes are not to be found available in our present shrunken marine. President Taft has earnestly approved the proposed legislation, and it has recently received the formal indorsement of the Massachusetts State Board of Trade.

The Humphrey bill before the House has no specific provision for lines to the Isthmus of Panama, but it does have two important provisions not in Gallinger has omitted both the free of free registry for foreign-built steamships of upwards of 2500 tons gross register for use in the foreign trade, though not on the mail lines, and an increase of the tonnage taxes to twice the amount now imposed on ships arriving in ports of the United States from distant foreign countries.

Neither of these propositions of the Humphrey bill has been received with entire favor in New England. The free ship proposal, though not applying to the coastwise service, was earnestly resisted by the shipbuilders and owners of Maine and Massachusetts. The increased tonnage taxes were not acceptable to the merchants of Portland and Boston, because of an apprehension that they might drive transatlantic steamships away from our ports to the near-by ports of the Dominion of Canada. Because of all this New England opposition, Senator Gallinger has omitted both the free ship and the tonnage tax sections from the Senate bill.

The subject of ocean mail legislation has long been under consideration in the Senate, and the result of the debate there seems to have been advantageous to the legislation. When it was first proposed, all of the Democrats and a few Western Republicans were hostile, but ocean mail bills have been passing the Senate with increasing majorities, until, on the last issue, no roll call was asked and no vote was cast in opposition.

In the House, however, an ocean mail bill has still much prejudice to overcome. The Gallinger bill, when passed by the Senate, will go in the House to the Committee on Post office and Post Roads, of which John W. Weeks of Massachusetts is chairman. This committee favorably reported an ocean mail bill a year ago, but has not yet considered the subject in the present Congress.

SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

Wollaston Societies Believe in Publicity

All churches are invited to contribute to this department, but copy should be received early Monday morning.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

A. L. Hayden the well known bass singer, has been engaged to sing at Bethany church and began his service there yesterday. His large circle of friends and admirers will heartily welcome him as he renews his work at Bethany church.

A Boys Brigade will be organized by members of the Bible school.

One of the best meetings of the Men's club is planned for this evening, when Dr. C. Hanaford Henderson will speak on "Socialism."

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

In exchange with Rev. Mr. Horst, the pulpit was occupied Sunday morning by the Rev. D. Roy Freeman of All Souls church, Braintree. He took for his subject: "The right attitude of the church toward social questions," crediting the church with being the organized conscience of today, and therefore claiming that it should actively participate in all social questions. The dictates of an open and enlightened conscience, and not expediency he said should be the test of all moral and social questions, and the church should not fear to take a positive stand in all the great problems which are agitating the minds of the present generations.

At 4:30 P. M. Sunday the auditorium was filled with a large gathering af all denominations. The Rev. Carl G. Horst, at this vesper service, took for his text a part of the 21st verse of 1st chapter of Matthew: "and thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins."

The preacher emphasized the fact that it is not possible for man to be saved from the consequences of his sins, nor from the suffering entailed by wrong doing. The punishment comes not by the arbitrary will of an angry God, but by the breaking of great universal laws under which we live; it is remedial, sent in kindness and wisdom through man's nature which is so fashioned that it cannot be useful and happy unless in harmony with God's plan for progress and development. Salvation means education in all that leads man to the highest life here and now, and character building begun on right lines in this life leads to a larger and eternal life. There was special music including vocal solis by Miss Alice Gertrude Coe, and two cello solos by Miss Marion Moorhouse.

All Souls church if Braintree invites the Wollaston Unitarian church to the installation of the Rev. Daniel Roy Freeman as its minister, Tuesday, March 15, at 7.30 P. M.

The Earnest Workers Lend-a-Hand club will meet with Charlotte Barstow 165 Arlington street Tuesday, March 15, at 4 P. M. The members are planning a "Jenny Wren" fair which will take the form of a Dolls' party in the afternoon. In the evening there will be a sale of dolls, fancy articles, cake, candy and ice cream, and music will be furnished by members of the club.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid Alliance occurs Wednesday. It will be the last of the all day sewing meetings and will be held in the vestry. Baked beans, a salad, rolls and coffee will be served at noon and the ladies attending are asked to bring something for desert. A charge of ten cents will be made for the luncheon.

Rev. Carl G. Horst attended the Ministers' Monday club in Boston this morning at which the Rev. S. H. Roblin, D. D., of the Columbus avenue Universalist church gave an address upon the work of his church in psychotherapy.

The regular meeting of the Young People's Social society will be held in the vestry Tuesday at 7.45 P. M. An interesting program has been prepared by the entertainment committee of which Mrs. Carl G. Horst is chairman.

The service of worship in King's chapel at noon Wednesday, March 16, will be conducted by the Rev. A. W. Littlefield of Brookline.

Whatsoever Circle, King's Daughters, will hold its meeting with Mrs. E. R. Frost, 239 Farrington street, this evening.

Imperial vaudeville under the auspices of the Young People's Social Society will be given March 30 and 31.

Rev. Carl G. Horst addressed the Quincy Women's Alliance upon "The specific work of the church of God."

The Unitarian pilgrims to the "World Congress of Free Christianity and Religious Progress," which meets in Berlin next August, have chartered the steamer Devonian which will leave Boston, Wednesday, July 13. Besides the unions in Berlin meetings will be held in Liverpool, Oxford, London, Cologne, Weimar, Eisenach, Paris. They will also attend the Passion Play at Oberammergau.

In honor of Dr. Edward Everett Hale's birthday the Y. P. R. U. is planning a special service Sunday, April 3, at 4.30 P. M.

The work of the new chorus choir under the efficient leadership of choirmaster Clark is thoroughly appreciated by the church.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

Miss Caroline D. Aborn, director of public kindergartens in Boston speaks this evening in Wollaston Congregational vestry at 8 o'clock, upon "The story as a factor in the spiritual life of the child."

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S.

At St. Chrysostom's church Sunday morning the rector, Rev. Albert Edwin Clattenburg preached from St. Luke 21: 1-3 and he brought out the importance of returning to the Lord a fair share of the wealth that he allowes us to secure

In the evening the regular monthly musical service was held and a pleasing program was rendered. The mixed vested choir was assisted by Miss Agnes Littlefield of Neponset, mezzo soprano, soloist, who sang delightfully "The way of peace" by C. Francis Lloyd and "Trusting in Thee" by Robert Coverly. The prelude by Handel and the postlude by Ed. Batiste were well rendered by Miss Louisa Allison Ross, organist.

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

At the Wollaston Methodist church on Sunday the pastor preached on "Systematic giving." He said any one who may have lived thirty five or forty years in the world, and who has been a close observer of human nature and civilization, and have studied the forces by which people fall and people succeed, must have discovered long before this that generosity is the best investment one can make, that withholding diminishes one's powers of usefulness. It is "more blessed to give than to receive." It is more fruitful to serve than to be served. It is more productive of real genuine happiness to minister than to be ministered unto. It is a better evidence of love for one's interest in a good cause to contribute for its support than to make long prayers for its prosperity and give glowing exhortations in its behalf. We are willing to pay most for what we love best. The pleasure seeker will pay most for pleasure, because he loves it best. When a person gives to God or His cause it is evidence that he loves God and His cause. Proportionate giving is the christian principle. Spasmodic giving makes the finances of any church uncertain and unsatisfactory. The teaching of the Bible which is the law of God is explicit on this subject. "The tenth shall be holy unto the Lord." We are stewards of God, and as stewards we must be faithful to the trust imposed in us. The plan of systematic giving is feasible. "Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store as God has prospered him."

The Sunday school had an increase over last Sunday. J. A. Sedgwick, the superintendent, had another Giant which he named Up—Right—Ness,"—and the father's name was Up—Right and the mother's name was Up—Right—Lee.

The Junior League was led by Miss Rena Chamberlain, assisted by Miss Sadie Teed.

The Epworth League meeting was in charge of Miss Bessie Wilbur. Solos were sung by Miss Irma Douglas and Herbert Cassidy. At 7 P. M. the pastor preached on "The True Friend."

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

The preaching Sunday morning at the Baptist church was by the pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther. Subject: "The ground plan of the gospel in Ezekiel—Exek. 36-24. Three great thoughts were very forcibly presented: "The great and soverign work of God." "The ground work of the gospel" and "God's blessing on the obedient heart."

God is taking part in his own world and controls the universe. God does not work independant of his own people. God is the sower and the seed are the children of the kingdom. He sows some in China, some in India, and some in the islands of the sea and some day there will be a great and glorious harvest. The soul that walks near God shall some how be blessed, not only spiritually but shall be prospered in the temporal things as well. The gospel is working in men today.

Mrs. George A. Brown gave a temperance address at the meeting of the Junior Endeavor society at 4 o'clock in the chapel, which was very much enjoyed by the children.

The meeting of the Christian Endeavor society was led by Mrs. Talbott. Two solos were well rendered by Mr. Charles Kempton.

The subject of the evening sermon was "A promise which includes you and me." Acts 2-39. The holy spirit will come to all those whom the Lord our God shall call; to those who will submit to the requirements of Scripture. The blessing is for you and for me. There are two kinds of baptism mentioned in the Bible . Baptism of water and baptism of the holy spirit. While baptism of water is not a saving ordinance it is nevertheless important. Christ commanded it and was the first to be baptized. Three strong reasons were given for the Baptist belief in immersion. Some other way would be easier, but we wish to be fully obedient and submissive to Jesus Christ. The following persons were baptized at the close of the service Miss Edith Armstrong, Mrs. George McQueen and Mr. Chester Barlow.

Tuesday at 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. D. M. Dicey, 52 Pope street Montclair. The pastor will lead.

MYSTERY AT HOUGHS NECK.

Early Saturday evening a big Negro suddenly made his appearance at the house of John F. Crockett, on Rogers street, Houghs Neck, and gave his daughter Alice a bad scare. The little girl was at home alone at the time, sitting in the kitchen waiting the return of her parents from Boston. Suddenly she heard footsteps approaching the door, and the next minute the door opened and the Negro stepped in.

Approaching the girl he told her he would kill her if she did not get out of the house. The girl ran to the house of James Fox on Sea street and told her story. Other neighbors were aroused in the meantime and officer Phillips was notified that the man had disappeared toward Quincy. Word was sent to the police station to head the man off when he came into City Square, and Officer Phillips securing a bicycle, started after the man. The conductor on the Quincy bound street car reported to the police that his car had passed the man near the Adams farm, but it is thought that he must have turned into Valley street and thus alluded the officers as the police were unable to find any trace of him. There is considerable mystery as to the object of the man.

LIST OF ANTIDOTES.

These Directions Should Be Kept Handy—They May Save Life.

It makes one shudder to think of the grim sign on the druggists' vials, but the shudder is worse when one of the family, perhaps a favorite child, has swallowed some deadly dose. What is done then must be done quickly. The following plain directions ought to be kept handy. They may save a life while the doctor is coming.

When the poison is unknown this is the treatment: Provoke repeated vomiting, give bland liquids, stimulate if necessary.

For Acids.—Sulphuric, nitric, muriatic, oxalic: Give an alkali, provoke vomiting, give bland fluids, secure rest, stimulate if necessary.

Alkalis.—Hartshorn, soda, potash, lye: Give an acid (vinegar), provoke vomiting, give bland liquids, secure rest, stimulate if necessary.

For Arsenic.—Paris green, Scheele's green: Provoke vomiting, give dialyzed iron and salt (repeat several times), give dose of castor oil, secure rest, stimulate if necessary.

"And so," began the browbeating attorney to the shabby witness, "you live by your wits, do you?"

"No, sir; by other folks' lack of them," corrected the witness modestly.

HOSPITALITY EXTENDED

Naval Men from Argentina Welcome at Granite City Club

Admiral Bowles in his address at the banquet tendered him by the citizens of Quincy, among other things, said that the Argentine Republic would send to this city several of its naval officers who would be among us during the building of the battleship, and he urged that the citizens show them every courtesy possible. Acting upon this suggestion the Granite City club, at its meeting Saturday evening, voted to extend the privileges of the club rooms to these gentlemen during their stay in Quincy. As this club is composed largely of business men of the city it will enable these gentlemen from Argentina to meet out citizens in a social manner that would not be possible in any other way. It is probable that there will be five or six of these naval officers in Quincy during the building of the battleship. Some of them have already arrived and others are expected before the month is out. At this same meeting the entertainment committee was instructed to arrange for the annual banquet of the club to be held early in April.

SOUTH AMERICAN OPINION.

Every now and then a determined effort is made to inspire suspicion of the United States in the South American mind. At the time of the gathering of the last session of the Pan-American Congress it seemed as if the foes of the Yankees were determined to ruin them in our good opinion. Luckily the misrepresentations of American policy which have their origin in Europe deceive no one here.

Of the latest effort to discredit the diplomacy of Washington here, it suffices to say that the Argentine looks to North America as to its best friend. It is perhaps the plain truth that Nicaraguan affairs might be the subject of negotiations in which the representatives of some Powers in South America would be out of touch with the policy of the men in Washington. That, however, affords no basis for recent dread lest South America learns to distrust the North Americans. At no time has South American opinion been more favorably impressed by the attitude of North Americans generally than it is today. There seems little reason to doubt that the prevailing mutual good will between South and North America will endure.—Buenos Ayres Prensa.

PAULHAN'S DARING FLIGHT

Covers Six Miles In Eight Minutes In a Choppy Breeze.

New York, March 14.—In a cross, choppy wind of about twenty miles an hour, which caught his biplane at the start and rolled it from side to side like a boat in a lively sea, Louis Paulhan, the French aviator, made a daring flight at Jamaica, L. I., Sunday afternoon. He was in the air for eight minutes and ten seconds and covered about six miles.

Paulhan headed the big Farman biplane into the wind and flew straight out over the countryside toward Far Rockaway and the ocean, making a graceful turn in the distance and coming back with the wind at a mad speed.

"I got a shaky start on account of the choppy breeze," he said, "but I finally made the best flight since I have been here."

AUDITOR DISAPPEARS

Not Seen In Boston Since Shortage of Over $9000 Was Discovered

Boston, March 14.—Oscar M. Wheelock, auditor of the Massachusetts bonding and insurance company, with headquarters at 77 State street, has disappeared and the company reports a shortage in its accounts of $9241.04. The company will not suffer any monetary loss by the alleged defalcation, as Wheelock was under bonds.

It was during on examination of the firm's bonds some time ago that a shortage was discovered. When it was called to Wheelock's attention he put on his hat and went out, saying he was going to the bank. He has not been seen since.

Wheelock is 35 years old. He resided in Somerville, and was well known in that city.

Drink Catnip Tea.

Catnip tea? Yes, of course. People are beginning to see the value of "yarb teas," and best of them all, they say, is the beverage made from the homely catnip that grows in country gardens.

Iced, it is delicious on hot summer days. Hot, it relieves tired nerves, acts as a sedative when one can go to sleep no other way, and it is a most excellent remedy for a cold if one takes it piping hot with a couple of dover powders just before retiring for the night.

Catnip leaves should be gathered when the plant is in bloom and dried. The tea made from them is pungent, aromatic and somewhat bitter. The tea, which is made by steeping the leaves in hot water, acts as a tonic and is an antispasmodic.

Old fashioned mothers give it to their babies to soothe and to expel the gas from the little stomachs. Then these mothers drink what's left of this soothing herb—and like it—and feel refreshed without knowing the reason why.

We are gradually getting back to nature, and before long we'll be a herb drinking people. When that time comes we'll forget all about the "nerves" and indigestion and other diseases caused by caffeine and tannic acid.

The Lion and the Unicorn.

The unicorn came into the royal arms with James I. It belongs to the royal arms of Scotland. The signet ring of Mary, mother of James, is in existence, having a unicorn on it. In the royal arms, therefore, one supporter represents England, the other Scotland.

The lion and the unicorn occur also in ancient Buddhist scriptures, placed together as supporters. Both of these animals also are seen playing draughts together in the well known Egyptian painting. But the oldest connection of the two is in the blessing of Jacob and of Moses.—London Notes and Queries.

Mr. Cobb's long experience as a newspaper correspondent amply fits him for his new position.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT.

A peculiar accident happened on Hancock street near the Daily Ledger office Saturday afternoon, but fortunately did not result seriously. An automobile numbered 5278 was speeding along the street. When in front of the Col. Packard estate one of the large tires came off and went spinning toward the sidewalk. Walking on the sidewalk was a man who evidently did not see the on-coming tire, for it struck him with force enough to throw him down. He picked himself up, somewhat surprised, and gave the automobile a killing look. Then finding that he was not injured he passed on muttering something under his breath.

WEALTHY MAN DESPONDENT

Thomas Laughlin, Prominent In Steel Industry, a Suicide

Pittsburg, March 14.—Suicide by shooting caused the death of Thomas McK. Laughlin, assistant treasurer of the Jones & Laughlin Steel company, and a brother-in-law of President Taft.

The physician's certificate of death stated the cause as cerebral apoplexy and was signed by Dr. McKenna.

Persistent calls for information from the coroner caused him to investigate the case, and after a visit to the Laughlin home he said that the physician's return was technically correct, although the cerebral hemorrhage had been caused by a bullet.

Efforts had been made to conceal the fact that Laughlin had ended his own life because of the prominence of the family, and not even B. F. Jones, a partner of Laughlin, knew of the actual cause until the coroner publicly confirmed it.

It was not intended that even the president or any members of the family beyond George M. Laughlin, a brother, and the widow should know the actual cause of death. All traces of the wound are said to have been removed from the body in embalming.

The rumors of suicide are thought to have been spread through the family servants.

The death of Major G. M. Laughlin some months ago deeply affected his son, Thomas McK., and is said to have preyed upon a naturally nervous temperament. He traveled much previous to his death in the hope that his health might be benefited. Upon his return from Europe a week ago Laughlin appeared to be in better health and spirits than he had for some months, so that the end came as a severe shock to the family as well as friends.

Mr. Laughlin was prominent in the business world here and was one of Pittsburg's wealthiest men. His wealth was conservatively estimated at $20,000,000. He was popular among the younger business men as well as the older heads of industries, and was characterized by his assistants as "a clean, upright citizen."

The shock to Mrs. Laughlin has prostrated her.

It was at the Laughlin home that President Taft, while here last May, assembled about him Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin, their two children and Captain Butt and was photographed on the lawn at the president's request.

In the spring of 1907, Thomas O'C. Jones, another of the junior members of the firm of Jones & Laughlin, was found dead in his room in the hotel Schenectady in this city, having blown out his brains with a bullet.

Mrs. Laughlin was Lucy Hayes Herron. She is a sister of President Taft's wife and the daughter of John W. Herron of Cincinnati. Before her marriage to Laughlin she was prominent in Cincinnati and was an expert golf player.

TRAGEDY AT DINNER PARTY

Infantry Lieutenant Falls Dead With Bullet In His Head

Manila, March 14.—Second Lieutenant Clarence M. Janney, Twelfth infantry, killed himself at Fort William McKinley.

Considerable mystery shrouds the case, and it is not known whether the killing was intentional or by accident. Army inspectors are now holding an investigation.

Lieutenant Janney, accompanied by his wife, attended a dinner party at the house of Lieutenant Colonel Ames. Janney left the party and went to his quarters. He got a revolver and returned to the house of Ames, on the way to which he fired one shot, presumably into the air. He entered the house and flourished the revolver. There was an explosion, and Janney fell with a bullet in the head. He died instantly.

It was at first reported that Ames had shot Janney, and guards placed him under arrest, but he was subsequently released.

FUMES FOLLOW BROOK

Gas Main Bursts and Three Guests In Hotel Are Overcome

Webster, Mass., March 14.—As a result of the gas pipe bursting on Main street, in front of the Joslin house, Mrs. Emma Petching, Miss Katherine Hickey and Nicholas Handy, guests at the hotel, were overcome with gas. Handy's condition is thought to be serious, but all are doing well. A number of other guests were affected, but not seriously.

It seems the main runs through Day brook across Main street, the brook running through the Joslin house cellar, and the pipe burst near the hotel. The gas followed the brook into the hotel.

SAYS LEPROSY IS NOT CONTAGIOUS

Two Real Specimens Put on View by a Doctor

New York, March 14.—"There are at present perhaps a dozen cases of leprosy in New York, and there always has been more or less of it during the thirty years I have been practicing here. I have never in that time seen any evidence that the disease is contagious."

Such was the declaration of Dr. Bulkley, the skin specialist, in a lecture before the Women's Medical society, at the Skin and Cancer hospital.

Dr. Bulkley exhibited two West Indian lepers who have been patients at the hospital for several months. The disease is well defined in both.

"These two patients," said Bulkley, "are permitted to mingle with the other patients who are not suffering from contagious disease. The fear of leprosy is purely a superstition and comes down from biblical times, yet the leprosy of the Bible was not the modern disease that we know."

It introduces an entirely new departure in the construction of airships, as it is built of iron.

The new vessel is expected to achieve even more successful results than those of the rigid aluminum type built by Count Zeppelin, on which it is chiefly modelled. It is to be named the "Trier," after the town where it was built.

GIVES DINNER

Roosevelt Incidentally Pumps Them Good and Plenty

Khartoum, the Soudan, March 14.—Former President Roosevelt feels better now, for he knows what has happened in the twelve months that he has been in the wilderness.

The group of correspondents who came thousands of miles to get his views on Africa and world politics found out what same of them long have known; that when he does not want to talk for publication Colonel Roosevelt can be as tight as money in a Wall street panic. In addition he has shown again that he is just about the best interviewer in the world himself.

He gave the correspondents a dinner aboard the steamer Dal and it was late when he let go the pump which he applied to the correspondents singly and together. If there is any question which he did not ask, the boys said later, they could not recall it.

The political situation in New York, Ohio, in Washington, the "malefactors of great wealth," the anti-trust suits, the Cook-Peary Polar controversy, all had their moment in his lightning inquisition.

With that old-time Roosevelt candor, the colonel blurted out that he had a narrow escape from sending a cable of congratulation to Dr. Cook when he first learned that Cook had reached the Pole.

"Narrow escape, wasn't it," he laughed. "I'm mighty glad my old friend Peary got there. It is one of the greatest exploits in the history of human exploration. And isn't it fine to think of Old Glory flying away up on top of the earth? I'm mighty glad an American did it. It's bully, that's what it is."

Throughout the long dinner, with every trained correspondent using every particle of his science to lure Roosevelt into some statement on world affairs, especially the American political and industrial situation, the former president laughed and questioned, and the net result for publication was in need of just one word for the cables.

"Nothing." That, essentially, tells what Roosevelt said. "I have nothing to say and shall have nothing to say on American or European politics, on any political question or on any phase or incident connected with politics," said Mr. Roosevelt. "I shall give no interviews, and anything purporting to be in the nature of an interview can be accepted as false. This applies during my entire stay in Europe."

Roosevelt was frankly delighted to hear of the big things doing in preparation to welcome him home.

"I thought they went the limit when I came away," he said with lots of enthusiasm, "but it is good to hear you boys say I'm still in good standing. I'm mighty glad to be on the way home, I assure you."

Mr. Roosevelt is hard at work completing the story of his African hunt, and will also spend much of the time between now and his arrival at Naples in the preparation of the lectures that he is to give in Paris, Berlin and London.

SHIPBUILDING INDUSTRY

Should Receive a Great Impetus from Work of Admiral Bowles

The Daily Ledger has received a copy of the Congressional Record with the speech of Congressman O'Connell on the award of the contract for the Argentine Republic battleships, to which reference has already been made in these columns. The speech is given in full below:

The House having under consideration the conference report on the bill (H. R. 13410) entitled "An act to modify the one hundred and twenty-second and one hundred and twenty-fourth articles of war" Mr. O'Connell said:

"Mr. Speaker: Within the last few weeks this country has achieved a notable victory in the award of the contract by the Argentine Republic for the building of two modern battleships to the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, of Quincy, Mass., one of the great firms of this country, after open competition with the rest of the world. That award has occasioned a great deal of world-wide comment that has not been favorable to our people, because the true facts were not stated. Last night Admiral Bowles, who secured this contract, returned, and at a complimentary banquet given in Quincy by the people o fthat city gave his reasons why this country was successful in securing this important and epoch-making contract.

"The ability of this country to enter the open market in South America and secure the lucrative business which those parts afford for trade and win off is strikingly illustrated in this signal success achieved by Admiral Bowles. It should serve as an inspiration to all other forms of business that seek a world trade and a market outside of this country, because for years it has been generally supposed that Great Britain had a monopoly in this one particular form of business. It has been heralded far and wide and, in fact, has been accepted almost as an axiom that England could build steel ships cheaper than any other nation. This theory is punctured and, I hope, dispelled forever.

"If the shipbuildng industry of this country can compete with the other nations of the world and successfully underbid them in a department that heretofore has been regarded as impossible, why can not all our other forms of business likewise hope to compete with the same degree of success? Yes, with even a greater degree of hope, because in other lines the rest of the world does not claim to have the prestige over us which the English shipbuilders have always prided themselves upon.

"The same degree of effort, energy well-directed zeal would unquestionably result in a continued series of industrial successes for this country that would quickly place us in an impregnable position so far as trade with South America is concerned.

"The people of Quincy are justly proud of the achievement of Admiral Bowles and this Nation should also feel elated over the fact that from its Naval Academy and from its naval life there has stepped a man who has been able to enter into the commerce of the world and successfully and victoriously carry through a big business enterprise. It is another jewel in the crown of the maritime glory of this Nation and I trust is only the forerunner of a long series of mercantile marine successes that will follow from this time forth.

"The shipbuilding industry of this Nation should receive a great impetus from this splendid work on the part of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, of Quincy, and should inspire the building of many ships that will once more carry the American flag into all parts of the world and revive and vitalize an industry which was once the pride of this country. (Applause.)

"At this time I wish to call prticular attention to the remarks of Admiral Bowles, in which he states that he was "exceedingly fortunate in having the assistance of the American minister who, because of his training in business, made himself an efficient aid in securing the contract," and to the Admiral's further conclusion that he is "in favor of diplomatic representatives abroad being drawn from among the politicians." This candid expression, coming at a time when everyone seems to condemn the man engaged in political life, is a thought which should not be over looked, because of the part it played in this notable victory.

"While not wishing to be considered as opposed to a reasonable amount of civil-service regulations, such as is intended and sought by those interested in civil-service reform, I think it might be well to call the attention of this House to the remarks of Admiral Bowles, in which he says, referring to the American ministers: I am in favor of them being politicians. I have no use for civil service in such matters. I used to be a civil-service reformer, but I believe that out of the battle of politics it is always possible to choose men of great ability, fine character, and good standing, and that they are the best ones to represent the spirit of the United States.

"I think the victory was not only an industrial one, but also a diplomatic one, of which we are all very proud, and calls at this time for printing in the Record the story from Admiral Bowles himself. There was no objection.

KEEPS OUT OF REACH OF BOSTON POLICE

Bandit Queen Seen In Boston, but She Again Disappears

Boston, March 14.—Leontina Maurin, the so-called "bandit queen," much sought for by the police in connection with the shooting up of the Forest Hills section of the city in July, 1908, by the late bandit Guttman and his companions, Plaude and Schwar, still at large, was seen yesterday by several members of the Lettish settlement in the Jamaica Plain district.

Her appearance created a sensation and started the police in active search again for the woman, but she could not be found. It was supposed that she had left the country and had gone to Riga, in Russia, following the memorable week of crime.

Once the Maurin girl was publicly connected with the bandits, she was spirited away by friends, and while it was believed that she had left the country, it is now supposed that she has ever since been sheltered by friends in some one of the Lettish settlements near Boston.

The Lettish colony in this city, as well as those in Roxbury, Cambridge, Norwood and Wrentham, will now be closely watched.

WARSHIPS FOR JUNK PILE

Many of Our Fighting Craft Are Declared to Be Obsolete

Washington, March 14.—Eleven of Uncle Sam's protected cruisers, three of his unprotected cruisers, ten of his famous monitors and a bunch of smaller and cheaper fighting craft are, in the opinion of the naval experts, fit for little else than the scrap head.

Secretary Meyer announces that the best place for these mighty machines of death is the junk pile. They are rusty, costly and ineffective.

Practically all the fighting ships of any considerable size that were built before 1890 are now declared by naval constructors and experts to be obsolete.

The life of a warship is twenty years, and during that time she must be overhauled at tremendous expense at least once in every four or five years or she will be useless before the end of the two decade period.

LIFE BELT OF PORTLAND

Drifts Ashore After Being In the Ocean For Twelve Years

Cohasset, Mass., March 14.—The sinking of the steamer Portland with all on board somewhere off the New England coast in the winter of 1898, was vividly recalled by many persons here Sunday when a life preserver that had apparently been on the Portland was picked up on Pleasant Beach.

The life preserver was in fairly good condition, considering the fact that it has probably been in the water twelve years. Although the lettering was well washed, the word "Portland" was plainly discernible, as was the stamp of the government inspector.

This is the first time anything from the steamer Portland has ever been washed ashore here.

Preferred Chinese Doctor

Boston, March 14.—Chin Wong walked off a street car yesterday and sustained severe cuts about the face and head. He was removed to the city hospital, where he refused to be treated. He left the place with blood running down his face and went to a Chinese doctor.

Mourning Playing Cards Out

Brussels, March 14.—A Belgian firm is issuing playing cards with a black border for use during the six months' public mourning for the late King Leopold.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

The windows of the smartest shops have blossomed out in Easter finery and all the world of womankind is intensely interested in the showing of new hats, costumes and fabrics that will be worn at Spring weddings and other gaieties scheduled for the weeks before society flits to the summer resorts.

FOR EASTER WEDDINGS.

All that is daintiest and most chic in fashionable designing, is seen in the trousseaux of several well-known girls who are to be married at Eastertide. And every representative place where such fittings are turned out, is fairly humming with the stir of wedding preparations. Changeable and cameleon effects are the notable color trend. Contrasting linings are the rule, and figured foulards, especially in Persian patterns, are very much used for linings and facings of coats, and for hat trimmings.

NEW SUITINGS AND SILKS.

Gray is the leading favorite for tailored woolen suitings as indicated by the sales at Lord and Taylor's and other high class establishments. Indro Shantung silks are first favorites for the handsome costume, that suits any occasion, yet stands the hardest wear, and the blacks in these, being yarn dyed, are a perfect jet with none of the rusty, gray appearance that formerly characterized black Shantungs. Foulards have come back with a rush, and the double widths selling for from $1.50 per yard up, are those preferred for dresses, while the single widths at small prices are utilized for linings and trimmings. The Indro Shantung silks sell at $1 per yard. Lovely bordure chiffons in white or pale tintings, with wide borders of roses reproducing Nature's colors, were shown at the same establishment and would be ideal for bridesmaids' costumes.

The above design is by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

HATS FROM PARIS.

Hats just out of their Paris wrappings are among the most charming refined yet smart headwear that is shown here. An "Eifel Tower" turban with a crown of brown tulle over yellow in a high standing puffing, is bordered by a wide band of shaded velvet pansies, in soft red and brown tones, and, a little at the left of the centre back, has a bow of the shaded velvet ribbon which is one of the novelties of this season. Another similar shape with a crown of yellow satin straw, is banded with shaded blue Marguerites, and has a bow of tulle at the back. A draped high toque with the crown of black Milan straw, has a lattice of medium blue straw, over the black forming the band. A single full plume of black ostrich is the sole trimming. A wide brimmed leghorn is dyed gold color, and trimmed with lilacs in shades that Nature never attempts; tans, browns, old reds; and deepest royal purple, arranged across the hat, and caught with a bow of shaded velvet at the upturned side.

NEW VEILINGS.

The honey-comb mesh veil still continues to be exclusively worn. It is too becoming to be lightly abandoned, but one sees either no veil at all, or what, for want of better name, are termed "spider veils, from the intricacy of their meshes, and the fact that the figures are placed at the centres of closest weaving, as the spider stays most often at the centre of his web. These are no doubt smart but very masklike, too much so for a pretty young face, though the girls are affecting them. Chantilly veils are also much worn, and very becoming thrown back over the hat in front, and hanging down behind forming a most complimentary background. Draped belts of all sorts are popular, especially black patent leather, worn with linen or checked suits.

CUDAHY AND LILLIS QUIT COUNTRY CLUB

Packer's Victim Is Going Abroad For a Long Rest

Kansas City, March 14.—Jere F. Lillis, the banker, and J. P. Cudahy have resigned from the exclusive Country club of Kansas City, as a result of the affair at the Cudahy home a geek ago, when Cudahy and his chauffeur tied the banker with a rope and cut and pummeled him. Lillis, it is said, will go abroad for a long rest.

Cudahy's resignation, which was voluntary, has been accepted. Lillis resigned only after he was summoned to appear before the directors and show cause why he should not be expelled.

The two men are also members of the Kansas City club, the Evanston Golf club and other local organizations. These have not officially recognized the affair, as far as known.

Lillis is making further progress toward recovery, but he declines to talk for publication. Cudahy is out of the city.

WEDS HIS STENOGRAPHER

New York Social Leader Takes Poor German Girl For a Wife

New York, March 14.—Julian M. Gerard, prominent in New York society because of the old-time social prestige of the Gerard family, has married his stenographer, who was born and raised in Hoboken. She was Miss Eliabeth Schedel, daughter of a German contractor.

Rumor had it that Gerard was to wed a daughter of one of the wealthfest families of New York. His brother, James, a new justice of the supreme court, married Miss Mary Daly, daughter of the late Marcus Daly. Her inheritance was $1,500,000 to $2,000,000.

ALL IN THE TASTE

Wiley Hints at Eating Crow, After Feed of Cotton Seed

Washington, March 14.—"You can also acquire a taste for crow."

This was one of the comments made by Dr. Wiley, chief United States chemist, after breakfasting on cotton seed meal cakes and confections furnished to him by Secrtary of War Dickinson.

The value of cotton seed meal in bread and cakes, and generally as a food, is to be ascertained by the agricultural department.

Boy Killed by Automobile

Cambridge, Mass., March 14.—George W. Simpson of Andover was arrested on the charge of manslaughter in causing the death of 10-year-old Timothy Lane by running him down with an automobile. After two hours' detention Simpson was released on bail of $2500.

SUCCESS IS PROBABLE

Nearly $5000 Pledged for New Church at Atlantic

So successful has been the work of the committee of the Memorial church who are canvassing to raise a fund of $5,000 for a new church that today the hands of the big clock on the church point to $4,425 showing that this is the sum total pledged to date.

This means that it is necessary to raise but $425 today toreach the desired goal. That the committee will be successful in raising this amount today seems to be assured. The committee started out bright and early this morning and will put in a solid day's work so that tonight when they meet at the church for supper they will be able to enjoy the great feast the ladies are preparing for them, knowing that after supper they will be able to report that the sum of $5,000 has been pledged ,and perhaps more.

It Is Not True—

That it is necessary to buy expensive cuts of meat in order to have them palatable and nutritious.

That clear meat soups are "strengthening" instead of stimulating.

That one gets more "strength" from potatoes, rice, etc., if they are put to cook in cold water.

That tea and coffee "if they are weak" will not harm children.

That cocoa is cooked sufficiently if boiling water is poured on. It should be cooked over boiling water for half an hour.

That cereals are properly cooked in twenty minutes. They should be cooked from one to three hours, according to variety.

That the term "cheap food" relates to the first cost alone. In reality cheap food is that which yields the most possible nourishment for the money spent.

LOCAL SPORTS SATURDAY

Association Football, Basket ball and Golf

The outdoor season was opened at Quincy Point on Saturday when the Fore River team had as rivals at association football the Clan McPherson team of Lawrence. The first half ended 1 to 1, but the home team scored five goals in the second half and won 6 to 1.

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. won on Saturday evening in a closely contested basket ball game with the North Abingtons, the score being 31 to 30. Fouls were numerous, as Quincy scored nine goals from fouls, and North Abington made eight. The Quincy team was composed of Baker, Morris (or McKenzie) Jenkins, Mundie and Bates.

The St. Mary's basketball team of West Quincy went to Plymouth and were defeated by the C. D. team 28 to 16.

On Saturday at Braintree the girls team of Thayer Academy defeated the girls of Pembroke High 25 to 3.

At Milton the Gym team defeated Brockton Y. M. C. A. at basket ball 21 to 20.

The Milton second team defeated the Brockton Independents 17 to 10.

Many went over the links of the Wollaston Golf club on Saturday. The first golf tournament of the season is scheduled to take place on the Wollaston links Wednesday to Saturday, May 4 to 7. During the week of May 23 the championship meeting of the Women's Golf association will be held on these links.

HAYSEED KARNIVAL.

There will be a meeting of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Tuesday evening at 7.30 for final arrangements for the annual exhibition which is held every year about the middle of April. The Hayseed Karnival will be something of a novelty for Quincy and will be as much fun for those that take part as for the spectators. All members are urged to be on hand and take part and help to liven things up at the Y. M. C. A. just before the closing of the gymnasium year.

Silencing the Questioners.

A French gentleman who had been with M. de Talleyrand for twenty years accompanied him to the congress at Vienna after Napoleon's exile to Elba. People naturally concluded that this long intimacy had made him familiar with a number of particulars of the minister's life and bearing also upon the events with which he had been mixed up. Worried with questions, the friend invariably replied that he knew nothing, but the questioners would not be satisfied and returned to the charge.

"Very well," finally said Talleyrand's confidant; "I'll tell you a peculiar and altogether unknown fact in connection with M. de Talleyrand. Since Louis XV. he's the only man who can open a soft boiled egg with one backward stroke of his knife without spilling a drop of the contents of the shell. That is the only peculiarity I know in connection with him."

Discretion had scored a decisive victory. From that moment the questions ceased.

The Sting of Ingratitude.

A young physician in the east side, New York city, spends much time in charitable practice, says the Newark Star. In fact, he sometimes gives to a poor patient enough money to pay for prescriptions. "I'm not getting rich," he explains, "but I simply can't see them suffer for medicines that may put them on their feet again."

Not many days ago the doctor had occasion to visit a woman who occupied one small tenement room with her three children. After making out a prescription he gave her $2, telling her to buy the medicine and to use the change for needed food. On the following day as he was about to enter the tenement for a second call he met the ten-year-old daughter of the patient.

"How is your mother?" he inquired of the child.

"Oh, she's all well!" was the answer. "She took the $2 and got a real doctor."

John and the Franchise.

A woman suffrage lecturer in England recently brought down the house with the following argument: "I have no vote, but my groom has. I have a great respect for that man in the stables, but I am sure if I were to go to him and say, 'John, will you exercise the franchise?' he would reply, 'Please, mum, which horse be that?'"

A Real Regret.

Editor—I am obliged to decline your poem with thanks. I am very sorry, but— Poet—But what? Editor—The management insists upon my declining all poems that way.

RUBE'S SPORTING CHAT

Everything is in readiness for the grand bowling match to be held tonight at Grant's Granite street alleys between Grant and Dahl and Poland and Lyons to settle the bowling championship of Norfolk county. I met Grant this morning and to say he is confident of landing the match is putting it in its mildest form. Poland and Lyons are equally as sure of being on the big end, and we are sure to see some good rolling tonight when things get started. The time set is 8.15 so get around if you want a good time and desire to see a little excitement.

Reach's official baseball guide for 1910 is a dandy and as I look through it I see many familiar faces. Among those noticed are "Ken" Nash and Orcutt of the Deweys with Brown University; Cooney and Giroux, formerly of the Deweys, with Haverhill N. E. league club; Dan Howley of Weymouth with Indianapolis American Association;; Sweeney of Rockland with Holy Cross; Wadsworth the new infielder signed by Bjorkland for Quincy Old Colony league club is shown with Williams college; Martell a former slugger with Braintree, a Weymouth boy, is shown in act of catching a speedy one. "Doc" is now with Philadelphia Nationals.

Another face I noticed is "Tommy" Reidy with Chattanooga, Tenn., champions of the South Atlantic league. "Tommy" is a Weymouth boy who formerly played in this section, who use to dread batting against our own "Sid" Patterson. He was useless when "Sid" was twirling. I well remember his dismal showing when a member of the Norfolks of South Weymouth and the Walk-Overs when Patterson opposed these teams pitching for others.

He batted for .248 in 134 games and fielded for .962 standing 12th among the outfielders.

When to Stop Advertising.

An English journal requested a number of the largest advertisers to give their opinions concerning the best time to stop advertising, and the following replies were received:

When the population ceases to multiply and the generation that crowded on after you and never heard of you stops coming on.

When you have convinced everybody whose life will touch yours that you have better goods and lower prices than they can get anywhere else.

When you stop making fortunes solely through the direct use of this mighty agent.

When younger and fresher houses in your line cease starting up.

When you would rather have your own way and fail than take advice and win.—Nashville American.

The Ingenious Magpie.

The magpie is nothing if not ingenious. He always barricades his bulky nest with thorn branches, so that to plunder it is by no means an easy matter, but when circumstances oblige the "pie" to build in a low bush or hedge, an absence of lofty trees being a marked feature of some northern localities, he not only interlaces his home, but also the entire bush, in a most formidable manner. Nor does he stop here. To "make assurance double sure" he fashions a means of exit as well as an entrance to the castle, so that if disturbed he can slip out by his back door, as it were.—London Graphic.

UMPIRE WILL HAVE FULL SWAY

Amended Rules of Baseball Give Him Absolute Power.

MANY POINTS MADE CLEARER.

Average Diamond Fan Will Understand Things More Clearly Than Ever—What the Changes In the Rules Are.

The revised playing rules of baseball amended by the joint rules committee of the National and American leagues in Pittsburg last January were given out recently. The most striking feature of the revised rules is the importance given to the powers and duties of the umpires. This season more than ever before in the history of the game the umpire will be the reigning power on the diamond.

The new rules establish a double umpire system for all games, with an umpire in chief behind the bat to judge balls and strikes and certain decisions at third base and a field umpire to judge base decisions. The umpire in chief will have full charge of the game and will alone have authority to declare a game forfeited. The field umpire has full authority in removing and fining players. The two officials must work in harmony, and in case a point is raised on a decision based on a point of rules one umpire may ask for information from the other, but one umpire will not interfere with another's decision unless asked to by his associate.

The players are prohibited from disputing the accuracy of the umpire's judgment, and not even the captain of a team can call the umpire's attention to what he believes to be a violation of the rules.

Hereafter when a player is ejected from the game for violation of the rules he will not be allowed to loiter about the grounds or grand stand, but is decisively banished to the clubhouse and must stay there or leave the grounds, and if he doesn't the umpire is given the power to forfeit the game. The umpire can also fine a player $5 for discoloring the ball, for refusing to be seated on the bench one minute after ordered to do so, if he violates the coaching rules and if the captain fails to notify the official of a change in lineup.

The revised rules give the umpire absolute power over the players on the bench and to do away with all the rowdyism which has started at this quarter in the past. The umpire is given power to fine substitute players for yelling disapproval from the bench $10, and if the unsolicited conversation continues he is given power to clear the bench and send the whole crew of substitutes to the clubhouse and have them come out only as they are needed.

The new code provides for several changes in relation to ground rules. In case of an overflow crowd if the captains of the teams cannot agree on ground rules the umpire will have full authority to make special rules. If a thrown ball goes into the spectators or through a fence surrounding the field or into the players' bench the runner will be entitled to two bases. The umpire must be certain that both teams have agreed to special ground rules before the game commences. The umpire before each game shall call the two captains together and lay down the law to them and must give them to understand that the rules are to be strictly and impartially enforced. The umpire must announce the batteries before the game and also announce any change in the lineup.

Under the amended rules if a fielder stops or catches a batted ball with his cap, glove or any part of his uniform the runner or runners on the bases will be entitled to three bases. If a thrown or pitched ball strikes the umpire on foul ground the ball shall be considered in play and the base runner shall be entitled to all the bases he can make. A base runner will be declared out if he passes a preceding base runner before such runner has been legally put out.

A new rule gives the base runner the privilege of turning either to the right or left after touching first base, where heretofore he was compelled to turn to the right. If, however, after running over first base he should attempt to go to second before returning to first base he shall forfeit exemption from liability to be put out. Additions have also been made to the rule governing when a base runner may return to his base without liability of being declared out. In case the umpire declares an illegally batted ball he may go back; also if the umpire is struck by a fair hit ball before touching a fielder, in which case no base shall be run unless necessitated by the batsman becoming a base runner, and no run shall be scored unless all the bases are occupied. The runner may return to his base also if the umpire declares the batsman or another base runner out for interference.

A few slight changes are made in the scoring rules. A player will get an assist when he handles the ball in aiding in a run-out, even though he completes the play by making a put-out. Wild pitches and passed balls are exempt from the error column, as prior to the year 1909. In the event of a double or triple steal, where either runner is thrown out, the other or others shall not be credited with a stolen base.

Settling a Matrimonial Dispute.

Mme. Sada Yacco, the famous Japanese actress, who had been a friend of the assassinated Prince Ito from her childhood, told the following amusing anecdote:

"In my frequent quarrels with my husband we sometimes asked Prince Ito to judge between us. One day when we had had a more than usually violent dispute at Chigasaki the prince came in unexpectedly, and I asked him to decide the question. But he declined, while proposing the following solution:

"'Go down into the garden, both of you, and fight it out like sumo tori (wrestlers). The one that wins will naturally be the one who is in the right.'

"No sooner said than done! In a trice Kawakami and I were in wrestling trim. By good luck my husband was just recovering from a serious illness, and as he was very weak I soon threw him to the ground. This amused the prince enormously, who, of course, had foreseen the end of the unequal match."

Cemeteries Where Women Gossip.

Friday, the Sabbath of the Moslems, when all true believers of the masculine gender make a point of going to church, their wives, sisters and daughters resort to the cemeteries and wail for the dead. But all their time is not spent in weeping, and sorrow is not the only emotion they display, on these occasions. They take with them bunches and garlands of flowers and decorate the graves of their relatives and pray and weep over the dead for a time. Then when this pious duty is performed they gather in little groups and have a good time gossiping about the living. Thus the day of mourning is very popular among the Moslem women. It gives them almost the only opportunity they have of cultivating the acquaintance of their neighbors.

For the Judge's Information.

The police court judge could not repress a smile when his eyes rested on a card that was lying on his desk during a session of the court. On it were printed two stanzas under the title "The Perfect Man," and he could not but look at the motley gang of prisoners who sat before him. And he did not think the card had been dropped accidentally. The verses read:

There is a man who never drinks,
Nor smokes, nor chews, nor swears,
Who never gambles, never flirts,
And shuns all sinful snares—
He's paralyzed.

There is a man who never does
Anything that is not right.
His wife can tell just where he is
At morning, noon and night—
He's dead.

Vol. 24 No. 62 QUINCY, MASS. TUESDAY EVENING, MARCH 15, 1910 PRICE TWO CENTS

AN OPEN LETTER TO MAYOR OF BOSTON

President Bowles Commends Mayor Fitzgerald for Support of Ocean Mail Bill.

At Annual Banquet of the Quincy Board of Trade.

Hon. John F. Fitzgerald, Mayor of Boston, City Hall, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir:—You deserve the commendation of all interested in the upbuilding of this community for your frank advocacy of the ocean mail bill now before Congress. This is not merely a Republican measure. It was endorsed and reported to the Senate the other day by Republican and Democrats alike, without a dissenting vote, in the committee that had been considering it. A similar measure passed the Senate two years ago without any opposition, and was defeated on May 2, 1909, in the House of Representatives, the division standing 172 to 175. Several Democrats from other states supported the bill, but it was not supported by the three members from Boston, who not having had the matter earnestly and specifically brought to their attention by their constituents must unfortunately have felt obliged to follow the program of the Democratic party.

I believe this community has an immediate interest in the passage of the Ocean Mail bill again before Congress, and that it would be a benefit to Boston and the manufacturers of New England and the whole country, as a fundamental step in promoting regular business with South America. Under the operation of the proposed act Boston might secure a direct line of steamers to Rio and Argentina and the Fore River yard would undoubtedly build some of the thirty or more steamships which would be required for this and other lines to be established.

No ships but haphazard foreign "tramps" ever appear now in this port from South America. Their passage takes from thirty to sixty days, but a modern mail line of American built steamships would bring Boston within eighteen days of the city of Buenos Ayres and the great hide and wool markets of Argentina.

These foreign "tramps" do not sail out of our port. They discharge their cargoes here, occasionally collect a little freight, and disappear, but a first class American mail steamship line would give New England manufacturers and merchants quick, regular, direct communication with the richest of South American republics.

Such a line would be of more importance than any other one thing in the expansion of the business of our port and the manufactures and commerce of New England.

It would make mail communication from North America a means of business, whereas it is now a hopeless aggravation as I have learned by a short experience.

There was a time when shipbuilding was the greatest industry of Boston and Massachusetts, and it appears to me that the demonstration has been already made that it is now an industry which is worthy of encouragement as an important one in Boston harbor, and essential to the future of the port.

But it is never too late to mend. The Ocean Mail bill is coming up again in Congress with added provision for lines to the Isthmus of Panama. The Massachusetts State Board of Trade has already formally approved the measure, and it ought to be endorsed at once by our Boston Chamber of Commerce and by the Boards of Trade and business organizations of "Greater Boston" and Boston harbor. In other words we should enable our representatives in Congress to support this legislation without regard to party affiliations.

Foreign steamship interests should not be permitted to longer stifle and obstruct the will of the people. The prompt passage of the Ocean Mail now awaiting action in Congress is a first and necessary step towards regular and increasing business with South America, and your public support of this legislation is a credit to your patriotism and your wisdom as a public officer.

Very sincerely yours,
F. T. Bowles.

Quincy, March 14, 1910.

Dr. Henderson Speaks on Subject of Socialism

The Men's Club of Bethany church had an attendance of 100 or more at the March meeting on Monday evening, and they listened very attentively to a presentation of Socialism by one of its leading exponents, Dr. C. Hanford Henderson, a noted writer and speaker on the subject.

The supper at 6.30 was incharge of the Membership committee, W. G. Shaw chairman, and seemed to satisfy all. The menu included: "Escalloped tomato, hot roast beef, mashed potato, squash, pickles, rolls, graham bread, hot apple pie, ice cream and cake, crackers and cheese and coffee. Flowering plants added their charm.

President Edward Southworth happily introduced the speaker of the evening.

Dr. Henderson was warmly greeted. He devoted considerable time at the outset in telling what Socialism is not, saying that it had suffered by misrepresentation. He said Socialism is not anti-religious; not against the family and in favor of "free love;" not destructive of best things in society; not the enemy of private property owning. He enlarged on each of the four, saying it was not a subplanter of old religions, but an economic doctrine. In Europe there is an anti- clerical feeling because Socialists believe the clergy are against them. Socialists did not advocate "free love" with quotation marks, but maintained that men and women must be economically independent. Socialism had nothing in common with Anarchy. Present society today is between Socialism and Anarchy. Socialists do not wish to divide property, but that every man shall have everything he desires. They draw the line at ownership of land or machine to exact a profit.

Socialism is simple and a solution for all ills. It is for International peace. Socialism is for the abolition of profit in industry. If one believes in profit from industry he is not a Socialist. Industries are for use, not for profit. Cut out profit and we have a social revolution; not a warfare, but evolution of all industrial conditions. Socialists of today were in the same position as the Abolitionists of 1850 to 1860. The root of the evil is profit, and the axe must be put at the root. The end of education is a better humanity. What is the dominant note in industry today. Not persons, not things, but profit. Articles are not made for use but for profit. It is monstrous that so many children are working in the Southern cotton mills and in the mines, and being robbed of health and happiness. Socialists believe in trusts, but would have them administer for all not for profit.

Dr. Henderson was heartily applauded.

President Southworth then allowed three minutes each to men present to discuss Socialism.

Dr. G. L. Cady of Dorchester, who addressed the club Jan. 17 in opposition to Socialism, was urged to reply. He agreed Socialism was not anti-religious, but queried, why do Socialists leave the church? Churches cannot advocate economic programs. Socialists are ignorant of what is going on in the churches. Christianity is seeking new world. We disagree with Socialists in their method. The error of Socialists is that they do not reckon with human nature. If Socialism shall change as much in the next 25 or 30 years as in last 25 or 30 we will be somewhere near together.

Theophilus King refuted the claim that industries were not striving to produce the best article. He knew it was necessary or competitors would push to the wall. The figures quoted by Dr. Henderson were entirely wrong. He knew industries where labor got nearly everything.

Gustaf Osler asked if red flag was the emblem of Socialists.

Dr. Henderson replied to each with good arguments. He was given a vote of thanks at the close.

QUINCY SENATOR WITH THE MAJORITY

The Bar and Bottle Bill Passed to be Engrossed in the Senate Yesterday.

Will Prevent Sale of Bottle Liquor Over a Bar.

SENATOR HULTMAN.

The "bar and bottle" bill was passed to be engrossed in the Massachusetts Senate on Monday on a voice vote, but two roll calls were previously taken.

On motion to postpone the vote was: Yes 14; No 21, Senator Hultman being with the majority against postponement.

The act if passed by the House will prevent the sale of bottle liquor over a bar, by forbidding the issuance of first and fourth class licenses to the same licensee.

In support of the bill and in reply to Senator Teeling, Senator Nash of Plymouth, is reported as follows:

"I want my honored friend to understand that in the first place the business of the commonwealth is to make men, to make citizens and not to raise drunkards. We are living in the memories of her glorious past, and what made it glorious? It was because of the high citizenship of this commonwealth. There is a higher question here than that of revenue.

"In the face of that it is an argument that I care very little about. I rise here because this is a moral question, and we should consider what we do here, we should have a higher regard for the public morality than for the mere business side of the question when that question is one which involves men becoming drunkards.

"There is not one line of progress in the history of our country or of this commonwealth that has not been founded on moral issues. It has cost money; what is money when a great moral issue is at stake?"

"We are for the bill because it will prevent the man already drunk in the barroom, from taking away his bottleful to complete his debauch in the family at home."

An attempt may be made in the Senate today to reconsider the engrossment of the bill.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The projected war against the house fly may make it possible for the star boarder to get real currants in his buns.

Men's hats one size too large are stylish this spring. This is eminently fitting to the swelled heads of the Smart Setters.

Thomas A. Edison is credited with saying that, with a bit of radium as big as a pin, the entire state of Rhode Island could be lighted. Why humiliate Little Rhody in this heartless way?

The average haul of magazines, says the postal department, is 1,048 miles, and of daily newspapers but 291 miles ,and yet the magazines expect an easy chair on the ground floor of postage rates.

Crooks who select Quincy as a stamping ground soon come to grief, a fact that speaks well for the efficiency of our police department. It is probable that pickpockets will cross Quincy off of their calling list in the future.

Some protests have been made against the new rule of State Treasurer Stevens that hereafter State checks sent to municipalities shall be made payable to both the Mayor and the Treasurer, but it seems a wise precautionary measure. Why not go further and pass a law that all money advanced to a municipality on a vote o bond or check shall be made payable to the Mayor and Treasurer. A double endorsement has merit in many ways.

The New England boom has reached Peabody. For the purpose of giving the shoe industry of New England a new and world-wide publicity, a special public meeting will be held at Peabody Institute , Peabody this evening, under the joint auspices of the New England Shoe and Leather Association and the Peabody Board of Trade. This will be the first of a series of similar meetings to be held in Lynn, Haverhill and other shoe manufacturing centres.

The Daily Ledger suggests a similar meeting for the granite industry of Quincy under the auspices of the Board of Trade. Probably there are many things which Quincy organizations might do to help the industry and the city. President Stone suggested, at the recent banquet that there should be a railroad from the quarries to tide water; then there should be a connecting street between Quarry street and Brook road. But it is publicity that is wanted for Quincy granite, and the Daily Ledger is ready to cooperate.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The advance made in industrial education during the last few years is the most remarkable feature of modern times. Only a few years ago educators and boards of educators looked with disdain on the man who proposed to them the introduction of manual training or domestic science into the school routine. But now the most skeptical of these men has been won over and cities are vying with one another in courses in these branches the most complete and up-to-date. It marks the change from the time when a person's brain was the only thing he was taught to use while in school to the time when he is taught to use his hand and faculties at the same time. The graduate of today and tomorrow is not a worthless burden upon the country who must wait until he gets his practical experience before he is of any use in the world. He now steps out from school or college prepared to do his share in the world's work.—Haverhill Gazette.

There is just now an epidemic of grumbling, contriving and suggesting as to how to reduce the cost of living. Some critics have taken the ground that the farmers are inefficient and should raise twice as much to the acre as they already do. The idea of advising idle people to go to work does not appear to have been considered as one solution of the problem.

A correspondent of the New York Times suggests that "The matter with America today is that there are too many lazy loafers lounging with their feet up on a desk waiting for some 'sucker' to come in and give them something for nothing."

There's something in that. If the latent labor of this great nation could be utilized there ought to be plenty to eat, drink and wear for those able and willing to do certain work. With the spider web system of trolley and steam lines radiating in every direction it should now be a comparatively easy matter for city dwellers to own and cultivate a little ground within twenty miles of their homes and thereby secure an abundance to eat as well as the better health that comes from working out of doors and getting in touch with the soil.

The factory worker who cultivates a bit of ground is adding to his income, to his physical and mental well being and to his contentment with life. It gives him helpful and healthful diversion as an antidote to the monotony of his daily occupation, and makes him to a considerable degree independent of the burden of high prices for food.—Brockton Enterprise.

Dr. Charles W. Elliot has been giving some study to the immigration problem. His idea is that some of the regulations that immigrants must meet are unnecessary and burdensome. He says the questions which are appropriate to apply to the immigrant are, is he healthy strong and desirous of earning a good living? Many illiterates have common sense, sound bodies and good characters. He thinks that it is not clear that education increases much the amount of common sense which nature gave the individual. An educational test is appropriate at the time when the foreigner proposes to become a voting citizen. He ought then to know how to read. There is a good deal of common sense in what President Elliot says. Of course, the spirit of our institutions is opposed to illiteracy, but have we not had instances of immigrants who were highly educated, but who could not or would not accept that spirit, and who became our most dangerous enemies? Dr. Elliot believes that the attitude of Congress and the laws of the country should be hospitable and not repellent. They are, but the laws should be administrated for the benefit of those who are here rather than for those who want to come in. We have been too hospitable, and to be more careful is the demand of the present time.—Lynn Item.

OUTLOOK FOR THE ELECTIONS OF 1910.

Conditions That Make Them of Especial Importance to the Public—Why Ohio Will Be the Storm Center

Chief Features of the Senatorial and Gubernatorial Contests—Important Factors That Will Enter Into the Canvass

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

THE general elections of 1910 will be of especial importance because they will furnish the American people the first opportunity to pass on the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill and the Taft administration. Not only are all the members of the house of representatives to be chosen, but thirty members of the United States senate and thirty-two governors. In the case of the senators three have been elected already—Williams of Mississippi, Daniel of Virginia and Rayner of Maryland. The legislature which chooses a successor to McCumber of North Dakota also elects a senator for the short term in place of Purcell. The other senators whose terms expire with the present congress are Aldrich of Rhode Island, Beveridge of Indiana, Bulkeley of Connecticut, Burkett of Nebraska, Burrows of Michigan, Carter of Montana, Clapp of Minnesota, Clark of Wyoming, Culberson of Texas, Depew of New York, Dick of Ohio, Du Pont of Delaware, Flint of California, Frazier of Tennessee, Hale of Maine, Kean of New Jersey, La Follette of Wisconsin, Lodge of Massachusetts, Nixon of Nevada, Oliver of Pennsylvania, Page of Vermont, Piles of Washington, Scott of West Virginia, Sutherland of Utah, Taliaferro of Florida and Warner of Missouri. Since three of the senators are elected already and McCumber and Purcell come from the same state, there are only twenty-seven states to name senators before March 4 next. It is an interesting coincidence that there are also just twenty-seven states that elect governors on Nov. 8, as five of them choose their chief executives a month or more earlier.

CONSPICUOUS FIGURES IN THE OHIO POLITICAL SITUATION.

First Gun of 1912.

The storm center will be Ohio. Being the president's own state and also the home of Governor Harmon, who, if re-elected, will be a leading candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, the Ohio contest becomes the preliminary engagement to the general battle of 1912. While the state is normally Republican by from 50,000 to 100,000 plurality, the last two governors it elected were Democrats, and Harmon had 19,372 in a presidential year, although Taft carried the state by 69,591. In addition to the state ticket and the presidential stake in the governorship, Ohio also elects one senator and twenty-one congressmen.

The Ohio situation has been complicated by the graft exposures. As Governor Harmon has had much to do with bringing the crookedness to light and as he has favored economy, the natural effect would be to help him before the people. Of late this has been somewhat neutralized, however, by President Taft's insistence on a thorough investigation. The complication is augmented by the fact that Harmon has opposed the Democratic machine, just as President Taft while secretary of war opposed Boss Cox of the Cincinnati Republican machine. The result of all this and of other things is that party lines were never so loosely drawn in Ohio as at this time. The Buckeye State has always had more politics to the square inch than any other state in the Union, and partisan feeling ran high. The condition is past. Ohio today is full of independent voters, or at least of nominal party men who are willing to kick out of the traces.

The importance placed on the Buckeye fight by the national administration is shown by the fact that Wade H. Ellis was sent out to take charge of the Republican campaign, resigning a well paying federal job in the attorney general's office to do so. When a man is willing to separate himself from a lucrative office to become a state chairman at nothing a year it is a sign that something is doing. The administration denies having sent Ellis; but, anyway, Ellis is there, however he got to it.

Looking For a Standard Bearer.

There are several candidates for the Republican nomination for governor. The first in the field and the one that has the largest concrete support is former Lieutenant Governor Warren G. Harding, who intersperses politics with editing a newspaper. At the time of an Ohio conference in Washington Mr. A. L. Garford, a Buckeye capitalist, came on and was dined at the White House. The statement was then made that Garford was the administration candidate for governor, but since that time little has been heard of him. Representative Nicholas Longworth was also mentioned, but he blushingly waved aside the proffered crown, saying that he preferred to remain in congress.

Recently a new Richmond has come into the field in the person of James R. Garfield. Now, the name of Garfield is one to conjure with in Ohio. There are any number of old chaps in the state who voted and cheered for James A. Garfield thirty years ago, and there is an affection for the son because of the father. Then the Roosevelt men—and the Buckeye woods are full of them—swear by Jimmie Garfield, the former president's cabinet officer and bosom friend. It would be a novel situation if the man who is standing by Gifford Pinchot and who was kept out of the Taft cabinet, according to sworn testimony, by the Morgan-Guggenheim Alaska coal interests, should now be called upon as the one available man to save the administration from defeat in the president's own state. Yet that would be the light in which the country at large would inevitably regard Garfield's nomination for governor of Ohio.

Personally Governor Harmon is immensely popular, and that it will take a hard fight to beat him nobody realizes more keenly than the Ohio Republicans themselves. Although sixty-four years old, Harmon is in the prime of his vigor and has a virile, straightforward democratic way that takes with the people. The careers of Harmon and Taft have been intermingled in peculiar ways. They were born in the same county, live in the same city, were judges on the same bench, and both have been cabinet officers. It would be a strange additional chapter if Harmon should be re-elected and he and his old friend Taft should be the opposing candidates for the presidency in 1912. It will be recalled that Harmon recently presided over the house of governors and that President Taft spoke of him most cordially when that body called to pay its respects at the White House.

The Ohio situation is further complicated by the senatorial contest. Senator Dick is a candidate for re-election and is demanding a primary. Harry Daugherty and Myron T. Herrick are in the field against him, and Charles P. Taft is lurking in the background. There is bitter opposition to Dick, and the fight is taking on an aspect which is encouraging the Democrats to battle not only for the governorship, but for the legislature.

The situation in New York is similar to that in Ohio, except that there is not so much presidential politics and there is no Democratic governor. Conditions in the Empire State are complicated by the candidacy of Senator Depew for re-election, against whom there is strong opposition; also by the Allds bribery charges in the state senate and by the refusal of Governor Hughes to be a candidate for re-election. It is generally believed in New York that Democratic chances would be bright this year were it not for the fact that the minority party is torn by factional fights and that in some other ways it is not in the best condition to take advantage of the situation. At present the atmosphere is not sufficiently clarified to make a prediction.

Senator Beveridge is fighting for his political life in Indiana, where the governor, the legislature and nearly all the congressmen are at present Democratic. Practically the same situation confronts Senator Burkett in Nebraska. Burkett himself believes that William J. Bryan is a receptive candidate for his seat. The situation of Senator Thomas H. Carter in Montana is a little better, although the state has a Democratic governor and there is but two Republican majority on joint ballot in the legislature. Another state with a Democratic governor and in which not only one but two senators are at stake is North Dakota. The present North Dakota legislature is overwhelmingly Republican. In Nevada, where the seat of Senator Nixon (Republican) is at stake, the governor and legislature are Democratic.

One of the hottest fights of the year will be made in Missouri, where the Democrats will try to regain the seat now held by Senator Warner (Republican). Ex-Governor Francis has announced himself as a candidate for the Democrats, and it is possible that ex-Governor Folk, who ran in the primaries against Senator Stone, may also enter the lists. Governor Hadley has recently charged that Stone beat Folk in the primaries by fraud.

The situation in little Delaware, where Senator Du Pont is a candidate for re-election, is unsettled. There is opposition to Du Pont in his own party, it being charged that he used too much money in his last election.

Fighting the Senate Machine.

One of the marked signs of the year is the appearance of insurgent aspirants against the old stand pat leaders in the senate. No one has yet entered the lists against Senator Aldrich in Rhode Island, but Judge Frederick A. Powers is in the field to beat Eugene Hale of Maine; Representative Butler Ames is looking for the seat of Henry Cabot Lodge in Massachusetts, Representative W. P. Hubbard is after the scalp of Nathan Bay Scott in West Virginia, and Representative Charles E. Townsend has thrown down the glove to Julius Caesar Burrows of Michigan.

Aside from Senator Beveridge, two insurgent senators are up for re-election—La Follette of Wisconsin, who will doubtless meet the usual opposition, and Clapp of Minnesota, against whom Frank B. Kellogg, the anti-trust attorney, has announced himself a candidate.

One of the peculiarities of the senatorial situation is that out of the twenty-seven members of the upper house yet to be elected, or twenty-eight including the successor to Purcell of North Dakota, only four of those to be replaced are Democrats, and all of these, excepting Purcell, are certain to be replaced by men of their own political faith. There is a rumor that one of the number, Frazier of Tennessee, may give way to Secretary of War Dickinson; but, although a member of the Taft cabinet, Dickinson classes himself as a Democrat.

The present Republican majority in the senate is twenty-four. A change of thirteen would therefore make the body Democratic, or, granting the loss of Purcell, fourteen. Is there any chance of the Democrats defeating fourteen of the twenty-four Republicans who are up for election? As already pointed out, Indiana, Nebraska, Montana, New York, Ohio, Delaware, Nevada and Missouri are uncertain states, and each of these has a Republican senator whose seat will be to fill. Even if the Democrats carried all of them, however, they would still be six short of enough. The probability, therefore, is that the Republicans will control the next senate, but by a reduced majority, which may give the insurgents the balance of power.

Cannon Out of It.

As for the house, the present Republican majority is fifty-six. At least twenty-nine Democratic gains would be necessary to control the body. It is impossible to make a house forecast by states and equally hopeless to do it at this time by individual districts. The only way of judging of the future political complexion of the house must be on the basis of the general drift of the country. The one significant fact is that the Democrats make confident claims and at least some of the Republicans are pessimistic. This is hardly a safe criterion, however, as past elections have shown. Sometimes the man who is scared is the one who puts up the best fight and wins out. The only prediction that can be made with confidence at this time is that Joseph G. Cannon will not be the speaker of the next house.

Taken all in all this will be one of the most important off year elections the United States has known. The tariff, high prices, the Taft administration, the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, the insurgent movement, Aldrichism and Cannonism and, in some states, graft exposures will enter into the canvass. Party lines will be faint in spots, but popular interest will not be less because of that welcome fact.

MEMORIAL HALL FOR GRAND ARMY

Residence of the Late Dr. Everett Now Suggested

A Grand Army Memorial hall, which should be devoted to the use of the Grand Army and kindred organizations, becomes more and more apparent every year. At the present time these organizations all use what is known as Grand Army hall. This building is leased by Paul Revere post, G. A. R., but the lease is subject to the sale of the building. It is understood that the building is now for sale and should it be sold, these organizations must seek new quarters.

It is pointed out that Quincy is about the only city in the State, where the city or town authorities have not come to the aid of the Grand Army, and either provided a hall or memorial building, or where part of the expense of maintaining such a hall is not born by the local government.

It is a well recognized fact that the ranks of the G. A. R. are rapidly growing thinner, as year by year passes, and it will be but a few years more before the last of the defenders of the old flag in the years of 1860-63 will have been mustered into that army above. Their memory, however, will ever remain green and will be perpetuated by the kindred organizations connected with the post, so that it is eminently fitting that there should be a memorial hall.

The local post have had this thought in mind for some time, and steps have been taken toward securing such a building. It was thought that the Adams Academy building would make an ideal building and location and efforts were made to obtain it, but have been without avail.

The old High School building has also been suggested but the expense of removal and remodelling make this out of reach.

It has also been suggested that the Rev. Dr. Everett house on Miller Stile road would make an ideal memorial hall. The situation is delightful and the surroundings are all that could be desired. With but a small outlay it would be possible to take the necessary changes. Then if the city could be prevailed upon to make an annual appropriation to help maintain it, Quincy would have a memorial hall and museum of which it would well be proud.

A Collector's Bargain.

Lord Spencer of Althorp, one of the greatest of book collectors, was at home only in his own field. One day in browsing about Bond street, London, he went into the shop of a dealer in bric-a-brac. The dealer, who knew him by sight, said persuasively:

"Here is a fine bit of pottery which your lordship really ought to have, and you shall have it very cheap—only 2 guineas."

So Lord Spencer bought it and took it home and set it in a high place. One day a connoisseur of china paid him a visit, and Lord Spencer showed his bargain.

"What did you give for it?" asked the connoisseur.

"Two guineas," answered Spencer rather proudly.

"H'm!" said the connoisseur. "At that price the marmalade should have been included."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, that precious piece of yours is nothing more or less than a shilling marmalade pot with a green thistle painted on it."

The Difference.

She—When a man starts to talk he never stops to think. He—And when a woman starts she never thinks to stop.

Hope for the best, but work hard for the result.

SUNDAY SERVICES

HALL PLACE M. E.

"The duty of the separated life" was the subject of the Sunday morning sermon by the Rev. Carl H. Raupach at the Hall Place M. E. church, the text being "Whereupon come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord and touch not the unclean thing." Second Cor. 6-17. The choir rendered "Jesus I my cross have taken."

There was a good attendance at the Sunday school. The Junior league reached the record mark at the afternoon service, there being 33 present, the largest number this year. One new member was enrolled.

Miss Lillain Johnson lead the Epworth League devotional service at 6.15 with this for a topic: "How to be strong.."

The pastor, Rev. Carl H. Raupach, baptised the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. George Farnham, at their home on Willard street. A very impressive ceremony was performed in the presence of relatives and friends.

The pastor took for his Sunday evening text Deut. 29-29. "The secret things belong unto the Lord our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever."

He began his sermon by quoting a learned man whom he had once heard speak concerning the finite and the infinite, as compared one with the other. "He said that the great distinction was to be found in this, that the finite, which is man, is always asking why while the infinite neither asks why, nor of necessity gives a reason for His works." He said that the human family as a whole is made up of inquisitive beings, men who are always asking why, and we find that curiosity has been a potent factor in the life of mankind from its earliest moments. The finite man is continually seking to find out things, always in the investigation line, always asking the question why, and seeking to know the wherefore of everything. But this peculiar characteristic of mankind is one of the greatest blessings the world has ever known, so long as it is kept within bounds, in searching for the things which God would have us know, and not trying to find out those things which God has not revealed to us. He then went on to say that many people claim that they cannot accept Christ because they cannot understand the mysterious birth of Christ, but said that it was not His birth but the sacrifice of His life ,and the consummation of that sacrifice on the cross, and the climax of bursting asunder the chains of death and rising from the dead, that made possible the redemption of man, and that if man wil lonly exercise the same degree of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as he does in other things he will be saved.

There will be a meeting of all ladies of church together with the Official Board in the vestry Tuesday night.

SURPRISE PARTY.

On Saturday evening a complete surprise was given Miss Ruth Bean of Atlantic street in anticipation of her trip west. The Misses Grace and Ruth Parker deserve great credit in keeping the secret so well and in making their plans with the aid of Mrs. Otto Hoelcher, wholly unknown to Miss Bean. Miss Bean who made a most charming hostess was completely prostrated with joy and surprise when she found fourteen young ladies attractively gowned in evening costumes gathered in a merry circle in the drawing room of her home.

It was not long however after her arrval home after being kept away until the party assembled, before games were entered into, and a most delightful evening spent. Delicious refreshments were served by the young ladies and at eleven o'clock the merry band dispersed leaving with Miss Bean the heartiest wishes for a safe journey to the west and a most delightful trip all around.

Those present were: Miss Julia Barber, Miss Katherine Gay, Miss Ruth Parker, Miss Grace Parker, Miss Addie Nichols, Miss Susie Nichols, Mrs. Otto Hoelcher, Miss Marion Dorman, Miss Alberta Ellison, Miss Helen Baker, Miss Theresa Dean, Miss Louisa Ross, Miss Maude Read, Otto Hoelcher, Clifford Bean.

While little Christabel and her yet smaller sister were playing, her mother was announcing to grandma:

"Our neighbor, Mrs. P., has a new baby."

Instantly Christabel turned in eager excitement.

"Oh mamma," she asked, "what is she going to do with her old one?"

CITY SQUARE BREAKS

Berry Bros. and Bicycle Store Entered

There were two breaks in City Square Monday night, and from the appearance of the places the work was evidently that of boys. They entered the store of Berry Bros. on Hancock street, and the bicycle shop of Carl Tinlof on Granite street. The breaks were probably made during the early evening, as Officer Doran visited the places about 10 o'clock, and they were all right at that time. Sometime between 12 and 1 o'clock the breaks were discovered by Officer Johnson.

Entrance to Berry Bros. store was had by pushing in the slats on one of the windows in the alley leading to the rear of the store, and smashing the window. As far as can be learned nothing was taken.

Entrance to the Hub Bicycle store was also obtained by a window in the alley. The window was smashed and once inside the parties smashed the slot gas machine and removed what coin there was in it. As the machine had been opened a few days before probably not over fifty cents was secured. The breaking of the meter however caused the gas to escape, and it might have resulted seriously if not discovered when it was. The police are inclined to think the work was that of boys.

WILL U. S. PAY THE BILL

Want New Bridges at Weymouth Back River

The secretary of the navy has petitioned the secretary of war to have the Lincoln street drawbridge over Weymouth back river in Hingham improved and widened, says the Monitor. The subject with instructions to investigate conditions was today referred to Lieut.-Col Edward Burr, army engineer in Boston. A public hearing will be held in the federal building some day the last of this month. It is already known that a protest against making changes in the bridges will be made by city officials of Quincy, town officials of Hingham and Weymouth and the Old Colony street Railway Company.

The naval authorities want the draws in the bridges widened from 25 feet to at least 50 feet. The reason assigned is the location at Hingham of the United States naval magazine. The petition of the secretary of the navy sets forth that at present lighters and tows of government design, used for the transportation of powder and supplies, cannot navigate on the Weymouth Back river because of the narrow draws.

There are two distinct bridges crossing the Weymouth Back river at Lincoln street. The highway bridge is owned jointly by the city of Quincy and the towns of Hingham and Weymouth. The funds for repairs and maintenance are apportioned. The other bridge runs alongside the highway bridge and is used and owned by the Old Colony Street Railway Company.

While the bridge is not a modern structure, and the naval authorities do not ask for a new bridge, it is known that plans for an up-to-date structure are in the hands of naval engineers. Whether they will be brought forth at the war department hearing in Boston is not known at present. The secretary of the navy does not dwell on the question of a new bridge, but is determined that the draws be widened. In this he will be supported by the towboat companies plying in Boston harbor.

The interests representing the city of Quincy and towns of Weymouth and Hingham will oppose the request on the grounds that if any changes are needed by the naval authorities the expenses should not be borne by the citizens of the city and towns they represent. This likewise will be the contention of the railway officials.

LETTERS OF PUBLIC INTEREST

AN EXPLANATION.

Editor of Daily Ledger:

The writer of the article which appeared in the columns of the Daily Ledger headed "Bath house Wanted' seems to have confounded Wollaston Beach with Rufe's Hummock. A few bath houses near Rufe's Hummock were floated off by the Christmas storm. They were situated on the land which was taken by the Commonwealth and the owners may or may not be allowed to return them to their old location.

None of the bath houses on Wollaston Beach proper, (which really lies between the Yacht club and Sailors' Home bluff,) will be moved back, nor have the owners ever had any trouble with the Park Commissioners. It is here that the proposed Sanitary and police station is to be erected.

SAN JOSE SCALE.

The San Jose scale has increased at a very rapid rate in Massachusetts during recent years, so much so as to form as serious a menace to our orchards as any of the imported tree pests, and to be vastly more dangerous than our native insects. Where this scale once obtains lodgment in an orchard it will kill the trees in a very few years, except they receive careful yearly treatments. Its spread is rapid and not easily to be guarded against. One of the most annoying developments of the situation is the spread of the scale from the property of those who care too little for their fruit and ornamental trees to properly protect them to that of their more careful neighbors. Many instances have been brought to the attention of the State Board of Agriculture of orchardists who have been put to great yearly expense and been subjected to a great deal of injury because of the carelessness of their neighbors. Ample authority exists under Chapter 444, Acts of 1909 ,the State Nursery Inspection Law, to compel offending property owners to clear their property of the scale. With the purpose of bringing this information to the attention of the public the Board has issued its Circular Number 1, giving extracts from the law and explaining how to set it in motion. This will be sent to any address within the State on application to J. Lewis Ellsworth, Secretary State Board of Agriculture, State House, Boston. Nature Leaflet Number 33, giving directions for the treatment of this and other scale insects can be obtained in the same manner.

TWELVE MILLION BOXES A YEAR.

The verdict of the nation! During the year 1909 the people of America bought twelve million boxes of Cascarets candy cathartic. Among the intelligent American public nothing succeeds like merit, and the stamp of public approval has evidently been affixed to the pure, fragrant palatable little tablets of candy that are regulating the liver, stimulating the bowels, purifying the blood and perfuming the breath of the nation. The reason? Cascarets are honest, up-to-date, natural successors to the pills of the past, doing better work and doing it in so much nicer and more pleasant way. You can get a box of Cascarets free by simply sending address to Sterling Remedy Company, Wheeling, West Virginia.

Several members of Maple Lodge K. and L of H., 313, will attend the annual visitations of Unity lodge, Washington street, Boston on Friday evening, and witness the work on several candidates.

It is thought that the committee of the Legislature will report a bill for $75,000 for the new court building at Quincy. While this is less than the original bill called for, the city will be fortunate if it gets an appropriation of that amount.

FIGHTING FOR POLITICAL LIFE

Administration vs. Machine In the Empire State

ROOT'S WARNING TO WOODRUFF

Federal Power Will Be Used to Thwart Opposition to Hughes and His Measures—Party Split May Mean Republicans' Loss of 1912 Campaign—Woodruff's Hands Are Strengthened by Election of Cobb

New York, March 15.—With the departure of Senator Elihu Root for Washington to inform President Taft of the result of his conferences with Timothy L. Woodruff, chairman of the Republican state committee, and the local leaders on the question of Woodruff's retirement from the chairmanship, looms a political situation which, in its larger meaning, bears directly not only on the coming state campaign next fall, but on the national campaign of 1912.

The administration, through Root, has made it clear to those now in the party's leadership in this state that New York must not be lost by the Republicans in the gubernatoral election, for such defeat would endanger the party's success two years later. To this end Root informed Woodruff that the opposition to Governor Hughes and his measures must cease, and the delicate suggestion is said to have been made that the federal power would be used to thwart such opposition if it continued.

Whether Root sought to force Woodruff from the state chairmanship as an initial step to remove from party control the so-called "machine" leaders is the subject of much conjecture at state headquarters. "I am still here," said Woodruff, and then made it evident that he would at least continue as chairman until the end of his term.

"There's much more than the chairmanship of the state committee involved in this matter," said an upstate leader. "President Taft and his friends are setting the stage for the national campaign of 1912 and the administration feels that unless the present state organization joins with Governor Hughes a party split will follow that will give the state to the Democrats next November and seriously jeopardize the Republicans' chance of capturing New York's thirty-nine electoral votes for their presidential nominee.

"Woodruff will remain chairman and the opposition to Governor Hughes will in a large measure cease so that no split may occur, if the Root plan is carried out, but the election of Senator Cobb as president pro tem of the state senate has so strengthened the hands of Woodruff and his friends in the organization that they may elect to advance such legislation as they please at Albany, and so doing, will split the party wide open. In that event our hope lies in Theodore Roosevelt, who will be asked to assume the leadership of his party, and his return is only three months away."

The Woodruff adherents assert that the main efforts of the administration in the present situation contemplate an invasion of the right of state political control. Root is said to have insisted that if Senator Allds is guilty he must go, and Woodruff made it plain that the organization would let matters take their course.

Kills Sister-In-Law and Self

Buffalo, March 15.—Mrs. Jacob Conrad, aged 30, a widow, was shot and instantly killed by John Conrad, her brother-in-law. Conrad then shot himself, dying instantly. The shooting is said to have been the result of the woman's indifference to the attentions of her brother-in-law.

NO AGGRESSIVE ACTION

Prince Henry Points Out That Great Britain Is Germany's Friend

Hamburg, March 15.—Addressing the East Asiatic society, Prince Henry of Prussia said that as a result of his visit to England he could assure them that Great Britain offered to Germany an honorable and sincere friendship.

The idea of aggressive action, he added, was completely absent from the minds of those in the British government. That, however, rested on reciprocity, and nothing must be omitted that might serve to strengthen the confidence of the two nations in each other.

The old saying, "confidence begets confidence," he continued, was here applicable. He could answer for the friendly feelings of the naval officers, but the merchants had a similar duty to discharge, just as much as his military comrades.

AN INDICATION OF PEACE

Head of Philadelphia Transit Company Meets Union Leader

Philadelphia, March 15.—The first step taken by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company toward settling the dispute with its striking employes, and incidentally ending the sympathetic strike which has now been in progress for ten days, was taken last evening when President Kruger of the rapid transit company conferred with W. D. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes.

The meeting of the labor leader and the rapid transit official was the result of outside influences and it is the first time officials of the company have dealt directly with any national officer of the street car men's union.

THE ROOSEVELTS' FAMILY REUNION

Meeting of Father and Son With Mother and Daughter

Khartoum, March 15.—Theodore Roosevelt and his party arrived here at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon. The former President of the United States received a most flattering reception.

Upon the pier Roosevelt was pressed by an enormous and enthusiastic crowd, but his escort saved him from any possible discomfort. He was at once escorted to the palace of the sirdar, at the steps of which he was received by the high Soudan officials. The stay at the palace was brief, Roosevelt hurrying away to the railroad station to meet Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Ethel Roosevelt.

Colonel Roosevelt arrived at the station in time to meet his wife and daughter upon their arrival. His family reunion after a year's separation was in strict privacy. In the station room were only Theodore and Edith Roosevelt, and their son and daughter, Kermit and Ethel. After a few moments of seclusion a very happy appearing family emerged from the station and proceeded to the palace. Last evening no one was permitted to disturb the privacy of the Roosevelts.

ALLEGED THEFT OF FUNDS

Arrest of Man Who Held Treasurer's Position For Seven Years

Fall River, Mass., March 15.—Charged with the larceny of $3400 from the Union Canadienne St. Jean de Baptiste society of Bowenville, Alphonse Boulay, for seven years treasurer of the society, was arrested at his grocery store.

The alleged defalcation was discovered when the presentation of a check at the bank where the society's funds were deposited brought out the fact that the society was credited with $1.50, instead of the $3000 or more that the books showed.

SEEKING DIAMOND LOOT

Police Want to See Contents of Certain Safety Deposit Boxes

Chicago, March 15.—The police are trying to gain access to safety deposit boxes, rented by Charles Rosenthal and Paul W. Korschak, suspected of having knowledge of the $60,000 diamond robbery in the apartments of Mrs. John W. Jenkins in the hotel Lorraine, New York, last December.

It is probable that a court order directing that the boxes be opened by the police will be asked here and in New York.

Missing Auditor Not Located

Boston, March 15.—The police and United States officials are at a standstill in their efforts to locate O. M. Wheelock, the missing auditor of the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance company, who is charged with embezzlement amounting to $9214.04.

Death of General Bradley

$43,500 DAMAGES ALLOWED

Miss Orr Wins Breach of Promise Suit Against Portland Man

Boston, March 15.—The jury returned a verdict of $43,500 in the breach of promise suit of Marion Orr against William Wood of Portland, Me. For the assault $1000 was allowed; for the loss of her services to her father, $2500 damages; for breach of promise to marry, $40,000.

This is the largest verdict ever awarded in Suffolk county in a similar suit. Miss Orr sued for $50,000 and her father $10,000 for loss of services.

The chief factor in the case was the presence in the courtroom of the golden haired child of the defendant. There were tears in the eyes of all when Miss Orr's counsel in scathing terms denounced Wood for the wrong he had done the girl and his desertion of her at the end of their relations.

GAIN FOR DEMOCRATS

They Retake Augusta In Municipal Elections In Maine

Portland, Me., March 15.—The Democrats rather had the best of it in the elections Monday in five Maine cities. They retained control of Belfast and Biddeford, recaptured Augusta and in Bangor reduced Mayor Woodman's plurality from 816 last year to 272 and gained one alderman and four councilmen. Bangor, however, as well as Brewer, continues in the Republican column.

Mayors elected and complexion of city governments follow:

City.	Mayor.	City Government.
Augusta,	Plaisted (D.)	Dem.
Biddeford,	Marcelle (D.)	Dem.
Belfast,	Hanson (D.)	Dem.

SCHLIEMAN DIES FOR BURGLARY ONLY

His Declaration As He Sits In the Electric Chair

Ossining, N. Y., March 15.—Protesting to the last his innocence of the crime of murder, Frank Schlieman, one of the two men found guilty of the killing of Mrs. Sophie L. Staber, in Brooklyn, was put to death in the chair at Sing Sing prison.

While being strapped into the chair Schlieman looked at the witnesses, who stood in a semicircle, and then said slowly:

"I hope, gentlemen, you will all forgive me for my mistake. I realize mine now. I die for burglary only. I never took a human life. I die with a clear conscience. Goodbye, all."

Schlieman escaped from Sing Sing prison on Dec. 6, 1906, while serving a term for burglary. It was supposed that he had fled from the country until he was arrested in Brooklyn after the murder of Mrs. Staber. He is the second man to be electrocuted for the murder of Mrs. Staber. The first, Carlo Giro, expiated his crime in the chair on Feb. 23.

BEATEN WITH A SAW

Laborer Has His Head Badly Lacerated by a Companion

Melrose, Mass., March 15.—During a drunken brawl in the kitchen of the three-room building which they jointly occupy, Fred Griffin, aged 38, a laborer, is alleged to have brutally beaten John McDonald, aged 40, also a laborer, over the head with the blunt edge of a saw.

A teamster heard the men fighting, and jumping from his wagon rushed into the building to investigate. He found McDonald lying in a pool of blood on the kitchen floor. Griffin was standing over the prostrate body.

WEALTHY MAN SLAYS SONS

Sets Fire to Home and Then Takes His Own Life

SUDDEN IMPULSE TO MURDER

New York Real Estate Operator Had Long Suffered From Melancholia, but Had Lately Seemed Rational—Appeared In Fine Spirits a Few Minutes Previous to Triple Tragedy—Had Notions He Would Die Poor

New York, March 15,—Temporary insanity is attributed as the cause of Herman H. Moritz, aged 45, a wealthy real estate operator, shooting and killing his two sons at their home in the Bronx, then setting fire to the building and killing himself.

The boys, George, 16 years old, who until two weeks ago was a student in the Bordentown military academy of New Jersey, and Walter, 12 years old, a high school pupil, were evidently killed instantly. Walter was shot through the heart. George had been shot twice. He had evidently made a struggle for his life.

Mrs. Moritz, Moritz's second wife, was not at home at the time of the tragedy. "Herman must have gone insane from melancholia," she said. "He had suffered from it so long. He had notions that he would die poor and that his sons would be deprived of the college education he wished to give them. Lately he seemed rational again and we thought his brooding and attacks of melancholia were over."

According to the accounts of the tragedy Moritz was seemingly in splendid spirits and reading when he suddenly threw his book aside and then procured a revolver. He immediately sought his sons and started firing the fatal shots.

The first intimation neighbors had that anything was wrong in the big, brilliantly lighted residence was when the maid ran bareheaded into the street screaming "murder!" Persons who ran to the house saw smoke coming from one of the windows. They, with policemen and firemen, entered the house, and in the hallway on the first floor stumbled across the body of the father.

He had shot himself in the head and still had the revolver. Directed by the maid, the crowd ran down stairs, where, under a stairway in the basement, they found fire. This was put out. Half a dozen feet away lay Walter Moritz, shot through the heart.

The body of his elder brother was found in a front room on the second floor. He had been shot twice, once in the heart and once in the right temple. In the room were signs of a struggle. The maid said that before she fled from the house she had heard the sounds of shots in the upper room, had heard the elder son fall and had then seen Moritz pursue his younger son to the basement from the room in which the other boy had been killed.

CROWD WANTED TO LYNCH HIM

Greek Stirs Up Miniature Race Riot at Amesbury

FIRST FIGHTS WITH A YOUTH

Latter Gets Best of Encounter and His Adversary Summons Countrymen to His Aid and Pitched Battle Ensues—Man Who Starts Trouble Flees Through Streets, Shooting His Revolver Indiscriminately

Amesbury, Mass., March 15.—George Smith, employed in the Hamilton woolen mills, ran amuck through the principal square of this town last night and after an attempt to shoot up the town was saved from the hands of an infuriated mob by the timely arrival of the police.

Michael Roach, aged 55, is dangerously wounded as a result, and Frank Smith, aged 20, and John Jennelle, aged 18, received minor wounds. Frank Smith and Jennelle owe their lives to George Smith's poor aim, as he fired point blank at both of them.

About 7 o'clock Jennelle was walking down Main street, when he was accosted by three young Greeks. Among them was Smith, who asked Jennelle to go down near the Boston and Maine railroad depot and fight out a score they had to settle.

Jennelle agreed, and accompanied by the Greek's companions as witnesses, began the fight. He was getting the best of the argument when Smith, blowing a shrill whistle on his fingers, called about fifteen other countrymen to his aid.

From the top of the railroad bridge, where they had concealed themselves, they dashed down, brandishing clubs. Some of Jennelle's acquaintances, seeing the odds against him, joined in to help him out.

A free fight ensued and the Greeks were getting the worst of it, when Smith, whipping a revolver from his pocket, blazed away at Jennelle. Missing his aim, he broke away from the now infuriated crowd and ran through Market square, shooting as he ran. Every few yards he blazed indiscriminately into the crowds that lined the sidewalks.

Women fled in panic into open store doorways and hallways, screaming and fainting with fear. The panic spread the length of Friend street, up which the Greek ran, shooting as he ran.

Close at his heels a mob of men and boys, numbering over 500, chased as close to him as they dared. When the Greek was turning into Friend street he blazed away, one bullet grazing the forehead of Michael Roach and inflicting an ugly wound.

The Greek, running for the shelter of a Greek restaurant on Friend street, was overtaken by Frank Smith, who grabbed him around the neck, and in the struggle received an ugly cut under the ear.

In the meantime the crowd had surrounded the Greek and were crying out: "Get a rope and lynch him," when Chief of Police Ryan and a detail of police charged the crowd and arrested the Greek. The officers had great difficulty in restraining the crowd from mob violence, but finally succeeded in getting the Greek to the police station under guard.

Then the officers made a raid on a boarding house on Clark's court and made several other arrests.

ADMIRAL NAZRO RETIRED

Washington, March 15.—Rear Admiral A. P. Nazro of Boston is the first naval officer of high degree to fail a victim to the requirements that all naval officers must pass a physical test by walking fifty miles in three days or making a corresponding exhibition of endurance on a bicycle.

Admiral Nazro failed to meet these requirements and an order was published announcing his retirement from the naval service in consequence.

Money For Fall River Harbor Asked For as a Starter

Washington, March 15.—A comprehensive scheme for improvement of the harbor of Fall River, Mass., in connection with traffic with New York and possible ultimate traffic by intercoastal waterway between Boston, Narragansett Bay, Long Island sound and Beaufort, N. C., is involved in a recommendation made to congress by the war department.

The department recommends an appropriation of $143,000 for deepening the harbor, besides the present improvements, with an annual maintenance estimated at $6000.

The engineer's report, which is merely transmitted, says that if the proposed Boston-Beaufort waterway is built Fall River will be the important southern terminus of the link connecting Boston and Narragansett Bay.

HAS TWO EXTRA RIBS

Why a Young Californian Suffered For Years With Fever

Los Angeles, March 15.—Thornton Green, 21 years old, has been suffering for years from a constant fever, and his physician has just discovered the cause—two extra and unnecessary ribs.

According to members of the Los Angeles Medical association, Green's case is something new in medical annals, and it is asserted that Green will have to undergo an operation for the removal of the ribs if he wants to avoid sweating to death.

The extra ribs begin at the cerebral vetebrae and curve downward, crossing the natural ribs down to the fourth. He suffers constant pain, and his lack of shoulder development, the doctor asserts, is due to the presence of the extra rib.

SNELL FALLS DEAD IN STATE PRISON

Was Convicted of Murder on Circumstantial Evidence

Boston, March 15.—Saved from the death chair by the clemency of former Governor Douglas, Angles Snell, convicted of the murder of Tillinghast Kirby off Horse Neck, near New Bedford, in September, 1903, dropped from the line of marching prisoners at the Charlestown state prison and died within a few minutes.

Snell was 69 years of age. When Douglas snatched him from the shadow of the electric chair near the end of 1904 he was sent to prison for life.

The Kirby killing was a strange tragedy of the sea and Snell was convicted on circumstantial evidence. Kirby was 87, but vigorous because of his life on the water. He went fishing in a green "sharpie."

Snell went fishing also. He went in a white "sharpie." Kirby never returned. He was known to have had plenty of money before he went out in his boat. After the murder Snell, who had never been known to have much money, displayed a suspicious amount. Testimony was introduced to show that a white "sharpie" and a green "sharpie" were seen close together on the day Kirby disappeared.

LETTER TO "T. R."

My Dear Theodore: This is a personal and confidential letter, inspired by patriotic motives and written with the desire to put you in touch with what is going on in this country during your absence. It is only right that you should know it, and I trust you will read it in the spirit in which it s written. It is not a pleasant duty to be compelled to intrude upon you at a time when you are making the welkin ring with glad cries and filling the Smithsonian Institution with rare animals and birds. And I have delayed writing in the hope that conditions would improve and the necessity for such a painful communication as this would not arise. But conditions are growing worse instead of better, and to delay further would be to be guilty of lack of patriotism if not actual treason.

I am not an alarmist, but I can see with half an eye that things are going from bad to worse in this country. Some of the outrages committed are so villainous that I shudder to relate them. For example have you heard what they have done to "Giff" Pinchot? If you have tears to shed, prepare to shed them now, for "Giff" is done for, and the pneumatic tube from the Forestry Department to the White House has been bricked up.

Poor old "Giff." You remember how he used to slide into the executive office with a bunch of tree seedlings and some moist earth and make forests rise before our very eyes? A patriot, if ever there was a patriot, was "Giff." The tennis racquets used to grow green leaves in his hands, and the spreading shade of his beneficence was over everything like a cool blanket. And now "Giff" is gone. The desk that used to know him knows him no longer. The trapdoor through which he used to disappear a moment later in our presence has been nailed down. On a chill day in January, when he was engaged among the limbs of one of the trees he loved so well, he was pierced with a letter from the White House, laden with adjectives, encomiums, and tributes to his fealty to the public, and came down, bleeding and mortally wounded, to the ground. Gentle hands raised him from the frozen earth, and sympathetic boots helped him into outer darkness. There he lies, a martyr to his devotion to duty, perforated with a Presidential document, cut off from the public pay roll—canned! Think of it, Theodore. Pinchot canned, and for so small a crime as insubordinatiin. Men have died and worms have eaten them, but not for this.

Did you ever get the sympathetic boots, Theodore? Did you ever feel the friendly hand that caught you firmly by the trousers and coat collar and helped you out of public office? Did you ever get the eulogistic communication that testified to your value as a public servant and at the same time amputated you from the pay roll? If not, Theodore, you cannot appreciate the sensations of "Giff" when he found himself with the Government removed from over him, a homeless waif in the streets of Washington, without a job. It is an awful thing, Mr. President, when the restaurants are so numerous that you do not know where your next meal is coming from, and that was just the situation "Giff" was in when he lost his job.

"Giff" invited it, of course. He wrote an entirely frank and friendly letter to somebody in the Senate, telling about the conservation business. He directed no malice at any one. He merely said that Ballinger was sixteen kinds of a—but why particularize? There was nothing in the letter for a fellow official to get mad about. If a public man is sensative, he should get out of office. If he resents charges against his probity, it merely proves that he is in all probability guilty of something that ought to be found out. The grill, Theodore, is the first and most important test of the public servant. He should be broiled slowly and carefully over glowing coals for a period of ten hours, and then turned over and broiled on the other side. If the skin reddens and blisters, he is unfit. But if, at the end of the test, he comes forth unblistered, cool, with his sang froid moist and not even reddened, he is eminently fit for the public service, and has passed the first and most important test.

This is digressive but important to a complete understanding of the case. On the following day or the day after, while "Giff" was pruning some trees in the conservation lot, Taft came out of the White House, with blood in his eyes and an old blunderbus loaded to the muzzle with compliments. He discharged it at and appertaining to "Giff." It pierced him, and he fell to the earth with a ghastly cry. "I am sorry thus to chasten you, Gifford," said Bill, blowing the smoke out of the blunderbus, "but you have violated Rule 344. I will give you a letter of recommendation—a character, as it were, but you are off the pay roll. When your wounds are healed, call at the timekeeper's office and get your check." At which he golfed eight holes with Capt. Butt, while "Giff" rattled down the avenue in the Red Cross wagon.

The letter, Theodore, that did the business, was matvelously polite and diplomatic document. I have not the copy here, but as nearly as I can remember it, it ran something like this:

My Dear Pinchot:

I am about to fire you from the public service. In thus disposing of your valuable services I desire to testify to my esteem for you and to the efficient manner in which you have done your duty. You will please at your earliest convenience pack up your belongings and get them out of the Department of Forestry. And while packing them remember that I have the warmest regard for you, and know that the Government is missing a good deal.

Please turn the key to your office over to the janitor, and be assured of the good will that I feel toward you. There is nobody in public service that I like better than I do you, and you will please, therefore, expediate the time of your departure to the greatest extent. Your resignation will be accepted at your earliest convenience, and in expressing my gladness to accept it, I want to say that we have never had a man in the office who came earlier, went later, and kept the office furniture freer from dust and scratches.

In thus handing you your dismissal from the office I must say that if I were engaging a man for your particular line of work I know of nobody I would sooner engage. I am indeed, fond of you, and your fidelity to the public service, is beyond calculation. I think 10 o'clock tomorrow morning would be about the time I ought to get your resignation.

The boys here all send regards. Don't forget about leaving the key with the janitor, and, above all, don't forget the resignation. I need that. And in expressing my desire for it let me say that in all your public service you have been faithful and earned your salary. Regards to the family. Cordially your, W. H. T.

This, my dear Theodore is the eulogium that was handed "Giff" on the eve of his retirement from the public service. To use the expressive slang of which we are all so fond, this is the package that was handed to him, and except for moderate fortune of a million or so he is without means of support. He constituted one of the Policies, Theodore, and he has been duly carried out.

But this is not all.

Would it were.

Would I might end this letter here and close the tale of iniquity.

Do you know that a delegation of railroad Presidents sat for hours in the executive office of the White House a few days ago, and, for all I know, they may have had access to the locker. Will you think of it, Theodore—railroad Presidents in the White house, that belongs solely and exclusively to the people! Is it not enough to send shivers down the spine of a white rhinoceros? So far as I have learned not an indignity was heaped upon them. Not a message of hot words was sent hurtling in their direction. Instead of short and ugly words the language used was long ond honeyed. Bolsterous laughter sounded from the White House, where these enemies of the eRpublic were housed.

Is it not a sorry tale? I ween it is. Bloated with confidence, flushed with power, defiant of precedent and reckless of the Republic, these men discussed matters of millions in the very sanctuary of the Nation. And no man said them nay—not a man. Of all of the Cabinet officers and Judges of the Supreme Court, Senators and Congressmen, department heads and under secretaries, soldiers and sailors, Secret Service men and special policemen, under servants and housemaids, private secretaries and clerks, social aids and golfers—of all of these, Theodore, there was not a man or woman whose soul thrilled with enough patriotism to gather all those silk hats into his bosom like Arnold Winkle—whoever it was— and bear these traitors down to death at the very door of the White House. And they call this a patriotic country. Bah—with three h's.

But I am not done. Do you know what they are doing around the public buildings, Theodore? They are burning coal to keep warm—coal that our descendants a hundred years from now may be crying bitterly for. Do you call that conservation? Do you call that looking to the future? Do you know that they are draining the mines of this country for heat and power, and that when it is burned there will be only the ashes for the next succeeding generations? Do you know that they are splitting up tamarack and other wood from our depleting forests? Do you know all this is going on within sight of the Washington Monument and nobody saying a word?

What will we say to our descendants who may be going about poorly clothed and shivering because we have burned their coal to keep warm with? What apologies will we make to our grandsons for splitting up and burnig their stove wood? I wot not. We are destroying thousands of acres of forest every day for print paper. We are eating eggs that will never be laid again.

We are making sandwiches with ham that we ought to preserve for the future. We are burning coal and drinking water and eating bread and committing a thousand forms of waste, and in the same breath we are talking conservation. And when a hungry greatgrand child comes toddling up to us some hundred years hence and cries out for bread, what shall we say? "Alas, my child, there is no bread. I ate it a hundred years ago."

Nor is the tale yet told. Do you know what Frank Hitchcock is doing? He is putting the magazines on the gridiron— the blessed magazines, which are the people's source of information and mis-information, and that are at present moment handling our stuff at a couple of dollars a word. Do you know what will happen if Hitchcock continues to insurge? It will cost our people nine times as much as it does now to find out how to kill a white rhinoceros and pack him for shipment. Thus it becomes a personal matter with us, and I am indeed sore perplexed. The next tihng we know some magazine will attack a public man, and the battle will be on to the finish. The slogan of the Post Office Department seems to be, "Millions for seeds, but not one cent for magazines."

Are we going to stand for this? Are we going to fill the mails up with linen collars, desks, typewriters, washing machines, vegetable seeds, department reports, dress suits, thermometers, inkstands, tree seedings, blackleg vaccine, and other governmental impedimenta and shut out the magazines, which carry safety razor advertisements and automobile testimonials into a million homes? Are we going to make it cost 9 cents a pound to find out about buffalo and bull giraffes? And are you going to stay over there and let 'em do it? I wonder.

And there is more, much more, that I might say. Do you know that there isn't a Rough Rider in the Diplomatic Corps, except Phil Knox? Do you know that Taft hasn't shaken hands with an engineer since he went into office? Do you know that the Ananias Club is nearly ready to give up its charter? Do you know that Jim Garfield hasn't called on Ballinger for weeks? Oh, I could go on and tell you a thousand things that point unerringly to the downfall of the Republic. Another year, and I fear it will be too late.

So I am writing you this personal and confidential letter, in the hope that you will come back and straighten things out. The whole country is either conserving or insurging. Uncle Joe Cannon is still smoking and belching forth laya. Pinchot and Glavis are in violent eruption. Kenesaw Landis shows signs or recurring activity. Nels Aldrich is still at liberty. Bob La Follette is hoarse and worn from upholding the Constitution. Cummins is nearly all in. Business is overflowing the whole country. Eggs are 60 cents a dozen. Uncle Jim Hill is shooing the people back to the farms. Pierpont Morgan is negotiating for the National library. The gap eaten by the President over 13,000 miles of this country refuses to close. Bryan has opened his Presidential campaign for 1912, and, Heaven knows, the country is in need of aid.

Come home, Theodore, come home.—J. W. Foley in New York Times.

Home endorsement the public expression of Quincy people, should be evidence beyond dispute for every Quincy reader. Surely the experience of friends and neighbors, cheerfully given by them, will carry more weight than the utterances of strangers residing in faraway places. Read the following:

W. Charlesworth, 33 Cranch street, Quincy, Mass., says: "About five years ago I began to suffer from kidney trouble. I had pains in my back which were very severe at times and cold or damp weather aggravated my suffering. I knew that my kidneys were at fault and used everything I could think of in an effort to obtain relief but to no avail. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly advertised, I finally decided to give them a trial and I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. Before I had taken the contents of two boxes, the backache was a thing of the past and I felt better in every way. Doan's Kidney Pills have my highest endorsement."

WENT OVER THE MARK

A Fund of $11,000 Assured for New Atlantic Church

The grand campaign of the members of the Memorial church of Atlantic ,to raise the sum of $5,000 for a new church, came to a successful close Monday night, when the hands of the clock on the outside of the building marked off the sum of $5,-511 which was $511 more than the goal set for the weeks' campaign.

The fund was raised under the plan by which Y. M. C. A. associations have been so successful. Four teams of nine members each were formed. They were captained by Rev. Thomas W. Davidson the pastor of the church, William F. Cummings, Fred M. Burditt and Walter F. Blake.

When the teams started out Monday morning, on the last day of the campaign there remained to be pledged the sum of $425 to make the amount of $5,000. This amount was desired, for if the church raised this amount the Boston conference would contribute dollar for dollar. This therefore gives the church a building fund of over $11,000.

The members of the committees gathered in the church at 6 o'clock Monday night as usual for supper. Everybody was in the best of spirits, which of itself was evident that the desired sum had been reached. After a substantial supper furnished by the ladies, reports were called for. As one by one the reports were made, and the total climbed rapidly toward the goal there was great rejoicing. When the $5,000 mark was reached and passed the enthusiasm could not be restrained. Cheer after cheer rent the air, and the church bell pealed forth, carrying the good news to all parts of the ward as well as to other sections of the city, who had been interested in the campaign, and whose ears were open ready to catch the sound of the bell that would announce the victory.

The jollification over, the members and parishioners gathered in the church and a praise service was held. The feat of raising this sum in a small ward like Atlantic is quite an undertaking in itself, and the members of the four committees are deserving of more than a passing word of thanks for their excellent work.

FAVORED BY PRESIDENT.

The Boston Globe prints the following New York dispatch of March 14:

"President Taft told me, just before I came here, said Representative E. W. Humphrey of Seattle, Wash., tonight, "to tell you that he is heart and soul wit hthe National manufacturers' association in its fight to establish an American merchant marine."

Henry Clews was hissed when he proposed that America go into the cheapest market for her ships and her sailors.

At the close of speechmaking a resolution in part as follows was adopted:

"Resolved, That this association recommends to congress the passage of a bill similar to the ocean mail bill adopted in the last congress and advocated by President Taft providing for a sufficient postal compensation to establish a fast and regular service in American built steamships to the trade countries of South American and to the ports of Australasia, Japan, China and the Philippines."

Frank Rudderham, known to every old time fan in Quincy will again umpire in the Southern league the coming season. "Skinny" as Quincy knows him, started his baseball career here pitching for the old "Forty twos" named after old fire box No. 42. TUNA SPEED CARNIVAL.

Three Automobile Meets In Florida Promise to Be Record Breakers.

The next big event on the official automobile program is the Daytona Beach (Fla.) races to be held March 22, 23 and 24. Judging by the number of cars and crack drivers entered, the meeting should result in one of the best ever held on the sandy beach.

There will be four or five races of different classes of cars scheduled each day of the meet, and the Minneapolis, Sir Thomas Dewar, Gold Speed King (two miles a minute) and other rich trophies will be awarded winners of races.

In the free-for-all events Barney Oldfield and his 200 horsepower Benz, Ben Kerscher with the Vanderbilt cup winning Darracq, David Bruce Brown and the 120 horsepower Benz and R.

GEORGE ROBERTSON, WHO WILL DRIVE IN DAYTONA BEACH RACES.

M. Bonds with a Stearns are among the entries. In addition, the racing committee has received many applications for entry blanks from many other noted racing drivers and factories.

George Robertson has entered the great Christie front drive car in the free-for-all events, and, while the car has too much speed for the circular tracks, it will probably even make the big Benz hustle to beat it on a straightaway course like Daytona.

As the beach is in better condition for racing this season than at any time since the modern juggernauts were first sent over the cement-like sand surface, many new world's records are expected.

LIQUOR CASE IN COURT.

Antonio Papele alais Donato DeSanti was arraigned in the district court this morning for keeping and exposing liquor for sale at Quincy. The case was a hard fought one and occupied the greater part of the morning. At the conclusion of the hearing, the court intimated that it would impose a fine of $75 and a sentence of one month in the house of correction. As an appeal will probably be taken the sentence was not imposed, and the case went over until Wednesday morning for disposition.

The First Pantomime.

The first pantomime introduced to the English stage was "Tavern Bilkers" and was by John Weaver. This was in the year 1702. It was produced at Drury Lane. The great institutor of pantomime in England was, however, John Rice, who devised this form of entertainment in 1717. His first emphatic success was in 1724, when he produced "The Necromancer; or, History of Dr. Faustus." So successful was Rich with his pantomimes that Garrick, Quin and others became exasperated. Rich lived to see pantomimes firmly established at Drury Lane and Covent Garden. He died in 1761.—London Stage.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

PUBLISHED IN THE CITY OF PRESIDENTS

Vol. 24 No. 63 QUINCY, MASS. WEDNESDAY EVENING, MARCH 16, 1910 PRICE TWO CENTS

OCEAN MAIL BILL SHOULD BE ENDORSED

Quincy Board of Trade to Consider at a Special Meeting This Evening.

Should Enlist the Help of All New England Towns.

The Quincy Board of Trade has called a special meeting for this evening to consider resolutions relative to the "Ocean Mail" bill now before Congress.

President Bowles of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, in his open letter to Mayor Fitzgerald, published in the Daily Ledger of Tuesday, made it clear why such a bill was needed for the shipping interests and the welfare of the United States; also what it meant to Quincy, Boston and New England.

The writer has before him the statement for the month of January showing the arrivals of vessels at the port of Boston. NOT ONE American vessel from a foreign port arrived during the month of January. In the month of January, 1909, a year previous, four American vessels arrived from foreign ports. The same statement shows that 78 vessels flying foreign flags arrived from foreign ports, including 65 steamers with a net registered tonnage of 191,993; one bark of 1,415 tons; and 12 schooners of 1369 tons. This report does not include the coastwise shipping between ports of the United States.

The facts are that a very limited number of vessels flying the American flag are engaged in foreign trade either on the Atlantic or the Pacific ocean.

The Quincy Board of Trade should do more than adopt resolutions in favor of the ocean mail bill. It should endeavor to enlist the cooperation of the State Board of Trade, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and all the local Boards of Trade and business men's clubs of New England, and do it speedily. The passage of this Ocean Mail bill would mean more to Quincy and New England than the contract for the Argentine battleships recently secured, because it would put the shipbuilding industry on a permanent basis, and stimulate foreign trade.

The Daily Ledger would suggest that if the Quincy Board of Trade adopt resolutions tonight, that they send copies not only to both branches of Congress and President Taft, but also to each of the New England Congressmen, to all the Boards of Trade in New England, to the State Board of Trade, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Mayor of each city in New England, and others.

Also that they accompany the resolutions with a copy of the open letter of President Bowles to Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, and a plea for prompt cooperation.

All this will necessitate some expense, and the membership of the Board of Trade should be increased to 200, or 300, or more, that there may be funds in the treasury to do such work. Too many who criticise the Board of Trade should stop kicking and lend their assistance to accomplish results for Quincy.

Many have an idea that in Brockton things are always humming, but evidently the same trouble is experienced there as elsewhere for the Enterprise of Tuesday says: "The ways and means committee of the Brockton Board of Trade, of which Francis E. Shaw is chairman, was instructed at the monthly meeting last night to institute a searching inquiry and render a report at the April meeting on the question, "What's the Matter With the Board of Trade?" Arthur H. Andrews, chairman of the entertainment committee, submitted a statement to the meeting declaring that it has been evident for some time that the Board of Trade does not fill the place it should in Brockton. "There is something radically wrong with the board or the business men of the city in not lending more enthusiastic support to the board in the work it endeavors to perform," declared Mr. Andrews. "And it is time we found out what and where the trouble is."

PAID FINE OF $100

DeSanti Pleads Guilty to Sale of Liquor

In the district court this morning a fine of $100 was imposed by Judge Avery on Antone Papele, alias Donato DeSanti, for the sale of liquor at Quincy. In court Tuesday when the case against DeSanti for keeping and exposing liquor for sale was heard, the court intimated that a fine of $75 would be imposed, coupled with one month imprisonment in jail. This morning, however, counsel for the defendant asked to have this complaint dismissed, promising to plead guilty to a complaint for sale and pay a fine. This was done and the fine of $100 was promptly paid.

The case against DeSanti was the result of a row in the Italian quarter on March 6. At this time two men were complained of for assault on Domenico Bolen. It was claimed by Bolen that he was invited to take a walk and that when near the Mt. Wollaston cemetery, one of the parties drew a revolver and threatened his life, and that another knocked him down. When this case was tried it came out that on the Sunday in question, the parties were at DeSanti's house playing what the Italians call Fingo. This is a game played with the fingers for beer at five cents per bottle. A dispute arose between Bolen and one Garless, as to who won the beer, and it ended in the alleged assault with a dangerous weapon. After hearing the evidence in the case, the police swore out a warrant against DeSanti, which resulted in his paying a fine of $100.

R. A. MASONS.

The annual ladies' night of St. Stephen's Royal Arch chapter will be held tonight in the Masonic apartments, and promises to be a social success. The committee headed by Companion Louis S. Cleaves, has arranged a fine program. During the first part of the evening there will be an entertainment which will include selections by the Lotus male quartette, assisted by Miss Ethel Batting, the well known entertainer. The address of welcome will be by Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern, the chaplain of the chapter. Music will be furnished by Maxim's orchestra. At the conclusion of the entertainment, refreshments will be served and the evening will close with dancing.

STOLEN GOODS RECOVERED.

Inspector McKay has been successful in recovering in Boston pawnshops some of the articles stolen from the office of Andrew Milne at South Quincy on Feb. 24. They included two air brushes valued at $50 and $25 each, a set of drawing instruments, a reading glass, and a quantity of postage stamps. The total value of the articles taken was in the vicinity of $200, and the whole outfit was sold for $2.25. Some delay was had in locating the articles, for the pawnbroker who received them neglected to report them to the police department. His excuse was that he did not know what to call the articles. He was put on the rack at police headquarters, Boston, this week and may lose his license as a result.

FAREWELL RECEPTION TO WOLLASTON PASTOR

Many at St. Chrysostom's Church to Show Esteem for Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Clattenburg.

Resolutions Adopted Endorsing Their Work for Parish.

A reception was given to Rev. Albert Edwin Clattenburg, retiring rector of St. Chrysostom's church, and Mrs. Clattenburg Tuesday evening in the parish rooms, and was largely attended, showing the high esteem and affectionate regard which they hold in the hearts of the parishioners both young and old.

Mr. Clattenburg's rectorship has been a notable one in many ways, not only has the growth of the parish steadily increased with communicants each year but he has accomplished because of his incessant labors, what seemed an unsurmountable task of raising a mortgage debt of $3,000 in less than five years and seeing the consecration of the church by Bishop Lawrence last month.

Miss Kathleen Jones in behalf of the committee of arrangements presented Mrs. Clattenburg with a large bouquet of violets, for which Mrs. Clattenburg thanked her most heartily.

The rooms were beautifully decorated in violet and white, in keeping with the Lenten season. Mr. and Mrs. Clattenburg stood in front of a bank of palms and were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Cleveland and Mr. Percy L. Davidson.

The ushers were Messrs John W. Atkins and Archibald H. Briggs of the vestrymen, and John L. Hamilton and J. Albert Severance president and secretary of the Men's club.

The committee of arrangements were Messrs. Cleveland and Davidson, senior and junior wardens; Mrs. Cleveland and Mrs. Davidson of the Woman's Guild; Miss Gertrude Hineline and Mrs. Herbert L. Packard of the Altar guild; Mrs. Howard D. Fowler and Miss Golding of the Girls' Friendly society; Mrs. John L. Hamilton and Miss Kathleen Jones of the Junior auxiliary.

During the evening a well rendered musical program was given by Raymond Fowler, 1st mandolin; Miss Verne Fowler 2d mandolin and Carl Fowler, pianist; as follows:

Idyll—Romancia—H. F. Odell
On Boston Common—George W. Bemis—March and Two Step.
Daughters of Love—C. W. Bennett—Waltz.
Sons du Ruisseau—Frank H. Grey—Valse Francaise.
The Runabout—George M. Kent—March and Two Step.
At the Matinee—Raymond Howe—Waltz.
La Vivandiere—Louis Tocuben—March.
The Cossack—Louis Tocuben—Galop.
A Tiptopper—W. A. Corey—March and Two Step.

Refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. Edward F. Parlee and Mrs. Sarah Orr. The servers were Misses Gertrude Hineline, Susie L. Nichols, Louisa Allison Ross, Grace C. Parker, Ruth W. Parker, Ruth W. Bean, A. Maud Briggs, Lydia G. Hennigar, Eleanor S. Roberts, Pearl H. Belyea, Jessie Fowler, Edna Fowler, Carolyn Wilkinson, Louise Wilkinson and Dorothy G. Bean.

The following resolutions on the resignation of Mr. Clattenburg were read by David L. Jewell and unanimously adopted:

Whereas—Our Rector, the Rev. Albert Edwin Clattenburg, has tendered his resignation, which is reluctantly accepted, to take effect, March 28th, 1910, and for the purpose of working in the Mission field of North Dakota, and

Whereas—We all realize that none but a selfish interest can prompt us to retain him, when a nobler field is open to him, therefore be it

Resolved—That we have found in our Rector a man whose reverent regard for God's word, and name, and service, has been an inspiration, to our people.

Resolved—That the five years of faithful labor rendered by him, to this Parish, has been greatly blessel in upbuilding our Church.

Resolved—That in him we recognize an instructive teacher, who has nourished us in words of faith, and good doctrine, pointing us to the one perfect standard the Man Christ Jesus.

Resolved—That in all the varied duties, and relations, of his life among us, we have come to know him as a faithful, courageous shepherd, leading us into clearer light, holier living, and more willing service for the Master.

Resolved—That the going of Mr. and Mrs. Clattenburg will be a loss to our Church, and the community, at large, and we record with heartfelt gratitude, the inspiration that has come to us through her gracious presence—and furthermore be it

Resolved—That we feel our deep obligation to both for their abundant generosity, and fully appreciate their untiring labor for the welfare of the parish. Finally, be it

Resolved—That as a people it is our desire and prayer, to God, their lives may be spared; and continue to be used as an uplift, to all who shall in any manner be touched by them, and that their coming years, may be their crowning days, and that the measure of their lives may be filled with the abundant riches of God's mercy, in that great Mission field whither their steps now tend.

BRAINTREE TOWN MEETING

Hot Contest of System of Sewers Not Decided

Last Monday evening the town hall held one of the largest gatherings of voters that have ever assembled in Braintree for a town meeting. Also the gallery was filled with ladies anxious to hear the proceedings. The meeting was called to order at 7.30 o'clock by Town Clerk Henry A. Monk and the first business in order was the election of a moderator. The voting was by ballot and the following checkers were appointed: precinct one, A. F. Hollis; precinct two, Joseph Drinkwater; precinct three, Frank A. South.

The tellers were: C. B. Cummings, H. A. Bryant and George E. Fogg. The total number of votes cast was 510. Of these Herbert A. Rhoades received 227 and John Kelley 283, therefore Mr. Kelley was declared elected.

On motion of Charles O. Miller, article four of the warrant was taken up. The article is as follows:

Article 4. To hear and act upon the reports of the several boards of Town Officers and of any committee, and to choose any committee the Town may think proper.

Under this article Mr. Miller moved that the committee on sewerage be discharged and the whole matter in relation thereto be considered closed. Up to the time of aljournment the motion had not been carried and the whole evening was taken up with arguments for and against. Lengthy remarks were listened to from Messrs Abercrombie, Willis, Dr. Dearing, Judge Avery and others. The "others" included John Kelley who made a lengthy speech from the platform. His remarks were greeted by the throng with enthusiasm but apparently were not entirely convincing.

During the flow of oratory article 4 was shelved for a time until article 3 was disposed of. Under this head the town treasurer was authorized with the approved and sanction of the selectmen or a majority thereof to borrow in anticipation of taxes for 1910 sums of money not to exceed $100,000.

The meeting was adjourned at 10.10 until Thursday evening March 17, at 7.45 P. M.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The only thing that is as cheap as ever is talk.

In Pennsylvania alone the coal trust is reported to employ 150 lawyers. This may explain the ever increasing price of coal.

People who have undergone treatment for hookworm will be justly indignant if skeptics succeed in proving it a myth.

An Iowa woman seeks divorce, basing her action on the claim that her husband snores. It takes a wise man to keep his mouth shut when asleep.

"Hips are coming back," says a fashion item. "Where have they been?" inquires the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune. That is her business.

According to reports from France, the Seine spends most of its time nowadays rising again. The Seine must have fallen in the hands of some fond trust or other.

It is not the national government which is honoring Robert E. Lee by putting his statue in the Capitol, but the state of Virginia, which under the law is the sole judge of the qualification of its heroes for a place there.

There is a growing suspicion abroad that not a few faces now in Congress are going to be somewhat conspicuous by their absence next year, especially those who serve the trusts instead of the people.

The estate of the late Dr. Everett has long been regarded an ideal place for a park or recreation ground, and before the Miller estate was divided into house lots the town seriously considered taking if for a park. Perhaps the park idea could be carried out on a smaller scale now in connection with the movement to secure a memorial hall or heaquarters for the Grand Army. Should the city purchase the Dr. Everett estate of 142,300 square feet, it could fit up the house as a Memorial Hall and place it in charge of Paul Revere Post, No. 88. The estate borders on Elm street, Miller Stile road and Cherry avenue and the Elm street front would make a good location for the new Soldiers Monument. Town brook runs through the estate, and all in all it would make an ideal park or retreat. It is not large enough for base ball games, but would make an ideal place for a children's playground. At present Ward One has no park or playground.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

Speaker Walker is bold enough to give notice that a new order of things is needed in this State for the good of the republican parfy. Many men in the party have long been of the opinion that too often are candidates chosen and policies outlined by a few men, privately, instead of in open discussion. This cut-and-dried method of managing State politics is not relished by many, and it might be wise for the leaders of the party to heed the signs of the times.—Old Colony Memorial.

Immigration Bill Delayed

Washington, March 16.—All legislation imposing educational tests and head tax on immigrants was ordered deferred until the next session of congress at a meeting of the house committee on immigration. This action was taken in order to await the report of the immigration commission.

Boston Coal Dealer Fails

Boston, March 16.—James F. Scott, a coal dealer, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. His liabilities are $18,569.

CORPORATION TAX BILL

Committee Overruled and Substitution Prevailed in House

Representative McCarthy of Marlboro was successful in the House on Monday substituting on roll call, for an adverse report, his bill to give all the domestic corporation franchise tax to municipalities where the business is done. The vote was 128 to 95.

REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS

One of the champions of this bill is Representative W. R. Thomas of this city. The bill amends the present law which gives half to such communities and half to the places where the stockholders reside.

The present law has been in effect only a year, the old law giving practically all the tax to the communities where the stockholders reside. This, the supporters claim, has resulted in building up of "tax-dodgers paradises" in residential localities, while the cities and towns and the poor people who couldn't afford a country residence had to foot the bill.

JOLLY SIXTEEN PARTY.

Once more the Jolly Sixteen gathered for a sociable time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Johnson. Two hours of whist were enjoyed honors being taken by Arthur Merritt, Herbert Johnson, Mrs. Howes, and Mrs. Merritt. Consolation prizes were given to George W. Gragg, a St. Patrick pipe, and Mrs. George Hammond a St. Patrick umbrella.

After whist a bountiful collation was served, the best yet, by a caterer in town a special feature being the decoration of the table. As it is St. Patrick's week the table was decorated all in green ,with streamers from the ceiling to the edge of the table and each with a green plate and a green flag to remember the occasion. It certainly showed artistic work on the part of the hostess. The collation consisted of lobster, chicken and potatoe salads, ice cream, cake and cocoa which every one enjoyed.

At a late hour all departed, adding one more jollification to the club's many good times which are enjoyed and looked forward to by the Jolly Sixteen.

TRADE CLUB FOR LYNN.

The proposal to form a trade club in Lynn is another example of the enterprise of our progressive business men says the Lynn Item. Already the subscription list has reached a point where the promoters feel sure that the names of 200 members will appear on the charter list. To erect a permanent business home in the centre of the city is the aim of the club, and so provide a suitable place where merchants and manufacturers can congregate to talk over business affairs. A dining place in the clubhouse will be a new feature of Lynn club life, but one that will be appreciated by the members. Recreations that are sought for by business men at the middle of the day and at such other times as are devoted to relaxation will also be a feature of the institution. Lynn has many clubs that offer attractions to those who enjoy club life. We have also a Boarl of Trade that is known far and wide as a remarkably progressive body. The trade club will not interfere with other organizations, but it will add to the progressive forces of the community, and contribute to the life and energy that is daily adding to the fame of Lynn and the prosperty of the people.

LETTERS OF PUBLIC INTEREST

TUBERCULOSIS CAMP.

Editor Quincy Daily Ledger:

As a regular reader of your daily paper, I was somewhat surprised by your report of the meeting of the City Council in regard to the location of the Tuberculosis camp. The various opinions as reported in your daily edition—as there rendered—the final recommendations; also the recognized decision—that the opinion of the Board of Health is final that a private institution shall be granted privileges,—that the citizen and taxpayer have no chance for a hearing and no opportunity for redress against the same.

If a board is dishonest, biased, or unfair, who are the citizens to took to, for an honest and fair adjustment. But if a Board of Health honestly considers, thoroughly investigates, giving the citizens and taxpayers an opportunity to be heard on a question of this kind, and then finds they are right, after due consideration; then I am positive there will be no objection from the abutters, and the Board will be doing its duty.

I will ask you in the matter of fair play and justice, to render unto these citizens the rights they are entitled to. That is a public hearing that their petition may be fairly and fully considered.

Now to get down to a business proposition, I desire it to be distinctly understood, that the residents of this section are not opposed to the tuberculosis camp. They believe it a good thing, a long needed necessity, and one in which they are all heartily in favor of. It was not for this reason that a petition was sent in asking for a public hearing. But these reasons: That this tuberculosis camp is not a city institution, but a private affair. Its location is not justifiable to existing conditions. That a former site on Quincy avenue was selected. That certain residents who went to City Hall were granted the request they asked and it was arranged to transfer the camp farther back. Why go so far back as Mount Pleasant? Why not grant the residents of Mount Pleasant the same consideration?

One reason given by a member of the Anti-Tuberculosis Association for the placing of the camp on the Mount Pleasant side, is that it is handier and cheaper to connect it with the water and sewer, than it would be on the Quincy avenue side.

Now to connect the Quincy avenue site with the sewer, you would have to commence near Water street, along Quincy avenue to Faxon Park Road a distance of some 1,500 feet or to connect at the end of Kendrick avenue along Faxon Park road to Quincy avenue; a distance of about 2600 feet. Of course, Mr. H. M. Faxon was very generous to donate to the Anti-Tuberculosis association the land free of charge, and as Mr. Faxon owns the land for 1500 feet on one side of Quincy avenue and practically all the land on both sides of Faxon Park road, it would in consideration of the gift, be unfair to tax him the abutment tax for sewer ertension.

Likewise, it is unfair to the small property owners and taxpayers of section, at this time to place the burden of expense of a sewer abutment, which is not personally a need here and would not be installed, only for this camp for some years to come. Some of them can at this time least afford such an expense. If you will thoroughly investigate, you will find that in the whole city of Quincy the Anti-Tuberculosis association has had to subscribe for its maintenance, some $1,800 and that the people of this section are to be directly taxed somewhere in the neighborhood of $3,000 or more, for an abutment tax.

Don't you think the citizens in this section have some rights in this matter and should be heard? Why should any Board of Health of this city, grant to a private institution, any rights or privileges, without first giving the citizens an opportunity to be heard.

When a Board of Health or any other board goes as far as that it is time that the Mayor, as executive head, should step in and ask them for their resignations or remove them for the good of the service. No man can serve two masters, neither can law be held good law, wherein the defendant has been deprived of his right to be heard.

While I will agree that the tuberculosis camp in this city will be a benefit and I am ready to do all in my power personally to aid it, if it is to be a Public institution, let us have it governed by the city and ruled by a set of ordinances. If it is to be governed by private individuals, why should the innocent taxpayer be called upon to pay and stand the burden of this unnecessary expense, for the whim of some professional charitable notoriety seekers? A Citizen.

Quincy, March 10, 1910.

BIG SHIPMENT OF GRANITE

Indication for a Busy Season for Granite Industry

Returns from the two railroad shipping terminals for the month of February, show that the total amount of rough and finished granite shipped from Quincy by rail amounted to 10,916,904 pounds, an increase of 5,274,784 pounds over the month of January, showing that as the season advances the output increases. Of the total amount shipped during the month of February, 7,207,135 pounds were forwarded from the West Quincy station, and 3,706,769 pounds from the Quincy Adams station. The total for Febrauary is considerably larger than usual for this season of the year, and is taken as an indication that business the coming year will be unusually brisk. Everything is harmonious between the manufacturers and cutters and there is no reason why Quincy granite should not take a boom.

For sometime past several of our enterprising quarry owners have been trying to boom Quincy stock throughout the country and their efforts are bearing fruit. Quincy today is in a better condition than ever before to push its product. Its quarries are equipped with the most modern machinery for the handling of rough stock, and it is now possible to quarry almost any size stone desired and have it free from knots.

As one prominent quarry owner says, all that is necessary to boom Quincy is for the quarry owners and manufacturers to talk "Quincy" first, last and all the time, showing that they mean business. Then the business is sure to come, for as a granite for either monumental or building purposes its stands at the head of the list.

A SON OF QUINCY.

Capt. Charles T. Derry one of Sharon's best known and best liked citizens and a native son of Quincy quietly observed his 82d birthday March 10 at his home. The anniversary of the Captain's birth is usually made the occasion of a family gathering at the Derry home in Sharon where hospitality is lavished on the Captain's children and grandchildren as well as on other guests. This occasion had to be abandoned this year because of the fact that Mrs. Derry the Captain's estimable wife is slowly recovering from a recent dangerous illness. There was however no lack of congratulations both personal and postal to mark the birthday.

Capt. Derry was born of old New England stock in Quincy and made the old granite town his home for 30 years. During that time he laid the foundation for his business success in the transportation of granite from the Quincy quarries to Boston and other points by schooner. Later Captain Derry engaged in the business of the construction of sea walls with headquarters in Boston. Miles of the notable work in that line along the Boston water front and at other points is his.

Although he has not resided in the town of his birth for more than 50 years he has not allowed his interest in her to wane. He has always kept in touch with her affairs largely through the Quincy Patriot to which he has been a yearly subscriber for 60 years. He frequently visits Quincy where the greetings of many friends assure him that he is no stranger and delights greatly in her progress.

With the exception of fast failing eye-sight Captain Derry enjoys excellent health. The above mentioned affliction has obliged him to give up active business although he is to be found every day at his Devonshire street office in Boston.

Quincy can point with pride to Captain Derry as one of her long line of sons who have been sent forth to do things and who have reflected credit on their birthplace by doing them well and winning success in the world.

Clubs interested in nature studies are beginning to enjoy long walks. Last week the 1884 club of Lynn walked along the Swampscott shore. Some interesting sights and sounds were observed, chief among which was a close view of a flock of meadow larks, whose yellow breasts, marked in each case with a jet black crescent, were plainly discerned. These birds were generous with their music, their clear, flute-like notes filling the air with melody for quite a long interval. The cheerful singing of the song sparrow was also heard. In one place a clump of willows fairly glittered as the sun shone on them, and everywhere trees and shrubs told the story of rising sap and well nigh bursting buds. This week the class took a bird walk to North Bend.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

There was a good attendance of Alliance members on Monday afternoon in the parlor of First church and it was a very pleasant meeting. Following the devotional exercises and reports, business was discussed and included acceptances of invitations from other Alliances, among them being a neighborhood meeting at Canton Corner to meet Miss Emma C. Low on Wednesday, April 6; a meeting at the Arlington Street church, Boston, at 3.30 P. M. March 16; also an invitation from the Women's Guild of Christ church for Wednesday afternoon, March 23, at 3 o'clock to hear a talk on the Holy Land by Miss Lida Kendrick.

The president announced the receipt of $100 bequeathed the Alliance by the will of Mrs. Elizabeth E. C. Williams. It was voted to make a fund of it to be known as the Elizabeth E. C. Williams fund.

Mrs. Marsh also announced that the date of the neighborhood meeting would be changed from Monday to Wednesday, April 13, an would be an all day meeting opening with a conference at 11 o'clock; lunch at 12.30, and a meeting at 2 o'clock.

This closed the business for the afternoon and Miss Ayers was allowed ten minutes of the program in which to tell of the Fresh Air camp at South Athol, Mass., maintained by the Fresh Air fund of Morgan Memorial, Boston, Miss Ayers was extremely interesting and told from personal experience about the work of the camp. Boys, girls, men and women are taken to this camp for the summer and the influence of pure air, right surroundings and right living is far reaching. Children half starved not only for food, but for air and sunshine, return to the city from the camp in the fall looking so well that often their parents fail to recognize them on fi . sight. It is a noble work, well carried out.

The speaker of the afternoon was Rev. Carl G. Horst of the Wollaston Unitarian church and instead of speaking on "Channing" as announced he took for his subject "The specific work of the Church."

He said there were organized associations to do charitable work, civic work, attend to political matters and the like which were not now the work of the church. The specific work of the church should be to make good men and women who would go out and through their goodness do their work in the world for the betterment of mankind. A church should not as a church do social work but should so teach and influence its people that they would do the work.

It was an earnest talk and listened to attentively.

At the social half hour the hostesses were Mrs. Laura F. Tirrell and Mrs. Andrew J. Garey and cocoa and crackers were served.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB.

The meeting of the Young Women's club on Saturday evening at the club house was for business and social purposes. In the absence of the officers Miss Nancy Fulton was made president pro tem and Miss Rebecca Warshaw secretary. Miss Elizabeth Duran the corresponding secretary could not secure the addresses of six or seven members so as to notify them of the meeting.

Miss Mila Bates gave notice for Mrs. Tenney of an exhibition of the work hone by the young women of the different classes in millinery, embroidery, dressmaking, stencilling and brass would be held at the club house Tuesday, March 22. Some of the teachers will be at the club house on Monday evening, March 21, to receive the articles.

Miss Ruth Bass gave a short talk on Dr. Sargent's rythmic dancing. Those interested in the forming of a class are asked to send word to Miss Bass, Edison street, Quincy, and if ten or more send in their name a class will be formed.

Miss Bertha Trepanier, first vice president played for dancing, assisted by Miss Brown and others. The social hour was much enjoyed. Another meeting will be held the last Saturday in the month.

WOLLASTON W. C. T. U.

The Wollaston W. C. T. U. met Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Edward S. Tenney of Prospect avenue. After devotional service lead by Mrs. Wesley Wiggin the secretary's report was read by Mrs. Thomas Armstrong and the treasurer's report by Mrs. James P. Perry. The national tag day was discussed and laid on the table.

Mrs. Ida S. Brown and Mrs. Mary E. Mills were appointed delegates to attend the hearing next Tuesday evening at City hall on permits of expressmen to transport liquor. It was voted to send the usual amount of money to the flower mission for the Easter work.

The treasurer was instructed to give Mrs. Herbert Pinkham the usual donation of $2 for the Pundita Ramabai association, and also to send $10 to the State treasurer, the local unions apportionment.

Mrs. James P. Perry read an interesting and instructive paper prepared by Mrs. George F. Pinkham on "The Woman's W. C. T. U's relation to Home Missions" and a vote of thanks was recorded for Mrs. Pinkham's kindness.

JUNIOR ALLIANCE.

The eleventh meeting of the Junior Alliance was held in one of the newly furnished basement rooms of First Church chapel instead of the church parlor, as the parish meeting was held in the parlor at the same time.

The business meeting occupied more time than usual, as there were many things to be discussed, and there are but three more meetings for the season.

The attendance was small, but those present enjoyed the most interesting and instructive paper given by Miss Elizabeth Faxon on the subject: "Unitarian Controversy." This is the last paper on the topic of "Unitarianism in N. E." which has been the study topic for the year.

On March twenty-eighth Mrs. Ellery C. Butler will give a paper on "The Jewish Race." All friends who are interested are cordially invited to be present, and a large attendance is desired.

WOMEN'S CLUBS,

It was Holmes who said, "Every now and then a man's mind is stretched by a new idea or sensation, and never shrinks back to its former dimensions."

The minds of the federated club women seem to have been subjected to this widening process in their conception of their prescribed realm,—social and intellectual ethics. At first it was only the social demand. Visiting and receiving were the chief concerns of women. Chatter about servants ,symptoms, and dress occupied the conversation. Then came the revolt of the earnest women, who craved more satisfying and inspiring topics for thought and talk.

The literary club came into existence in response to this need, with its study of great artists and writers, its music and laughter, suppressing small talk. For a brief hour the weary, bewildered mother and housekeeper could forget the problems of food, home discipline, clothing, and the everlasting strain after economy, in the interesting programme. It was the sympathetic realization of this needed change of thought which led a generous opponent of the woman's club movement to acknowledge the value of clubs (which he calls "judicious intermissions of domesticity"), saying frankly, "A woman nowadays ,especially a mature woman, may stick too closely at home for the best interests of her family, and in so far as clubs serve to amuse her and stir her mind and give her society and new things to talk about they are not at all unlikely to do her good" (!)

The result has justified the good man's prediction. The literary club, as has been indicated, came into existence in response to a need. And it is interesting to note that the craving for literary culture has led irresistibly to that broad life of knowledge and of thought which makes self-improvement the stepping-stone to selfishness. Education and literature have been nourishing food in the club's development.

That heart culture must go hand in hand with head culture naturally has had its inevitable demonstration in the development of women's clubs. As the aspiration of every woman of high type is to live a life of "good feelings, good thoughts, good words, good deeds," so culture has been sought only to apply it as a potent leverage in all the widening activities of woman's life in her own home and beyond.

The literary and self-culture club, it has been aptly pointed out, proved to be the beginning an d support of all these important elements which develop the interest of women in the forward movement of humanity. "For, after spending months studying the idealism of Tennyson or the scathing

SPRING REAL ESTATE EDITION.

Every one interested in "Summer Home" either at the seashore, mountains or country will want to read the specially written articles on this subject which will be published in addition to the popular regular features in the Boston Evening Transcript of Saturday, April 2.

"Suburban Homes" is another engaging topic for that issue which will doubtless cause much favorable comment, while a careful study of "Boston Real Estate Values etc.", another contribution, will surely have a real value to investors and those concerned in the welfare of the city. Real estate men and individuals who have properties to dispose of or rent should take advantage of this unusual opportunity and immediately secure space to properly place their holdings before so many interested persons as will be reached by the April 2 edition of the Transcript, which will have a much larger circulation than any previous issue.

Important Announcement

BY JOHNSON BROS.

Why and How We Shall Reduce Our Prices April 1st, 1910.

AFTER a careful study of the credit business for a number of years, and the same of the cash business for the past two years, we have decided that for the mutual benefit of the buyer and seller, beginning April 1, we shall turn our business into a strictly cash business. Our experience and close study of the wants of the people for the past thirty-five years has put us in a position to judge, and we have decided that low prices and high quality can be obtained in no other way than by a strictly cash proposition, as a credit store cannot possibly compete successfully with a store that is handled on a strictly cash basis, as there is a great expense attached to a credit business, which we wish to curtail, and our curtailing means much lower prices to the trade. Under the credit system there is always a proportion of bad bills which must be taken care of in our scale of prices. Under the credit system you are helping to pay the bills of those who do not pay themselves. The method of sending teams to take orders daily is very costly. We figure it costs us eight cents per call. If our clerks make from one hundred fifty to two hundred calls daily the expense of these calls must be added to the prices of the goods. The salaries of bookkeepers and other expenses of accounting and collections must also be taken care of. We propose to eliminate these items of expense, and correspondingly reduce the prices of our goods. We will deliver orders sent to us by mail, telephone or left at the store, and we intend to show the people of Quincy and surrounding towns what a really cash store can do for them. We intend to place on sale a certain day of each week some staple article from our stock at absolute cost, something different each time. Remember, one of the most important things in this change will be the keeping up of our quality for which we have so long been popular. We shall try to give even better quality if such a thing is possible, and we shall hammer the prices down hard—for cash.

We will pay cash for our goods, by so doing get all the cash discounts from the wholesale trade, and we intend that our trade shall benefit by it, and by owning our own plant it will not be possible for any concern in our line of business to undersell us, when you take into consideration our reputation for quality. We have one of the best equipped stores in our city, also the cooperation of experienced clerks which all go to make Johnson Bros. an ideal firm with which to trade. All orders will be delivered with care and promptness by our new Automobile system, which we will place at your service and which is being practised by nearly all the up to date concerns throughout the country. Customers not caring to pay cash every time they come, or send to the store can if they wish make a deposit with us, and when they have taken up all their deposit will be notified. At the prices we shall ask and the quality of our goods, we must insist on a strictly cash transaction, for at the present age of high prices a credit store can do nothing to lessen the expense of living for its customers, as the increasing expense of carrying on a credit business places low prices out of the question.

The credit dealer must realize a larger percent of profit than a cash dealer, as his expense account is more than double, so we decided that the only way we can help our customers and all careful buyers, is to establish a strictly up to date cash store, for there is no other way that we can afford to cut the prices for the mutual benefit of all. Hoping that this will meet with thoughtful and willing cooperation, we remain,

Respectfully,

BRIEFS.

St. Patrick's day is to be observed quite extensively tomorrow by various societies and organizations.

Dwight Seaver who has been visiting Granville Winship of Newton street has returned to his home at Templeton.

Several dances are advertised to take place soon after Lent, and the closing winter season promises to be a busy one.

The ladies of Quincy chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, are arranging for a dancing party to be held next week.

Mme. Dupre of Brockton and Miss Eva Thayer of East Braintree have accepted positions with the L. E. Clark Millinery Co., in City Square.

The summer working schedule is now in force at the Fore River shipyard. Work now closes at 5.30 and the employes have a half holiday on Saturdays.

Outside work in the Street Water and Sewer departments will soon be commenced. All that the departments are now waiting for is settled weather and that necessary money be appropriated by the City Council to do the work outlined.

The number of building permits issued by the Inspector of Buildings thus far this year would indicate that there is a boom in new buildings in Quincy this summer notwithstanding the high price of material.

On Wednesday evening, March 23, the Elliot club of Wollaston will meet with Miss Poore. Orators will be the subjects discussed by Mrs. Wellington Record, Mrs. Mary Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Goodspeed.

Boys and girls are asked to be at Protection hall Thursday afternoon at 4.15 if they would like to take part in an entertainment to be given by Faxon Loyal Temperance Legion. Mrs. Isabelle Davis, leader, will be present to give out the parts and also the badges for new members.

The submarine Salmon which was launched at the Fore River yard last Saturday will go to Provincetown early in May to undergo a series of trials. It is probable that the entire summer will be taken up with these trials in competition with submarines of the other types.

It is reported that while there were something like nineteen permits to transport liquor in force last year the records kept by the Police department will show that about six express companies transported practically all of the liquor into Quincy. If this is true it is just as well to limit the number of permits to six.

MEN HIGHER UP UNDER ARREST

Aftermath of Famous Crocker Will Contest In 1904

GEORGE CROCKER IS INDICTED

Accused Man Is Prominent In Boston's City Affairs and Millionaire Clubman—Charged With Conspiracy to Corrupt Jurors—Real Estate Man and a Broker Also Taken Into Custody, Accused of Being Accessories

Boston, March 16.—George U. Crocker, millionaire clubman, ex-city treasurer and former member of the Boston finance commission; John J. Conroy, a prominent real estate dealer, and Charles H. Leach, an insurance broker, were arrested, charged with conspiracy to corrupt jurors in the famous Crocker will case.

The men were arraigned before Judge Wait in the superior criminal court. They pleaded not guilty, waived the reading of the indictment and were later released on bail.

The arrests were caused by District Attorney Pelletier and Assistant District Attorney Lavelle. Since 1906 rumors of indictments of men higher up in the Crocker will case have from time to time been circulated, and the matter has come before the administrations of the late John B. Moran and ex-District Attorney Hill.

But with the arrests of Crocker, Conroy and Leach, lawyers consider that the charges of bribery are at last started towards prosecution.

The indictments, containing fourteen counts, are looked upon by the legal fraternity as sweeping in their completeness. They are so drawn that the three men will be forced to stand or fall together, unless one of them turns state's evidence.

The first count charges Crocker and Conroy with procuring William J. Hartnett to corrupt Matthew Killion, a juror. The second count charges Crocker separately with the same thing. The third charges Conroy separately with the same thing. The fourth count charges all three of the men with concealing and assisting Hartnett to avoid arrest and punishment. The fifth, sixth and seventh counts charge each of the three separately with the same thing.

The eighth count charges Crocker and Conroy with procuring one Cronin with $150; the ninth and tenth charge each separately. The eleventh count alleges that all three men harbored William Hartnett and concealed him from arrest, the last three counts charging all three separately.

The other indictment charges Leach, Conroy and Crocker with being accessories before and after the fact in a conspiracy to corrupt a juror sitting in trial.

None of the men indicted would make any statements. Crocker absented himself from his office in the Old South building. At his home last night it was said that he was not out of the city, but in a place where he could not be seen.

Conroy and Leach were found, but refused to make any comment on the case at all.

The indictments and arrests of yesterday came as a long delayed aftermath of the trial and sentence of Matthew J. Killion to a term of two years imprisonment. John W. Cronan, who was indicted and tried at the same time with Killion, was acquitted.

The famous Crocker will case, which involved a sum of nearly a million dollars, has been before the courts of the commonwealth since the early part of 1904. The will was made by Uriel H. Crocker, the father of George U., Joseph B. and Edgar Crocker.

The arrests of yesterday have caused a great sensation in legal circles. In many circles it is taken to mean that instead of punishing the persons charged with minor crimes District Attorney Pelletier is out after the men higher up in past dealings with the city.

COWLES IS ARRESTED

Doctor Charged With Practising Medicine Without Registration

Boston, March 16.—Edward S. Cowles of this city, whose charges of discourtesy and assault led to the court martial of Paymaster George P. Auld, U. S. N., and Assistant Surgeon Ausey H. Robnett, U. S. N., was arraigned in the superior criminal court on a charge of practising medicine without being registered in Massachusetts.

In the indictment, which is in two counts, Cowles pleaded not guilty and the court ordered that he be held in $500. As soon as the judge had fixed the amount of sureties Cowles offered $500 cash bail and left the courthouse.

Claims Damages Are Excessive

Cambridge, Mass., March 16.—A motion to set aside the verdicts aggregating $43,500 in the breach of promise suit of Miss Marion Orr and her father against William Wood was filed by counsel for Wood. The motion alleges that the damages awarded by the jury were excessive and that the verdict was contrary to the evidence.

CONFERENCES ARE WITHOUT RESULT

End of Philadelphia Strike Is Not Yet In Sight

Philadelphia, March 16.—"The conferences with George H. Earle, one of the city's representatives on the board of directors of the street railway company, have not resulted in any plan or suggestion for the settlement of the car men's strike, and negotiations are therefore to be considered ended," was the official statement issued last night by the general strike committee of ten.

President Greenwalt of the State Federation of Labor issued a call to labor unions in all parts of the state to take a general strike vote and hold themselves in readiness to respond to a call for a state-wide sympathetic strike.

There is no change in the general strike situation. While there are a number of defections in the strikers' ranks, these, it is stated by the labor leaders, are more than counterbalanced by accessions to their ranks.

"GRAFTERS" AND "FOOLS"

Epithets Applied to Suffragettes by Dr. Mary Walker

Albany, March 16.—Dr. Mary Walker, in what she called a "constitutional argument," before the assembly judiciary committee, made a violent attack on the women who are advocating the woman suffrage bill. The terms "grafter" and "fool" figured liberally in her remarks.

The speaker insisted that all laws such as proposed are in violation of the United States constitution, which, she claims to have discovered thirty-eight years ago, contains authority for woman suffrage.

"There's no use of such silly rubbish as this bill," she exclaimed. "If women go to the polls in a body and demand the right to vote the men won't dare refuse them."

OFF THE NAVAL LIST

Navy Department Officially Declares That Nina Is Lost

Washington, March 16.—The ill-starred naval tug Nina, which sailed from Norfolk Feb. 6 for Boston, by official order was stricken from the naval list Tuesday. This constitutes an official declaration by the navy department that the little vessel is lost with all on board.

In accordance with law, the government will pay the next of kin of the officers and crew the men's full wages for six months from this date. After that, under the terms of the general pension law, the dependent relatives will receive the usual small pension.

Black Eye For Suffragists

Providence, March 16.—In the senate Rhode Island sent the woman suffrage bill into oblivion by a vote of 33 to 3.

FLATTENING OUT PROCESS

Steam Roller Being Prepared For Woodruff and Friends

STATE CHAIRMAN MUST QUIT

His Scalp Scheduled to Dangle at Belt of Root, Although Empire State Machine Claims Support of Senator—Quartet of State Committeemen In Brooklyn Stronghold Already Reported Ready to Desert Leader

New York, March 16.—With the state machine claiming the support of Senator Root and with the Woodruff opposition still insistent that the scalp of the state chairman will soon dangle at the belt of New York's junior representative in the United States senate, who, in the present crisis in the Albany situation, is representing the administration, surface indications are that what gives promise of being an internecine organization war is near a crisis.

While the "Old Guard" is declaring that Root had been misled about conditions at Albany and became aware of that fact after talking with Woodruff, those men prominent in state politics who are against Woodruff and the leaders back of him are avowing that steam is now being raised in the federal steam roller, which, they add, is shortly due to flatten out the recalcitrants.

That Woodruff will be allowed to serve out his term as state chairman, in view of the annoyance of President Taft, Senator Root and Governor Hughes at the open defiance shown them by the state machine men in their election of Senator Cobb as senate leader to succeed Senator Allds, is regarded in well informed quarters as highly improbable.

That a majority of the state committeemen are fully aware of the fact is regarded as equally certain. That such of them whose whole political fortunes do not hinge on allowing the state machine to be overthrown are now chiefly occupied in making plans to make their peace with the administration to the best possible advantage, is another prediction of the wiseacres.

That, even in Woodruff's own bailiwick of Brooklyn, at least a quartet of state committeemen are preparing to desert him is stated to be an indisputable fact. And, finally, that "Tim must go," is the handwriting on the wall, according to Washington.

Notwithstanding the studied effort on the part of the friends of Woodruff to make it appear that Root has been outgeneraled again and has consented to Woodruff's continuing as chairman of the Republican state committee until the next state convention, it can be said on the authority of the best informed politicians in Washington that the fight against Woodruff is going right ahead.

There will in all probability be a meeting before spring is ended of the state committee, when a resolution will be passed asking Woodruff to give way to another man.

IN FASHION'S REALM

You can never tell about fashions. The public receives little warning as to what the designers intend to do, or at least little warning that the public understands. Those who are in the business, and those who make a study of straws that show the wind, have an expert way of arriving at prophecy.

The designers put out fashion tentacles, as it were, feeling their way along a path, and it is only by watching the appearance of these tentacles and what they are reaching after that one can know in advance the kind of styles that will be projected.

And yet, with all this knowledge and training and experience, it is probable that even those closest to the profession of designing did not realize what a dominant note the peasant costume would strike this Spring.

Everyone knew about the influence of Russian clothes upon garments made in Paris during the Winter, but the few designs in the peasant style were not credited with futre popularity.

Yet the strength of the peasant movement in fashion is gaining force every day. It is safe to say that few garments will be free from a touch of it. It has taken hold of the professional mind with a good grip, and the world of clothes will soon be full of sleeves, skirts, smocks, and accessories, directly taken from peasant gowns.

The whole contour of the body is changed by wearing the peasant costume in its correct form. All that has been plain and narrow will be wide and gathered.

The skirts, for instance, have fully ten inches of gathers straight across the middle of the waist belt, which makes a woman look broader and shorter waisted. There are also gathers in the middle of the front, and in certain frocks the fullness extends in even measure around the waist.

The normal waist line is the only one held to in the frocks. The latter may be in one piece, which is correct and convenient, but there is a belt over the waist line.

This is usually of leather because of the wide returned popularity of this kind of belt; or it may also be of heavy cords put on a stiffened foundation and finished in a large scroll at the side or back.

The shoulder line is excessively lengthened by having the sleeve cut in one with the bodice. The arm and under part of the sleeve begin half way down the underarm seam.

It does not take much imagination to visualize these details and see how they change the lines of the present silhouette.

And yet the transformation from what has been to what will be does not stop here. The length of the figure will be chopped off as much as it is possible to do it by adding bands to the skirt of another color and of generous width.

There are no greater cintrasts in colors than black and white, and this combination is plentifully used to give short and abrupt lines to the figure. Further more, few skirts do more than touch the ground; the majority are cut off at the instep. It would be rather absurd to think of a trailing peasant gown, and yet there will be absurdities along this line. There must be, for every woman cannot wear a short skirt with either dignity or grace.

Other contrasts than those obtained by adding black or white are expected of vividly colored ribbon, which has an admirable effect if one can stand the shortened length.

Naturally, the designers had to go to the picturesque countries to get a peasant costume, and the first land that furnished models was Russia, in truth, the fashion itself began right there.

It was an easy step onward or downward to take up the simple or brilliant peasant clothes of Russia after one finished with the clothes of aristocracy. Since this was done the peasant idea rippled like a wave through Paris, and the designs were built up from costumes found in Bulgaria, Montenegro, and the Spanish provinces.

Here and there has been an attempt to use the homespun effect in fabrics, and so far this is best done with white and a grayish blue. The world has not yet gone violently into vivid colirs which proclaim the genuine peasant style, but this may come. As I said before, black and white are the colors with which the designers amuse themselves just now. When the warm weather advances, it is probable that we will get vivid blues, deep pinks and greens, striking violets and the crude reds which the peasants wear on gay occasions.

All the black and white models show the skirt of white, finished with a fifteen-inch band of black, gathered across the back and slightly in front, and the full blouse draped from the shoulders cut a little round at the neck; it is of white with a broad band of black around the middle of the figure, of bretelles with wide cuffs of the black to finish the short white sleeves.

As a beginner, this gown will do very well; it will serve as a model for dozens of others in various combinations of color. It will be the one kind used for every day in many fabrics, but there is a more elaborate model, which will be used for a dressy costume. Overdrapery, which is on most of the costumes, is not exactly to be classed as a peasant style. It is more classic, but possibly the desire is to keep everything primitive, and one of the earliest fashion of clothes was to drop one soft material over another.

The oddity in this new use of drapery is that the undergown is made up without fegard to it, as it is dropped over like a gauze curtain in a spectacle show. The scenic effect, as it were, is thereby softened and made more alluring.

No matter what the color of the foundation slip may be, wide bands of brilliant ribbon are used around the figure once or twice on the skirt and once on the waist. The lower edge or hem of the skirt is often of still another color, and this is introduced into the bodice as a flat neckband and deep straight cuffs.

Under this is put a satin slip, usually of a third color, and when the frock is almost finished, a drop curtain of chiffon, in a fourth color, is put over the whole thing.

There is a definite way to manage this curtain of gauze, which is called the peasant method. It must be gathered at the round neck, draped over the upper arm without armhole seam, gathered into the waist and confined by a wide belt, and again gathered to the top of the hem with extra length, which sags over, giving a graceful effect.

There is a gown of white and violet made up in this way, in which the color scheme runs about as follows: The satin slip is of white satin in the meteor weave that is so supple; it is banded with gold net. Over this is a frock of violet chiffon marquisette, which is a comparatively new and fashionable fabric; this is banded at the hem with a deeper tone of violet velvet. It has floral ribbon, old blues, pinks, and yellows around the figure at the waist and skirt, and over the whole is dropped a pale smoked gray chiffon.

The belt of this is of gold net veiled with gray net, and studded with amethyst crystals. There is a flat, slightly low, neck band of violet velvet, below which is a narrow touch of the jeweled adornment that makes the belt.

To soften the round neck there is a shallow tucker of white tulle without tucks or gathers, and finished off with a broad band of bebe velvet ribbon.

The sleeves are of white drapped with violet, edged with velvet, banded with ribbon, and then overdraped with a loose near-classic drapery of the gray chiffon.

Mid-lent brought out many handsome frocks, though by no means were most of them new, nor did the present anything startling in the way of even new details in either frocks or hats.

Some of the original features in frocks I described last Autumn as being then worn by society women and girls, who had either brought them with them from abroad or had imported them from their own modistes in Paris, are now having these features copied here, or the then new models are being imported and sent here in request to demands on this side for something new.

An instance of this is the frock open on the shoulders from neck to sleeves, but coming in the front and the back to the base of the throat.

When something quite new comes up, it is seen here only one or two times until it ceases to be an exclusive style in Paris.

It may be well to say that this open-on-the-shoulder effect is nothing like so effective or pretty as the usual model closed on the shoulders and open a bit down the front and back, nor will it be so cool for warm weather. But neither will it become anything like so generally worn in any class, as it is much more difficult to make.

Some of the new tulle or net long coats, jetted, either in black or in colors on a self color, have been worn here, and certainly they are as beautiful as they are fragile, and yet they are more durable than they look, and are certainly more beautiful than many equally expensive and practically useless accessories of dress.

In hats it is pleasing to be really sure that there is almost nothing one can wear in shape or size that will not be correct. The large hat, indeed the very large hat, more than holds its own, and for Summer wear the very large hat may be pardoned—if worn outside the city. In town, of course, others than the wearers of gigantic headgear have their rights, too, and one of these is the opportunity to walk unscathed, by enormous millinery creations.

The moderately large hat, properly shaped and suited to the individual, is the most becoming to any one.

Small hats have their uses for traveling—I mean the extremely small hats—but they are most trying to any but perfect features, fine coloring, and youthfulness.

The first word is that gigantic chapeaux are to worn as large indeed as the old-time Merry Widow, only, in many instances, of the coiffure-obliterating type. This, however, is not likely to be more than a passing fancy even in Paris, for women have too long been concealing their heads to feel that a continuation of that now utterly common fashion is either novel or becoming.

Flowers are to be largely worn; indeed, it promises to be a flower Summer in millinery. It is now several years since plumes were used to any great extent for warm weather millinery. Flowers should be worn in the Summer as feathers are in the Winter, with only an occasional touch of the other.

Made feathers for Spring hats, like those of the past, are innumerable, and are done so cleverly and from such ordinary feathered fowl that even the Audubon Society need not raise an outcry against the plumage of barnyard fowl, killed for food, being transformed into wonderfully dyed and "made" ornamentation for the hats of madames. Some of the made feathers are extremely handsome and most effective, and often by no means cheap.

Some of the new hats in Paris show a sort of Tam o'Shanter-shaped crown, only, instead of having the plaits or puffings rise evenly, one of these models shows the crown arranged in deep puff plaits that rise much higher at the left, decending to the brim at that side, and also sloping down to the right sides, where a scarf of the material—a soft but semi-stiff gros grain silk in rather light, soft blue—is wound flatly around the base of the crown, and has a laid-over fold at the right side, from which two plaited ends form a sharply pointed fan of the silk that lies on the brim.

The brim of this hat is of black satin-finished straw, faced with black velvet. There is no other trimming, the silk crown and scarf and bow making a sufficient decoration. It is a decidedly smart hat, and its softly curving, wide black brim and gracefully shaped crown make it an artistic frame for almost any face.

Another new model, one by no means pretty, but odd and suited to those who like slightly bizarre effects, is a novel mound-shaped hat of fine, dark prune-colored straw, the edge alone showing. This fits over the top of the head, slopes over the forehead, being close at the side and standing out a trifle at the back.

The crown is entirely of shaded pink roses, of the hornet-nest shape, with the centres darkening to a purplish tone. Across the back of the hat, setting out like an Alsatian bow, is a large bow of soft prune-colored velvet, two loops showing at each side from the front. In the back the centre is filled with a large knot of the velvet.

A large hat in ecru straw has the brim running up into a crown without any sudden bend, and while the right side and forehead are pretty well shaded the brim rolls over from the left back and left side to the crown. It is faced with black velvet. At the right front of the place where the brim slopes up into a crown there is a black velvet rosette with a cut jet centre. From this rosette a huge made feather in black on the paradise order flies out over the crown, concealing it entirely and lying quite flat to it.—Anne Rittenhouse in New York Times.

arraignment of all that is sordid found in Browning, or after reading a course of Carlyle, and becoming imbued with his scorn of the pettiness of the pretentious world, then at last coming to John Ruskin, with his appeal for more simple and spiritual living, for more beautiful surroundings, and for less destruction of all that is fine and noble in ourselves and in our surroundings,—after all this and other strong and wholesome mental pabulum, one naturally begins to open one's eyes, to look about, and to inquire if we have any right to continue to live amid hideous surroundings, or to permit the children of our 'land of the free' to be destroyed by drudgery or vicious environment, or to stand idly by while the grandest, most picturesque, and most beautiful scenery in our country is destroyed by the blind greed of grasping commercialism." In these strong words an active State Federation president outlined the development in altruistic thought of the woman's club.

It was found that the literary club which added to its programmes some discussion of the great civic and humane questions of the day, was soon repaid by the broader interest, the deepening of character, among its members, and the growing, genuine respect in which the club was held by community.

And thus the "department" club came into existence. On its programmes appeared outlines covering not only the original and vital topics of art and literature, but the departments of philanthropy, social economics, the home, finance, civics, civil service reform, forestry, industries, and the like. And the end isnotyet.

The realization of the value of organization has been a powerful factor in the development of the women's clubs, both as a uni and collectively. With multiplicity of interests came the need for specialization in the individual clubs. The attempt to solve problems of one sort brought out interrelated questions for discussion and inquiry. In trying to meet educational needs and to start school reforms the club women faced other glaring evils affecting children and homes. The careful study of philanthropic and charity problems disclosed the conditions of women and children in factories and mercantile life. It was essential to become systematic and effectively organized in order to carry on public enterprise, such as establishing public parks and playgrounds, abolishing the sweating system, promoting better sanitation, and providing better schools.

In a word, the single club, however influential, found its usefulness limited to its own locality. "In union there is strength" applied here, as elsewhere, in reaching legislators and in bringing about much-needed reforms. Combination was sought in the development of the highest democracy among the clubs. A broader culture and more uniform and effective methods of work have resulted.

"So long as children six years of age are employed in mills and factories in any part of the United States, and there is the crying need for uniform laws regarding child labor; so long as $600,000,000 is wasted every year in home-keeping of America for want of the knowledge of household economics; so long as women who live on mountains or on prairies are hungry for books and art; so long as there is need of the creation of general sentiment for national irrigation bills, that homes for women and children may be created and preserved; so long as the more vital work for social betterment can only bring results by cooperation—can it be that any club can say it has no responsibility in the larger work, that it is enough that it dust its own room? Or, if it take a hand in the world outside its own door, can it wisely say it proposes to sweep in any direction it desires?"

This was the sort of question asked and answered by the coming together in a great coalition of the women's clubs. Through their pervasive force and motion, light has been generated, —the illumination which has meant the convergence of woman and human interests. Beginning in New England and the Middle States, the idea of union spread quickly, forming into a remarkable contellation the hitherto chaotic and nebulous group of clubs. The forming of General and State Federations was followed by the districting of States, which in its turn ultimately leads to the districting of the United States.

Thus have been brought together and absorbed into a General Federation hundreds of individual clubs and scores of State and District Federations, representing approximately 500,000 women. At the present time the development of organization is along the lines of concentration and a closer welding together and unifying of spirit and purpose. The difficulty of this task is recognized when it is considered as Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker clearly points out in her last biennial address, what the General Federation of Women's Clubs really is. "It is broadly sympathetic with reform, but it is not a propaganda. It is not philanthropic distinctively, though one of the greatest agencies of the day for careful study of methods and genuine helpfulness in this direction. It is not purely sociological, though with living interests and a splendid record of service in uplifting work. It is in no sense political, yet its influence and power are to be seen in every State legislature, and it has the proud boast of having been a great factor in passing a long-disputed Federal measure during the present session of Congress. It cannot be called an academy or museum of art, yet one of the greatest authorities of the age has said that the years of study and demonstration in the clubs and federations have produced the wonderful results shown in the school-room decoration and much of the Arts and Crafts movement, by which a genuine love for and knowledge of art is being instilled into the coming Men and women. It is not a university, yet a surprising stimulus has been given to the study of literature, science, and history in hundreds of American homes, because of the membership of mother or daughter.

Few, probably, who have studied its development and growth will gainsay Mrs. Decker's prophetic declaration:—

"The Federation may become a mighty factor in the civilization of the century if wielded as a whole,—an army of builders, ready, alert, systematic, and scientific, not only a potent force in this generation, but transmitting to the next a vigor and strength which has never been given by any race of women to their inheritors."—Jane A. Stewart.

Wholesale Murder Before Sleepless Man Makes Way With Self

Filer, Ida., March 16.—Telaford Thoni crushed the skulls of his wife and two daughters, walked a mile to the home of a neighbor, left a confession addressed to the coroner, returned to his home, set fire to the house in several places, cut his own throat and lay down to die.

In his confession Thoni said he was weary of life and yet could not bear to leave this world without taking his entire family with him. He was despondent, he explained, over inability to sleep regularly. Thoni recently came from New Sharon, Pa.

BRIEFS

Mrs. Percy L. Davidson is ill at her home on Marion htreet.

Makaria base ball practice will probably start a week from Saturday afternoon if weather conditions are right.

The Coddington eighth grade boys went down to the High school Tuesday afternoon for sloyd under Mr. Goddard and had a successful afternoon of work.

John L. Payson who was operated on at City Hospital for appendicitis is convalescing and expecting to return to his home on South Central avenue the last of the week.

A regular meeting of the West Quincy Improvement association will be held Thursday evening. Matters of local interest will come up for discussion.

Many Grand Army men and members of the Women's Relief Corps are attending the meeting of the Norfolk county association at Brookline today.

Mayor Shea will probably send his appointment of the assistant assessors to the next meeting of the City Council as they must commence their rounds of the city on April 1.

The funeral of John B. Foley, the well known horse trainer, was held this morning from St. John's church services being conducted by Rev. John J. Coan. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery, the bearers being some of his former associates in the livery stable business. There were a number of floral tributes.

The annual theatrical attempt of the Congregational Club of Wollaston will this year be given early in April. A minstrel show will be offered and it is reported that in addition to the usual "minstrel circle" two original sketches written by members of the club will be introduced. One is said to have to do with certain proceedings in the office of the "Wollaston Warwhoop" and the other is a mythical piece entitled "Wollaston 1950." A great deal of mystery surrounds both pieces and members refuse to divulge the character of either. If the club members live up to their reputation made in last year's show a good time will be assured.

ST. PATRICK'S SOCIAL

Wollaston Club Have an Enjoyable Evening

One of the most successful meetings in its history was held by the Wollaston Social society in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church on Tuesday evening. Over seventy-five young people enjoyed a most attractive program under the following efficient committee, with Mrs. Carl G. Horst as chairman; Mr. and Mrs. Southworth, Dr. and Mrs. B. F. Bowles, Louis B. Weston, Miss Louise Waterman and Miss Clara Totman.

It being near St. Patrick's day, as each entered the hall a large green bow or sash was pinned upon them. Each member had been requested to bring a package containing something funny, and the exchange and opening of these packages, caused a great deal of merriment.

Each member was then given a paper and requested to draw a pig while their eyes were shut. The winners were: I. L. Shaw, Miss Helen M. Wade, Miss Helen L. Foster and Miss Abbie Penley. Booby prizes were awarded to Mrs. John Norrie, Miss Alice H. Day, Miss Mabel Hamilton and Miss Hattlemay Mitchell. Clifton Baker was the winner of the seed contest.

After other games among them original poems which were most clever, the company adjourned after voting it a most enjoyable evening.

EVENTS FOR BOYS.

Things are on the move every minute for the boys at the Y. M. C. A. Last night the regular weekly Bible class supper and Bible classes was conducted, and as usual a full attendance.

Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock the wireless club will meet and Wednesday night at 7.15 the South Quincy club will meet.

Thursday night all the extension clubs and the members of the Y. M. C. A. are to have a stereopticon lecture on the "Winning of the West" by Roy B. Guild of Boston, after which a St. Patrick's social will be held. The committee in charge are counting on a grand good time for all.

Friday night a triangular athletic meet is to be held between South Quincy, Wollaston and Atlantic clubs. Events are on for every night next week, and announcements will be made later.

BRIEFS

Quincy has not had a fire alarm for some time.

The blows on the fire alarm today were occasioned by men at work on the lines.

A newsy Ledger yesterday; every line readable and interesting and another good one today. Become a regular subscriber and not miss the many good features put out each day.

W. F. Loud and son of West Quincy are hauling 15 tons of sound-proof plaster board and ivory plaster which are to be used in the James S. Whiting house, now being built on Grand View avenue, Wollaston.

Did you read the "Letter to T. R." in yesterday's Ledger? It was well worth reading being full of a quiet humor that would appeal especially to those posted on current events in our country. It was a clever expression of our need of ex-President Roosevelt.

The Dorcas society of the Universalist church were pleasantly entertained by Mrs. F. W. Grant of Washington street on Tuesday evening. A large number were in attendance and considerable business was transacted Sewing and sociability made the evening pass all to quickly.

Visitors to the Coddington school have noticed under the bulletin board on the first floor a table which shows the work of some of the grades, brass work by seventh grade boys, wood work by eighth grade boys, also compositions and drawings. Mr. Bently headmaster is to change the things on the table as often as possible.

RUBE'S SPORTING CHAT

The Wollaston Golf club links will soon be the centre of attraction. The members are getting in trim for the coming championship meetings which will be held during the summer.

* * *

The Old Colony bowling association is entering upon the home stretch and the Downs quintet promises to make Weymouth go under full speed to the wire before the flag drops. Tonight the Weymouth five visit the Downs boys on their own stamping ground and I doubt if we do better than land an even break.

* * *

C. M. Gifford the ever alert physical director at the Quincy Y. M. C. A., informs me that the coming hayseed carnival will awake the local athletic enthusiasts for besides being of an original nature the athletic events will still be seen.

* * *

We will soon be reading about the veteran firemen's musters and many would again like to see the return of this sport here. What grand times the residents used to have at the playouts between the Tiger, Vuture and Granite tubs when they met annually in City Square. Thousands used to attend and cheer on the rival "red-shirts "and it certainly is worth while to try and renew these playouts, and invite others to compete. Anyone interested in this?

* * *

The Boston team in the newly formed United States baseball league does not at this time look any too strong, if we can judge by the past performances of some of the promising candidates. Among them are, "Arbie" Dam, a familiar face in the Old Colony league, "Gene" Sullivan who was anything but a star receiver at Randolph last year, "Huck" Lyons of Roxbury a third sacker "Tommy" Nash did not think fast enough for the Deweys last season, and others of the same calibre.

These men may be out to try for the team but it looks bad to see such a group as it may kill the league around Boston.

That hearing at the State House yesterday, relative to prohibiting the use of live decoys in hunting or shooting wild ducks and geese, was attended by many lovers of this favorite sport, among them being ex-Mayor Bryant of this city. Mr. Bryant annually enjoys this sport at his stand situated at Whitman's pond, East Weymouth, and yesterday spoke at length against the prohibiting of the use of live decoys.

* * *

George Grant and Henry Dahl are eager for a bowling match to be rolled soon and offer as an inducement the title of champions of Norfolk county to the team able to take their measure.

* * *

With the advent of such fine weather our thoughts go towards baseball and in speaking of the National game I recall the late Horace Tayformerly played with the Merrylor, a fine all-round athlete who mounts of Wollaston. I well remember a game in which Horace was playing which was turning into a constant wrangle. Calling his teammates together he told them to play clean or he would forfeit the game. It was a hot battle and this had the desired effect. Horace was a speedy runner ,a clean cut fellow in every way, and one which the rising athlete may well take pattern from.

Y. M. C. A. GYM NOTES.

At the meeting of the leaders corps Tuesday evening it was voted to hold the "Hayseed Karnival" in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Wednesday evening, April 13.

The annual championship athletic meet will be held March 30, at which time an attempt will be made to break some of the records made in previous years.

Quincy Y. M. C. A. will be represented in the State Y. M. C. A. Athletic meet to be held in M. I. T. gymnasium, Boston, on Saturday. Several members have entered and the Quincy relay team will run.

TODAY'S COURT.

John F. Atchinson, who was in court Monday and fined $15 for drunkenness at Quincy and had sentence suspended until July 1, fell into the hands of the police again on Tuesday. This morning the suspension was recalled and the fine allowed to stand, and he was also fined $15 on the new complaint. Not having the necessary $30 he was taken to Dedham.

August Carlson was fined $15 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Antone Papele, alias Donato DeSanti was fined $100 for the illegal sale of liquor at Quincy which he paid.

CUMMINS ATTACKS TAFT

In Strong Opposition to President's Railroad Policy

Washington, March 16.—Senator Cummins' attack on the Taft administration in connection with the railroad bill was the sensation of the day in the senate Tuesday, when the Iowa insurgent began his three days' speech to secure certain amendments to the bill.

He criticised in the severest terms the course of the administration in drafting the bill and then expecting Republicans to vote for it under pain of executive displeasure, and strongly intimated that in some respects the bill represented a distinctly backward step.

"A senator must either surrender his independence or be in constant and disagreebale conflict with the chief executive," said Cummins. "A senator must choose between losing the presidential favor and doing the things which his conscience tells him ought to be done."

TARIFF WAR WITH CANADA ABOUT DUE

President Hints at Undue Discrimination by Dominion

Washington, March 16.—"Very critical" is the way President Taft described the tariff situation between the United States and Canada after a lengthy conference with tariff experts in his confidence. He wants no misunderstanding as to the intentions of the United States, and in order that Canada may not assert that she has been misled, he made the statement.

The administration is extremely desirous that the Canadians should realize, while there is yet more than two weeks before the expiration of the limit in which matters may be adjusted, that as yet the president has failed to be convinced that Canada does not "unduly discriminate" against the United States.

Chairman Aldrich of the senate committee on finance was invited to sit with the president's tariff counsellors, and after hearing every side, he said he could not see how, under the letter and spirit of the law, the United States could do otherwise than apply the maximum unless some concessions were made by Canada.

STANDARD OIL A DANGER

Kellogg So Declares In His Argument Before Supreme Court

Washington, March 16.—Holding up the Standard Oil company of New Jersey as a danger to the country, and its organization as a commercial precedent that must be eradicated from the business world, Frank Kellogg arraigned the corporation before the supreme court of the United States with all the power of his eloquence.

It was the government's turn to be heard in the argument over the dissolution of the "Standard Oil" as decreed by the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Missouri.

TO RAISE THE MAINE

Bill Appropriating $50,000 Favorably Reported In House

Washington, March 16.—The house committee on naval affairs favorably reported a bill appropriating $500,000 to raise the wreck of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor.

The action was taken on the statement of the department that the wreck was a menace to navigation.

Washington, March 16.—Leroy Percy, the new senator from Mississippi, was sworn in Tuesday. Percy took the seat recently occupied by Senator Gordon.

GUNBOAT SAFE RIFLED

Paymaster Finds $3500 Missing From Vessel In Boston Harbor

Boston, March 16.—The officials of the Charlestown navy yard are conducting an investigation with a view of learning who stole $3600 from the paymaster's safe on board the gunboat Castine. The theft was discovered when Paymaster Haughey returned to duty after shore leave and found that the money given into his custody was gone.

A portion of the missing funds have been recovered. A mess attendant of the Castine came upon $640 in small bills tucked away behind a bath tub while attending to his duties.

Haughey is certain that the person who secured the money was familiar with the safe combination, though he had all along held the impression that the secret of the dial was known to himself alone.

Haughey has been in the service four years. He is bonded and must make up the difference between the $3500 and the $640 or his bondsmen will be obliged to do so.

COLEMAN'S CASE TAKEN UP

Several Witnesses Appear Before the Federal Grand Jury

Boston, March 16.—The case of the National City bank of Cambridge, which George W. Coleman and Wilson W. Lockhart are accused of looting, was presented to the federal grand jury yesterday.

Shea, official stenographer to the district attorney, who took Coleman's confession; Frank von Blarcom, who, as manager of a curb brokerage house, swapped checks with Coleman, enabling him by so doing to get money from the bank; Harry E. Galbraith, former messenger at the bank; George G. Calvert, the present messenger, and Edward A. Paul, the assistant cashier. The case is being continued today.

PEARY IS SNUBBED

Governor of Georgia and Mayor of Atlanta Give Their Reasons

Atlanta, March 16.—Governor Brown and Mayor Maddox of Atlanta declined an invitation to introduce Commander Peary when he lectures here tonight. Governor Brown said he did not believe that Peary discovered the North Pole.

Mayor Maddox in declining gave as his reason that Peary was coming as a private citizen to lecture for money, and was in no sense a guest of Atlanta.

REMOVING JUGULAR VEIN

Doctors Expect Boy to Survive an Unusual Surgical Operation

New York, March 16.—With only a small part of his jugular vein left after a recent operation, Harold Erickson, 19 years old, apparently is recovering at the Long Island hospital, and surgeons intend to remove the remainder of the vein in a few days.

As the jugular vein is the main drainage vein from the head, so to speak, it had been thought that the operation could not be done, but the physicians are sanguine of success, believing that the smaller blood vessels can do the work. Medical men are watching the case with interest.

Erickson's trouble began four weeks ago with an acute earache. An operation on the ear disclosed a blood clot, which spread and necessitated the operation.

The boy realizes the dangerous nature of the operation, and has helped the physicians with a fine display of nerve and a cheery good nature.

BOARD OF TRADE ADOPT RESOLUTIONS

Ocean Mail Bill in Congress Advocated and Endorsed as Good Things for New England.

Letter of President Bowles to be Printed for Distribution.

At short notice the members of the Quincy Board of Trade assembled Wednesday evening to consider the Ocean Mail bill now before Congress, which will not only help American shipping to foreign ports but also the shipbuilding industry and New England manufacturing.

President Eugene R. Stone presided and Frank F. Prescott was elected secretary pro tem.

The following resolutions were offered by Frank Fessenden Crane:

RESOLVED, by the Quincy Board of Trade, that the encouragement of the American Merchant Marine is of vital importance to this community, both because of the direct benefits that would result to our great shipyard, one of the greatest on the Atlantic coast, and because of the additional benefits that an increased ocean commerce would bring in the expansion of foreign markets for all kinds of Massachusetts manufacturing.

RESOLVED, that a great merchant marine is as indispensable to the nation as a strong navy, and that our New England Senators and Representatives in Congress ought loyally to work together for the interests of both.

RESOLVED, that we urge our Senators, and Representatives to sustain, to their very best ability, the ocean mail bill favorably reported to the Senate, providing for the establishment of direct lines of American-built steamships to the Isthmus of Panama, to the principal countries of South America, and to the great markets across the Pacific Ocean, to the end that skilled and patriotic American labor may have increased employment in the shipyards and on board the ships, that a proper naval reserve may be acquired by the United States, and that our export trade may be conveyed under our own flag to foreign waters, where the Stars and Stripes are seldom seen.

RESOLVED, that a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to every-one of the New England Senators and Representatives in Congress.

In support of the resolutions Mr. Crane said:

Are we spending $500,000,000 for the benefit of other nations? We should do everything in our power to restore the merchant marine and be ready for trade with South America, or the European countries will reap the benefits of this money. Ninety millions of people in the United States are paying ofr the building of the Panama canal, and they should have the full benefit. Hundreds of millions of dollars our country is spending for freight and passenger traffic, all going into the pockets of foreign owners. Our mail from Atlantic ports to South America goes in foreign ships to various European countries and thence in other foreign ships to South America. Is it any wonder that Europe's trade with South America far excels ours? Yet the bulk of it would naturally come to us. American mail ought to be carried by American vessels. The time for Congress to act is at once.

To possess a splendid navy, yet with no merchant marine to supply it with fuel in time of war, is bad enough. But what can be said of the folly of digging the most important canal in the history of the world, yet having no vessels of our own to use it. To spend a half-billion dollars entirely for the benefit of other nations would be an incredible indictment of our own good sense. It would be like a man who had no thought of having an automobile, but adorned his place with an expensive garage.

Others to speak in support of the resolutions were J. A. Sedgwick, Vice President W. P. Thompson, John A. McDonnell, T. L. Williams, President Stone and Frank F. Prescott.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted, and it was voted that copies be mailed promptly to President Taft, the New England members of the National Senate and House of Representatives, the Governors of the New England States, the Mayors of New England cities, and others.

It was also voted to have printed 250 copies of the letter of President F. T. Bowles of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., to Hon. John F. Fitzgerald, Mayor of Boston, as printed in the Daily Ledger of Tuesday.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE.

Frank C. Smith was given a genuine surprise Wednesday evening, when thirty or more of his young friends walked in upon him at his home on Washington street. It was Frank's 18th birthday anniversary, but he had not given the matter of celebrating a thought. Suddenly there came a summons to the door which, when opened, disclosed a merry party of young people, who immediately took possession and informed him that they had come to help him celebrate. For a few minutes he was nearly speechless, but he managed to stammer out his welcome, and rushed away to make a change of clothing. Returning to his guests he met with another surprise, for William R. Cranch, stepping forward, presented him with a gold chain and charm in behalf of his friends. Frank recovered himself sufficient to express his thanks, and the evening was given over to pleasure. Games and music made the hours pass all too quickly, and it seemed as though they had just begun when Mrs. Smith summoned the party to the dining room where refreshments were served. This over, there was more music and games until all too soon the striking of the clock told them the time had come to go. As one by one took their departure it was with the expression that they had enjoyed a grand good time and to wish Frank health and happiness during the coming year.

—That some restriction of the right of free speech is proper is proved by one of the latest utterances of Emma Goldman, who preaches infanticide in these words: "Numerous children from one mother means stunted, nervous men and women, from whom the hope of a nation is lost. I may be accused of being a barbarian, but it seems to me that the only solution of the problem is to limit families to four persons and, if necessary, to legalize the killing of all children after the second-born."—Brookline Chronicle.

LADIES' NIGHT R. A. MASONS

Pleasing Entertainment, Refreshments and Dancing

The annual ladies' night of St. Stephen's chapter, Royal Arch Masons, was held Wednesday evening in the Masonic apartments and was a most enjoyable occasion. The affair was largely confined to Masons, there being but few present not affiliated with the fraternity. There was a very large attendance and the evening proved to be one of enjoyment to all.

A pleasing entertainment was given during the first part of the evening opening with brief remarks by Excellent Companion Thomas D. Borst, who introduced Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern of Braintree the chaplain of the chapter, who made a brief address of welcome. Mr. Crathern was at his best, and his references to the proverbial goat created much laughter.

At the conclusion of his remarks the regular program was commenced. This opened with a selection by Maxim's orchestra and was followed by a selection by the Lotus male quartette, whose selections were very pleasing and they had to respond to frequent encores. In addition to the quartette selections, there were tenor solos by William Hicks. The other entertainer on the program was Miss Ethel Batting, whose first number was a monologue, "At a Musical" and so true to life was it that all who had attended a function of that kind and been disturbed by the small talk of people near them, immediately saw the point. Miss Batting was also down for the other numbers "DeBerault's Honor" and "The only child" and "Scene in school," and in every case she was obliged to respond to encores.

At the conclusion of the evening's program refreshments were served, after which there was dancing until midnight, at which time special cars left for Wollaston and Neponset.

Companion Louis S. Cleaves was chairman of the committee in charge of the entertainment, and was assisted by Excellent Companions Elihu T. Spear, Alexander Falconer, Charles E. Monroe, and John Morgan and Companions Henry P. Furnald Herbert Y. Follett and James H. Webb.

The floor was in charge of Excellent Companion Thomas D. Borst, who was assisted by Excellent Companion Charles E. Monroe and Companions Louis S. Cleaves, Roscoe M. Horton and Arthur F. Raymond.

DERRICK FALLS WITH CRASH

Used on Third Story of New Parochial School

There was a narrow escape from a serious accident at the new parochial school on Phipps street, at 1.30 this afternoon. The building has now reached the third story and on this story was a large boom derrick used for hoisting the steel girders and other material to the top of the building. This noon shortly after returning to work the workmen fastened a heavy steel girder to the fall and word was signaled to hoist away.

When nearly to the top of the building there was a sudden snapping sound and the next minute the derrick, boom and girder went crashing towar the ground. There were a number of workmen about the building but fortunately no one was hit, and the only damage aside from the smashing of the derrick was the knocking out of several window frames by the derrick as it fell.

Going down Phipps street at the time the derrick fell was a man on a bicycle and he had a narrow escape as one of the guys missed him by a few inches.

Burkhardt met this morning in the office of Mr. Sullivan in the Adams building to hear all parties interested in the estate. The estate comprises 160 acres of land and is located at Squantum. They will report their finding to the probate court.

—Charles A. Ufford of Dorchester spoke before the committee on railroads of the Legislature on Wednesday in favor of his bill authorizing the New Haven road to build a connection between the Mattapan line and the Boston & Providence, with a junction point at or near the Clarendon Hills station. Atty Russell for the road, favored the measure. Mr. Russell opposed another bill by Mr. Ufford for a similar connection between Quincy and Readville.

FORE RIVER DREDGING

President Bowles in Washington to Favor Appropriation

President Bowles of the Fore River Company has been in Washingtonington this week to urge an immediate appropriation for the dredging of the Fore River. A few days ago Senator Lodge offered an amendment for a survey by army engineers, and on Wednesday he proposed an amendment asking that $115,000 be appropriated this year. President Bowles was in conference with Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, Senator Frye of Maine, and others, and probably urged at the same time the passage of the Ocean Mail bill.

BRIEFS

Division 5 A. O. H., will celebrate St. Patrick's day tonight by a banquet given by Division 5 and the Ladies' Auxiliary. It will be held at Hibernian hall Franklin street. There will be addresses by Mayor Shea, City Solicitor McAnarney, ex-Congressman W. S. McNary and others, and musical selections will be interspersed.

Eric Ekblom treasurer of the Swedish Lutheran church, was presented with a purse of $20 Tuesday evening by the parishioners of the church in appreciation of the efficient services. The presentation speech was made by Rev. S. N. Elvin, the pastor of the church. During the evening there was a musical entertainment by the choir of the church. A supper was served during the evening.

PICKWICK CLUB.

The annual Dramatic Night of the Quincy Pickwick club was held Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Alden. A large audience was most pleasantly entertained by a program consisting of three short plays.

The first "An equal chance," a laughable little comedy, was given by Mr. Marsh and Mr. Schumacher. This was followed by a clever sketch "Mr. Catwallader's fourth virtue," presented by Mr. and Mrs. Gurney and Miss Hubbard. The last number, "Who's who," given by Miss Sargent, Mr. A. W. Hall and Mr. Hardwick, portrayed a number of amusing mistaken identities but everything came out happily at the end. All of the parts were exceptionally well taken and the applause showed the appreciation of the audience. A social hour with refreshments rounded out an enjoyable evening for the club members and their friends.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Brookline is crowing again, this time because it claims to have the first crocus of the season.

Mayor Gaynor just wants to show Mr. Roosevelt what he is doing in little old New York.

Here's hoping tre gentleman from Mississippi will leave some of his sunshine in the Senate.

That was pretty near pugilistic form the Toledo policeman showed in killing a man with his fist.

The establishment of a general parcels post service between this country and Brazil is one more link in the broadening out the United States.

"Smile even if you don't mean it," advises the Griffin (Ga.) Herald. We are not quite sure whether this is sunshine philosophy or merely a prohibition State tip.

"Have you put in your gloxinia, begonia and achimens yet?" chirps an exchange. Not yet, Sonny. But we've got some livernium and tripescantia in sight that we hope to get if they don't jump the prices again.

Should not think Thomas Rhodes of Spokane would be long without a wife. He says he wants one and will do the family cooking and fetch home his wages of $100 to $125 a month as regularly as the paymaster passes it out. What more could a woman want?

"How long will the Hall of Fame deprive itself of the name of Edgar Allan Poe?" asks the Baltimore Sun. We give it up, but certain engaging tales and immortal verses testify to the genius of Poe more eloquently than silent marble and Edgar is not worrying.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The inability of some people to hold money will be accentuated by the new information that millions of disease germs have been found on a single bill of a one-dollar denomination. Manifestly, the cause for such great accretions of germs is the passing of the bill through so many hands. Therefore, confine your handling of bills to those of $1,000 denomination and avoid the germs.

If the hats of the ladies are to be two feet over all, and the width of the crown a foot and a half across, it will be no ordinary hatpin that will hold the headgear in position. The City Council of Chicago did not dare to fix the length of the hatpins to be worn in that city, not knowing to what extent the expansion might go, but it did say that the pin should not stick out more than half an inch. If that regulation is enforced, much of the danger that now threatens men in crowded cars or in elevators will be overcome. One newspaper suggests that the hatpins be corked at the points. This is a novel proposition, but it would save many wounds. The corks might be hand painted, and made quite ornamental. The idea is worthy of consideration. —Lynn Item.

If Miss Ida Tarbell is as conscientious as she is painstaking and scientific, she ought to revise one of her judgments and confess that John D. Rockefeller is not, as she has asserted, a mere money-making machine whose only desire was to gain gold. But for all that, we felt no glow of enthusiasm when we read that he is about to dispossess himself of his vast fortune, and to make his son the almoner of a trust which will be consecrated forever to the furtherance of everything which makes for human progress. For the same reason that we dislike the perpetual trust which Marshall Field is said to have made for the benefit of his descendants, we dislike any vast fund to be held in perpetuity for any purpose, however good. The history of foundations in Europe is a revelation of greed, of trusts abused, of money misapplied, and a temptation constantly offered to all who get access to the income to misuse it. We believe that the United States would be better off today if the great fortunes made by Carnegie, Rockefeller and others were diffused throughout the community, and colleges, libraries, churches and other benevolences were dependent upon the interst, good will, and generosity of each generation.—Christian Register.

The Senate was disinclined to recognize the aggregate of license fees as the most important item in the saloon problem. Some time, sooner or later, society will have to disregard this bribe and regulate the saloon with regard for the moral and material, social and political welfare of the community. This measure is important as a first step. It is well to bear in mind that the high license system in Massachusetts was not established primarily as a source of revenue, but rather as a means of regulating a traffic that has an inherent liability to abuse and consequent evil. If in the opinion of students of the problem and of the legislators, better regulation can be gained by new classification and distribution of licenses, the license fees, desirable as they may be in the financing of municipal administrations, cannot be considered an over-ruling factor.—Herald.

NEW IMPETUS FOR INLAND WATERWAYS.

The projected construction of deep inland waterways connecting Narragansett bay with Boston on the east and with Long Island sound on the west received fresh impetus in Washington Monday when the war department recommended to Congress an appropriation of $143,000 for deepening the harbor at Fall River.

Accompanying the recommendation was a report by army engineers which states that if the proposed Boston Narragansett waterway is built Fall River will be an important link in the chain, which it is planned will ultimately extend to Beaufort, N. C.

The idea of the engineers is that Fall River will be the southern terminus of the link from Boston to Narragansett bay. Sweeping wharfage changes by the city government at Fall River are recommended by the report.—Christian Science Monitor.

CAN AMEND RAILROAD BILL

Aldrich Makes Admission When Forced Into a Corner

Washington, March 17.—In the sharpest debate yet provoked in the senate on the administration railroad bill, or on this subject in previous sessions, bitter criticism of the action of supporters of the bill in trying to the measure through without amendment finally elicited from Senator Aldrich, when forced into a corner, an admission that the bill could be amended.

This statement was made during the second day of Senator Cummins' speech attacking the bill, but not until after friends of the measure had been accused of trying to hide behind the president, and the fact that it had been drafted at his direction.

ONLY TWO-THIRDS DRUNK

Decision of Alderman In Case of Man With a Wooden Leg

Wilkesbarre, Pa., March 17.—Alderman John T. Donahue decided that because a man with a wooden leg is drunk, he cannot be termed wholly drunk, but only about two-thirds full.

He applied this principle in fining John Buckson. He said the usual fine was $1, but would charge Buckson only 67 cents. Buckson paid.

PLAYGROUNDS

How to Start and Organize Them---Clubs and Associations Should Share in the Work

The Massachusetts playground law, Chapter 513 of the Acts of 1908, places the duty of taking the land for playgrounds and of carrying them on upon the public authorities. There should nevertheless always be a committee of citizens especially interested in this subject who will work sympathetically with the officials and interpret for their benefit the playground needs and sentiment of the community. In many places playground organizations are already established. Where such is not the case the following suggestions may be useful.

The first thing is to be sure that there is some one person, man or woman, who is thoroughly interested in the playground question and who will make it his or her business to see that the playgrounds are established and carried on in the best possible way. If you are not such a person yourself, the first thing to do is to search for one who is. There may be several such people, but one at least is a prerequisite of success. The playground prophet when found need not necessarily assume the post of leadership. He is needed not as a figurehead nor even as a pilot, but as driving power.

Other people interested in playground work should be got together in an informal way and should go to work to interest others, by personal visits or by addresses given to organizations.

All the people should be, so far as possible, enlisted in the cause. The following classes and organizations are among those who might well be consulted and asked to take a share in the work, namely: citizens' associations, improvement organizations, educational societies and teachers' clubs; trade unions, women's clubs, churches, Y. M. C. A.; boards of trade, the police, representatives of various races and creeds, newspaper men and leading citizens. Some of these classes of course, overlap, and it is not necessary to include them all, but it is among these that one may profitably look for help.

Above all, take people in on the ground floor. Don't ask them to help in your work, but show them that the work is theirs.

The first thing is to see that the land is secured and that it is the right size and sort and in the right locations. It is probably better as a rule not to raise any other issues until this important matter is settled.

A system of playgrounds to satisfy its true purpose must provide not for children of a special age but for all the children. Some of the ground, therefore must be large enough to meet playground needs of the bigger boys and girls: for instance, large enough for baseball. That means that they ought to be at least two acres in extent, that grounds of three acres or more satisfy the requirement much more economically, and that, although no hard and fast rule can be laid down, the effort should be made in every case to get playgrounds of at least the latter size. The authorities should not be permitted easily to conclude that a smaller ground satisfies the requirement.

There should also be a large athletic field for boys and men over seventeen years old somewhere on the outskirts of the town.

The playgrounds should be if possible so placed that every child, or at least the great majority, shall be within half a mile of one, that being, as experience has shown, the radius of full effectiveness of a playground for the middle-sized child (say from ten to seventeen), for whose needs the school yards are too small.

Grass is good if it can be made to grow. If there is no grass, loam is alternately too dusty and too wet; cinders or gravel are too scratchy; sand is too soft. A happy mixture, with good drainage, is the nearest to a prescription that we can come. The playground—or at least the several parts of it—should be level and reasonably smooth, and it is a very great advantage if it can be flooded for skating, that being one of the very best uses to which a playground can be put.

The actual selection under the Massachusetts law will be the business of the park department, if there is one; otherwise of the selectmen or city council. And of course the selection of public playgrounds must always be in the hands of the public authorities. The appropriation will be made by the town or by the city council. In selecting grounds to suggest to the public authorities the following procedure may be found helpful:

Have a special committee prepare a map of the city or town, showing in different colors the parks, playgrounds and other pieces of vacant land publicly owned, with half mile circles around any existing playgrounds available for baseball, and perhaps with some indication of the density of population of different sections.

Have the same or another committee look up available sites and report upon them.

Have the organization decide which of these sites, in view of their size, nature, location and cost, make together the best playground system for the whole community. (Where the question as between two sites proved incapable of settlement, it has happened that the city has eventually taken both.)

Call upon the public authorities and lay the matter before them, with a full and clear statement of the facts.

Have a public meeting, at which the situation is fully explained, and have it well reported in the newspapers.

It has been found effective to have a petition, addressed to the city council and to the park department, carried around by high school boys to the larger taxpayers and other influencial citizens, and notes made of the objections of persons refusing to sign. The dissenters can then be visited and labored with.

Various organizations may well hold special meetings, hear addresses and send supplementary petitions. It is a good plan to have playground literature and photographs set apart in the library. Leaflets and posters may be used, as they were in the referendum agitation in Massachusetts.

There should always be a newspaper campaign, including reports of meetings, and also so far as possible articles and quotations explaining the need and value of playgrounds, and meeting objections. The Playground Association of America and the Massachusetts Civic League will be glad to supply material for such articles.

It is best that the playgrounds for the larger children should serve also the smaller children in their immediate neighborhood; and playgrounds for children under ten take so little room that in most cases a field big enough for baseball will in fact be big enough for both; where such is the case, a special place should be set aside for them. The best kind of playground, where possible, is one which provides something for all the members of the family. If there is room for a specially protected playground for the bigger girls, this should be provided. A provision that will be much appreciated by the grown men and requires little room is that of a place for playing quoits. (It is not necessary to furnish quoits, as horseshoes do about as well. If they are furnished, they should be made of wrought iron, because the cast iron ones are always breaking.) A still further sub-division on a large playground which is sometimes worth making is that of a special place for the middlesized boys, say from ten to thirteen. Where these various kinds of playgrounds, namely, those for the little children, for the big boys, for the big girls, for the grown men, cannot be provided on the same ground, they should be provided separately. There should also be somewhere in the town, although usually it will have to be in the suburbs because land is too expensive, in connection with ordinary playgrounds a place for the big boys and men to play baseball; and there ought to be, either in connection with such large athletic field or in the public parks, places for young men and girls to play together such games as tennis and golf. In any case the following suggestions as to what is needed for each kind of playground will, we hope, be found useful.

The equipment of a playground need not be an expensive matter. The amount of it will depend largely on how much the municipality desires to spend. The only apparatus absolutely necessary consists of back stops and goal posts on the ball field, and of sand boxes, swings and seats for mothers in the children's corner. Artificial shade should also provided in the latter, if there are no trees.

Where the children's corner is near the big boys' playground a fence is desirable as a protection against swift balls. In many localities it is necessary as a means of excluding the bigger boys and is of great value in maintaining discipline. A fence round the whole playground is also an advantage in crowded sections.

A sand box is something like a

BEARING AN OLIVE BRANCH

Sherman Has Long Conference With Empire State Leaders

WOODRUFF MEN ARE HOPEFUL

Think Their Chieftain Will Hold His Position Until Fall, but Washington Dispatches Indicate That It Is a Case of "Goodbye, Tim"—Big Politicians to Journey to National Capital During Next Few Weeks

New York, March 17.—While federal office-holders from this state are still reporting to Senator Root in Washington and assuring him of their loyalty in the effort to oust Timothy L. Woodruff from the chairmanship of the Republican state committee, members of the "old guard" here are declaring that peace has followed the advent of James S. Sherman, the vice president, who is here from the capital, reported to be bearing an olive branch.

JAMES S. SHERMAN.

Strict silence is being observed as to what took place at a two-hour conference the vice president had with Messrs. Odell, Ward, Malby and Littauer. Supporters of Woodruff believe, however, that the outlook for the state chairman being allowed to remain in his present position until fall is much brighter since the interview.

As a matter of fact, however, dispatches from Washington appear to indicate that the fight is just being started to retaliate for the state machine's open defiance of the federal forces in the election of a president pro tem of the state senate who was opposed by the national leaders.

Fred Greiner, postmaster of Buffalo, a power in up-state politics, is regarded as good timber for general of the Empire State's Republican forces. With John A. Merritt, collector of the port of Niagara Falls, Greiner had a long conference with Senator Root.

"They left Washington with a very firm idea that it was "Goodbye, Tim," declared John W. Dwight after the conference. Dwight is the New York state representative who is said to be acting as the "whip" in bringing New York's federal job into the anti-Woodruff lineup. He it was who is credited with receiving the pledges of federal fealty from Representatives Cocks, Young, Calder, Bennet and Drury in the aligning of the state representatives for the demand on their committee men to side against Woodruff.

J. S. Fassett hinted pretty strongly that during the next few weeks more political leaders will journey to the capital. He is confident that Woodruff is beaten and laughed when asked about the report that he and Dwight had "misled" Root into believing that the state committee was against Woodruff when it was not.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL

Items of Interest to Students and Graduates

The indoor athletic meet of Quincy High will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the gymnasium, and gives promise of being well worth watching. When the time for entering expired Monday afternoon a goodly number from each class had made entry. The Athletic committee met Tuesday and gave the handicaps for the various events.

In the 20-yard handicap dash there are twenty entries, with four scratch men.

Eleven are in the Freshman 20-yard dash. The short put has fifteen entries, one scratch and the rest with handicaps up to six feet.

In the running broad jump are fifteen, three scratch men, and others with handicaps up to one foot.

The standing broad jump has eleven entries, one scratch and handicaps to three inches.

Sixteen are in the running high jump with two scratch men, the largest handicap is four inches.

Three of the nine in the potato race, one scratch while the handicaps range up to four feet.

There are six entries in the novice potato race.

A selection of men from each class is being made in order to get the best representatives for the tug-of-war teams.

The question is, what class will get the most points. Suitable prizes will be given for the three highest individual scores, and the first, second and third places. Tickets are ten cents.

Last Thursday the dramatic committee of the Seniors chose "The Amazons" as the play they will give this year. While it has not been definitely decided, it is quite probable that this three-act farce will be produced May 6 or 7. The response to the notice of trials this week for the parts has been most ready and pleasing. Such a number of excellent candidates have presented themselves that the judges are finding it a difficult matter to make choice of the most qualified. This is a good indication of the willing spirit of the class. When the cast of the play is selected, it is almost assured that the members unde Miss Mary Brown's able coaching and supervision will give a very successful presentation.

The Seniors held a meeting Friday after school. After the reports of the secretary and the treasurer, Miss Brown, urged all to try for parts in the play and told of the nature of the characters the persons of the play would require. Head master Howdett said he wished the Senior class to be unified, in spirit, rather than separated in different groups from different parts of the city. This commencement should be the best of any thus far. It will commence promptly at 8 o'clock and close at 9.30. The speakers have been asked to speak fifteen minutes only. The class voted to have the English teachers choose four speakers, two boys and two girls, from the ten honor pupils who are considered the best fitted to deliver addresses. It was proposed to have a class history and prophecy given at the reception after graduation. In the exercises the last thing done as Seniors will be the singing of the patriotic song, "To Thee O Country." This was done last year in Mr. Howlett's Plymouth school and made a most impressive ending. The last thing on the program will be the singing of "America."

The Juniors gave a successful reception to the Seniors last Friday night. About one hundred were present. Dancing was enjoyed from 7.30 until 10.30. Many handsome gowns were in evidence. All present considered this a most pleasant occasion.

Friday at recess a candy sale was held by the Junior girls.

This week Friday will be the last day of the winter term. There will be a ten days' vacation from March 18 to March 28.

The fast "midget" forward on this year's basketball team, Billy Manning, has been elected captain of next year's team.

It is expected that the "Goldenrod," which has been delayed in publication will be ready this week.

There has been baseball practice recently.

Miss Bessie Phebe Pratt who died on Tuesday was a graduate of the Quincy High in the class of 1906, and was the fifth member to pass away inside of four years. THE BASKETBALL SEASON.

The basketball season at the school has been very successful. The school has always had good basketball teams. This year ten of the twelve games have been won, thus eclipsing the record set by the 1908 team of twelve games, won, three lost, and one tied. The score of the games played this season follow:

Quincy 31, Abington 15.
Quincy 18, Reading 10.
Quincy 20, Milton 7.
Quincy 39, Revere 7.
Quincy 13, Newton 32.
Quincy 13, Melrose 19.
Quincy 55, Alumni 12.
Quincy 39, Sharon 19.
Quincy 20, Thayer 17.
Quincy 32, Rockridge 7.
Quincy 35, Newton 17.
Quincy 10, Milton 6.

The two games lost were the first Newton game at Newton and the Melrose game on the home floor. The team evened up the victory of Newton by winning from them with a good score. In the three years that games have been played with Melrose, Quincy has been unable to register a victory against that five. In 1908 the game with this team was a tie, last year a decisive defeat, and this year another defeat by a small margin. Curiously enough, the scores for Quincy in each game lost was the mystical thirteen. The two defeats were beneficial to the quintet, as they inspired harder playing for the rest of the games.

Captain Russ Bates was able to put a fine team on the floor from the first game. The forwards were Russ Bates and Billy Manning. Their team work put them in the class with the fastest High school forwards around Boston. Bates put up probably the best all around work of any player. His ability to cage the ball from almost any side of the basket was seconded by his weight, which greatly hindered the plans of his opponents. His cool judgment as captain pulled the team out of many hard places. Billy Manning, although the "midget" of the team in size, was surely a giant in scoring. He was almost certain to get a goal once he got his eye on the basket. Taking large chances he won many unlooked for points.

In the first few games, "Babe" Marceau or Arthur played at centre, but soon the former dropped out to train for the track team, and Harold Prout went on at this position. Speedy and weighty he showed excellent all around work. His strong point was in long shots. Many a time he found little difficulty in caging the ball from as far away as the center of the floor.

The two backs, Frank Harmon and Mel Chapman covered well and often kept their men from scoring. The 158 points for Quincy's opponents, against the home teams, number of 314 is proof of their efficient work. While the work of the backs does not show so much in the score, yet indirectly they greatly influence the proportion of the final scores.

There are excellent prospects for the team next year, since there has been only one Senior on the team this year. Not only is the record excellent as victors but also financially. The season ends with a good amount of money in the treasury. The few times the second team played it made an excellent showing.

Some excellent games have been played by the class teams. The Juniors are said to be the champions. It will be remembered that last year, as Sophomores, they were also the winners.

OPENING OF NEW MUSEUM

Will Ultimately Develop Into National Gallery of Art

Washington, March 17.—No formal ceremonies occurred at the opening of the National Museum today, though the event marks the beginning also of a national gallery of art. While the building is not finished and will not be for six months, the completed portions will be opened and many of the collections are in place.

There will be seven galleries, and the entire building will have ten acres of floor space. It has been building six years and will cost $3,500,000.

The Mt. Vernon collection, containing many of the belongings of George Washington, is in the main hall. The Evans collection of 100 paintings and the Johnston collection are there.

An ethnological exhibit, collections of war relics and other exhibits of interest, as well as other works of art, will fill its halls.

IN HARMONY CONFERENCE

New York Central Officials and Trainmen Reach an Agreement

New York, March 17.—The New York Central and Hudson River railroad and its controlled lines, including the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, Michigan Central, Boston and Albany and Big Four, reached a tacit understanding after an all day conference with the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors, that there shall be no strike because of the lack of concessions.

In the negotiations for an increase in wages and changes in the working schedules, both sides made liberal concessions and when the conference was concluded last night both sides were in the best of humor and joined in a statement that there was not the least likelihood of a strike.

FISH FIGHTING FOR ROOSEVELT FRANK

Will Make Trouble Unless Committee Takes Action

Washington, March 17.—Theodore Roosevelt will be made the subject of a hot fight in the house unless the house committee on postoffices and post roads reports favorably a bill introduced by Hamilton Fish granting Roosevelt franking privileges.

Mr. Fish introduced his bill several weeks ago, but was unable to get satisfactory results. When he complained to members of the sub-committee in charge of the bill he was informed that there were no precedents to justify such action. Fish promptly dug up records which showed George Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson and James Madison were given use of the mails without charge, and Fish went before the committee armed with these facts and demanded that his bill be favorably reported.

The committee listened to him and held an executive session after he had departed, but took no action. Fish is indignant at what he declares to be the indifference of the committee and he proposes to make a fight for his measure.

MORE CARS ARE RUNNING

Time For Taking Back Philadelphia Strikers Has Expired

Philadelphia, March 17.—The rapid transit company reported 1225 cars in operation Wednesday, the highest number since the beginning of the strike. Wednesday had been announced as the last day on which the strikers would be taken back, but the labor leaders say the ranks of the strikers are unbroken.

Three-year-old Eugene Platt was run over and killed by a trolley car in front of his home last night. The motorman was roughly handled by a crowd which collected, but was rescued by the police.

Drafted the Sturgis Bill

Portland, Me., March 17.—Alfred Woodman, who it has been claimed wrote the original draft of the Sturgis bill, which resulted in the creation of the Sturgis commission for the better enforcement of the laws prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquors in Maine, is dead, aged 91. He was a life-long prohibitionist, and a well-known lawyer.

END OF POVERTY OIL KING'S AIM

Chief Purpose of Rockefeller Foundation, Says S. J. Murphy.

NOT TO BE LIMITED IN ITS WORK

Multimillionaire Has In Mind Practical Realization of Dream of Ages—Wants to Fit Men to Succeed In Life's Battle—Desires More Equal Distribution of Wealth.

What John D. Rockefeller, the oil magnate, really has in mind as the purpose of the Rockefeller foundation is nothing less than a practical realization of the dream of the ages—the abolition of poverty.

Starr J. Murphy, one of Mr. Rockefeller's chief advisers in methods of benevolence, recently said to a reporter:

"Mr. Rockefeller in his charities goes to rock bottom. In the general education board he has provided aid to established institutions for making men fit to succeed, education, development and training of a man's powers being the surest way toward making one able to do something with oneself. In the Rockefeller Institute For Medical Research his purpose is to get down not merely to remedies for diseases, but to eliminate diseases.

Wants an End of Poverty.

"His chief desire now is for the more equal distribution of wealth and the removal of poverty—not, mind you, the alleviation of poverty alone, but the removal of poverty."

Mr. Murphy's declaration came toward the end of a long chat on the scope of the proposed foundation to "prevent and relieve suffering" and the "promotion of any and all elements of human progress."

"May I, Mr. Murphy," asked the reporter, "write that as authoritative?"

"You may," he answered. "But be sure to say that what he wants is more equal distribution of wealth, not redistribution.

"Redistribution he does not believe effective, nor do we who compose his committee on benevolence—J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., Fred T. Gates, Charles O. Heydt and myself. It is no new thing to us, the purpose of this foundation. We have been studying charities for Mr. Rockefeller for years, and he has been interested in getting down to fundamentals.

"If a man has $100,000 a year to spend in philanthropy he might, under a plan of redistribution, give $100 a year to 1,000 families. That might serve to keep 1,000 families just this side of the border line of starvation. Yet that $100,000 annually spent in support of, say, such a benevolence as the Medical Research institute, those same 1,000 families would benefit quite as much, and then, beyond them, there would be the benefit bestowed on multitudes of others. No one, for instance, can compute the value accomplished by Mr. Rockefeller's medical institute in discovering how to prevent and cure cerebro spinal meningitis.

A Bar on Limitations.

"You say the bill to incorporate the foundation is indefinite, not specific. One of the most detrimental things in charities is the control exercised by the dead hand. The bill was drawn so that the foundation should not be limited or prescribed in its endeavors to promote well being. Emergencies, occasions of sudden distress, new discoveries of the causes of suffering, might require funds immediately. We have to provide for the unforeseen, the unknown, in creating this corporation for the application of money toward good causes. Socialists and philosophers have long written on the causes of poverty. What we need is actual constructive work and be done with theories.

"While nothing has been determined regarding the organization of the staff of the foundation and will not be till the bill of incorporation is passed, I suppose it will operate somewhat on the lines of the Sage foundation. That, you know, financed the survey of labor and sociological conditions in Pittsburg. It finances separate societies and institutions for special investigations and researches. We wish to be enabled to do that and anything else that may come within our purpose.

"It is fifteen years now since Mr. Rockefeller retired from business. His abilities in business surely are beyond discussion. Well, now, give a man of such high competence in organization and administration, who has given fifteen years to studying how to devote his riches to permanent beneficial uses, and what may not be expected?"

Rockefeller's Personal Work.

Mr. Murphy was asked what personal part Mr. Rockefeller takes in administering his different charities. His answer was:

"Out of the $53,000,000 he has given to the general education board he retains the absolute direction of only $25,000,000 or so. The administration develops upon the officers of the general board. The board, by the way, has about fifteen employees and is an example of economic administration. In the new foundation Mr. Rockefeller will be one of the body corporate and will select other associates besides his son, Mr. Gates, Mr. Heydt and myself when the incorporation bill is enacted."

DEATH OF HOVGAARD

Noted Arctic Explorer and Authority on Naval Architecture

Copenhagen, March 17.—Commodore William Hovgaard, the Danish Arctic explorer, died here. Hovgaard figured prominently in the functions arranged in honor of Dr. Cook upon his visit to Copenhagen and he was one of the first to credit the claims of the American explorer.

Following the rejection of Cook's claims by the university of Copenhagen the Danish explorer declared that though it had not been proven that the American did not reach the North Pole, he could regard Cook thereafter only as an impostor.

Commodore Hovgaaard was connected for some years with the Institute of Technology at Boston, where he had charge of the advanced course in naval architecture, given under the supervision of the United States government. He was a recognized authority in his subject.

WOMEN CANNOT VOTE

Effort to Grant Them Privilege In Lynn Is Turned Down

Lynn, Mass., March 17.—At a meeting of the committee which was appointed by Mayor Rich to draw up a new city charter, the members were thrown into a great uproar as a result of a suggestion from two if its members in regard to an amendment being made to the charter to give the women of the city the right to vote and hold public office.

Alderman Pyne and Attorney O'Keefe of the committee spoke at considerable length upon the advisability of giving the women of Lynn the right to vote and of holding municipal offices, with the exception of that of mayor.

After considerable argument in favor of the amendment by these two men the proposition was discarded by a vote of 5 to 2.

EASTER'S DATE.

Some Diverting Incidents of the Great Church Controversy.

"The festival of Easter is to be celebrated on the Sunday following the first full moon after the beginning of spring.

Therefore if the moon becomes full upon the day on which spring begins the Sunday after the next full moon is of course indicated by the directions of the council as Easter day. And if the moon becomes full on a Sunday the next Sunday similarly must be Easter day.

The history of this controversy respecting the date of Easter, which the Nicaean council happily settled, includes a number of diverting anecdotes based upon the disinclination of different people to accept even the council's rulings.

A story is told of a European of prominence who celebrated Easter every year on the very same day on which his wife celebrated Palm Sunday. Another story is told of a devout old couple in Germany who refused to abide by a new church decree relative to Easter. The decree altered the date, and on the day on which they had always attended the Easter services the old people walked from their home to the church. They found the church closed and no Easter service in progress. The old gentleman beat upon the door with his stout stick and demanded admittance, and when there was no response from the uninhabited church the old people retraced their steps to celebrate Easter at home.

EASTER PLACES.

Not an Unfamiliar Name to Those Who Travel.

"Wunst," said the sailor, refilling his glass, "I spent Easter on Easter island. Jolly little place—southern Pacific—pams and all that—gals as yaller and inspiring as this here eggnog.

"Another time I camped on Easter Sunday at the foot of Easter hill, in the New Hebrides. That's a hill what ain't never been climbed. All we had to eat and drink that day was rice and water.

"There's two English villages in Essex, one called High Easter and the other called Good Easter, that I visited one Easter holiday out of curiosity. But I didn't see nothing.

"Easter hole, in southern Patagonia, is a natural well what ain't got no bottom, the natives say. The water in it rises and falls with the tide.

"But the most melancholy place I ever put in an Easter at was in Easter canyon, in Arizony. We was prospecting there, me and Carlos Riberia. It's a wonder we didn't see ghosts, for at Easter canyon a party of immigrants died of starvation on Easter Sunday, leaving a heartbroken chalk diary on the rocks."

Fire.

Max Beerbohm's book "Yet Again" opens with the essay on "Fire."

"Fire in my grate," he writes, "is as terrible a thing as when it was lit by my ancestors night after night at the mouths of their caves to scare away the ancestors of my dog. And my dog regards it with the old wonder and misgiving. Even in his sleep he opens ever and again one eye to see that we are in no danger. And the fire glowers and roars through its bars at him with the scorn that a wild beast must needs have for a tame one. 'You are free,' it rages, 'and yet you do not spring at that man's throat and tear him limb from limb and make a meal of him.' And, gazing at me, it licks its red lips, and I, laughing good humoredly, rise and give the monster a shovelful of its proper food, which it leaps at and noisily devours."

Suppressing Swearing.

Profane as well as legal oaths have been the subject of many parliamentary measures in England. No fewer than five separate bills having the prevention of swearing for their object were presented during the reign of James I., but it was not until 1623 that an enactment was finally carried defining and controlling the offense. In 1635 a public department was established to collect the fines enforced by this law. The officials of this department, of whom one was appointed in every parish, were allowed 2s. 6d in the pound on the money thus collected, and the balance was paid over to the bishop for the benefit of the deserving poor. These penalties ceased to be enforced after the restoration, but were revived by a statute of William and Mary and still further increased under George II.—London Scraps.

The Fidgety Bachelor.

"But why do you put your friend's things in the dining room?"

"Oh, he is so used to restaurants that he won't enjoy his dinner unless he can watch his hat and coat."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Auditor's Report on Stealings From Southbridge Bank

END OF LEGISLATIVE INQUIRY

Auditor Reports That Stealings Reach $25,000 More Than Bank Examiners Found—Settlement of Eighty-Five Cents on the Dollar Likely to Be Accepted by Depositors—Bank Experts Reveal Methods of Hall

Boston, March 17.—The legislative committee which is probing the defalcation of the Southbridge bank will report that a total of $449,442.89 has been stolen, as a result of the findings made public yesterday by Auditor Strachan, who has been going over the affairs of the bank. This is $25,000 higher than the report of the bank examiners.

The committee has about finished its deliberations upon the bank. It is announced that no more hearings will be held and that the committee will now make up its report for the legislature.

It is expected that the report of the committee will result in the acceptance of the recommendation of Bank Commissioner Chapin that the depositors accept a settlement of 85 cents on the dollar.

It is the view of several men on the committee that it would be hard to get a better settlement. So far the views of Charles Choate, counsel for the bank, have been followed by the committee.

An extended report will be made upon the methods by which Treasurer Hall made his defalcations. There were three schemes which the bank experts gave out. One was raising the amount of weekly payments entered upon the counter book. The second was to raise arbitrarily the amount of weekly payments when posting the cash book. Nearly $200,000 was taken this way. The third way was to credit cash for fictitious loans.

"CONSUL" DIES IN TEXAS

Consul was stricken with the malady in Chicago late in January, but recovered sufficiently to return again to the road. He suffered another attack here a few days ago from which he never rallied.

Consul's manager, T. L. Miller, will have the body embalmed and will ship it to England for burial. Consul was insured for $50,000 in a London company. He was dressed and taught to act like a man.

BUTCHERS UNDER THUMB OF PACKERS

Latter to Blame For High Prices, Says a Grand Jury

Cleveland, March 17.—The beef packers are charged directly with the high cost of meat in the report of the special grand jury which was called here to investigate the high cost of living. It declares that it has found that the butchers are under the thumb of the packers, and cannot obtain a reasonable return on their business without charging excessive prices.

An attack also is made upon the local system of meat inspection, which it is charged is incompetent and practically useless. The inquisitors also find that there exists in this city conditions which foster the placing of almost the entire milk business into the hands of one firm, and that cold-storage eggs a year old are being sold as fresh.

EDITORS GIVE THEIR VIEWS

Indorsement of Taft's Administration and Legislation

NEW TARIFF THE BEST EVER

Congressional Rules Receive Their Approbation, as Does the Speaker For Enforcing Them—Dineen Furnishes a Sensation—Fitch of Peoria Offers Opposition to Resolutions and Makes Sharp Attack on Cannon

Springfield, Ills., March 17.—With one exception the editors at the Illinois convention went plainly on record indorsing President Taft, Mr. Cannon and the new tariff law, thereby proclaiming an attitude diametrically opposed to that indicated in a newspaper poll recently published. This poll represented the editors of the state, and even of Cannon's district, as aligned against the continuance of the Danville man in the speakership by an overwhelming majority, and against the so-called Aldrich-Payne tariff in a like positive manner. The one rebel against his party was George C. Fitch, editor of the Peoria Herald-Transcript. The resolutions offered are as follows:

1—Indorsement of the Taft administration.

2—A declaration that the Aldrich-Payne tariff law is, as President Taft pronounced it, the best tariff law ever enacted; that it has closed no factories, injured no legitimate industry and has caused a revival of business throughout the country.

3—Commendation of Senators Cullom and Lorimer and the congressional delegation.

4—Indorsement of Governor Deneen and the state administration.

5—Indorsement of the application of the present rules of the house of representatives "for the expediting of public business" and of Speaker Cannon for enforcing them.

A double barrelled sensation was furnished the meeting by Governor Deneen and Fitch. In a speech on party regularity and harmony, the governor attacked the Lorimer-Shurtleff Republicans, who refused to go into house caucus in the state legislature last winter and who joined the bi-partisan alliances that led to the election of Mr. Shurtleff as speaker and Mr. Lorimer as senator by a combination of Republican and Democratic votes.

Just before the governor's address Fitch brought discord into the gathering by denouncing Cannon. When the committee on resolutions made its report, Fitch, in a short but emphatic speech, said he wished the state at large to understand that only a small proportion of the Republican editors of Illinois were present, and that he did not propose to have it go forth that his paper favored the continuation of the present rules of congress. A moment later, by a rising vote of nearly all the editors present, the resolutions were passed and Fitch left the chamber.

KING EDWARD'S ILLNESS

Each Little Relapse Leaves the Monarch Somewhat Weaker

The king has not been really well for two years, and each little relapse leaves him somewhat weaker.

He came to Biarritz for a rest. He has not been seen as much as usual about the walks or drives and the bad news has cast a gloom about the watering place.

Danderine
GROWS HAIR and we can PROVE IT!

A lady from Minnesota writes: "As a result of using Danderine, my hair is close to five feet in length."

Beautiful Hair at Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grown, and it alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; whe baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions.)

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

Knowlton's Danderine has a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities.

One 25-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great worth as a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

Cut This Out

FREE To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the KNOWLTON DANDERINE CO., CHICAGO, ILL., with their name and address and 10c in silver or stamps to pay postage.

TO ORGANIZE PLAYGROUNDS

hot bed, only it is filled with sand and children instead of with loam and plants. It should be six feet wide and at least a foot deep. It is generally about twelve feet long. There should be a shelf across each end to make pies and things on. If it is over twelve feet long, this should be supplemented by a shelf along one side or additional cross shelves There should be no bottom to it. It should not be under a roof but open to the sun and rain. If a cover is found to be desirable, it should be made to open back flat to serve as an extra shelf. The sides should be made of two-inch spruce plank, and it probably pays to have them planed and painted.

The common coarse yellow sand is not good for sand boxes, as it does not hold its shape well enough to make good building material. What the dealers call "fine beach sand" is the best. That used by masons is more expensive and finer than necessary. Bank sand is well enough if there is not too much loam in it. It is not necessary to supply pails or spoons, the children will bring boxes and sticks and things that will serve to shape and adorn their pies and palaces. If "shovels" are supplied, they should be flat pieces of wood with a handle whittled at one end, such as the sloyd class can make.

Children will use as many swings as you will supply. Half a dozen is perhaps a good number for the average playground. The bottom of the bar from which they hang need not be more than eight feet from the ground. The height of the board will have to be adjusted to suit children of different sizes, and the rope should be adjustable for that reason and because it will stretch and shrink. It should be fastened in such a way to the bar and seat that the wear will come on the iron fastenings, not on the rope itself. It is probably more economical in the long run to make the frame that holds the swings of steel pipe rather than of wood. In such case the horizontal piece should be three inches in diameter; the uprights should also be three inches in diameter and set four feet in cement.

Tilts are very popular; and a very good tilt except for the possibility of getting your fingers pinched consists of a spruce plank twelve feet long one foot wide and two inches thick, placed across a saw-horse or a two by twelve inch oak plank fastened edge upwards on posts, with its upper edge two and one-half feet above the ground. The danger of pinching fingers can be eliminated by providing special bearings, either of maple or of steel.

The shelter next the sand box (to provide shade for the mothers, if there are no trees) should usually be open at the back and ends, as well as in front, for the sake of air, and so as to be easily inspected by the attendant and by the police at night. There should be benches in it.

A very good thing in a children's corner is some sort of inclined plane for the children to run and roll down. A grassy bank is the best thing. If there is no such bank, near which the sand box and seats can be placed, a smooth board tilted up a little at the end and fastened so that it will not come down is a very fair substitute. It can be supported, for instance, on an inverted box, to which it should be hooked, with a step for ascending on the other side of the box.

For the bigger children in the children's corner a permanent slide is about the most popular sort of apparatus, except the swings. There are several kinds of slides.

A piece of apparatus that children will use all day long is a trapeze. This is a swing that you hang from instead of sitting on it, and consists of a smooth round iron bar hung from a cross beam which should be about ten or twelve feet high. There should be a platform approached by steps for the children to jump from so that they can catch the bar and see how far they can swing. The height of the bar should be such that the children can run under it without stooping and yet can reach it from the ground. The ground should be kept soft underneath. Sand is more reliable for this purpose than tan bark.

The teeter ladder is to the tilt what the trapeze is to the swing; that is to say, it is a horizontal ladder that you hang onto from below instead of a board to sit on. Teeter ladders should never be put so high that the children cannot reach them standing on the ground; and the ground should be kept soft beneath them. Many playground people consider them dangerous.

The giant stride is a favorite. It is a tall post with a swivel at the top from which descend ropes as from a May pole. The children take the ropes and run round and are taken off their feet by convfugal force.

Horizontal ladders to go hand over hand under will be appreciated; and I believe that eventually playgrounds will have groups of ladders and sliding poles fixed so that the children can play tag on them.

It is well to state again that of all the apparatus here enumerated only the sand box, the swings and the shelter (if there are no trees) are necessary, or of any great importance in starting out.

For the big girls, if your playground has the necessary space and seclusion for them ,there should be basket ball posts, jumping standards, and a vaulting horse, besides plenty of room for the livelier games of the prisoners' base or white-men-and-Indians variety.

For the middle-sized boys—from ten to twelve.

It may be advisable, when the playground is fully developed, to have a special place with a little apparatus, separate from the children's corner, for the boys who do not happen to care for baseball or football, or who do not belong to the gang, or are not sufficiently expert to be members of any regular team. Such apparatus will be found to employ more boys to the square foot than will the ball field.

The boys' corner if it is separated off from the ball field, should have room for at least one good running game of the prisoners' base variety. Its apparatus should include two or three trapezes with steps to jump from, flying rings, sliding poles, a horizontal ladder, a horizontal bar, and a vaulting buck. If you have such a corner the jumping stand and place for the long jump may well be included in it, and there should also be a soft piece of ground for tumbling. A piece of apparatus that these boys will like very much, when you can afford it, is a set of traveling rings.

Connected with the question of apparatus is that of materials. It is probably best as a rule that the playground should not furnish baseballs, bats, or hockey sticks except perhaps inside the children's corner. These things have a habit of mysterious disappearance which is very difficult to check, even when pledges are taken, because of the elusiveness of matter and the difficulty of knowing whether a given instance has been a case of affinity or of spontaneous combustion. Boys always have bats and balls to use in the streets and empty lots—why not on the play ground?

On the other hand, it is probably well to furnish the more expensive things, such as footballs and basketballs. Catcher's masks, pads, and mits come perhaps on the border line and may be classed as optional.

The occupants of the children's corner will use as many playthings as you will provide, and there is no harm in such provision if the things are such as the children really care to use. The best form of playthings is a set of brick-shaped blocks, but carts, driving reins and many other things will be appreciated and used. Ring toss is a game worth providing.

Play grounds are as a rule the most hideous and homesick looking places in the town. This is not a necessary attribute, and may be combated by vines and later by hedges, and even shrubs in the corners of the grounds. The girls' ground if you have one, should be separated by such means from the rest. Big trees, which will eventually give shade, should be planted along the edge and in the children's corner. Children's gardens improve the looks of a playground very much, are valuable educationally, and may well be combined with playgrounds, each child being given a garden of about 25 square feet. They should preferably be carried on by the public school authorities. The strip in which they are placed may be the one in which the trees are planted along the edge of the playground. If this is about ten feet wide, each child's garden should be about two and one-half feet across, with paths running between so as to divide the gardens into pairs.

The most important matter in the playground business is that of supervision. An unsupervised playground is sometimes successful, but it is sometimes a positive nuisance and never accomplishes the best results.

There should be in every city and town in charge of the whole matter of playgrounds and physical education (preferably including that in the public schools) a thoroughly qualified leader. He should be a man who has studied and who understands the question both from its physical and from its moral and intellectual side, and who has the power of leadership. The graduates of the Young Men's Christian Association Training School at Springfield, Mass., have been particularly successful in playground work. Sometimes a college man who has been an athlete, who is especially interested in social work, and who has taken a special course on this subject at a summer school, will make the best sort of leader. Sometimes a young schoolmaster who has had similar preparation will be the man.

Besides the general superintendent there should be on every playground, through the hours when the children are there, at least one good man for the boys' part and one or two women for the children's corner. Men can probably be found among the younger masters in the schools capable of taking charge of playgrounds in the afternoon and on Saturday mornings. (It may not be necessary to have them present Saturday afternoons.

The women employed should preferably be kindergartners for the children under six. There should also be another teacher, a kindergartener or otherwise, for the children over six. Whichever of the two has the greater ability should be put at the head of the children's corner as a whole. Specially trained teachers for the bigger girls are now being graduated from training schools established for the purpose.

At all events, from whatever source it may be found best to secure the man who is to be at the head of the playground system of the leaders for each particular playground, it is of great importance that the school teachers, both men and women, should be enlisted in the work. The schools are inevitably engaged in the business of physical education, and it is best that that task should not be divided. They must in any case have charge of the children in recess, of school gymnastics and school athletics, and to a great extent of medical inspection. They should in any case, and particularly in connection with the last named function, have knowledge of the physical condition and needs of every child. Moreover the value of play is even more in its moral and intellectual than in its physical effects. Play is an integral part of education, and supervision of play is accordingly the business of the schools.

Participation by the teachers in playground work is as important for the schools as it is for the playground. It is the business of the schools not merely to impart knowledge, but to promote the mental and spiritual growth of every child, and they will never approacd their task with the full inspiration of its possibilities till they have at their command the use of that greatest of all the means of growth which is comprised in play. Morover the schools will never get the most out of any part of the work they do until the teachers have the fullest possible acquaintance with the children as they really are; and to really know a child you must see him not merely in the menagerie or school, but in the wild state—as he is on the playground when he is most himself.

Children are often frightened away from a playground by the bigger boys or stay away because these interfere with them and steal their things. Sometimes parents keep them away because the playground is found to be demoralizing. Playgrounds, therefore, should be properly policed. The work of keeping order should, however, not occupy much of the time of the instructor. He should be able to create among the children a corps of assistants who will take charge of the different pieces of apparatus, see that those using them take their turns and are not interfered with, and keep order generally. Boys should be able to umpire their own games, and can be trusted to do so in proportion as they are interested in them. Baseball, for instance, should always be able to run itself.

In summer there should be quiet occupations like sewing, cutting out, clay modeling, raffa and the like; and there ought to be story telling and dramatics.

Up to about thirteen or fourten the girls should play very much the same as boys do, and should be treated practically the same. It is especially important that girls from eleven to fourteen, that is to say, in the preadolescent period, should be encouraged to play lively games. Those are the decisive years and can make all the difference between strong healthy women on the one hand and or the victim of premature young ladyhood on the other.

The difficulty of treating the subject of play for bigger girls (over fourteen) is that nobody knows much about it. One thing seems to be established, namely, that they prefer dancing to any other form of play. There ought to be in any play system opportunity provided for the teaching of aesthetic and folk dancing, whether on specially provided lawns or platforms on the playground (which would seem to be best) or in the public school halls.

These girls also ought to have games, although not of the fiercest competitive variety. They care most for running games, like White Men and Indians, high spy, prisoners' base; and these seem best suited to them physically. Basketball and tennis are good games for girls if the competitive element is not too strongly present.

For the regular playground for the middle-sized boys, say those from ten to seventeen, the hours of the instructors should be somewhat as follows: In the spring from the end of school till dark, Saturdays from ten to one, and (subject to the use of the playground by the bigger boys and men) in the afternoon from two till five. In summer from ten till five with an hour and a half out. In the fall from the end of school till dark, or if there are electric lights, till half past five; Saturday as in the spring.

Playgrounds in crowded sections ought to be lighted and policed at night. Their evening use for football and for skating is very important. If this cannot be done, playgrounds in large cities should be somehow closed.

Saturday afternoons; during school hours (the latter is useful to men who work at night or who, like electric car men, have time off in the day time) after five in the summer. The playground needs only ordinary policing at these times, although they afford an opportunity for a good play leader to exert an important influence not merely on these men and bigger boys themselves, but on those who follow their example.—Joseph Lee.

Manager of Aviator Has Injunction on Aeroplanes

New York, March 17.—If Louis Paulhan, the French aviator, starts for France today he will have to go without his flying machines with him, because his manager, Edwin Cleary, who claims the aviator has violated his contract he has with him, served an injunction restraining him from touching the machines until the court shall decide the merits of the controversy.

With his craft tied up and Cleary threatening a damage suit for $150,000, friends are trying to persuade the Frenchman to reconsider his decision, but he appears obdurate and is determined to sail.

Plans are in progress for an addition to be built to the home of Frank W. Knowlton corner Beach street and Rawson road.

Wallace Arnold of North Abington is having a 27 foot Cape Cat boat built, which may push some of fast ones of the past.

N. Stewart Sanford of Rawson road has so far recovered from his severe fall as to be out again though not able to attend to business.

There is great demand for houses in Wollaston park. Out of town people are beginning to realize that it is an ideal place for the summer.

Rev. and Mrs. R. R. Thompson of Storrs college, Harpers Ferry, West Virginia, were guests over Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. D. V. Fletcher of 206 Franklin street.

It is gratifying to note the number of the people who flock to the Park and Downs church to hear the Rev. William Bingham Ayers who has recently become pastor of the church.

Rush work has been done for three weeks on the steamer Herman Frasch launched at the Fore River shipyard Dec. 11, and there will be a trial trip on Saturday. The contract calls for a speed of 11 knots when light and 10 knots when loaded.

A nine-cent social will be held in the chapel of the Bethany church tonight by the Opportunity Ten of Kings Daughters. There will be a sale of useful and fancy articles, candy ,cake and ice cream.

The Evacuation day celebration began in South Boston last night and two of the speakers, Lieutenant Governor Frothingham and Mayor Fitzgerald both argued in favor of the merchant marine.

The Women's Home Mission Society of the Wollaston Baptist church met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs Herbert B. Bailey of Grand View avenue. Mrs. N. N. Bishop of Boston delivered a very interesting address on "Cuba."

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert R. Holmes and Miss Rachel A. Monroe of Edwards street attended the graduation at the Massachusetts Homoeopathic Hospital Wednesday evening. Miss Lillian B. Linnell a cousin of Mr. Holmes was one of the graduates.

Sunday evening service at Calvary Baptist church was of special interest and enjoyable because of the presence of Rev. and Mrs. R. R. Thompson. Mr. Thompson gave a fine address and with Mrs. Thompson sang a number of hymns illustrating southern melodies. They rendered some of the best music in the most inspiring manner. Mr. Thompson is in New England representing Storrs college of Harpers Ferry, West Virginia.

BRIEFS

Evacuation day.

St. Patrick's day.

Quite a snow storm this morning.

It would not be St. Patrick's day if there was not a storm of some kind.

The wood work at City Hall is being revarnished and brightened up.

A set of unit book cases have been set up in the office of the City Solicitor at City Hall.

Children in the public schools are happy looking forward to the Easter vacation which begins at the close of Friday's session.

The wind this morning was in the right quarter for a good snow storm. There is one consolation, however, and that is the sun is so high that the snow will not last long.

The old High scool building on High School avenue will be sold at public auction Saturday at 3 o'clock by Auctioneer James F. Burke. It offers an opportunity to get lumber cheap.

The Sunday school of First church has been practicing Easter music every other Friday afternoon for several weeks, preparatory to the Easter concert on March 27. The music has also been sung at the Sunday school sessions.

The Women's club has sent out notices to the school children of the usual prize garden contest in which any child above the third grade can compete. The club will supply, vegetable and flower seeds at a very low price to the children designing to compete.

Judge Avery gave a hearing this afternoon on the complaint of Morris Shapira, attorney for Nathan Bluestein, against Probation Officer Francis A. Spear. The complaint alleges that Mr. Spear insulted the complainant and ridiculed the Hebrew race. The hearing was a private one and was held in the office of Judge Avery.

Mapor Fitzgerald of Boston appearing before the committee on metropolitan affairs of the Legislature an Wednesday in favor of the two bills by Hon. W. S. McNary for tunnels or subways to South Boston and Milton Lower Mills said the conditions at the Dudley street terminal are scandalous. Many Quincy people wil lagree with him.

LETTERS OF PUBLIC INTEREST

DID NOT KNOW OF MATCH

Mr. Poland Ready to Give Mr. Grant One More Chance

Editor Daily Ledger:

It rather surprised me Monday night when I read the Ledger to find that I was booked to roll Grant on Monday night, as it was the first I had heard about it. There was a match scheduled for Monday, March 7, which was agreed on through the sporting column of the Ledger by all your contestants in the contest, and I was on the spot at scheduled time, although hardly able. I was ready to roll, but, as the Sporting editor of the Ledger knows,there was not even a light in manager Grant's alleys. I was not sure that I could roll even that night, but managed to get there, only to find that I was the only one to put in an appearance. I told the Sporting Editor of the Ledger that night that we might be able to schedule the match for one week later, and understood that if that was to be done I would receive some notice of it.

Now, I think we are putting the Ledger to too much trouble over such a little matter, but if Manager Grant wishes to roll let him write the Quincy Ledger, as I am doing, promising if he fails to show up on Tuesday evening, March 21, he will forfeit. Now I want it plainly understood as I close this letter, that I did not back out of a match last Monday night, as I read in the paper Tuesday night, but that the match was made unknown to me.

E. A. Poland.

EFFORTS APPRECIATED.

Editor Quincy Ledger:

In the flush of victory we sometimes forget matters which are of much importance. There are some things which do not return to us in this life, and one of them is lost opportunity. At the close of the campaign in Atlantic Monday evening, while all present were so joyful at the success of the effort to secure the amount needed to start the new church building, there was one gentleman whose name should have been mentioned which from some oversight or excess of enthusiasm was overlooked.

It will be recalled by those present how warm were his thanks to others, while a large part of the results of the campaign were due to him. I refer to the pastor of the church, the Rev. Thomas Davison. I think all the church members, and all residents of Ward Six will agree with me that this opportunity to express our admiration for his unflinching determination, his Spartan promtitude, should not pass unnoticed. He never wavered, nor did he withhold any effort which might help to attain the end sought. Always cheerful and confident, his example was a great help to those who worked with him. While his effort has "opened the eyes "of many in this community, it has also opened the hearts of others, and made success certain.

FLAG RAISING.

The Massachusetts Fields school rejoices in a new flag which was raised for the first time this morning. At 9.30 o'clock the pupils of all grades marched into the school yard, forming a circle about the flag pole. This was followed by a salute to the flag and the singing of "America." The new flag has 46 stars in the blue field.

—There has never before been a period in which so many defalcations and embezzlements have come to light and the public would like to know if they have reached the end of these unpleasant conditions. Whether the discoveries of unfaithfulness have made the banks more vigilant, what has happened should cause balk officials to exercise a closer scrutiny of those who are in a position to use the funds unlawfully.—Lynn Item.

GRANITE CITY WHIST.

Ralph P. Courier and Dr. H. C. Hallowell received the highest scores at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club on Wednesday evening, the former having 79.3 per cent, and the latter 69.2 per cent. Mr. Currier's score was an unusually good one, for out of the 25 hands played he lost on only five, his total losses being but 12, while his wins totaled 46. Refreshments were served as usual after the play.

BILLIARDIST'S GREAT NERVE.

Win Game or Lose Life, Threat Made to the Late Jake Schaefer.

Jake Schaefer, the billiard wizard of a few years ago, who recently died at Denver, always played a better uphill game than when he was out in the lead. One incident will illustrate this and show his wonderful nerve. It was in a game Jake played and won in Eureka, Nev., under circumstances that would put a player with less nerve clear out of the game.

He was matched with Tony Kraker a well known billiardist and after ward a resident of Los Angeles. This was in 1875. Kraker was, of course, a much inferior player, and a news paper man named Chantz, who knew this, posted some of his winning friends about it. They were the typical miners of the day, a rough and ready lot and ready to bet freely They covered every dollar put up by Kraker's friends, who were mostly gamblers.

Bill Meelick, a big, burly miner, was selected as one of the three judges and the game was on. The miners were much elated as they saw Schaefer forge slowly to the front. But Schaefer began to lose some of his accuracy after passing the 300 mark, and Kraker took the lead. The game was 500 points, and Schaefer had 310. The judges were called on to see that the miners got fair play, and the suspicion was aroused that Schaefer had been bought off to lose. Bill Meelick was equal to the emergency. He whipped out his big six shooter and spoke these cheerful and reassuring words to Schaefer: "Youngster, you have the balls in a good position, and if there's any more monkey work I'll blow the top of your head off. You win this game."

He looked as if he meant it, and Jake got busy. It was a squally period, as the room was full of men representing opposing factions. A shooting scrape was in the air, and it all depended on Jake's accuracy of play. Any other man would have collapsed under the strain, but steadily he continued and never missed until the game ran out, a run of 190 points. He was all in at the finish.

Jacob Schaefer was born of German parentage on Feb. 2, 1855, at Milwaukee, Wis., and when only a youngster attracted attention when playing in his father's billiard room. He quickly jumped into the limelight of the billiard world. He earned for himself when quite young the title of "the wizard," and it clung to him through the remainder of his career.

FOR MEMORIAL TO HOWE.

First Woman to Stitch on Sewing Machine Tells About It.

Mrs. George L. Lilley, widow of the former governor and congressman from Connecticut, is planning a memorial to Elias Howe, inventor of the sewing machine, to be erected in New Hartford, Conn.

Miss Elizabeth M. Kilbourne, who is now in her eightieth year, was the first woman to take stitches on a sewing machine. She was living in New Hartford when Howe had a workshop on the present site of the New Hartford hotel and remembers calling on him after school and of his telling her that he had succeeded in making a few stitches.

"He asked me to try it," said Miss Kilbourne, "and I did. When I had taken a number of stitches he remarked, 'You are the first girl who ever took a stitch on a sewing machine.'"

Mrs. Lilley is a distant relative of Howe.

Easter Morning.

With air demure and downcast eyes
The alto takes her place,
And as the anthem sweet she sings
Of charity and grace
Her look of rapt beatitude
To an exultant grin
Is changed, and higher, higher still
Is raised her dimpled chin.
Can it be fervor for the theme?
Ah, no, it's sad to state;
She sees the tag on her neighbor's coat!
It reads: "Four ninety-eight!

JAPS WANT TO COME HERE.

Return Trip of Keio University Baseball Club Suggested.

Captain Kurozama, leader of the Keio university baseball team, which was one of the teams met by Wisconsin last year in Japan, has written to Genkwan Shibata, a student at Wisconsin, to say the Japanese university players want to come to the United States. The Japs would get here in May and want to meet college and professional teams. They want guarantees amounting to $5,000.

Dr. Charles McCarthy, who accompanied the Wisconsin team to Japan, has been in correspondence with Manager Hugh Jennings of the Detroit Americans in an attempt to have the trip assured.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Jim Jeffries refused an offer of $40,000 for his ranch in Burbank, Cal., that he bought for $15,000.

Wrestling Champion Frank Gotch says Zbysco must beat Dr. Roller to secure a match with him for the championship.

Andy Welsh, the well known turfman, may give a race for trotters under saddle, amateurs to ride, at the Readville (Mass.) grand circuit meetings.

John L. Sullivan's present twelve weeks' engagement in European music halls will be the ex-heavyweight champion's first appearance in that country since he fought Charley Mitchell twenty-two years ago.

The University of Pennsylvania may be awarded the intercollegiate sports for May 28. Syracuse wants the 1911 meet. The Penn relays at Philadelphia April 30 are expected to attract about 200 institutions.

The Crush.

It was at an afternoon tea, with the usual musical accompaniment. The man's man had been literally dragged there, an unwilling victim, by a zealous friend who liked afternoon teas with a musical accompaniment. Needless to say, the zealous friend was a ladies' man.

The man's man was very unhappy. He had sulked and had positively refused to be introduced to the bevy of charming girls presiding at the tea tables, much to the chagrin of the ladies' man, who naturally couldn't understand the attitude of the man's man. It was inexorable, from his point of view. But a ray of hope glimmered in his breast when the man's man rushed up to him, exclaiming:

"I say, old fellow, introduce me to the fat lady sitting over in the corner, will you?"

The eyes of the ladies' man glistened.

"With the greatest of pleasure," he cried. "Have you got a crush on her?"

"No," replied the man's man savagely. "I should say it was quite the other way. She's sitting on my hat!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Easter Myths and Customs.

Many and varied are the superstitions, ideas and customs which cluster around Easter. One of the best known is that it is unlucky to neglect the wearing of new attire on Easter day. This widely prevalent custom originated, it is said, with the young people of Yorkshire, England, who never fail to provide for themselves some new article of dress or of personal adornment, firmly believing that unless they do the crakes or rooks will avenge the neglect by damaging their clothing. It is held to be a good omen if one sees a lamb the first thing on Easter morning. The lamb, it is to be noted, should be standing erect and looking toward one to augur the most felicitous results.

The weather on Easter day is also specially significant. This is a point for forecasters. If the sun blazes out on Easter day, that is very good augury, for it is sure to shine again on Whitsunday in May. An old couplet tells us that—

A good deal of rain on Easter day
Gives a good crop of grass, but little good hay.

The direction from which the wind blows should also be carefully noted. If the wind is in the east it is said that there is great virtue in the water used on Easter day.

A curious fable connected with Easter day is that on that day the sun could be seen to dance, a superstition which has readily been traced to heathen origin. It was the custom during the ancient pagan spring festivals, of which the modern Easter is an adaptation, for the sun worshipers who held these ceremonies to dance at a festival in honor of the sun after the vernal equinox.—Leslie's Weekly.

Easter Jewelry.

It's the same kind you see at the jeweler's at other seasons, but it's made apropos by being tied with white and purple ribbon to dainty cards.

A gold plated hatpin conveys the Easter wishes of "Bre'r Rabbit," whose clever pen and ink portrait appears on the attached card.

A rabbit's foot charm with silver mounting is most appropriate, tied to an Easter lily card.

Pretty little silver pencil cases, with a rabbit in relief on the top, swing on a silver chain from a card.

Silver bookmarks, bracelets, brooches, button hooks, shoe horns and necklaces are all dressed in this Easter fashion with cards and ribbons.

Lipton Generously Offers a Beautiful Trophy.

Ex-Commodore Charles F. Adams, 2d, of the Quincy Yacht club was on Thursday reelected president of the Yacht Racing Association of Massachusetts. The other officers are: vice president, Bryan S. Permar; secretary A. T. Bliss; treasurer, I. H. Wiley, executive committee, Charles Francis Adams, 2d, A. T. Bliss, B. S. Permar, H. W. Robins and C. J. Hendrie.

The association voted to accept the gift and to have the secretary convey the thanks of the organization to Sir Thomas Lipton.

A tentative drawing of the shield shows a very beautiful design. Over the top is an American eagle, holding in its claws the American and English flags. At the sides are dolphins, holding up mantles of honor. In the center is the inner shield, surrounded by a wreath of laurel, upon the plates of which each year's winners will be accumulated. Two yachts under sail are seen just below this.

PRESIDENT C. F. ADAMS.

An amendment was made to the by-laws to the effect that the certificate of the measurer of any club in the association or any club having adopted the rules of the Atlantic Coast Conference, shall be accepted, subject to protest.

President Adams announced that Sir Thomas Lipton has offered as a perpetual trophy an honor shield, upon which will be inscribed all of the championship winners in the association in the various classes from the time of the organization in 1896.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON, WHO HAS SPENT MORE MONEY ON YACHT RACING THAN ANY OTHER MAN.

As the Yacht Racing Association of Masachusetts is not a chartered body, it is the intention of the donor that the Boston Yacht Club shall have custody of the shield as trustee.

Above the record shield is seen the title, "Honor Shield." Below this appears: "To bear the names of the winners of the championships of the Yacht Racing Association of Massachusetts as a perpetual record, beginning with its organization in the year 1896." Below the honor shield is the inscription: "The gift of Sir Thomas Lipton, 1910."

Commencing this year, the Yacht Racing Association of Massachusetts will present to the championship

West Quincy People Asked to Improve Front Yards

An important meeting of the West Quincy Improvement association was held Thursday evening, at St. Jean hall. A number of matters of vital interest to the ward were discussed and action taken on several.

The committee on the annual banquet made its final report which was very gratifying to the association.

SIDEWALK.

It was voted to have one of the Councilmen from Ward introduce an order in the City Council calling for a tar concrete sidewalk on the north side of Crescent street between Willard street and the parkway.

ROADS IN RESERVATION.

The bill before the Legislature, known as Bill No. 503, was then discussed at length. This bill, which was introduced by Charles L. Carr, provides that the Metropolitan Park Commission shall expend no more money in the construction of new streets, ways or paths in the Blue Hills Reservation, except that foot paths not over five feet in width may be built.

It was pointed out that the Commissioners would be unable, if this bill became a law, to do any further work in the building of streets or thoroughfares through the reservation, which in other words meant that the commissioners would be prohibited from carrying out contemplated streets through this beautiful tract of land, and prevent the development of the reservation. As West Quincy adjoined the reservation it would also be a detriment to Quincy.

The question was gone into thoroughly, and a committee was appointed to appear before the committee on Metropolitan Affairs and oppose the passage of the bill. This committee is James H. Elcock, John Evans, W. F. Lakin, R. J. Teasdale, John C. Smith and James F. Burke.

It was voted to invite the Board of Trade to co-operate with the association in opposing the bill.

A committee consisting of Joseph Walker, Edward J. Sandberg, John Evans and Stephen B. Little were appointed to consider the matter of improving the triangular lot bounded by Copeland, West and Common streets.

FRONT YARDS.

That West Quincy may become a place beautiful it was voted to ask all residents to improve the front of their estates and to further along this proposition the association will furnish flowers and seeds.

All of these matters were thoroughly discussed by members present, showing that the association is fully alive to the needs of the ward, and that they are keeping in touch with matters of interest to this section of the city.

DIVISION 5 BANQUET

Mayor Shea and City Solicitor McAnarney Speak

The annual St. Patrick's banquet of Division 4, A. O. H., and the Ladies' Auxiliary, was held Thursday evening at Hibernian hall, and as usual proved a very successful and enjoyable affair. The banquet was served at 8 o'clock and was pronounced excellent. After the banquet J. P. Ferguson, president of Division 5, introduced Mayor Shea as toastmaster.

His Honor spoke briefly on the meaning of the day, and of the good work that the several divisions of the Hibernians in the city were doing, and then introduced City Solicitor John W. McAnarney, who spoke on "The mission of the Irish people and the vision of St. Patrick." Mr. McAnarney's address was an able one, and at its conclusion he was accorded great applause. The only other speaker was James Connelly, who gave an oration on "Irish American Athletics."

Hon. William S. McNary was expected to be present, but was unavoidably detained.

In addition to the speaking, there were vocal selections by Edward Sullivan, fancy dancing by Miss Jessie and Miss Grace McDonald, vocal selections by M. C. Roache, Miss Margaret Powers and Daniel Donohue, bagpipe selections by Donald McDonald, and whistling solos by Matthew Fay, Miss Annie Cain was the pianist.

SOCIAL AT WOLLASTON.

Wollaston lodge, American Benefit society, held a social and entertainment at Brasee hall Tuesday evening. Two applications for membership were received. The program included piano duets by the Misses Eldene Young and Margaerite Holbrook of Atlantic; group of songs by Miss Holbrook; vocal solos by Wallace Kesler; readings by Miss Young; piano solo by Miss Mildred Hanson. William H. Carberry of Boston, supreme president gave a short address, stating the financial and fraternal side of the order, which stands second to none of any organization. Refreshments were served, after which dancing was enjoyed with Miss Emily Bjorkman pianist. Much credit is due Mrs. L. C. Merrill, chairman of the committee for the evening's pleasure.

There was once a professor who never lost an opportunity to rebuke any bumptiousness on the part of his students. On one occasion, when he was taking leave of a certain graduate he is reported to have said:

"Sir, your fellow students think highly of you; but sir no one thinks more highly of you than you do yourself!"

HOUGHS NECK SCHOOL BIDS

Lowest Bidders Over $1,000 in Excess of Appropriation

Bids were opened by the Mayor and Commissioner of Public Works this morning for the building of the four-room brick school building and for the heating and ventilating of the building. The appropriation for the building was $20,000, of which sum $18,000 was for the building and $2,000 for the furnishings. All of the bids exceed that amount so that it will be necessary to get an additional appropriation or modify the plans and call for new bids.

For the erection of the building, exclusive of the heating, Dennis F. Crowley of Quincy, who built the new Coddington school and the addition to the Lincoln school, was the lowest bidder, while ex-Councilman Eugene R. Stone was the lowest bidder for the heating. The several bids were as follows:

FOR THE BUILDING.

Dennis F. Crowley	$17,000
John W. Duff	18,366
Ernest T. Wilson	19,657
J. Lacatelle & Co., Inc.,	19,685
J. J. & P. Mack	27,795

FOR HEATING.

Eugene R. Stone, brick set furnaces	$2,198
Fuller Warren, Co., brick set furnaces	2,365
Edward O. Burrows, new plant	2,377
Edward O. Burrows, using old Quincy school boilers	2,245

All bids were taken under advisement.

TODAY'S COURT.

Louis H. Mann, a conductor on the Weymouth division of the street railway, was arraigned for the larceny of car fares and was held in $100 until next Tuesday.

George Litchfield and William G. Thayer were fined $3 each on account of costs for drunkenness at Quincy, and had their cases continued on probation until July 1.

—The two-cent mid-forenoon luncheon for school children is a commendable move, even though its entering wedge aspects be acknowledged. The sum is so small in proportion to its probable contribution to vitality and health that the American public is very likely to insist on doing ultimately as much as this at common expense, disregarding the charge that it is socialistic. That word seems in fact, likely to lose eventually some of its suggestion of horn and hoofs under the growing complex conditions of the modern world.—Boston Transcript.

GAS COMPANY DECLARES A DIVIDEND

Net Earnings for Eight Months Have Been $4,227; For One Month $1,129.

An Early Reduction in Price of Gas May Be Expected.

The Citizens' Gas Light Company of Quincy declared its initial dividend on Thursday. True, it was not large, being only one percent, but it is the first dividend that has been declared since the company was reorganized and taken over by the Massachusetts Gas Companies, a subsidiary corporation.

The net earnings of the Quincy Company for the month of February were $1,120, which would be at the rate of $24,440 per year. During February of 1909 there was a deficit of $573, so that there has been a big gain for one year.

For six months from July 1, 1909, to March 1, 1910, the net earnings of the Quincy company were $4,227, while in the corresponding eight months of 1908-1909 there was a deficit of $837.

All the other companies controlled by the Masachusetts company are paying good dividends, the following being announced on Thursday: East Boston, regular quarterly of 2 1-2 per cent; Newton and Watertown, regular quarterly of 2 per cent; Boston Consolidated Gas Company, regular quarterly of 2 per cent—all payable March 31.

The report of the net earnings of these companies for the month of February are compared with those for February 1909:

	1910	1909
Boston Gas	$146,631	$135,781
New England G & C	45,719	45,296
New England C &C	4,350	5,229
East Boston Gas	4,595	6,714
Newton Gas	7,430	7,430
Quincy Gas	1,129	*573
Total	$209,856	$192,447

—*Deficit

It will be observed that no increase was made in three of the above companies and in another it was very small, while in Quincy there was an increase of $1,702. The increase of the Boston company was only $10,830.

For the eight months from July 1 to March 1, the net earnings of 1909-1910 are compared with 1908-1909. Only three of the six companies show an increase and Quincy is one of these:

	1910	1909
Boston Cons. Gas.	$863,628	$774,343
New England G & C	286,016	322,937
New England C & C	174,605	55,652
East Boston Gas	51,835	58,022
Newton & Watertown	40,111
Citizens' of Quincy	4,227	*837
Total	$1,420,425	$1,210,117

—*Deficit.

Recently it was reported that the value of the stock of the Citizens Gas Company had increased from $100 to $125, and this together with a dividend declared by result in an early reduction of the gas rates to consumers in Quincy.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

A conservationist can be a spendthrift when it comes to opinions.

Airship companies are now letting stock buyers in on the ground floor.

Gifford Pinchot nominates Secretary Ballinger for the Down and Out Club.

That man Glavis appears to have accused Secretary Ballinger of every heinous offense except wearing sidewhiskers and playing the accordion.

"Uncle Joe" wonders whether he is afoot or on horseback. We can remember times when he has been up in the air.

Appropriating over $1,500,000 in fifteen minutes is going some. That is what the wealthy town of Brookline did at its town meeting Wednesday night.

They have hustling business men at Waltham and have already raised $7,000 toward a factory building. The Board of Trade is considering employing a man to devote his entire time to the work of the board.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

Dr. William Lee Howard, in an article in The Circle on causes that lead to early divorces, says: "We need at once a system of education in our public schools that shall drive out forever the present pride of ignorance concerning cooking and home work. It is an anti-social condition we are encouraging. The girl who was born to be a useful woman is started on a career of unrest at 14 years of age. For the next four years she lives constantly in an atmosphere of social attractions, kept totally ignorant of domestic duties—in many cases such work is scorned—and the result is a life of discontent and physical unhealth."

Constant study of the newspaper press of our state impresses us with the idea that all of our newspapers are making a constant improvement. Compared even with a few years ago, there is cleaner press work, clearer type growing news facilities. Every publisher has to keep up with a procession that is constantly advancing. And thus most newspaper publishers find their expense account steadily climbing. How are they meeting these conditions. In our opinion, by the growing recognition that the local newspaper performs the work of a board of trade. It is a direct agent of the business interests in their effort to make a city grow. If inadequately supported, it gives as bad an impression outside as to send out a salesman clothed in seedy garments. Every business house ought to realize, that the impression formed of this city in the outside world, is largely dependent upon the ability of this city's newspapers to improve their typographical facilities, and to follow the lines of modern journalism. The moral is obvious.—Beverly Times.

The "Merry Widow" hat has had its day. Though a large and costly affair, it had graceful lines. The "Merry Widow" was followed by an ugly monstrosity modeled after the waste basket or the coal scuttle or the soup kettles, as fancy happened to direct the shaping process. No woman ever looked good in this style of headgear. The prettier the face the more unbecoming the hat. It was thought that the limit of nightmares in design had been reached and there was a prospect that sanity would return to the millinery business. But we are to have the "Chantecler," adapted from Rostand's barnyard play which is now engaging the theatregoers of Paris. The "Chantecler" hat is built after the plans and specifications of the rooster, though, of course, we may expect that it will embrace any variety of domestic fowl that lends itself to the fancy of the trimmer. Paris has it, London has it, New York and Chicago both have it, and it will not be long before it becomes common. Woman is a slave to the milliner and the modiste. The craziest and most extravagant edicts of these tyrants are followed with a faithfulness "worthy of a better cause." The cost of this folly is enormous. It is one of the important reasons for the gap between income and the cost of living.—Haverhill Gazette.

HALLEY'S COMET.

"Forecasts by so-called scientists in various parts of the country that the gases in the tail of Halley's comet will presently poison mankind or cause other calamities may properly be termed 'high pressure hot air currents.'"

Father Adams, S.J., professor of astronomy at Gonzaga College of Spokane, made the foregoing observation in referring to statements attributed to observers in California and elswhere.

"Halley's comet has been sizzling around its ordained orbit century after century, just as its creator designed it to do," said Father Adams, adding: "Were there any devastating elements in the appendage of the visitor humanity would have been exterminated regularly every 76 years.

"It seems that such incidents in earthly affairs would naturally attract some attention. They might even have a slight tendency to affect the increase of population and check the progress of human events generally. Very little suspicion along this line is sufficient antidote for sensational predictions as to Halley's comet, even though they are made by alleged scientists."

Father Adams claims he has definitely located the comet, having seen it through a telescope the night of February 22, saying:

"The moon is so bright just now that it is difficult to catch the light from anything else, but the comet showed fairly well. There were little streaks out from the edges that I judge to be evidences of the tail. The comet may be visible to the naked eye early in March at the speed it is traveling, but not sooner. To locate it, take the line formed by the two lower stars of the constellation Orion and follow it north to a point just above the planet Saturn. On that line above and slightly west of Saturn the comet should be found, but not without at least four-inch glasses."

MUNICIPAL CLEANING DAY.

Seventy thousand men, women and grownup boys and girls, or half the population of Spokane, have been enlisted by the One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Club to participate in the fourth annual cleaning day, the date for which will be fixed at the next meeting of the organization. C. Herbert Moore, former mayor of Spokane who recently assumed the office of president and general manager of the organization without salary for a year, will have 500 captains of brigades in the field within two weeks to organize the various squads for active work.

Mayor Nelson S. Pratt will declare a civic holiday early in April, when manufacturing, wholesale and retail concerns will donate the use of their teams and vehicles to haul the garbage to the incinerating plant, while the combustible material will be destroyed in the less frequented streets and vacant lots. Three thousand members of the One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Club will assist in the yearly house-cleaning, which work is to be completed in 24 hours, after which 10,000 pupils from the two high and 26 grade schools will plant flower and grass seeds and set out shade trees, vines and shrubs under the direction of the City Beautiful committee of the organization.

"We had more than 50,000 persons at work last spring," said Mildred Simmons, secretary of the club, "and at the close of the day Spokane was as neat and clean as a new pin. Every part of the city was covered by volunteer workers and the entire plan was carried out without the expenditure of a penny either by the city or our club, then under the direction of Harry J. Neely."

New Style of Aeroplane.

A. M. Herring and W. Starling Burgess launched the other day at Marblehead, Mass., a new heavier than air flying machine. Its first trip was said to be successful. It is an aeroplane, frankly intended to avoid the Wright patents. Instead of the balancing planes, over which the Wrights are suing, this machine has a leg of mutton arrangement on top of the plane. This is made to work automatically, so that as the machine swerves the fin will be buoyed up by the air and bring the mechanism back to a lateral balance.

TAFT'S DAY IN CHICAGO

Easily the Central Figure of the St. Patrick Celebration

Chicago, March 18.—St. Patrick was notably remembered in Chicago, but the brunt of the celebration fell upon President Taft. During the day he spoke to members of the Chicago Newspaper club, the Traffic club, to a mass meeting, to members and guests of the Hamilton club, and twice at functions provided by the Irish Fellowship club, which was his host for the day.

In these speeches the president touched on "statesmen correspondents" who colored facts to suit their views. To the railway men composing the Traffic club he expressed his trust in the sense of justice of the American people.

In his address at the banquet of the Irish Fellowship club the president said that in all the wars of the United States Irishmen have been in the front, always daring and effective.

The "Long" Sitzes.

The Sitze family was long in person long drawn out in speech and eternally long about doing things. Over miles of pine hills they were known as the "long" Sitzes. Miss Lydia, the eldest, went to a crossroads store to buy Christmas presents. In the course of a half hour she became interested in some blue and scarlet petticoats.

"I'll take one of these petticoats," she said, slowly counting out the price.

The busy proprietor wrapped up the parcel and handed it over with a polite "Something else?"

"I'll take another petticoat."

He did up a second bundle, took her carefully counted money and was turning to the next impatient customer.

"I'll take another petticoat," came the slow drawl.

This went on to the seventh time. The man, being up to his ears in work, ventured a question:

"Buying for the neighborhood, Miss Lydia?"

"I'm buying two apiece for my sisters."

"How many sisters have you?"

"Nine."—Youth's Companion.

Didn't Cut the Ace.

The greatest delight of Pat Sheedy, according to a friend of the famous gambler, was to "double cross" the crooked card sharks.

"Sheedy once strolled into a tough gambling resort in the west where he was not known and stood watching the games," the friend relates. "One of the dealers was 'spieling' to several countrymen and had about convinced them to take a chance at his game.

"'I'll bet you 2 to 1 that I can shuffle the deck and cut the ace of hearts the first time,' he announced.

"'I'll take $50 of that if you'll let me shuffle the cards,' Pat said.

"The dealer agreed, and the money was staked. The countrymen also made small bets.

"'Are you satisfied?' the dealer asked when the cards were shuffled. 'The proposition is that I am to cut the ace of hearts the first cut.'

"Every one agreed. Then the dealer—he was a tough one—whipped out a big hunting knife and slashed the deck in two. But he didn't take the money. Sheedy had palmed the ace of hearts while shuffling the cards."

Our Safety Valves.

The invention of the safety valve for steam engines has saved thousands of lives and millions of dollars in property. It is an invention that stands prominently to the front in this age of mechanical progress. But nature supplied us each with a safety valve which for effectiveness works better than any made by man. If we did not have this safety valve we could not live twenty-four hours. This safety valve is the perspirative, or sweat, gland, and to make sure that we should not run short of the supply she has furnished the body with some two and a half millions of them. If our temperature rose 7 or 8 degrees we should die within a few hours, and yet we could not run, row, indulge in any athletic exercises or even walk safely any distance without increasing our temperature to the danger point if we had no safety valve provided so ingeniously by nature.

A Sensitive Patient.

Dr. Emdee—Feet go to sleep? That shows your circulation is bad. Editor—That's all you quacks know. I suppose if my corns ached that would show that advertising patronage was falling off.

—Growers in all parts of the Pacific Northwest report that the present outlook is good for a large apple crop, and orchardists in the Inland Empire say they will harvest a better yield than in any previous year in the history of the district. Heaters were used in numerous orchards in Washington, Idaho, Oregon and Montana on two or three occasions this winter, when the temperature touched near the zero mark and it is the opinion of expert horticulturists that few if any trees were injured by frost. The warm sunshine during the last 10 days has wrought remarkable changes in the apple and peach belts in eastern Washington and buds on the former are swelling. Although blossoming will be later than usual this year, the growers are looking forward to immense crops. The temperature this winter has not fallen low enough to kill the buds and every precaution is being taken to guard against late frost during the spring months.

HOCKING STOCK "SHORT SALES"

Keene's Brokers Cleaned Up a Profit of $350,000

DID NOT HAVE HIS CONSENT

Financier Says He Made Protest, as He Was Astonished When He Learned What Had Been Done With Stock of Pool of Which He Was Manager—Sales Made Under Agreement Which He Had Forgotten

New York, March 18.—More light on the events leading up to the collapse of the pools in the stock of the Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron company has been shed by James R. Keene, who stated in a hearing of the bankruptcy proceedings of the J. M. Fiske company that a large block of his holdings in the pool were sold short by a firm of brokers with whom he had dealings the day before the collapse and the day of it, and that a profit of $350,000 was realized.

Keene said the stock was used without his consent or knowledge and that he was astonished when he learned what had been done with it. He declared that he had not sold the stock himself, nor did he share in the profit.

Keene is to be the star witness in the resumption of the hearing next Wednesday. In the meantime he is going into the country to rest. He looked weak and ill on the stand and said that he was in poor health. He said that during his sojourn he would try to familiarize himself with other subjects that the representative of the Fiske company wishes to know and testify concerning them.

The firm had actually sold short actual possession of 6100 shares of the stock, the holding of Keene in the pool of which he was manager, and when called to to make delivery on the short sale they took more than 4000 shares of this stock for that purpose. The firm had actually sold short more than 6000 shares, but the failure of one firm made it necessary to make delivery for only between 4000 and 5000 shares.

By the pool agreement Keene was not to sell any of the pool stock, and he testified that he was surprised and indignant when, on Feb. 23, for the first time, he had heard what the brokers had done. But, he said, they showed him they were well within their rights by virtue of an agreement made five years before which gave them the right to use at any time for themselves or their customers stock Keene was carrying with them and on which they had loaned.

The stock was sold all the way from $70 to $88 a share, and the price now is $13. The profits on the short sale made by the brokers for which Keene's stock was used for delivery was about $350,000. Keene disclaims any profit in this transaction or any knowledge of it, but the accounts of the brokers show that from April 26 to Dec. 9 he sold 7300 shares of the stock, which cost from $18 to $30, at prices ranging from $61 to $89, with a total profit of more than $200,000.

CHEAPER CUTS OF MEAT

Government Instructs Housekeepers How to Make Them Palatable

Washington, March 18.—The increased cost of living has prompted the department of agriculture to instruct housekeepers of the country how to make the cheaper cuts of meat palatable and appetizing, and to this end a manual of economy in meat cooking has been prepared containing a variety of recipes and general information.

"Economic Use of Meats in the Home" is the title of the manual which may be procured by addressing a request to the secretary of agriculture. The department officials state that cheap cuts are most difficult to prepare.

Louisville, March 18.—Secretary Washburne of the National Model License league received, unopened and marked "declined to receive," a registered letter he sent John D. Rockefeller, asking the financier's moral and financial support of the league.

The announced object of the league is to relieve the retail liquor dealers from the "domination of political bosses" and to give licenses which are to be taken from a liquor dealer only by vote of the people or because of violation of law.

ADMIRAL SWIFT RETIRES

Has Performed Forty-Seven Years Active Service In Navy

Washington, March 18.—Rear Admiral William Swift, U. S. N., recently in command of the Charlestown navy yard, and the senior ranking rear admiral of the navy, passed from the active to the retired list of naval officers, as he reached his 62d birthday and the law compels the retirement of officers of the navy at that time.

Rear Admiral Swift has been the aid for material on the personal staff of Secretary Meyer of the navy department. He will be continued on another duty for some time, under the law which permits the employment of officers on the retired list for the benefit of the service. He has served a full forty-seven years in the navy, and concludes his service with a record excelled by few officers in its history.

Rear Admiral Conway H. Arnold becomes the senior and ranking rear admiral of the navy.

MARRIAGE ANNIVERSARY

Ex-Councilman and Mrs. Walter E. Piper Entertain

A number of the many friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Piper gathered at their beautiful home on Centre street, Thursday evening to help them celebrate the pasing of their marriage anniversary, the twenty-fourth, and to wish them many years of unalloyed wedded bliss. The guests arrived shortly after 8 o'clock, and after congratulations were over, bridge parties were immediately made up, and for the next few hours all were busy at this popular game.

At 10 o'clock there was a brief lull in the game during which time refreshments were served. These included the sugaring off of some delicious maple syrup, from Mr. Piper's native home on the shores of Lake Winnespesaukee. Bridge followed until the fast moving hands of the clock warned the party that the time had arrived to say good night.

Music was suggested and with one of the guests at the piano there was some chorus singing for a few minutes, just before the guests took their departure. The evening had proved a delightful one, and Mr. and Mrs. Piper were showered with well wishes for the coming anniversary, with the hope expressed that a year hence they would be present to help celebrate their silver wedding. The host and hostess were the recipients of a number of pleasing remembrances.

EASTER IN PRISON

EASTER SUNDAY in a prison is welcomed as one of the great days of the year, when there is a little extra indulgence in the way of eating and amusement and some relaxation in the usual discipline. The prison officials endeavor as far as possible to make the day a little different from the usual Sunday, though, with the best intentions, they cannot do much.

Easter Sunday begins for the prisoners at about half past 7, when the great prison bell rings and the guards unlock the cell doors. Away down the corridor you hear the stamp, stamp, as of an advancing giant. Line after line of black and gray striped figures march out on their way to breakfast.

The messroom, with its rows of desk-like tables, capable of seating more than a thousand men, looks like an immense schoolroom. At the end of each table is a great pile of bread cut in thick slices, beside which stands a keeper. Each man on taking his seat finds before him a tin plate containing his breakfast, a pint of coffee, a slice of bread and a knife and fork. If he wants more bread he holds up his right hand and the guard at the end of the table passes it to him. By holding up his plate or cup he can get more coffee or whatever there may be for breakfast. Waste is avoided, but no man need go away from the table unsatisfied. After a busy quarter of an hour the keeper in charge of the first company knocks on the table, and the men in his charge, some fifty or sixty, rise at once and form into line, each carrying his knife and fork in his hand. The keeper takes his station at the door, and as each man passes out he must deposit his knife and fork in the box provided for that purpose.

If the day is fine the men are marched around the yard for half an hour, still keeping their formation, and a strange sight it is to see the long lines of men marching in and out around the building in endless procession.

Exercises over, away they march to the chapel, which, owing to the efforts of the chaplain and his friends, is decorated with flowers and plants disposed so as to hide as much as possible the telltale bars and other suggestive items. Each man as he enters receives a printed program of the services, containing also the hymns to be sung by the congregation. For weeks previously the prison choir has been practicing Easter music, and, as a rule, the prison choir is quite competent to give as good a choral service as those of a great many city churches, there being no lack of well trained voices, even a male soprano voice being far from unusual.

The religious services are brief, most of the time being taken up by the choir. The whole is over in about an hour and a half. Then comes the march back to the cells, each man receiving as he passes the mess room a tin containing his afternoon meal, which consists of three hard boiled eggs, some cold potatoes and as much bread as he cares to take. Taking his place at the lever which locks every door on that gallery, the keeper waits until each man is in his place. At the signal each door is closed with a bang, snap goes the lever, and fifty doors are securely locked. Then comes the count. Each man stands behind his door, which, being formed of iron bars, permits him to be plainly seen, and as the keeper knocks with his key in passing answers "Here." A second keeper repeats the count, and then for the present each man is left to the enjoyment of his own company.

At 12 o'clock the prison wakes up again a little as the mess room waiters pass from door to door with great cans of boiling coffee. Soon all is quiet again, and little can be heard as the afternoon drags along except the soft footfall of the felt shod patrol or an impatient sigh from a wakeful prisoner. At 5 o'clock fresh water is served out to each man, and his lamp is lighted. Slowly the time drags along until 9 o'clock, when at the striking of the prison gong all lights are put out. The great prison is soon as quiet as a city of the dead, and Easter Sunday has passed.—New York Evening Post.

You will find a new Red Cross Shoe feels better on your foot than an old stiff-sole shoe

Be sure to try it this spring. You won't know you have shoes on

You may select any style you want and wear it with perfect comfort. The wonderful ease of its flexible sole allows you to forget your feet even in dress shoes.

Tanned by a special process

Stiff soles are tanned in six weeks. Acids are used to hurry the tanning. They parch and burn the leather. This is why ordinary shoes draw your feet.

The Red Cross tanning process takes six months. All the leather's natural life and elasticity are retained. You feel the difference the instant you change from stiff-sole shoes to the Red Cross Shoe.

No jar on your spine

The heel of the Red Cross Shoe is made of the same specially tanned leather. It takes all the jar off your spine, saves your strength.

Know for yourself how comfortable the Red Cross Shoe really is. New styles are coming in all the time. Come in today. Don't put it off. We want you to know the ease and wonderful comfort that has made the Red Cross Shoe so famous.

The Kingdom of Easterland.

Do you know where the kingdom of Easterland lies?
Is it north, is it south, little man?
Scan the east and the west with your mischievous eyes,
Thrust your hands in your pockets and try to look wise,
And tell where it is if you can.
Do you know is this kingdom far off or quite near?
Now, please tell me that, little maid.
Can you see it at night when the moon's shining clear?
If you were to sail there which way would you steer?
Does it lie in the sunshine or shade?
But, dear little men, little maids, this you know—
'Tis the loveliest land ever seen.
With fields full of rabbits and lilies like snow,
And houses of sweetmeats wherever you go,
With bridges of eggs in between.
There are chimings of bells and music most sweet
And sometimes most beautiful toys,
New frocks and new bonnets trimmed so fine and neat
And drums, swords and trumpets, an outfit complete—
That is, if you're good girls and boys.
And this wonderful land with such joy and such cheer,
A land you would love to explore,
That sends you remembrances once every year,
Let me whisper a secret quite close to your ear—
It lies at your very own door.
—Edith Sessions Tupper in New York Herald.

Marriage and Colors.

Here's the old superstition which the Easter bride, who fortunately is always married in white, may take for what it is worth:

Married in gray, you will go far away.

Married in black, you will wish yourself back.

Married in brown, you will live out of town.

Married in red, you will wish yourself dead.

Monument Over Battleship Maine.

Believing that the wreck of the United States battleship Maine is in itself the greatest monument which could be erected in memory of the sailors who went down with her, Verplanck Colvin of Albany, N. Y., has written a letter to Admiral Charles D. Sigsbee of the navy department advocating that a rubble stone breakwater be constructed to inclose the spot where the ship lies and that an obelisk be erected in the center bearing the records of the history of the event and the names of those who were killed there.

—One hundred thousand dollars' damage was awarded to Joseph H. Boyd, a pioneer merchant of Spokane, against the Northern Pacific Railway company, in a judgment handed down by the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth district, according to advices just received from San Francisco. The decision is the end of litigation started in Idaho 23 years ago and since then tried in a dozen courts, including the highest federal tribunal. Boyd's claim against the Coeur d' Alene Railway & Navigation company was for $17,000, which obligation was assumed by the Hill corporation, when it absorbed the property following the failure. The claim was for construction work and was assigned to Boyd by the original contractor of the line from Coeur d'Alene to Mullan by way of Wallace, Idaho, built by D. C. Corbin, president of the Spokane International Railway company. The road is now part of the Northern Pacific system. The Hill people repudiated the claim and suit followed. The case was fought through all the courts and the litigation cost thousands of dollars.

NO HATS AT TAFT DINNER.

Woman's Headgear Forbidden at Chicago Banquet on March 17.

Women guests will not be allowed to wear their hats at the banquet to be given President Taft on March 17 by the Irish Fellowship club, according to the mandate of the committee in charge of the affair.

"I can imagine how a woman feels who has bought a $150 hat to wear on such an occasion," said James O'Shaughnessy, chairman of the committee. "It was hard for us to bring ourselves to issue the edict, but it had to be done.

"There is only a limited amount of space in any hall. We figured it up mathematically that one woman's hat takes up the space of two and one-fourth persons. There would not be room for the waiters to get around."

The Tail of a Fish.

A fish's tail is its wings. Owing to the machinery of muscle set along its spine and to its cleaving form a trout or salmon can dart through the water at a tremendous pace, though its rapid flights, unlike the bird's, are not long ones. It is soon tired. The water is not so friendly to flight as the air. The stroke of the fish's tail is one of great power, and by means of it and the writhing, snakelike flexion of the body a high speed is reached. The strength behind this speed is shown in the way a fish or sea mammal out of the water will raise its tail and strike the ground or boat.

Roundabout Bribery.

At one old time British election a candidate won by means of an umbrella. Sheer absence of mind caused him to leave the gamp behind at every house at which he called to canvass, and of course when it was returned by the voter a sovereign was only a suitable reward for honesty.

Impatience.

"Impatience," said Uncle Eben, "is giverally de feelin' you has when you wants somebody else to hurry an' make up foh de time you's been wastin'."—Washington Star.

Just the Other Way.

"Did you ever hear Gadby say anything particular about me?"

"No. He never was very particular what he said about you."

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall of New York, daughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, is to lecture this evening at the Quincy Mansion school on "Manners at Home and at School."

The resolutions adopted by the Board of Trade on Wednesday evening endorsing the Ocean Mail bill, were forwarded within 24 hours to each of the New England Senators and Representatives.

The members of the Wollaston Boys' Club made a good showing at the union meeting, for the three Y. M. C. A. extension clubs, held at the Y. M. C. A. on Thursday evening, having a larger attendance than any other club. Plans are being made for a ball team.

Mr. and Mrs. Parker, who have been living in Cambridge, will soon make their home in Wollaston. Mr. Parker being employed by the Tubular Rivet and Stud Company. Mrs. Parker was formerly Miss Hicks, who conducted a private kindergarten on Beach street.

SUPREME COURT.

In the Supreme Judicial court on Wednesday the case of Dominico Tumminello vs. Fore River Ship Building Company was argued. Action had been brought for injuries sustained by a reamer in the employ of the defendant. He had been directed by the superintenent of riveters to adjust his reamer by striking it with his hammer, and a piece of the reamer, flew into his eye. Question is whether the superintendent who gave the order represented the defendant or was acting outside the scope of his authority. G. P. Beckford; John and J. A. Lowell.

—Now they are saying that the high cost of living is due to the cost of the fancy boxes in which goods are marketed. Well people generally are satisfied to pay a little extra for a clean, neat package. It's sort of worth it, don't you know, for the stomach's sake. But then, milk at seven cents per quart is being peddled about in the same sort of old cans that carried the kind that retailed for four cents per quart when we were boys. Dollar wheat rides in the same cars that the fifty cent kind used to. Potatoes are brought in the same old gunny sacks and native pork at fifteen cents per pound rides into market in the bottom of the farmer's express wagon as it always did. It's the same old "original" package in many cases but a brand new and higher price.—Spencer Leader.

COUNTESS LEARY

Is to Found a Great Columbus Memorial

EASTER GIFT OF $500,000

Value of Deed to Be Given by Mrs. Hetty Green

LEARY COLUMBUS MEMORIAL

Wealthy Woman Financier Interested In Plan of Countess and Will Donate Valuable Land Toward Enlargement of Columbus University—Founded In 1907, Projectors Hope to Make It Institution of Free Education

New York, March 18.—Reports from authoritative sources indicate that Mrs. Hetty Green is to make an Easter offering of an entire block of land, worth $500,000, facing on Fifth avenue somewhere between Eightieth and Ninetieth streets, to the Christopher Columbus university, founded in 1907 by Miss Annie Leary. Mrs. Green and Miss Leary have been friends for years.

Mrs. Green is said to have determined on the gift because of her approbation of the plan of Miss Leary to establish a lasting memorial to Christopher Columbus in the form of a free university. It is proposed to build a great memorial to Christopher Columbus that will be an educational institution at the same time.

The university already exists, with headquarters at 43 Charlton street, this city, where sixty Italian-American pupils are accommodated. The plan has prospered so well and its extension has become so imperative that when Mrs. Green learned of it she decided to make an Easter offering to it in the form of a deed to the foundation of a large building.

At the home of Miss Leary on Fifth avenue, it was intimated that the land had been given. It was announced there that she was out of town and would make known whether the gift had been made upon her return, about Easter.

Thomas Gilleran, a lawer, is one of the incorporators of the institution. He said that Mrs. Green is interested in the work Countess Leary is doing among the Italian immigrants.

Miss Leary was made a countess by the pope in recognition of her philanthropic deeds.

"I'll kill the old woman if you take me back to the state school," he added. "I want to go to the state prison." He is likely to get his wish.

Durgin, who is an orphan, escaped from the state school for boys on Tuesday night last.

IRENE LE BLANC ON STAND

Says Mrs. Glover Wanted to Get Rid of Her Husband

Cambrdge, Mass., March 18.—Irene Le Blanc, the sister of Hattie, unfolded sensation after sensation in the probate court yesterday.

She told of seeing a note written by Mrs. Glover and placed under her husband's plate on the Wednesday preceding the murder. Mrs. Glover told her, she said, that in this note she wanted to get rid of him, that she didn't know how to get rid of him, and that she wanted him out of the way.

On the Friday week preceding the murder, Irene testified, Mrs. Glover had shown her another note which, Irene said, told Glover not to come home to supper, and if he did come he would never be able to come again.

Again on the Sunday preceding the murder, Irene said she was shown a candy box by Mrs. Glover. On the bottom of it Irene saw some writing. She said she asked Mrs. Glover what it said and that Mrs. Glover replied that she had written Glover a very uncomplimentary message, and that she didn't want any of his candy.

BALLINGER IS FLAYED

Editor Hapgood Has Poor Opinion of Secretary of the Interior

Boston, March 18.—"Secretary Ballinger has a long and devious record. He began his career with trickery and is what we term slippery in his dealings. He has little respect for the law or the ethics of his profession," declared Norman Hapgood, editor of Collier's, in discussing the Ballinger investigation now in progress at Washington, before the members of the Boston City club, last night.

Mr. Hapgood lauded former Secretary of the Interior Garfield, and stated that ex-President Roosevelt had asked only one favor of President Taft, which was to keep Garfield in his cabinet, which Taft agreed to do. About one month before Taft took the office, according to Hapgood, it was suggested to Garfield that it would be more profitable for him to resume his former practice.

JANNEY SAW OWN CHAMPAGNE COOLER

Started Row Which Ended In His Suicide at Dinner

Manila, March 18.—The military inquest into the death of Lieutenant Clarence M. Janney developed the fact that a silver champagne cooler was the cause of final and fatal quarrels which led the lieutenant to kill himself. The champagne cooler originally belonged to Janney and, according to the testimony, was given by Mrs. Janney to Lieutenant Colonel Ames.

When Janney and his wife dined at the home of Ames last Saturday night Janney saw and recognized the cooler, whereupon he upbraided his wife for having given it to Ames. In the verbal exchange that followed the lieutenant called Mrs. Janney a liar and insisted that she apologize to him. The wife apologized and the dinner was resumed, it being generally thought by the other guests that the incident was closed.

A little later, however, Janney left the house and returned with a revolver, with which he shot himself in the presence of those at the table.

In army circles it is believed that a court martial is contemplated.

A STATE-WIDE STRIKE

Plan to Put It Into Effect In Pennsylvania Next Week

Philadelphia, March 18.—Nothing definite having been accomplished by the several conferences held by persons interested in trying to bring a settlement of the street car men's strike, the committee of ten announced last night that President Greenwalt of the State Federation of Labor would call the state-wide strike next Monday.

The labor leaders say they have already received assurances that men in Pittsburg, Erie, Scranton and Wilkesbarre and a number of other cities in the state will join in the movement.

COMBINATION AFTER CANNON

Speaker on Verge of Defeat In Desperate House Battle

A NEW COMMITTEE ON RULES

Resolution Introduced by Nebraskan Aims to Curtail Uncle Joe's Power and Results In Hurried Call For Reinforcements—"Regulars" Beaten by Insurgents and Democrats—Situation Full of Political Danger

Washington, March 18.—Speaker Cannon's hope of retaining his autocracy of the house seems to depend upon the swiftness of a New York express train, which is rushing to his aid a half dozen loyal Republicans who have been summoned here to save the day against the clamoring insurgents.

Only reinforcements can save Uncle Joe. The insurgents caught the crafty speaker off his guard at last night's session, and when he was weakest sprung a resolution which, it carried, means the end of Cannonism.

Uncle Joe, swept off his feet, too late discovered that so many loyal Republicans were absent that he was helpless before the shouting Democrats and Republicans.

A new committee on rules with the speaker ineligible for membership in it—the issue was as real as that. The question for hours was a resolution by Representative Norris of Nebraska to that effect.

Over a matter comparatively trivial in itself the insurgents found their opportunity to test strength with the "organization."

It occurred over an attempt by Mr. Crumpacker (Ind.) to obtain consideration of a resolution amending the census act. Practically no member of the house opposed the resolution, but it was contended that the method used in bringing it up transcended the rules of the house. Speaker Cannon on Wednesday ruled against that view and was defeated.

The question came up again yesterday and the regulars believed they had mustered sufficient strength on the Democratic side to reverse Wednesday's action. The vote developed they had been mistaken or deceived, and the Cannon forces were again beaten.

Mr. Underwood (Ala.) who, with Champ Clark had been in charge of the fight conducted by the Democratic forces throughout the day, said at 10:30:

"It is apparent we can do nothing until the speaker rules on the point of order which is pending. The house cannot compel him to rule. We are keeping our members here, and the victory tonight would rest with the side best able to hold its men for a vote. But in any event it is evident that a majority of the house favors amending the rules, and we can bring it up again tomorrow or some other day."

Mr. Dwight, the Republican whip, at the same time announced that seventeen Republican absentees, who are unpaired with Democrats, were on the way to Washington.

On both the Republican and Democratic sides nearly every member was in his place, and all realized that at last the "insurgents" were locking horns with the regular Republicans in what might prove a final struggle. On both sides of the house the "whips," realizing the necessity of obtaining full voting strength, set in motion all their resources to summon absent members.

Late last night Mr. Tawney moved that the house take a recess until 11 a. m. today. This the house defeated by a vote of 142 to 147.

Mr. Roberts (Mass.) made the point of "no quorum," on which an aye and nay vote was demanded. The "whips" on both sides began rounding up their forces, and members poured back into the chamber to answer to their names. The "regulars" were again defeated, the vote being 108 ayes, 116 nays.

The Democrats began calling upon the speaker for a ruling, but Cannon yielded the chair to Mr. Olmstead (Pa.) and left the chamber.

The house leaders realize that the situation in the house is full of political danger. Each defeat of the speaker, however insignificant the question involved, weakens their position and strengthens the cause of the insurgents and Democrats. It was for this reason that the speaker dodged a ruling. In some quarters the speaker's decision is believed to have been a mistake.

The fight made Wednesday involved different elements from that of yesterday. Had the speaker overruled the point of order it is believed he would have been sustained. As matters stand now he lost the only chance he had for vindication.

AT THE BOSTON THEATRES

COLONIAL THEATRE.

Direct from a long, successful run at the Garrick theatre, New York, "The Harvest Moon," the latest production from the pen of Augustus Thomas will be presented for a limited engagement at the Colonial theatre, Monday, March 21, by Charles Frohman. Playgoers who have found delight in Mr. Thomas' previous great successes "Arizona," "In Mizzoura and "The Witching Hour" do not need to be reminded that a genuine treat awaits them. "The Harvest Moon" teaches a great lesson, the power for good or evil of mental suggestion. Into this play Mr. Thomas has most cleverly wrought, together with a love story of absorbing interest, the elements of the modern principles of psychology, and with such vividness and strength that no listener can mistake the many arguments of right and wrong thinking and their effect. The story deals with the unfortunate condition of a young girl, of brilliant promise and of pure heart, who since early childhood has been handicapped by the constant suggestion that she was of base origin and incapable of high achievements. At the very turning point of her life M. Vavin, a Frenchman, a writer and a man of keen and brilliant mental attainments, turns the wonderful power of suggestion to the girls good, instead of to her harm, clears her name of infamy and brings to a happy climax a beautiful romance.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

An amusing farce is to be given at the Castle Square next week "The Marriage of Kitty," which Mr. Craig has selected for one of his earliest spring offerings, has in both its original French and in English version, caused endless laughter. It is an adaptation cleverly made by the English dramatist, Cosmo Gordon-Lennox, and it has been starred both in England, and in America by the famous comedienne, Marie Tempest. It is filled with clean and humorous situations ,the chief character being Katherine Silverton, a sprightly young woman who, after the death of her spendthrift father, goes to London to earn her living, and succeeds in doing so in a most unusual fashion. The scene of the first act is laid in a lawyer's office in London ,then the characters go for the second act to a villa in Switzerland, an dthe climax comes with a disentanglement of all complications, and a general jollification. The play is intensely amusing from beginning to end ,and it is filled with bright lines and hilariously comic situations. What actress could be better suited to the lively character of Kitty than Mary Young she will give the role of every advantage of a humorous manner that is infectious of a personal charm that everybody who goes to the Castle Square well knows. Surely "The Marriage of Kitty" should be a great success at the Castle Square, but it will be all the greater success because Miss Young is acting the heroine.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Mrs. Ega Fay's predictions at Keith's this week have startled all Boston. She has been deluged with questions about political business and personal matters, and the answers she has given to some of them have been of the most startling character. The interest in the Russell and Glover will cases is shown by the large number of questions on these matters sent to Mrs. Fay. Of course it would be impossible for her to answer them without coming in contempt of court, and she has already made announcements to this effect. On all other subjects, however, she is willing to answer all questions from those who attend her performances. The bill for the week will have a number of new features, one of which will be Simon and Shields' big musical comedy entitled High Life in Jail." This is a most picturesque affair, showing the interior of a prison, the inmates being bankers, brokers and professional men who enjoy life in jail much the same as they would outside. Mr. and Mrs. Mark Murphy and company will also appear in a new sketch called "Clancy's Ghost," and others will be Stanley and Morris in a singing and dancing act, and Hearn and Butler in a new novelty.

SHUBERTS THEATRE.

The public continues to demonstrate a tremendous interest in Lew Fields' mammoth musical comedy production, "The Midnight Sons," which starts on its 7th week at the Shubert Theatre next Monday, March 21. In a few more performances this remarkable musical play will have completed one solid year of continuous performances, with no interruptions except Sunday, and these performances have all been in New York and Boston. It is doubtful if any attraction, musical or otherwise, has made such a wonderful record of popularity and unvarying enormous box receipts. The echos of laughter over the work of George Monroe, Harry Fisher, Marcia Harris and Denman Maley in the screamingly funny shoe store scene may be heard out on Tremont street. The great feature that everyone is talking enthusiasticly about, however, is that which represents a theatre with its orchestra, two balconies and two tiers of boxes filled with people on the stage. Apparently a performance is being given in another theatre for that audience but the Shubert audience not only enjoys that performance too but has all unique fun of seeing the stage audience enjoy it. The run must terminate very soon now, but the seats are on sale two weeks in advance and there is at least that much time for theatre-goers from all parts of New England to make their plans to see this great musical play before it leaves Boston. It will positively not be seen elsewhere in New England. At the Wednesday matinees popular prices prevail.

AMERICAN MUSIC HALL.

It may be said absolutely without fear of contradiction that the bill which has been arranged for the American Music hall the coming week will be the most remarkable vaudeville show that Boston has seen in many years. Every act is a headliner and every act has at one time or another been the reigning sensation in New York city. Perhaps the biggest feature will be a foreign novelty A Princess of Isreal" a dance pantomine of which Adeline Boyer is the star. Miss Boyer is a Hebrew beauty who left her home in California to learn of the dances in Jerusalem in the days of King Solomon. This act has attracted the attention of Mayor Gaynor in New York and Anthony Comstock, they both claiming that Miss Boyer wears far too little clothes and dances with a suggestiveness that is to say the least, demoralizing. In defence Miss Boyer maintains that her dances are true representations of terpsichorean art as practiced in the days of King Solomon and are only offensive to those who wish to make them so. Another big offering which ran for twenty-six weeks in New York city is the "Star Bout" presented by Taylor Granville and a company of fifty people.

BIGAMY CHARGE AGAINST WARREN

His Children Restored to Their Mother In Providence

Providence, March 18.—After pleading not guilty to a charge of being a fugitive from justice, Franklin H. Warren of Boston was held in $4000 bonds by Judge Gorham. Warren was arrested in Providence following his indictment by the Suffolk (Boston) grand jury on a charge of bigamy.

It is alleged that Warren, against whom his wife has instituted divorce proceedings, abducted his two children from the home of Mrs. Warren's mother in Boston last week. It is understood that he will resist extradition.

The two children, Phyllis and Adrienne, were restored to the mother under mysterious circumstances in this city last night. The woman holding them in charge gave them up of her own volition, fearing that she herself might be arrested. The matter of restoring them did not come under the scope of the authorities here at all.

FAMOUS $10.000 BEAUTY

Mrs. Montague, Who Won Prize Offered by Forepaugh, Is Dead

New York, March 18.—Mrs. Louise Montague, famous a quarter of a century ago for her beauty, died at her home in this city after a protracted illness. Her death was due to anaemia. She was in her 51st year.

Born and educated in New York, she first came into public notice in 1878, when she won a beauty competition for a prize of $10,000 offered by Adam Forepaugh, the circus man.

After following the fortunes of the circus for several years she went to Europe to study for the stage. Upon her return to the United States she displayed her versatility as an actress.

Gray Hair Restored

My hair was getting quite gray and falling out rapidly and I was troubled with a terrible itching of the scalp. My head was full of dandruff, which fell upon my clothes and kept me continually brushing it off. While on a visit to Rochester I heard of your Sage and Sulphur for the hair. I got a bottle and used it. A few applications relieved the itching, my hair stopped falling out and gradually came back to its natural color. It is now a nice dark brown color, soft, glossy and pliable. Several of my friends want to use it, and I want to know what you will charge me for six bottles of it.

Grew Hair on a Bald Head

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is fairly covered and keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

ROOSEVELT LEAVES KHARTOUM FRIENDS

Finds Plenty to Keep Him Busy Before His Departure

Khartoum, March 18.—After two days of sight-seeing in the company of Mrs. Roosevelt, Kermit and Miss Ethel, Colonel Roosevelt turned resolutely to the work that has been piling up before him, and gave over the whole forenoon to writing.

In the afternoon Roosevelt again joined his friends. At 1:30 o'clock he had the other members of the expedition with him at luncheon in the sirdar's palace. At 3 o'clock he attended a garden party at the Grand Hotel. On this occasion the band of the Thirteenth Soudanese regiment furnished music and a party of natives danced. Later in the afternoon Roosevelt visited the Egyptian Officers' club.

An interesting event was the placing in position by Roosevelt of the keystone of the arch for the new cathedral. The affair was conducted with considerable ceremony. The former president also received a deputation of Syrians at the palace.

The Roosevelts left here on a special train last night.

Salem, Mass., March 18.—Accusing Edward B. Trumbull and Morgan J. McSweeney, two of the three license commissioners, of failure to perform their duties, Mayor Howard last night dismissed them from office.

This step was taken after the mayor, personally and through agents, had made thorough inspection of conditions in several sections of the city. The ousted commissioners propose to bring court proceedings.

LECTURE TOUR IS CUT SHORT

Peary Not Received With Open Arms In the South

New York, March 18.—Robert E. Peary has cut short his lecture tour in the south. The refusal of Governor Brown of Georgia to introduce him to an Atlanta audience, his reference to the commander in an interview as a "fakir" and the small crowd that attended the lecture, brought forth an announcement by the Civic Forum in New York, under whose auspices Peary is lecturing, that his plans have been changed.

THIRTY-INCH MAIL TUBES

Postmaster General Wants to Give Them a Trial In Cincinnati

Washington, March 18.—Postmaster General Hitchcock has given his approval to the proposition of the Universal Vacuum company that bids be requested for a thirty-inch trial tube system at Cincinnati, and requested of the senate committee on postoffices and post roads authority to provide for the installation of a line less than a mile in length, on which the government shall pay rental at the rate of $17,000 a mile. This is the rate paid for the eight-inch tube service now controlled by the American Pneumatic Service company of Boston.

It is the contention of this company that larger tubes could not be installed and operated for this rate, hence the decision of the postmaster general is not conclusive that the new system will be adopted by the government. The purpose of the government is to give the new system a trial on the basis of what the service is costing now.

GIRL SHOT DURING QUARREL

Won't Stay In Hospital, Though Bullet Is In Her Head

Boston, March 18.—Miss Gertrude Shields of 3 Taber street was last night shot by a man she claimed to be Bernard Silva. While being attended at the city hospital, where she was removed by the police, she refused to remain and left the institution in spite of the protesting doctors and nurses, with the bullet still lodged in her head.

According to her own story Miss Shields returned from work last night and Silva was waiting in the kitchen for her. As soon as she entered he began to quarrel with her and the shooting followed.

Shortly before midnight, Silva walked into Station 3, Cambridge, and said that he was wanted by the Boston police for shooting a woman. The Boston police were notified and two officers were sent after him and locked him up in this city. He refused to make any statement in regard to the row.

Diamond Dealer Fails

Boston, March 18.—A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed by Allan W. Pollard, doing business as A. W. Pollard & Co., diamond merchants. His liabilities amount to $26,252.82. He had assets of $3313.96, consisting mainly of debts due on account.

—Mayor Gaynor of New York, who told of seeing young men sitting in street cars while women stood, says that in his opinion this sort of thing shows that the boys were badly trained early in life. He thinks the teaching of politeness ought to be generally taught in schools. It certainly might be more useful than some other things taught now, and it would be vastly useful in everyday life if the lessons sunk in deep and were acted upon by the pupils both in their school days and afterward.—Brockton Enterprise.

BRIEFS

A detailed report of the great town meeting at Wollaston will appear in the Saturday Ledger. It is reported by shorthand.

James Sutherland of Chicago, formerly of Quincy and Brockton, returned home today after a pleasant visit with relatives and friends in this city.

A Boston paper reports Thomas Downes of 120 Quincy avenue, Quincy, to have dislocated his hip in that city on Thursday. He is at the City Hospital.

Rev. E. A. Chase announces an illustrated talk on "Africa" on Sunday evening at the Wollaston Congregational church. Seventy finely colored views will be shown.

A candy sale is to be held in the assembly hall at the Coddington school after the Easter vacation, as not quite enough money was made by the operetta to buy the reflectorscope which Mr. Bentley wishes to get for the school.

At the annual meeting o fthe state society of the Daughters of the Revolution in Boston Thursday it was reported several valuable gifts had been reserved during the year among them a letter written by John Quincy Adams to a southern correspondent.

At the annual convention of the Massachusetts Society, Daughters of the Revolution, on Thursday, Mrs. E. Granville Pratt of this city was elected one of the delegates to the National convention at Atlantic City.

Judge Avery spent the greater part of Thursday afternoon listening to the testimony in the case of Nathan Bluestein against the Probation Officer. Judge Pratt, Court Officer Marden and two members of the bar who were summoned were not allowed to testify by the court. After hearing the evidence Judge Avery took the matter under advisement.

The Prosit Pleasure club gave their regular monthly social and ladies' night on March 17th. It being the double event of Mr. Arthur Little's birthday he was presented with a handsome pair of gold cuff links from club members. Owing to increasing membership the club is obliged to look for larger quarters and hope to entertain their friends for a big house warming very soon. Among those present were Miss Etty Warmsley, Miss Deane, Miss Louise Moyle, Miss Margaret Little and many others.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Winthrop Pratt and family desire to express their heartfelt thanks for the many acts of kindness of neighbors and friends without number, during the last illness and death of their daughter, Miss Bessie P. Pratt; also for the many beautiful flowers sent on the day of the funeral services. Loving acts of kindness and sympathy like these will ever be remembered by,

Mr. and Hrs. J. Winthrop Pratt, and family.

CHURCH AND LABOR.

Secretary James Duncan is to address the Brotherhood of the First Presbyterian church on Monday evening at 7.30. Topic "The church and labor," This is one of the most important topics of the day, and will be ably presented by an expert. Ladies as well as gentlemen are invited. An invitation is also extended to the public.

A musical program has been prepared. Members are anticipating a pleasant and profitable evening.

COMEDY PRESENTED.

Division 4, A. O. H., of West Quincy celebrated St. Patrick's day on Thursday evening by a large gathering of members and friends at St. Mary's hall. The evening's program included the presentation of a laughable comedy entitled "Casey's Flat" also specialty numbers by well known West Quincy citizens.

In Perfect Accord.

Some years ago there came to an American city a delightful German, Herr von Blitz, who intended to support himself by giving lessons in his native tongue. When he had been here several months and had secured a moderate number of pupils he went one day to the mother of one of them and to her great surprise asked for her daughter's hand in marriage.

"But, my dear sir," said she, "my daughter has no fortune."

The suitor smiled upon her in an expansive generosity.

"Me, too," said he reassuringly.

"And, although we are not rich, we have thus far been able to give her every comfort. She is indeed used to luxury."

"Me, too," was the smiling rejoinder.

"But, Herr von Blitz, she will never be able to manage affairs."

"Me, too," rejoiced the lover.

"And I feel obliged to tell you that my daughter has a very high temper."

"Me too—me too."

That was enough. The mother retired from the contest, and the professor won his suit.

Quick Justice at Ascot.

Not only the horses, but the powers of the law, says the London Chronicle, are swift at Ascot, for the course has a special tribunal for the punishment of evildoers. No sooner is the pickpocket, welsher or ticket snatcher arrested than he is standing in a little room in the royal stand, where the evidence is heard and the verdict and sentence pronounced before the offender fully realizes that he is caught. Nowhere else does punishment so swiftly follow crime as at this court, which is decreed by clause 31 of the indictable offenses act of 1848. This race course tribunal arose curiously in the eighteenth century from an assault upon a royal personage. In his indignation at the impossibility of instant punishment of the assailant he ordered that in future a magistrate should always attend the royal race meeting. This has ever since been done, and by the above mentioned act the chief magistrate of Bow street was constituted ex officio a justice of the peace of the county of Berks in order to enable him to hold this court at Ascot.

Natural Age of Man.

The question as to what is the natural age of man is by no means settled, of course, but many are of the opinion that the Frenchman Flourens was not far out of the way in his estimate of the time a man should live. Taking his observations from the group mammalia, of the class vertebrata, as having the closest resemblance to man and such species as are permitted to live the full term of their natural life under circumstances not admitting of error or doubt, Flourens found that their natural life extended to about five times the period of their lives from birth up to maturity. Applying the rule thus obtained to human life and taking the age at which the body is fully matured to be twenty years, he concluded the natural duration of the life of man to be 100 years.—New York American.

The French Horn.

The French horn, or cor de chasse, is regarded by some musicians as the sweetest and mellowest of all the wind instruments. In Beethoven's time it was little else than the old hunting horn, which for the convenience of the mounted hunter was arranged in spiral convolutions to be slipped over the head and carried resting on one shoulder and under the opposite arm. The Germans still call it the waldhorn—that is, "forest horn."

No Occasion For Alarm.

Said a nervous lady to another lady, at whose house she was making a call. "Are you not afraid that some of your children will fall into that cistern in your yard?"

"Oh, no," was the complacent reply. "Anyhow, that's not the cistern we get our drinking water from."

He Didn't.

"Do you believe in signs?"

"No. A dentist's sign reading 'Teeth Extracted Without Pain' fell the other day just as I went under it and knocked out two teeth of mine."

The auction o fthe old High school building takes place tomorrow at 3 P. M.

—The Putnam Nail Company plant at Neponset, assessed for $161,900 was sold at auction on Thursday for $87,500. It includes 615,206 square feet of land.

FUNERAL OF MISS PRATT.

The funeral of Miss Bessie P., twin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Winthrop Pratt, of Independence avenue, who died at Cambridge on Tuesday, of pluro-pneumonia, was held Thursday afternoon from her home 74 Independence avenue. The services were largely attended, many of the young girl's school friends being present. The death of Miss Pratt was a particularly sad one. Taken ill at the home of a relative, it was necessary to keep the seriousness of her illness from her mother, who was herself seriously ill, making it particularly sad for the husband and father and members of the family. When death came, and it became necessary to inform the mother, the task was a sad one indeed.

The services Thursday were conducted by Rev. Dr. Edwin N. Hardy, of the Bethany church, who spoke feelingly of the illness and death of the young lady, and consolingly to the bereaved family.

During the services, Mrs. Edith Carey Page sang two beautiful selections, favorites of the deceased, "Beautiful Isle of somewhere" and "When the mists have rolled away." The burial was in the family lot at Mt. Wollaston cemetery. There was a profusion of beautiful flowers, loving tributes of warm friends and former school mates which almost hid the casket from view.

RUBE'S SPORTING CHAT

The good old National game of baseball is certainly getting a hold on the Quincy fans and not since the days of the old St. Johns has there been such interest shown in the game in this city. The old St. Johns were managed by the Rev. Father Roche and were in a league with Braintree, Neponset, Rangers of East Weymouth, Tildens of Weymouth, and the Samosets of South Abington (now Whitman). This league was known as the Old Colony league, too and was undoubtedly as fast as today. If you doubt this just get into conversation on this matter with an old timer.

* * *

All of the teams and representatives in all branches of sports should consider what they can do to make "Merchants Week," which comes sometime in June, a live affair. The merchants themselves will be extremely busy with decorations for the city Illuminations for the evenings, music possibly and countless other small matters, and the managers and captains of baseball teams will do well to keep this in mind. When a team starts a subscription for suits or an outfit they always call on the local merchants to donate and the local merchants generally do. Now the teams are giving an opportunity to return the favors and I sincerely hope they remember the "Golden Rule."

The Old Colony Baseball league is slowly awakening from its long winter's slumber and gradually getting into line for a successful season. Sunday the clubs will meet and consider the various schedules the committee will present and adopt one which satisfies all clubs.

The clubs have all sent in their reserve lists to Secretary Alger and many veterans will be seen during the coming season. Quincy has reserved nearly all the men who made good last season, and also added Jimmy Michael the popular southpaw of the Makarias.

A glance at the Randolph reserve list reveals last but not least, Bjorkland. The fact that Randolphs have reserved him may cause the Quincy management to alter their plans considerably for if Manager Hoye of Randolph, so decides, he may make Bjorkland play with his team this year. Greg Hoye was always sweet on Bjorkland's ability to hit the ball and may have planned to keep him in the outfield. It will be interesting to note the result of this, and I sincerely hope we do not have to change our plans and begin anew for it may prove a drawback we will be unable to recover from during the entire season.

The following players have been reserved by the various teams:

Deweys—Giroux, Snell, Thompson, Dobbins, Butman, Nash, O'Doyd, Orcutt, Rudderham, Conley, Loud, Kane and Lynch.

Quincy—Murray, Patterson, Cameron, Briggs, Lonergan, Strobel, Nichols, Burke, Duggan, Fallon, Michaels, Amstrong, George Fallon and Conley.

Stoughton—Dunbar, Raymond, Norris, Fitzgerald, Graham, Ingalls, Grieve, Ordway, Coffey, Matthews, McInerney, Reynolds, Murphy and Loughlin.

Taunton—Monahan, Larkin, O'Brien, Ryan, Bignell, Wiggin, O'Donnell, Duggan, Hafford, Donovan, Dacey, Sullivan, Bosi and McCusker.

Randolph—Payne, Duggan, Dam, Staff, Shaw, Albin, Maley, Brennan, White, Murphy, Reagan, Stewart, Butler and Bjorkland.

Rockland—Smith, Martin, Delback, Hamilton, Wilder, Kiley, Thornhill, Raftery, Hart, Mansfield, Mahar, Ewing and Parle.

SPORTING NOTES.

Charlie Ganzel will again coach Makaria this year. This will be his third season. He has been very successful. He has good material for a championship team this year.

The Coddington base ball team held a successful practise Wednesday afternoon back of Adams Academy. The most promising battery was McDonnell, Connors for pitcher and Monahan for catcher.

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. basket ball team went to Boston Thursday night and met Boston Y. M. C. A. The home team won 39 to 15.

Second Thought.

"Dear Mr. Hicks," she wrote, "I am very sorry that what you ask I cannot grant. I cannot become your wife. Yours sincerely, Ethel Barrows." Then she added: "P. S.—On second thoughts, dear George, I think I will marry you. Do come up tonight and see your own true Ethel."

BASEBALL AT BIG COLLEGES.

University Diamond Warriors Preparing For Coming Season.

PRINCETON'S BRIGHT OUTLOOK

Tiger Men Expect to Be Represented by Strong Team—Lots of Good Material at Yale and Harvard—Season to Start Soon.

With the knowledge that only a few weeks remain before the first scheduled games, the baseball squads and coaches at the colleges will be very busy from now on. Harvard, Yale and Princeton have already been hard at work for two weeks preparing for the coming season. Billy Lush, who has coached the Eli nine for five years, is again in full charge. The team leaves on its regular southern trip on March 24.

The first call of the baseball squad at Princeton brought out about half a hundred eager and enthusiastic Tigers. Several other good men have joined the ranks since then. Princeton is going into all branches of the sport game this year with more than usual spirit and determination, and this feeling that better things are in store for old Nassau in athletics is nowhere more in evidence than in baseball. With six regulars left from the 1909 nine and a good lot of new material to pick from, the Jerseymen feel that the prospects for a winning season on the diamond are very bright. The veterans are Captain Dawson, catcher; White and Cunningham, pitchers; Warwick, first base; Reed, shortstop, and Ballin, left field.

Sides' place at third now seems to lie between S. B. White and Cooney of last spring's freshman nine. Warwick is again expected to hold down first base. There is a long list of good men out for the outfield positions, including Ballin, L. Cunningham, Bard, Conner, Bowman, Parker and Grainger. With Cunningham and White as a nucleus it looks as if the pitching staff should be able to keep up its end in good style.

The Tiger baseball men will be given a good course of sprouts during the coming four weeks both in indoor and outdoor work, the idea being to get the players hardened up and in proper shape for the real work later on by sending them on long daily tramps and cross country runs. Coach Clarke of the Albany team of the New York State league has taken the men in charge, and no time will be lost in getting the Tiger ball tossers in condition to win games right from the start of the southern trip, which begins on March 23, one day before the Elis leave for the sunny south.

Harvard got an earlier start than either Yale or Princeton in practice work, and the big squad of candidates at Cambridge is now well along in its preliminary indoor work. Coach Pieper had sole charge of the men at the start, but with the arrival at the university of Kittredge, the former big league catcher, the latter has taken over the work of drilling the battery men. With Hicks and McKay, Harvard's star twiriers, the Crimson certainly has every reason to expect to finish close to the front of the intercollegiate procession.

At Yale there is any amount of good baseball material. Ted Coy has been showing his team mates a spitball to be proud of.

Fordham, whose nine has held a position close to the front rank in baseball for the last two seasons, has made a radical change in its baseball plans for this spring in that the team will take no southern trip. Instead the New York collegians will start the season with a game in New York April 1 with the College of the City of New York.

BASEBALL POINTERS

Walter Johnson, the Washington pitcher, recently struck out fourteen batsmen in a game at Santa Ana, Cal.

'Tis said that the only reason Manager Jennings of Detroit released Catcher Archer, now with the Cubs, was because he was led to believe that Archer was threatened with blindness.

The Boston Americans will have extra men for every position on the field. President John I. Taylor has ordered Patsy Donovan to thoroughly look over everything on the roster and not to cut down to the minimum limit until necessary.

Paddy's Cat.

An Irishman fresh from the "ould sod" secured a job with a lumbering crew in the Minnesota woods. While sound asleep in his bunk one night a lynx slipped in at the open window, espied Paddy's bridle whiskers and promptly pounced on its supposed enemy. A terrific contest ensued, during which Paddy's clothing was reduced to ribbons, but ending happily when the brawny son of Erin secured a half nelson on the beast and heaved it bodily through the window.

He was instantly surrounded by a score of excited and admiring woodsmen. After examining himself critically Paddy straightened up slowly and remarked with distinct emphasis: "Bedad, if I knew th' dom mon thot owned thot cat I'd be afther rammin me fisht down th' throat av 'im—I wud thot!"—Judge's Library.

He Saw More Lights.

In one of the hotels recently some new electric lights were put in use in a decorative way. A young man who lives on the hill happened in during the evening and noticed the lights.

"They're very nice," he said to the head waiter, "but why didn't you put up more?"

The head waiter, knowing the young man's fondness for articles enumerated on the wine list, replied, "I think you'll see more of them before you leave, Mr. So-and-so."

The young man remained in the cafe a couple of hours and imbibed rather freely of liquid refreshments. When he got ready to leave he sought the head waiter.

"Much obliged to you," he said. "Did you put the extra ones in for me?"

"Certainly," replied the head waiter, bowing.

The young man left the hotel feeling greatly honored.—Denver Post.

Acute Heart Trouble.

"Yes, I remember him," said Alkali Ike. "He died very sudden."

"Heart disease?" asked the eastern tourist.

"Waal, now, I don't know as you kin say it was the heart any more'n the club, spade or diamond. Anyway, he dealt hisself four aces."—Philadelphia Press.

GOOD BYE TO OLD HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING

Tender Memories for Forty-Two Years Associated With Building of Grecian Style.

Fifty Pupils Admitted on the Opening Date in 1852.

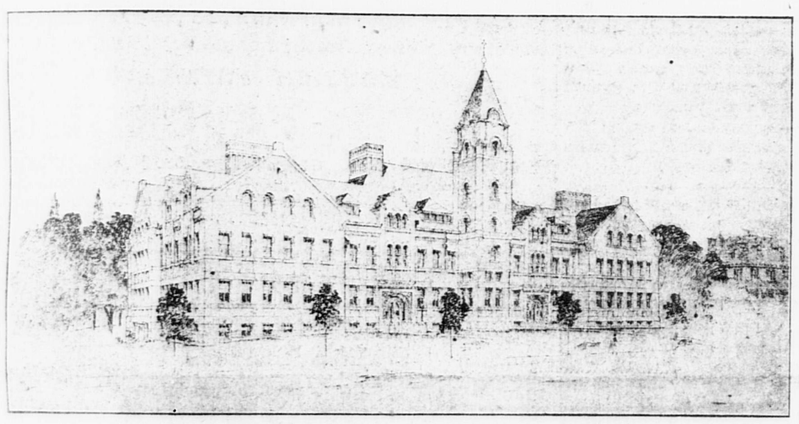
It was not until 1852, sixty years after the town of Quincy was incorporated, that a High school house was erected and a High school was established. Today, however, the mother town of Braintree incorporated in 1640, has no High school building, but it has a High school which is located in one of the Grammar school buildings.

Today Quincy's first High school building will be sold at auction, and will be razed and removed within thirty days. Thus another old landmark will disappear, but the graduates of the school for many years will retain a picture of it on their diplomas, to recall the good old days when they were pupils.

Pattee's History of Quincy has this brief sketch of the establishment of our High school:

"At the annual meeting held in March, 1851, a committee of one was chosen from each school district to report at the adjourned meeting the expediency of erecting a High schoolhouse in compliance with the statute.

"At the adjourned meeting held May 26 the committee reported that they had selected a lot of land in the rear of Quincy avenue, belonging to the Apthorp estate, as the most convenient site for the High school-house, and also for two other school-rooms for the accommodation of the overcrowded primary schools of the South and Centre districts.



QUINCY HIGH SCHOOLHOUSE OF TODAY.

"The land was purchased for $1200. The building was to be 54 by 38 feet, and constructed in plain Grecian style, at an estimated expense of $4,775. Mr. William Parker received the contract for constructing the building at $4,952, and when completed, including the land cost $6,748.-68.

"The town appropriated $800 to establish this school. Owing to the time taken to arrange the preliminary steps, the school was not opened until the 12th of May, 1852. On the day of examination, seventy-three candidates presented themselves. A series of eighty questions was prepared, and sub-divided as follows, viz: —Twenty in arithmetic, twenty in geography, twenty in grammar and twenty in spelling. Fifty-one were admitted, having returned the utmost correct answers.

"Thus was the High School organized under the charge of Asa Wellington, Esq., who taught this school three years. Miss C. R. Burgess was the first female assistant, and was employed in the year 1854.

The building on Quincy avenue was occupied until 1894 as a High school, and again a few years ago while the present High school building was being enlarged.

The City Book of 1894 gave the following sketch of the Quincy High to that time; partly from old records:

"In the first organization of the High school, under one teacher who will have the duty of establishing the system, it is not deemed advisable that the number of children admitted shall exceed 50 males and females.

"Candidates for admission shall produce from the masters of the schools they last attended a certificate of good moral character. It shall be the duty of the School Committee (until otherwise ordered) to examine the candidates in spelling, history, English grammar, modern geography and arithmetic, such arithmetic to be made by written questions, and those only shall be admitted who by their answers shall have shown themselves competent to pass at once into classes in the High school studies.

"The course of study shall be:

1—Review of preparatory studies in the text books authorized to be used in the grammar schools.
2—Algebra.
3—History of the United States and general history.
4—Geometry.
5—Surveying.
6—Constitution of the United States and of Massachusetts.
7—Bookkeeping.
8—Physiology.
9—Latin and Greek, elective, when parents request it in writing.

"The several divisions shall receive instruction in spelling, reading, writinf, declamation and composition.

"At a meeting held April, 1852, Asa

FIRE IN NEW HOUSE

Discovered by Neighbors About 4 This Morning

What had every appearance of being an incendiary fire was discovered in a new house at the corner of Charles street and Faxon road, Atlantic, shortly after 4 o'clock this morning and was the cause of the alarm from Box 65 at 4.14. The house, which is owned by Morris Kilpatrick, is nearly completed and there was nothing about the building from which a fire could have started. The fire was discovered by Mrs. George Thompson who resides on Charles street. She was awakened by the reflection of the blaze in her sleeping room. She immediately arroused her husband, who notified the Atlantic fire station by telephone and then ran to the box and sounded the alarm.

The Atlantic combination made a quick run to the fire, and on its arrival found that the fire was located in the kitchen and that it had worked in behind the walls. A chemical line was ran into the house, but it was necessary to cut away some of the plastering in the kitchen to get at the fire.

This was quickly accomplished and the fire quickly extinguished. The fire did not get outside of the house, nor did it communicate to any other floor, the only damage to the upper part of the building being by smoke. Not a drop of water was used, so that the damage will not exceed $100. It was a good stop on the part of the Atlantic company.

BOYS PROTEST TO MAYOR

Want a Place Somewhere That They May Play Ball

A crowd of indignant young boys filed into the Mayor's office at City Hall this morning, to register a vigorous kick because they were not allowed to play ball any more on the Adams Academy grounds. It seems that the boys have been in the habit of playing ball on the grounds every day, but this morning when they appeared on the field they were confronted by a sign forbidding them to play the national game. They immediately marched in a body to the Mayor's office.

The sign bore the signature of H. T. Whitman, as agent, and the Mayor got into communication with him. It was learned that the trouble arose over a complaint of some of the neighbors that the boys threw stones onto their property and used bad language. It is probable that the thing will be fixed up before the day is out so that the boys can again enjoy their game. But it is evident that Ward One is in need of a large playground.

NINE CHILDREN LIVING.

Lemuel Phillips, one of Quincy's long residents, passed away Friday at his home 734 Washington street in his 92d year. Mr. Phillips was a stone mason by occupation, but has been in poor health for some time, his ailment being largely due to old age. He is survived by a widow and nine children the youngest of whom is upwards of fifty years of age.

Mr. Phillips comes from a long lived family and he has two sisters over 90 years of age. He married three times, his first wife passing away in the early sixties, and his second some years ago. He has been blessed with eleven children, and all are now living but two daughters. Two of his sons are Hiram W. Phillips ,the ex-Councilman and well known sub-marine diver, and George L. Phillips, the present Commander of Paul Revere post 88, G. A. R.

Of all days in the year Easter Sunday is the day when you should have on a nice pair of boots, such as the Granite Shoe Store is making a specialty of. Keep your eye on their ads. for correct footwear.

HOUGHS NECK SCHOOL.

It is probable that the plans for the new school building at Houghs Neck may be changed somewhat, so that the building can be built within the appropriation. The amount provided for furnishings was $2,000 and it is claimed that this is more than needed, and that $1,000 will be sufficient to furnish the building. If this sum is added to the $18,000 appropriated for the building, and some slight alterations made, it is believed that the work can be done within the appropriation. The architect stated to the Mayor this morning that some changes could be made that would not effect the building in any way, which would allow it to be built within $19,000.

Important Announcement

BY JOHNSON BROS.

Why and How We Shall Reduce Our Prices April 1st, 1910.

AFTER a careful study of the credit business for a number of years, and the same of the cash business for the past two years, we have decided that for the mutual benefit of the buyer and seller, beginning April 1, we shall turn our business into a strictly cash business. Our experience and close study of the wants of the people for the past thirty-five years has put us in a position to judge, and we have decided that low prices and high quality can be obtained in no other way than by a strictly cash proposition, as a credit store cannot possibly compete successfully with a store that is handled on a strictly cash basis, as there is a great expense attached to a credit business, which we wish to curtail, and our curtailing means much lower prices to the trade. Under the credit system there is always a proportion of bad bills which must be taken care of in our scale of prices. Under the credit system you are helping to pay the bills of those who do not pay themselves. The method of sending teams to take orders daily is very costly. We figure it costs us eight cents per call. If our clerks make from one hundred fifty to two hundred calls daily the expense of these calls must be added to the prices of the goods. The salaries of bookkeepers and other expenses of accounting and collections must also be taken care of. We propose to eliminate these items of expense, and correspondingly reduce the prices of our goods. We will deliver orders sent to us by mail, telephone or left at the store, and we intend to show the people of Quincy and surrounding towns what a really cash store can do for them. We intend to place on sale a certain day of each week some staple article from our stock at absolute cost, something different each time. Remember, one of the most important things in this change will be the keeping up of our quality for which we have so long been popular. We shall try to give even better quality if such a thing is possible, and we shall hammar the prices down hard—for cash.

We will pay cash for our goods, by so doing get all the cash discounts from the wholesale trade, and we intend that our trade shall benefit by it, and by owning our own plant it will not be possible for any concern in our line of business to undersell us, when you take into consideration our reputation for quality. We have one of the best equipped stores in our city, also the cooperation of experienced clerks which all go to make Johnson Bros. an ideal firm with which to trade. All orders will be delivered with care and promptness by our new Automobile system, which we will place at your service and which is being practised by nearly all the up to date concerns throughout the country. Customers not caring to pay cash every time they come, or send to the store can if they wish make a deposit with us, and when they have taken up all their deposit will be notified. At the prices we shall ask and the quality of our goods, we must insist on a tstrictly cash transaction, for at the present age of high prices a credit store can do nothing to lessen the expense of living for its customers, as the increasing expense of carrying on a credit business places low prices out of the question.

The credit dealer must realize a larger percent of profit than a cash dealer, as his expense account is more than double, so we decided that the only way we can help our customers and all careful buyers, is to establish a strictly up to date cash store, for there is no other way that we can afford to cut the prices for the mutual benefit of all. Hoping that this will meet with thoughtful and willing cooperation, we remain,

Respectfully,

JOHNSON BROS.' MARKET,
City Square

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The appeal of the small boys to the Mayor for a place to play reminds one of the Boston boys of 1776 who objected to their sliding and coasting places being destroyed by the British soldiers. The Quincy boys will probably receive a quick and courteous reply from Mayor Shea for the boys should certainly have a place to play.

Quincy has so many clubs and organizations that it might almost be called a city of clubs. If all these clubs could be federated and have meetings every few weeks of delegates from each, what a lot of good might be accomplished for the city as a whole. United action can accomplish much more than small bodies, no matter how efficient they may be.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The St Albans Messenger vigorously expresses the opinion that it does mighty little good to fine and imprison, in default of payment, some of the people in Vermont who at times drink altogether too much. It quotes instances in which the plan has worked to to little or no advantage. The same plan went on in this State for a vast number of years, and then people began to arouse themselves to the fact that there must be other and better methods of at least partially checking the drink evil's ravages, without keeping the drinker in prison most of the time, to the detriment of his own character and the suffering and poverty of the drinkers' innocent families. The probation system was the outgrowth of the belief that a new method was required, and despite some criticism which has been leveled against it, the probation plan, to the mind of anybody who has watched police and court proceedings, is a thousand miles ahead of the old iron-like fine, and jail in default of fine, scheme of the olden time. Probation saves some people, and helps families to get the benefit of the wage earner's money while he is merely on probation, and not serving time in jail—time that does him as a rule little good, and no good to the county or to the family. Of course probation does not propet·y extend to the drunks who add serious assaults to their funmaking, or the commission of other crimes that makes them at times dangerous to society at large. Those pople are not rightly in the probatton zone.—Brockton Enterprise.

COLLOQUY WITH ELKINS

Feature of Last Day's Long Talk of Cummins In the Senate

Washington, March 19.—After holding the floor for four days, Senator Cummins completed his speech in opposition to the administration railroad bill and the senate adjourned until Monday.

Mr. Cummins engaged in a colloquy with Senator Elkins, during which he declared: "I want to prevent competing lines from consolidating."

"That is what we all want," responded Elkins. "I am glad to see that the senator from Iowa is bringing himself into substantial accord with his committee."

"You mean that the committee is being driven gradually to accept my position," retorted Cummins.

THE SOUTH WANTS BABIES

New York to Ship Second Consignment of Parentless Little Ones

New York, March 19.—To satisfy an unusually active demand for babies, centering chiefly around New Orleans and southern Louisiana towns, the New York Foundling and Orphan asylum sent out a cargo of parentless babies in answer to letters from parents in comortable but childless homes.

Since then the quality of the home-brighteners sent out has proved of such a high order that the institution has been swamped with letters asking for babies, and is getting ready a second consignment.

STATE PRESIDENT

The Guest of the Girls' Friendly Society of Wollaston

St. Chrysostom's branch of the Girls Friendly society held their regular weekly meeting in the parish rooms Friday evening. Rev. Albert Edwin Clattenburg, chaplain of the society, opened the meeting with the usual G. F. S. devotional service, and after a few words regarding the ideal society he introduced Miss Whipple of Salem, president of the Massachusetts G. F. S.

Miss Whipple began her talk by speaking of Mr. Clattenburg's resignation, and she expressed the sentiment of all when she said: "It just just hurts to lose one's rector. I realized it fully when Bishop Brent went to the Philippines." She said in part: this is the largest organization for women and girls in the world. The germ of the whole movement was contained in an idea which flashed through the mind of Mrs. Townsend, the foundress of the society in England. Having obtained the sympathy of the Archbishop of Canterbury it was organized in 1875 and two years later, Miss Edson of Lowell, whose father was rector at St. Anne's, organized the first branch in America. She described the beautiful memorial that has just been placed in St. Anne's in loving appreciation of her work for the G. F. S.

Miss Whipple asked members always to wear their badge, their emblem of membership, and gave several illustrations why she was so anxious to have them do it. She spoke of the shape,—motto—cross engraved on it, and the high ideal of womanhood that it stood for. Miss Whipple spoke instructively of the objects of the society: to bind together for sympathy and prayer, mutual help, faithfulness, thrift, and emphasized particularly the purity of life, for one can never be sure where our influence ends.

Mrs. Howard D. Fowler, branch secretary, heartily thanked Miss Whipple for her interesting talk, after which refreshments were served under the direction of Miss Jean Gorham.

Appreciation was shown Miss Whipple in the cordial greeting given her during the social hour, for many of the members pleasantly remembered her kindness in coming to Wollaston at the invitation of Mr. Clattenburg in October, 1906, to help organize St. Chrysostom's branch. There were many mothers of the young ladies present as guests who enjoyed the evening's pleasure.

TO PREPARE CHEAP CUTS.

The increased cost of living has prompted the United States department to agriculture to instruct housekeepers of the country how to make the cheaper cuts of meat palatable and appetizing, and to this end a manual of economy in meat cooking has been prepared containing a variety of receipes and general information. "Economic Use of Meats in the Home" is the title of the manual, which may be procured by addressing a request to the secretary of agriculture, James Wilson.

ORCHARD DEVELOPMENT.

Attention is called to the advertisement of the New England Orchards Company, in another column of this paper, which is organized for the purpose of developing commercial orchards throughout New England on an extensive scale. The separate orchard properties will be offered to investors who may purchase a one-half acre interest or more on the easy payment plan. The advantages o fsuch a co-operative plan will be readily seen as the whole orchard property is managed as an entriety, the small holder receiving the same benefits in the way of machine spraying, packing, grading and marketing as the larger holder. To the salaried man or the capitalist such an investment should prove ideal, as the returns are constantly increasing, and an investment in orchard properties now will be bringing in dividends long after all the gold mines now in operation have become exhausted.

—Seventy-two persons appeared at the State House an Wednesday in opposition to the proposal to lease clam flats at the hearing by the fish and game committee, while the fish and game commission alone favored the measure.

TOWN MEETING AT WOLLASTON

All the Articles in Warrant Turned Down

The Men's club of the Wollaston Methodist church had a most interesting meeting Thursday evening.

George Taylor, the president called the meeting to order at 8 oclock. After disposing of the business, S. N. Belcher, the editor, read Wollaston Herald which was full of wit and personal hits on the members. The rest o fthe program took the form of an old-fashioned town meeting, which was entered upon in a lively spirit. The different articles of the warrant were taken up by the petitioners and ably defended.

Article 4 was first taken up. It was to appropriate a sufficient sum of money for the purchase of a five cent piece of ice weekly for the selectmen's office for the warm months of the year. J. A. Sedgwick ably set forth the reasons why the article should meet with the hearty approval of all. It met with much opposition and was finally lost.

The article calling for the appropriation of money for the instruction of music in the public school was next taken up ,and A. N. Murray, with his wit and good humor spoke in its favor. This was strongly opposed by Oscar Storer, one of the heavy taxpayers, who thought it a reckless and foolish waste of the town's money. Mr. Murray took exceptions and introduced some children to sing, that all might see for themselves what the public schools were doing along this line. The article did not pass.

Mr. Sanders spoke in favor of the next article, which was to see if the town would appropriate a sum of money for the cultivation of the town flats on Beale street. Mr. Sanders had a plan of the flats showing how this could be done, and how automobiles might be used to convey the clams to the homes at the small cost of 15 cents per peck. Simpson Kay also spoke in its favor. George Taylor strongly opposed such needless expenditure of money. Tha article did not pass.

A. B. Cassidy took up the next article to see if the town would extend the Sachem stream and dredge the same to a depth of 18 inches at low water, so that all kinds of fish might be raised and thereby help out the clam beds ,and provide also for some ice for summer use. This met with great opposition and was lost.

At this point the meeting adjourned. A. N. Murray acted as clerk and F. G. Bennett as moderator.

During the evening a company of ladies made their appearance to the surprise of the men. Nearly 50 men were present. Refreshments were served. During the evening the president introduced Dr. Pollock of Government who spoke briefly expressing his pleasure in being present.

BRIEFS

A subscription whist party will be given by Mrs. A. W. Russell and Mrs. H. F. McClean at the home of the former on next Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. E. Tyler Brigham will entertain the Unitarian Church Helpers at their meeting on Thursday afternoon at her home on Lincoln avenue.

The Park and Downs Congregational church will hold Lenten services on three evenings during the coming week.

The Navy orders of yesterday say the battleship North Dakota, now at the Fore River shipyard, will be placed in commission at Boston, Wednesday, April 6.

It was voted by the Ladies Aid Alliance of the Wollaston Unitarian church on Wednesday, that the annual meeting should be the first meeting in April instead of later in the season as in past years.

At the Sunday morning service of the First Universalist church Miss Edith Hyland will sing the Palms, and at the evening service of the Y. P. C. U., at 6 o'clock. Chester Brown will play a cornet solo, "The Palms." This is to be a union meeting of the Y. P. C. U. of the North Weymouth and Quincy churches.

The last Sociable of the season of the Wollaston Unitarian church will occur on Thursday evening. Mrs. John Norrie is in charge of the entertainment, which will consist of readings, and a song sheet with soloists and a chorus. Mrs. F. C. Merrill is the chairman of the supper committee.

MILTON

Milton Irish citizens and others as well, are very much wrought up because Master Varney of the High school sent some of his pupils home on Thursday because they displayed too much green ribbon. It appears that the day before the master called the pupils together and told them to omit green ties and ribbons on Thursday. Some of them, however, appeared bedecked with bright green ties and ribbons ,and they were promptly sent home. Their parents are very indignant and the matter will probably be brought to the attention of the School Committee.

The Thursday Evening club are arranging a pleasing program for the balance of the season. The spring program will commence immediately after Easter.

Special Lenten services are being held this week at the Mission of Our Saviour church.

It is more than probable that Chief Choate of the Fire department will have an automobile hurry-up chemical engine in commission before the summer is out.

Chief Pierce, of the police department, says that his department will not have a new automobile speed catcher this year, but that the department will continue to use the Stanley steamer of last year which was built expressly for him. This car is guaranteed to make 75 miles an hour.

East Milton people will do all in their power to help along the plan of the West Quincy Improvement association to have the street car tracks extended down Granite avenue to connect with the Boston L line at Pierces hill, Neponset.

Milton will use oil again this year to keep the dust down, instead of watering carts. This system was given a thorough trial last summer and proved a great success.

Most of Milton's police officers have become members of the Police Relief association of the state.

—Haverhill Board of Trade had bad luck Thursday fire destroying their building resulting in a loss of some $75,000.

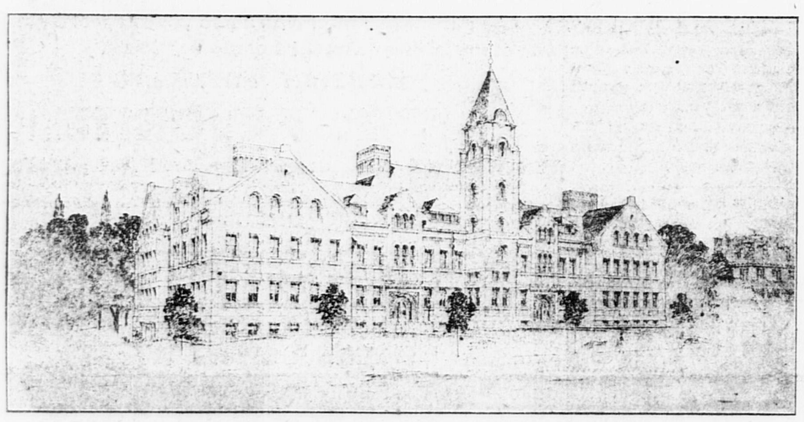
GOOD BYE TO OLD HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING

Tender Memories for Forty-Two Years Associated With Building of Grecian Style.

Fifty Pupils Admitted on the Opening Date in 1852.

It was not until 1852, sixty years after the town of Quincy was incorporated, that a High school house was erected and a High school was established. Today, however, the mother town of Braintree incorporated in 1640, has no High school building, but it has a High school which is located in one of the Grammar school buildings.



QUINCY HIGH SCHOOLHOUSE OF TODAY.

Today Quincy's first High school building will be sold at auction, and will be razed and removed within thirty days. Thus another old landmark will disappear, but the graduates of the school for many years will retain a picture of it on their diplomas, to recall the good old days when they were pupils.

Pattee's History of Quincy has this brief sketch of the establishment of our High school:

"At the annual meeting held in March, 1851, a committee of one was chosen from each school district to report at the adjourned meeting the expediency of erecting a High schoolhouse in compliance with the statute.

"At the adjourned meeting held May 2 the committee reported that they had selected a lot of land in the rear of Quincy avenue, belonging to the Apthorp estate, as the most convenient site for the High school-house, and also for two other school-rooms for the accommodation of the overcrowded primary schools of the South and Centre districts.

"The land was purchased for $1200. The building was to be 54 by 38 feet, and constructed in plain Grecian style, at an estimated expense of $4,775. Mr. William Parker received the contract for constructing the building at $4,952, and when completed, including the land cost $6,748.-68.

"The town appropriated $800 to establish this school. Owing to the time taken to arrange the preliminary steps, the school was not opened until the 12th of May, 1852. On the day of examination, seventy-three candidates presented themselves. A series of eighty questions was prepared, and sub-divided as follows, viz: —Twenty in arithmetic, twenty in geography, twenty in grammar and twenty in spelling. Fifty-one were admitted, having returned the utmost correct answers.

"Thus was the High School organized under the charge of Asa Wellington, Esq., who taught this school three years. Miss C. R. Burgess was the first female assistant, and was employed in the year 1854.

The building on Quincy avenue was occupied until 1894 as a High school, and again a few years ago while the present High school building was being enlarged.

The City Book of 1894 gave the following sketch of the Quincy High to that time; partly from old records:

"In the first organization of the High school, under one teacher who will have the duty of establishing the system, it is not deemed advisable that the number of children admitted shall exceed 50 males and females.

"Candidates for admission shall produce from the masters of the schools they last attended a certificate of good moral character. It shall be the duty of the School Committee (until otherwise ordered) to examine the candidates in spelling, history, English grammar, modern geography and arithmetic, such arithmetic to be made by written questions, and those only shall be admitted who by their answers shall have shown themselves competent to pass at once into classes in the High school studies.

"The course of study shall be:

1—Review of preparatory studies in the text books authorized to be used in the grammar schools.

2—Algebra.

3—History of the United States and general history.

4—Geometry.

5—Surveying.

6—Constitution of the United States and of Massachusetts.

7—Bookkeeping.

8—Physiology.

9—Latin and Greek, elective, when parents request it in writing.

"The several divisions shall receive instruction in spelling, reading, writinf, declamation and composition.

"At a meeting held April, 1852, Asa

FIRE IN NEW HOUSE

Discovered by Neighbors About 4 This Morning

What had every appearance of being an incendiary fire was discovered in a new house at the corner of Charles street and Faxon road, Atlantic, shortly after 4 o'clock this morning and was the cause of the alarm from Box 65 at 4.14. The house, which is owned by Morris Kilpatrick, is nearly completed and there was nothing about the building from which a fire could have started. The fire was discovered by Mrs. George Thompson who resides on Charles street. She was awakened by the reflection of the blaze in her sleeping room. She immediately arroused her husband, who notified the Atlantic fire station by telephone and then ran to the box and sounded the alarm.

The Atlantic combination made a quick run to the fire, and on its arrival found that the fire was located in the kitchen and that it had worked in behind the walls. A chemical line was run into the house, but it was necessary to cut away some of the plastering in the kitchen to get at the fire.

This was quickly accomplished and the fire quickly extinguished. The fire did not get outside of the house, nor did it communicate to any other floor, the only damage to the upper part of the building being by smoke. Not a drop of water was used, so that the damage will not exceed $100. It was a good stop on the part of the Atlantic company.

BOYS PROTEST TO MAYOR

Want a Place Somewhere That They May Play Ball

A crowd of indignant young boys filed into the Mayor's office at City Hall this morning, to register a vigorous kick because they were not allowed to play ball any more on the Adams Academy grounds. It seems that the boys have been in the habit of playing ball on the grounds every day, but this morning when they appeared on the field they were confronted by a sign forbidding them to play the national game. They immediately marched in a body to the Mayor's office.

The sign bore the signature of H. T. Whitman, as agent, and the Mayor got into communication with him. It was learned that the trouble arose over a complaint of some of the neighbors that the boys threw stones onto their property and used bad language. It is probable that the thing will be fixed up before the day is out so that the boys can again enjoy their game. But it is evident that Ward One is in need of a large playground.

NINE CHILDREN LIVING.

Lemuel Phillips, one of Quincy's long residents, passed away Friday at his home 734 Washington street in his 92d year. Mr. Phillips was a stone mason by occupation, but has been in poor health for some time, his ailment being largely due to old age. He is survived by a widow and nine children the youngest of whom is upwards of fifty years of age.

Mr. Phillips comes from a long lived family and he has two sisters over 90 years of age. He married three times, his first wife passing away in the early sixties, and his second some years ago. He has been blessed with eleven children, and all are now living but two daughters. Two of his sons are Hiram W. Phillips ,the ex-Councilman and well known sub-marine diver, and George L. Phillips, the present Commander of Paul Revere post 88, G. A. R.

Of all days in the year Easter Sunday is the day when you should have on a nice pair of boots, such as the Granite Shoe Store is making a specialty of. Keep your eye on their ads. for correct footwear.

HOUGHS NECK SCHOOL.

It is probable that the plans for the new school building at Houghs Neck may be changed somewhat, so that the building can be built within the appropriation. The amount provided for furnishings was $2,000 and it is claimed that this is more than needed, and that $1,000 will be sufficient to furnish the building. If this sum is added to the $18,000 appropriated for the building, and some slight alterations made, it is believed that the work can be done within the appropriation. The architect stated to the Mayor this morning that some changes could be made that would not effect the building in any way, which would allow it to be built within $19,000.

Important Announcement

BY JOHNSON BROS.

Why and How We Shall Reduce Our Prices April 1st, 1910.

AFTER a careful study of the credit business for a number of years, and the same of the cash business for the past two years, we have decided that for the mutual benefit of the buyer and seller, beginning April 1, we shall turn our business into a strictly cash business. Our experience and close study of the wants of the people for the past thirty-five years has put us in a position to judge, and we have decided that low prices and high quality can be obtained in no other way than by a strictly cash proposition, as a credit store cannot possibly compete successfully with a store that is handled on a strictly cash basis, as there is a great expense attached to a credit business, which we wish to curtail, and our curtailing means much lower prices to the trade. Under the credit system there is always a proportion of bad bills which must be taken care of in our scale of prices. Under the credit system you are helping to pay the bills of those who do not pay themselves. The method of sending teams to take orders daily is very costly. We figure it costs us eight cents per call. If our clerks make from one hundred fifty to two hundred calls daily the expense of these calls must be added to the prices of the goods. The salaries of bookkeepers and other expenses of accounting and collections must also be taken care of. We propose to eliminate these items of expense, and correspondingly reduce the prices of our goods. We will deliver orders sent to us by mail, telephone or left at the store, and we intend to show the people of Quincy and surrounding towns what a really cash store can do for them. We intend to place on sale a certain day of each week some staple article from our stock at absolute cost, something different each time. Remember, one of the most important things in this change will be the keeping up of our quality for which we have so long been popular. We shall try to give even better quality if such a thing is possible, and we shall hammer the prices down hard—for cash.

We will pay cash for our goods, by so doing get all the cash discounts from the wholesale trade, and we intend that our trade shall benefit by it, and by owning our own plant it will not be possible for any concern in our line of business to undersell us, when you take into consideration our reputation for quality. We have one of the best equipped stores in our city, also the cooperation of experienced clerks which all go to make Johnson Bros. an ideal firm with which to trade. All orders will be delivered with care and promptness by our new Automobile system, which we will place at your service and which is being practised by nearly all the up to date concerns throughout the country. Customers not caring to pay cash every time they come, or send to the store can if they wish make a deposit with us, and when they have taken up all their deposit will be notified. At the prices we shall ask and the quality of our goods, we must insist on a tstrictly cash transaction, for at the present age of high prices a credit store can do nothing to lessen the expense of living for its customers, as the increasing expense of carrying on a credit business places low prices out of the question.

The credit dealer must realize a larger percent of profit than a cash dealer, as his expense account is more than double, so we decided that the only way we can help our customers and all careful buyers, is to establish a strictly up to date cash store, for there is no other way that we can afford to cut the prices for the mutual benefit of all. Hoping that this will meet with thoughtful and willing cooperation, we remain,

Respectfully,

JOHNSON BROS.' MARKET,

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The appeal of the small boys to the Mayor for a place to play reminds one of the Boston boys of 1776 who objected to their sliding and coasting places being destroyed by the British soldiers. The Quincy boys will probably receive a quick and courteous reply from Mayor Shea for the boys should certainly have a place to play.

Quincy has so many clubs and organizations that it might almost be called a city of clubs. If all these clubs could be federated and have meetings every few weeks of delegates from each, what a lot of good might be accomplished for the city as a whole. United action can accomplish much more than small bodies, no matter how efficient they may be.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The St Albans Messenger vigorously expresses the opinion that it does mighty little good to fine and imprison, in default of payment, some of the people in Vermont who at times drink altogether too much. It quotes instances in which the plan has worked to to little or no advantage. The same plan went on in this State for a vast number of years, and then people began to arouse themselves to the fact that there must be other and better methods of at least partially checking the drink evil's ravages, without keeping the drinker in prison most of the time, to the detriment of his own character and the suffering and poverty of the drinkers' innocent families. The probation system was the outgrowth of the belief that a new method was required, and despite some criticism which has been leveled against it, the probation plan, to the mind of anybody who has watched police and court proceedings, is a thousand miles ahead of the old iron-like fine, and jail in default of fine, scheme of the olden time. Probation saves some people, and helps families to get the benefit of the wage earner's money while he is merely on probation, and not serving time in jail—time that does him as a rule little good, and no good to the county or to the family. Of course probation does not propet'y extend to the drunks who add serious assaults to their funmaking, or the commission of other crimes that makes them at times dangerous to society at large. Those pople are not rightly in the probation zone.—Brockton Enterprise.

COLLOQUY WITH ELKINS

Feature of Last Day's Long Talk of Cummins In the Senate

Washington, March 19.—After holding the floor for four days, Senator Cummins completed his speech in opposition to the administration railroad bill and the senate adjourned until Monday.

Mr. Cummins engaged in a colloquy with Senator Elkins, during which he declared: "i want to prevent competing lines from consolidating."

"That is what we all want," responded Elkins. "I am glad to see that the senator from Iowa is bringing himself into substantial accord with his committee."

"You mean that the committee is being driven gradually to accept my position," retorted Cummins.

THE SOUTH WANTS BABIES

New York to Ship Second Consignment of Parentless Little Ones

New York, March 19.—To satisfy an unusually active demand for babies, centering chiefly around New Orleans and southern Louisiana towns, the New York Foundling and Orphan asylum sent out a cargo of parentless babies in answer to letters from parents in comortable but childless homes.

Since then the quality of the home-brighteners sent out has proved of such a high order that the institution has been swamped with letters asking for babies, and is getting ready a second consignment.

STATE PRESIDENT

The Guest of the Girls' Friendly Society of Wollaston

St. Chrysostom's branch of the Girls Friendly society held their regular weekly meeting in the parish rooms Friday evening. Rev. Albert Edwin Clattenburg, chaplain of the society, opened the meeting with the usual G. F. S. devotional service, and after a few words regarding the ideal society he introduced Miss Whipple of Salem, president of the Massachusetts G. F. S.

Miss Whipple began her talk by speaking of Mr. Clattenburg's resignation, and she expressed the sentiment of all when she said: "It just just hurts to lose one's rector. I realized it fully when Bishop Brent went to the Philippines." She said in part: this is the largest organization for women and girls in the world. The germ of the whole movement was contained in an idea which flashed through the mind of Mrs. Townsend, the foundress of the society in England. Having obtained the sympathy of the Archbishop of Canterbury it was organized in 1875 and two years later, Miss Edson of Lowell, whose father was rector at St. Anne's, organized the first branch in America. She described the beautiful memorial that has just been placed in St. Anne's in loving appreciation of her work for the G. F. S.

Miss Whipple asked members always to wear their badge, their emblem of membership, and gave several illustrations why she was so anxious to have them do it. She spoke of the shape,—motto—cross engraved on it, and the high ideal of womanhood that it stood for. Miss Whipple spoke instructively of the objects of the society: to bind together for sympathy and prayer, mutual help, faithfulness, thrift, and emphasized particularly the purity of life, for one can never be sure where our influence ends.

Mrs. Howard D. Fowler, branch secretary, heartily thanked Miss Whipple for her interesting talk, after which refreshments were served under the direction of Miss Jean Gorham.

Appreciation was shown Miss Whipple in the cordial greeting given her during the social hour, for many of the members pleasantly remembered her kindness in coming to Wollaston at the invitation of Mr. Clattenburg in October, 1906, to help organize St. Chrysostom's branch. There were many mothers of the young ladies present as guests who enjoyed the evening's pleasure.

ORCHARD DEVELOPMENT.

Attention is called to the advertisement of the New England Orchards Company, in another column of this paper, which is organized for the purpose of developing commercial orchards throughout New England on an extensive scale. The separate orchard properties will be offered to investors who may purchase a one-half acre interest or more on the easy payment plan. The advantages o fsuch a co-operative plan will be readily seen as the whole orchard property is managed as an entriety, the small holder receiving the same benefits in the way of machine spraying, packing, grading and marketing as the larger holder. To the salaried man or the capitalist such an investment should prove ideal, as the returns are constantly increasing, and an investment in orchard properties now will be bringing in dividends long after all the gold mines now in operation have become exhausted.

—Seventy-two persons appeared at the State House an Wednesday in opposition to the proposal to lease clam flats at the hearing by the fish and game committee, while the fish and game commission alone favored the measure.

TOWN MEETING AT WOLLASTON

All the Articles in Warrant Turned Down

The Men's club of the Wollaston Methodist church had a most interesting meeting Thursday evening.

George Taylor, the president called the meeting to order at 8 oclock. After disposing of the business, S. N. Belcher, the editor, read Wollaston Herald which was full of wit and personal hits on the members. The rest o fthe program took the form of an old-fashioned town meeting, which was entered upon in a lively spirit. The different articles of the warrant were taken up by the petitioners and ably defended.

Article 4 was first taken up. It was to appropriate a sufficient sum of money for the purchase of a five cent piece of ice weekly for the selectmen's office for the warm months of the year. J. A. Sedgwick ably set forth the reasons why the article should meet with the hearty approval of all. It met with much opposition and was finally lost.

The article calling for the appropriation of money for the instruction of music in the public school was next taken up ,and A. N. Murray, with his wit and good humor spoke in its favor. This was strongly opposed by Oscar Storer, one of the heavy taxpayers, who thought it a reckless and foolish waste of the town's money. Mr. Murray took exceptions and introduced some children to sing, that all might see for themselves what the public schools were doing along this line. The article did not pass.

Mr. Sanders spoke in favor of the next article, which was to see if the town would appropriate a sum of money for the cultivation of the town flats on Beale street. Mr. Sanders had a plan of the flats showing how this could be done, and how automobiles might be used to convey the clams to the homes at the small cost of 15 cents per peck. Simpson Kay also spoke in its favor. George Taylor strongly opposed such needless expenditure of money. The article did not pass.

A. B. Cassidy took up the next article to see if the town would extend the Sachem stream and dredge the same to a depth of 18 inches at low water, so that all kinds of fish might be raised and thereby help out the clam beds ,and provide also for some ice for summer use. This met with great opposition and was lost.

At this point the meeting adjourned. A. N. Murray acted as clerk and F. G. Bennett as moderator.

During the evening a company of ladies made their appearance to the surprise of the men.

Nearly 50 men were present. Refreshments were served. During the evening the president introduced Dr. Pollock of Government who spoke briefly expressing his pleasure in being present.

BRIEFS

A subscription whist party will be given by Mrs. A. W. Russell and Mrs. H. F. McClean at the home of the former on next Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. E. Tyler Brigham will entertain the Unitarian Church Helpers at their meeting on Thursday afternoon at her home on Lincoln avenue.

The Park and Downs Congregational church will hold Lenten services on three evenings during the coming week.

The Navy orders of yesterday say the battleship North Dakota, now at the Fore River shipyard, will be placed in commission at Boston, Wednesday, April 6.

It was voted by the Ladies Aid Alliance of the Wollaston Unitarian church on Wednesday, that the annual meeting should be the first meeting in April instead of later in the season as in past years.

At the Sunday morning service of the First Universalist church Miss Edith Hyland will sing the Palms, and at the evening service of the Y. P. C. U., at 6 o'clock. Chester Brown will play a cornet solo, "The Palms." This is to be a union meeting of the Y. P. C. U. of the North Weymouth and Quincy churches.

The last Sociable of the season of the Wollaston Unitarian church will occur on Thursday evening. Mrs. John Norrie is in charge of the entertainment, which will consist of readings, and a song sheet with soloists and a chorus. Mrs. F. C. Merrill is the chairman of the supper committee.

MILTON

Milton Irish citizens and others as well, are very much wrought up because Master Varney of the High school sent some of his pupils home on Thursday because they displayed too much green ribbon. It appears that the day before the master called the pupils together and told them to omit green ties and ribbons on Thursday. Some of them, however, appeared bedecked with bright green ties and ribbons and they were promptly sent home. Their parents are very indignant and the matter will probably be brought to the attention of the School Committee.

The Thursday Evening club are arranging a pleasing program for the balance of the season. The spring program will commence immediately after Easter.

Special Lenten services are being held this week at the Mission of Our Saviour church.

It is more than probable that Chief Choate of the Fire department will have an automobile hurry-up chemical engine in commission before the summer is out.

Chief Pierce, of the police department, says that his department will not have a new automobile speed catcher this year, but that the department will continue to use the Stanley steamer of last year which was built expressly for him. This car is guaranteed to make 75 miles an hour.

East Milton people will do all in their power to help along the plan of the West Quincy Improvement association to have the street car tracks extended down Granite avenue to connect with the Boston L line at Pierces hill, Neponset.

Milton will use oil again this year to keep the dust down, instead of watering carts. This system was given a thorough trial last summer and proved a great success.

Most of Milton's police officers have become members of the Police Relief association of the state.

—Haverhill Board of Trade had bad luck Thursday fire destroying their building resulting in a loss of some $75,000.

The Social Realm

I'm waiting for the days when violets wake
From mossy pillows, by a brook I know,
A little brook that rippling gently makes
A melody, for flowers it loves so.
The fair arbutus, lifting shy, sweet face,
Glows pink with happiness to hear its song,
While pussy willows wave with careless grace
A cheerful greeting all the way along.
And that frail wind flower, the anemone,
Its dainty petals tenderly unfold,
Beloved of brook and dear to you and me,
It is the breath of Springtime in the wold.

You may select any style you want and wear it with perfect comfort. The wonderful ease of its flexible sole allows you to forget your feet even in dress shoes.

Tanned by a special process

Stiff soles are tanned in six weeks. Acids are used to hurry the tanning. They parch and burn the leather. This is why ordinary shoes draw your feet.

The Red Cross tanning process takes six months. All the leather's natural life and elasticity are retained. You feel the difference the instant you change from stiff-sole shoes to the Red Cross Shoe.

No jar on your spine

The heel of the Red Cross Shoe is made of the same specially tanned leather. It takes all the jar off your spine, saves your strength.

Know for yourself how comfortable the Red Cross Shoe really is. New styles are coming in all the time. Come in today. Don't put it off. We want you to know the ease and wonderful comfort that has made the Red Cross Shoe so famous.

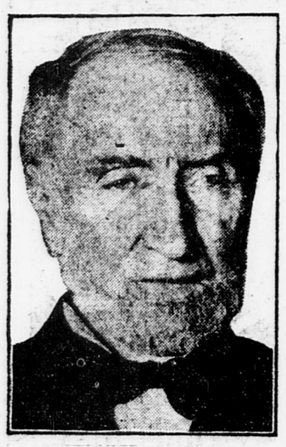
SPEAKER CANNON

Grim Old Warrior Is Fighting to the End



LULL IN FIGHT IN CONGRESS

Not In Any Way to Be Considered a Truce

CANNON REFUSES TO QUIT

Combination of Insurgent Republicans and Democrats Believed to Be Powerful Enough to Oust Him as Speaker—He Emerges From Record-Breaking Endurance Struggle of Thirty Hours Looking Fresh

Washington, March 19.—"Uncle Joe" Cannon, the speaker of the house, the czar of congress, and the strongest and most truculent figure in American politics today, is down.

The fight to keep control of the almost limitless powers of dictatorship as speaker on the committee on rules is already lost, and further, his enemies arrayed in the lower branch of congress have enough votes now to not only bar him from the committee but to depose him as speaker.

The matter of ousting him entirely was seriously considered more than once yesterday afternoon. The Democrats will vote with the "insurgents," and their combined strength is 201, while the total of the "regular" Republicans is 188, leaving the enemy a majority of 13.

A lull, not a truce, was declared in the greatest parliamentary struggle in the history of the congress of the United States at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after being in session two days and an entire night, and while fourteen of the insurgents voted with the regulars for an adjournment until noon today, the result conveys no significance and means anything other than that they have relented their determination to end Cannonism for all time.

Numerous conferences were held between the leaders of the rival camps looking to some sort of adjustment, but none resulted.

The Norris amendment cutting off Cannon's powers will come up at noon, and it will be the verse of Uncle Joe's swan song. In face of this prospect of defeat Cannon is fighting and will not admit he is whipped or will be.

Champ Clark is talked of as a possible successor to Cannon.

The house, for the first time in the present session, had almost full membership on the floor. When the speaker's gavel fell the members rose wearily from their seats and filed out through the littered aisles and in five minutes the scene of the record-breaking endurance struggle was cleared of its 400 principals and the galleries were emptied of the hundreds of spectators who had occupied them constantly for nearly thirty hours.

Speaker Cannon looked as fresh as a peony, considering the tax on his strength during his all-night vigil. He showed little of the weariness naturally expected from a 74-year-old man who had been under such a strain.

What the outcome will be no one ventures accurately to predict. The "insurgents" confidently claim that when the final vote is taken on the Norris resolution, their total vote will be 33, which combined with the full Democratic vote would be more than a safe majority of the house. The Democratic leaders, so far, have held their forces strictly in hand, and have on every vote polled their full strength.

The regulars' mood is a waiting one. If the "insurgents" win the fight they say that upon the "allies" will devolve the responsibility of legislation. The particular obstruction in the pathway of agreement between the regulars and the insurgents is the proposed elimination of the speaker. The regulars say the speaker, having committed no wrong, should not be discredited. Some friends of the speaker contend that if the house overrules him today he will "welcome" relief from the committee. The speaker himself is silent.

KAHN PAYS $500,000 FOR HALS PAINTING

Outbid Morgan In Struggle to Obtain Masterpiece

New York, March 19.—Half a million dollars, the record high price for a painting, was paid by Otto Kahn, the banker, for the celebrated canvas of Frans Hals, "the Dutch painter and his family, painted by himself."

Two years before the artist died he was voted a pension of three loads of peat by the city of Haarlem to replenish the fireless hearth in the painter's home, as Hals was then too poor to buy fuel.

Kahn, in purchasing the famous group painting, outbid J. P. Morgan, who offered between $350,000 and $400,000. Other bids ranging well into six figures have been made in the few weeks that the painting has been known to be on sale.

Duveen Bros., from whom the painting was bought, imported the canvas a few weeks ago from England, where frantic efforts were made to keep it, but the dealers believed that they could get more in the United States.

Goherian, his hand on his heart, made a dramatic plea before the judge in the Middlesex county superior criminal court. "Before God I never intended to kill that boy," he cried. "Have mercy on me, judge."

BUTTERINE PLANT RAIDED

President, Secretary, Chemist and Seventeen Others Arrested

New York, March 19.—Revenue agents raided the Hudson Butterine company's plant in Hoboken. It is charged that the company, which makes 5000 pounds of butterine a day, has defrauded the government by shipping the colored product as uncolored.

Seventeen employes had been arrested when the chemist, Adam Tinbaum, arrived. On him was found a quantity of coloring matter. F. G. Pearson, president, and H. J. Brown, secretary, were also arrested.

Leather Workers to Strike

Chicago, March 19.—A general strike, involving 103 cities and about 4000 men, has been ordered by the International Brotherhood of Leather Workers on horse goods. The strike will go into effect on Monday. The demands are for increased wages and an eight-hour day.

INDICTED BY GRAND JURY

Over Three Score Counts Against Coleman and Lockhart

MISAPPLICATION OF FUNDS

Former Bookkeeper of National City Bank of Cambridge Also Accused of Making False Entries—Aiding and Abetting Charged Against the Other—Lockhart's Indictment Comes as a Surprise to the General Public

Boston, March 19.—The federal grand jury reported to Judge Lowell in the United States district court two indictments each against George W. Coleman, former bookkeeper of the National City bank of Cambridge, and Wilson W. Lockhart, who acted as Coleman's assistant and messenger.

Two secret indictments were also returned by the grand jury. United States marshals were sent out to look for the indicted men, whose names were not made public.

Two indictments were returned against each man. Both Coleman and Lockhart are charged in the first indictment with making false entries in the books of the National Banking association, to which the National City bank belonged. Coleman in a second indictment is charged with misappropriation of the funds of the bank. Lockhart in a second indictment is charged with aiding and abetting in this misappropriation.

There are more than fifty counts in the two indictments against Coleman and about a dozen counts against Lockhart.

"There was no evidence of any kind introduced before the grand jury in connection with these cases against the so-called 'faro gang,'" said United States District Attorney French in discussing the indictment of the two men. "Both men will probably be arraigned next week on these indictments."

Both men were arrested some time ago and released under bail pending action by the grand jury. Coleman's present bail is $50,000 and Lockhart's $15,000. Both men will now be brought into court, asked to plead to the indictments and then new bail set. If they are unable to furnish it they will be sent to jail.

The chief evidence against Coleman introduced to the grand jury was Coleman's confession made to District Attorney French and in three hours had completely gone over his entire history. It was thought that in his confession Coleman exonerated Lockhart from all blame, and the indictment of the companion of Coleman came as a surprise.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

One Hundred Thousand Hub Children to Have Free Dental Services—Tree Troubles, Real and Not Ancestral, Divide Back Bay into Warring Factions—Bay State Suffragists Put on Best Bib and Tucker to Greet President Taft in Washington—Many Distinguished People Offer to Speak on Savings Bank Life Insurance.

Blue blooded Bostonians, who are supposed to be icily indifferent to each other and anybody else, in reality fight among themselves like brothers and sisters in the home or ants in the ant hill. Just now there is a Commonwealth avenue feud which threatens to take on the proportions of the real old Kentucky affair. The little village of Back Bay, where everybody knows everybody else and all are descended from branches of pretty much the same family trees, is divided into war ing factions, engaged in writing letters about each other to the newspapers and doing other very human and not necessarily dignified things. Its somehow all about trees—real trees, and not ancestral whether there should be two rows or four rows along the stately avenue. It is complicated with revolt against the grizzled and beneficent old tyrant who has directed the arboral destinies of the Hub these many years. Unless the furore subsides it will not be strange if passersby on Commonwealth avenue some fine morning note a series of effigies hung from the trees now standing there. Old place, Boston.

To be at the first equal suffrage meeting ever opened by a President of the United States many of the members of the Massachusetts woman suffrage association are already buying their tickets for Washington at the advantageous rates offered by the railway associations. The attractiveness of the capital city in the spring months is not their only excuse. The forty-second annual convention of their national association bids fair to be replete with interesting and even spectacular happenings. Mr. Taft, who is a believer in the political equality of the sexes, has consented to call the convention to order. The great petition, with its million or more names, a document which if stretched out would reach from Boston to Beverly or beyond, will be conveyed in three special trucks to the Capitol and there presented to Congress by a delegation of 500 women. There will be conferences, symposia and demonstrations at all hours of the day from Thursday, April 14, to Tuesday, April 19, all of a character to interest the New England members who sometimes in the press and hurry of their own propaganda, do not realize what progress their movement is making in other sections. A good deal of this kind of enlightenment has been going on of late, however. That the centre of most brilliant activity is just now in New York state was an impression gained by a very large number of suffragists and their friends who attended an "at home" of the Boston Equal Suffrage Association for Good Government on the afternoon of March 11, an occasion when Mrs. Alice Duer Miller, secretary of the Equal Franchise Society of New York, and Miss Carolyn Crossett, organizer of the New York State association, described happenings at Albany and in the metropolis. Suffragism is very much a national affair.

Would you rather "Jump on the trolley with Maudie and Mollie, and all aboard for—"Moscow or Boston? Forty miles of trolley track on which 300 motor cars and about 400 trailers operate represent the equipment with which the million and a half inhabitants of Moscow rub along according to the report of Consul General John H. Snodgrass, lately issued. Here is a new and striking basis for one of the comparisons that have often been made between Boston and European cities of approximately the same size. Glasgow and the Hub have been frequently contrasted as regards their rapid transit facilities. Moscow, the centre of Russia's trade and commerce, with a population now officially estimated as 1,500,000, is a place of substantially the size of Greater Boston. Against its 40 miles of surface track at the end of 1908 a comparative statement would set 475 miles of tunnel, subway, elevated and surface track in Boston. The Russian city has 1300 regular cars and trailers, while more than 3500 cars of one kind and another accommodate Bostonians. The seating capacity of the Muscovite cars is 26, with standing room for 8 on the rear platform. No standing is permitted inside the car so that the tired shop girl, to whom General Bancroft referred in his recent lecture in Cambridge, doubtless in Moscow as in Berlin waits frequently in the slush at a street corner as car after car goes by until at last one uncrowded comes along. The fare in Moscow is 2 1-2, 4 1-2 and 7 1-2 cents according to the distance, the first named carrying a passenger a maximum distance of about 1 1-2 miles. The average haul for a nickel in Boston is in the neighborhood of four miles—an indication that the service is much cheaper here. In 1908 Moscow's earnings from the tramway system were $300,000. In the same year the Boston Elevated Company contributed to the public coffers in taxation, rentals and other items, $1,484,710.23. From which figures the ordinary citizens, who now and then execrates the street car service, just as he objurgates the New England climate, may draw whatever moral he likes.

Want a free speaker for your woman's club, church society, board of trade meeting or trade union conference? Here is the latest leaflet of the Massachusetts Savings Insurance League, which was formed to promote the cause of savings bank life insurance for wage earners. This association offers to send out as lecturers on topics appropriate to its mission the following well known citizens who are willing out of a busy life to devote an occasional hour to explaining the social service that can be rendered by insurance at cost to people in humble circumstances: Elmer J. Bliss, chairman of the wage earners' insurance committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; H. LaRue Brown, George W. Coleman, Rev. Edward Cummings, successor to Rev. Edward Everett Hale of the South Congregational Church, Mrs. Glendower Evans, Elias Field, Rev. Elmer S. Forbes, of the American Unitarian Association, Alice H. Grady, financial secretary Massachusetts Savings Insurance League, Richard W. Hale, Ralph H. Hallett, Charles H. Jones, Rev. Harry W. Kimball, the newly elected field secretary of the Massachusetts Savings Insurance League, Henry C. Long, Harrison F. Lyman, Preston Pond, Harwood E. Ryan, State Actuary, Robert W. Sawyer, Jr., C. Bertrand Thompson of Boston-1915, Hon. Joseph Walker, Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, Hon. Norman H. White, representative from Brookline. These busy people are literally servants of the public when it is a matter of talking savings insurance.

The Hub again leads in a philanthropy which for scope has been unequalled in the history of private benefactions. A Boston multi-millionaire, Thomas A. Forsyth, has set aside the sum of $2,000,000 for the establishment of a Forsyth Dental Infirmary as a perpetual foundation whereby all children in Boston up to the age of sixteen years may have the benefit of the most expert dental services at no cost to themselves or their parents. Nothing intervenes between the plan and its realization but the passage of a bill now before the legislature petitioning the incorporation of the idea. Over 100,000 school children may be accommodated during the year. The idea which Mr. Forsyth has in mind in founding this gigantic institution is to provide a means whereby the teeth of growing children, which are all too frequently neglected now, may have proper care until the young people arrive at an age when they have sufficient knowledge and pride to attend to them themselves. The institution, which is to be built on Hemenway Street, will be another notable addition to the rapidly growing "university of the Fenway." Ethel Angier.

SAYS THERE IS NO TRUST

Packer Takes Dramatic Oath Before Senate Probe Committee

Washington, March 19.—"So help me God, there is no trust or combination of packers controlling the prices of meat."

This was the dramatic testimony given by James Agar, president of the Western Packing and Provision company of Chicago, before the senate committee investigating the cost of living.

In reply to a question from Senator Gallinger, Agar branded the beef trust as "a figment of the newspaper imagination." He attributed the rise in prices principally to reduced supply, especially in regard to hogs.

BRIEFS

Ralph W. Giffin, the blind soloist of Boston, will sing at the evening service at Bethany church tomorrow.

Rev. Harry M. Fishel of Boston University will occupy the pulpit at the Atlantic Methodist Episcopal church Sunday evening.

The family of Frank S. Patch of Alleyne Terrace have leased a house on Edgemere road and will occupy the same the first of the month.

The men's club of St. Chrysostom's will hold its mid-monthly meeting on Monday night in the parish rooms. Mr. D. Dwyer of Boston will be the speaker.

C. W. Guy of Roselawn, Butler road, says Brookline need not crow over the first crocus for his has been in bloom for ten days, and the honor belongs to Quincy.

Mrs. Arthur Stanley of Elm avenue who underwent an operation at Vincent Memorial Hospital 123 South Huntington street, Back Bay, on Thursday is resting comfortably and her many friends hope for a continuation of these favorable reports

An important meeting of the City Council will be held Monday evening. Several committees have met since the last Council meeting and reports from them may be expected. It is possible that the Finance Committee may report the annual budget.

There is an ash barrel on Maple street whose owner is violating the city ordinance, the barrel having been on the sidewalk going on two weeks. The reason why the barrel has not been emptied by the weekly collector is probably because it contains yard refuse instead of ashes.

The National Sailors Home will receive $500 from the estate of Mrs. Sarah E. Foster late of Boston who left bequests of $50,000 to charity. Nine institutions will receive $2,000 each, 15 will receive $1,000 each, and 43 are remembered by $500 each.

Four hand hammers were stolen from the granite sheds of J. C. Ballou sometime during Thursday night. They will probably be found in some Boston pawnshop.

Charles M. Bryant, before the committe on fisheries and game, of the Legislature on Thursday argued for a bill that whoever suffers loss of fowls by foxes shall be recompensed by a board to be appointed by selectmen of towns or by police of a city. He complained of a hunt club in Worcester county which liberates foxes every year and said that the state must do something toward reclaiming the deserted farms so that those who wish can raise hens on them.—Herald.

There is already great demand for flowers for Easter and if you do not wish to be disappointed telephone your order now to William Patterson, the Wollaston florist, who has one of the most beautiful assortments of Easter plants and flowers we have ever seen.

GRANITE BY AUTO TRUCKS

Successful Trials Mark New Era in Transportation

The Quincy Quarries Co. are trying out a 4-ton automobile truck for the transportation of granite from their quarries to the stone cutting plants about Quincy. This morning several loads of over four tons were loaded onto the truck and they were transported easily and quickly to their destination. As an illustration, four tons of rough stock was started from the Hitchcock quarry and was transported to the yard of J. C. Murray on Gass place. The round trip consumed twenty minutes. A load of five tons was started from the same quarry at just 12 o'clock noon and ten minutes later the truck with its load was standing in City Square and the driver was getting a lunch in a restaurant. Up to the present time the truck is doing great work, and has proved a great saving of time in the transportation of stock from the old method of horses.

Quincy Yacht Club Will Have Larger Hall and a Roof Garden

Work is to be commenced immediately on the addition to the clubhouse of the Quincy Yacht club at Houghs Neck, a permit for the same having been issued this morning to contractor George E. Bell. The plans call for the moving of the present club house further out into the water and the new addition will be on the shore end between the present club house and the restaurant of William Norteman. The addition is to be two stories high its dimensions being 48-8 feet by 81 feet.

The plans also provide for the enlarging of the hall in the present building and for a roof garden on the new addition with a stairway leading to Norteman's so that should occasion require Mr. Norteman could readily serve parties with a shore dinner. There will also be a number of additional lockers provided for the members.

"MADE IN NEW ENGLAND"

New Mark Being Considered by Boston Chamber of Commerce

Boston, March 19.—The Boston chamber of commerce is considering the advisability of stamping on all New England made goods the motto, "Made in New England," as an effective means of advertising the commercial advantages of New England.

This activity on the part of the chamber of commerce follows a speech by Erman J. Ridgway in Boston a short time ago. Ridgway said: "Stamp a 'Made in New England' mark on every article that leaves your mills. Paint it on your shipping cases. Paste it on your packages. Plaster the country with it. Make it your slogan, and back it with such merit that 'Made in New England' will be a synonym for made right, distributed right and sold right."

JUNIORS WIN AT HIGH MEET

The Seniors a Poor Second in Points Won

The Juniors won the indoor meet at the Quincy High school yesterday afternoon, leading the Seniors by 9 points. Nearly 40 fellows were entered in the events all of which were closely contested and full of interest.

The twenty yard dash for Freshmen showed that this class will be heard from in the athletic line later, as their time was the same as that in the handicap dash one can see what a beginning they have made. Those entered included Johnson, Church, Rich, Arenburg, Litchman, Prout, Miller, Crane and H. Prout.

The twenty yard handicap race had also many entries with Bates, Pfaffmann, Estey, P. Blackmur, Trask, W. Cranshaw, Johnson, Gould, E. Prout, R. Cranshaw, N. Prout, Churchill, Church, Brown and Arthur. The running of Leon Brown was the sensation of this event.

The high jump had many entries from each class. Pfaffman, White, H. Hill, Cranshaw, Favorite, Church, Gould, Churchill, Litchman, Tirrell, Bates, Arthur, Kendall, Northrop were among this attempting. White, one of the scratch men, went four feet eleven. Most of the winners had handicaps. The first three, Arthur, Churchill and Church, were tied for first place. It was decided to find the standing by tossing up and splitting the points, giving three for each fellow rather than jumping it out.

In the running broad jump, good work was done. Manning, Kendall, Bates, Hill Lundin, Hill, Church, Pfaffman excelled.

The standing broad jump went simultaneously with the high jump, so a number of the contestants who were entered in both events were kept busy.

As had been expected, Russ Bates won the shot put. His work in putting the twelve-pounder has always been good and he did himself and his class full justice.

The sack race was as usual very amusing to watch. Few of the contestants but took a fall before they had been many yards. There was a variety of gaits. Paul Blackmur ran into third place by taking short steps inside the bag, instead of hopping as the rest did, or tried to. "Bung" Brown hopped so high that he jumped clear of the bag.

Some of the boys in the handicap potato race made fine starts and stood in good chance of winning until they struck a few potatoes that were a tight fit in the tops of the cans, so that they had to stop and pound them in.

Allen Miller did some fine running in the novice potato race.

The tug-of-war teams were made up as follows, R. Bates, E. Sayward, R. Favorite, A. Gould and Leon Brown as anchor for the Seniors. The members of the 1911 team were B. Arthur, P. Rice, P. Blackmur, Harold Hill and H. Prout. The class of 1912 had W. Edwards, French, Cain, E. Prout and K. Edwards. On the freshman team were E. Rich, Johnson, White, Church and Harkins as anchor. The Seniors won from the Juniors and the Freshmen from the Sophomores. Then the 1910 and 1913 teams met. They were nearly equal in weight, but with C. H. Kimball telling them when to pull back, the Seniors won. The pulls were for three minutes. The team work is what helped the 1910 class.

The summary follows:

Twenty yard dash for 1913 men—won by R. Prout, Rich second, Crane third time 2 2-5s.;

Twenty yard dash, open—won by W. Cranshaw '11, Church '13 second, Manning '11 third.

Running broad jump—won by Manning '11 H. Hill, '11 second, Trask '12 third; distance, 17 ft., 2 in.

High jump—won by Arthur '11, Tirrell, '11 second, Churchill '10 third, distance 5 ft. 1 in.

Standing broad jump—won by Hill '11; Arthur '11 second, Manning '11 third; distance 11 ft. 6 in.

Twelve-pound shotput—won by R. Bates '10; Brown '10 second; Arthur '11; third distance 39 ft. 4 in.

Thirty-yard sack race—won by Arthur '11, R. Bates '10 second, P. Blackmur '11 third. Time 5 1-5s.

Potato race, novices—Won by Miller '12, Lewis '13 second, Church '13 third. Time 43 4-5s.

Potato race, handicap—Won by E. Prout '12 M. Blackmur '12 second, Arthur '11 third, time 41s.

Tug-of-war-1910 won from 1911, 1913 won from 1912, 1910 won from 1913.

—Senator Lodge has offered an amendment to the river and harbor bill appropriating $115,000 to be used in an immediate deepening of the channel of Fore river where the Argentine battleships are to be built. An amendment for a survey for this work was recently introduced by the senator, but it has been deemed that this is too slow a process in the emergency and hence this newest amendment, which is rather an extraordinary procedure and on that account may fail.—Boston Record.

The officials were: Brewster Walker M. I. T., clerk of course; Mr. Roach and Mr. Currier, teachers of the school, and Franz Marceau, the famous B. A. A. miler acted as judges. Mr. Blazo and Mr. Currier were the starters.

CITY COUNCIL MEETING

Annual Appropriation Order Will Probably be Reported

An important meeting of the City Council is scheduled for tonight. Several committees have met since the last meeting of the Council so that a number of committee reports may be expected. It is expected that the Finance Committee will make its report on the estimates of the Mayor and School Committee on amounts necessary to run the city for the current municipal year. A hearing will also be held on the petition of the street railway for a turnout location on Billings street, Atlantic, on the Squantum line.

—Society women of Bridgeton, New Jersey met recently and organized a Civic club with the object of improving the city's streets in planting and trimming of hundreds of shade trees, cleaning up alleys, vacant lots and back yards. The local merchants and manufacturers, through the Bridgeton Commercial League, are also booming this city as a desirable place to live in.

BATTLESHIP KEEL IN JUNE

Why Not Col. Roosevelt to Do the Honors?

The keel of the new battleship for the Argentine Republic will probably be laid about the middle of June, but depends upon the delivery of steel at the Fore River plant. Quincy should have another gala day on that date. Perhaps Col. Roosevelt might be secured to do the honors.

TOOLS STOLEN.

The shop of the Vulcan Tool Co. on Liberty street was entered by burglars sometime since Saturday night. The break was discovered this morning. The parties gained entrance by breaking the catch on one of the windows. There was evidence in the store that it had been entered, but just what was taken is not known until account of stock is taken.

BOTH HELD FOR GRAND JURY

The Alleged Pickpockets Given Hearing Today

The continued cases of Edward B Howard and James Grant, alias John Carney, the alleged pickpockets, were heard at the district court this morning. There were two complaints against each defendant, larceny from the person and for being vagabonds.

There were a large number of witnesses heard, including Walter J. Berry, who had his pocket picked of $18 on Sunday night, March 6, while on a car from Quincy to Neponset via Wollaston. Mr. Berry identified both defendants as being with a party of three men who were pushing the crowd in the vestibule and who got off the car at Holbrook road. Immediately after he missed his money. The third man was heavier. Previous to missing his money he had felt his overcoat pulled up several times.

Howard was also identified by Conductor Bock as being one of three men who acted suspiciously.

Inspector McKay testified to coming to City Square that night after the robbery had been reported and to watching three men, two of whom were the two defendants. Later he was shown a photograph of the men obtained from Boston inspectors which Berry recognized. On the morning of March 12, while coming from the launch at the Fore River he saw the two men on the car and watched them. When Grant got off the car near Scammell's turnout he got off and arrested him. Howard was later arrested in City Square by Officer Larkin.

Officer Larkin testified to the arrest of Howard and Inspectors Burr and Smith of the Boston police force testified to the records of the two men.

The court held both in $1,000 bonds each for the grand jury on the charge of larceny from the person, and in $500 each until April 16, on the charge of being vagabonds. Carney furnished bail, but Howard was committed.

W. J. Coleman, exalted ruler of Quincy lodge of Elks and others of Quincy lodge attended the dedication on Sunday of the new lodge home of Boston lodge in Boston.

Duntly Vacuum House Cleaners

They have abolished the terrors of sweeping day. Every housekeeper that can afford one will own one. Sweeping with a broom is dirty work—it wears out the rugs and carpets and stirs the dust and dust germs from one place to another in your home. Dusting follows but only removes the dust in sight. A pneumatic house cleaner draws every particle of dust into the receptacle. HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Some people won't be satisfied unless Rockefeller impoverishes himself.

With no "wheels "turning, Philadelphia ought to come to her senses soon.

However invulnerable Postmaster General Hitchcock may feel in his position on the postal deficit, he is bound to be blown up by magazines.

Mr. Gardner's comforting assertion that the high cost of living is world-wide merely reminds us that the food barons want the earth.

The Nicaraguan armies seem to be composed chiefly of Americans who have gotten tired of building the Panama Canal.

American consuls are going to investigate the cost of living in Europe, the assumption being that the high cost here will soon drive all our people to Europe.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The whole civilized world shows signs of becoming a vast, international playstead. Companies of men preparing to journey half way round the globe to play a game of tennis afford but one of many evidences that athletic games are deemed to be of more worth and importance today than they have ever been before.

The passing of every year shows a marked increase in the number of sports in which players compete for international honors. The present year's outlook for all forms of athletic competition is very bright. In golf, tennis, rowing, baseball, polo, and all kinds of track and field sports an unusual interest is being manifested. Peoples of all countries and of many races are joining one another in friendly contests. They are meeting and studying men under the most searching conditions, calculated to bring out their best qualities. The race is learning the proper and normal relations of sport to work. People are realizing that the one is as beneficial as the other for the full rounding out of men's natures.

International contests are teaching us how the peoples of other countries have learned to play. Men may well find pleasure in clean games and sports, and on occasion may welcome a chance to measure strength and skill and wit with some one in a friendly way. The ever-bubbling spirit of youth, the world over, likes to be out in the open and to shout and play.—Christian Science Monitor.

Whoever owns a tree possesses a treasure, and if he already does not know it, he should be warned that this is a critical time for its interests as well as an opportune time to take measures to promote its health and vitality. The trees are still bare and thus the time is favorable for a diagnosis of any troubles that may beset them, and we know of these are more than enough. That they should be cleared of worm nests goes without saying ,but even that is not enough. The bark as well as the branches harbors an abundance of pernicious though still dormant life that is awaiting the warm days for release from its hibernation, and now is the time when energetic spraying will save much trouble in the future. The agricultural college extension course, when it gets on wheels, as it soon will, doubtless will dispense admonition of this sort, but it can hardly be carried to every part of the State, and even if it should be, it would be better to take at once the precautions that we know are needed. The orchards especially should receive this attention, which if bestowed all over the State would give us a larger and cleaner crop of this staple fruit than we are accustomed to see. A proper spraying compound is not expensive or difficult to make and the directions are easy to obtain. Spray, and again spray, with thoroughness until the developing time has passed. —Boston Transcript.

DOVER PLANT MAY CLOSE

Wage Demand Affects Six Thousand Employes of Cocheco Mills

Dover, N. H., March 21.—The 6000 operatives of the Cocheco mills, Dover's principal industry, who have been averaging four days a week, are threatened with complete loss of employment by the company, as the result of the demand of loom fixers for more wages.

The Cocheco is owned by the Pacific company of Lawrence, Mass. The Dover loom fixers say the loom fixers at Lawrence are better paid. It is said that the company will make no concessions in Dover and that if the strike threatened today is continued for any length of time the Dover plant will be closed.

Cattle at Hundred Dollars a Head

Fort Worth, Tex., March 19.—One hundred dollars per head was paid here for a herd of 450 Oklahoma fed beef cattle. This is said to be the highest price for this class of cattle ever paid in the United States.

The Hip Joints.

The cup and ball socket and the air tight valve were first used in the human body. If our hip joints and arms were not provided with air tight sockets we should get too tired to continue our work for any length of time in just holding these limbs together by muscles. It is the pressure of the air which holds them in place, and thus all physical effort is avoided. In the various air tight joints and sockets found in the human body one may find nearly all the mechanical principles involved in the air brake or the use of compressed air for a thousand different things. Some may aver that nature did not discover ball bearings, a mechanical device which has revolutionized the vehicular world. But the principle is almost developed in the ball of the leg bone and the socket of the hip, which are made so smooth and are so well oiled that they slide backward and forward with practically no friction.

Marrying For Votes.

Marrying for votes was a device of old time British election agents. As the law stood before the reform act of 1832 widows of freemen on marrying again made their second husbands freemen and therefore voters. At election times widows were consequently paid handsomely to go through a formal marriage with a voteless bachelor, who, for a consideration, similarly agreed to support the candidate. The pair were married, the man voted according to instructions, and then he and his wife, standing on either side of a tombstone, said, "Death us do part." With this literal fulfillment of the matrimonial vow they regarded their marriage dissolved. At the last election in Bristol before 1832 a hundred women gave votes to men.

5,200 DOUGHNUTS IN 32 DAYS

Mrs. Tarr of Brunswick, Me., Goes After a Record.

There is a woman in Brunswick, Me., Mrs. Lizzie Tarr, who has something of a local reputation as a doughnut maker. Recently she went after the doughnut record and in thirty-two days made a trifle more than 5,200 doughnuts. This was done in odd moments when she was not caring for and feeding and doing housework for her husband, herself and fifteen children.

Mrs. Tarr's recipe for molasses doughnuts, which she considers the best product of her kitchen, is as follows:

One cupful of sour milk, one-half cupful of New Orleans molasses, one even teaspoonful of ginger, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of soda, one egg, four cupfuls of flour and a dash of nutmeg.

She adds this information about the making:

"The frying is the most important. You must not get the lard too hot or the doughnuts will brown on the outside before they are fully cooked through. When you have put them in the fat they will sink to the bottom, and the lard must be hot enough so they will rise quickly to the top. If you can get the real old New Orleans molasses it will give a wonderfully rich, light color to the doughnuts."

WOMAN PREACHER AND PHYSICIAN THINKS WE NEED POLICEWOMEN.

THE Rev. Anna Howard Shaw, a doctor of divinity and a doctor of medicine, is an earnest advocate of the appointment of women to the police force of large cities. For fifteen years Miss Shaw has expressed the belief that women police would do a great deal toward decreasing and preventing crime, and the other day in an interview she expressed herself as being more earnestly than ever in favor of the innovation.

"One thousand policewomen," she declared, "would do more to purify the city of New York than any other reform of which I know."

It is Miss Shaw's idea that policewomen should be stationed at all moving picture shows, dance halls, in the public parks and in the vicinity of saloons. She believes that they would be able to prevent a great deal of the lawbreaking that is committed at these places. They would see to it that minors are not served with liquor, that young girls are not permitted to get into the grasp of depraved men and that liquor dealers obey the laws in general.

"The function of a policeman, in my opinion, is less to punish than to prevent crime," says this preacher doctor. "The policeman is a watchman, and many cases arise where a watchwoman would be more efficacious because of the maternal instinct which makes her a better guardian of the interests and lives of children."

Dr. Shaw studied medicine and took her degree so that she could work among the unfortunate women in the slums of Boston. For three years she practiced medicine there and received only one fee, that of a dime which an old woman insisted she must take for car fare. She is thoroughly in earnest in her policewoman idea and says she would like to be a policewoman herself.

Taft Not In Favor of Newspaper Editorials

NO COMMENT BY TAFT

He Learns of Victory of Insurgent-Democratic Coalition

Albany, March 21.—President Taft declined to comment in any way upon the fight of the Republican insurgents and Democrats against Speaker Cannon and the change adopted as to the rules committee.

The president let it be known that any statement purporting to come from him at this time is unauthorized and erroneous. Whatever the president may have to say will not be said until after his return to Washington next Wednesday.

President Taft is wondering what the newspapers and readers think about his attack on newspaper editorials. He thinks it all right for a newspaper to publish news, but he can't see the reason for lugging in editorials. He has admitted to his friends that he is going to keep on talking that way for a long time to come.

SEED GIFT RETURNED TO CONGRESSMAN

Grangers Suggest Paying Postage to Make Up Deficit

Lisbon, Me., March 21.—The secretary of Pine Tree grange returned to Congressman Swasey a package of seeds which he had sent to the grange. A letter accompanying the seeds says in part:

"We return these seeds to you, as we believe this method of free distribution of seeds is not for the good of the people; that the expense incurred is not good business on the part of the authorities; that the seeds are inferior in quality and the money so used is wasted.

"We believe the custom of allowing our congressmen the free use of the mails is unwise and that they are as well able as others to pay postage on whatever they may wish to send through the mails, and that a correction of this evil would assist in making up the deficit in the postal department."

The letter was authorized at a meeting held by Pine Tree grange.

CRISIS IN KEENE'S CAREER

Added Troubles Confronting New York Financial Operator

New York, March 21.—James R. Keene is facing a crisis in his long career as a financial operator in Wall street. He is confronted on one hand by the power of the federal government in its enforcement of the bankruptcy laws, and on the other by a distinctly menacing attitude displayed by the governors of the New York stock exchange.

Mr. Keene is not under the jurisdiction of the stock exchange, for he is not a member, but his brokers are. Beyond all this, Keene is now threatened with the series of lawsuits in connection with the collapse of the Hocking pool.

PAY IS TOO SMALL

Rectors of Episcopal Churches In Bay State May Get a Raise

Boston, March 21.—Salaries of ministers and how they may be raised so that poorly paid clergymen may receive a competence is the most important question which is to come before the 125th convention of the Episcopal churches of Massachusetts.

When it is known that one minister receives $318.75 per year, another $875, and yet another $900, and nine ministers of the church get under $1000 each, the importance of the question may be realized.

The annual convention is to meet in this city on April 13.

MRS. HETTY GREEN'S GIFT OF $500,000

Hint That There May Be a "Come-Back" to It, After All

New York, March 21.—With a dull thud the scientific world has come to a halt in its search for the cancer cure, the hookworm and other diseases of mankind. A public demand has gone forth that the searchers after the anthrax bacillus or the micrococcus bend all their efforts into solving the greatest of all modern questions—viz, what's floating through the air that is causing the men and women of millions to give them away?

No one was worried as long as Rockefeller, Carnegie, Dr. Pearsons or Mrs. Russell Sage gave away their millions, but now comes the statement—as yet unproved, for no one has seen the money—that Mrs. Hetty Green is going to give away $500,000 of her $100,000,000.

But it's not to be in money, so the story goes. In fact, it's to be in the shape of property worth that sum, and upon it Countess Annie Leary is to erect her memorial to Columbus. Other folks are to help build the memorial.

A careful search of the property in New York city is said to show that much blasting will be required to clear away the rocks, and it is a well known fact that Mrs. Green is a large stockholder in the gunpowder trust, so maybe it is only business shrewdness on the part of Mrs. Green.

Howbeit, there's something in the air, and the high cost of living takes a back seat in the news line when any one even dares suggest that Mrs. Green is about to join the Rockefeller et al spendthrift class.

FOUR MILLION YEARS OLD

Geologists Use Salt to Determine Age of Old Mother Earth

Chicago, March 21.—The jealously guarded secret of Mother Earth's age has at last been revealed, and it was the ocean that gave it away. According to the Journal of Geology, issued from the university of Chicago press, the earth is 4,000,000 years old. The approximate age, it has been discovered, may be determined by dividing the amount of salt in the sea by the amount brought down each year by the rivers that empty into it, a simple problem in arithmetic.

Sir John Murray, Professor Joly and M. Dubois, eminent geologists, stand forward as champions of the new method.

SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

The Themes and Music Appropriate to Palm Sunday

FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. H. C. DeLong of Medford, assisted Rev. E. C. Butler the pastor at the morning service at First church and preached the sermon. He took his text from I Samuel 2:20, "And they went unto their own home." It was an earnest plea for the home in its truest sense.

A musical vesper was held at four o'clock the church quartet being assisted by Miss Olive Whitely Hilton, violinist of Boston. Rev. C. B. Ames, assistant pastor gave a short sermonette.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

"Loyalty to Jesus Christ" was the subject of Rev. Dr. Hardy on Sunday morning. How much better, he said, to become loyal to Christ than to any creed or dogma. A religion that will make a better man is wanted. Live by the Golden Rule. Follow the leadership of Jesus Christ; be loyal.

Albert L. Hayden sang the "Palms" at the Sunday morning service, and Mrs. Moore a beautiful solo, "Jerusalem."

Four days this week there will be services in keeping with Holy week. On Tuesday evening the preacher will be Rev. Thomas Simms of the First Congregational church at Braintree: on Wednesday evening, Rev. Thomas W. Davison of the Memorial Congregational church at Atlantic; on Thursday evening, Rev. Edward Norton, the pastor emeritus; on Friday evening, brief and timely addresses by the pastor and members of the church.

Wednesday afternoon, at 3, Rev. Edward A. Chase of the Wollaston Congregational church will conclude his series of Lenten addresses at Bethany church.

A boy's choir is being organized at the church and the Ladies Circle is busy making gowns.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN

At the morning service of the Wollaston Unitarian church Rev. Carl G. Horst delivered a very strong and earnest sermon appropriate to Palm Sunday, commending, at the outset, the custom which of late years has become common of the observance each years in the life of Christ. Jesus, in his ministry of only three years revealed more than has any prophet since, the reality of the Fatherhood of God, and His was a vital religion which has left its impress on the civilized world through all the centuries, and will continue to grow in power and go on and on till all men are drawn into one body of worshippers by His example and spirit. Christ, in his life, embodied the highest thought of God, and His was the very essence of true religion, the communion of spirit, and must remain unchanged though all time since it ministers, now as then, to the highest developement of man's soul.

And the Nazarene, in seeking to help and reform those of his time, did not criticize existing evils but sought to cleanse and purify the hearts of the individuals knowing that the issues of life were safe with men whose souls were pure and of lofty aim.

The meeting of the Young People's Religous Union was held on Sunday evening. In the absence of Miss Evelyn Cummings, J. Harry Hooper led the devotional exercises. The speaker of the evening was Edward R. Hall and the subject, "Holy week." Mr. Hall illustrated how Holy week was observed here as well as in foreign countries, showing many causes for the different observances. His talk was instructive as well as interesting.

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S.

At St. Chrysostom's church Palm Sunday the rector Rev. Albert Edwin Clattenburg took for his text St. Matthew 26 part of 35th verse, "Though I should die with Thee yet will I not deny Thee." The Apostles failed Christ because they did not understand Him. There is no excuse for us today if we fail to stand with Christ all the time. We can not say that we do not understand Him, we have the experience of the Apostles and of all the saints and martyrs to teach us the true character and purpose of Christ, so if we fail Christ today, if we do not stand with him always the blame is upon us, we are weak miserable sinners.

At the evening service "The Cross and the seven words" was the subject of the rector's address. The altar and sanctuary were beautifully decorated with palms so was also the rood beam, cross, chancel rail and baptismal font. During Holy week, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Maundy Thursday, Holy Eucharist at 7 A. M., Wednesday noonday service at 12.30 and evening prayer and address by Rev. B. W. Atwell D. D. of Newton Thursday evening at 8 o'clock preparation service. Good Friday at 10.00 morning prayer. Evening prayer with address at 8 o'clock.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

A meeting of prayer, suited to Holy Week, and for women only, will be held in the vestry of the Wollaston Congregational Church on Wednesday. Mrs. E. A. Chase will lead the meeting and the subject will be, "The promises of God in Him are yea and amen unto the glory of God by us."

The regular monthly dinner of the Men's club will be on Tuesday in the vestry of the Wollaston Congregational church. The speaker of the evening will be M. G. Fenenga who has advance from a cowboy to president of the Northwest college in Winconsin. His subject is, "Making a New England in the West." illustrated by stereoptican views.

FAST-GROWING CRIME RECORD.

The fast-growing record of crime in the United States is a powerful argument for those who maintain that nationally we ignore the law. There is a constant demand for a better enforcement of the law and a more rigid protection of life and property. Basing his statement upon the average of the past, Andrew D. White recently stated that 5,000 men, women and children will be murdered in this country during the next six months. There are from ten to twenty times as many murders in this country per 1,000,000 of population as in all the countries of Europe, except Spain and Italy. The United States has twice as many murders as those two. A comparison of the number of judges of a similar rank in Illinois, in New York State and in England and Wales is astonishing. Illinois, with 5,000,000 people has 241 judges. New York with 9,000,000 people, has 331 judges. England and Wales, with 32,000,000 people have only 92 judges of that rank. This is illustrative of the respective lawlessness of the various territories.

President Taft's statement that the administration of criminal law is a disgrace to this country is a marvelous confession of our national depravity. Statistics for murders are but indications of the general conditions which effect the security of life and and property.—Roach's Financial Facts.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

The comments of Admiral R. D. Evans on the Panama canal in the March number of Hamptons Magazine are of interest. He says:

"The distance from New York to Los Angeles via the Panama Canal is in round numbers five thousand miles. A 6000 tons capacity steamer loaded with oranges, or other fresh fruit, steaming at the rate of only twelve knots per hour, would cover the distance in eighteen days. If we allow one day for the steamer passing through the canal, her total time from port to port would be nineteen days.

"If the vessel were run especially for the fruit trade, this time could be reduced by several days. A ship of sixteen knots speed such as those now used in the West Indies fruit trade, would make the trip in just fourteen days, giving again the allowance for one day for passing through the canal.

"The time for rail freights across the continent varies from twenty to sixty days. It will therefore be seen that the steamer could, in all cases, land her freight in a shorter time. This means that many kinds of freight would be delivered in better condition and for one third the price now charged by the railroads."

—American shipbuilders through the unusual course which has been taken by the Turkish government as reported to the state department, have been deprived of the opportunity to submit bids for the construction of warships for the Ottoman government, to cost approximately $25,000,000. Some weeks ago American shipbuilders sent their representatives to Constantinople to bid for the contracts.—Boston Record.

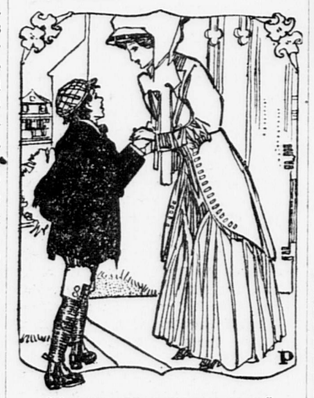
The Newsboy's Easter

SAY, fellers, now hear me, I say, an' jest fer once keep still—
I went ter meetin' yesterday, de church up on de hill.
I'd sold me Sunday papes all right, an' I had got me mon;
I didn't know jest what ter do, 'cause all me work wus done.
When I wus chasin' by de door I stopped ter hear dem sing;
A girl cum out—a girl wid curls—she smiled like anything.
"Me boy," she said, an' den she smiled; dat's what she said ter me.
Ye don't believe she talked like dat? Well, den, I fight, ye see.
She took me dirty han' in hers—don't seem's if dat could be—
"I'd like ter have ye come," she said, "an' take er seat wid me."
Jest t'ink o' dat, an' dere I wus; I'd left me stovepipe hat,
Me gloves at home, me swallertail, an' all de likes o' dat.
At first I couldn't speak at all; it took me breath away,
An' den I said I couldn't go, I'd come some other day,
'Cause how me modder might get scared if I stayed out too long—
I didn't wanter do, o' course, de t'ings I knowed wus wrong.
She knew dat I wus jollyin' her; I seen her laugh right out,
An' she got on me curves, she did—o' dat dere ain't no doubt.
"I'll tell ye what I'll do," said she—"I'll go wid ye," said she,



"I'D LIKE TER HAVE YER COME."

"An' ask yer modder right off now if ye can't go wid me."
Me jolly got me in a fix—me modder's dead, ye know.
I couldn't say anodder word—dat's how I cum ter go.
An' so I chased meself inside an' sat erdown wid her.
I never thought I'd do such things; I wouldn't but fer her.
Dat church it wus a dandy place, de like I'd never seen,
Wid pictures on de windys all—I don't know what dey mean,
'Cause men had crowns, an' chil'en, too, an' wimmen dey had wings,
Jest like de birds ye see out dere, an' odder funny t'ings.
'Tain't like de theater, ye know, fer all de show is free,
An' while dere wa'n't no dancin' dere, it kinder suited me.
De music, gee, ye never heard de likes o' dat—oh my!
So big an' solemn-like it wus it almost made me cry.
An' den de parson gent he talked; she said it wus his text.
He read it out er great big book—I wonderec what wus next.

DE PARSON GENT HE TALKED.

I can't remember all he said: 'twas somethin', though, like dis—
But I can't say it in his words, an' some, o' course, I'll miss—
"Ye let dem kids come unter Me" (I s'pect like me an' you),
"An' don't ye push dem back, 'cause, why, dat hain't right ter do, Fer such a place is heaven, see?" Dem words I know he said.
You'd like ter go? I rather guess ye can't unless yer dead.
An', whatcher t'ink, dat preacher gent—he talked as if he knew—
He said dat dere wus room enough fer kids like me an' you.
He said dey wanted all us kids—yes, wanted us—ter go.
I don't exactly understan' why dey should want us so,
'Cause how de rich dey don't get dere. Hain't dat a funny go?
I'll punch de kid dat says 'tain't true, 'cause she said 'twus so.
An' dat wa'n't all he said; but, den, I never heard no more.
I t'ink I must er fall asleep (I hopes I didn't snore).
I'm goin' ter church nex' Sunday, too; she asked me fer ter go,
An' if he tells where heaven is o' course I'll let ye know.

CURTIS, THE JOURNALIST.

Publisher of Story Telling How Senator Platt Lost a Cabinet Place.

William E. Curtis, the well known journalist who recently published in a Chicago paper a posthumous narrative by former Senator Thomas C. Platt of New York telling how Mr Platt aspired to be secretary of the treasury and failed, was born at Akron, O., on Nov. 5, 1850, the son of a Presbyterian clergyman. When about fourteen years of age he lived with his father in a small village in the center of New York. An old gentleman who held the office of village musician was at the same time the editor of an insignificant paper called the Home News. To pay for his music lessons W. E. Curtis went as a general help to this office, where he also learned typesetting. Two years later he entered college at Western Reserve, O. After the end of his freshman year his father told him that he had no more means to pay for his education, as his older brother had the first claim, and he must work until his brother had finished his studies.

Undismayed, he went to the Leader office at Cleveland to get a job at type-setting. The proprietor of this paper asked him to try his hand as a reporter, and he was there and then sent to report the women's suffrage convention. Soon he earned sufficient money to return to college and during vacation continued his work for the Leader and in this way paid for his education.

After graduating at Western Reserve college in 1871 he went to Erie, Pa., where he stayed five months, and from there moved to Toledo, where he remained six months, until May, 1872, when he received a call from the Chicago Inter Ocean, acting for two years as musical and dramatic critic and traveling correspondent. In 1875 he was sent to Washington as correspondent and remained there until 1880, when he was appointed managing editor and returned to Chicago to fill that position, which he resigned in 1884 to go to South America as a member of the commercial commission appointed by President Arthur.

During his fourteen months' stay there he reported to congress, which records are collected in two volumes. On his return to Washington he served as correspondent to the Chicago Inter Ocean until the 1st of November, 1886, when he accepted a more lucrative offer from the Chicago Daily News at the head of its Washington bureau.

Since 1887 he has been the special Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record and Record-Herald. He has filled many public offices and commissions, including that of director of the bureau of American republics at Washington for three years. He is the author of many books and lives in Washington.

According to the narrative which Mr. Platt gave to Mr. Curtis many years ago with the injunction that it be held in confidence until after the death of General Benjamin Harrison and Senator Platt, the latter was to get the cabinet place for delivering the New York delegation to Benjamin Harrison for president in the Republican national convention in 1888. Platt carried out his part of the deal, but Harrison after taking office failed to keep a pledge said to have been given by Senator Stephen B. Elkins of West Virginia, who has denied that Platt was entitled to the credit of swinging the New York delegation to Harrison or that he was promised a place in the cabinet.

Blanche Ring as a Hen.

An amusing satire on "Chantecler" is now a feature of "The Yankee Girl," Blanche Ring having introduced the other night, in the "Where's Mamma?" song in the second act at the Herald Square theater in New York, a burlesque of the feathered French comedy. Miss Ring appears as a dignified hen and Harry Gilfoil as a pompous rooster.

Flour In Bricks.

A new method of preserving flour has recently been adopted with success in England. It is done by means of compression. With hydraulic apparatus the flour is squeezed into the forms of bricks, and the pressure destroys all forms of larval life, thus preserving the flour from the ravages of insects, while it is equally secure from mold.

This holds true both for native born and foreign born. There were 18,456 native born, and 9,620 foreign born, nearly twice as many native born as foreign born. Of the native born, 9,265 were males and 9,191 females. Of the foreign born, 5,157 were males and 4,463 females.

The census showed 11 colored males and 11 colored feamles ,also 22 male Chinese. Al lthe balance were white.

A larger number of the residents were Quincy born than one naturally supposes, 10,332 out of the total of 28,076. They were very equally livided there being 5,186 males and 5,146 females.

Other Massachusetts towns were the birthplaces of 4,971, and 17,303 of the 28,076 were born in New England. Maine leads all the other outside states by a large margin. In the first column is the males, in the second females, and in the last columns the total:

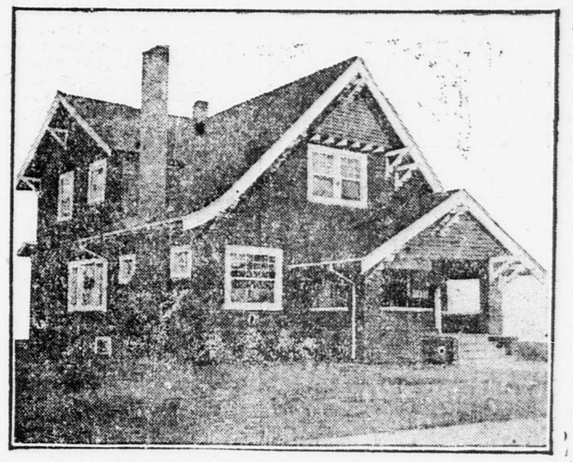
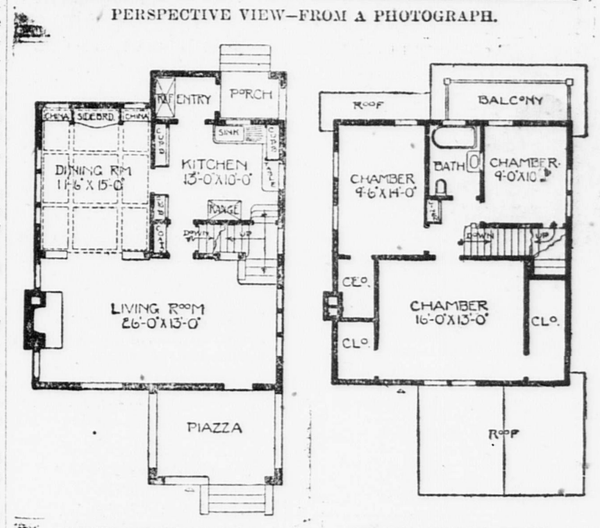
Popular Plan For a Cottage.

Design 859, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect.



PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN. SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

This plan for a story and a half cottage has proved popular. The exterior has a very homelike appearance, and the interior is as cozy as it could be made. There is a large living room across the entire front of the house. At one end is an open fireplace faced with large dull green tile, having a heavy molded shelf with large brackets. Above are two side lights. The dining room is a little beauty. It has a beamed ceiling, built in sideboard and paneled wainscoting with burlap panels. There is no undesirable pantry, but the kitchen is well fitted up with cupboards, molding table and flour bins. Kitchen finished in ivory white enamel, and the cupboard doors are of birch stained brown. Size 26 by 28 over the main part. The trim in first story is birch stained a soft brown. In the second story the casings are of pine enameled pure white, and the doors are of birch stained to represent mahogany. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $3,500.

By special arrangement with me the editor of this paper will furnish one complete set of plans and specifications of design No. 859 for $25.

NEW HOME DEDICATED

Boston Elks In Headquarters Which Cost Them Over $250,000

Boston, March 21.—The imposing new home of Boston lodge of Elks, on Somerset street, was dedicated Sunday afternoon with all the ceremonials that the ritual of that order provides for such occasions. More than 1000 members attended. The exercises begun at 5 o'clock.

Many public personages attended the exercises. The invitation list included Governor Draper, Mayor Fitzgerald, President Treadway of the Senate, Speaker Walker of the house and Senators Lodge and Crane.

After the ceremonies the members partook of a lunch in the banquet hall and inspected the new building. In the evening an entertainment was given by visiting theatrical artists.

The new home of the Boston lodge is inviting from threshold to roof. The property represents an investment of more than $250,000.

HUGE STRIKE IMPENDS

Settlement With New York Steamfitters Can Alone Prevent It

New York, March 21.—A general strike of all buildings trades employes of this city will be called on March 28, according to the announcement of Charles Wamp, secretary of the steam fitters' local union, unless settlement of the steam fitters' strike now on has been made before that date.

The vote to strike was taken at a conference of 25 delegates representing every building trade union in the city.

A steam fitters' strike has now been on more than three months. The men ask an increase in wages from $5 to $5.50 a day, as well as complete control over every branch of steam fitting.

CANNON STICKS TO SPEAKERSHIP

Wins Great Personal Triumph In Midst of Defeat

HE IS SHORN OF HIS POWER

Dropped From Rules Committee by Allied Forces of Democrats and Insurgent Republicans—Latter Balk at Move to Declare Speakership Vacant—Uncle Joe Defies Enemies to Proceed to Election of New Speaker

Washington, March 21.—Joseph Gurney Cannon of Danville., Ills., is still speaker of the house of representatives, but he lost the ancient prestige and weapon of that office when the allied Republican insurgents and Democrats took from him not only the chairmanship of, but even membership in, the all-powerfull committee on rules, the chief asset in his stock of power.

Amid scenes of wildest disorder, for the like of which one must go back to the exciting days just prior to the Civil war—perhaps even those times might not duplicate it—the veteran speaker, almost 74, stood erect and defiant, his head "bloodied but unbowed."

And at the end, when a big Texas Democrat accepted the speaker's daring challenge and introduced a resolution to fling him out of the speakership, the Republicans, regulars and insurgents, with few exceptions, rallied with almost unbroken party front and gave him a vote which almost offset the "repudiation of Cannonism."

By a vote of 191 to 155, the Republican insurgents voting solidly with the Democrats, the house adopted the resolution of Representative Norris, Republican, of Nebraska, requiring a reorganization of the rules of the mittee, increasing its membership from five to ten, and declaring the speaker ineligible to membership thereon.

By the curiously identical vote of 191 to 155—but with a decidedly different personnel—the house defeated a resolution of Representative Burleson of Texas, declaring the speakship vacant and ordering an immediate election of a successor to Cannon.

The Norris resolution which was adopted is as follows:

"There shall be a committee on rules, elected by the house (hitherto the committee of five, like all other house committtees, has been appointed by the speaker), consisting of ten members, six of whom shall be members of the majority party and four of whom shall be members of the minority party. The speaker shall not be a member of the committee, and the committee shall elect its own chairman from its own members.

"Resolved, further, That within ten days after the adoption of this resolution there shall be an election of this committee, and immediately upon its election the present committee on rules shall be dissolved."

Here is the resolution of Burleson, which was defeated:

"Resolved, That the office of speaker of the house of representatives is hereby declared to be vacant and the house of representatives shall at once proceed to the election of a speaker."

Speaker Cannon declined to comment upon the extraordinary events of the day. A newspaper man approached him in his office and asked what he had to say about his "victory."

"O, nothing at all, I guess. There isn't any comment for me to make. Besides, you will have your papers full anyway, and you don't need any comment from me."

"But hasn't the newly-elected speaker any announcement to make of his future policy?"

The speaker laughed. "I'll just keep on speaking and praying," he said.

The oldest man in congress makes no pretense of remembering any parallels for the sensational scenes which have characterized the past few days. There were no comments when it looked as though the preponderantly Republican house might even cap the climax by electing Champ Clark speaker.

In fact, not only was this actually proposed in a motion by Mr. Clark (Fla.), but Cannon himself, in his "defi" to the house, declared that his enemies should be consistent and proceed to the election of a Democratic speaker.

Indeed, it was this challenge to the house, daring as it was, which, instantly provoking the Burleson resolution for his dethronement, turned the tide again in his favor, and rallied the Republicans, regulars and insurgents, together with few exceptions to the point of what may well be termed a vote of confidence.

Through it all the aged speaker, invariably calm, stoical, consistent to the end, stood in his place, his gavel, with steady thumps upon his desk, punctuating the riotous confusion. Upon the conclusion of the vote which cast him out of his place of power at the head of the rules committee, he asked "the indulgence of the house for three minutes," and made a short speech in defense of his attitude, the history-making action closing with the singing by nearly all present "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Every one of the insurgents who refused to vote to depose the speaker after whipping him on the Norris bill is mad clean through over the speech of the speaker at the Illinois Republican association banquet Saturday night, when Cannon denounced them as "the cowardly members of congress without the courage of their convictions."

A motion to declare the speakership vacant is in order at any time in the house, and leading insurgents believe that the precedent for its use, established Saturday, may be invoked soon.

All factions admit that the three days' battle was but the commencement of a great political war, and even in the senate the fear of the insurgent conflagration spreading is expressed.

VOTE TO RETALIATE

Governor and President of Senate Criticised by Bay State Farmers

Worcester, Mass., March 21.—Criticism of Governor Draper, President Treadway of the senate, the railroad commission and the legislature in general was the feature of a meeting of 350 Worcester county farmers in this city to discuss the rates charged by the railroad companies for the transportation of the milk to the big centers, where it is handled by the contractors.

In retaliation for the alleged neglect of the farmers' interests for the advantage of the big contractors and the railroads, the meeting adopted a resolution pledging to vote against any state official who does not pledge himself to vote for legislation which will put the farmers on a more equitable footing with the contractors and railroads.

FRIENDS REFUSED TO HELP HIS FAMILY

Pittsburg Grafter Thereupon Decides to Make Confession

Pittsburg, March 21.—Almost on the very threshold of the state prison, which he was to enter today to serve a six-year sentence for bribery, ex-Councilman John F. Klein is reported to have made a complete confession of the bribery conspiracy of 1908, in which he implicates sixty or more present and former councilmen.

The confession is said to have been brought about by the failure of Klein's friends, whom he is alleged to have protected by his reticence, to come to the rescue of his family, whom he would leave penniless in entering prison.

Klein is said to have given the detectives a memorandum containing not only the names of the sixty councilmen but the amounts of graft money given them. Some of the councilmen, it is asserted, sold themselves for as little as $10.83, if the figures on the memorandum are correct.

LOWELL'S TENEMENT EVIL

Ten Thousand People Said to Live In Unsanitary Homes

Lowell, Mass., March 21.—Following the receipt of a detailed report from its inspector, William Connors, the Lowell board of health began a relentless war upon conditions prevailing in tenements in the congested sections of the city.

Inspector Connors reported that more than 10,000 persons are living in unsanitary conditions within a space of 300 square yards in the Greek section.

Robert G. Bartlett, a Boston and Maine appraiser, who owns twenty of the tenements, was served with formal notice that extensive alterations must be made within thirty days or the health board will order all the building closed.

CORRUPTION IS REVEALED

Insurance Inquiry Opens Up New Scandals at Albany

NOTED MEN ARE DRAGGED IN

One "High-Priced" Firm of Lawyers Received $17,500 For Work In Connection With Legislation Pending In 1895—"Present" of $1000 to Republican Leader—Some Very Interesting Testimony Is Submitted

New York, March 21.—Mercilessly hurling question after question at reluctant witnesses, and reading to them in rapid succession letters and telegrams that told in unmistakable terms of the activity of fire insurance companies in influencing legislation at Albany, William H. Hotchkiss, state superintendent of insurance, and his attorney, Alfred Hurrell, forced startling revelations at the fire insurance inquiry.

It was shown that large sums of money had been raised to procure or thwart legislation between 1901 to 1906. These payments, the majority of which were to law firms, ranged from $700 to $17,500.

The three largest payments were of $17,500 to the law firm of Sherman & Sterling in 1905 for work at Albany in connection with legislation then pending, of $15,000 in 1906 for the same purpose, and of $8311 to Elijah B. Kennedy, member of the insurance firm of Weed & Kennedy. It was this latter payment that came out when Kennedy's bill to the New York board of underwriters for $18,311 was produced.

The witnesses examined were Kennedy, Charles L. Case, former chairman of the committee on laws and legislation of the board of underwriters, and William N. Kremer, of the German-American Fire Insurance company, who was vice chairman of the committee on laws and legislation of the board from 1900 to 1907, and chairman in 1907 and 1908.

Timothy L. Woodruff, now chairman of the Republican state committee, the late Senator Raines, Representative Malby, and former Assemblyman Riordon of New York, were among those mentioned in the testimony.

Mr. Woodruff, at that time lieutenant governor, wrote a letter in 1901, testified Kennedy, telling him that the insurance tax bill which the companies were opposing would not be pressed. Malby, then a state senator, evidenced a kindly interest in the bills, as shown by letters to Kennedy, an old friend of his. Raines was amicably disposed toward Kennedy in his efforts to defeat undesirable legislation.

As for Riordan, Kennedy said he came to him with such a show of interest that he, Kennedy, became aroused, "like chain lightning," and cut short the interview, refusing as a representative affected to discuss pending legislation with a member of the legislature.

One interesting statement made by Kennedy was that he had given a "present" of $1000 to George W. Aldridge, Republican leader of Monroe county.

This item was part of the $5000 officially disallowed by the underwriters, but later reimbursed to Kennedy by assessments levied on the insurance companies individually.

Every effort to force Kennedy to tell who received the remainder of the $5000 was futile.

It was through the testimony of Case that the payments of $17,500 and $15,000 to Sherman & Sterling were brought out. When vouchers for these payments were submitted, Case said frankly that they were correct, but when it came to telling the exact nature of the services rendered he was vague. Sherman & Sterling, he said, were a "high priced firm," and the work entailed on them as counsel demanded laborious research and many trips to Albany to argue before committees, interview legislators, and keep in touch with the situation.

Mr. Kremer's memory regarding the reimbursement of Kennedy was very vague. Beyond admitting that his company had paid $375 toward such a fund, he could tell little.

Mr. Case testified that Reuben L. Fox, now dead, the secretary of the Republican state committee, had been paid an annual retainer of $450 for years for keeping the insurance men advised of the progress of legislation.

Paulhan Wins His Case

New York, March 21.—Edwin Cleary, manager of Louis Paulhan, the French aviator, lost in his efforts to prevent Paulhan from taking his machines away from the track, and also in his efforts to obtain from the supreme court an order for the aviator's arrest. Justice Newburger rendered the two decisions.

Coal Sheds Burn

Foxboro, Mass., March 21.—Fire broke out about midnight in coal sheds containing about 700 tons of coal and 600 tons of hay, property of the Foxboro Coal company. The loss is about $13,000. The fire is believed to have been incendiary.

THE SUFFRAGETTE.

An Event That Took Away Her Interest in the Cause.

By KATHLEEN J. M'CURDY.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

She was standing on the curb selling pamphlets, while beside her a box was used to display a large handbill on which was printed "Votes For Women!" If it be asserted that only the angular old maids or fat married women are to be found in the ranks of the suffragettes this young lady proved the contrary. She was very pretty.

At any rate, Peter Thompson stopped to look at her and by way of an excuse to speak to her bought a pamphlet.

"Read it," she said, "and you will be with us."

"I'm with you already," Thompson replied.

"Then help us."

"I meant that I was with you personally."

At this the girl looked a trifle displeased.

"There are certain qualities," Thompson added, "that are required in those who are given citizenship. One of these"—

"I am quite sure women possess those qualities," snapped the girl.

"What qualities?"

"Those to which you refer."

"I haven't yet named them."

"Well, do so."

"Women are not good listeners."

"I deny the fact."

By this time several people had stopped to listen, and Thompson, not caring to amuse a crowd, passed on. He had no opinions as to whether women are entitled to the suffrage or not. The subject did not interest him. But one thing did interest him very much—the pretty suffragette. He was a philosophic chap, always looking for reasons for things, and a problem occupied his thoughts from the moment he saw the suffragette—namely, what there was about her that caused her to remain a fixture in his mind.

While Thompson was walking along, thinking about the suffragette and why she had lodged herself within that combination of matter and forces which he considered himself to be and to which had been given the name of Thompson, he passed a woman wheeling a baby carriage. A little boy aged about fifteen months sitting in the carriage looked up at him and smiled. Thompson was fond of children. He put out his hand, which was clutched by the tiny pink tipped fingers, the boy's eyes being fixed on Thompson as though he had found his first and best friend.

"What a beautiful boy!" he exclaimed.

The mother looked happy, as mothers do when they hear their children praised.

A sudden idea struck the philosopher.

"Madam," pursued Thompson musingly, his eyes still on the boy, who continued to clutch his hand, "I wish the loan of your child for awhile. I will pay you a big interest."

The mother looked surprised.

To shorten the story, Thompson bargained with the woman that she should wheel her boy up in front of his suffragette, ask her to watch him while she went into a store, then disappear, not to return. Thompson agreed that no harm should come to the child, that he should not be lost to his mother and when returned the borrower would put a snug sum in a savings bank to start a fund for the boy's benefit. The terms were accepted, the child was left with the suffragette, who agreed to look after him, the mother disappeared, and Thompson surveyed the scene from a distance.

An hour passed, during the latter part of which the suffragette was evidently wondering what had become of the mother. The child at last began to cry, and the suffragette tried to soothe him. Then Thompson left his point of observation and, approaching the suffragette, remarked what a pretty boy she had with her. This led her to tell him that she feared the mother had left the boy and did not intend to return.

"You can put him in a foundling home," suggested Thompson.

"I shall do no such thing!" replied the girl, firing up. "Poor, dear little fellow! Mamma will come back soon, precious! Don't cry any more. That's a dear."

"If his mother doesn't return," said Thompson, "I don't see but you'll have to take him home with you."

"I will," said the girl as Thompson walked away.

Another hour passed, during which the suffragette neglected to sell pamphlets, devoting herself to the child. Thompson after awhile returned and, expressing surprise that the woman had not come back, told the girl that if she would take the boy home with her he would do the work of hunting for the mother.

She accepted the proposition, and he walked beside her, carrying her unsold pamphlets and her poster, while she wheeled the child. On arriving at her home he found that she belonged to an eminently respectable family, everything about the house bespeaking refinement of the occupants. She told him that she worked with the suffragettes simply because her heart was in their cause, "and," she added, "it gives me something to interest myself in so that I'm not dependant upon balls, parties and dress to occupy my mind." She asked Thompson to come in. He said he hadn't time just then, but would call just as soon as he had secured any information concerning the child and would keep her advised of his efforts to find his mother.

"I suppose," he said, "I shall see you every day at your accustomed place selling pamphlets."

"Certainly," she replied. "I shall not neglect my work."

But when Thompson passed her stand again and again the next day he saw nothing of her. He reported the present home of the child to the mother and left a check for a substantial amount with her as earnest of his honest intentions. Then he went to call on the suffragette to tell her that he had learned nothing as to the identity of the mother since the desertion of the child, which was perfectly true.

Miss Edith Coleman, the suffragette, did not seem to worry much over his ill success. She told Thompson that the boy was the dearest little fellow in the world, and she was in no hurry to part with him. Thompson remarked that it was unfortunate that she should be kept away from her legitimate work, to which she replied that administering to a child whose inhuman mother had left him was just as important as the cause of votes for women. Thompson looked surprised, but said nothing.

The next day, however, he called and said that his sister had offered to take charge of the deserted boy in order that Miss Coleman might pursue her greater work.

"Please tell your sister to mind her own bus—I mean that the precious darling has fallen to me, and I shall keep him till he is claimed by his own kin."

Then Thompson went to the headquarters of the suffragettes and by diplomacy sequred the sending of a note to Miss Coleman assigning her a very important duty that would take up all her time for a week. He called at the headquarters the next day and learned that Miss Coleman had peremptorily declined to serve.

Thompson continued reporting no progress, meanwhile keeping the foundling's mother content by an occasional check. Miss Coleman appeared more and more pleased at his coming and always had the child beautifully dressed and his hair curled when he came. One day Thompson announced that he had found a clew to the identity of the child's mother. Miss Coleman turned pale.

"You will now be able to return to your valuable work in securing votes for women."

"I don't wish to return to that work, and I don't know if I shall give my precious up any way."

"But supposing that his mother claims him. You wouldn't refuse to restore him to his natural parent, would you?"

"You mean his unnatural parent."

"The law would compel you."

"I would contest the case."

"And you really feel that to give him up would be a privation."

"I couldn't endure it."

"Well, then, I suppose for your sake I'd better not try to find his mother."

"Don't!"

"I'm sorry I wasn't aware before how attached you have become to the child. I know who his mother is, and I suppose it is my duty to inform her that you have her boy."

Miss Coleman looked aghast. "Is there any way," she asked, "by which I can keep him in spite of her?"

"Would that be justice?"

"Justice! Humbug! What do I care about justice if it takes my darling from me?"

Thompson burst into a laugh.

"What are you laughing at?" she asked, irritated.

"You remember that I demonstrated that there were faculties you did not possess which I consider important for citizenship."

"Well, what's that got to do with it?"

"And now you have confessed a third. You care nothing for justice."

"That's a man's view of it."

"To tell the truth, I don't think that you are fitted for a reformer. There is another field in which you can confer more benefit on mankind."

"What's that?"

"You would make a splendid wife and mother."

He was looking straight into her eyes when he said this, and she knew what he meant. She waited for what was to come.

Then he told her the whole story. When he had finished it was agreed that the child's mother should come for him. The ex-suffragette was still loath to part with her boy, but his place was partly supplied by another. She was engaged to marry Thompson.

COLEMAN WON'T SUFFER ALONE

Bank Clerk Says Others Must Go to Prison With Him

BLED BY FAKE FARO GANG

Will Tell Whole Story of How They Swindled Him Out of $180,000—Says He Never Engaged Cronin as Attorney and Never Knew Him—Appears to Be Still Hopeful of Making Restitution to Bank

Boston, March 21.—The Post says: George W. Coleman, the youthful Cambridge bank clerk, in an exclusive interview to The Post last night, declared that he had been swindled out of $180,000 by the gang of fake faro men.

He named two men, "Big Bill" Keliher and a man whom Coleman knew as "Jake." He realizes, apparently, that he will undoubtedly go to jail, but he promises that others will go with him.

"Before I go to prison I will tell such an amazing story of this whole affair that some one will go along with me," said Coleman. "I am not prepared at this time to go into detail, but when I tell what I know more than one person's hair will stand on its edges," he declared.

Another remarkable statement that Coleman made to The Post reporter was that he never met Attorney John J. Cronin until he stepped off a train at the Back Bay station and was placed under arrest.

"That is one of the things that has puzzled me more than anything else," was Coleman's reply when asked how he came to engage Cronin as his lawyer. "I don't recall that he was ever engaged by me as my attorney and I can't find anyone that requested that he act as counsel for me."

"The best proof in the world that he was not my attorney is that I never paid him, and just as soon as I could get an attorney I engaged Mr. Winslow."

Coleman's story came only in fragments. He laughed and chatted like a big, good-natured boy and only answered the questions put to him after he had given each a great deal of thought. Time and again the reporter put the same interrogations to him several times before he made an answer.

Coleman seems to be dominated by some force which holds out some lingering hope that he will be able to give to the bank the money that he lost in faro. In the middle of his chat about things in common that he and the reporter had together, he would break into the subject of the interview and let out as if he was going to lay bare the whole story, but before he had spoken three sentences a significant smile would cross his countenance and he would stop.

INTERNES TO ASK GAYNOR TO DINNER

Expect Better Diet If Mayor Samples It and Lives

New York, March 19.—The large corps of internes and about 100 nurses at Bellevue hospital threaten to leave that institution because of the poor food they charge is served to them.

After several recent indignation meetings a committee was appointed to bring the matter before Mayor Gaynor. Goat's meat, in the guise of mutton, stale vegetables and staler fish are some of the things to which the doctors say they object.

The present illness of several of the resident physicians at the hospital is credited to the poor food.

Mayor Gaynor will be asked by a committee of the internes to dine with them at noon some day during next week. They are willing to guarantee that he will be sick for a week and unable to digest anything for two more.

"We have no designs on the mayor's life," said one of the internes, "but of course we know that his existence will be endangered. We will all be ready with first aid to the injured principles if he accepts. We will also have the operating room ready to receive him."

Haskell Is Exonerated

Guthrie, Okla., March 19.—Governor Haskell was exonerated of the charges of misappropriating and mismanagement of state funds, in a report filed in the legislature here by the house committee.

Torches to Help Catch Speeders

Belleville, N. J., March 19.—Policemen of the town are to have electric torches to take numbers of autos going too fast. The chief of police explains that it is impossible to get the numbers without lights.

Five Hundred Houses Burn

Yokohama, March 19.—Five hundred Japanese houses were destroyed by fire here. Seven lives were lost in the conflagration.

TO HELP CHECK REVOLT

Yankee Cruiser Ordered to Liberia at Request of Her Government

Washington, March 19.—The United States cruiser Birmingham, Captain Fletcher, has been ordered to Monrovia, Liberia, on the northwest coast of Africa.

This action was taken upon the urgent request of the government of Liberia, which has represented to the state department that it is powerless to hold in check the tribes now in revolt against it.

It appears that the Greboes, a powerful people inhabiting the adjoining French territory to the southeast of Liberia, have rebelled against the Liberian government, and are besieging the town of Harper, at Cape Palmas, where there are considerable American missionary interests.

The object of the insurrection seems to be to force the Liberian government to purchase peace.

HISGEN TO CALL ON TAFT

Says Standard Company Is Supplying Oil to United States Armory

Springfield, Mass., March 19.—Thomas L. Hisgen of the Four Brothers Oil company and former candidate of the Independence party for President of the United States, is going to see President Taft about his suit to prove that the Texas company which supplies oil to the United States armory here is part of the Standard Oil company.

Hisgen has retained Frank B. Kellogg, who was lawyer for the government in its suit against the Standard, to prosecute this suit against the Texas company. Special counsel for the state of Mississippi, where a suit against the Standard is pending, has written Hisgen telling him the Texas concern is part of the Standard.

DOES NOT REMEMBER SECOND MARRIAGE

St. Louis Man Says "Sub Conscious Self" Was In Control

St. Louis, March 19.—Pleading that his "sub conscious self" was in control and that his real self was unaware of his act, Charles R. Drummond, member of a St. Louis millionaire family, declared on oath that he had no remembrance of his second marriage, which took place at Clayton Jan. 25, 1910, just four weeks after his first wife had obtained a divorce there.

Charlotte J. Bente, a preacher's daughter, was the bride in the midnight ceremony of which Drummond declares he has no recollection.

Drummond's statement was made in his testimony against his first wife, whom he accused of contempt of court in refusing to permit him to visit their three children.

"I was under this sub conscious control from the morning of Jan. 23 till Jan. 27," he testified.

Drummond's attorneys announce that several alienists will be called to testify to the plausibility of their client's plea.

STORY OF THE DELUGE

Written 2100 B. C. on Fragment of Tablet Unearthed at Nippur

Philadelphia, March 19.—The discovery of a fragment of a cuneiform tablet, believed to be of the period 2100 B. C., bearing an account of the deluge described in the Bible and agreeing with the narrative in Genesis, was reported here by Professor H. V. Hilprecht at a gathering of friends of the university of Pennsylvania at the home of Provost Harrison.

This fragment, which has just been deciphered, was one of those excavated from the lowest strata of the oldest part of the ruins of the Temple Library of Nippur, and was brought to this city by four expeditions sent out by the university of Pennsylvania in 1899. It is of unbaked clay and measures 2 3-4 inches at its greatest width, and 2 3-8 inches at its greatest length.

Rasmussen to Study Eskimos

Copenhagen, March 19.—Knud Rasmussen, the Danish explorer, is preparing a new ethnographical expedition to Arctic regions. Its chief aim will be to study the Eskimo population.

WAGE INCREASE GRANTED

Other Concessions to Switchmen by Illinois State Board of Arbitration

Chicago, March 19.—An increase in wages of 2 cents an hour, allowance of time and a half for all overtime and a hearing within three days when threatened with dismissal, were granted the switchmen in the railroad yards of Chicago by the Illinois state board of arbitration.

About 4000 members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen are affected.

Another Harmon Reform

Columbus, O., March 19.—Governor Harmon sent a special message to the legislature recommending a law against lobbying. He recommends a law be passed licensing those who appear before the general assembly with regard to legislation with a provision for foreclosure of this right for misconduct.

EASTER DECORATIONS

A Stunning Luncheon Table In Green and Violet.

WHITE BREAKFAST MOTIF.

An Easter Dinner Menu, Including Dainty Viands That Carry Out the Color Scheme In Every Course—Meal Not Difficult to Prepare.

Violets and lilies of the valley would constitute an exceptionally happy combination for an Easter table decoration, as was demonstrated by a hostess last year, says Table Talk.

The occasion was an Easter Monday luncheon. In the center of the table on a handsome art square of Mexican drawn work was a jardiniere of green pottery. In this stood a tall green jar of the same material. In the jar was a large bunch of lilies of the valley and their foliage loosely arranged. The space between the jar and the outer rim of the jardiniere was filled with bouquets of violets such as one sees in florists' windows. A violet ribbon was attached to each bouquet and led to a guest's plate, where it ended in a few sprays of the lilies. The base of the jardiniere was wreathed with asparagus fern, which trailed gracefully out over the cloth.

White tulips were most satisfactorily employed for the floral decorative motif at a white breakfast given Easter week.

The table was covered with a breakfast cloth of satin damask. In the center was a round, shallow box of moist sand on a mat of fern fronds. In this white tulips were arranged to simulate a bed of the blossoms. The sides and edge of the box were completely hidden by the mass of green forming the mat. The favors were tiny white tulip flowerpots of papier mache.

Boston, March 21.—Police Sergeant James Laffey was brutally kicked and beaten by a crowd of men who attempted to resuce a prisoner from the police officer on the Broadway extension bridge shortly after midnight.

MONEY RAISED AMONG MEMBERS

Quincy Yacht Club Enjoying Season of Prosperity

The committee in charge of the selling bonds of the Quincy Yacht club which will enable them to liquidate all indebtedness and build the large addition outlined in Saturday's Ledger, have succeeded in having bonds to the amount of $10,000 subscribed among the members of the club which will enable the club to do all contemplated.

The club has challenged the Boston club for a series of races for the Quincy Yacht club challenge cup which was lost last summer to Ellen of the Boston Yacht club. The races will probably be raced off Hull. The challenging yacht is the new sonder boat being by ex-Commodore Charles G. Adams 2d, as yet unnamed. Commodore Robbins and other officers of the club have great faith that Charlie Adams will be able to secure the return of the cup to Quincy this year.

Work on the addition to the clubhouse has already commenced, and it is expected that it will be completed by the opening of the season.

German Swordsman After Americans.

Fritz Flesch of Vienna, the champion swordsman of Austria and Germany, is in New York preparing to gain new laurels in this country. He says he is willing to meet any American fencer and will issue challenges shortly.

NEW ENGLAND PROSPEROUS

A Few of the Many Reasons Why we Rejoice

New England people should boom New England. What the Boston Globe says below is very true:

BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS

the metropolis of New England is the center of the most populous and prosperous community in the new world, with the sole exception of New York. Philadelphia and Chicago are excelled, and the rest of the cities distanced.

More people live within 50 miles of Boston than within equal distance of any other city except New York.

This great population has the best transit facilities ,steam and electric of any city, excepting none.

This is the wealthiest and, therefore, the best purchasing community in America. The per capita wealth here exceeds that of any other people. The per capita for Boston is $2,150, and for New York it is $630 less.

Our wage earners, by reason of their superior skill and the organization of our industries, have an average earning power greater by 80 percent than that of the wage earners of the country at large.

The savings of our people are the greatest, man for man ,the world ever saw. One-fifth of the savings of the American people are in our savings and cooperative banks.

We lead the country in the manufacture of leather and of boots and shoes.

We stand at the head of the cotton manufacturing industries of the nation, and great mills are in process of construction all the time.

We are first in the manufacture of wool and worsteds. Boston is the largest wool market in America.

While our population has been increasing 7 percent. our manufactured products have increased 23 percent.

AT QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS.

A great and enterprising shipbuilding company has just won a naval contract from Argentia against the competition of Europe, a contract which will bring millions of dollars into New England.

Our summer resort business brings us more than $60,000,000 a year, whereas all the silver mines of the country produced only $28,000,000 last year, and even the gold mines of all the states and Alaska yielded but $90,000,000.

Keep these facts before you and tell them to the pessimists!

There never was a time in which New England was a better place to live, work and do business in than now.

GRANITE CITY CLUB.

The annual banquet and entertainment of the Granite City club will be held at Colonial hall Wednesday evening, April 13. The banquet will be served at 7 o'clock by C. C. Whittemore, music during the banquet being furnished by Morris orchestra of Milton. The entertainment which will follow immediately after the banquet will be furnished by Chick Fox, of the Cadet theatrical fame. Mr. Fox is too well known to Quincy audiences to need an extended introdnction, and it is safe to say that his program will be one that will please.

The Spit Snake.

There is a snake belonging to the small family causidae, inhabiting Africa, that is said to have the power of ejecting its venom to a short distance This snake is called by the Dutch Boers "spuw slang," or spit snake When this snake erects its teeth the pressure of the maxillary bone on the gland causes the venom to flow in drops, and it may be quite possible that by discharging air from its mouth the poison may be blown some distance.

The Gypsies.

The origin of the people known as gypsies remains largely a mystery Egypt, India, Persia and Arabia have in turn been pointed out as their original country, but there is little definite knowledge on the subject. The weight of evidence is in favor of their having originated in India. They first appeared in Europe about 1400 and from the Danube region spread all over the continent, appearing in England about 1520.

MIDNIGHT SESSION OF CITY COUNCIL

Long Debate on Saturday Half Holiday Report----Adverse Report is Voted Down 10 to 12.

Efforts to Amend Appropriation Order All Unsuccessful.

For nearly five hours Monday night the City Council wrangled and debated. The greater part of the time was taken up by Councilman McDevitt in questioning the various department heads and in a discussion of the order providing for a half holiday for city employees and mechanics during the months of June, July and August.

The latter order brought out a spirited debate. It was evident that the Council were in favor of half holidays, but were not in favor of giving every man employed a half holiday. Councilman Bryant was in the chair when the final vote came. His rulings were appealed from several times, but in every case the Council sustained him, and when at last an adjournment was made, some of the members had considerable doubts where they were at.

Every member of the Council was present and every man remained until adjournment.

At the opening Councilman-elect Woodward was sworn in by the City Solicitor.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing Henry O. Fairbanks city clerk pro tem, until 9 A. M. March 22.

A venire was received for the drawing of one grand juror. The Mayor, the acting City Clerk and Councilman Clark drew the name of Samuel Oxford.

ASSISTANT ASSESSORS.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing the following assistant assessors:—James P. Dunn, Henry W. Mullane, Leo J. McMaster, Edward T. Monahan, John T. Cain, Eben Stocker.

NO SPITTING.

A communication was received from the Mayor with inclosure from the Board of Health stating that the expense of five hundred "no spitting" signs in public places in the city would cost $200, and an appropriation of that amount is asked to carry out the wishes of the City Council. Referred to Committee on Health.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing L. S. Anderson a public weigher. Confirmed.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Land Owners committee of the State asking the Council to pass the accompanying resolutions relative to petitioning the legislature to take such action as shall definitely establish a policy of the electrification of all railroads in the Metropolitan district, and that a committee of the Council be apointed to appear before the Legislature and urge the carrying out of the purposes of the resolution. Placed on file.

A communication was received from the Railroad Commissioners giving notice of a hearing March 22, on the petition of residents of Houghs Neck for improved street car service. Placed on file.

WATER LOAN BONDS.

A communication was received from the Mayor with inclosure from the City Treasurer stating that he had found it impossible to sell the $30,000 water loan bonds for 3 1-2 per cent. Laid on the table until later when an order was offered changing to four per cent which was adopted.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing Dennis J. Ford a member of the board of Registrars of Voters. Confirmed.

HOUGHS NECK SCHOOLHOUSE.

A communication was received from the Mayor asking for a transfer of $1,000 from the appropriation for furnishings of the Houghs Neck school to the appropriation for the erection of that school. Laid on the table until later when Councilman Whiton offered two orders. One transferring $1,000 from the appropriations for furnishings to the appropriation for the buildings, and second an order appropriating $2,000 additional for the buildings. Both were referred to the Finance Committee.

BILLINGS STREET TURNOUT.

At 7.45 o'clock a public hearing was held on the petition of the street railway for a turnout on Billings street. Mr. Conway, John R. Nelson, Mr. Carlson and Mr. Cocetter appeared in favor. Their argument was that under the present conditions it was impossible to run half hour cars and that during the summer months half hour time was necessary to accommodate the public.

Ex-Representative R. .P Coombs, Harry W. Read, Mr. Moore, and Mr. Richards opposed. They claimed that the street was too narrow. That in summer time the crowds that came from Squantum would annoy the residents on Billings street by their noise. They thought that the turnout should be on Squantum street.

Councilman Cherrington read letters from two residents objecting. The hearing then closed and the order was recommitted.

PETITIONS.

The Telephone company petitioned for attachments on Squantum and Clark streets. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received asking the city to take Butler's pond for public purposes. Referred to Committee on Public Buildings.

A petition was received from the Citizens Gas Co., for permission to lay mains on Atlantic, Clay, Willard, Brook, Mechanic streets, North Central avenue and Revere road. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received signed by a large number of citizens asking the City Council to limit the number of permits to transport Liquor to twelve expressmen. Referred to Committee on Licenses.

A petition was received for the acceptance of Plymouth street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received protesting against the turnout on Billings street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received for the acceptance of Lawry street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received that Penn street should not be watered this year. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A number of applicants were received for minor Licenses. One of these was for a license for a wrestling exhibition by Martin Rock. Later this was granted.

The President referred various parts of the Mayor's inaugural to appropriate committees.

REPORT OF COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Licenses reported an order approving of the certificate of incorporation of the Montclair Improvement association. Adopted.

The Committee on Sewers reported an order appropriating $40,000 for the building of main and lateral sewers. To Finance Committee.

The Committee on Water reported an amendment to the order appropriating $45,000 for the purchase and installation of water meters, making the amount $48,000. To Finance Committee.

The Committee on Sewers reported ought to pass on the order transferring the receipts from sewer house connections to an appropriation for that purpose. To Finance Committee.

SCHOOL MATTERS.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported as follows on school matters.

An order appropriating $792 for eleven hundred chairs for the schools. To Finance Committee.

An order appropriating $6,000 for the installation of a heating and ventilating system in the John Hancock school. To Finance Committee.

An order appropriating $350 for the installation of drinking fountains in the public school buildings. To Finance Committee.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported inexpedient to legislate on teh communication from the School Committee relative to telephones in the double school districts.

The Committee on Public buildings reported inexpedient to legislate on the matter of the purchase of the Griffith lot for an addition to the John Hancock school lot.

An order appropriating $204 for an iron fence about the Washington school lot. To Finance Committee.

PUBLIC RECORDS.

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting the Electric Light Co. a location for poles on Merrymount road. Ordered to a second reading.

POLICE AUTO.

The Committee on Police reported a substitute order for the order appropriating $4,000 for a police patrol and ambulance automobile, making the amount $3,500. Referred to Finance Committee.

ABATEMENT OF TAXES.

The Finance Committee reported an order for $3,000 for abating taxes of the year 1908 and 1909, the same to be taken from the Excess and Deficiency Fund.

ANNUAL APPROPRIATIONS.

The Finance Committee reported the annual appropriation order for 1910 which will be found printed in full elsewhere.

Councilman McDevitt moved to amend by changing the figures $31,000 for street lighting to $29,000. He claimed that this amount was aimed at the Gas company. He quoted figures showing what the company charged the Metropolitan commission for gas on the boulevard and what was charged Quincy. The announcement of a dividend was a bluff, so that they could make a slight reduction in Quincy. His claim was that the city was paying more for its gas lights then the Metropolitan Commission was for lights on the boulevard. His motion to amend was lost, 2 voting yes and 16 no.

Councilman Nowland moved to amend by making the amount for Highways, horses etc., $23,000 instead of $25,000. He claimed that it cost the city $8.67 per week for each horse at the City stables and that horses could be boarded at other stables for $6.30 per week. The amendment was lost.

In reply to a question the Mayor stated that the $31,000 for street lighting was for all night lighting.

Councilman McDevitt then asked that various heads of department appear before the Council to answer questions. At his request the Chief Engineer, Overseer of the Poor, Chief of Police, City Solicitor, Tax Collector, Chairman Miller of the School department, the chairman of the Assessors, and the secretary of the Board of Health were questioned at length. The main point of his questioning was on the advertising for bids for the supplies needed.

During the questioning Councilman Whiton was called to the chair.

Several times members raised points of order that the Councilman was not in order, but he was allowed to proceed and for three quarters of an hour he asked questions.

Councilman McDevitt then moved to strike out the figures $25,000 for highways and insert the figures $29,000. Motion lost. The order was then ordered to a second reading.

HALF HOLIDAYS.

The Finance Committee reported ought not to pass on the order providing for half holidays for city laborers.

A minority report signed by Councilmen Smith, Richards and Carey was presented, that the order ought to pass.

Councilman Smith moved the substitution of the minority for the majority report.

In support of this motion he said, in view of the Finance committee being so evenly divided an explanation was necessary. The law allows us to pass such order. The half holiday is universally prevalent. In Quincy every branch of industry grants a half holiday. This shows that it is a necessity. Various manufacturing industries have adopted it. The employees at City Hall have a half holiday. These clerks get two weeks vacation and a haf holiday. The firemen get 60 days a year and the police 26 days. The half holiday for the city laborers will mean $12 for each laborer. Money can be saved by abolishing the half holiday for the clerks, police and firemen. Tax payers with whom he had discussed the matter were in favor of it.

Councilman McDevitt said we may as well face this question squarely. He was going to have a fair stand up fight on this question. His colleague from Ward Four had covered the ground thoroughly. Lynn, Taunton, Lowell, and Brockton have the half holiday. The men in these places could not compare with Quincy laborers physically.

Councilman Whiton said he was in favor of a half holiday for the regular men but not in favor of giving in to a crowd who work but a short time. The police and firemen were no comparison. In the manufacturing places the men make up their half holiday but in the city they can not work over eight hours. He did not think it right to give temporary laborers a half holiday. He would favor an amendment so that men in the employ of the city May 1, would have the half holiday.

In reply to a question by Councilman Snow, as to how many men were employed last year that were not residents, the Commissioner said about one hundred. That was an unusual number, as it was on a rush job at Squantum, and they were used for two months as he could not get Quincy men. He could not tell what proportion of his men would be at work May 1, but thought about half.

Councilman Flynn favored minority report. Councilman Smith has gone over it thoroughly. In Quincy there are men who have been employed by the city for thirty years. The time has come when faithful service should get something. He believed in recognizing merit. We would get more work by giving a half holiday.

In reply to a question by Councilman Nowland, if he had any difficulty in getting all the men he wanted, the Commissioner replied no, with the exception of last year at Squantum. He had about twenty men who had been in the employ of the city for ten years.

Continuing Councilman Nowland said he was opposed to the order. He did not want to establish a precedent. No laborer gets pay for a half holiday. He makes it up in working more hours. It does not follow because the people in City Hall get a half holiday that those outside should.

Councilman Gardner opposed the minority report. It simply means that

THIRD TERM FOR SENATOR HULTMAN

Because Quincy and Milton Are Anxious to Get Out of South Boston Congressional District

Plans are already under way in Quincy, says Practical Politics, to break away from its associates in the present 10th congressional district in the decennial redistricting which is to be done by the legislature of 1911 to take effect in the elections of 1912 and Sen. Eugen C. Hultman is the instrument through which it proposes to act. It has been generally understood in the district that Sen. Hultman would be succeeded by ex-Rep. George L. Barnes of Weymouth next year. Mr. Barnes was in the house in 1904, '05 and '06, and has been waiting since the lattey year for his turn to come to go to the upper branch.

Ex-Rep. Barnes' turn would come next fall without any question had not Quincy just awakened to the fact that the legislature of next year will redistrict the state into congressional districts. Quincy wants not only to get into a new district, but it wants to get into a republican district. Quincy, although always staunchly republican in state and national affairs, has been shut off from any opportunity for representation in the national congress for 20 years. Since the redistricting of 1892 Quincy has been tied up with the Boston wards and Milton in the 10th congressional district and republican Quincy has been the tail wagged at pleasure by the Boston dog in congressional affairs.

Massachusetts seems assured of an additional representative in congress by next year's apportionment. In the apportionment of 1881 her representation was increased from 11 to 12, in 1891 from 12 to 13 and in 1901 from 13 to 14. Her population in the decennial census of 1900 upon which the last apportionment was based by congress was 2,805,346. In the state census of 1895 it had increased to 3,003,680. The increase in those five years practically assures that a sufficient increase will be shown by the United States decennial census ofthis year to assure her an additional representative in congress. A special committee of the legislature will do the redistricting and Quincy naturally wants to be represented on that committee by her senator. It is also important that her representative on that com-

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

There's neither put up nor shut up about the corporation tax.

They're paying more for hogs in Chicago now than they do for votes on election day.

The innocent bystander, as usual, is furnishing most of the funerals in the Pennsylvania riots.

Dr. Cook is reported as believing that an Arctic frost has spread all over the earth so far as he is concerned.

After all the portraits the magazines have published of F. H. Hitchcock his stand on second-class rates seems a little unappreciative.

The Sugar Trust people seem to think it is good policy to put every possible obstacle in the way of getting at the facts. Are not the people losing patience with self-confessed corruptionists who burn or hide their accounts and correspondence?

DRIFT OF OPINION.

Three teachers in the St. Johnsbury public schools have taught more than seventy terms of school there, while another teacher has served the public fifty terms. It would be interesting information to place along with this statement of long, and presumably efficient, service just how much was the proportion of increase in salaries as the teachers progressed in experience and capability to teach young children up to, of course, that stage when their best service has been done. If the teachers were not given handsome recognition in the shape of increased salaries, it is no credit to them that they remained teaching in St. Johnsbury and it is certainly loss of a credit to the town which hired them for so many years. In other lines of work, it is decided that as the workman advances in experience he deserves better pay for his services, because he is better able to bring increased returns to his employer; and the same rule should apply to the teaching profession. Perhaps St. Johnsbury has followed the system of increasing the salaries of its teachers in this manner. We hope so, at any rate; likewise many other communities in Vermont, for thereby is set up an incentive for strong teachers to remain in their present positions.—Barre Vt. Times.

If you stand on Main or Centre streets on a Wednesday or a Saturday evening when the weather is pleasant you see a spectacle that makes you think pretty well of Brockton. The stores are handsome and well lighted, and the streets gleam with electricity. The crowds are worthy of study. It is rare to see a person who is not reasonably well dressed, and the mass of those on parade are attired more than comfortably well. There is a general air of prosperity in the passing throng. The people look as though they get some pleasure out of life, and were interested in it. There is a lack of the dullness and apathy that mark many of the workers in some manufacturing places. The people are part of a cheering spectacle, and they feel cheerful as part of it; cheerful and hopeful, and without deadly fear of the future. It is worth while to see them.—Brockton Enterprise.

"The voice of the people is the voice of God, and no one has the right, because he is in the minority, to stand off and not perform his share in a recognition of the man in office. It is the duty of everyone to keep a sharp eye on the administration; and to support the man in office in everything he is doing that is in accordance with law and for the good of the people. There is a dangerous class in our community, those who stand off and criticise and insist that others are corrupt. They are not interested i n the whole, but selfishly in themselves, and they do such toward degrading the respect that the young should hold for those in office. Those elected to office by the people on the whole are as good as those who elect them, and every man takes the office at the same value that the people place upon it. What is greatly needed today is a new definition of patriotism. Though I wave the flag and am not honest, I am not patriotic, and though I may exercise my franchise and have not character, I am no true citizen. The true relation of the Christian to the Government consists in his bearing his share of the responsibility to the end that high character, integrity, purity of life may prevail everywhere. —Bishop Lawrence.

The largest number of foreign born came from Ireland, while Italy and Sweden are having a close race for second place. A large number are from Scotland, Canada, Nova Scotia, England and Finland.

The census says that 939 of the foreign born have lived in Quincy less than two years, 2,012 from 2 to 5 years, and 6,668 over 5 years.

When it comes to the nativity of parents of Quincy people, the census says that 9,278 were native born and 18,798 were foreign born.

The grandparents of 20,558 of the residents of Quincy were foreign born, and only 7,313 native born.

SENATOR HULTMAN

mittee be some one in close enough touch with the legislators of 1911 to get what he wants in the way of making up the district.

Sen. Hultman's strong influence at the state house is well known. Ex-Rep. Barnes' capabilities in political finesse are beyond dispute but Mr. Barnes, naturally, having been out of legislative life for four years, is not in as close touch with the legislature as he was when a member of it. Neither could he hope to get in as close touch with it next year as would the present 12th or 14th district. Prior to the redistricting of 1891 she was in the old 2d district which was made up partly of the present 12th and largely of the present 14th. All of Norfolk county except Quincy, Milton and Cohasset is now in the 12th district and all the 1st Norfolk senatorial district, except Quincy and Milton, viz., Braintree, Canton, Holbrook, Hyde Park, Randolph and Weymouth —is in the 12th congressional district. The interests of Quincy and Milton are more naturally associated with Norfolk county than with South Boston and Dorchester.

Not in recent years has the 1st Norfolk district sent a man to the senate for three terms, but the exigencies of the present occasion form a good reason for breaking the precedent. Sen. Hultman, himself, two years ago was willing to stand aside and let Sen. Jenney have a third term if the latter could demonstrate that he had a chance of being elected president of the senate provided he were returned for a third time. Sen. Jenney, possessing a purely judicial mind, could not see as early as some others that he had but one chance in 40 of being elected president of the senate, but he saw it before the middle of summer and took himself out of the field.

Mr. Barnes recognizes that the exigencies of the present situation furnish ample reason why the two-term precedent should not be insisted upon and will probably in the interests of the district gracefully step aside for another year.

Practical Politics then reviews at length the record of Senator Hultman, which alone entitles him to a third term.

be Sen. Hultman with six consecutive years of service behind him. The latter is known to practically every legislator on Beacon hill in both branches. His eminent fairness in legislative matters has won for him the respect and confidence of all. Anything that he asked within reason would surely be granted and it is not unreasonable of Quincy to want to sever its connection with the 10th congressional district. Milton, also, is desirous of breaking away from the 10th district. With Sen. Hultman and Rep. Wolcott working together, each with strong prestige and the influence of close association with the men who will make up next year's general court, or a large majority of it, there is little reason to doubt that the situation can be worked out to their satisfaction. There is always an immense amount of pulling and hauling in the process of redistricting and the occasion requires not only strong men but popular men.

It is especially important to Quincy since the location of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. there that she be in a position where she will be able to wield a strong influence in congressional affairs. Important as it is to Quincy it is almost as important to the surrounding section the prosperity of of which depends largely upon the prosperity of the ship building works. Through the influence of Sen. Lodge considerable has been done by the national government to improve the navigation facilities at Quincy but much more needs to be done to put the Fore River company in a position where it can compete without handicap with the other ship building companies of this country. The company is rapidly approaching the position of the leading industrial concern of the commonwealth. Its position in the community as an industrial leader and employer of labor demands that it be represented in congress by some one who will have its needs close at heart. Sen. Lodge has too many important matters on his hands to devote the necessary time to looking after all the needs of the company. Quincy, with its large representation in a republican district convention, could wield a strong influence in determining the selection of the congressional candidate. As it is now her influence is practically nothing, tied to a democratic district.

Quincy naturally belongs in either

THE HOUSING OF WORKMON.

The housing of employees is preeminently a matter to be considered with full regard to the special circumstances and conditions of each case, and to be provided for on the basis of earning sufficient revenue to cover costs of operating, without any element of gift on the part of the company. Somewhere between the often described model towns of large corporations liks Cadbury's, or Lever Brothers, or that of the National Cash Register Co., and the old construction camps still used in some towns, or even the long rows of mill tenements familiar in connection with textile industries, will usually be found the "happy mean" for smaller works or more isolated towns. Houses of two different types built for employees of a pulp company in Canada in a new town, the whole settlement being in its formative period, are in pairs with ample space between each pair. In another part of the town detached four-room houses have been built to rent at from $4 to $5 per month, those mentioned above being let at a slightly higher rate. A few more pretentious cottages have been built, and are occupied at a higher rental by officials of the company. Given proper and sanitary conditions in the town and a supply of such houses alwaysa little in excess of the demand, this company will have gone a long way towards solving the housing problem on a common-sense basis. — Engineering Magazine.

ROCK ISLAND TRAIN WRECK

Forty-Four Persons Killed as Cars Are Telescoped

LARGE NUMBER IN HOSPITAL

Double Train of Thirteen Cars Making Detour Because of Little Freight Wreck Meets With Disaster When Engines Leave Rails and Are Ditched In Cut at Top of Hill—Passengers Horribly Mutilated

Marshalltown, Ia., March 22.—Forty-four persons were killed and almost as many more were injured in the wreck at Green Mountain of two Rock Island trains running over the Chicago and Great Western tracks from Cedar Rapids to Waterloo. Several of the injured may die. No New England people are reported among those dead or injured.

A number of the dead are so horribly mangled that idenification may never be possible. Every surgeon in Marshalltown, Green Mountain and Gladbrook are doing everything possible in emergency hospitals in Marshalltown to relieve the suffering of the injured.

Around the various undertaking shops the citizens throng with tear-stained faces, each anxious to get some details of those who are within.

A little freight wreck on the Rock Island at Shellsburg was the indirect cause of the Green Mountain disaster. The Rock Island line was blocked and it became necessary to detour over the Great Western tracks. Two trains sent from Cedar Rapids to Marshalltown were coupled together and the two locomotives placed in front of them. Both locomotives were running backward.

The combined train consisted of thirteen cars. A Pullman was next to the locomotives. Then came a smoking car and a day coach. In the latter were many women and children.

The doubled train was going about twenty-five miles an hour when it reached a cut five miles from Green Mountain, at the top of a hill. In this cut the tender of the front locomotive jumped the track. This threw the head locomotive into the sides of the narrow cut. The clay of the sides was soft and the engine went into it and stopped almost instantly. The sudden stoppage ditched the second locomotive and the momentum of the heavy train crushed the day coach and the smoking car against the heavier Pullman. The smoking car and day coach were telescoped and barely an occupant of either escaped death or injury.

While the last ten cars remained on the track, the shock threw the passengers sprawling from their seats.

Conductor Worst dispatched trainmen back to flag a following train. Other trainmen were hurried to Gladbrook and Green Mountain for help.

Uninjured passengers began removing the dead and injured. The dead were taken to an adjoining pasture and laid on the grass. A relief train from Marshalltown carrying surgeons and Coroner Jay arrived two hours after the crash. By that time the victims were laid out in gruesome rows.

The sight that met the eyes of the surgeons was horrible. The dead were crushed and mutilated in many cases beyond recognition. Heads were severed from bodies, arms and legs were cut off. Here lay a bleeding trunk; there a head with the agony of death still on the countenance.

A second rescue train relieved the first, which brought a load of injured to Marshalltown.

The removal of the bodies showed that nearly all the dead were in the day coach and the smoking car. It is believed only two of the dead were in the Pullman.

ANOTHER INCREASE IN APPROPRIATION

Finance Committee of City Council Put Them $2,084 Above Estimates of the Mayor.

Total Increase is $33,805.60 Over Last Year.

The Finance Committee made twelve changes in the estimates of the Mayor and School Committee in the annual appropriation order for 1910. There were eight decreases and four increases, but the net increase in the order is $2,084. The committee found that there were limitations and that the total recommended is all that the law would allow. Most of the reductions were in items for clerical services at City Hall, but $500 was taken from the Miscellaneous item of the Mayor, and $3000 from bridges. All the increases were large, and include $2000 for miscellaneous expenses of the Board of Health, $500 for garbage, $500 for collection of ashes, and $1500 for repairs of public buildings.

The order is printed in full below. Items increased over the estimate (not over 1909) are marked with an asterisk (*), and items decreased with a dagger (x). Where reductions are made the sum is usually the same as last year, an attempt having beenmade to secure an increase.

The total appropriations for "Current expenses" are $403,480.00 against $369,674.40 last year, an increase of $33,805.60.

CITY COUNCIL

we give the men a half holiday and pay. His idea would be to pay by the hour. The men on the street work easy. He did not believe a man should get pay for something he did not do.

Councilman Branch did not think that the statement that all cities give a half holiday could be substantiated. Less than half of the cities have any form of a holiday, and half of these did not want it. We shall be among the pioneers if we pass this order.

Councilman Bryant said he proposed to offer an amendment to get over this matter. A large portion of the men are employed in July and August. It was not right to expend $4,000 and receive nothing in return. In City Hall the detail work is done when they have a half holiday. We are crippled because we do not have money enough to take care of the streets. We should have $50,000 instead of $25,000 and if we take $4,000 out of that he did not know what we would do.

Councilman Carey would be willing to accept the amendment. He did not think it justice to give a half holiday to everybody. In reply to his question the Commissioner said that judging by other years, one half of his force would be employed by May 1.

Councilman Richards believed that men who work on the streets are entitled to a half holiday as much as the people in City Hall. If they make it May 1, he could see where there would be discrimination. If a vote could be taken that a week's labor should be 48 hours he would like it.

Councilman Cherrington favored the minority report. Most business firms in Boston give their employees a half holiday. He did not object to being a pioneer in the movement. He was opposed to the May 1 movement.

Councilman Bolster believed working men should have a half holiday, but he was in favor of the proposed amendment.

Councilman Snow hoped the minority report would prevail. He was not in favor of giving it to persons not citizens.

Councilman Whiton offered an amendment to the minority report that the half holiday be given to all employees of the city who are on the pay roll May 1 of the current year.

Councilman Bryant raised the point of order that the motion was not in order, but the chair ruled that it was.

Councilman Smith opposed the amendment.

Councilman Bryant moved the previous question. Voted.

The previous question was on accepting the report of the committee, which was that the order ought not to pass. This report was accepted.

The question then was on accepting the recommendation of the committee.

Councilman Bryant offered an amendment to the order to provide that all employees of the city on the pay rolls May 1, of the current year should receive a half holiday.

Councilman Flynn moved to amend by making it read "or persons who have in the past been employed at least one year.

Councilman Nowland moved a vote be taken at 11.15. Voted.

Councilman Flynn desired to withdraw his amendment, but there was objection.

Councilman Smith moved the previous question. Lost.

The amendment of Councilman Flynn was then put and lost.

The amendment of Councilman Bryant was then put and lost by a rising vote of 6 in favor and 13 against.

The question then was on adoption of the recommendation of the committee. The Council refused to adopt the recommendation of the committee by a vote of 10 yes and 12 no.

Under motions and orders Councilman Bryant moved when the Council adjourn it be until March 28. Motion lost.

Councilman Whiton offered a resolve approving the passage of the so-called Ocean Mail bill. Adopted.

Councilman Bryant was called to the chair.

Councilman Smith moved that Order 12, the half holiday order be put on its final passage.

The chair ruled that it was not in the power of the council as the order was dead.

Councilman Loud moved to adjourn. Motion lost.

Councilman Smith offered an order providing for a half holiday for city laborers.

The chair ruled the order out of order, as the same subject matter had been acted upon.

Councilman Smith appealed from the chair.

On a rising vote the chair was sustained by a vote of 12 yes and 10 no.

Councilman Cherrington moved to reconsider the vote on accepting the recommendation of the committee. Motion lost.

Councilman Smith offered an order giving the laborers a half holiday from June 1, to Aug. 31.

The chair ruled the order out of order as the same subject matter had been acted upon.

Councilman Smith appealed from the ruling of the chair.

On a rising vote the chair was sustained by a vote of 13 yes and 8 no.

Councilman Loud moved to adjourn. Motion lost. Vote doubted. On a rising vote the motion was lost, 10 voting yes and 12, no.

Councilman Carey offered a resolve favoring the straightening of the channel at the Fore River. Adopted.

Councilman Cantfill offered an order for a light on Phipps and Payne streets. Referred to Executive.

Upon motion of Councilman Snow the Council voted to adjourn at 12.20 until Monday, April 4. Special cars were in waiting in City Square for Wollaston, Quincy Point and West Quincy.

STOLE LOAD OF SHOES

Homeless Man Drove Off With $3000 Worth, Say Boston Police

Boston, March 22.—Wilfred Curran was arrested in the North end charged with stealing $3000 worth of shoes on March 25, 1909. He was taken to the municipal court and held in $4000 bonds for the grand jury.

Curran implicated another man who is serving a three months' sentence at the house of correction and the latter will be brought into court on a writ of habeas corpus.

Curran is alleged to have mounted the seat of an unattended wagon and driven off with it. In the wagon were many cases of shoes. These were taken to East Boston, it is alleged, packed in barrels and sent to New York. Then Curran and his accomplice are said to have gone to New York and sold the shoes. Curran is 40 years old, and the police say he has no home.

RELIC OF OLDEN DAYS

Ancient Pewter Porringer Is Found on Plum Island Beach

Newburyport, Mass., March 22.—Every year after the winter storms it is customary for the life savers along the Plum island shore to pick up some sort of relic such as ancient coins, silver buckles off shoes, such as were worn two centuries ago, and bits of silver and gold jewelry, and this has given rise to the belief that a treasure ship was wrecked off this coast or else a portion of a buried treasure has been disturbed along the beach by the waves.

This year Fred Lattime, a life saver, is the first to report a find, a curious relic that he picked up while patrolling the beach. This consists of a very ancient pewter porringer that experts say is between 150 and 200 years old.

CROSSED THE OCEAN TO FIGHT A DUEL

Italian Count Has Grievance Against an Opera Singer

Boston, March 22.—Carlo Cartica, the tenor of the Boston Opera company, says he has been challenged to fight a duel by Conte Cinelli of Rome, who journeyed to this country for the purpose.

"It is simply an affair of honor," said Cartica when he was asked about it. "Something about Conte Cinelli did not suit me. I slapped his face. He need not have come all the way across the ocean to seek me out. He knew where to find me next summer.

"But the Conte Cinelli has obliged me, and he suggested we fight here at some secluded spot near Boston. But a good friend of ours advised us of the strange laws of this country, which permit men to fight with fists but forbid them to fight like gentlemen. So we were obliged to postpone the pleasure till June 4."

Stevens has been the Hill representative in Oregon for two years and has been actively connected with the deals whereby Hill recently acquired the Inland Empire, Oregon Electric and United Railways, three of the largest electric lines in the northwest.

PITTSBURG IS GRAFT-RIDDEN

Klein's Confession Has Aroused the Court to Indict

MANY OFFICIALS IMPLICATED

Number of Councilmen Named by Convicted Man Hasten to Office of District Attorney, Who Is to Extend Probe Even Beyond Story Told by Klein—Latter's Exposure May Save Him From Prison

Pittsburg, March 22.—Judges in the quarter sessions court yesterday were presented with the confession of John F. Klein, covering corruption in the city councils, in which he made good his threat to "pull out the props and let the sky fall." The court will at once issue an order calling for the most sweeping graft prosecution.

Klein's confession goes to court with backing. A number of councilmen named in the document have yielded to the persuasion of detectives and the advice of District Attorney Blakeley and have made corroborative confessions. The number of past and present councilmen enmeshed in the scandal is in the neighborhood of eighty.

A great batch of indictments is to be issued. County detectives already are serving warrants and will make wholesale arrests.

About 100,000 graft-tainted dollars, it is alleged, were involved in the effort of six banks in Pittsburg to buy councilmanic votes in 1908 in favor of ordinances making the banks depositories for the city's money.

An extraordinary session of the grand jury was called Monday to hear Klein's story, but the inquiry is to go further, said the district attorney. Evidence is at hand, he said, to the effect that councilmen have collected money on liquor sold to disorderly houses and on jewelry, furniture and clothing purchased by the inmates. The privilege of gambling, it is said, was also sold by councilmen and the "rake-off" varied from $1.50 to $1500 a week.

The "white slave" trade, says an official of the Voters' league, is also to receive attention. Detectives, it is declared, have been at work on all varieties of wrong doing for several months and the result promises to have the most purging effect that Pittsburg has known.

During his trial Klein had persisted in the statement under examination that he knew nothing of any bribery. It was then believed that he was protecting some one, and he stuck to this position until almost at the threshold of the state prison, which he was to enter yesterday. When he was confident that his family would be cared for he was loath to make any disclosures, but when those he protected deserted him and were permitting him to go to prison and leave his family facing starvation Klein weakened and told the whole story.

It is realized that Klein, in substantiating his confession before the grand jury and in court, must necessarily admit that he committed perjury, but it is broadly hinted by the county prosecutor's office that Klein will be dealt with leniently and possibly will not serve a day in prison.

RESULT WILL BE CLOSE

Foss-Buchanan Congressional Fight Will Be Settled Today

Brockton, Mass., March 22.—Indications point to a close contest in the congressional election in the Fourteenth district today. The three candidates who are aspirants for the seat of the late William C. Lovering, Republican, are: William R. Buchanan of Brockton, Republican; Eugene N. Foss of Boston, Democrat, and John McCarthy of Abington, Socialist.

There is no question but there will be a big cut in the Republican majority. The Fourteenth district is a solid Republican district, one of the most solid in the nation. The issue is clean cut: the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill.

CUSTOMS SERVICE PROBE

Indications That Boston Is to Undergo an Investigation

Boston, March 22.—There is reason to believe that Boston is to have a big customs service investigation along lines somewhat similar to that recently conducted with such sensational results at New York.

All officials concerned in any way with the inquiry are maintaining the utmost secrecy, but it is known that the treasury department at Washington, which has charge of the customs service, has been contemplating something of the kind for several months, and that Captain Armstrong, one of the most expert of the Boston police inspectors, has been secured by the national government.

Captain Armstrong has had long experience in all lines of police investigation and has conducted some of the most important police inquiries which Boston has ever had.

POLAR DATA LACKING

Peary Has Not Submitted Records Concerning Tidal Observations

Washington, March 22.—Action taken in the house disclosed that the secretary of commerce and labor has no information relating to the records of Commander Peary bearing upon his discovery of the North Pole.

Several days ago Mr. Hughes (N. J.) offered a resolution calling on the secretary for reports of tidal observations made by Peary on the coast of Alaska. Hughes suggested that these reports might develop some information bearing on the discovery of the Pole.

In asking that the resolution be laid on the table, Mr. Mann (Ills.) said the records referred to had been sent to the committee on interstate and foreign commerce. They did not contain data bearing on the discovery.

ROOSEVELT MEETS FELLOW CITIZENS

Tourists at Luxor Assure Him That He's All Right

Luxor, Upper Egypt, March 22.—Colonel Roosevelt and his family, on their arrival here, were greeted by a great number of fellow-citizens. Roosevelt held a reception at the Winter Palace hotel, and shook hands with more than a hundred tourists from the United States, and as each passed he made characteristic remarks, which served to recall old days in the White House.

At the conclusion of the reception the tourists gave three cheers for Roosevelt and then the well-known slogan:

"What's the matter with Roosevelt: he's all right." This brought a generous smile on the colonel's face and he said:

"I wish I could give cheers for everyone from California to Massachusetts."

PENSIONS OF $5000 A YEAR

Favored For President's Widows but Not For "Ex-Presidents"

Washington, March 22.—The senate committee on pensions agreed to report favorably bills to grant pensions of $5000 a year to Frances F. Cleveland, widow of ex-President Cleveland, and Mary L. Harrison, widow of ex-President Harrison.

At the same time the committee declined to report a bill which would place ex-President Roosevelt on the retired list as commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and give him $10,000 a year for the remainder of his life. The bill does not mention Roosevelt specifically by name, but applies to "ex-Presidents of the United States." At the same time it could not affect anyone except Roosevelt at the present date.

FEELINGS OF INSURGENTS

Party Leaders Think If Wise to Duly Respect Them

MAKING OF RULES COMMITTEE

Only Regulars of Republican Party to Have Membership—Insurgents Resent Being Called Cowards In Speech by Cannon—Friends and Associates of Speaker Not Likely to Be on New Committee

Washington, March 22.—Republicans of the house were unable to come to an agreement on the date for holding a party caucus to nominate the majority members of the new rules committee provided for in the Norris resolution adopted Saturday. It is generally believed that it will not be called until the latter part of the week.

Frank D. Currier of New Hampshire, chairman of the Republican caucus, said that no decision had been reached by the party leaders, and he believed that the matter would be allowed to rest for a few days without action of any kind.

Considerable opposition developed to the proposition to put committee chairmen on the new rules committee. Chairman Tawney of the appropriations committee declared that such action would give the chairmen an unfair advantage and allow them to force committee action on the house.

"There will be no chairmen on the new committee, if I can prevent it," said Representative Madden of Illinois. If the house is opposed to having the speaker on the committee because of the influence he wields, then it would be opposed to committee chairman holding membership. I will fight such a proposition on the floor of the house, and if necessary introduce a resolution prohibiting committee chairmen from having membership on the committee on rules."

Deep resentment is felt by the insurgents because of Speaker Cannon's speech Saturday night declaring them to be cowards in voting against the Burleson resolution declaring the speaker's chair vacant. The feeling of these insurgents was expressed by Representative Madison of Kansas.

"The speaker," declared Madison, "accuses us of cowardice, and on what grounds? For doing exactly what he himself refused to do namely, to throw the house into a chaotic condition which would endanger legislation. That was the reason he gave for not resigning.

"Why, then, should he expect us to bring about that condition of chaos by voting to depose him? Had the speaker tendered his resignation, believe me, it would have been accepted by exactly the same votes that were given in support of the Norris resolution, and the house would have a new speaker. It was the speaker who did not have the nerve."

Peace and quiet reigned in the house Monday, contrasting vividly with the stormy scenes of Saturday. Speaker Cannon ascended to his desk without the slightest signs of a demonstration either by his friends or his enemies and the house proceeded to the consideration of routine legislation.

Victor Murdock, who voted to depose Speaker Cannon Saturday, issued a statement declaring that the insurgents did not expect and would not demand representation on the committee on rules. To do so, he said, would weaken their cause in the eyes of the country and give the impression that the insurgents were fighting for personal preferment, instead of a principle.

Calm reflection on the defeat administered to the organization has convinced the party leaders that it will be political wisdom to proceed not only with deliberation but also with consideration for the feelings of the insurgents. They do not hesitate to declare that Speaker Cannon was foolhardy in condemning as cowardly the insurgents who declined to depose him as speaker. They recognize that these insurgents were actuated by a desire to avoid a chaotic condition of the house, which would seriously endanger the legislation pending before congress.

The party leaders fully recognize that it would be unwise to members who are recognized as close friends and associates of Speaker Cannon. They are willing to admit in view of the present temper of the house it would be folly to allow the speaker to continue his dominating influence. When the party caucus is held it will be found that his power has been broken and that he can no longer dictate what the policy of the organization will be.

Young Zayas Near Death

Annapolis, March 22.—Beaufort E. Kirwan, hospital apprentice at the United States naval hospital here, and Peter Foy, a private of marines, and aided by members of the marine guard, saved from drowning Francisco Zayas, son of the vice president of Cuba, and a companion named Manuel Marcer, both students at St. John's college. The young men fell from a canoe.

TO INFLUENCE LEGISLATION

Insurance Companies Said to Have Spent Vast Sums of Money

New York, March 22.—Out of the mass of promising generalities which has characterized the fire insurance inquiry there cropped up testimony that three foreign reinsurance companies paid handsomely to have the so-called Grady reinsurance bill passed by the legislature at Albany in 1904.

The bill was passed and is still a law, notwithstanding that it was opposed by domestic companies, who subscribed $10,000 for the purpose.

But New York's state capital was not the only point of interest to the national board of fire underwriters, according to the testimony Monday. There were intimations of an organized system of influencing legislation throughout the country. It was even suggested that the work of the insurance men extended to congress.

BEEF TRUST INDICTED

Federal Grand Jury Acts After Long Investigation In Chicago

Chicago, March 22.—The National Packing company of New Jersey and ten subordinate corporations wre indicted by the federal grand jury after eight weeks' investigation of the alleged beef trust. The indictments were returned before Judge Landis.

No mention was made of individual packers in the true bill. Immediately following the referring of the indictments United States Attorney Sims began civil and criminal proceedings against the National Packing company and its subsidiary companies, Armour & Co., Swift & Co. and the Morris company, and the officials of the corporations.

In this manner, although individual indictments were not returned, the officials of the chief companies are brought face to face with prosecution.

PIGTOWN IS SHORN OF CHIEF FEATURE

Flatbush Policemen Round Up Over a Hundred Goats

New York, March 22.—A squad of policemen went into Pigtown, a section of Flatbush, while many of the goats were yet asleep and drove more than one hundred of the animals to the nearest police station, where they were stored in a back yard.

This unusual activity in the matter of goats, which for years have been permitted unhampered by police to live and thrive in Pigtown, was due to the fact that residents half a mile from Pigtown geographically, but a much greater distance in ideas and modes of living, had complained that the alien goats had formed the habit of stealing milk, milk bottles, bread and other component parts of breakfasts. They ate even the paper bags the things came in and wrought damage to the grass and shrubbery about the detached houses.

FATAL FAINTING SPELL

Lawrence Woman Meets Death by Drowning In Jar of Water

Lawrence, Mass., March 22.—Mrs. Edith Wainwright, one of this city's most popular matrons, was drowned in a jar containing about six gallons of water.

She was taking an electrical treatment at her home when last seen by her niece. When discovered half an hour later, her face was submerged in the jar, and she was dead.

Medical Examiner Dow viewed the body and said that she undoubtedly had a fainting spell or shock while taking the treatment, and drowned before aid could reach her. She was 35 years of age, and is survived by her husband and two children.

BARS GIRLS IN CHINATOWN

Massachusetts House Adopts "Yellow Peril" Bill by Good Majority

Boston, March 22.—Representatives Donovan and Shaw of Boston won the distinction of forcing through the house the "yellow peril" bill which forbids the admission of girls under 21 to Chinese restaurants unless attended by a man over 21 who is not a Chinaman.

After a debate, during which Shaw made charges of girls being led astray in Boston's Chinatown, and during which the legal affairs committee strove to keep the house from passing the bill, a vote of 126 to 30 upset the committtee report of "leave to withdraw."

Kentucky Adopts Electric Chair

Frankfort, Ky., March 22.—Governor Willson has signed the bill providing for electricity as the means of inflicting the death penalty.

SUNDAY SERVICES

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

"The Soul's Thirst for God" was the subject of the sermon preached by Rev. Wesley Wiggin at the Wollaston Methodist church Sunday morning.

Mr. Wiggin said that there was a universal desire on the part of man to know God. Men desire some object of worship. Men need God; the young man away from home; the business man with the cares and worries of life; the mother in the home; all need God. Every one who thinks needs God. The questions about the soul—immortality, liberty, necessity the atonement, and eternal life, confront us today. A knowledge of God is the only true solution of these problems.

A young man writing to a friend said, "The Bible, Christ and miracles about which I have been thinking have so bewildered me that I am led to ask, is there a God? If so, why does He let us doubt?" To all such we would invite them to stand with Moses at the Red sea when God with a word makes the passage of the Israelites possible, and their safety secure. Or with Elijah as he convinced the prophets of Baal that the Lord he is the God. Or with Daniel, in the lion's den, as he stands unharmed. Or with Christ as He feeds the hungry multitude with the few loaves and fishes. Religion meets the need of the human soul. The Bible, the church—creeds and sacraments are a means to an end, and that end is to glorify God. We have precious ordinances, precious doctrines, but all this does not give life. These are a means to an end, and that end is to know God.

To know God is to find our weapon of victory. "If God be for us, he is more than can be against us." At the manger we find God's first great victory for men. If Christ was great as a man, He was greater as a God. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

There was a large attendance at the Sunday school, Mr. J. A. Sedgwick, the superintendent was in charge and Mr. Fred A. Sutermeister led the singing.

The Junior League was in charge of Miss Rena M. Chamberlin, the superintendent. Several of the boys and girls told the stories of Bible characters such as Noah, Abraham, Jacob and Esau. Miss Beulah Collett was pianist and Master Everett Sutermeister took charge of the devotion.

Miss Rena M. Chamberlin led the Epworth League service at 6 o'clock. The subject of the meeting was "How to fight the good fight." A duet was sung by Mrs. Orville Estes and Miss Florence Bennett.

At 7 o'clock the pastor preached on the "Christian race." Good audiences were present at all the services.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

Thursday, at 6.30 P. M. the last supper and social of the season will be held in the vestry, under the direction of Mrs. F. C. Merrill, chairman. The entertainment is in charge of Mrs. John Norrie and will consist of a "Song Sheet," with four soloists and a chorus of twelve voices. Miss Josephine Toedt of Somerville will read. All are invited.

Thursday, at 2 P. M., the Unitarian church Helpers will meet with Mrs. Tyler Brigham on Lincoln avenue.

If you have books and magazines, which you do not need, leave them in the church vestry and Mrs. H. A. Stevens, chairman of the Cheerful Letter committee will see that lonely people in remote parts, who welcome reading material as a great blessing, receive them.

An Edward Everett Hale, D. D., service will be held on his birthday Sunday, April 3d, at 4. 30 o'clock. There will be special music. Of the hymns to be used one was written for Dr. Hale's ordination by his friend Rev. Samuel Longfellow, a Unitarian clergyman and brother of H. W. Longfellow, and the others were favorites of Dr. Hale. The address will be given by the Rev. Calvin Stebbins of Framingham.

At the close of the Easter Sunday morning service of worship the regular communion service will be held. All are welcome to this service, as it is the Lord's table, not ours.

All the literature in the vestry is for free distribution.

Contribution for the American Unitarian association should be handed to W. J. Wellington, treasurer, or the minister.

Wednesday, the noon service at King's chapel will be conducted by the Rev. W. I. Lawrence of Winchester.

Wednesday, at 2 o'clock Mrs. A. W. Russell and Mrs. H. F. McLean will given a subscription whist party at the former's home, 120 Winthrop avenue.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

The pastor Rev. Joseph Walther preached on Sunday both morning and evening. The morning subject was "Christ expressing His need," Math. 21-3.

The need in the text was the need of the beast on which to ride while while making his triumphant entry into Jesusalem. Special mention was made that Christ needs men today in evangelizing the world. Christ is riding through the centuries and men are spreading their talents and strength before Him. Money was included in the needs of Christ and should be used according to his direction.

The pastor showed in a very emphatic way that there is an unequal distribution of churches and workers. Some places there are too few and some places too many. In Colorado there are many towns of from 500 to 1,000 population where there is no church and many other places there are too many and are sustained by home mission funds.

In Rhode Island if the attendants at church were distributed so as to give each church a congregation of 300 and every minister needed for these had a salary of $3000 there would be 145 ministers who could be spared for more needy fields and enough surplus funds to sustain them.

In Vermont if the people were distributed so as to give each church a congregation of 200, and enough ministers were retained to supply them at a salary of $1000 each there would be 145 ministers to spare and $65,000 surplus funds.

Mr. Walther expressed his belief that if several churches were in a town of a few hundred population all should be united into one church irrespective of denomination, with one minister. The balance of ministers and money to be used in places of greater need.

There was a large attendance at the Sunday School. Special music was rendered at the Christian Endeavor meeting. Mr. Critchley gave two cornet solos, which were very much enjoyed.

The evening preaching service was a very impressive one. Mr. Walther in a very loving and tender way told of the Merits of Christ as a saviour of men. He not only saves but keeps all those that put their trust in Him. God's protecting care was emphasized, and Jesus was represented as the great shepherd of the sheep. The pastor urged all to have perfect confidence in God. God is faithful. Keep yourself in the love of God. Closing an appeal was made to those who had not taken a stand for Christ to say "Jesus I come to thee.

This evening at 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at Monclair; leader H. J. Christopher.

Wednesday evening at 7.45 the Christian Endeavor society will hold its anual business meeting for the election of officers. A social hour will follow.

LAUNCHING OF THE ALOHA

Only the Best of Material and Finest Workmanship

The beautiful steel auxiliary yacht Aloha, built at the Fore River for Commodore Arthur Curtiss James of the New York Yacht club, will be launched tomorrow at 10 o'clock in the presence of a party of the New York friends of the owner. The party will come to the Fore River by a special train which will leave the South station at 8.30, which will run direct to the yard.

After the yacht is launched she will be tied up to the wharf, and an opportunity will be offered to inspect her. Later a lunch will be served in the mold loft.

The yacht is 202 feet long on her deck and has a water line length of 165 feet, 10 inches. Her extreme beam is 35 feet, 6 inches, and her mounlded depth 22 feet, 4 inches. Her extreme draught is 16 feet. She will be rigged as a three-masted barque and will spread about 19,000 square feet of canvas. She is constructed throughout under the special supervision and to the highest class in Lloyd's yacht register.

The Aloha has a clipper stem with a graceful trailboard carving terminating in a full size figurehead. The stern is of the usual arch board type customary in American yachts. The main deck is flush amidships terminating forward and aft in a monkey forecastle and raised quarter deck respectively. The machinery is arranged amidships having engine room staff quarters suitably located around machinery spaces, the crew being berthed in a commodious forecastle, and the owners and guest staterooms occupy the after part of the yacht. Composite deck houses of steel and teak are built on the main deck enclosing entrance stairways and deck saloons. The owners', guest and various saloons have been finished in a highly artistic manner and tastefully furnished.

The machinery consists of a set of triple expansion direct acting engines furnished with steam by water tube boilers, the whole installation providing power of about 500 H. P. operating a manganese bronze feathering propeller. The smokestack is telesscopic to provide for being housed out of the way when the yacht is under canvas.

Altogether the yacht Aloha is one of the largest and handsomest auxiliary steam yachts afloat and will prove to be a valuable addition to the cruising fleet of the New York sjuadron ,whose flagship she will be.

OLD COLONY LEAGUE MEETING

Bjorkland Gets a Release from Randolph Team

(By Rube)

I attended the meeting of the directors of the Old Colony Baseball league at Hotel Belmont, Brockton, Sunday afternoon and was agreeably surprised at the harmonious way in which business is conducted by this league.

Jerome F. Murphy, the popular president of this live league presided over the meeting.

Hoye of Randolf added "Andy" O'Connor to his reserve list letting Albin the infielder go.

Tommy Nash of the Deweys wanted to hear if the committee on constitution had taken up matter of swapping players late in season. It was thought advisable to have a rule governing this case when a club out of the race might help another by lending stars in the last few games. Nash was asked to put it in form of a motion which was done. The motion was carried and the following rule will undoubtedly be added by the committee on constitution: "No club shall after the 15th of August, of each playing season, transfer, sell or release a player to another club in this league without the unanimous consent of all the directors of the league."

The next business before meeting came on question of schedule for the season. President Murphy informed directors that McCarthy of Taunton was unable to state definitely about being able to secure grounds in Taunton for the grounds he had in 1909 will undoubtedly be sold at auction in a few weeks. Mr. McCarthy did not care to hold league back and was ready to pass in his franchise that others be given an opportunity to take it. This the directors would not listen to, and informed McCarthy to look over the baseball situation in South Braintree, Brockton and Dorchester. The latter named looks like the best business proposition for the entire league and McCarthy is to look into it at once.

The umpire question here came up and President Murphy told the directors he was in favor of paying officials $7 per game flat, and if the league would vote that amount he could secure some fine indicator men. It was carried.

Next came the question of protection under organized baseball. It was found protection could be had by each club paying $15, and that they would receive $300 for each and every player drafted by clubs in other leagues.

Secretary Alger spoke of having interviewed President Murnane of the New England league and he made a proposition whereby his league would honor players under contract in Old Colony league and pay for them if they were wanted. President Murphy will look further into this and report at next meeting.

After the meeting Hoye, Faircloth and Bjorkland got together to talk over who was entitled to Bjorkland.

"Greg" Hoye did not care to stand in the way of Quincy, and Bjorkland informed me after the meeting that he was free from Randolph's claim. The date set for the next meeting was Sunday, April 17.

Among those present were Jerome F. Murphy of Stoughton, Mahar and Alger of Rockland, Bjorkland and Faircloth of Quincy, Nash and Tirrell of Weymouth, Hoye of Randolph, and McCarthy of Taunton.

Pleased His Majesty.

The dark monarch from sunny Africa was being shown over an engineering establishment in an English city by the manager, who in explaining the working of certain machinery unfortunately got his coattails caught in it and in a moment was being whirled round at so many revolutions per minute. Luckily for the manager, his garments were unequal to the strain of more than a few revolutions, and he was hurled, disheveled and dazed, at the feet of the visitor.

That exalted personage roared with laughter and said something to his interpreter.

"Sah," said that functionary to the manager, "his majesty say he am berry pleased with de trick an' will you please do it again?"—Sketchy Bits.

Bees will place their honeycombs in any place regularly or irregularly shaped, and when they come to corners and angles they seem to stop and consider. Then they vary the shape of the cell, so that the space is exactly filled. It could not be done more satisfactorily if the whole thing had been worked out on paper beforehand. Ants make hard and smooth roads and drive tunnels compared to which mab's efforts in making such things are insignificant

ONLY ONE VOTED FOR WHOLESALE PERMITS

Church Delegates Not in Favor of Liquor Permits to All "Legitimate" Expresses

Many Advocated No Permits Should be Issued

The churches of the city and the temperance societies were well represented Monday evening at an open meeting held by the Committee on Licenses of the City Council. Invitations were sent to the pastors of all the churches inviting their church to send its pastor and one delegate and each temperance organization to send two delegates, to give their views on the granting of permits to transport liquor. Whether or not any should be granted, and if so, how many.

Upwards of fifty were present. Chairman Gardner of the committee presided. The first speaker was A. Y. Anderson representing the Swedish M. E. church. He did not want any permits granted. His idea was that when the city voted for No License it meant No License. When his attention was called to the fact that the law provided that one should be granted he said that he did not want the committee to break the law.

Rev. Thomas W. Davison of the Atlantic Memorial church was in favor of granting no licenses at all. If a fine of $50 or $100 was imposed because none were granted he would favor having the city pay that amount. We could afford to break the law and keep the city as clean as possible. He could see but little difference in having people from Boston soliciting in Quincy and having a license in Quincy.

Ex-Councilman George F. Pinkham of Wollaston asked if it was a Federal or State law that required Quincy to grant a permit, and was informed that it was a State law. Continuing Mr. Pinkham said we have been voting No-License for years, and for the past few years we have been having travelling liquor shops. If it is necessary for men to buy liquor, let them go to Boston and get it themselves. He did not think the Boston stores had any right to deliver liquor in Quincy. We are told we must grant one permit. It was for the committee to tell us if that was so. It can not mean that if the city refuses to grant permits it will be fined. He did not believe the large number who voted "No" would be changed if the council refused to grant any permits.

George A. Brown could not see how a person is liable to a fine if he does not act officially.

Frank A. Page, of the Wollaston Unitarian club, said that he circulated the petition among the men of his church. All but three signed to have the number limited to twelve. Personally he thought permits should be granted to all bona fide expressmen of Quincy. The question is however what is a bona fide expressman. It should be looked into carefully. He doubted if there were more than twelve that would pass the test. He would be sorry to see that number but he believed it was right. He did not think it would effect the No- License vote to grant nine.

Mrs. George A. Brown, of the Wollaston W. C. T. U., argued that city has said "No-License." If permits are granted it is bringing temptation into Quincy. She would say, pay the fine and grant no permits. If there is a law that says we shall grant one, it is high time that law was tested. The vote of the majority of the people was to keep liquor out of Quincy, and we should not make it easy for people to do wrong. When girls are seen on the streets of Wollaston drunk it is high time we did something.

Mr. Blake, of the Atlantic boys club, said other cities refuse to grant permits and have not been prosecuted and it would do no harm to try it here. The "No" majority in Quincy is on the increase. He believed it the duty of the government of the city to stand by the vote of the people as far as possible and keep liquor out of the city. We want to put ourselves on record against anything that will let down the bars for liquor business in Quincy. He did not think it would affect the No License vote to refuse to grant permits.

Rev. J. Lilliback, of the Finnish church, said that one permit would mean good business for some one. If he were a philanthropist he would give 20 or 30 permits. He was loosing confidence in voting for "No." What is the use of voting "No" if the people do not mean it? He did not see much difference between a standing saloon and one on wheels. He stood for granting none and if the city was fined he would contribute his dollar.

W. H. Hull, of the Wollaston Congregational Men's club did not believe that there would be as much trouble as if there were saloons. He did not believe the proposition was to be thought of. He did not believe the refusal to grant permits would effect the license vote in Quincy. We have too many permits at present. When we see Quincy express teams in Boston with nothing on them but liquor it is time we eliminated them. He did not believe that there were more than twelve legitimate expressmen in Quincy. He would apply a test to see who were legitimate expressmen. He did not think there would be more than twelve.

At this point City Solicitor McAnarney came in, and in reply to a question, said that last year a city had refused to grant a permit and the matter was taken to the superior court

SUCCESSFUL LAUNCHING

The Richly Appointed Yacht Aloha Christened

The auxiliary yacht Aloha, built by the Fore River Co., for Commodore James of the New York Yacht club was successfully launched this morning in the presence of a large party of guests of Commodore James, who came on from New York for the launch. The party came from Boston on a special train that arrived at the works at 9.35 where they were met by Admiral Bowles. Preparations for the launch were immediately commenced an dat 10.12 she started down the ways. As she began to move Mrs. James, wife of the commodore, broke a bottle of Mumms Extra dry over her bow, and gave her the name of "Aloha."

Many of the ladies on the launching stand carried bouquets of primroses which they threw after the receding yacht, wishing her good luck.

Immediately after the launch the yacht was taken to the fitting out dock where she was tied up. An opportunity was afforded the guests to inspect her. Commodore James stood on the gang plank and welcomed each guest as they stepped aboard.

An hour or more was passed in the inspection of the beautiful yacht, and many compliments were heard of the manner in which the Fore River Co. had fulfilled its contract. After the inspection the guests were escorted to the mould loft where a lunch was served. The tables were arranged in a very attractive style and looked beautifully.

In the centre of each table was a large mound of jonquils from which there were spread beautiful ferns. At each plate was a boutonniere in the shape of a yellow tulip. At each plate was a hand executed place card designed and gotten up by Tiffany of New York. In the upper corners were the crossed flags of the New York Yacht club and the private flag of Commodore James, and a picture in water colors of the yacht under full sail.

About the room were the flags of the international code as well as the flag of the New York Yacht club and the flag of Commodore James, also several of the elaborately carved panels that will ornament the cabin of the Aloha when completed. These panels were replica of famous yachts as well as the old Fulton. They were very handsome.

It was intended that there should be some speeches after the lunch, but time forbade. Toasts, however, were drank to Admiral Bowles and to Commodore James and Mrs. James. The meaning of the name "Aloha" is "Merry Greeting," and Admiral Bowles in a few words of greeting said that he hoped that the yacht would meet with the same merry greeting at what ever port she entered.

Commodore James congratulated the Fore River on the success so far in the building of the yacht, and hoped that the same success would come to them in the building of the battleship for the Argentine Republic.

Immediately after the lunch the special train was taken for Boston and as the train pulled out of the yard there were cheers loud and long for the Fore River and Admiral Bowles.

Mrs. James, who was the sponsor for the yacht wore a handsome traveling gown of green plush, and she wore a large corsage bouquet in addition to carrying a large bunch of roses the gift of Admiral Bowles. Before the vessel had fully settled in the water Commodore James proposed cheers for the Admiral and the sponsor, which were given with a will.

Along the deck of the yacht were suspended the flags of the international code as well as the flag of the New York Yacht club, the private flag of Commodore James and the Fore River flag.

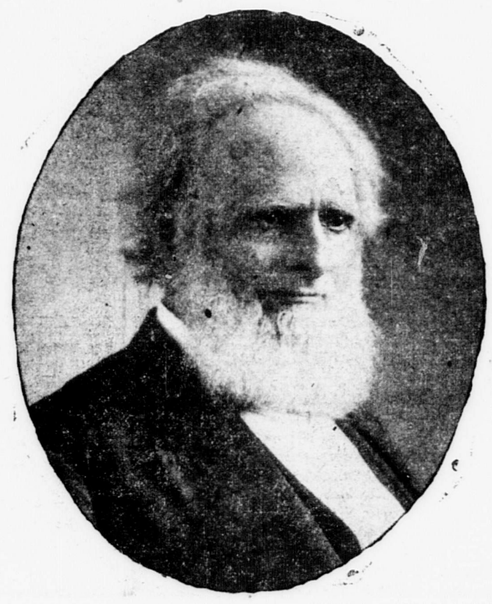
QUINCY'S BENEFACTOR GENEROUS TO STAMFORD

Donates $35,000 for Purchase of Twelve-Acre Site for a New Hospital

It Will be a Memorial to His Parents



THOMAS CRANE.

Albert Crane, Quincy's generous benefactor, is doing generous deeds for his home city Stamford, Connecticut, having recently purchased a site for the new Stamford hospital. The purchase price was $35,000 and the gift will be a memorial to his parents, Thomas and Clarissa Starkey Crane, both deceased.

Mr. and Mrs. Crane are in the south for a few weeks being registered at hotel Bon Air, Augusta, Georgia.

Some two years ago Mr. Crane gave $100,000 to Tufts college in memory of his father who was graduated from and always interested in the college.

Mr. Crane has been particularly generous to Quincy, his father's native town, following up the gift of his family of the Thomas Crane Public library with large tracts of land to enlarge the lawn about the building and more recently adding to the building so that Quincy has one of the most beautiful library buildings in the country. The interior of the library is considered perfect artistically and also well planned for practical use.

The City Council is now considering the purchase of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company property and adding it to the library grounds. This will give the library a good setting and show the building to much better advantage. More land to the south would be beneficial but as it is, it is the beauty spot of the city.

NEW ENGLAND IN THE WEST

The Northland College Doing a Good Work

"The making of a New England in the West" was the subject of Rev. M. J. Fenenga before the Wollaston Congregational club on Tuesday evening.

Rev. Mr. Fenenga is the president of Northland College located at Ashland, Wisconsin, and a portion of his talk was devoted to this interesting settlement. Accompanying his address were a series of lantern slides showing the West in all its wildness. The first views dealt with the lumber industry which has already made way with 96 per cent of the timber growth in Wisconsin and Minnesota. "The bush and the pine stumps" said Mr. Fenenga, "is the problem with which the Northwest has to deal."

The speaker then proceeded to relate, how the hardy fugitive patriots from Finland, Poland and Russia are solving this problem in the Northwest, by the pulling of the stumps and clearing of the land. The oppression of Russia has given these people a hunted, bitter and suspicious nature, and it is to change them into good American citizens that is the purpose of Northland college. The rich ore deposits of the Superior basin were mentioned, and the evening closed with pictures of the students and teaching corps at the college.

A nominating committee was appointed by President Hogue, consisting of C. F. West, B. H. Bain, R. B. Tobey, Rev. E. A. Chase, and E. S. Tenney.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Norfolk county is able to borrow on temporary loans at an extremely low rate of interest because the notes mature in the same calendar year. This week the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company took a note of $125,000 maturing on Dec. 15, 1910, a 3.25 per cent discount. It seems to make a great difference in rate whether temporary loans are payable in the calendar year, or put over into the next year. The little town of Needham floated a temporary loan of $50,000 at 3.40 per cent discount this week, all payable in 1910.

It is not a fine that would be imposed upon Quincy should it refuse to grant one express permit to transport liquor, but upon petition to the Superior court an injunction could be secured compelling the City Council to grant at least one permit. But if the voters and the City Council mean business, they can come out victorious. They could grant the permit to an expressman whom they know would not abuse it, or they could grant it to Delcevare King or some other citizen whom they know would not transport liquor if they had a permit. Or if it is decided there shall be twelve permits, grant them to the gentlemen who appeared at the City Council hearing this week in opposition.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

Secretary Meyer imagines the coming of a 40,000-ton battleship. Rear Admiral Bacon of the British navy goes him one better, and says that such a ship is only a step in the progress along this line that will be made. The 40,000-ton ship is close to twice the size of even the gigantic North Dakota of the American navy. What will be the eventual limit of the size of warships—50,000 tons or twice that number? How will such a ship some day loom up; how will she be managed? Conceive of the vastness of such a vessel; think of the enormous amount of machinery that will be collected in her frame, and will be needed to drive her, to steer her, to handle her ammunition, to do the work of all kinds necessary in a floating city of that power. And conceive of what the loss of life, to say nothing of property, would probably be in the event of disaster to such an enormous vessel. Also think of the expense of maintenance. It looks as though the time was coming when the nations in self-defence of their own pocketbooks would have to get together and agree on rules in this war game, among other things limiting the size of their war vessels and the size, perhaps of their armies.—Brockton Enterprise.

Colonel Roosevelt is as wise as he is resourceful. He expects to reach New York on June 17. He is deeply touched and pleased to learn that a grand reception awaits him. He insists, however, that the reception must be nonpartisan. "It must be participated in," he declares, "by Republicans, Democrats, Populists, and men of other, or no political faith alike—in short, by all who care to take part in the reception, whatever their politics may be or whether they be Easterner, Westerner, Northerner or Southerner." That is an excellent idea. He is coming home a returning American, who was once the President over the whole people, and he wants to be received by the whole people, or not at all. There is a strong desire to attach him in some way to the present administration, but as he went abroad to avoid that very thing, he is wise in determining that there shall be no connection between him as a plain citizen and those on whom the responsibility of government is now resting. The nearly three months that lie between him and his arrival in New York will seem the longest period of his voluntary exile. The news from the expedition relates that every mile that brings him nearer home seems to make Roosevelt more anxious to reach there. The middle of June will find him once more on his native shore, and the reception now under preparation will exceed anything that was ever tendered to an American citizen.—Lynn Item.

PERMITS

which issued an order that one shall be issued. If one was refused in Quincy any party had a right to take it to the Superior court.

Dr. Hardy, of the Bethany church, believed that every permit granted should have such specifications that the Chief of Police may have a list of people to whom liquor is delivered. The number of permits should be reached by examination of the applicants.

Dr. Hardy was informed that at the present time expressmen had to make returns to the police, and Chief Burrell, in reply to questions, said that all of the large companies made returns every day as required, and that the small companies made returns at least once a week.

In reply to a question as to how he would determin who should be granted the one permit if there were a number of expressmen who were equally entitled to it, Dr. Hardy said, that he did not believe such a condition would be found, but if so, then he would draw by lot. When people came to him as their pastor for help he did not believe he should tell what was told him, but from what had been told him he had a conviction that some expressmen were simply agents and were soliciting for the sale of liquor.

Rev. J. Matheson, of the Water Street Presbyterian church, believed in granting none. If it was a bad law we should break it. It is not necessarily a good law because the Legislature passed it.

Rev. John Anderson, of the Swedish Adventist church, said if the law was wrong it was time to change it. He believed it right if any are granted that all legitimate expressmen should have a permit. If possible the law should be changed. If it will help break it by refusing a permit it would be a good thing. He wanted to see Quincy perfectly dry. In reply to a question, he said it would be just as well to have twenty men with one team each as one man with twenty teams.

Rev. A. N. Thompson, of the United Presbyterian church, had found difficulty with his people when the question was raised that a man could have as many teams as he desired what was the use of reducing the number of permits. He wanted to step in and cut all out.

Rev. Hanson of the Swedish Baptist church said the feeling of his people was that, if possible, none should be granted. His personal opinion was that the city had voted "No" and did not want any. He believed the people understood what they were voting for. It seemed queer that when a saloon was licensed the man must confine himself to one place, but when a permit was issued he could have as many travelling saloons as he desired.

Rev. Carl G. Horst, of the Wollaston Unitarian church, said if it came to breaking the law by not granting any permits he would sleep on it. He believed in a square deal to grant permits to all legitimate expressmen, but would make the condition as hard as possible and that they should have but one team.

The question was then put to the delegates: If the committee decide to grant permits do you favor all legitimate expresses receiving them. Only one man rose.

The meeting was then adjourned.

—George C. Lee of the firm of Lee, Higginson & Co., of Boston passed away at his home, 264 Beacon street, Monday. Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, daughter of ex-President Roosevelt is his granddaughter.

SUNDAY SERVICES

HALL PLACE M. E.

The subject of the Sunday morning sermon at the Hall Place M. E. church on Sunday was "Hosannas that abide", the text being taken from Mark 11-9. The pastor called the attention to the fact that all the Christian world were celebrating Palm Sunday in some way, and that the world does well to recognize it as the Passion week of our Lord, because heretofore His attitude had been to hide His identity, bidding His diciples again and again as well as those upon whom His miraculous works had been performed to "tell no man that He was the Christ." Now He openly admits that He is the King by participating in the public procession and triumphantly entering into the Holy City, amidst the loud hosannas of the enthusiastic multitude as they broke branches of palm from the trees and waved them on high while they strewed their garments in the way as a mark of reverence and adoration. He then showed in the sequel of that memorable Palm Sunday that the enthusiastic applause was soon silenced, their seeming sincerity was lost in the testing and hardships that came to the Christ in the week that followed, when even His most intimate disciples deserted Him.

The pastor made his application thus: that the Christ, the true King is still on His way to the city, not Jerusalem of old but the new Jerusalem, that His Kingdom is a progressive Kingdom, one day to reach its height in the glories of everlasting Life; that the multitudes are still called upon to shout His praises, not with branches of palm trees but with emblems of spiritual victory; that they are still called to scatter their garments in the way as an act of reverence and adoration and respect but not the material garments of life. But they are still called upon to voice their loud hosannas and declare "Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord", as with the Christ, the King of Kings, they journey on toward the Celestial City.

The speaker showed that the means that should be employed in this greater procession to the Celestial city are; first, prayer in His name; secondly, deeds of kindness for humanity's sake in the name of Christ and Spiritual service, personal work for lost men; thus bringing nearer the glorious day of Christ's real triumphant entrance into the city. The test of the hosannas that abide are to be found in the praises thus rendered to the King.

Sunday School was held as usual at the close of the morning service. At the Junior League service held at 3 P. M. the pastor gave an illustrated talk on 1st John 4-11, while the assistant superintendent read a story of the "Crucifixion of Christ."

Miss Ada Williams lead the Epworth League devotional meeting on "How to fight the good fight." In the evening the pastor preached on "Pleasing God and began by saying that many answers might be given to the question "What is the end and object of all life?" The only right answer to the question would be, "that the end and object of all life is to please God". He then showed the thought of Paul in speaking of the flesh as being a hindrance to one's pleasing God, and finally answered the question of "How then may we please God?" by showing that the sin, worldliness and boasted morality of a life lived after the flesh must be over come by one's spiritualizing his life and getting in touch with the cleansing, energizing and spiritualizing power of God as revealed in His Son, Jesus Christ.

FREE TO PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The American Humane Education Society and the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals have arranged, through their State Agent, A. Judson Leach, to place in the hand of every pupil above the third grade an interesting booklet to be used on Humane Day, April 12.

On the cover is a picture of the new president, Dr. Francis H. Rowley of Boston. It contains many striking, true stories about the wonderful life of animals and their relation to man. These booklets are printed and distributed at a cost of about One Thousand Dollars to the societies and all that is required that the children may receive them is for the different school superintendents to send the number required for distribution to the State Agent at once. Each superintendent in the state has received acircular letter to this effect.

This is the fifth anniversary of Humane Day, which is very generally observed in the cities and towns throughout the Commonwealth. Many calls are coming in for the pamphlets issued for use onthis day from other states in the Union. Address, A. Judson Leach, State Agent of the A. H. E. S. and of the M. S. P. C. A.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

Promptly at half past two Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, president called the meeting of the Quincy Women's club to order for the reports of the officers and routine business.

Mrs. Tenny for the Arts and Crafts committee said one class in millinery was full but another one could be started if enough cared to join. She invited all to visit the exhibit after the meeting.

Mrs. Mackay for the Education committee said work was well underway for the children's festival on April 30. A great many maybaskets would be needed and she hoped all members would help make them. Also as more money was needed for the summer schools another entertainment was to be given Friday evening, April 29 at Alpha hall and she asked members to help sell the tickets. The entertainment would be of pictures posed by Mrs. Kitson the sculptor, chorus singing from the Chimes of Normandy, music, fancy dancing, etc.

Mrs. Gurney announced for the Home Economics committee, a lecture to be given at the clubhouse on Tuesday afternoon, March 29 at 3 o'clock, in the interest of the Consumers' League of Massachusetts. Miss Elizabeth Houghton of Cambridge will tell of the work of the League in the past and its aims for the future. An exhibition of clothing bearing League label will add interest to the talk. A cordial invitation is extended to everybody interested whether club members or not. It is a subject that should be of vital importance to every woman.

Mrs. Gurney also announced for the Program committee that the children's party would be held at the clubhouse Thursday afternoon, March 24. It would be a costume party and the children were asked to wear masks. There would be dancing, a story teller, refreshments, etc. Club members could send a child by using their personal calling card for an admission ticket and by notifying Mrs. Robert E. Park by telephone of their intention.

This brought the business to a close and Mrs. Gurney before announcing the program said a few words expressing her pleasure and that of the club in welcoming the guests.

The program opened with piano solos by Miss Fanny L. Storey of Boston, who rendered "Traumerei" by Strauss and "Capriccio" by Brahms, receiving appreciative encores for pleasing interpretations.

Mrs. Lena I. Hoyt, president of the Brockton Woman's club told most interestingly of the work of her club in summer schools in a non-English speaking colony of the city. A kindergarten school is maintained and the children learn to speak English through their work in the sewing classes, manual work, etc. It not only prepared them to enter the public schools in the fall but taught them to use their hands in various useful ways not only in school but at home.

Mrs. Gurney spoke of the tablet in the house which dedicated it to neighborly gatherings and said Mrs. William Gallagher of the Philergians of Braintree had come down in a neighborly way to tell of the "homemakers." Mrs. Gallagher spoke of Mary and Martha of bible times and of the Marys and Marthas of today. Martha the over zealous homemaker, perhaps bearing too many burdens and Mary benefiting by that industry and taking life easy and perhaps growing selfish. Mrs. Gallagher made a plea for a simple life for children, less useless toys, plenty of good play but would cut out evening amusements and nerve wearing rehearsals for entertainments no matter how benevolent the object. She believed children should be taught to be useful. It was a good paper, the facts being well presented and all agreed with Mrs. Gallagher in what a real home should be.

A pleasant break in the program was the singing of a group of songs by Mrs. Arthur S. Wonson, with Miss Storey at the piano. She sang three dainty little songs by Liza Lehman, "Wood Pigeons", "Yellow Hammers" and "The Owl," which were received with much pleasure and each applauded.

As showing some of the work of the Quincy club Miss Harriet E. Turner chairman of the Philanthropy committee told of the work of her committee in starting the Young Women's club. It was in the nature of an annual report as Miss Turner is leaving for Europe in May to be away a year.

In July her committee met and decided to continue the work of the previous committee on Associated charities and also to start some work for the girls of the city. She told how the club was formed through invitations through the newspapers, placards posted in various places and by postal cards. The opening night 77 girls joined and now there was a membership of nearly 200. Through the cooperation and assistance of the Arts and Crafts and Education committees classes had been formed in millinery, dressmaking, stencil, brass, embroidery, etc., and wonderfully good work had been done. The social evenings were also very successful. Her committee felt well repaid for their labors. With the fine work done for men and boys by the Y. M. C. A. it seemed as though something should be done for the girls and this work the club was doing. It was a splendid work for girls and would be a help for future generations. Miss Turner was heartily applauded.

Mrs. Gurney in introducing the next and last speaker, Mrs. Louise Rowe Wood of Hyde Park said her subject was one on which most women were ignorant. "Civil Service Reform." Mrs. Wood as chairman of the Civil Service Reform committee of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's clubs could tell club members all about it.

Mrs. Wood said up to 1881 the spoils system was the rule, when a president was elected the first few months was given over to paying political debts, turning every one out of office and putting in political friends. National civil reform leagues were formed after Garfield's death and there were now 7 states with civil service laws.

Civil service reform means getting the best people for service for the city, the state, the country, and not putting up with fifth rate men and fifth rate work. Grover Cleveland and the presidents that followed him were favorable to civil service rule. It worked well with the postmasters and now good men were retained instead of a change being made every time a new president came in.

Civil service is the foundation of all civic life, it quickened patriotism and love of right. Mrs. Wood explained the Spanish War Veterans' bill which came up every year at the state house and told why it should be voted down. A man should be qualified for the position he wishes to fill and not be given it because he carried a gun and went to war. It should be the best man available for every position and results would be the good service the public had a right to expect and demand.

Mrs. Wood favored teaching civil service reform in the schools that children be taught to stand up for the right, to see that it is just as wrong for a man to pay a political debt with an office to his supporter as to sell his vote. Civil service reform is a question of morality of religion, a question of economy. Civil service appointees are an economy.

What can we do about it? We can create public opinion. Indifferent opponents are hardest to combat. Offer prizes in the high schools on Civil service reform; begin now to educate the public through the children who were the future voters to carry on the work of the nation. It was natural for children to believe in it; to the right spirit add work.

Mrs. Wood told many bright anecdotes in emphasizing her points and every club woman present certainly gained a much clearer insight into what "Civil Service Reforms" really is.

The afternoon closed with a social hour during which an informal reception was held for visiting club members. Cocoa and home made cake were served by the hostess committee, the pourers being Mrs. A. J. Garey, Mrs. Richard Gordon, Mrs. Ernest V. Fitts and Miss Annie L. Prescott. The assistants were club members whose names began with F. G. H. I. and J.

There was an exhibit in the Arts and Crafts room which was worthy of much attention as it was the work of the Young Women's club. There were hats, shirt waists, embroidery, stencil and brass work all remarkably well done, showing that the girls have been industrious and appreciated the classes formed for them and also the instructions of their teachers.

Tuesday afternoon March 22 will go down in club history as another pleasant reciprocity meeting. It is always a pleasure for the Quincy club to return each year the hospitality of neighboring clubs and reciprocate the pleasure enjoyed by its president and officers in attending neighborhood meetings.

BIENNIAL AT CINCINNATI.

The biennial will open formally the evening of May 11, Mrs. Lawrence Maxwell, chairman of the local board, presiding; with addresses of welcome, and response from the president, Mrs. Philip N. Moore. The work will be taken up in earnest the morning of May 12, with reports, followed by an afternoon art conference at the Art Academy. This first afternoon will be given up to art, and will close with a reception in the Museum. Friday morning will be devoted to forestry and waterways, followed by afternoon conferences in Memorial Hall. Saturday morning there will be addresses on household economics and food sanitation. An important business session will occupy Monday morning, with afternoon conferences on civics, civil service reform and food sanitation. Tuesday morning the committees on industrial and child labor and legislative matters will report. Wednesday a final business session will include resolutions and rural conditions, to be followed by an afternoon conference and round table on education in Memorial Hall. The evening sessions will include notable addresses and fine music. Thursday morning, at the Sinton, the closing council will be held to take a look into the future, and the anticipated excursion planned by the Kentucky State Federation to Mammoth Cave will prove a fitting finale to the biennial.

BY JOHNSON BROS.
Why and How We Shall Reduce Our Prices April 1st, 1910.

AFTER a careful study of the credit business for a number of years, and the same of the cash business for the past two years, we have decided that for the mutual benefit of the buyer and seller, beginning April 1, we shall turn our business into a strictly cash business. Our experience and close study of the wants of the people for the past thirty-five years has put us in a position to judge, and we have decided that low prices and high quality can be obtained in no other way than by a strictly cash proposition, as a credit store cannot possibly compete successfully with a store that is handled on a strictly cash basis, as there is a great expense attached to a credit business, which we wish to curtail, and our curtailing means much lower prices to the trade. Under the credit system there is always a proportion of bad bills which must be taken care of in our scale of prices. Under the credit system you are helping pay the bills of those who do not pay themselves. The method of sending teams to take orders daily is very costly. We figure it costs us eight cents per call. If our clerks make from one hundred fifty to two hundred calls daily the expense of these calls must be added to the prices of the goods. The salaries of bookkeepers and other expenses of accounting and collections must also be taken care of. We propose to eliminate these items of expense, and correspondingly reduce the prices of our goods. We will deliver orders sent to us by mail, telephone or left at the store, and we intend to show the people of Quincy and surrounding towns what a really cash store can do for them. We intend to place on sale a certain day of each week some staple article from our stock at absolute cost, something different each time. Remember, one of the most important things in this change will be the keeping up of our quality for which we have so long been popular. We shall try to give even better quality if such a thing is possible, and we shall hammer the prices down hard—for cash.

We will pay cash for our goods, by so doing get all the cash discounts from the wholesale trade, and we intend that our trade shall benefit by it, and by owning our own plant it will not be possible for any concern in our line of business to undersell us, when you take into consideration our reputation for quality. We have one of the best equipped stores in our city, also the cooperation of experienced clerks which all go to make Johnson Bros. an ideal firm with which to trade. All orders will be delivered with care and promptness by our new Automobile system, which we will place at your service and which is being practised by nearly all the up to date concerns throughout the country. Customers not caring to pay cash every time they come, or send to the store can if they wish make a deposit with us, and when they have taken up all their deposit will be notified. At the prices we shall ask and the quality of our goods, we must insist on a tstrictly cash transaction, for at the present age of high prices a credit store can do nothing to lessen the expense of living for its customers, as the increasing expense of carrying on a credit business places low prices out of the question.

The credit dealer must realize a larger percent of profit than a cash dealer, as his expense account is more than double, so we decided that the only way we can help our customers and all careful buyers, is to establish a strictly up to date cash store, for there is no other way that we can afford to cut the prices for the mutual benefit of all. Hoping that this will meet with thoughtful and willing cooperation, we remain,

Respectfully,

CANNON GETS DUE WARNING

No Driving From Party Ranks to Menace Republican Success

MUST STAY IN BACKGROUND

Regulars Struggling to Keep Speaker Suppressed, to Avoid Outbreak Which Would Undoubtedly Follow Should He Attack Insurgents—Latter Will Precipitate Fight If Uncle Joe Should Get Too Busy

Washington, March 23.—Speaker Cannon is discovering that he can no longer rule the regular Republicans of the house. It is evident now that he mistook the vote by which the house refused to declare the speakership vacant as a wholesale indorsement of his right to continue to dictate. He has learned that many of his supporters in the recent contest in the house intended to insist that he shall remain in the background from this time on.

If he had his way the insurgent Republicans would be ignored or fought to the bitter end every time they attempted to participate in the deliberations of the house; but he will not have his way. It has been a painful duty for some of the old-time regulars to inform him that he must realize that he is no longer the master of the house, but its servant.

The speaker can see no reason why the insurgent Republicans should not be "driven out of the party." It galls him mightily to be forced to consent that they shall be recognized from this time on as a factor to be reckoned with in the house.

Soon after the adjournment of congress last summer the speaker in public addresses attempted to read the insurgents out of the party, and he still believes that he was right in what he said in those speeches.

The interesting feature of the situation in the house as it exists today is the maneuvering of a majority of the regular Republicans in the body to keep the "Iron duke" from Illinois from precipitating another outbreak by attacking the insurgents. Of course the speaker has his supporters among the regulars. A goodly number of his old-time friends object most strenuously to this effort to suppress him.

The attitude of the regulars who are bent on keeping the speaker suppressed is that no good could possibly come from carrying the fight further at this time. They are trying to impress upon the speaker that if he should goad the insurgents into another contest they would, with the cooperation of the Democrats, surely take away from him the right to make up the standing committees of the house.

Moreover, they point out that unless a truce can be established it will be utterly impossible to enact any legislation at this session. They are telling the speaker that if congress should adjourn without putting through any of the president's measures the country would surely punish the party at the elections next fall.

The speaker listens to all this advice without giving anybody assurances as to what his future course will be. He has promised to be good until the work of making up the new committee on rules is out of the way. And yet, he is plainly indicating that he intends to have a hand in making up this committee. He has let his influential friends on the floor of the house know that he must be consulted before the six Republicans who are to go on this committee are chosen.

There is a good deal of quiet talk among the insurgents to the affect that if the speaker gets too busy in connection with the formation of the new committee they will take a hand themselves. They had practically agreed among themselves not to ask that one of their number be made a member of the committee. This attitude, the insurgents say, will be maintained by themselves unless they became convinced that Cannon proposes to dictate the make-up of the new committee.

LORDS VOTE FOR REFORM

But Seventeen Opposed to Resolution Submitted by Rosebery

London, March 23.—The house of lords passed by a vote of 175 to 17 Lord Rosebery's resolution to reform the house of lords.

The vote was unexpected, as it had been believed that the clause of the resolution providing that hereditary or credited peers should no longer be entitled to seats in the upper house would be bitterly opposed.

FIND COUNTERFEIT OUTFIT

Brockton Police Get Busy When Local Merchants Enter Complaint

Brockton, Mass., March 23.—A counterfeit outfit and fifteen counterfeit half dollars were seized by the local police in a raid on a dwelling house occupied by Polish speaking residents.

The raid was the result of a complaint from local merchants, who have found a number of counterfeit half dollars in their money drawers lately. Suspicion was raised against the residents of 24 East Ashland street and led to a search of the premises by the police. The coins, which were found beside a crude plaster of Paris mold, were all dated 1908 and are of unknown alloy.

John M. Kuranowsji, aged 39, was arrested and held at the local police station for the federal authorities.

RIOTING IN BOGOTA

State Department Thinks It Directed at All American Residents

Washington, March 23.—Recent happenings in Bogota, Colombia, have prompted the officials of the state department to remind Minister Northcott sharply by cable that the department expects to be kept informed concerning all matters of interest occurring in that capital.

The assault on two English girls by a mob, who believed them to be Americans, is regarded here as a serious matter.

What was at first believed to be a riotous demonstration directed entirely against the management of the American-owned Bogota City Railway company has now become to be regarded by the state department as more far-reaching and it is thought that it probably includes all American residents in Bogota.

TO INFUSE NEW LIFE INTO STATE ASYLUM

Shakeup In Massachusetts Institution For the Insane

Boston, March 23.—George R. Jewett of Salem has handed in his resignation to Governor Draper as a trustee of the Danvers insane hospital. The resignation has been accepted. Jewett was chairman of the board, and the resignation indicates a complete change in the management of the Danvers institution, Superintendent Page having resigned and his successor having been chosen.

To fill the place of Jewett the governor will make his fourth appointment to the board within a year.

For some time, it is stated, Governor Draper has been convinced that the Danvers insane hospital has been suffering from dry rot, and that the infusion of new blood would be beneficial, an opinion shared by many of the leading alienists of the state.

In the case of this institution a number of vacancies recently caused allows a complete change in management, and new policies are to prevail in future. The new superintendent, Dr. Mitchell, is a younger man who has been assistant to Page.

What Pinchot Will Tell Roosevelt When He Meets Him

HE IS SUMMONED TO EUROPE

Belief That Former President Will Break Silence When He Hears Story of His Staunch Supporter Regarding Political Affairs In United States—Carries Messages From Some of Roosevelt's Strong Backers

Washington, March 23.—Gifford Pinchot, the deposed forester, is on his way to Europe in response to a cablegram from Theodore Roosevelt. It is just learned that the intimate friend of Roosevelt left Washington last Friday afternoon and sailed from New York Saturday in response to an urgent request from the former president that he be informed at the earliest possible moment of the present state of political affairs in the United States. Pinchot hopes to meet the returning hunter at Naples.

The fact that Roosevelt has called Pinchot to advise him as to the many events of importance which have transpired during his absence is regarded in Washington as extremely significant. It is known that Roosevelt has received scores of letters from friends of the administration acquainting him of the criticism to which Mr. Taft and his officials have been subjected and explaining the source of the criticism.

The fact that the former president has seen fit to call upon Pinchot for a personal interview is taken to mean that Roosevelt is wavering about the advisibility of keeping absolutely quiet after his return to the United States.

Aside from the newspaper correspondents who were his personal friends during his administration, Roosevelt has thus far been informed of the political events in the United States since his departure only by means of occasional newspapers and correspondence. He will now be informed of existing conditions by one of his most intimate friends.

Pinchot's departure for Europe was made ostensibly for the purpose of meeting a member of his family in Copenhagen. When the news became known, however, a friend of the family admitted that before Pinchot had been in Europe many days he would find it convenient to get into touch with Roosevelt.

While he is primarily interested in the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation and will acquaint the former president with his side of the case, it is believed that he also carries messages from a number of men who were prominently identified with the Roosevelt administration, among them being James R. Garfield, who was succeeded as secretary of the interior by Richard A. Ballinger.

Pinchot's mission is believed to be to point out to Roosevelt that he cannot possibly continue his policy of remaining silent on things political after he returns to the United States. He will state with utmost frankness that the Roosevelt policies are not being carried out and that it is up to Roosevelt to avoid at all costs any expression of opinion which would be construed as an indorsement of the present administration and indirectly, however unintentionally, reflect upon his old friends who have been striving to carry out his policies. Whether Pinchot will be able to turn the former president from his determination to keep silent upon his return home is a matter of conjecture.

Sherman Uncorks a Big Sneeze While Bacon Talks In Senate

Washington, March 23.—"Ker-ker-ker choo!" Vice President Sherman interrupted Senator Bacon right in the middle of a speech in the senate by sneezing, loudly and emphatically. Senators forgot their dignity and roared, and the galleries joined in the laughter.

The vice president immediately appreciated the humor of the situation and with mock gravity, bringing down his gavel sharply he exclaimed: "The chair will come to order."

Senator Bacon then proceeded without further interruption.

The bill provides for a naval increase of two first-class battleships, one repair ship, two fleet colliers and five submarines.

EUGENE N. FOSS

His Political Faith Recently Changed

REVERSAL OF POPULAR WILL

Complete Overturn In Fourteenth Massachusetts District

FOSS ELECTED TO CONGRESS

Carries Both Cities and Nearly Every Town In Former Republican Stronghold—Considered a Rebuke to Lodge and Machine—Buchanan Says His Defeat Is a Warning to the Republican Party

Boston, March 23.—Eugene N. Foss was elected to congress from the Fourteenth district over William R. Buchanan, the Republican candidate, by a majority of 5640 votes.

His victory is one of the most remarkable ever recorded in the political history of Massachusetts. Foss accomplished what was regarded as a political impossibility by turning a Republican majority of 14,250 into a Democratic victory. He received 14,980 votes, as against 9340 received by his opponent.

The victory of Foss is considered of national importance because of the issues involved in the contest. It is fraught with tremendous significance in Massachusetts, because every effort was made by the Republican machine to defeat the Democratic candidate.

It was the second congressional election held in the country since the passage of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, and both showed Democratic gains.

In every town and hamlet the Democratic candidate charged that the increase in duties in the tariff bill was responsible for the high cost of living. He hammered away at Cannonism and talked the adoption of the income tax and reciprocity with Canada.

Senator Lodge arraigned the Democratic candidate bitterly at a rally in Brockton, and made a defense of the tariff bill on the ground that it was not responsible for the increase in the cost of living.

The fact that the Republican candidate did not carry his home city, and that the big shoe center went for Foss by a majority of 165 votes, was a smashing defeat for Lodge, for it was in that city the senator made his defense of the candidate and his party.

The fact that the Fourteenth district is not only the Republican stronghold of the state, but one of the strongest Republican districts in the entire country, adds to the importance of the victory.

Chairman Hatfield of the Republican state committee strained every nerve to hold the machine in line. Every officeholder on the Cape was given leave of absence to work in the district, and the federal officeholders were urged to do their utmost to hold the vote up.

Not one town or city in the district is normally Democratic, and with the exception of a few scattering towns Foss swept everything before him. The voters practically somersaulted. Buchanan only carried ten towns of the forty-four and two cities that comprise the district.

That the people were interested in the issues and anxious to support their opinions was shown by the unusually heavy vote for a by-election. With the Socialist vote, which may reach 500, more than 25,000 ballots were cast yesterday. On the gubernatorial vote last year only 26,952 ballots were cast, and in the last presidential year, 1908, when the late Congressman Lovering was re-elected, only 27,668 ballots were thrown in the district.

The strength of the Foss vote was shown in the two cities in the district, Brockton and Taunton, both of which he gathered into his column, and in addition taking all the big towns, with the exception of Attleboro, which he lost by five votes. He also captured the majority of the little towns on Cape Cod.

Mr. Buchanan attributed his defeat to the belief of the people of the district that the tariff bill was responsible for the increased cost in the necessities of life.

"If the result of the voting will serve to convince the Republican leadess that something must be speedily accomplished in the way of lowering the cost of living," said Buchanan, "I shall feel that my defeat is not without value, not only to the people at large, but to the Republican party as well."

Mr. Foss made this comment:

"The result is no personal victory. It is a vindication of the principles for which I have fought so long. It is a demand by the people that the Republican party fulfill its pledge for an honest reduction of the tariff. It is a demand for the immediate repeal of Section 2 of the Payne-Aldrich act, which substitutes retaliation for reciprocity, and threatens commercial warfare with our best customers. It is a demand that Canada be treated decently."

WASHINGTON GETS THE NEWS

Congressman Foss Calls Election of His Brother a "Miracle"

Washington, March 23.—The election of Eugene N. Foss in the district of the late Representative Lovering (Republican) aroused great interest in the house and an announcement of the Democratic victory on the floor caused loud applause from that side of the chamber.

To none, however, did the election have so deep an interest as to Representative Foss of Illinois, who is a Republican. The brothers came originally from Vermont.

"My brother's election is nothing less than a miracle," said Foss, "but he is a great fighter and I am not surprised. We are very fond of each other, but I suppose we will have some warm times when he comes down here and sits in the chamber opposite me."

APPEALS ARE MADE TO CONGRESSMEN

Merchants Want to Avoid Tariff War With Canada

Washington, March 23.—Members of the house whose districts are along the Canadian boundary line have received numerous telegrams from American merchants urging them to do all in their power to prevent the imposition of maximum rates upon Canadian products.

The members are anxiously awaiting the result of the conference between President Taft and Earl Grey, the Canadian governor general. Nearly every lumber dealer in Buffalo signed a telegram which reached the house protesting against the establishment of the maximum rates on Canadian lumber, saying it would result in Canadian redwood being barred from entry, "with fatal results to the business interests and exorbitant prices to consumers."

Representatives Driscoll, Alexander, Vreeland and nearly all of the New York members have received numerous dispatches. Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota also appear to be stirred up.

SPOKANE WANTS SPINSTERS

Newton's Fair Ones Can Secure Husbands If They Go West

Newton, Mass., March 23.—Newton's spare spinsters are wanted in far Spokane. So much is admitted by Mayor Hatfield.

Mayor Hatfield admitted the receipt of a letter from the secretary of the Pacific Correspondents' club of Spokane, Wash., in which it was requested that he ask any of the surplus females of his constituency to communicate with him if they wish well-to-do Spokane residents as husbands.

A recent canvass by women's club members showed five females to every four males in Newton.

CHANGE IN COIFFURE

Still Larger Projection at the Back and Covered With Curls and Puffs.

Persons who imagined that simplicity and natural hair would be the outcome of the flat coiffure were mistaken.

It is probable that every one made this error at one time during the few months that America has been struggling with the "simple coiffure." In the first place it does not prove simple; in the second place it did not remain flat, and in the third place few women liked it in its natural and original form.

It took the American woman nearly a year to make up her mind to adopt the French fashion, and it only took her about three months to follow Paris in the new modification of it. The hesitancy in the beginning did not come from ignorance but from disapproval; the decision in the second place was caused by dissatisfaction.

Women did not like the flat coiffure when they first saw it, and they liked it less when they wore it, and, although it is still the fashion, it is not "the" fashion. There is a great difference, you know, in the way you put the accent.

The braided coiffure did not have the ghost of a chance. It was unanimously voted against from the beginning. There were few, if any, faces that looked well when framed in it. It was too snug, too severe. It did not have anything artistic to recommend it. It did not suit the American face. It went with a passive, peasant type of face and there is nothing of these qualities in the American face in any class of life.

We have certain faces that look very well with simple hair dressing but it must be the kind that does not wrap the head. It may be parted in front and drawn away to a loose knot back of the ears or even in the nape of the neck, but there must be something individual about it.

The two braids pinned close to the skull had no character, and were utterly unfit for our alert, vigorous expression.

The American girl very rightly felt that in this coiffure she looked as though she were going to a bath. People said so, and a few glances at herself in the mirror made her conscious of it. We are not a negligе type; our faces need real hair dressing above them. It may be simple, but it must have some air to it.

Instead of the braid the swirl was used. This was the fashion Paris had adopted about six months before America. The hair was swirled about the head, and the whole effect was flat and caplike. The pompadour was omitted, only a trace of wave was left, and even the tips of the ears were held down by the tightly drawn ropes of hair.

There was no bulge anywhere, no projection. Every effort was made to keep the hair quite flat and preserve the shape of the head.

This is the fashion that still obtains among the extremists. It is not the newest idea, nor the most popular one, nor the most attractive.

We have decided that the shape of our heads needs something ornate, therefore the last month has seen a decided change in hairdressing. The projection at the back has exceeded the largest artificial crown that has been made. It is not even built on a crown, but on a cushion. It is covered with curls or finger puffs, or both, and it compromises withtheother style of hairdressing by having a swirl of hair at its base. This only serves to pyramid it further out at the back.

It is perilously near the Grecian style of coiffure, which was adopted by the Bonaparte women under Napoleon.

The large pompadour has not returned, for it would be out of all keeping with the egg-shaped projection at the middle of the head. The hair is slightly waved and rippled away from the brow, with or without a parting, and securely brushed up from the nape of the neck.

It is difficult to describe in just what essentials this ultra-new coiffure differs from the one we wore a year ago when a pyramid of puffs was in fashion. Possibly the most striking difference is the flattened effect around the line where the hair grows. Last year this rose in a huge mass to meet the puffs that were placed in the middle of the head, but now it is minus the roll or a crepe, and therefore it stands only on its own body and waviness for lifting it from the head.

Another difference is in the method of building the pyramid at the back. Last year flat, neat, regular puffs were used, and they were pinned to the head and surrounded by a pompadour. Today the puffs are open at one end, merely curled around the finger and left loose. They are mounted on a cushion of false hair that carries them far out from the head, and there is always a swirl of hair, or a bandeau or a ribbon to tie around the base of the pyramid, and make it a decided contrast to the flattened lines over the rest of the head.

Young girls wear this cushion of finger puffs and curls to extend over the whole top of their heads, leaving merely a line of their own hair showing around the face and neck. Instead of a swirl of hair, which would make the coiffure ungracefully heavy in connection with so many puffs ,they wear a ribbon of metal or gauze or velvet, or a scarf of tulle. The latter is very popular.

This ribbon bandeau is not tied in a bow. Its ends are tucked away, and sometimes they are held in place at the back with a long Grecian barrette of rhinestones or colored crystals.

This elaborated coiffure is not suitable for the street of the morning. It is the one for hatless affairs, whether in the afternoon or evening. It is especially the hairdressing for the theatre and opera.

But in a measure it is copied for street wear in that the swirl is omitted and the small puffs placed just under the brim of the hat, at the back. To get the flat effect there is a band of black velvet ribbon passed around the head, about an inch above the ears and crossing in front. It is often held in place in the back by a long, slender barrette.

The velvet band is lighter and more comfortable than the heavy switch of hair. The latter has caused much discomfort because of its weight and its ability to overheat the head. Wherever it can be dispensed with that much the better, so women are taking up the velvet band for the street, and the tulle or jewelled one for the evening.—New York Times.

BRIEFS

Cumming C. Giardino, a tailor of Boston, residing in this city, has filed a petition in bankruptcy; assets $1,499; liabilities $3,685.

The R. B. Whist club of Wollaston Park held a gentlemen's night on Monday evening with Mrs. Samuel Chapman of Willow street. A supper and whist were enjoyed.

F. W. Woolworth ,the 5 and 10 cent store magnate who is to open two stores about the middle of April in the Adams building has recently purchased for $2,000,000 land and buildings at the southeast corner of Broadway and Park place, New York city.

Presidents and secretaries of neighboring clubs were the guests, March 17, of the Daughters of Vermont, at the Vendome. Before the reception a most delightful musicale was given by the Helen Reynolds trio and the Westland quartet.

Members of the Cochato club, Braintree ,are anticipating much pleasure from the musical program to be presented Friday evening at the clubhouse by the Westland quartet. The quartet apepared in Salem last week, under the auspices of the Emerson club ,and the concert was considered the most successful even in the Emerson club course.

The grand old elm trees about the Thomas Crane library are gradually succumbing to old age, moths and the elements. This week the remains of the one injured in the Christmas snowstorm has been cut down. It is hoped another row of trees will be started on Washington street to replace those lost.

Arthur Robinson who is about to leave for the western part of New York to learn scientific farming on a large farm, is giving a farwell party to his friends on Friday evening. A joyous time is anticipated by the younger set of Norfolk Downs and Atlantic. Mr. Robinson is very popular and will be greatly missed.

A social gathering of the class of '09 of the Braintree High school was held at the home of J. Carlton McNeil last evening at his home, 769 Washington street, Quincy Point. Although Mr. McNeil was never a member of the B. H. S., yet he is a favorite with all the members of the class of '09. The class met to decide what was to be done with the money left in the class treasury and at last it was voted to add more to it and make up a theatre party. Business over, a social evening was enjoyed. Ice cream and cake were served. The party broke up early as most of the members had to take the car to Braintree.

TWO NEW BATTLESHIPS.

The naval appropriation bill, was reported to the National House on Tuesday by the naval committee. The bill provides for a naval increase of two first-class battleships, one repair ship, two fleet colliers and five sub-marines.

The fire was discovered by Mr. Carruthers who telephoned to the fire station and then tried to put out the fire with the aid of a lawn hose.

Beofre they got it under control the fire department arrived and made short work of it with chemical streams It was necessary to do some cutting away however with axes to get at the fire. The loss will be less than $100.

MERCHANTS' WEEK

Two subjects were before the Quincy Retail Merchants' Association at a special meeting on Tuesday evening. Resolutions in favor o fthe Ocean Mail bill were adopted heartily. The meetingthen enthused over the proposed "Merchants' Week" to be held in May. The committee are Henry L. Kincaide, T. L. Williams and George W. Jones and they have received considerable encouragement. Several besides the committee spoke in favor and offered suggestions, including R. E. Foy, A. L. Whitman, George W. Wheeler, D. J. S. COUNCIL OF FIELD OFFICERS

Held by Brigadier Nilson of Salvation Army

Tuesday was a great day for the Salvationists of Quincy when Brigader Olaf Nilson, the leader of the Scandinavian Salvation Army work in the East held a council at the Temple on Granite street, assisted by Major Christophensen, the New England leader. Among those present was Staff Captain B. Winkoist of New York, Adjutant M. Englestad of Providence, the divisional financial secretary, and 20 or more field officers representing different parts of New England. Important matters were considered, and then a dinner was served.

Previous to the evening meeting for the public, there was a parade headed by a brass band. The Temple was crowded at 8 o'clock. The meeting opened with songs and testimonies. Brigadier Nilson spoke on the subject:—"With empty hands you entered this world, and with empty hands you have to leave it."

DR. TODD'S ANNIVERSARY

His Church at South Boston to Burn Mortgage

Rev. James Todd, D. D., seems to be as successful in other pastorates as he was at the Water Street Presbyterian church in this city. A Boston paper says the Fourth Presbyterian church, corner of Dorchester and Silver streets South Boston, will celebrate this evening the paying off of the mortgage which has been a hindrance to their work, by burning it in public in the church. The mortgage was for $6000 and has been on it for many years. It was taken over by this church when it was purchased in 1888.

They will also celebrate the 25th anniversary of the ordination of the pastor, the Rev. James Todd, D. D., who has been the pastor of this church for over five years. His labors have been very successful in adding largely to the membership and influence of this church. He has been pastor of Presbyterian churches in three countries, beginning his ministry in Scotland 25 years ago.

CAREER OF JOHANSON.

How Champion Marathoner Started Lives on Vegetables and Hardtack.

Thure Johanson, the wonderful Marathon champion, who knocked several minutes off the old world's record, held by St. Yves, subsists principally on rye hardtack, every loaf of which has a large hole in the middle.

Every Marathon runner can't become a champion by restricting the main part of his diet to "knackerbrod," the Swedish national bread, a hard, dry, disk shaped affair which looks somewhat like a phonographic record. American runners wouldn't find much nutriment in that sort of stuff, particularly when all the loaves have great holes in their centers. There is little nourishment in the holes of "knackerbrod."

Thure at the age of thirteen left home and went to work in a grocery store in the nearby village. From early morning until late at night he stood on his feet behind the counter doling out smoked fish and other commodities to the natives. At closing time he would pass the public plaza on his way home. Under the electric lights he would see a crowd of young athletes running about. One night a friend induced him to hang up his coat and join the runners. He found that the exercise refreshed him to such an extent that he could go through the day in the little stuffy store without feeling the usual fatigue. From that time on Thure ran every night.

"Come with me to the athletic meeting in the next village, and we will both run a mile or so just for the fun of it," said his chum one afternoon.

"But I'm not through at the store until late," said Johanson, "and I wouldn't win anything."

However, he trotted the three miles to the village where the games were being held, arriving just as they were putting on the last event. To quote Johanson:

"I just had time to take off my coat and vest and put on a pair of rubber shoes and get into the race. I was amazed to find that I was running away from all those fellows, who had been competing right along. I won that race by a good margin.

"I had been eating a great deal of meat and found it made me feel heavy and tired. I had heard of the vegetarians and decided to try their diet. That was three years ago, and today I'm a different man. I wasn't satisfied with plain rye bread, so I started using the hardtack we use at home."

KETCHEL EPIGRAMS ON FIGHTING GAME.

I read the knocks through; I throw away the boosts.

It took me five years of training to win the middleweight championship. Now I am going to live the way I want to.

If a fighter hasn't got the punch he might as well quit the ring.

I notice that the man at the top hasn't any trouble in finding friends. I wonder how they look from the toboggan.

There are always people who will spend a lot of time advising a champion. Why don't they advise the man who's coming up? He needs it.

I know colored fighters who are whiter than white ones.

It's the people who guess at what I do that bother me. I never am bothered by those who know what I do.

I don't fight because I like it. I fight because I can make more money at it than I could by shoveling sand around the equator—and make it a lot quicker.

There probably have been a lot of square fighters who turned crooked because they were constantly charged with being off the level. The game goes with the name sometimes.

A man's color doesn't denote the quality of his punch.

It's a cinch that any one who sticks to the game is going to get trimmed. The thing is to know when to quit, and I notice that there isn't one in a thousand who does.

Affect Only Rowdies.

The new contracts of the big league clubs hold the players pretty close, but only the rowdy players will be greatly affected.

KILEY AND SMITH

Now the Champion Two-Men Bowling Team

(By Rube.)

Things got moving in fine shape at the Granite street alleys last night when the two men teams got together to decide the bowling championship of Norfolk county.

If the fans were disappointed over the previous attempts to start the fun, they were well repaid for waiting, for last night appeared Kiley and Smith of Weymouth, Grant and White of Quincy and Poland and Connell. The last named was a misfit team, Poland's partner, Lyons, failing to show up and Connell of Weymouth taking his place.

The Quincy enthusiasts were given plenty of chances to let out, for on the very first string Grant landed the high score of 104. Some fine rolling was witnessed, as can be judged by the scores found below. Grant got the high total with 447, Kiley was second with 443, then came Smith with 441, White 432, Poland 418 and Connell 411.

The final result was a win for Kiley and Smith, they having a lead of 5 pins over Grant and White, and 55 pins over Poland and Connell.

Other contests will follow in a near future, when Bugbee and Guinon of Norfolk Downs and others will undoubtedly compete. Watch the Daily Ledger for full particulars of the coming games.

DRUGGED CIGARET KNOCKED HIM OUT

Confidence Men Separate $1300 From a Brooklyn Man

New York, March 23.—Through the agency of a drugged cigaret that they gave to him, two confidece men were enabled to rob John Smith, a Polish proprietor of a Brooklyn boarding house, of $1300 in cash when his mind became confused and clouded from the effects of the narcotic.

Smith had fallen into the gutter and walked in such a zig-zag and aimless way that a policeman, who said he at first thought him intoxicated, took hold of him. The policeman had him attended by a physician.

After he had recovered somewhat he discovered that $1300 in currency that he had carried in one of his pockets had disappeared. Then he told the police of his accidentally meeting two men and his smoking a cigaret that had a peculiar taste and that made him dizzy.

New York, March 23.—Police Commissioner Baker announces that in compliance with Mayor Gaynor's letter he has ordered that hereafter no prisoner be measured or photographed for the rogues gallery unless he has been tried and convicted, or has pleaded guilty to the commission of a crime.

The mayor's letter was sent to the commissioner after Rev. James F. Chalmers, vicar of the Church of the Holy Trinity, had complained that a parishioner of his had been photographed and measured after four detectives had wrongfully arrested him as a "Black Hand" suspect.

DAYLIGHT ROBBERY

Atlantic Man Held Up on Albion Street, Boston

A morning paper reports that Frank Jenkins of 146 Billings street, Atlantic, was held up on Albion street, Boston, on Wednesday afternoon and robbed of a $100 gold watch and money and checks aggregating $2,500. Three young men were arrested a few minutes later for the hold up and it is reported that they confessed. They reported that they saw Mr. Jenkins walking up Tremont street counting money and forced him into a doorway at 82 Albion street, where they took the money. A merchant who saw the transaction notified the police and the three men were arrested in a Pleasant street pool room. They had just arrived back at the police station when Mr. Jenkins walked into notify the police. He identified the three men as the parties who had robbed him.

NOON ALARM.

The alarm from Box 42 at 12.06 this noon was for a slight fire on the roof of one of John Evans buildings on Copeland street. The fire probably started from a grass fire and did but little damage. The recall sounded promptly.

ACCIDENT TO TEAMSTER.

A driver of one of Fletcher's stone teams had a very narrow escape from a serious if not fatal accident Wednesday in Charlestown. The man, whose name is Webster, started from Quincy with a monument from the yard of John L. Miller for Charlestown. While in Charlestown square he met a coal team driven by a boy. Webster was on the ground and in order to hurry one of his horses, so as to avoid a collision with the coal team, he hit one of his animals. The horse resented the blow and kicked out. The hoof struck Webster, knocking him beneath the passing coal team. One of the wheels passed over his hand, crushing it badly. The coal team was stopped just in time to prevent the rear wheels passing over his head, for when stopped, Webster was on the ground between the forward and rear wheels of the coal wagon. Tupper Miller, who was on the stone team with the driver, took the injured man to a physician, and had his injuries dressed.

NEW YORK TRIP.

Leo J. McMaster and Councilman John D. Smith are taking in some of the many sights in the city of New York today. Both attended the launch at the Fore River on Wednesday and took the special for Boston. Arriving in the Hub, one dared the other to go on to New York on the special. One had $14 in his pocket and the other 42 cents. The dare was taken, however, and on being informed by the private secretary of Commodore James, that it would be all right, the two started for the Empire state. Postals received from them this morning announced that they arrived safely.

EXPRESS PERMITS

Not an Easy Problem for the City Council to Settle

It would seem as though the City Council had other lengthy meetings ahead, for when the matter of granting permits to transport liquor comes up it is sure to create a great deal of debate. While some of the Council will doubtless oppose the granting of any at all, there are quite a few, who while favoring No-license, do not think the Council should put itself on record of violating the law.

Then, if but one permit was granted and that man was allowed to put on all the teams he desires, the privilege would be worth many thousands of dollars to him. Some people have even gone as far as to state that in their opinion the exclusive right to transport liquor into Quincy for one year would be worth $25,000 to the man who held it.

That there is big money in the transportation of liquor is shown by the fact that the expressing on a case of beer is twenty-five cents, the charge made by the expressman, who is also given another twenty-five cents by the firm from whom he buys the beer in Boston. Thus he gets fifty cents profit on every case transported. Some of the expressmen bring as many as fifty cases of beer to town a day giving them $25 for their day's work.

One or two novel suggestions were made at the hearing before the Committee on Licenses Monday evening in the matter of granting permits to transport liquor. Alfred Bishop of the Water Street Presbyterian church thought if but one was granted it would create a monopoly which he was against. He thought that an attempt should be made to repeal the law.

Mr. Bennett of the Wollaston Methodist church suggested the idea of finding an expressman who would refuse to take advantage of the privileges granted under the permit, and who would refuse to transport liquor when given a permit.

A. N. Murray of the Men's club of the Wolaston Methodist church believed if one expressman put on a lot of teams it would be bad. He would under these conditions feel like disobeying the law and not grant any.

Upon vote the delegates were practically unanimous against granting any permits.

SENTENCE FOR ASSAULT.

Judge Avery imposed a sentence of three months in the house of correction Wednesday on William McKenzie, a workman at the Fore River. It seems that McKenzie came from Boston on Sunday night somewhat the worse for liquor and took a car for Quincy Point. When he left the car he was in fighting trim and challenged the conductor to get off and have a scrap. The conductor declined to accommodate McKenzie. The conductor however, did get off the car to assist a lady, and as he was doing so, McKenzie struck him a savage blow in the face, breaking his glasses. The assault was reported to the police and McKenzie's arrest followed with the result as noted above. An appeal was taken and he was held in $500.

TODAY'S COURT.

William McKenzie was sentenced to three months in the house of correction for assault on a street car conductor at Quincy. Appealed.

William E. Crossman was fined $5 for having five smelts in his possession at Weymouth.

William Hopkins was sent to the State farm for being a tramp at Braintree.

Hugh McIntyre was fined the costs amounting to $1.45, for drunkenness at Randolph.

Alvah J. Snow was arraigned for drunkenness at Milton. Case placed on probation until July 1.

PLAYGROUND AND FOUNTAIN

Wanted by the Associates at Houghs Neck

Live subjects were before the Houghs Neck Associates at their regular meeting on Wednesday evening. The attendance was one of the largest recently held, and there seemed to be a desire to pull together.

President Daniel Maloney was in the chair. Reports were received from the committee on sewers, on gas extension to Rock Island, on firemen, and on police, all of which were accepted as progressive.

H. W. French reported that Congressman O'Connell had been interested in the movement to secure a weather signal on Great hill.

Capt. Fosdick suggested that the city be asked to purchase the Norteman lot for a public playground.

The idea of a playground met with favor, but many thought it would be better to secure the ice pond site which could be improved and be used both winter and summer.

The following committee was appointed to consider playground and location,— O. G. Fosdick, M. G. Coughlan, H. W. French, Ross Woodbury and W. H. Hudson.

Movements were also started to establish a public toilet and a fountain in the vicinity of the steamboat landing.

A suggestion of Capt. Fosdick, that the cost of the fountain be borne by Associates, if the city would maintain the toilet met with favor. A committee was appointed, and they invite granite manufacturers of Quincy to submit designs and estimates.

Relative to Boston milk, which is sold in the Metropolitan district, the State Board says: "The milk supplied to Boston is largely furnished by four or five large milk firms. This milk is retailed by these contractors to small firms, and it also distributed widely by the contractors themselves. Much of the milk is mixed at the milk depots, to secure standard and uniform qualities. Unfortunately, this mixing of the milk from many sources greatly favors the dissemination of any infection of the milk that may have taken place."

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Six years in jail and a fine of $15,000 for an oleo man seem to be equivalent to a new declaration—that the food of America must be what it is represented to be.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

A Maryland judge recently objected to the name cop being applied to a policeman. "A police officer," he said, "is not a 'cop,' but a policeman." The term is of ancient origin, dating back to the time when the London police force was first adorned with badges. These were made of copper, and after a time, the men who wore them became known as coppers, but later the word was shortened to cop. It may not be a very elegant term, but it is expressive, and is likely to stand until some other and better slang phrase is discovered or invented: However, the judge had a right to object to the use of the term in court. He was correct in insisting that only legal phrases and lawful designations should be used in the conduct of court business. Outside of his jurisdiction the popular usage will continue to prevail, and few policemen will object to it.—Lynn Item.

The system of taxation in operation in Massachusetts has long been a source of dissatisfaction and complaint. Commissions have been appointed from time to time to look into the working of the prevailing method the working of prevailing methods and see if they could discover some way of improvement; but no satisfactory result has been reached. One reason that there has been no radical change is found in the requirement of the state constitution that taxes must be "proportional," that is, levied at the same rate upon all classes of property. In a great many of the states there is no such restriction, and Legislatures have the power of classifying property for taxation. An attempt is now being made to change the Bay state constitution in this respect.

A constant cause of complaint has been the inequality of the burdens imposed by the provisions of the personal tax law. It is charged that capital and industry are greatly hampered by the high valuation put upon machinery in the manufacturing towns and cities, and investigation has shown that intangible personal property to extent of many millions escapes taxation altogether. This latter fact has led to the transfer of the expense of government more and more from personal property to real estate, which cannot escape. The property on which payment of taxes has been avoided is mostly in the form of corporation securities, and its existence has been disclosed in the past year by the operation of the inheritance tax law, which compelled an inventory of estates.

The dodging of taxes by wealthy people through removal from cities to country places, where the rates were lower and where assessors favored them, has led to the proposition which is now being considered that Massachusetts shall enact a law providing that the tax on all personal property shall be collected by the state tax commissioner at, say, the average state rate, and by him be paid into the treasuries of the cities and towns. There would then be no escape by the would-be tax-dodger, for the tax commissioner could collect from him anywhere in the state.

In Maryland, where a special act was passed in 1896, setting a small fixed and uniform tax on intangible sonal property, the amount disclosed has reached the figures of $158,000,000, when under the old system but $6,000,000 worth could be found. The strongest arguments appear to be on the side of classification.—Christian Science Monitor.

The Newburyport News has heard that in the west a good many people regard New England as a place with a fine past but a negligible present. There are other people in the west, however, who have an idea that New England is an excellent place Some of them, as has been noted already, have sent word east that they would like to negotiate for farm lands in this part of the world, as they find conditions here in many respects superior to conditions in the western country. New England is by no means going back. Her farm land is considered worth while now, although it can easily be recalled that the "abandoned farms" as they were called were so numerous at one time that they were a matter of common comment and some alarm. As for the manufacturing interests of this section, they were never so strong and never so energetically conducted as they are today. The district has always been a fine one in which to live, and in the summer time people come in armies to make their homes in the farm lands, the beaches or the mountains of our portion of God's footstool. People who are living in New England are pretty pleasantly situated. Going back? We should say not. Going forward all the timt is the best part of New England, and setting a fast pace for the rest of the country to follow.—Brockton Enterprise.

Chicago found Mr. Taft outspoken and courageous. He tried to dodge nothing or nobody while he was here. Furthermore, he showed that he possesses to an unusual degree the quality of "Stick-to-it-iveness." And it cannot be gainsaid that his balanced judgment appealed even to the conservation extremists who heard him. When we add to this summary the fact that Chicago was impressed anew with the absolute sincerity of the resident, we believe that we present unquestionable proof that both the city and the President owe a real debt of gratitude to the Irish Fellowship Club for bringing him out here. —Chicago Post.

BOYS OF TODAY.

The Boston Commercial Bulletin, on the subject of youth of the present generation, recently gave expression to these fevered words:

"Where are the boys? What has become of the public school boy who used to play peg-top, marbles, baseball and hockey on the Common, and 'fire' his crackers on the hill on the Fourth of July? who coasted on the long path from Beacon to West street in winter? Can you find a boy now who knows the difference between an an alley, a twoser, an agate or a chinee? How long since you have seen a boy driving hoop? Where are boys who graduated from public school and entered a store? Who took down two sections of heavy shutters swept and dusted the store and then went to breakfast when the next in rank came down? Oh, yes, they are so-called boys, whose hair is combed and curled monkey fashion over their eyes, or wear a penwiper for a cap on the back of their heads, smoke cigarettes, are interested in variety shows and whose first question when seeking a place is, 'What yer goin' ter pay? But the old, hardy, bright lovable New England boy is no more, and so Admiral Bob Evans exclaims against the overeducation of New England and regrets the lack of practical education of boys.

The boys have grown prosperous, we should say. That is the experience of those who have occasion now and then to employ one on an errand or any little matter of business. Boys of our youthful days would work half the day for a quarter, and think it pretty good pay. Now if you ask a boy to go a quarter of a mile and bring back a package weighing a half-pound you have an experience. The boy doesn't want to go and you have to work on his finer feelings to get him to start at all. Then, if he generously agrees to help you out, comes the haggling over the price to be paid. Unless it is worth as much as the average adult is paid for an hour's labor at his business, the boy is not eager for the job, and his attitude shows it. A dime he will probably scorn. He wants real money, and your best plan, if you want quick results and want to save yourself a goodly amount of cigar money, is to do the errand yourself.

Most of the boys of today are older and wiser and more aged in every way than was formerly the case. They do not think of so much work, and they do think a lot more of financial results of such toil as they are induced to do.

—F. Hopkinson Smith is more than right about New York city being the most insolent city in the world. Everybody knows this except New Yorkers. They do not realize the absence of courtesy, because courtesy has been so long absent. Politeness from a stranger would make a New Yorker stare in surprise. But, fortunately, New York is a small part of these United States, and becomes relatively of less importance to the rest of the nation every day. New York may be as ill-mannered as it likes. Other parts of the country still retain the virtues of hospitality and kindliness, and delight to exercise them.

LETTERS OF PUBLIC INTEREST

PHIPPS STREET AGITATED

Over Location for the New Tuberculosis Camp

Editor of the Quincy Daily Ledger:

The question of the location of the Tuberculosis Camp in the immediate vicinity of Phipps street, it seems to me, has been treated from a good many standpoints, all of which are under the jurisdiction of the Board of Health. It certainly has appeared to the residents of this section a menace to health and other comforts. But to my mind a very important factor has been overlooked in the objections set forth against the location of said camp i. e. the financial side of the question.

Those who have gone to persons who are promoting this charitable affair know how they have been received, and how they have been convinced (?) that the camp cannot be a menace under the care and supervising of competent nurses and physicians who will have charge of it. The pros and cons have been thrashed out in the City Council chamber, and we have received no satisfaction so far.

How far the convincing powers of these people have gone I wouldn't care to estimate. My estimate might be as void of value as the property in this district will be in future. This camp has been placed in its present location because it saves the city of Quincy a few hundred dollars. It must be connected with the sewer. Phipps street has no sewer, consequently it must be put through and the cost to each proverty holder will be almost as much as the amount the city hopes to save by changing its former location. But even with sewer connections the land in this vicinity has depreciated one-third if not more and still the only satisfaction we get is additional expense and the knowledge that the payment of it is compulsory. I wonder if taxes will be lowered and each man's land assessed according to its true value. What a low tax rate there will be if the assessors are as charitable as the Tuberculosis society.

Very funny no city official ever noticed that Phipps street has never had even a sidewalk, not to say the improvements which the sewer would make possible. And stranger still, people have lived to a ripe old age here with out either. I suppose we could petition for a great many things to improve this section, but certainly we didn't have to petition for a Tuberculosis camp. It was erected without any regard for people or their properties. I don't know of any one who remembers signing a petition for a levy of a few additional dollars on their tax bills or water rates.

Now, I firmly believe in charity and charitable institutions and my sympathy is with anyone afflicted with the dreaded "white plague, "but I must admit that I also believe "charity begins at home, "and I wonder why the camp was not erected among those who have such an interest in outside charities and their promotion instead of where it is. It would be more convenient for all parties concerned I am sure, and as far as we are concerned, much more charitable. It is not only a menace to health and comfort in every way, but it is the cause of the depreciation of every foot of land on Phipps street, and the heaping of debt on every property holder's shoulders. If the debt would benefit any one that would be compensation, but when land cannot be either sold or let, when a bank refuses to give a mortgage to persons intending to erect a house, what good can additional expense be?

Will one of the charitable members of this society, or one of our city officials who have refused even to admit what they plainly see, make a few of these facts clear or just. I think even sarcasm or derision cannot make residents of this section believe that charity covereth all these offences against us.

Insurance Investigation Threatens Wider Exposures

NO ONE IS TO BE SPARED

Sullivan Denies Backing $10,000 Proposition to Kill Bill Hostile to Insurance Interests, Mentioned In Testimony—Deputy Clerk In New York Senate Admits Receiving Money For Imparting Information

New York, March 24.—Following a trail that has already led to highly sensational disclosures, William H. Hotchkiss, state superintendent of insurance, is continuing his investigation of the maintenance of a lobby at Albany by the fire insurance companies.

Mr. Hotchkiss is confident that there are still a great many important revelations to be made and is prepared to carry his inquiry to the limit. Some of those identified with him believe that the surface has only been scratched and that before the superintendent has finished examining fire insurance underwriters his investigations will reach the proportions of the legislative probe of the life insurance companies some years ago.

Politicians all over the state have been amazed by the bringing of the name of Senator Timothy D. Sullivan into the inquiry. This incident has furnished the basis of the biggest sensation up to the present time, but the opinion prevails that other names and personalities will be linked with the charges of legislative corruption. Hotchkiss has announced that no one is to be spared and has proceeded on the principle that the witnesses before him must cite specific cases, giving names, dates and minute details.

Senator Sullivan has returned to this city from Albany. He reiterated his denial of the statements made on the witness stand by George F. Seward, president of the Fidelity and Casualty company, who declared that some years ago he was approached by a man named Brown with a hold-up proposition that he pay $10,000 to kill a bill in the legislature that was hostile to the insurance interests. According to Seward, this man asserted that he spoke in behalf of Sullivan.

Next to the Sullivan incident in point of interest was the admission by Cornelius Shufelt of Chatham, N. Y., formerly a deputy clerk in the senate committee on insurance, that he had received money from life insurance companies for supplying them with information. This development will be the subject of further probing by Hotchkiss, who is anxious also to obtain more evidence of the character of that furnished by Seward.

Coleman and Lockhart Arraigned and Released When Bail Is Renewed

Boston, March 24.—George W. Coleman and his chum, Wilson W. Lockhart, pleaded not guilty when arraigned in the United States circuit court to four indictments which were returned against each of them in connection with the looting of the National City bank of Cambridge, of which Coleman was the bookkeeper and Lockhart the substitute.

Mrs. Lucy Lockhart renewed her surety of $15,000 bail for Lockhart, whose father is employed by her as a gardener. Coleman's father and uncle renewed their surety of $50,000 for Coleman.

An investigation by the Washington officials completed yesterday shows Coleman's shortage is $250,000 instead of $160,000.

AT HEAD OF THE HOUSE

Census Finds 5,175 Men and 752 Women

In recent papers have appeared statistics relative to the native and born residents of Quincy, but there are other interesting facts just published about the census of the city in 1905.

Quincy had in that year a population of 28,076, of whom 16,027 were single, 10,604 married, 1,403 widowed, 37 divorced and 5 unknown.

The 14,422 males were divided as follows: Single, 8,603; married, 5,386; widowed, 415; divorced 13; unknown, 5.

The 13,654 females were divided as follows: Single, 7,424; married, 5,218; widowed, 988; divorced 24.

The census found 5,906 families, 8 hotels and 9 institutions. The average size of the families was 4.70.

The census compiles statistics showing the relationship to the head of the house. There are 5,175 men and 752 women who are heads of families. Only 4,821 men in Quincy have wives. There are 6,302 sons and 6,103 daughters who live with their parents. There are in the 5,927 families, 1,881 men boarders and 284 women boarders.

Only 199 heads of families have their fathers or mothers living with them, and they have but 197 father-in-law or mothers-in-law. There are a larger number of brother-in-laws and sister-in-laws, also more grandchildren. Only 521 are employed as servants, or one in every 11 families.

The following table shows the relationship of males and females to the head of the family:

Acres and Bible Letters.
It has sometimes been stated that there are more acres in Yorkshire than there are letters in the Bible. A person hearing the statement for the first time is inclined to doubt it, but it is true, all the same. Authorities differ as to the exact acreage of the county, one giving it as 3,882,848 and another as 3,771,843. But the number of letters in the Bible is said to be 3,566,480, so the acres beat the letters, with something to spare.—London Notes and Queries.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL

Items of Interest to Students and Graduates

The March edition of the Goldenrod has been issued and is well edited: A picture of former Headmaster Leslie L. Cleveland appears as the frontispiece. On the next page is a cut of the baseball team, composed of Harold Prout, Leslie Arthur, William Manning, Frank Harmon, Russell Bates, Brutus Chapman, Millard Chapman, Manager Melvin T. Holbrook, Assistant Manager. Harry Smith and Headmaster Howlett. The editorials are carefully written. In the literary department Editor Alfred Hanson has secured a number of excellent stories: ""The lady in black," by C. H. Sayward 1911; "Greater love hath no man," by Margaret Hall 1910; "The Colonel, Jr." by William Northrop 1910; "A strange Adventure," by Daniel Sullivan 1910; "A dream," by Dorothy Darling 1911; and a skit entitled "Kisses." Editor William Northrop has written up some breezy locals. The athletic notes by Theodore Corey give a brief resume of each of the basketball games, and also of the girls' basketball season. In the alumni notes Miss Mary Cleveland ,the editor, presents three letters from '09 students, descriptive of the college they are now attending,—Wellesley by Lois M. Kendall; Bridgewater Normal by Ada M. Williams and Brown University. Many bright sayings and hits are given in the joke department. There is a drawing by Northrop of comical caricatures and conspicuous characteristics. The "Exchanges" are well selected. Besides these, an original poem, "The Golden Rod" by Sally T. Baker 1910 is printed. The next page is devoted to an "In memoriam," Clarence Tobin Q. H. S. '09. Altogether ,the twenty-four pages are full of interest. The untiring efforts of business manager, Roy L. Sidelinger, should not be forgotten, in giving credit for the excellence of this issue. Surely the staff should feel gratified.

A German comedy "Versalzen," (spoilt with salt) will be read by Miss Dorothy Packard, Miss Nettie Pote, Miss Marion Hicks, Alfred Hanson and Nathaniel Wareham at the next meeting of the German club in the first week of the spring term. The play may possibly be staged, should this reading meet with success.

This week the students are enjoying a short vacation in preparation of nearly three months of study before the close of school.

The results of the trials for the Senior dramatics have been posted. The part of Litterly will be taken by William Northrop; Tweenways by Roy Sidelinger; De Grival by Leon Brown; Mr. Minchin by Harry Levowich; Fitton by Charles Hearn; Youatt, to be chosen; Lady Castlejordan by Isabel Thomas; Noeline by Margaret Hall; Wilhelmina by Anna Larkin; Thomasin by Gladys Bain; and Sergeant Shuter by Sarah Hale. Further announcements as to the patronesses, business manager, etc., will be made immediately after vacation ,as these persons are now being chosen. The members of the cast are studying their parts during the vacation.

It is said there will be a relay race with the Powder Point either March 26 or 27.

Mrs. E. W. Branch visited school March 16 and was much interested in the work.

A number of students have taken advantage of the vacation by making short visits to other towns and cities.

The meet held last week was most successful. The Athletic committee composed of William Northrop 1910, Millard Chapman 1911, Everett Prout 1912, Earl Church 1913, and Mr. Currier and Mr. Blazo deserve praise for their excellent arrangements. The officials should also be commended for making everything go with a snap, as if by clock work. The Juniors were the winners with 28 points. The Seniors secured 19, the class of 1913 third with 11 points, and the Sophomores fourth with 10 points. The men with the highest individual scores were Leslie Arthur 1911 with one first place, two seconds and two thirds. Then Russell Bates 1910 with a first and a second. William Manning had one first place and two thirds. All the events were well contested. The tug of war which was introduced for the first time at this meet proved an interesting feature. The attendance was very good ,for there were about 350 .

A number of schools have tablets or other notices of the persons who have broken records, or have won places in the various meets. They also note the names of the members on the first teams. Something of like nature, as "Who's Who" of the athletic world at Quincy High placed perhaps in the gymnasium might be at least interesting, if not valuable. A record of the majority of the meets has been kept in the Golden Rod and Daily Ledger files, so such a list would not be difficult to prepare.

The Daily Ledger of Saturday last had an interesting sketch of the early history of the Quincy High school, and on Wednesday published a partial list of those to enter the school during the opening year, 1852. The Ledger hopes to complete the list March 31.

Somerville is another place where expensive graduations are discouraged. The subcommittee of the school board voted last night to abolish mass graduation exercises in the grammar schools. The exercises in the High schools will be continued, however. The objection urged against the exercises was based upon the expense to parents, as it had become the custom to have carriages, flowers and other incidentals. The school board of 1900 also recommended that the cost of dresses for girls who graduate from the high schools be kept within moderate bounds.

Last week Watertown voted $100,000 for a new High school building to supplement a gift of $40,000 by H. C. Derby.

"The other day," remarked the observant citizen, in the Brockton Enterprise "one of the teachers in the public schools, of Whitman asked one of the younger girls, whose class was just commencing the study of physiology, to bring a chicken's heart to the school the next day, and they would dissect it. She said that she would explain the different heart functions. The next morning one of the students brought a slice of chicken in a paper bag, and the teacher, armed with a huge carving knife, got ready for the dissection. When she came to open the bag, she thought that it was a rather strange looking heart, and one of the boys, who was versed in the contents of a chicken, exclaimed: That is a gizzard, teacher, it is not a heart. The teacher asked the pupils to kindly refrain from teling of the incident."

The Seniors of the Plymouth High school will present "Mr. Bob" in the Plymouth theatre April 8.

Wallace I. Boyden, principal of the Boston Normal school, believes that before a pupil is admitted to the Normal school to complete her course for the purpose of becoming a teacher she should be subjected to a physical examination that would safe-guard the teaching efficiency of the public school system. This view, which incidentally coincides with that already expressed by the Normal school faculty some years ago, came in the form of a recommendation from Principal Boyden at the regular meeting of the school board.

This week, and for the next few weeks, the historical papers of the Daily Ledger, under the head "Quincy of Yeace Ago," relate to the public schools. They go back to the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries, and show great changes to have taken place in Quincy.

EASTER GUESSING GAME.

An Egg-stravaganza Creates Fun For Evening Party.

Question and answer games are so easy to prepare for and such good fun that a pleasant little evening can be built up from one at a few minutes' notice.

For such a game to be played during the Easter season try the new and lively one called an "Easter extravaganza."

The fun of the evening consists in guessing words beginning with ex, a syllable which for the time being is pronounced like eggs. For example:

What eggs are necessary in answering these questions? Eggs-actitude.
What eggs are always overdone? Eggs-aggeration.
What eggs are high up? Eggs-alted.
What eggs investigate? Eggs-amination.
What eggs are models? Eggs-ample.
What eggs are irritated? Eggs-asperated.
What eggs are fond of digging? Eggs-cavation.
What eggs surpass all others? Eggs-cel.
What eggs are very great? Eggs-ceedingly.
What eggs have a title? Eggs-cellency.
What eggs are not included? Eggs-cept.
What eggs are unusual? Eggs-ceptional.
What eggs are too many? Eggs-cess.
What eggs are bartered? Eggs-change.
What eggs are unquiet? Eggs-citable.
What eggs cry out? Eggs-claim.
What eggs debar? Eggs-clude.
What eggs may be cleared? Eggs-culpable.
What eggs are detestable? Eggs-ecrable.
What eggs make allowances? Eggs-cuse.
What eggs render dire justice? Eggs-ecutioners.
What eggs carry out orders? Eggs-ecute.
What eggs should be imitated? Eggs-emplary.
What eggs are solemn? Eggs-equies.
What eggs are athletic? Eggs-ercise.
What eggs use effort? Eggs-ertions.
What eggs emit? Eggs-hale.
What eggs drain out? Eggs-haust.
What eggs display? Eggs-hibit.
What eggs brace up? Eggs-hilaration.
What eggs advise? Eggs-hort.
What eggs press? Eggs-igency.
What eggs go out? Eggs-it.
What eggs dig up? Eggs-hume.
What eggs live? Eggs-ist.
What eggs are too much? Eggs-orbitant.
What eggs drive out devils? Eggs-orcism.
What eggs are wide? Eggs-pand.
What eggs banish? Eggs-ile.
What eggs look for? Eggs-pect.
What eggs hasten? Eggs-pedite.
What eggs travel? Eggs-pedition.

If the company is a large one each question card can be used by two persons, one gentleman and one lady becoming partners for the evening.

This will reduce the work of copying one-half.

The two persons whose card when filled is pronounced most correct by the hostess and her corps of aids carry off the prize, or, rather, the two prizes.

An hour is a good time limit for the game, all players beginning and ceasing work at the same moment.

Crystal and silver articles in egg forms are just the ones for prizes for such an occasion.

FOLDING STAIRS.

They Can Be Let Down Between Floors or Drawn Up at Will.

An ingenious invention that is a great space saver is the folding stair. This stair works on the lazy tongs principle and can be drawn up or extended at will. All that is needed for this device is a small opening in the floor, large enough to admit a person comfortably. The stair is then fastened to a post at one end and a pair of spring doors fastened under it to open downward. The opening can be guarded by railings if so desired. The apparatus is controlled by a gearing, and when not in use the stair rests in closed position against the top of the post, while the spring doors are closed beneath it, and any person passing below would not know there was a stair there. By turning the crank that operates the gear, however, the stair is extended, pushes its way through the spring doors and comes down to the floor below, where it rests on rollers. With the hand rail for a support one may then ascend it in safety. The device is rather hard on book agents and bill collectors.

FOLDING STAIRS.

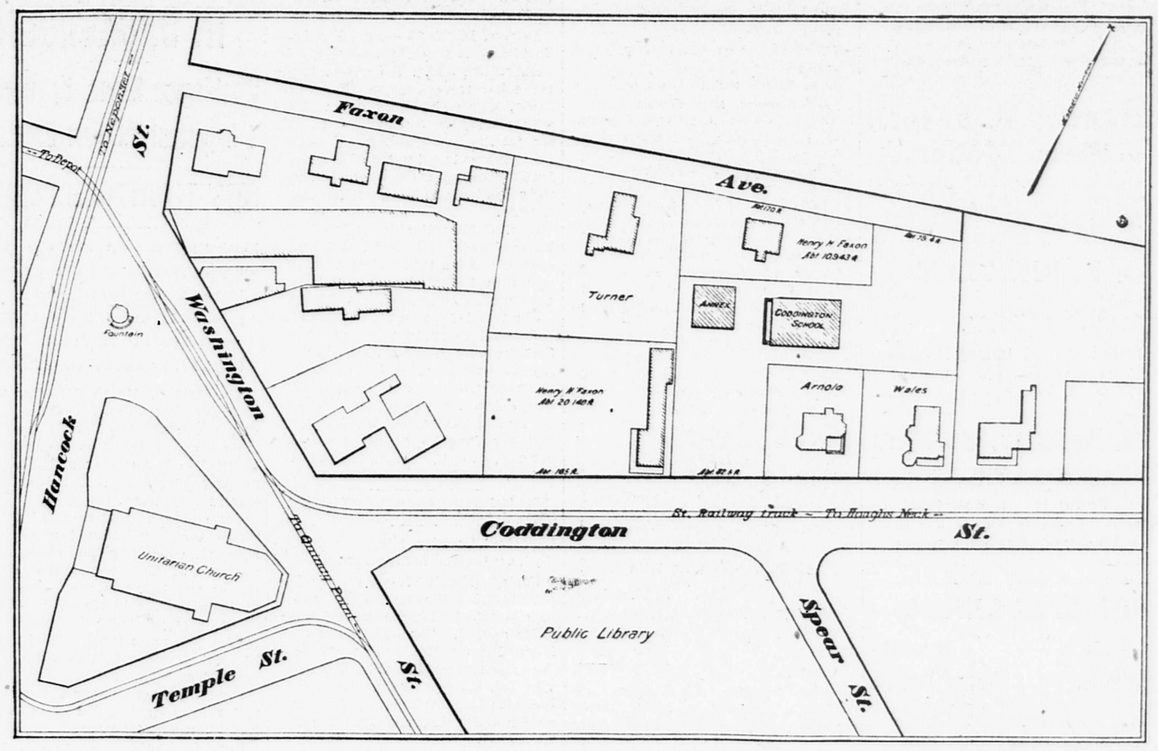
THE APPROACH TO THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY



The above plan shows the location of the Thomas Crane Public Library and how the grounds would look with the office of the Insurance company removed. It was not prepared for this purpose, but was used in connection with the enlargement of the Coddington school lot before the new schoolhouse was erected.

With the office removed the Public Library could be seen from the Quincy depot, and from the sidewalk on Hancock street between Depot street and Saville street. But more particularly as one walks or rides down Washington street from Fountain square toward Quincy Point.

The plan also shows plainly how Temple and Coddington streets fail to make a good connection, yet this is a route much used by school children, and by travel to Houghs Neck and the Mt. Wollaston cemetery. It is necessary that the land be thrown into the street.

Few realize just what the Crane family have done for Quincy. It was the original intention of the late Thomas Crane to expend about $25,000 for a memorial hall for our Public Library, but before the building was completed it cost about $50,000. Nobody in Quincy knows just how much as the widow and her sons never made public the exact amount. Mrs. Crane during her life, and also her son Albert and his wife, have continued to take a great interest in the Library buildings and grounds, and nearly every year have made improvements at large expense.

They have expended over $25,000 in the purchase of adjacent lots from which four houses have been removed, each addition making the grounds more extensive and beautiful. They also established a fund of $20,000, the income of which may be used annually for minor improvements and care of grounds. Only recently Mr. and Mrs. Albert Crane have expended about $65,000, more than the original cost of the building, in making the addition on the Spear street side, which provides not only for all the books of the Library, but also a children's room and other improvements.

Thus it is known that the Crane family have expended fully $175,000 in Quincy, and given the city a beauty spot. The city should not force the family under these circumstances to expend $4,000 to $5,000 more to complete the improvement by the purchase of the property of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company, which comprises but 2,834 square feet of land. Quincy should now show its appreciation of all the family has done by voting promptly the amount required to secure the corner lot and then remove the building which hides the beautiful Library from view.

The total expense to Quincy for the maintenance of this Library is but $9,000 per year. This includes the replacing and purchase of books, periodicals, binding, printing, salaries and assistance, fuel lighting, miscellaneous, catalogue and insurance. The care of the grounds, it will be noticed is not included in these items, as the fund of the Crane family provides for it. As the interest on $175,000 at four per cent would amount to $7,000 the family are really contributing that amount annually to the city of Quincy. Shall we do a little in appreciation?

DANIEL'S DEBT TO GRANT.

How the Virginia Senator's Life Was Saved by the Famous General.

Senator John Warwick Daniel of Virginia, who was born in Lynchburg, Va., on Sept. 5, 1842, while a guest of the Hamilton club at Chicago some years ago told the following story of an event in his life:

"I am going to tell you an incident in the life of General Ulysses S. Grant which has never appeared in print that I know of, but which happened to come within my cognizance," said Senator Daniel.

"Along in January or February, 1865, a young Virginia soldier, about seventeen or eighteen years of age (and I want you to understand that every boy in Virginia from thirteen to fourteen years of age upward was carrying arms at the time), was instructed by his commander, who was Colonel John S. Mosby, to cross the Potomac to a certain postoffice in Maryland and bring to him the mail. He wanted it for the military information he could get out of it.

"This young man was in his full Confederate uniform and, with a comrade or two, proceeded to execute the order. He arrived at the postoffice, and the inconvenient postmaster showed fight. He killed him. He got the mail and brought it and delivered it to his commander. A short time afterward he was captured. He was taken to the city of Washington. He was court martialed and condemned to be shot for murder.

"At that stage of the proceedings his father and mother, whom I knew well—and there were no more respectable and reputable people in Virginia—went to the city of Washington and laid the case before the president of the United States, Andrew Johnson. He referred them to General Grant.

"General Grant sent for the papers and read them over and wrote upon the back of them words to this effect: 'This young soldier, in full uniform, obeyed the orders of his commander. If he had not done so he ought to have been shot. As he did so it would be murder to shoot him. He should be instantly discharged.'

"And that is one reason why I am here and why I am glad to pay the respect of a soldier to the brave, true and honorable American soldier, Ulysses S. Grant."

PLEASING CONTINGENCY.

Fewer Divorces if Men's Coats Buttoned Up Back, Says Dr. Gulick.

If man had the lapels of his coat and his collar and necktie in the middle of his back so his wife would be called upon to assist him in dressing, even as he is called upon to fasten her hooks and eyes, there would be fewer divorces, because conditions would be less one sided. Anyway, this is the belief of Dr. Luther H. Gulick, director of the child hygiene department of the Russell Sage foundation, New York, who spoke on "The New Attitude Toward Health" before the Cook County Teachers' association the other day in Chicago.

"What is needed for the harmony of the homes is more co-operation between man and wife," he said. "A man can dress himself, but a woman has to have assistance."

The Word "Canvassing."

How "canvassing" got its election significance is one of the unsolved puzzles of etymology. The word appears originally to have meant tossing in a canvas or blanket and thence generally mishandling or assaulting. "I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat," is the Duke of Gloucester's threat to the bishop of Winchester in "King Henry VI." The next stage of meaning was that of destructive criticism, from which to thorough discussion—"canvassing" a subject—was simple enough. But how exactly did it arrive at the election sense? Dr. Johnson explained that the term meant "trying votes previously to the decision" and derived it from "canvas, as it signifies a sieve." The Oxford Dictionary, however, is unable to find this use of the word.

Jerusalem.

Old Uncle Jasper was buying a post card in a New Orleans postoffice when a gentleman approaching the next window had a small parcel weighed and stamped for Jerusalem. On this gentleman's departure Uncle Jasper chuckled and said:

"He was jokin', wasn't he?"

"Not at all," returned the clerk.

"My, oh, my!" cried Uncle Jasper in an awed tone. "Is it possible ye take letters to Jerusalem? I thought it was above!"

—Blue Mountain Bachelors' club of Dayton, Wash., of which Ralph Hunt is president, is preparing for the incorporation of a national organization of bachelors. The official title will be the Brotherhood of Bachelors with headquarters at Dayton and clubs in several cities and towns throughout the United States and Canada. The club will be organized on the lines of fraternal societies, with regular assessments to support and develop the order in its initiatory and degree work, annual meeting, banquets and other embellishments of secret orders. Mr. Hunt has letters from more than 1,000 bachelors in various parts of the United States and Canada urging the organization of a national club, also between 500 and 600 letters from young women in eastern, middlewestern and southern states requesting to be placed in communication with eligible western men. He says it is likely that the organization meeting will take place at Dayton early the coming summer when the project will be launched.

CHOKED, KICKED AND BEATEN

Woman's Charge Against Husband, From Whom She Seeks Divorce

Boston, March 24.—Mrs. Harriet I. Burkhardt of Brookline, noted for her beauty, has asked the courts to divorce her from Herman F. Burkhardt, whom she married in 1896, with society in attendance at the nuptials.

Burkhardt is a trustee of the Burkhardt Brewing company and one of the seven heirs of the great Burkhardt fortune.

Mrs. Burkhardt charges that her husband choked, kicked and beat her—an intimation that will cause a sensation in the circles in which both have moved since their marriage.

She also declares that Burkhardt had had failed to support her properly—that he was grossly intoxicated on several occasions, and that he was given to the use of opium, besides strong drink.

Through her counsel she has asked that her daughter be given into her custody, to the exclusion of the father.

MILK LAW CONSTITUTIONAL

Important Decision Filed by the Massachusetts Supreme Court

Boston, March 24.—A case in litigation which the agricultural people have watched with the keenest interest is settled. The supreme court of Massachusetts decides in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Alvah G. Wheeler, William Foss and Harvey S. Walcott of Concord that the law fixing a commercial standard of milk is constitutional.

It is held that the legislation—chapter 643 of the acts of 1908, amending section 56 of chapter 56 of the revised laws—was within the police power of the legislature.

This chapter provides that milk shown to contain less than 12.15 percent of milk solids or less than 3.35 percent of butter fats "shall not be considered of good standard quality."

QUICKLY CAPTURED AFTER DARING THEFT

Three Holdup Men Fall Into Clutches of Boston Police

Boston, March 24.—Frank Jenkins, a prosperous real estate broker, was robbed of money, a gold watch and checks aggregating about $2500 in the hallway of the house at 82 Albion street yesterday afternoon by three young men.

Entering the East Dedham street station five minutes later to report the fact, Jenkins was surprised to learn that headquarters inspectors had arrested three men in another division for the robbery. These Jenkins later identified at Station 4.

This record-breaking catch of three men said to be connected with the notorious "Forty Thieves" gang was made by Inspectors Hart and Conway from a description furnished them by Captain Cain after being apprised of the robbery by a merchant.

When searched one of the trio had Jenkins' $100 gold watch and $25 in his possession, while another had two checks amounting to $2260 which were identified by Jenkins as his property.

THE SLAYER OF GLOVER

Hattie Le Blanc Blamed Widow, According to Testimony of Sister

Cambridge, Mass., March 24.—Under oath in the Glover will contest, Miss Irene Le Blanc declared that her sister, Hattie, who is facing trial for the alleged murder of Clarence F. Glover, made the following startling statements:

"I did not kill Clarence F. Glover. Mrs. Lillian M. Glover killed him.

"Mrs. Glover knew I was in the house the night of the murder, after it occurred. I had supper with Mrs. Glover the next evening (Sunday).

"Mrs. Glover made me hide under the bed, against my will. I had to do just as Mrs. Glover told me. I know I'll be freed, because I did not do the shooting."

"DAMN" NOT A SWEAR WORD

Accused Man Acquitted, Thus Escaping Possible Fine of Fifty Cents

Morristown, N. J., March 24.—"Damn" is not one of the swear words prohibited by the New Jersey vice and immorality act, according to the judgment of Morris county jurymen, who so decided in the case of Surrogate David Young, accused by Mrs. Nellie Fitzherbert. He was acquitted. If the surrogate had been found guilty he would have been subject to a fine of 50 cents.

Mrs. Fitzherbert alleged that while she was in Young's office he told her that she "talked like a damn fool."

Woman Suffrage Bill Killed

Boston, March 24.—On a voice vote, and with no debate, the house refused to substitute the woman suffrage bill for an adverse report from the legislative committee on constitutional amendments.

FOSS' ELECTION CAPS CLIMAX

Pinchot's Departure For Europe to Confer With Roosevelt Also Adds to List of Shocks Experienced by Republican Leaders—Striving to Gather Strength as Shade of Former President Looms Larger Than Ever

Washington, March 24.—The politicians here are dazed by the rapidity with which events of high political import are succeeding each other. Legislation is forgotten and for the moment Washington is boiling with excited discussion.

From the series of repeated shocks which the Republican leaders have suffered, capped by the election to congress of Eugene N. Foss on a Democratic ticket in the largest Republican district in Massachusetts, a situation of political panic has developed. The more important of recent political developments may be summarized as follows:

First, Speaker Cannon shorn of his power by a combination of insurgent Republicans and Democrats.

Second, Theodore Roosevelt, confused by the reports that reached him at Khartoum as to political conditions at home, cables Gifford Pinchot, the deposed United States forester, to meet him in southern Europe. Pinchot goes.

Third, Eugene N. Foss, an insurgent Republican running for congress in the Fourteenth Massachusetts district as a Democrat, reverses a Republican plurality of over 5000.

Fourth, President Taft in his travels continues to laud the new tariff law.

Fifth, at a banquet at Providence, President Taft extolled the virtues of Nelson W. Aldrich, the leader of the senate, and Aldrich in turn praised the president.

Sixth, Announcement is made that James R. Garfield, who was secretary of the interior under Roosevelt, will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of Ohio because he is not in sympathy with the Taft administration and will soon make a speech in Ohio criticising it.

Seventh, The regulars in the senate bow to the will of the opposition and permit an important bill which they said should go to the committee on foreign relations to go to the .new committee on conservation.

Of the developments of the last two days, the departure of Pinchot to Europe to meet Roosevelt and the election of Foss by such an overwhelming plurality, it will be difficult to say which is attracting the more attention here at the capitol.

It cannot be questioned that the Republican leaders realize they must do everything possible to put their house in order. The political situation has been a matter of constant discussion among the individuals of the Taft cabinet, and it can be said upon authority that the administration is gathering to itself all the strength it can muster. The shade of Roosevelt looms larger than ever and the advancing shadow is taken to point the path for President Taft and his advisers to follow. In other words, the administration is preparing a definite plan with which to convince the country that it is doing all it can to embody the Roosevelt policies in law.

It can be said upon authority also that the Taft administration as such as yet without definite assurances from Roosevelt as to how he views the present situation in the Republican party. He has made it known to several friends here that he has full confidence in William H. Taft, but the political problems with which Roosevelt is expected to deal do not all relate to the Taft administration.

GENERAL BELL INJURED

Mrs. Slocum died in fifteen minutes.

General Bell's injuries consist of one right rib broken, right hand cut by glass, right elbow bruised and a slight scalp wound and shock.

FOSS FOR GOVERNOR

Prediction That He Will Be Next Democratic Nominee In Bay State

Washington, March 24.—That Eugene N. Foss will be the Democratic nominee for governor of Massachusetts next fall against Eben S. Draper is the prediction made here by Thomas Mullen, private secretary to Josiah Quincy when mayor of Boston and a well- informed politician.

"The election of Foss was expected by the observing people of Boston," said Mullen, "but it was not thought he would win by so great a majority."

The leading Republicans here believe that the election will have a powerful if not overwhelming influence in the state campaign in Massachusetts next fall. Whatever the real causes that led to the defeat of the Republicans in the Fourteenth district, nothing can stay the progress of the belief that it presages a popular uprising against the Republican party.

ADMIT TAKING BRIBES

District Attorney Has Confessions of Ringleaders In Pittsburg Graft

Pittsburg, March 24.—Nine more men, conscience stricken over taking money for their votes, appeared before Judge Frazer and after telling all they knew of the councilmanic graft conspiracy, had sentence postponed.

Besidest these nine, the former president of the common council, William Brand, one of the ringleaders, according to those who confessed, has also made a statement which is in the hands of the district attorney.

J. C. Wasson, who is in the penitentiary, made his confession to the grand jury yesterday. With complete statements from Brand, Wasson and Klein, who were the principals in the conspiracy, according to their own statements, it is said the district attorney is ready to proceed against the bribe givers.

FEAR TAX DODGE BY ROCKEFELLER FUND

Senators Asking Questions Concerning Foundation Bill

Washington, March 24.—So serious has the opposition to the Rockefeller Foundation bill become that Senator Gallinger, who introduced it, thought it wise to ask that it go over for future consideration. Senator Heyburn, who will make a speech in opposition to the proposed organization, says that he is not at all satisfied as to what was proposed to be done under the incorporation. Senator La Follette and others are also asking questions about the bill.

"If the Rockefeller Foundation, which means the Rockefeller fortune in case his heirs choose to pour his millions into the fund, could be taxed I should not offer any objection to the pending charter," said Heyburn. "But under the charter as proposed this fortune cannot be taxed. If this charter is made a law any millionaire or billionaire may leave his fortune to be administered to charity, without taxation, perhaps."

TO RAISE WRECK OF MAINE

Hull Will Also Be Examined If Senate Approves House Bill

Washington, March 24.—The hulk of the ill-fated battleship Maine, sunk in the harbor of Havana, will be raised so that the remains of any of the sailors that may be within the wreck may be recovered.

An examination will also be made to determine if possible the manner in which the vessel was destroyed, if the senate approves a bill passed by the house yesterday afternoon.

The remains of sailors that may be recovered will be interred in Arlington cemetery. The mast of the Maine will be erected in the cemetery near the graves of the Maine dead.

New York, March 24.—City Magistrate Daniel E. Finn, popularly known as "Battery Dan," a unique and well known figure in New York political life, died at his home here after a long illness.

Early this year, just before his last illness, proceedings had been begun against "Battery Dan" looking to his removal oh charges of neglect, in 132 cases, to hold persons for trial when it was clear a crime had been committed. The hearing was set for Feb. 17, but the magistrate was too ill even to receive the service of the papers.

KILLS TWO MEN ON A PULLMAN

Passenger Starts on a Career of Murder and Disaster

HAD AN AUTOMATIC REVOLVER

Fires a Hundred Shots After Sending Bullets Into Hearts of Porter and Conductor of Train—Is Shot to Death When Stream of Water Directed by Firemen Drives Him From Shelter

Wilmington, Del., March 24.—An exciting battle in which three men were killed occurred on a north-bound Baltimore and Ohio railroad train. It began at Newark, Del., and ended in this city.

Several persons were wounded in the affray which occurred at the Delaware avenue station here upon the arrival of the train last night.

The triple tragedy was the result of an altercation between J. H. Bethea, who was a passenger, and Samuel Williams, the porter in the Pullman parlor car Mercury, bound from Washington to Jersey City.

Bethea, who had been drinking heavily, shot the porter through the heart, killing him instantly. When Conductor O. B. Wellman saw the porter fall and ran to the scene to remonstrate with the passenger, who still held the smoking revolver in his hand, Bethea fired a second shot into the negro's body.

Then, without a word, Bethea shot Wellman through the heart. The conductor fell dead in his tracks.

Before the passengers could interfere, Bethea barricaded himself in the toilet room of the Pulman car and threatened to kill the first person who approached. Meanwhile the train reached Wilmington.

When it came into the station a hurry call was sent to the police station. A squad of patrolmen, reinforced by park guards and a posse of citizens and trainmen, ran to the scene.

The police called upon Bethea to surrender. In answer he opened the door of the toilet room a short distance and opened fire on the police and the crowd with an automatic revolver.

Bethea is believed to have had at least 100 rounds of ammunition, for he succeeded in holding a posse at bay and also held up the train from 5:17 until 6:35. During this time many shots were fired by him and by the others, until finally all the windows in the car were shattered.

Travel over the Baltimore and Ohio railroad was at a standstill. When the battle had lasted about an hour the police realized that they would be unable to drive the man from cover and a call was sent to a local fire company. The firemen responded with their engine and with the firemen barricaded behind trucks and boards a stream of water was played upon the windows of the toilet room.

The desperado fired a number of shots at the firemen, but they were not injured. Subsequently Bethea, drenched with water, staggered to the platform and the police once more called upon him to surrender. His reply was several shots in quick succession from his revolver.

Several of the policemen had armed themselves with shotguns, and just as Bethea fired the last shot Police Captain Evans fired a load of shot into his face. Notwithstanding this wound he kept on blazing away. Patrolman Boughman opened fire with a revolver and a bullet struck Bethea in the right arm. The desperate man tried to fire again, but Sergeant Kelleher opened fire and also managed to spring upon Bethea.

When the police took hold of him he fell dead in the arms of a patrolman.

John O. Wiley, a park guard of Wilmington, was shot in the hand and leg. Matthew Haley, a citizen of Wilmington, was shot in the leg. Others were grazed by flying bullets.

A tragic incident of the affair was that when Williams, the porter, was shot he fell into a seat in the car. All through the battle the dead porter sat with the appearance of one looking from the window.

Bethea was well dressed. While it was believed by some of the passengers, who fled when the train reached Wilmington, that he was insane, other passengers said that he appeared to be sane, except that he had been drinking. He was 40 years old and lived at Dillon, S. C.

Although her trouserettes divided attention with the poloists, Miss Sears did not seem to be the least bit mindful of the furore she was creating.

In fact, she enlisted in the cause Miss Elizabeth C. Fish of New York, who announced that she has consented to arise at 5 o'clock every morning and don man fashion garb and join a club that is being formed by Miss Sears to tramp along the Coronado peninsula before breakfasting.

QUINCY OF YEARS AGO

First Schoolhouse Erected as Early as 1679

Historical Paper No. 11.)

The first schoolhouse erected within the present limits of the city of Quincy, says Pattee's History of Quincy, stood on the town's land, on Hancock street ,about 150 feet north of what is now Revere road, near F. F. Green's residence, as will be seen by the bounds of the land granted by the town in 1679, and purchased July 18, 1700, of Thomas Bass, by Mr. Tompson.

At a town meeting held Oct. 7, 1679, it was voted, "that the acre and a half of land formerly granted by the town conditionally to Mr. Benjamin Tompson, for the time of his abode, shall be to him and his heirs forever absolute. Secondly, that in case Mr. Benjamin Tompson purchase Thomas Bass's land by the meeting-house ,then he shall have a small gore of land, from the stile that leads to Samuel Tompson's land, straight to the backside of the school-house and to the highway."

July 18, 1700—"Thomas Bass hereby doth give, bargain, sell, convey and confirm unto Benjamin Tompson a parcel of upland and meadow, containing one acre and a half, be it more or less, bounded northerly on the Town brook, in the heart of Braintree, easterly on land of James Brackett, southerly with the town's land adjoining to the old school-house, westerly with the town road."

It appears by the following vote of the town that the old school-house was discontinued and sold some sixteen years after:—"1716, upon a motion of Mr. Benjamin Webb to the town, whether he might have the use of the school-house near him, (excepting the stone and brick,) for the securing of his hay till ye first of May next, and it passed in the affirmative." After which the said old school-house was sold by the committee to the said Benjamin Webb, for three pounds paid into the treasury.

The second school-house was built at the foot of Penn's hill, on the easterly side of Franklin street, near the old house which Mr. Henry Hardwick occupied. It caused a great many town meetings to be held. The town records contain the following votes concerning the construction of this schoolhouse:—Oct. 22, 1697, "Voted, that the new school-house should be built in the road between Clement Cox's and Gregory Belcher's, hard by the white oak tree. The dimensions of the house to be twenty feet long, the width sixteen feet, and seven feet between joints."

The new school-house that was ordered to be built does not appear to have differed materially in size from the old one. The town this year not being in a mood to build the house, passed a vote the 7th of March, 1693, to remove the old schoolhouse to the foot of Penn's hill instead of building. A year passes by and they decided to build the new schoolhouse, and not remove the old one.

It is said that Mrs. Belcher kept this school for many years. Mr. Whitney, relates "that it was customary with her to carry her corn to the mill herself, excepting when some one of her scholars lent her a helping hand. John Adams, afterwards President of the United States, was a favorite among the rest, and when he carried the corn she gave him as a reward three coppers, and charged him at the same time to keep his money to buy land with. It is unnecessary to add how well he profited by early instruction. This school-house was a very fine one for those days. It had a bell attached to it for the use of the scholars. But a bell was so novel a thing that, when the master or mistress was not in school, it was kept incessantly ringing. This was not found so agreeable to those who lived near, and would oftentimes have preferred to have been spared what the scholars considered so delightful a treat. One morning the scholars came to their bell rope with the accustomed earnestness, but most unfortunately for them the bell had been taken away in the night, and was never afterwards heard of."

The next school-house erected in Quincy was on Hancock street, opposite the ten-mile post in the wall of the estate of the late Lemuel Brackett. It was to be built on this site if the following provision was complied with:—"Provided Mr. John Beal will allow a piece of land in exchange for the land where the old Pound stood." This house was constructed in 1763. Tradition states that this schoolhouse stood partly in the road, and was kept by a Mr. Fisher, who made it a practice, as it was then the custom in these semi-parochial schools, to hear his scholars recite on Saturday morning in the "Assembly Catechism." Mr. Joseph Bass was then a boy, and one morning among the rest was questioned to recite. But he refused, saying that his father wished him not to recite in the catechism. He was excused by the master, but the matter was the cause of some excitement. Afterwards, reconciliation was effected by the invitation of Mr. Fisher to dine with the father.

As early as 1716, we find that it was voted by the town that a "reading and writing" school shall be kept one-half of the year in the South Precinct; this it appears was the first school established in what is now the town of Braintree.

May 14th, 1716. "Voted by the inhabitants of Braintree regularly assembled, that there should be a school kept at the south end of the town, for one-half of the year, each year yearly, beginning the first day of October for reading and writing, besides the present Grammar school, and that to be at the charge of the town."

Now begins the contentions in building and locating the school-houses in the several precincts (Quincy, Braintree and Randolph). "Then voted that a house be erected for the accommodation of a Grammar school in this town, which shall be in some convenient place, as soon as may be, between the North Meeting-house and Mr. Benjamin Webb's land, by the committee hereafter named and appointed, as they shall see meet." Against this vote Capt. John Mills entered his dissent. "Then voted, that a convenient school-house for writing or reading, be built and set up in some convenient place in the south end of this town, near the meeting-house as soon as may be, and as the committee hereafter appointed shall see meet at the charge of the town."

Sept. 17, 1716. "The moderator moved to the town whether the old school-house by Deacon Belcher's should be disposed of as the committee hereafter appointed shall see meet. It passed in the affirmative. It was then likewise motioned by the moderator, whether the old school-house near Mr. Benjamin Webb's should be disposed of as the committee hereafter appointed shall see meet. It passed the affirmative."

December, 1719, began the movement of the schools in a southerly direction.

Two Convincing Reasons.

Lord Peterborough, who lived in the reign of Queen Anne, was very frolicsome, and one day, seeing from his carriage a dancing master with pearl colored stockings lightly stepping over the broad stones and picking his way in extremely dirty weather, he alighted and ran after him with drawn sword in order to drive him into the mud, but into which he of course followed himself. This nobleman was once taken for the Duke of Marlborough and was mobbed in consequence. The duke was then in disgrace with the people, and Lord Peterborough was about to be roughly handled. Turning to them, he said:

"Gentlemen, I can convince you by two reasons that I am not the Duke of Marlborough. In the first place, I have only 5 guineas in my pocket, and, in the second, they are heartily at your service."

Patroness of Music.

The origin of music is lost in antiquity. Among civilized people it is probably to be traced to the ancient Egyptian priests, who employed this art in their religious rites and ceremonies. From the Egyptians the Greeks and the Romans derived their knowledge of music. The ancient Hebrews probably took with them into Palestine some of the songs they had learned in Egypt. The hymns used in the temple formed the basis of the melodies of the early Christian church, and from these hymns was formulated the first authoritative musical system St. Cecelia is termed the patroness of music.—Exchange.

The Two Pies.

Ruth, who has been married just two weeks, lives in a little flat and there keeps house for her lord and master. She has read a little and is wise beyond her nineteen years. On Sunday after their dinner had been served by the wife she went to the kitchen and returned with a pumpkin pie.

"What's that?" asked the L. and M.

"I made a pumpkin pie yesterday," his wife answered timidly.

He attacked the confection with a knife and fork, but could not make much headway and was about to declare himself when Ruth announced:

"I have another in the pantry, dear Your mother sent one over yesterday."

She then produced the second pie which was as tender and appetizing as the first had been tough and unsavory.

"That's something like it," he said patronizingly. "Of course you couldn't expect to become expert at once, my dear."

The girl laughed. "You're eating the one I made now," she said. And in her diary for the day is written:

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."—Portland (Me.) Express.

RAILROAD MEN HERE

To Meet Committee of the Quincy Business Men

This morning E. W. Martin, general superintendent of the Plymouth division, and G. M. Wood, assistant general freight agent of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., were in town at the request of the committee of the Retail Merchants' Association to investigate the needs at the Quincy station. Complaint had been made of the condition of the sanitaries and also about the drunks and hoodlums who loaf about the station.

They were met by the committee, Messrs. W. G. Shaw, Walter H. Berry, George W. Jones and Fred S. Zoller, also Station Agent Coffin.

There seemed a disposition on the part of the railroad officials to correct the alleged grievances, but the railroad felt they were "up against it" so to speak, and that it would not be an easy task. They promised, however, to give them attention.

Practical experiments with wireless telegraphy will be made between the airships themselves and also between the flying machines and the land stations.

National Farm Convention.

President Charles S. Barrett of the National Farmers' union has called a national convention of farmers to be held in St. Louis from May 3 to 7. The convention is to discuss needed national and state legislation and to establish bureaus at different capitals to see that the demands of the farmers are heard and to devise some means of making the farm more attractive and of supplying more food for the nation.

—No person or persons in the United States may sell or give away tickets to a lottery of any description without becoming liable to the penalties of the law. March 1, 1910, agents of the United States Government distributed to all applicants in Los Angeles cards of identification, each of which entitles the holder to file on one of the 172 forty-acre farms to be thrown open to settlement in the Yuma district of California. If more than one card holder files on the same farm Government officials will "decide the luck winners by lot," says a Washington despatch. WALKOVER FOR WOLLASTON

Score Easy Victory over the West Quincys

It was a walkover for the Wollaston on Wednesday in the Makaria bowling league, when the West Quincys were unable to score a point. Wollaston won the first string by 75 pins, the second by 11, and the third by 20, the totals being 1263 to 1157. Glover was high man on singles and totals.

ATHLETIC MEET.

The annual championship athletic meet of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held in the local gymnasium Wednesday evening, March 30, at 7.30. This is the interesting event of the year to the athletes of Quincy and is looked forward to with much interest, as the records will be posted on the placks which are hung about the building. Medals of special design with the "Q" and triangle in enamel in the center, with the wording "Quincy Young Men's Christian Association" in a circle around the edge, will be given the lucky ones.

GRANITE CITY WHIST.

Some good scores were made Wednesday night at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club. The best scores, however, were made by Ralph C. Currier and Warren H. Rideout. The former won 37 points and lost 18 giving him a percent of 67.3. The latter won 40 points and lost 22 giving him a percent of 64.5. A lunch was served as usual after the games. Tickets for the annual banquet were on sale Wednesday evening, and from the way in which they were taken it looks as though, the attendance would be larger than usual.

LEADERS WIN.

The Weymouths and Norfolk Downs teams both had walkovers in the Old Colony bowling league on Wednesday evening.

The Norfolk Downs hopefuls in the Old Colony Bowling league had an easy time on their home alleys Wednesday evening, the Quincy team appearing with only one veteran, which resulted in the Downs capturing all four points.

At Braintree the Weymouths won four points by forfeit, and the standing is:

	Won.	Lost.
Weymouth	48	16
Norfolk Downs	41	23
Quincy	25	39
Braintree	14	50

Absentminded.

Modjeska used to tell a story about her honeymoon that is somewhat amusing. When the Countess and Count of Bozenta were on their wedding trip it happened one morning that she had just got up when the count, who had been out for an hour or two taking a morning walk, came back and called to her excitedly:

"Helen! Helen! Come here."

"What is it?"

"Come here quick. I've brought you some lovely fruit, the first of the market."

"All right; I'm dressing. I'll come as soon as I have finished getting ready."

She dressed leisurely and entered the sitting room. The count was sitting reading, deeply interested in his book. She looked round. No fruit was was to be seen. She looked all over the place. The count looked up.

"What are you looking for?"

"Where's that fruit?"

The count looked on the table. It was not there.

"Good gracious!" he said. "I'll be hanged if I haven't eaten it!"

—The Week's bill for conserving the headwaters of navigable streams and appropriating not to exceed $11,000,000 during the next five years, for the acquisition of lands in any of the states for that purpose, was favorably acted upon by the house committee on agriculture on Wednesday at Washington.

AMERICAN LEAGUE OPINIONS

How Managers Size Up Fight For the Pennant.

BOSTON RED SOX FEARED.

Many Rival Handlers Say the Bean Eaters Are the Team to Keep an Eye On—The Flag Will Be Ours, Says Duffy.

By Jim McGuire of Cleveland.

I surely feel that we will make a great fight for the American banner this season. Many of our home critics are claiming the pennant for us, but there are 154 games to be played, you know, and nobody can say what luck will be our share. If it should happen that Elmer Flick and Terry Turner come back to their old form I can't see any team in the league that will have anything on us. Boston and Detroit are the teams that I fear most.

JIM M'GUIRE.

By George Stallings of New York.

I will do my best and expect the players to do the same. What the result will be is a matter of conjecture. The team ought to be much better this season than last, and I have some new players whom I expect to make good. With an even break in the luck I will be satisfied. It is a little too early yet to make any prediction as to where we will finish, but I will look for it to be higher up than last season by several rungs.

By Hugh Jennings of Detroit.

My baseball machine will be as strong as a year ago, with a good chance of some of the recruits bolstering up the outfit. I am not claiming the pennant. There are too many angles to baseball. All I can say is that I like my team as it stands and we will play the same hard game as usual to win. Accidents, luck and other points have to be considered when looking over the race, and if we have our share of the good luck, ditto the breaks, we will be up there, as usual.

By Connie Mack of Philadelphia.

We will be in the hunt again this year, and if the additions I have made to the team turn out as I hope we will be the club that the pennant winners will have to beat. It's going to be a close race, and I would not attempt to pick the winner, but I am sure that we will be on top or very near it. Detroit had to hustle last year to land the flag. The Tigers will have even a harder task on their hands this year. Boston may prove a surprise, and I look for Chicago to be much more of a contender than last year.

CONNIE MACK.

By Hugh Duffy of Chicago.

The American league pennant will come back to Chicago this year. This is my prediction. I do not hesitate to state that with a pitching staff which is called the best in the world and a wonderful collection of infielders and inside ball players, besides a batch of promising youngsters, the White Sox will show the way to the wire in October.

By Pat Donovan of Boston.

With a team of fast youngsters who have their careers before them I think the Red Sox will be right up in the pennant hunt every step of the way. The showing of the team last season was the surprise of the American league race. This year I look for the team to be stronger in many ways. With such the case the Red Sox will capture the banner easily.

By Jimmy McAleer of Washington.

With the good material I have on hand I sincerely predict that the Washington team will finish well up in the second division this season. Baseball is chuck full of luck, and if we get a fair share of the horseshoe variety I will promise the fans that our team will make the other seven clubs go some to beat us. I am confident the players will do their best for me, and if this best is not satisfactory we will have to go gunning for others. Good ball will not do for me. I want winning ball.

JIMMY M'ALEER.

By Jack O'Conner of St. Louis.

St. Louis is going to be the surprise of the American league this season. In fact, the big improvement over last year's playing will surprise the fans. Take that from me. The Browns were a disappointment last season, but they won't be this year. They may not win the pennant, but when the season is over the people will be saying, "The Browns are a great team."

Left Hand Pitchers Scarce.

Good south paws seem to be rarer than ever this year. Many managers have lost confidence in the ability of the left handers. One of the greatest faults is that so few of them field their positions.

HOW JENNINGS DOPES NATIONAL LEAGUE TEAMS.

When asked how he thought the National league clubs would finish this season Manager Hugh Jennings made this prediction: "First, Chicago; second, Pittsburg; third, New York; fourth, Cincinnati; fifth, St. Louis; sixth, Philadelphia; seven, Brooklyn; eighth, Boston.

"I don't see how Pittsburg can repeat. Neither can I see how New York will beat Pittsburg for second place."

What Became of the Chicks?

ON a certain day in the year there were a funny lot of little chickens out in the yard.

"Where did they come from?" asked Marjory.

The man who was digging in the tulip beds said he thought they must have come out of the daffodils.

Then Marjory went into the kitchen to ask Mary Ann.

"Oh, sure, the moon sent them down on a little trip, they were so tired of chaze, even if it was graue."

Marjory had always trusted her before, but somehow she was not quite satisfied, so she mounted the stairs slowly to the study.

"Where did they come from, papa?" she asked, pausing at the study door.

"Out of the everywhere into the here," quoted her papa dreamily.

Marjory turned away disappointed.

Papa, she knew, was in one of his dreams. Sometimes she liked it very much, but today she wanted real things. She trudged up another flight of stairs to where her mamma was dressing the new baby.

Her mamma put her finger on her lips. "Hush, Marjory," said she. "Come and tell mother quietly what it is." Marjory approached gently.

"The chickens, mamma," she whispered—"where did they come from?"

Her mamma smiled tenderly. "Why," she said, "you seem to be very much disturbed about it. I think they must have come out of little shell houses. When they get tired of being penned up, along about springtime, they want to break out of their little shell houses and into the outdoors. You know that's what you wanted to do all of the time as soon as it got over being winter. And so they try to get out into the garden day after day, just as you did when Mary Ann and I weren't looking."

"And where do you suppose they are going to, now that they are in the world, mamma?" said Marjory.

"Ah, Marjory, that is a very hard question," said her mamma. "Who knows, indeed?"

"Perhaps they will stay in the garden," suggested Marjory.

"Perhaps," said her mamma.

And if you want to find out what was really the final destiny of Marjory's chickens and what they at last became you can discover it by looking closely at the chickens' shell houses.

For the chickens believed in predestination, and their fate was written on their shells.

When you have found out the letters in which their fate was written put them together carefully, and you will discover the chickens' destiny.—Alice Latimer.

The Wicked Multiplication Table.

A minister was hearing his Sunday school repeat the catechism one Sunday preceding confirmation when a boy from the class of small children ventured to ask a question of the minister.

Turning to the clergyman, the boy inquired in an anxious tone, "Why does the multiplication table make people wicked?"

The minister thought at first that the child had taken occasion to propound a conundrum at a most unseemly time and was about to reprove him when the earnestness of the expression in the upturned face assured him that the question was asked in good faith and required a reply.

"Why do you ask such a question, John? I never knew it to do so," he said.

John turned to his catechism and read from it with a mystified air the question, "Did man grow worse as he began to multiply?" and the accompanying answer, "He did."

SUPERVISED PLAYGROUNDS AND A SANER FOURTH

Endorsed at Opening Banquet of the New Civic League of Quincy.

Committees Appointed on Each of These Movements.

Evidently the new Civic League has a place in Quincy, and at the start gives evidence that it will accomplish much on broad lines. Prominent men from all parts of the city attended the opening banquet at the Y. M. C. A. hall on Thursday evening. They not only enjoyed a fine hot roast beef dinner and ice cream, but they listened to entertaining addresses and got right down to business.

The committee on bylaws reported and the following constitution was adopted:

Article 1. Name. The name of this Association shall be "The Civic League of Quincy."

Article 11. Object. 1. To work for better conditions in the civic life of Quincy.

2. To devise plans for its improvement and to advocate the enactment and enforcement of laws and regulations which will advance the health comfort and beauty of our city.

3. The League shall be unsectarian and non-partisan, and it shall welcome the co-operation of all organizations having similar aims.

Article 111. Membership. All male residents of Quincy who are in sympathy with the objects of the League, as stated herein, shall be eligible for membership. Any such person, proposed in writing by two members of the League, may be elected by a majority of the council at any regular meeting.

The annual dues shall be $1.00 per year payable for the current year.

Any member who shall be sixty days in arrears in the payment of his dues shall be notified in writing by the secretary and failure to pay said dues within thirty days thereafter shall cause his membership to cease.

Article 4. Officers. The officers of the League shall be a president, two vice presidents, secretary and treasurer, to be elected by the council from its members immediately after the annual meeting for the term of one year, or until their successors are elected, whose duties shall be those usually appertaining to their respective offices. The treasurer shall report to the League at its annual meeting and whenever required by the Council.

Article 5. Government. The executive management of the league shall be entrusted to a council consisting of nine members, subject to the control of the league, elected at the first annual meeting, three for three years, three for two years, and three for one year. At each subsequent annual meeting there shall be elected three councillors for the term of three years to fill the vacancy of the three retiring.

Any member of the council who shall be nominated for or appointed to a political office shall cease to be a member of the council.

It shall direct the expenditures of the funds of the League, but shall incur no liability in the name of the League exceeding the unappropriated amount in the treasury.

A special advisory board to the council, consisting of the president and secretary of each men's church club in our city, may be established by the Council if deemed advisable.

Article 6. Meetings. There shall be an annual meeting of the League during the month of January, the date of which shall be fixed by the council. Special meetings shall be held at such times as the council may direct or whenever requested in writing by at least five members of the League.

Article 7. Committees. The council shall have authority to appoint such committees from time to time as may seem necessary to further the work of the league.

Vacancies in the council or among the officers shall be filled by the Council.

Article 8. Amendments. This constitution may be amended at any regular or special meeting by a two-thirds vote of the members present, provided the proposed amendment shall have been recommended in writing by at least fifteen members of the League, and at least five days notice given by mailing a copy of the proposed amendment to each member.

President Hull hoped that some suggestion at the banquet would kindle a civic pride and help to make Quincy a better place. The city has the natural resources, and now we want to take hold and work.

BOSTON 1915.

James P. Munroe, executive director of Boston 1915 was then introduced to speak on "Civic affairs." He was greeted with three cheers, led by Delcevare King. Mr. Munroe gave a clearer idea of the Boston 1915 movement than many Quincy people had. We need not expect the millennium was coming then, as that would put an end to wars and be bad for the shipyard. But Boston and other cities need a business-like management and plans for future. We will strive first to find out conditions and then organize the people. The fundamental difficulties are that cities have got away from the old town meeting idea second they are wasteful.

The speaker favored neighborhood organizations of men and women, and then a federation of all these organizations. Some central organization was necessary, hence Boston 1915.

Directors representing 13 groups will meet once a month, and the executive board weekly or oftener. When the directors and delegates take the subjects back to their clubs, and all are considering them at the same time, it is easy to see what a tremendous force for public opinion may be generated.

The trouble with cities is not dishonesty and graft, and we have taboode "eform;" it is a lack of business methods. It was necessary to formulate plans; to provide for the future. Above all to make good citizens of those who are coming from foreign shores. There was a waste by disease, a waste by inefficiency of education.

It was a mistake to accept the rumors in the West that New England is a "back number," for there is no place on earth that has greater possibilities than New England. Come out of the dumps. Boston 1915 is to make us believe in Boston. He closed by reading the creed of the Pilgrim Publicity Association. (Applause.)

SANER FOURTH.

Vice President George H. Brown was then introduced, and presented arguments in favor of a "Saner Fourth."

Upon motion of H. W. Pinkham, the following committee of 15 was appointed to consider the subject and make recommendations: A. L. Barbour, Frank E. Burrell, Henry M. Faxon, Dr. John A. Gordon, E. C. Hultman, Dr. E. R. Johnson, D. King, John L. Miller, H. W. Pinkham, Frank F. Prescott, William T. Shea, H. Gerrish Smith, Eugene R. Stone, Peter J. Williams and George H. Brown.

PROTECTED PLAYGROUNDS.

Thomas Curley, another guest of the evening, spoke on "The new boy builder and man maker," and gave convincing arguments to show that protected playgrounds were a good investment for towns as well as cities. The question of the day, he said, was a finer citizenship for city, State and country. There was a need of cooperation and team work. The home, the school and the church have not the machinery to meet the business requirements. Character was formed at the age of 22 and was composed of habits. Habits are found only in actions. HARVARD PI ETA PLAY

Quincy to be Favored With Production on April 12

The Pi Eta Club of Harvard will present this year as its annual play a musical comedy entitled "Inbad in Trinidad." The book and lyrics are by R. H. Weller '11 and the music by A. C. Tilton '10 and others. As last year, Fletcher W. Taft, '07, has charge of the rehearsals and James Reynolds is training the chorus and dancers. The play will be presented in Quincy on Tuesday evening April 12, at the Music hall.

The plot of the play thickens in the island of Trinidad, prolific parent of revolutions. As the opening curtain rises, one may see a concourse of happy islanders, of a conservative temperament, singing the praises of their national hero Alonzo. A bull fighter by profession, Alonzo has widened his scope of activities by curtailing an impending revolution. But the worthy conservative has at the same time nipped in the bud a sale of bombs which Bob Richardson of the New Ignito Powder Co., was about to make to the exposed revolutionist. So Bob has to prolong his stay on the island and meantime having to explain his presence there to the American consul tells him that he is trying to find a certain beautiful girl. Not having sufficient intuition to preceive that Bob is already married, the foreign consul undertakes and succeeds in finding his young lady. She falls immediately in love, and, in the couse of a short time, forms definite ideas of marrying him. As he is putting her off and trying to find a market for his bombs, a stray sailor called Sam or, more familiarly, Inbad comes on the scene and complicates Bob's love affairs. But just as Bob has used up all his excuses, he is able to sell his bombs to General Frysles and escapes from the island.

The cast is as follows:

Senor Don Alonzo Estaban San Salvador, a bull fighter, L. H. Baker '11.

Marjory McGanern, the consul's daughter, H. F. Coburn '11.

William Raulast Worst, staff correspondant of the "New York World" H. N. Curtis '1.1

Bob Richardson, drummer for the Non Ignito Powder Co., H. F. Boynton '11.

Michael McGanern, U. S. Consul at Periguay, J. W. Dunbar '12.

Senorita pepita d'Argueles, a periguayan attraction, P. C. Squire '11.

Sam, distantly related to Sinbad the sailor, G. S. Squibs, '11.

SONG SHEET A NOVELTY

Closing Sociable by the Wollaston Alliance

The last and the most successful sociable of the season was held by the Ladies Aid Alliance in the vestry of the Wolaston Unitarian church on Thursday evening.

At the supper the tables were filled and "standing room only" was in order. An excellent and bountiful menu was served by the ladies.

A novel entertainment was enjoyed under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. John Norrie. This was entitled, a "Song Sheet." As the curtain arose could be seen a large bar of music on a canvas with the faces of the chorus composing the notes. The selections and soloists follow: "Bright Eyes,"—Miss Winifred White, "I've got to go to see the minstrel show,"—George E. Brown; "A little girl up there,"—Miss Abbie Penley; "The song that reached my heart"—James Forrest.

The chorus included Misses Grace Bishop, Iva Briggs, Estelle Rice, Gladys Howe, Hattiemay Mitchell, Dorothy Fay, Messrs Louis Weston, Charles Thompson, Herbert Percival, Frank Bishop and Selden George.

All of the numbers met with great favor and were loudly applauded. Mrs. Norrie, who has had charge of the entertainment at this and the previous sociables the past season, should be congratulated upon their success.

Composing the supper committee were: Mrs. Fred C. Merrill, Mrs. W. F. Kimball, E. H. Sprague, Mrs. G. Ernest Carr, Mrs. Herman Wieting, Mrs. F. C. Babcock, Mrs. Oldham, Mrs. H. F. McLean, Mrs. Young, Mrs. E. B. Bird, Mrs. Samuel Chapman, Mrs. A. W. Rohn, Miss Flora Hall, Miss Helen Foster, Mrs. C. S. Adams, Mrs. Walter Baker, Mrs. E. B. Bowker, Mrs. F. S. Andrews, Mrs. Irving L. Shaw, Mrs. Hardy, Mrs. Carleton A. Gifford.

WOLLASTON BOYS' CLUB.

A meeting of the Wollaston Boys' club was held in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church Thursday evening. Lester H. Clee had charge and led the Bible study. After the Bible study a business meeting was held at which Arthur Bullock was elected captain and Edward Bullock manager of the baseball team. A league is being organized of the outside clubs and the Y. M. C. A. juniors. A cup has been donated by one of the leading men of the city to be given to the club winning the greatest number of games. The play to be given by the club is being rehearsed, and it has been decided to secure a coach. The next meeting on March 31, will be held in the Congregational church vestry. Mr. Gould, who has been seal hunting in the the Bering sea, will give a stereopticon lecture and explain about submarines.

GENERAL ALARM FOR FIRE AT WOLLASTON

Roof of House of Henry L. Estabrook Burned Off This Noon

Woods in Vicinity of Merrymount Park Burned

The alarm from Box 54 at 12.37 followed twenty minutes later by a general alarm called all of the available apparatus aside from Houghs Neck to Wollaston avenue where a serious woods fire was in progress.

When the first alarm sounded the roof of the Henry L. Estabrook house had taken fire and was blazing fiercely. The Wollaston and Atlantic apparatus made a quick run and soon had three lines of hose laid to the building. Two of these were from the hydrant directly opposite the house, and the second from a hydrant nearer Hancock street. The latter stream was attached to the steamer as soon as it arrived.

At the start the department were severely handicapped by the lack of men and hose. The streams from the hydrant showed very weak pressure and it was not until ladders were placed on the roof that the blaze was reached.

In the meantime the fire had eaten its way through the roof into the upper part of the building and a half hundred boys were busy at work moving out the furnishings. It was not until the steamer got to work that any kind of a stream was forced onto the flames. All of this time the firemen were handicapped by the lack of men. The woods on the shore side of the building were a roaring mass of flames and it looked as though houses in the line of the fire must catch.

Frightened women were running back and forth urging Chief Williams to save their houses. At this time the fire in the house was practically under control, but the Chief thought it advisable to summon help and a general alarm was ordered.

From the house down toward the shore as far as the eye could see the woods were blazing. The fire would sieze one of the dry pine trees and the next instant it would be a roaring mass o f flames which as they

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

DRIFT OF OPINION.

Can flies be abolished? The answer must be in the negative, but if we ask can the fly nuisance be modified, mollified or mitigated the answer would be in the affirmative. There is an agitation in progress looking to the driving of the common fly out of the homes of the people. It is now known that the fly is an industrious and persistent distributer of germs that are detrimental to health. That besides being an annoyance, they are a positive menace, a danger that must be fought as persistently as their attacks are vicious and wearisome. The fly may be said to be the creature of dirt and filth, and wherever that exists there may be found the villanous little disease breeders. The first thing to be done is to make the premises as clean as possible. The next step is to screen the windows and doors. The next movement is to pursue with relentless energy any stray fly that may manage to get past the screens. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty from the annoyance of the house fly. When it is considered that this pest brings the germs of disease into the house in addition to its spiteful and sometimes painful stingings, no mercy should be shown him. Conditions are not as favorable for the extermination of the fly as they are for the destruction of the mosquito, but a great deal may be done toward freeing the homes of this winged pest, and those who are wise will not neglect the means at hand.—Lynn Item.

Whatever the Legislature may do this year with so-called "bar and bottle" bill, it is pretty sure that the change which it proposes in the liquor law will simetime be made. The sentiment in its favor is evidently growing stronger, and sentiment writes itself into legislation sooner or later. This sentiment is largely based on the fact that the liquor law does not contemplate the existence of common victualling places as distributing agencies for malt and spirituous beverages. The law does recognize the furnishings of drink in licensed victualling places as legitimate, and it so recognizes the sale of alcoholic beverages in places licensed for the purpose; but it does not contemplate—although it does not forbid—the carrying on of the two sorts of business on the same premises. To effect that prohibition is the object of the advocates of the "bar and bottle" bill. They contend that the selling of drink to be taken away and consumed elsewhere is not a proper function of a victualler, and the chances are that they will ultimately persuade the legislators to take that view of it. Of course they support their contention with some strong evidence on the moral side, and properly consider the revenue side as of lesser importance, if of any importance at all. There is clearly something like a general demand for a separation of fourth class licenses from those of the first three classes, and it may prove effective even at the present session—Lowell Courier—Citizen.

A PRIZE OF $1,000

For Improvement of the Beach at Houghs Neck

The Boston Record of Thursday is the authority for the following article:

With an offer of a $1000 to any organization or set of campers who will put the beach at Hough's Neck in first class condition, Miss Annie Marion Potter, a summer resident of Hough's Neck, the local summer colony, and reputed an heiress, has become the most popular maiden in Quincy. The beach at Hough's Neck is covered in a large extent with a growth of sea fugus and species of muscles which makes bathing attended with more or less discomfort.

Miss Potter is an ardent lover of bathing; as well as being a devoted member of the summer colony, and often she has been heard to remark that if Hough's Neck had a suitable bathing place it would be one of the most beautiful watering places on the Atlantic Coast. It was at a meeting of the Massasoit Associates, a club of campers, early last fall that Miss Potter made the proposition to the young men, but they obviously took her statement lightly and little attention was paid to it.

Last Sunday several of the organizations came to the neck to do some repairing about the cottage and while here met the young woman. She had come from Boston with a real estate man in regard to the sale of certain property on the hill, that exclusive section of the neck, and during conversation with the young men renewed her offer to them. An impromptu meeting was held and it was decided to devise means at once of ridding the beach of the obnoxious growth.

It is probable that the beach will have to be scraped and then re-sanded. Of course the entire length of the beach will not be "re-finished" as the task would in all probability consume the greater part of the sum alotted for the work but a sufficient territory will be resanded to permit several hundred to bathe simultaneously. It is expected that the work will be finished in about two months, or just at the opening of the summer season.

Miss Potter is the daughter of the late Samuel G. Potter, who for many years was a well known banker of Boston and New York. He lived in Dorchester, near the city, for upward 25 years, and had a summer residence at Hough's Neck. Miss Potter is a graduate of the Dorchester high school, also the Knickerbocker academy of Brooklyn.

Much of her time is devoted to work of a charitable nature, she being president of the Young Ladies' Charity club of the Back Bay section of Boston.

PIANO RECITAL.

A piano recital of exceptional interest is announced by Mme. Marie von Unschuld, who, better known to audiences in the larger cities of Europe, was shortly before her departure for America, appointed Court Pianist to the Queen of Roumania. It is to take place at Steinert Hall, on Tuesday Unschild is a teacher as well as an afternoon, April 12. As Mme. von artist, it would be well for students to attend this concert from which it would seem they should be able to glean much interest and use. This artist possesses an individuality causingher to depart from time-worn interpretations, and to play her program accordingto her own lights. She possesses all the intense temperament of the Austrian, but is equally charming in the lighter and more sympathetic passages. Her rendition of "Scenes from Childhood" by Schuman is delightful, refreshing, and artistic. Since her arrival in America she has founded a University of Music at Washington, where between concert appearances she devotes herself to work with artist-pupils.

LETTERS OF PUBLIC INTEREST

HIGH COST OF HIGH LIVING.

Editors Daily Ledger:

Many times have we read in your paper, Trade at home, and with our nice looking and well appointed stores the point seems well taken, but I think a decided change will soon come about. The great trouble always has been that some of our citizens imagine they can do better in Boston.

Take a grocer, who perhaps has done business for a number of years, he finds that he has on his books several thousand dollars uncollectable, thereupon he proceeds to overcharge those who pay to break event. About that time, one of his clerks, thinking there is money in the business, starts a store, and, as he immediately gets all the dead ones soon finds he is also doing a losing business, and so the process goes on. That is all unnecessary. Our Merchants pay Boston wholesale prices for staple goods, and as their rents and other expenses are less, there is no excuse for any higher prices. Every purchaser has a known established rating, Good, Slow or Bad. Eliminate the last two, and any one can make a sucess of any business.

Coal can be landed at Quincy Point at the same price as at Salem, Lynn, or Cambridge. Retail price should be governed accordingly, if any higher, it is because of that G. S. B.

While it is nice to pay spot cash, people do not carry about bags of money, as was the custom a century ago, but there is no reason why accounts should not be setled weekly or at least monthly. Ask the Gas Company how they do it.

A Commission is at work endeavoring to ascertain the cause of high prices. It would seem to me to start with the farmer, who with his whole family were always poor, living very plainly, and sometimes taking a weekly paper. Now he has all the modern improvements, better stock, clothes, nice looking place, telephone, light, quite frequently automobiles, children educated, daily paper, etc. By cooperation, he receives more for his milk and produce.

A mechanic and laborer having to pay rent and for what he eats has to receive higher wages. It is also well understood that an expensive government will tend to make an expensive people, but suppose it does cost a little more, who would like to live as was the custom fifty years ago? We get more out of life in a week than they could in a year. One reason it costs more, is because we want more and get more. In olden times they had no modern improvements in houses. A very limited quantity of food, fruit almost unknown at high prices. Now we have all kinds of fruit in profusion and cheap. I well recollect the first bananas brought to Quincy, ten cents each and few takers. A very little money will go a long way if properly expended, but clam chowder, beef soup, and home made bread will sustain life, and for drink, nothing can be better than Metropolitan water. There is always plenty of ready money for theatres, liquors and tobacco.

IN FASHION'S REALM

This is a season of many shades, crepe weaves and iridescent effects, a season when fabrics in silk have their counterparts and namesakes in cotton and wool, silks and cottons, and silks and wools. Take the single fabric known as crepe de chine. In its original state it was only of silk, but now it is manufactured in cotton, in silk and cotton, and in silk and wool. It is both embroidered and printed, and woven in two colors or iridescent.

And other materials have undergone the same metamorphosis. There are shedwater foulards, crepe, cashmere, iridescent, satin faced and silk and cotton foulards. A marvelous array, and not one of the family may be neglected, for each has its claim to beauty.

It would be better, perhaps, to take each fabric separately so that she who wishes to purchase her Spring costumes may have a full grasp of the situation and its possibilities and know, before setting out upon her shoping tour, exactly what she desires.

As the Spring suit is usually the first consideration, the suitings, perhaps, should come first. Serges of all kinds are in demand, for they adapt themselves equally well to the Russian blouse and the much-trimmed short coat. The serge of former years has now been augmented by the wide wale the diagonal and the wide wale diagonal, each of which speaks for itself.

There are the canvas serge, a near relation to the familiar panama, and hop sacking, a German material of loose and rather rough weave. In cheviots, which are always desirable, there are diagonals and heavy, unevenly woven effects, and these are a good investment if the suit is to be worn in the mountains during the summer months or is intended to be worn until late in the Autumn.

For more dressy woolen suits there may be found a prunella, satin faced, in all the favorite shades of the season, and if a two-toned suit is desired shadow-striped serge might serve as a good suggestion. Should the passion for the iridescent extend even to the tailored suit, the newest serge of all will fill the bill. This is the serge glace with a satin-faced rib showing a multitude of tiny colored threads that suggest a prism.

There are also specked serges, woven of many colors, comprising, when seen at different angles, almost every hue—green, violet, blue—all the colors that when blended produce in material if not in the prism, a neutral tone.

For dressy suits to be worn in the afternoon, Paris says there is but one perfect material, cachemire de soie, or silk cashmere. This is woven with a dull finish and entirely of silk, or with a satin finish, in which case it is of silk and wool. Both fabrices have all the qualities of a fine and closely woven cloth, and they have been used in Paris for many of the tailored suits now being worn at the Riviera resorts.

Otherwise the choice of materials seems to lie entirely between the many foulards, the crepe tissues, and the silk and wool fabrics. Among the foulards the satin-faced, the iridescent, and the waterproofs are the favorites. Mme. Paquin is using ordinary foulards, with much spotted backgrounds, and satin-faced foulards, some with floral bordures, for her spring gowns. It is quite customary, too, to use spotted or shot foulards for the gown itself, and the same material with background to match, and a bordure to form the overskirt and trimming.

The iridescent foulard is probably the latest idea of all, and it possesses all the light and beauty of changeable silk besides its own soft quality of foulard. One thread is white and the other colored, wistaria garnet, apple green, or blue, while the whole fabric is covered with a white dot.

The shedwater foulards come in dark colors, often with white ring dots, for they must endure stern service. They really look exactly like the foulards that have been familiar to all for many years, but they have been treated in some way to prevent their spotting in the rain. There is also a silk and cotton foulard with a spotted background and a tiny silk dot of color. They would make ideal gowns for wear during the warm weather of midsummer.

The crepe materials are numerous, but all are worth a review. Of course, there is the standard crepe de chine, all silk and always lovely for dressy gowns, and this has now been woven in two colors to produce the required iridescent effect. Blue and gold may be found and mauve and blue, violet and rose, green and gray, and with each the result is incredibly lovely.

There are also satin crepes de chine and heavy Oriental crepes with printed borders of softly colored flowers. These are very expensive, but there are inexpensive lighter crepes, with the bordure and brocaded crepes. Silk and wool and silk and cotton combinations also form crepes quite as varied as the more costly fabrics.

Plain crepes of silk and wool and embroidered crepon the embroidery consisting of a silk dot have been affected. Then there is a novelty crepon in two shades of the same color, the darker wool, the lighter silk, and the latter forming a conventional floral design. In silks and cotton there is an iridescent crepe and numerous crepe jacquards, the technical name for a certain weave. The array is wonderful!

Among the silk and wool fabrics there are many novelties, beautiful and suitable to wear on almost any occasion. There is a satinfaced Ottoman, for instance, that might be used for tailored afternoon gowns. Then there are a poplin with a silky surface that looks like the heavy corded silk once in vogue and crepe bengaline on the same order, but lighter in weight.

Last, but not least are the eoliennes, light as air and supple as chiffon. There is a crepe eolienne that rivals crepe de chine in beauty; there are plain eolinnes that wear well, and best of all there are irridescent eoliennes that seem to have caught and absorbed the sunlight.

Under the same general heading of silk and wool may be found marquisette, a transparent square mesh fabric used extensively for the fashionable overblouse and the new voile, beloved of every woman. There are no crepe voiles as yet, but there are iridescent one that possess the changeable qualities of the chamelion. Among the fancy weave transparent materials may be found a braided marquisette with basket-work effect and striped with satin, satin striped chiffon and liberty chiffon cloth, which is a sort of open-mesh satin.

Materials for afternoon wear may not be left without a mention of the many pongee fabrics, shedwater pongee in all colors, heavy, imported shantung, diagonal shantung, and satin-faced shantung. The diagonal is somewhat reminiscent of the silk serge of last year, but it is a lighter material and more durable. The satin shantung is entirely new and seems to be a satin possessing the uneven thread characteristic of pongee. It is not expensive and is woven in all the newest shades.

There is no irridescent pongee as yet but it may be expected. Mirage, the changeable pongee of a former season,

TARIFF NOT LIKED IN NEW ENGLAND

Editors' Sentiment Overwhelmingly Against the New Law

Chicago, March 25.—That the east as well as the west is dissatisfied with the Aldrich tariff law and the Cannon speakership is shown by the result of a poll made by the Chicago Tribune of the editors of eastern Republican newspapers. The answers of the eastern editors were received before the now historic revolt of the insurgents against Speaker Cannon.

The result of the poll has now been carefully compiled and it shows that the opposition to the Aldrich tariff is stronger in New England than in any other section thus tested. This is the vote of the New England states:

	For	Against
Republicans	39	184
Independents	3	57
Totals	42	241

The answers of those who recorded themselves as Democrats are omitted from the compilation of the returns, as it was desired to secure only the opinions of those who declared themselves Republicans or independent editors.

WON'T SERVE WITH NEGRO

Juror Is Excused After Receiving Lecture From Supreme Justice

New York, March 25.—Leroy Bowers' southern blood rose when, summoned as a juror in the supreme court, he found himself drawn on a panel with a negro. Bowers rose immediately and asked to be excused from serving, declaring his southern instincts prompted him to make the request.

Justice Ford granted the request, but not before giving Bowers a severe scoring, declaring him "unfit for jury service either in this case or in this court."

Little Fellow Kills His Sister

Laquin, Pa., March 25.—John Dagistino, 5 years old, shot and killed his 2-year-old sister while playing with a gun. The gun hung over their parents' bed and they evidently climbed on the bed and managed to take it down.

DOVE OF PEACE HAS ALIGHTED

Harmony Between Regulars and Insurgents In Congress

RULES COMMITTEE SUITS ALL

Rebels Thought It Unwise to Make Fight In Caucus and Will Keep Peace So Long as They Are Given "Reasonably Decent Treatment"—Will Carefully Scrutinize Legislation Demanded by the President

Washington, March 25.—With the superb discipline which so often characterizes it when at the supreme stage of a political emergency, the Republican party has got together again in congress, and the Republicans have chosen their six members of the new committee on rules without friction or hard feeling. The new rules committee is entitled to take office, with the house believing that, although its decisions may not be ultra progressive, they will at least be fair and free from unreasonable prejudice.

A dozen events have occurred within the last week to teach the old guard the danger of overplaying their game, and now that Cannon appears to be muzzled, men of less force and authority in the house may be expected to work for the good of the party more than for the maintenance of personal power.

The insurgent Republicans have received a good many telegrams criticizing them for not making a fight in the caucus for the appointment of one of their number on the rules committee, but they are not disturbed by this criticism. They say they gave the situation very careful thought and decided it would be the part of wisdom not to precipitate a fight in the caucus. They have made up their minds to keep the peace unless they are driven to fight.

They point out that they have accomplished all they started out to accomplish; that they have brought about a reorganization of the committee on rules which increases the committee to ten members and eliminates the speaker.

They realize, they say, that they are only small minority of the Republican strength in the house; that the thing for them to do is to make the most of an unsatisfactory situation until the people of the country have another chance at the polls.

The insurgents say they do not intend to put themselves in a position where anybody can lay against them the charge that they are responsible for the failure of the administration to get its progressive legislation through congress. They think they see that a rebellion in the Republican caucus would have resulted in so complicating the general situation as to make the enactment of legislation impossible.

Having kept the peace in the caucus; having permitted the regulars to select the six members of the rules committee representing the majority party, they are now in position to demand that the regulars proceed to do what President Taft has been insisting all these months they shall do. This promise to keep the peace is made by the insurgents with the understanding among themselves that the promise is to hold good only so long as the regulars give them reasonably decent treatment.

While the insurgents in both house and senate stand ready today as they have stood since the opening of congress to support the president's demand for certain legislation, they are just as determined as ever that none of this legislation shall go through until it has been carefully scrutinized.

CHAMP CLARK HEADS LIST

Fitzgerald Also Elected Minority Member of Rules Committee

Washington, March 25.—The Democratic members of the house last night elected the four minority members of the enlarged rules committee, as follows:

Champ Clark, Missouri, 125 votes; Oscar Underwood, Alabama, 102 votes; Lincoln Dixon, Indiana, 99 votes; John J. Fitzgerald, New York, 98 votes.

The expected opposition to Fitzgerald, because of his attitude on the rules question at the beginning of the present congress, when he, with twenty-three other Democrats, left the leadership of Clark and voted with the Republicans, appeared early in meeting, but failed of any definite result.

Cairo Rioters Indicted

Cairo, Ills., March 25.—Twelve indictments for rioting were returned by a special grand jury which has been investigating the attack on the Alexander county jail, during which one man in the mob was killed and several injured by the sheriff's special deputies.

Prince an Alleged Embezzler

St. Petersburg, March 25.—Prince Valkousky, distinguished for his charitable work, has been arrested on the charge of wasting and embezzling charitable funds. The arrest has caused a stir in St. Petersburg.

MT. ETNA IN ERUPTION

Lava Invading Cultivated Lands and Approaching Mountain Villages

Rome, March 25.—Mt. Etna suddenly has become active and a new eruption mouth has opened and is emitting lava. Professor Ricco of the Mt. Etna observatory telegraphed that more than twenty slight shocks had been felt, with increasing intensity. Lava, rock and dense smoke were emitted.

The lava is invading the cultivated lands and approaching villages on the sides of the mountain, extending and descending toward Volta Girclema. No deaths have been reported.

Seven violent shocks occurred at Mileto, province of Catanzaro, and similar shocks were felt at Messina.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

The Metropolitan Opera Company of New York will give a second season of grand opera at the Boston Opera House the week beginning March 28th, with six performances. Wednesday evening La Boheme will be presented with Frances Alda as Himi. Rodolfo will be sung by Caruso.

Tosca will be the performance presented on Saturady afternoon with Geraldine Farrar in the title role. Cavaradossi will be sung by Riccardo Martin, and Scarpia by Antonio Scotti.

Richard Wagner's opera Die Meistersinger will be sung in German Saturday evening at 7.30, with a very strong cast. Johanna Gadski sings the role of Eva, and Florence Wickham that of Magdalene.

BRIEFS.

A social party and dance is to be given on April 8 for the children of First Church Sunday school.

The annual business meeting of the Calvary Baptist church will be held next Tuesday evening.

The Telephone company is running a new cable in the underground conduit on Washington street.

The Quincy Yacht club hopes to have the addition to its club house completed by the opening of the season.

The dust about City Square on Thursday was something fierce. With a high wind it was being blown about in great blinding clouds until the Commissioner of Public Works took mercy on the merchants and put the watering carts on.

Plans for the new church of the Memorial church of Atlantic are now being prepared by the architect and it is expected that work on the new building will be commenced late in April. The present building will be sold.

One of the first social events after Easter will be the annual ball of Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, announced for Monday evening next. The Knights of Columbus is the leading Catholic society of the city and its annual events are always looked forward to with anticipations of pleasure.

The automobile truck that is being tried out by the Quincy Quarries Co., for the transportation of granite attracts great attention as it pulls into City Square every noon with a load of granite weighing upwards of five tons which it moves about as easily as though it was a load of air balloons. It is the coming method for the transportation of granite.

The late Thomas M. Thompson of Quincy was the third Massachusetts citizen to benefit under the Savings Insurance act. Mr. Thompson, who was employed at the Fore River works, was insured in the Whitman Savings bank for $300. He had paid six premiums. The claim was settled by the bank within twenty-four hours after it had been reported.

ADAMS EXPRESS UNDER FIRE

Excessive Rates and Discrimination Charged by Douglas Shoe Company

Washington, March 25.—The Adams Express company is charged with making excessive rates and practising discrimination in a complaint filed with the interstate commerce commission by the William L. Douglas Shoe company of Brockton, Mass.

The shoe company alleges that since March 1, when the Adams Express company took over the New York and Boston Dispatch company and discontinued the old Fall River line express from Brockton, the rate from that city to New York has been increased from 75 cents a hundred to $1 a hundred. This rate, it is alleged, is excessive, and it is further alleged that Brockton is discriminated against because adjacent cities are enabled to take advantage of lower rates by shipping over the Fall River line to New York.

Thrilling Chase of Desperado In Streets of Malden

LEADS IN A TWO-MILE STUNT

Snatches Satchel Containing Large Sum of Money From Insurance Agent—Latter Raises Alarm and Crowd Starts In Pursuit—Nervy Policeman Lands His Man After Hand-to-Hand Struggle In a Barn

Malden, Mass., March 25.—A bandit appeared upon the busiest street of Malden yesterday afternoon, held up an insurance agent, wrenched from him a satchel containing $3600 in cash, stood off his pursuers at the point of a revolver, and led a crowd of 200 men a two-mile chase through the city.

Automobiles, private carriages and wagons of every description were pressed into service by the pursuers, and tore through the narrow streets and around the sharp corners on the bandit's path, only to be halted and turned back again and again by his levelled revolver and chilly eye.

Down back alleys, across broken ground, over eight-foot fences, in and out of coal pockets, across trestles and swamp land the chase led.

It was 2:45 o'clock when John T. Bruce, an agent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, started from the offices of the company on Pleasant street for the First National bank. With him was Miss Edna Kaulback, the bookkeeper of the Malden office of the company. Bruce was with Miss Kaulback because she was carrying a satchel containing money for deposit in the bank.

As the pair left the Auditorium building, Bruce was carrying the satchel containing the money. He held it under his left arm. His right arm was raised, so that the satchel was protected from the front side. They crossed the street immediately.

They had not walked ten steps after crossing the street, when Bruce felt the satchel slip. Miss Kaulback was on the inside; Bruce was on the outside. The satchel was under his outside arm.

When Bruce felt the satchel slip he tightened his grip on it. Then he felt a tug on it. He turned to see what the trouble was and the satchel was jerked from his grasp.

Bruce yelled: "Thief, thief!" and gave chase. Patrolmen Costello and Long joined the chase. Other policemen came after them. Citizens joined in the chase and the pursuers increased till a great crowd was hot foot after the robber.

The latter ran desperately down Middlesex street, dodged around into Charles street, shot in the upper gate of the health department yard. In among the swill carts, out the lower gate and across Charles street. He was minus the bag, but the mob did not notice this just then.

Through the gas works yard the fugitive took to the Boston and Maine tracks, sprinted across the Charles street railroad trestle three ties at a jump, and turned into Chester street. From there he dashed up Biltmore street to Pleasant street. Down Pleasant street he went at full tilt. Finally he reached the Bradley estate, the stable of which is placed well back from the street.

Into this estate the thief plunged. He ripped open the door of the stable and the crowd came up slowly and gathered silently around the door. Then Officer Costello dashed up in an automobile. He jumped out and walked to the door of the stable. The thief could be seen behind the door of the harness room. His head and his right arm and shoulder protruded. In his hand was his revolver, pointed straight at the crowd. Costello looked at him for a moment. Then he walked slowly into the stable alone.

"You'd better not put up a fight, my man," he said. "You've got sense and I've got sense, and you don't want to sit in the electric chair. Let's wind this up now."

The thief shook his head, but all the time Costello was drawing nearer and nearer to him. Suddenly, with a bound, he went for him and pinioned his revolver hand, bending back his wrist until he dropped his revolver. At the same time Costello dropped his own revolver.

Then the two men went down in a heap, for the thief didn't want to give in. Officer Long was there, however, and he and Costello soon had the man under control. They piled into an automobile and, followed by a cheering procession of man-hunters, paraded to the police station.

While he was being taken to the station word came that the bag and all the money had been found in the back end of one of the carts in the health department yard. The bag was on a mass of garbage intact. The prisoner is charged with robbery.

COLLAPSES IN COURT

Accused Pittsburg Grafter Overcome When Questioned by Judge

Pittsburg, March 25.—The confessions of six men who appeared before Judge Frazer Thursday were accompanied by sensations. The climax came when George B. Anderson, a former select councilman, fainted when the court asked him if he ever received money for his vote. When he was revived he answered the judge's questions as though there had been no interruption.

Robert E. Cochrane, formerly a member of councils, admitted receiving $600 to vote for the bank depository ordinance and $500 for the ordinance vacating South Seventh street. Judge Frazer wanted to know how it came that he received so much for voting for these measures whereas other councilmen received much less.

Cochrane was unable to make a satisfactory explanation. He insisted that he distributed none of the money. No suspension of sentence was granted Cochrane and he left the court room a disappointed man.

CAUGHT AFTER A LONG HUNT

Broker Sherwood of New York Is Arrested In Boston

HE FIGURED IN WINDSOR DEAL

Stock Valued at $110,000 Was Left as Collateral For Loan of $50,000—Latter Was Paid by Accused Man and Stock Belonging to Joyce Was Afterward Sold on the Market—Held In $10,000 For a Hearing

New York, March 25.—John F. Sherwood, a stock broker wanted in connection with the larceny of $110,000 in securities from the Windsor Trust company of this city, was arrested at a hotel in Boston by Detective Fitzsimmons of District Attorney Whitman's office, accompanied by Boston detectives. Search for Sherwood had been in progress since last August, when he was indicted. He had been at the hotel since February.

Sherwood figured prominently in an investigation made by the district attorney last August in an effort to fix the responsibility for the abstraction from the vaults of the Windsor Trust company of 15,600 shares of Ohio Copper stock and 4000 shares of Davis-Daly Copper company stock, valued at $110,000, and its sale on the market.

This stock belonged to M. J. Joyce and he left it as collateral for a loan from the trust company of $50,000. He believed that the Windsor Trust company was the principal in the transaction, but its officers declared that they were acting as agent, the money being loaned by Charles Katz, for whom it had acted as agent.

Some time after that Sherwood went to the trust company with $50,000, paid the loan and took up the collateral, which was afterward sold on the market. He said at the time of the investigation that he had done this for Donald L. Persch, who was at one time connected with the law office of Carl Fischer-Hansen. It also came out that he had borrowed the money from L. J. Field, without security of any kind, to take up the note given by Joyce, and the loan was repaid when the stock was sold.

Persch was indicted, and later indictments were found against Katz and a broker, William Clark, who had arranged the loan for Joyce. It came out in the investigation that Sherwood's share of the profit in the transaction was $14,245.

Sherwood, who was brought here yesterday, was held in $10,000 bail for examination next Tuesday.

AT THE BOSTON THEATRES

BOSTON THEATRE.

There has been a lively demand all the week for tickets for Mr. Oscar Hammerstein's season of Grand Opera at the Boston theatre beginning Easter Monday. Mr. Hammerstein again announces a repertoire full of novelty and fresh interest to be rendered by artists such as Mary Garden, Mme. Tetrazzini, Mme. Mazarin (the new French dramatic soprano who will make her Boston debut on the opening night in Richard Strauss's new sensational music drama "Elektra"), Mlle. Gerville-Reache, Mme. Augusta Doria (a Boston girl), Charles Dalmores, Maurice Renaud, Charles Gilibert, Hector Dufranne and the young Irish tenor, John McCormack of whom so much has been heard. Everybody agrees that Mr. Hammerstein has surrounded himself with a unique ensemble of artists, each of whom seems to have that rare quality "personality." The fact that fewer season tickets have been taken will be welcome news to the great majority of music-lovers, who last season found it so difficult to get seats for single performances. Monday evening, April 11, comes Anna Held in F. Zeigfeld's greatest success "Miss Innocence." Miss Held will be supported by a splendid company headed by that popuplar comedian Charles A. Bigelow. The tour will be Miss Held's positive farewell to the American stage.

THE HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Miss Billie Burke will begin a two weeks' engagement at the Hollis Street theatre, Boston, on Easter Monday, in "Mrs. Dot," a comedy by W. Somerset Maughan. Miss Burke comes direct to Boston from New York where she has had a successful three months' engagement in "Mrs. Dot" at the Lyceum theatre. Miss Burke made her first appearance in Boston as a star last season in "Love Watches," a charming little comedy adapted from the French. Her success in that piece was of the phenominal kind and it is predicted she will make even a bigger hit in "Mrs. Dot." In the Maughan comedy, Miss Burke has the role of a young and pretty widow with an enormous fortune. She is in love with a handsome, but impecunious young fellow who seems to reciprocate her affection, but who, for some reason or other, is extraordinarily backward in his love making. Mrs. Dot determines to take matters into her own hands and deliberately proposes to him. And he—well, astonishing as it may appear, he refuses her! Why? Oh, yes, he has an excellent reason, but it would entirely spoil the play to tell what that reason is beforehand. It is enough to know that Mrs. Dot finally succeeds in overcoming the obstacle to her happiness thereby proving conclusively that "When a woman will she will." Miss Burke's engagement at the Hollis Street theatre is for only two weeks and there will be two matinees each week, on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

When it was announced a week ago that Mrs. La Salle Corbell Pickett, widow of General George E. Pickett, who led the famous charge at Gettysburg, had been engaged by B. F. Keith to appear in the houses on his circuit, the news spread from one end of the country to the other, and everywhere the question was asked, "What is she going to do?" This was invariably followed by another question when it was remembered that it is more than 45 years since the Civil war, but those who know history remembered that Mrs. Pickett was at that time know nas the "Child Bride of the Confederacy," and no person living today has perhaps had a wider acquaintance with public men before and after the war, and few women are better known than Mrs. Pickett. For she has been a frequent contributor to the magazines, has written a number of books including "Pickett and His Men," and during the past few years has been delivering a lecture on the battle of Gettysburg which has attracted wide spread attention. In fact, it has been proclaimed the most graphic description of a battle ever delivered and on her recent tour she broke all records as a lecturer. Mrs. Pickett will make her vaudeville debut at Keith's theatre Monday, Mar. 28 and will describe the charge that made her husband famous. On her opening night Governor Draper, Mayor Fitzgerald, officers of the G. A. R. and a host of public personages will be present to welcome her to Boston.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"Raffles," which John Craig is to produce at the Castle Square theatre next week, is a detective play of the most exciting sort. It is founded on the famous stories of the same name by E. W. Hormung, and it shows the famous amateur cracksman at clever exploits that rival those of Sherlock Holmes, and that only Sherlock Holmes himself would be able to solve the mystery. Raffles is an ingenious appropriator of other people's property, but he always remains a gentleman, and however much the reader or the spectator may reprehend his methods of earning a living, he cannot help admiring the man for his personality and cleverness. The scenes of the play are laid in England, two acts at the country house of Lord Amersteth and two at the apartments of Raffles in London, through each successive act. The net seems to be closing around Raffles and it is only at the very end that we are made aware of his ability to escape through the smallest loop-hole. The title character in the Castle Square production will be played by Mr. Craig himself, and he may be expected to make him every inch a gentleman as well as every inch an expert rogue. He will show that Raffles robs not so much for personal gain as for power, and that he never condescends to rob the poor. Mary Young will appear as the heroine, Gwendolen Conron, and in other important roles will be Gertrude Binley, Mabel Colcord, Donald Meek, George Hassell and all the members of the John Craig Stock Company.

AMERICAN MUSIC HALL.

Capacity audiences at every performance last week, attracted to the theatre by the sensational dance of Miss Adelaine Boyer in the "Princess Of Isreal" induced the management of the American Music hall to hold over this remarkable feature act for a second week. While Miss Boyer is daring in the extreme, both as to costume and to suggestive movements, yet her dancing never fails to evoke the most favorable commendation. During the coming week the orchestra will still remain augmented to eighteen pieces and the music will be fully up to the standard as last week. Miss Boyer will perform the same dances despite rumors to the fact that she will be forced to change her costume and her style. All star acts will make up the balance of the bill. "The Star Bout" is another of those features which last week made such a tremendous hit and this act will be held over also. With fifty people yelling their lungs out at the ring side, a prize fight spectacle is furnished which may only be witnessed in the largest areanas in the country. Alex Carr and Company will be seen in their always laughable sketch "Toblitsky" or "The End of The World." Another act on the bill will be Rene Davies, one of the most beautiful women on the stage whose costumes alone are worth coming a long way to see.

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin, until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. IN FASHION'S REALM was found too stiff and too heavy to conform to present styles, and it is not now for sale. There are, however, silk and cotton pongees, very thin, with quite an iridescent effect.

They are sometimes plain and sometimes decorated with woven silk design, and because they wash so well they will be very much worn for simple afternoon frocks. Among silk and cotton fabrics, too, may be found stainfaced pongees, striped pongees, eolinnes, messalines, and a material called crocodile silk.

As almost all the fabrics of the year are satin finished, there is only one novelty among the purely evening silks that seems worthy of special mention, although each is perfect in its way. The new arrival is iridescent peau de cygne, a very lustrous material of light weight, but the color combinations make it seem as though it were woven by the fairies.

The list of Summer tissues would not be complete without mention of the cottons and linens, for in both departments there are novelties. French manufacturers have contributed beautiful printed organdies, some plain, some with a raised cord outlining squares, while the Irish have sent to the market lovely dimities, many with a closely woven stripe and a dainty floral design.

In dotted swiss there is nothing especially new, unless one might include mohair swiss, a fine transparent mohair with an embroidered dot in colored silk. Marquisette, too, has been woven in cotton and decorated with a silk dot, and there is an embroidered batiste, also woven with a silk dot, which is quite novel.

The heavier cotton fabrics include the mercerized poplin in all shades and a wide wales pique which bears the stamp of novelty. A new coton voile has been introduced of fine weave and printed with a flower and small stripes. This is called effeure and is of French manufacture.

Printed nets, once new but revived, must be counted, and last of all the mercerized cotton moire, a material mainly useful for Summer topcoats.

In linens there is but a small showing, Linen suitings, coarsely woven ramie linens in checks and stripes, and linen lawns, with some new printed designs, complete the list.

The colors for the Spring and Summer must be decided upon by the artists who make the gowns, not entirely by the manufacturers, so from Paris the first authentic news must be taken.

Perhaps because all of the most beutiful fabrics are iridescent and are therefore of no one shade, it would be difficult to state exactly what color will be most worn, but it may be taken for granted that all the season's shades are soft in tone. Nothing glaring, save only cerise and chanticleer red, need be considered.

Blue in all shades has during the past year attained wonderful success and now a few new shades have been added to the already long list. Aero blue is the latest of all and is, as the name suggests, that transparent blue of the ether of the mist, Cadet blue verges on the gray and the rest—gendarme, peacock, Copenhagen, and marine—are deeper in tone.

Green has been much talked of for the past two years ,and at the begining of each season it has been heralded as the favorite. As a matter of fact, green is a color that can never be really popular, for it is unbecoming to the majority. It is, however used as trimming and it may now be found in lovely soft shades, mignonette, lichen, ivy, the color of the first green shoots; willow, a dreamy green; reseda, a bold shade reminiscent of the shamrock; moss olive, bordering on the gray; bottle green, sometimes called Robin Hood, and apple green, the clear true green of the unripe fruit.

Purple, unlike green, may be worn by almost any one, and this year amethyst and wisteria show promise of great popularity. Verging on the purple come the shades of red, bois de rose, a dull, dead old rose; catawba, that seems to reflect the luscious blush of the grape; bordeaux and burgundy, both deep with sparkle of the wine, and, most important chanticleer, the brilliant red of the cock's comb, sometimes called British red because it is also the lobster red of the early British colonial uniforms.

Cream or tan is always a useful color at all times of the year, but particularly in Summer, for it is cool and harmonizes with russet shoes. This season Paris says blonde, the yellow of rich cream; biscuit, a deeper tone, and wood brown will all be extensively used. Besides these there is a new amber shade, and old gold, and an apricot, which in certain lights show a faint suggestion of rose.

And lastly there is cerise, the color of flame, difficult to classify, as no cherry was ever half so bright.

It is brilliant, dazzling, but adorable. —New York Times.

STONE THROWING BY MOB

Checked by Guards at Paper Plant Using Their Revolvers

Livermore Falls, Me., March 25.—Angered because of the arrival of additional strike breakers at the International Paper company's works here, 200 strike sympathizers made an attack on the men guarding the works last evening.

There was a good deal of stone throwing by the mob, and the guards were forced to discharge their revolvers over the heads of the disturbers to drive them back.

No one was injured seriously, though a few of the strike sympathizers suffered from bruises from stones thrown by men of their own side.

SENATE ASKED FOR $3240

Included In Legislative Bill For Masseur and Two Assistants

Washington, March 25.—Perhaps the most unusual feature of the amendments which the senate has made to the house legislative appropriation bill was the authorization of the employment of an attendant in charge of the luxurious bathrooms in the senate office building, "who shall be a professional masseur."

For the new employe of the senate the bill contained an appropriation of $1800. But the senate committee did not stop with the masseur. That there might be nothing overlooked in the way of comforts in the bathrooms the committee also authorized the employment of two attendants at $720 each a year. The amendment was defeated.

FLYING MACHINES

Inventor to Try Them Out in Quincy at Early Date

Mr. Burlingame, the inventor of the typewriting machine by which messages written on one machine are reproduced on a duplicate machine in another office, has leased about twenty acres of land near the golf links at Montclair, where he will carry on experiments with flying machines during the coming summer.

CHILDREN'S PARTY

Women's Club Entertain at the Clubhouse

Between 80 and 90 were present at the children's party at the Women's club house Thnrsday afternoon, and they spent a very enjoyable afternoon. The affair was in charge of an efficient committee headed by Mrs. Robert Park of Wollaston, and the program arranged was very pleasing. One of the first things was the story telling by Miss Gertrude Green, who told a number of stories from the Arabian Knights. Then small baskets of refreshments were given to each child. Favors were passed among the children for a German, but instead of the German figures there was general dancing among the children. The children also played a number of games and were only too sorry when the time came to go home.

MASQUERADE PARTY

Encampment Odd Fellows Have a Merry Time

The annual masquerade dancing party of Manet encampment, I. O. O. F., was held Thursday evening at Alpha hall, and was attended by upwards of one hnudred couples. Wilson's orchestra furnished the music for the dancing which was from 8 to 12 o'clock. A very large part of the participants in the dancing were en masque, and practically every conceivable character was impersonated. So completely was the iedntity of the dancers hidden by their costumes that few were recognized until the signal came at the end of the fourth number to unmask.

The scene from the balcony, while the dance was at its height, was an animated one. Here and there were the savage Redskins, and almond-eyed Chinamen mingling with great familiarity with the Goddess of Liberty and Uncle Sam, while the various clowns and giddy school girls kept the spectators wild with laughter at their antics.
immediate vicinity are the houses of

When at least the signal came to unmask all that could be heard for a few minutes were exclamations of surprise that the characters had not been discovered. General dancing was then in order until shortly be-11 o'clock, when an intermission was declared, during which ice cream and cake were served.

The floor was in charge of Thomas D. Milne, who was assisted by Chas. Barron and the following aids: Charles Wood, Edward L. Goodridge, William A. Richards, George C. Ela, Frank Foster and George H. Fisher.

The committee of arrangements were Charles W. Jones, chairman, Charles Barron, William A. Richards, Herbert D. Gearwar, Frank Foster, George H. Fisher, G. W. Woodwad, Edward L. Goodridge and Thomas D. Milne.

GENERAL ALARM

leaped high into the air made a very spectacular sight.

A small stable between the house and the woods was soon on fire and blazed fiercely. A stream of water was put upon the building and that was soon under control.

During the early scenes at the fire a horse that had been released from this stable was roaming about the burning buildings apparently unconcerned. With some difficulty he was captured and taken to a place of safety.

A good part of the furnishings of the house were taken out by the small army of volunteers, yet they were more or less damaged ,as some were thrown out of the window. The water poured on the roof soaked down through the building and there will be considerable damage by water. The water damage will probably amount to more than that by fire, as but little fire got into the building.

A very high wind was blowing almost a gale at the time and it is a wonder that the occupants of the houses in the vicinity became alarmed.

The residence of Councilman Bryant is directly opposite the building where the fire was, but the wind was in the opposite direction so that at no time was there any danger of its catching. Other buildings in the immediate vicinity are the house of Harrison G. Kennard, building on the Pfaffmann estate and the National Sailors Home. The pumping station also adjoins the woods where the fire was raging, but the swamp being between it and the fire and the wind blowing directly toward the water, the station was at no time in danger.

In all a mile or more in length of woods must have been burning at one time, and as stated above it made a most spectacular sight.

To add to the confusion, just before the general alarm was sounded, an alarm was sounded from Box 19 at Rock Island. It was difficult to count the box at the time and some taking it to be an alarm from Box 154 located at the National Sailors Home notified the Chief that box had been pulled, and he with the Atlantic combination started post haste for the Home. The Home however was in no danger.

As all the central apparatus had responded to the general alarm the relief wagon was sent from the station to the aid of the Houghs Neck combination at Rock Island.

BASEBALL POINTERS

Pitcher Willis, transferred by Pittsburg to the Cardinals, during his twelve year major league career has won 234 games, a total only excelled by Cy Young and Mathewson in the same period.

Hughey Duffy, manager of the Chicago Americans, says it is safe to predict that Blackburne will be one of the sensations in the big league. Duffy is counting on Blackburne being another Owen Bush.

Boice, a recruit pitcher of the Cleveland Americans, is a second Falkenberg, so far as height is concerned. Boice stands six feet three and one half inches in his bare feet. He weighs 200 pounds in playing condition.

Manager McAleer of Washington believes he has dug up a pitching phenom equal to Walter Johnson in a young Californian named Bill Hendricks of San Anita. He is a six footer and only nineteen years old. Walter Johnson recommended him to McAleer for a trial.

Manager McGuire of the Naps is in raptures over the resurrection of Elmer Flick. The once formidable outfielder of the Blues showed every bit of his old time brilliancy in the spring practice games. The old fellow always looked good in the spring. But standing the strain of a long campaign is another matter once an athlete has broken down.

TOM LYNCH'S IDEA OF THE POPULAR UMPIRE.

"The popular umpire is the one who walks on the field, brushes off the plate, calls the captains to him and gets their batting lists, then starts the game," says Tom Lynch.

"The umpire who tries to keep the players in good humor by kidding them always gets in bad. And it's the men on the benches who howl that make the umpire sick of his job."

Civil War Hero Dead

Saratoga, N. Y., March 25.—General Winsor B. French, aged 78, died here. He commanded the Seventy-seventh New York volunteers in the Civil war and was brevetted brigadier general for bravery at Cedar Creek.

HOTTEST MARCH DAY

Noon Temperature Record for Thirteen Years Broken

The weather this morning was such as to make even top coats feel uncomfortable, and as the hour of noon approached ever these were laid aside. A glance at the thermometer told the story. At noon the mercury said 75 degrees, fully as warm as many summer days.

Not for thirteen years has the mercury been as high on a day in March as today. The warmest March day last year was March 27, when the noon temperature was 74 degrees and it was not until April 7, that the temperature reached the 75 mark. There was but one day in April 1909, when the temperature was as high as today and it was not until along in May that the weather began to get as warm.

MARRIED MEN VICTORIOUS

Braced Up and the First String with the South Quincys

The Married Men were weak in opening string Thursday evening in the Makaria bowling tournament, and lost by 9 pins, but after that the South Quincys were not in it. A grand brace gave the Married Men the second string by 215 pins and the third by 146, and the totals were 1930 to 1578. Ganzel was high on singles and totals.

RUBE'S SPORTING CHAT

We meet again.

• • •

Have you dug out that bat, ball and glove?

• • •

Only a short time now before we wend our way to the Bath-house for the daily dip.

• • •

I notice that Archie Minnis, the popular Old Colony league umpire, is a candidate for the position of chief of the police force at Rockland.

• • •

Billy Manning the crack little forward on the Quincy High school basket-ball team, will lead the quintet at the school next season. This choice meets with the hearty approval of the student body and alumni alike for a harder worker would be hard to find.

• • •

The Norfolk County baseball league is speedily coming to the fore and at a meeting at Norwood the other night the Quincy club put up their money as a guarantee of good faith. Another meeting will be called soon to adopt a schedule.

• • •

Basketball is on its last legs for 1910, and we are gluing our eyes upon the fast approaching "good old summer time," which brings along golf, baseball ,tennis, bathing, boating outings and countless other attractions.

• • •

The Old Colony Bowling league is all over but the shouting and the prizes will undoubtedly be distributed to Weymouth who have held the lead from the very start. The Downs team made a good showing but in Quincy and Braintree the game did not flourish for weaker teams were out of the race.

lack of public spirit. We think playgrounds will solve this need.

When boys are left alone they are unprotected like the wild tribes of Africa. Long vacations to boys are tedious unless they are guided. Protected playgrounds will make for new citizenship. They will develope loyalty. Boys at base ball are always ready to make a "sacrifice hit that their club may win. Adults need just that spirit. Protected playgrounds eliminate racial lines, creeds, etc., and the boys grow up to respect the other fellow whoever he is. Let us get together and make sacrifice hits that Quincy may win. COMMITTEE NAMED.

Vice President Shaw followed up the address of Mr. Curley with a review of the playground movement, and what had been accomplished in Quincy. We have parks and playgrounds but they need supervision. He read a letter from James Duncan, the secretary-treasurer of the National Granite Cutters Union, endorsing playgrounds.

It was voted to petition the Park Commissioners to provide supervision at one or more of the public playgrounds. The following committee was appointed to work for protected playgrounds: D. King, W. G. Shaw, E. G. Gay, Clarence Burgin and H. Gerrish Smith.

Ex-Councilman Elisha Packard asked Mr. Munroe if he favored a greater Boston by annexation. Mr. Munroe said the subject had not yet been considered by the committee. There were many arguments both pro and con.

With cheers and enthusiasm for W-O-R-K the league adjourned.

A DAY OF FIRES

Many Alarms Here But Quincy Was Fortunate

Friday was a busy day for the firemen ofthe city and from 1.37 when Box 54 sounded until after 10.30 o'clock at night they were kept on the jump. In all six alarms being sounded covering four wards of the city. All of the fires had their origin from burning grass except the alarm at 10.05 in the evening which was a false alarm. The most disastrous fire was that on Fenno street when sparks from burning woods set fire to the Henry L. Estabrook house. While the fire loss here was confined largely to the burning of the roof the water loss will be heavy and including the small stable will not be far from $2,500.

The alarms from Box 19 and 37 were for grass fires as was also the alarm from Box 173. This was for a woods fire near the Eldridge estate on Quincy avenue. The fire here had been burning a good part of the afternoon and when the alarm was sounded it was getting dangerously near the buildings. Two lines of hose were run into the woods, and the streams from these drove the fire back, although it gave the firemen an hour's work. Here again the steamer proved its efficiency. The pressure at this point is low and but for the steamer the fire would have got away from the firemen.

At 10.05 the last alarm of the day was sounded. This was from Box 136 corner of Brook road and Water street. This proved to be a false alarm.

In addition to the bell alarms the apparatus from the several fire stations were out six or seven times during the day on still calls to extinguish grass fires.

An auto chemical with a flying squad, such as many cities have, would have stood the fire department in well on Friday and would have saved the horses many hard runs.

Although there were several alarms, Quincy was more fortunate than many places in New England, for according to the morning papers several places suffered during the day. Hamilton lost 25 buildings with a total loss of $100,000; Essex eight ice houses, total $75,000; Revere seven houses and a total of $25,000; Ashland three houses, $15,000 Sharon a school house, $3,000; Mewinville, Ct., three houses, $20,000; Malden the Ames building, $1,500. In Newburyport 700 acres were burned over, at Worcester 10 acres, at South Framingham 60 acres, at Middlesex Fells 40 acres, and other places suffered.

QUINCY MEN GUESTS.

Supt. Conway and Supt. Gammon of of the Quincy division of the Old Colony street railway were the special guests of the West Roxbury and Norfolk Suburban employes at a social given them by the railway officials at Dedham on Wednesday evening. There was an interesting talk on railway matters, after which a banquet was served, and a social hour held. During the social hour Supt. Conway sang a solo, and gave a recitation, and Daniel Driscoll also of the Quincy division sang a solo. Supt. Gammon was invited to sing a solo, but his voice being a little out of tune, he was obliged to decline with thanks.

CORPORATION TAX.

The Massachusetts House seems determined this year to correct the unjustness of the corporation tax. It turned down the Moseley amendment day and passed the bill to a third reading to pay over the tax to the city or town where the corporation does its manufacturing.

Important Announcement

BY JOHNSON BROS.

Why and How We Shall Reduce Our Prices April 1st, 1910.

AFTER a careful study of the credit business for a number of years, and the same of the cash business for the past two years, we have decided that for the mutual benefit of the buyer and seller, beginning April 1, we shall turn our business into a strictly cash business. Our experience and close study of the wants of the people for the past thirty-five years has put us in a position to judge, and we have decided that low prices and high quality can be obtained in no other way than by a strictly cash proposition, as a credit store cannot possibly compete successfully with a store that is handled on a strictly cash basis, as there is a great expense attached to a credit business, which we wish to curtail, and our curtailing means much lower prices to the trade. Under the credit system there is always a proportion of bad bills which must be taken care of in our scale of prices. Under the credit system you are helping to pay the bills of those who do not pay themselves. The method of sending teams to take orders daily is very costly. We figure it costs us eight cents per call. If our clerks make from one hundred fifty to two hundred calls daily the expense of these calls must be added to the prices of the goods. The salaries of bookkeepers and other expenses of accounting and collections must also be taken care of. We propose to eliminate these items of expense, and correspondingly reduce the prices of our goods. We will deliver orders sent to us by mail, telephone or left at the store, and we intend to show the people of Quincy and surrounding towns what a really cash store can do for them. We intend to place on sale a certain day of each week some staple article from our stock at absolute cost, something different each time. Remember, one of the most important things in this change will be the keeping up of our quality for which we have so long been popular. We shall try to give even better quality if such a thing is possible, and we shall hammer the prices down hard—for cash.

We will pay cash for our goods, by so doing get all the cash discounts from the wholesale trade, and we intend that our trade shall benefit by it, and by owning our own plant it will not be possible for any concern in our line of business to undersell us, when you take into consideration our reputation for quality. We have one of the best equipped stores in our city, also the cooperation of experienced clerks which all go to make Johnson Bros. an ideal firm with which to trade. All orders will be delivered with care and promptness by our new Automobile system, which we will place at your service and which is being practised by nearly all the up to date concerns throughout the country. Customers not caring to pay cash every time they come, or send to the store can if they wish make a deposit with us, and when they have taken up all their deposit will be notified. At the prices we shall ask and the quality of our goods, we must insist on a tstrictly cash transaction, for at the present age of high prices a credit store can do nothing to lessen the expense of living for its customers, as the increasing expense of carrying on a credit business places low prices out of the question.

The credit dealer must realize a larger percent of profit than a cash dealer, as his expense account is more than double, so we decided that the only way we can help our customers and all careful buyers, is to establish a strictly up to date cash store, for there is no other way that we can afford to cut the prices for the mutual benefit of all. Hoping that this will meet with thoughtful and willing cooperation, we remain,

Respectfully,

JOHNSON BROS.' MARKET,

City Square

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Quincy had its quota of fire alarms yesterday, but efficiency of the fire department kept the loss small. Hamilton, Essex, Revere, Ashland, Sharon, and other places were not so fortunate.

Mayor Shea told us in his inaugural address that $375,695 was the total that would be raised for current expenses of the city in 1910 under the $12 State limit. Are not the Finance Committee estimating the outside receipts a little high when they report appropriations aggregating $403,480? All-night street lighting is a grand good thing but $4,800 is a big jump in the street lighting item for one year.

The new Civic League of Quincy does well at the outset to espouse the movement for protected playgrounds. In this connection we are pleased to quote from the address of Dr. Henry S. Curtis at the Lowell Normal school on Wednesday. In substance he said: Play is fundamental, and the playground movement is not one of the fads and frills of the educational regime of the times. Viewed historically the "three R's" are really the fads and frills. He also emphasized the value of the lessons in courtesy taught on the playgrounds abroad. His topic was "Play, as seen in the curriculum of the schools of Germany, England and America."

"In Germany," said Dr. Curtis, "the children are marked on their games the same as on their lessons. They are not excused from play afternoons, any more than from the school itself, in many of the schools. In others it is voluntary. In order to prepare the teachers to take care of these play periods, they began to give courses in play to the teachers about 14 years ago. Probably 50,000 teachers have taken the courses.

While in Germany it is primarily an educational movement, in England it is primarily something which springs out of the nature of the people—out of the pure love of play. In the board schools, in the heart of London, 30 square feet of playground for every child are required."

Dr. Curtis pointed out the fact that at the famous private boarding schools of England enough playground space is required so that the boys can all play at once. Twenty hours of football a week is required of boys of 8 and 9.

"From the very beginning," said the speaker, "the masters play with the boys. The main thing considered is not the physical development that the boys get through football, but the training of a gentleman, the training in courtesy. The boys are not allowed to neglect their football for their Latin. During a part of the year, criket is compulsory.

"In the American high school, perhaps four or five per cent of the boys get into some sort of athletics, and they are just the sort of boys who do not need it.

"The English say that we play our games like rowdies; and there is no doubt that we do. Very seldom is a high school or college game played, where they try to allow the other side to do his level best, and play a square game. The English regard the training as fundamental, in courtesy as in other things.

"The time has come when from any logical viewpoint, if we are going to train people to teach arithmetic, we ought to train them to teach play, because it is a very much larger subject."

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The record of marine losses for the past winter is an enormity that will mark this season with distinction among seafaring men. In the eighty-three vessels which have met disaster, 225 lives were lost and a million dollars in property sacrificed. A peculiar feature of the record is that it includes the destruction of seven of the larger class of sailing vessels, four, five and six masters, as well as several steamers. To what extent human carelessness may have been responsible for some of these disasters may never be known, but for the greater part this must be reckoned as the inexplainable toll which is required of those who go down into the sea in ships.—Boston Herald.

A teacher of the better life told her students in New York that physical wearines could be put off if we would divest ourselves of all unnecessary garments, in one's room of course, and rest the tips of the fingers on the top of the head, imagining as we do so that that place is the lower end of a cord by which angels are swinging us to and fro. It is only among the coarsest organism, she said, that food or sleep at regular intervals was necessary. A finely attuned person can easily work 18 hours without food and be none the worse for it. This will settle the cost of food without the aid of congressional commissions. Get yourself highly attuned and let the trust go hang.—Haverhill Gazette.

At the semi-annual meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Wollaston Baptist church Wednesday evening the following officers were elected:

After the business meeting, games were enjoyed and refreshments served. The committee in charge of the evening included: Mrs. Charles Roache, Miss Leona Robbins, Miss Clara Porter, and James Cahill.

POLYGAMY CHARGED.

Arthur G. Robinson of Cambridge was arranged in the Quincy court Friday morning for polygamy, and sentenced to one year in Dedham jail. Evidence was introduced to show that in 1905 Robinson married Margaret A. Pearce of Melrose. After living together as man and wife for a short time it is alleged that Robinson left his wife. The next heard of him was in Braintree where in April, 1907, he married Elsie M. Bunker. A year later, Mrs. Robinson the second died leaving a young child. Sometime later Robinson left Braintree leaving his child behind for his second wife's parents to care for. Later in looking up the matter it was found that he alread had a wife living from whom he had not been legally separated when he married Miss Bunker, and a warrant was issued against him and he was arrested by officer Qualey and brought into court.

EASTER TIDE.

"Take down the Christmas holly"
For now glad Eastertide
Sweeps soft across the valley
And tints the grey hillside.
We catch the hidden laughter
Of bursting woodland stream—
And read the first sweet chapter
Of life's new, tender, dream.

"Take down the Christmas holly,"
For this day we are given
Assurance sweet and holy
That Christ, the Lord, is risen—
White lilies, pure as snow mists,
Shall wreath the broken Tomb,
And with their fragrant sweetness
Dispel death's chill and gloom;
While unforgotten Christmas bells
In reverent silence wait
For the dawn of Easter morning
And the wide opening gate.

Ring out joy bells of Easter,
Triumphantly and clear;
And may the piece of Eastertide
Bring hope, and faith and cheer.
—Sarah M. Delano Cornell.

MERCHANTS' WEEK

All the Business Men Invited to Attend Meeting

The committee in charge of the proposed "Merchants' Week, to be held by the Merchants' Association of Quincy, are getting enthusiastic over the subject. During the past few days T. L. Williams and others of the committee have been calling upon business men, whether members of the association or not, inviting them to "meet the merchants" at Union hall next Tuesday evening, at which time the Merchants' Week plan will be launched. The merchants will meet at 6.30, at which time time supper will be served. This will be followed at 8 o'clock by a business session when the committee will report and the date fixed. The merchants hope that everybody will take hold of the idea and give Quincy the biggest boom that it has ever had-

PREFER GRANITE BLOCKS.

A petition bearing some 500 signatures has been presented to the street commissioners of Boston says the Globe asking that they reconsider their action of Jan. 4, authorizing repairs on Devonshire, Milk and Pearl sts. by use of wood block pavements, and the substitution therefore of granite blocks.

The petition is signed by practically all the Boston truckmen, coal dealers, ice companies, livery stables, fruit and produce dealers, such firms as Jordan Marsh Co., and Houghton Dutton Co. and the officials of the various teamsters' and drivers' unions.

RACHEL M. GOLDING.

Funeral services for Miss Rachel M. Golding of Sagamore avenue, Montclair, were held Friday afternoon at St. Chrysostom's church, Wollaston. So much feeling has rarely been shown at any funeral than that depicted upon the faces of all those who gathered for the services—and the many and beautiful flowers helped to show the love and esteem in which was held the one who has departed this life.

Miss Golding's last act of work for the church the week before she was taken ill was to accept the rector's invitation to become a member of the Altar Guild.

May the remaining ones find peace and joy in the sure knowledge of her rights to Heavens best reward.

The rector Rev. Albert Edwin Clattenburg officiated assisted by Rev. L. C. Manchester, D. D.

The mixed vested choirs sang "For all the saints who from their labors rest," "Holy Father cheer our way" and "Jerusalem, the golden" and Miss Susie Louise Nichols sang "One sweetly solemn thought comes to me o'er and o'er."

Burial was at Woodlawn cemetery, Everett.

CHILD BURNED.

Officer Hinchon proved Johnny on the spot again Thursday afternoon, when he rushed into a house at Brewer's corner and extinguished a fire in the clothing of the year and a half old daughter of Joseph Autio on Copeland street. Officer Hinchon was passing the house when he heard cries of the child's mother and rushing in found her trying to extinguish the flames of her daughter's clothing. The fire had started in a bureau drawer and had communicated to the child's clothing. Fireman Driscoll, who was also near by, rushed to the officer's assistance and they succeeded in extinguishing the flames. The loss to the building was slight and it is thought that the child was not badly burned.

Mr. and Mrs. Neal were both well known and popular young people of this town and the best wishes of their many friends for health and prosperity go with them to their new home. Mr. Neal is the proprietor of the Old Colony laundry, Quincy, and he and his wife are very pleasantly established in their apartments on Putnam street that city.

HIGHWAYMAN HAS RECORD IN BOSTON

Malden Offender Was Once a Clerk In Superior Civil Court

Boston, March 26.—Police headquarters in this city found a record for the man who snatched a handbag containing $3448.75 from John A. Bruce on one of the busiest streets in Malden, threatened his pursuers with two revolvers and finally landed in the police station after the money had been recovered.

The man gave his name as Frederick H. Rice and claimed to live in Portland, Me. Rice was brought to police headquarters in Boston, and as soon as he entered the rogues' gallery Inspector Burr recognized him as an old offender. Rice was arrested on Feb. 1, 1904, for entering a house on Appleton street and robbing a woman. For this offense he served three years in the house of correction. His other names are Frederick Haskell and Alfred R. Kehew. Under this last name he worked at one time as assistant clerk of the superior civil court.

When Rice was arraigned in the Malden court, on a charge of highway robbery, he showed a knowledge of court procedure. When his case was called he immediately waived examination and was held in $10,000 bail to await action by the Middlesex grand jury in June.

"SLASHER" RUINS GARMENTS

New York Subway Pest Shows Animosity Toward Fine Dresses

New York, March 26.—Reappearance of "Jack the Slasher" in the subway stations of the city has led to a special order to the Interborough's secret service men to keep a sharp lookout for him. Scores of women have reported to the police and the subway officials in the past ten days that their garments have been slashed.

He cuts only dresses of excellent material. In some instances he has slashed overcoats of fine material worn by men, but most of his operations are confined to garments worn by women. He invariably makes a cut, apparently with a razor or sharp knife, from six to eighteen inches long.

CLOSE FRIEND OF UNCLE JOE'S

Effort to Make Fitzgerald Leader of Democrats

REPUBLICANS MEET A DEFEAT

Clark Made Ranking Member of Rules Committee by Minority, Thus Keeping New York Man From Becoming Speaker Should Next House Be Democratic—Row Coming Over Alleged Ship Subsidy Lobby

Washington, March 26.—Several of the house organization leaders were frustrated in an attempt to arrange the membership on the new committee on rules, so that in the event of a Democratic house at the next congress John J. Fitzgerald would be ranking member and entitled to the chairmanship.

Representatives Currier (N. H.) and Clayton (Ala.), chairman of the Democratic caucus reported to the house the selections of their respective caucuses for members of the new rules committee, provided for under the terms of the Norris resolution. The Republican members were named in the order of seniority, and without regard to the number of votes received by each member. It was because of this that Representative Dalzell (Penn.) was allowed to outrank Mr. Smith (Ia.), who received the largest number of votes.

When the Democratic nominations were presented to the house by Clayton the names were presented according to the number of votes received by each man. This order derwood (Ala.) second, Dixon (Ind.) placed Champ Clark (Mo.) first, Unthird, and Fitzgerald (N. Y.) fourth.

Representatives Tawney and Mann promptly insisted that inasmuch as Fitzgerald was a member of the old committee on rules he should rank next to Clark, also a member of the old committee, and above Underwood and Dixon. They insisted that under the terms of the resolution adopted by the Republican caucus Currier was ordered to present the nominations to the house in that order.

Mr. Currier would not construe his orders in that fashion, and insisted that the Democrats had the right to fix seniority on the committee in any fashion they saw fit. Clayton declared that the Democrats would insist on their right to rank their members as they pleased, and for a moment it looked as if it would be necessary to settle the difficulty by a roll-call. Tawney and Mann, however, desisted in their efforts in behalf of Fitzgerald when it was apparent that they were defeated.

Had their plan gone through it would have been difficult to keep Fitzgerald out of the chairmanship of the commiftee if the next house is controlled by the Democrats, and inasmuch as he is on friendly terms with the Cannon organization he, more more than any other Democrat in the house, would be acceptable to the Republicans. As the matter now stands, Fitzgerald is the last man on the committee.

Another row in the house is expected when the judiciary committee reports to the house the resolution calling for an investigation of the alleged ship subsidy lobby in Washington. Under the terms of the resolution, Speaker Cannon is empowered to appoint the investigating committee. The insurgents will oppose this plan and will assert that in view of the precedents established in having the house electing the members of the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee, and the new rules committee, the practice should be continued. The Democrats are expected to join the insurgents in this fight, and if there is the same solidity as existed last week the regulars will be beaten if they attempt to oppose the insurgent proposal.

The new rules committee was organized shortly after its election by the house. Dalzell was elected chairman as had been expected, all of the Republicans voting for him. Clark received the Democratic votes.

GIRL DRANK COCKTAILS

Has No Remembrance of Wedding, So She Is Granted Divorce

New York, March 26.—Supreme Court Justice Gilchrist decided that a girl who drinks three or four cocktails late at night and finds herself a bride in the morning when she wakes up is entitled to have her marriage annulled. For this reason he signed a decree which annulled the marriage of Elsie M. H. Iryine to Robert Irvine, Jr.

Elsie was married when she was 18 years old. While on the way to church she accepted Robert's cocktail invitation. She remembered a dizziness and later being called Mrs. Irvine.

Richmond, March 26.—Thomas F. Ryan seems to be on the eve of realizing one of the greatest ambitions of his life—to occupy a seat in the United States senate.

It is said by well informed men here that, in the event of the death of Senator John W. Daniel, who is critically ill at Daytona, Fla., Ryan will be appointed by Governor Mann to the unexpired term.

WHEN RADIUM CAN BE EASILY OBTAINED

Airship Journey to Planet Venus May Be Accomplished

Boston, March 26.—Willie Sidis, the 11-year-old mathematical prodigy of Harvard, has entered the realms of aerial navigation. He predicts that an airship will be built which will take man to the planet Venus in twenty minutes.

Sidis is not building the airship. He has simply made a study of the problem in the physical laboratory, and has reached conclusions which are accepted by scientists. He says that the alpha rays given off from radium are able to drive a machine through space at about 20,000,000 miles a minute. By attaching a block of radium to the back of the airship, Sidis figures, the machine could be shot through space faster than the earth moves.

There are two difficulties with which Sidis is not troubling himself—how to get the radium and how to get money enough to buy it if he could get it.

Two Italians Charged With Attempt to Blackmail Caruso

New York, March 26.—Two prosperous Italian business men, Antonio Cincotto and Antonio Misiano, charged with attempting to blackmail and extort $15,000 from Enrico Caruso, were indicted for that offense in the county court at Brooklyn. Both pleaded not guilty.

Their bail was raised from $5000 to $10,000 each and Judge Fawcett said he had been informed that the men were about to leave the jurisdiction of the court.

Cincotto and Misiano were traced and arrested through a decoy letter placed by Caruso's valet at a certain point in Brooklyn designated in threatening letters received by the tenor. No date has been set for the trial.

HIGH PRICES FOR MEATS

Packers More Sorry For Themselves Than For People, Says Armour

Omaha, March 26.—J. O. Armour, head of the Armour Packing House, is awfully sorry that the people of the United States have to pay such high prices for their meats and he sees no relief from these prices until the new crop of meat-producing animals comes in. He said:

"The packers do not make as much money when prices are high as they do when they are low. So we are more sorry for ourselves over our curtailed profits than we are for the people.

"I can see no relief until the next crop of hogs, cattle and sheeep comes in. Then we hope that prices will go down. But we don't look for lower prices until that time."

PROMINENT MEN ARE INVOLVED

Grand Jury Making Progress In Pittsburg Graft Case

A PRELIMINARY INDICTMENT

Confessions Are Demanded From Directorates of Large Banks, Who Are Threatened With Indictment—More Than $100,000 Contributed by Banks to Bribery Fund In Relation to Naming City Depositories

Pittsburg, Pa., March 26.—The Allegheny county grand jury made a preliminary presentment in which it threatens, by implication, to bring in indictments against the directors of six banks of Pittsburg, unless these men come forward immediately and confess what they know regarding the bribery of members of councils in connection with the naming of the city depositories.

The banks named are among the largest in Greater Pittsburg. They are Farmers' National Deposit, Columbia National, German National, Second National, German National of Allegheny, and Workingmen's Saving and Trust company. On the directorates of these banks are the wealthiest and most prominent men in Greater Pittsburg.

The grand jury finds that each of the banks mentioned, with the exception of the Workingmen's Trust, paid $17,500 into the bribery fund.

The Workingmen's paid but $15,000, as they got under the wire before it had been decided to raise the ante $2500. Forty-five thousand dollars of the fund, according to the report, was paid by "some person unknown as yet" at Hotel Imperial, New York. Councilman Stewart and the "unknown" had duplicate cards, and when the "unknown" presented his, Stewart was to accept the $45,000. The deal went through as scheduled.

The grand jury finds that the greatest distrust existed not only between the banks and the five members of the "Big Six," but between the councilmen themselves. After the greater portion of the money had been paid the passage of the ordinance was twice postponed because Stewart refused to turn over $45,000 over to Hugh Ferguson, treasurer of the "boodle," and the second time because Max Leslie, one time political boss of the county, endeavored to engineer a double-cross and refused to turn over $17,500 he had collected from the Columbia National.

Councilman Brand, another of the schemers who has just gone to the penitentiary, eventually got the money from Leslie, but, as he reported to his colleagues, "only after the greatest argument of my life."

The grand jury accounts for nearly every cent of the $102,000 contributed by the banks. Of the amount, $27,000 went to the smaller fry in councils, the five members of the "Big Six" taking the balance. Newspaper reporters and city clerks also figure in the distribution to a minor extent.

Incidentally the grand jury returned twenty-five indictments yesterday. The men named in the indictments are William Brand, Hugh Ferguson and Charles Stewart, all members of city councils. The indictments contain many counts. Accompanying the returned true bills the grand jury handed down a twenty-page typewritten statement covering the whole graft exposure.

Doan's Kidney Pills make well Kidneys.
Here is a Quincy woman who endorses this claim:
Mrs. Deborah Prouty, 39 Quincy avenue, Quincy, Mass., says: "I am in a position to speak in the highest terms of Doan's Kidney Pills. My back ached nearly all the time and caused me considerable trouble. Any sudden movement or an attempt to stoop, sent sharp pains through my loins. My health was much run down and I had not little strength or energy. I was very much alarmed about my condition. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I had known so many people who had used them with benefit, that I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. The use of three boxes convinced me that they were the best kidney remedy to be had. I am now in good health."

WOMAN STANDS BY COLEMAN

Fiancee Will Marry Him, Despite Prison Shadow

DAUGHTER OF A POOR MAN

Was Preparing Trousseau at Her Home In Kansas City When Cambridge Bank Exposure Occurred—Former Clerk Who Is Accused of Looting the Institution Takes Out License For Wedding Ceremony

Boston, March 26.—George W. Coleman, who, only a few weeks ago, was spending money like water and who in a little more than a year frittered away nearly $200,000 belonging to the National City bank of Cambridge, is to wed a poor seamstress. The girl of his choice is Miss Mamie Hightower of Kansas City, the daughter of a carpenter employed in a bed spring factory.

The wedding will take place some time today, according to a statement made by the former bank clerk, but who is to perform the ceremony, or where, he will not tell. The bride-to-be is already in town, and for a day or two was a guest at the Coleman home in Cambridge. Since then she has been stopping in a Boston hotel.

Coleman and Miss Hightower had planned to be married the latter part of February and the young woman, who was employed as a fancy seamstress in New York, was at home preparing her trousseau when the bank crash came. Coleman, foreseeing that his peculations were soon to be discovered, left Cambridge a few days before the doors of the bank were closed for good and hurried to Kansas City to tell Miss Hightower and her parents of the impending trouble. He hoped she would stand by him in his hour of trouble, but he had no thought of forcing the wedding upon her.

But the young lady herself had something to say and even with the thought of years in the federal prison staring Coleman in the face, she did not lose courage. She insisted that the marriage take place as planned.

A fortnight ago Miss Hightower came east and that her desires prevailed is apparent from the fact that Coleman filed his marriage intentions with the Cambridge city clerk and the necessary marriage license is now in his possession.

Coleman first met the young woman in New York. The story of their love and courtship is known to few, but it is known that many of his hurried trips to New York, which it has been said were made simply for the excitement of the thing and to gamble away the bank's money, were in reality made for the purpose of calling upon his sweetheart.

Coleman himself had little to say when attempts were made to interview him yesterday. He smilingly admitted that he had taken out a marriage license and that he intended to be married "before Sunday." Up until last evening, according to the statement of his father and other members of the family, the young couple had not been married, so that his statement places the ceremony today.

FIRE LOSS OF $100,000

Aid From Other Places Saves Millionaires' Homes at Hamilton

Hamilton, Mass., March 26.—Fire burned six dwellings, seven barns, a business block, laundry and kennels here. The toal damage is estimated at not less than $100,000. It was feared at one time that the whole town, with its luxurious summer residences of millionaires, would be swept away. Help was sent from surrounding towns and cities.

The burned properties were those of all-the-year residents of Hamilton, except the barn on Max Norman's farm and the Myopia club stables. The homes of the "natives" are in the more thickly settled portion of the town, where the fire leaped easily from one structure to another. The fire started from a defective chimney.

TWELVE BODIES RECOVERED

May Be Others In Ruins of Burned Building In Chicago

Chicago, March 26.—Search in the wreckage for the remaining bodies of those who lost their lives in the Fish Furniture company fire here was discontinued, owing to danger from tottering walls, but not until twelve corpses had been recovered. Of those identified, seven are girls and four men. One girl and one man are missing, and three others are reported unaccounted for.

The victims were trapped on the fourth and fifth floors of the building in a fire that started from an explosion caused by a cigar lighter.

Woman Slayer Is Sentenced

Rutland, Vt., March 26.—A sentence from fifteen to twenty years at hard labor was imposed upon Robert Eddy, aged 28, who was convicted of manslaughter in causing the death of Mary J. Johnson of Wallingford. Miss Johnson, aged 67, died of injuries inflicted during a quarrel.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Eve's Daughters at the Hub Survey Surpassing Apple Exhibits—There is Etiquette even among Gum Chewers—Comments on Madame Jusserand's Advice to American Mothers and Daughters—Aeroplane and Chanticleer Hats Not so Bad After All—A Four Year Old Whom the City Crowds Did Not Frighten.

Spring is here, the spring of crocuses in the Public Gardens and poets composing lays on the hard seats of Boston Common. The spring lids, too, are with us. If you don't believe it walk down Boylston and Tremont streets and count the brand new, 1910 model, Paris-importation, spring hats. They are here, Chanticleer, Aeroplane and the rest, and, really, some of them are not so bad, in spite of the cartoonist's slanderous pen. Some of the "cutest" little motoring bonnets, designed by a Temple Place milliner who is noted for her originality and taste, are so modeled as to be perfectly proper for street wear—a most desirable combination.

Here is a personally observed instance of the fearlessness of childhood in presence of the great city. A small boy of perhaps four years sat tailor-fashion on the sidewalk, close against the wall of one of the biggest downtown department stores during the rush of Saturday afternoon shoppers. One arm was thrust through the wheel of a go-cart ranged alongside of him and containing a sleeping infant. The unusual sight attracted many curious glances and kindly smiles for the little guardian, who remained unmolested until a well meaning police officer came along and began questioning the child. Immediately a crowd gathered, extending quickly into the middle of the street, and it took some seconds for the flustered and indignant mother who soon came upon the scene to convince the officer and others that she had merely stepped into the store to make a purchase and left the boy outside to stand guard over the baby. The poor youngster who had sat undismayed amidst the rush of passing crowds and rumbling cars and teams was reduced to terror-stricken sobs when the arm of the law stretched his way with the attendant chatter and curiosity of surrounding grown-ups.

That admirable summer resident of New England, Mme. Jusserand, wife of the ambassador of France, has diplomatically but indisputably pointed out wherein French mothers and daughters are far superior to American mothers and daughters in matters of household thrift—a lesson well worth imparting even to this section where thrift has long been something of a cult. She says: "The French girls acquire, almost by instinct, one may say rather than by teaching, the practical knowledge which enables them later to direct homes of their own. Any outside or 'scientific' training if it exists at all in France, is quite exceptional and the need of it in French families does not exist. The French girls, even of the rich families, do not consider it a disgrace or a hardship to learn how to buy and prepare food, without being wasteful or extravagant. The average French family lives better on half as much as the family in the same position in America, not by denying themselves good things to eat, but by utilizing the good things they can have.

"I am told," Mme. Jusserand went on, "that the almost national axiom is 'the best is not too good for an American', and the pride of the mothers is responsible for the fact that so few American girls are good housekeepers. I am told also that one frequently hears mothers in modest circumstances say with great pride 'I want my girls to have a good time now because they will have to work soon enough,' or 'I have had to work so hard I want my girls to be ladies.' To my mind there can be a mistaken idea of what real kindness is." These comparisons by the lady from the republic where domestic economy is a highly developed science give food for thought to American women, in these time of revolt against the high cost of living.

Several Bostonians are still smiling over an incident which occurred in a street car the other day. A little girl, vigorously chewing gum, began stretching it out in front of her, holding one end between her teeth and the other between her fingers. Her mother, who was sitting beside her, looked around and exclaimed reprovingly: "Agnes! Stop chewing your gum that way at once. Be a little lady and chew your gum the way mother does." It seems there is etiquette even among gumsters.

A petition signed by nearly all the large stores of the Hub is before Chairman Ellis of the school committee, pleading for a school for salesmanship to be established in the retail district of the city and to be an extension of the salesmanship classes which have been so successfully conducted by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union. The idea emanated from the retail board of trade extension committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and, while men will probably be included in the classes eventually, it is proposed to make them for saleswomen alone for a time. Such a school is deemed necessary and advisable, in view of the excellent results arising from the classes at the Women's Educational Union, and employers of large numbers of saleswomen are perfectly willing to allow their employees to attend the class on five days of the week for three hours each day, for 12 consecutive weeks, without loss of pay, in order that their staff may be thus strengthened and improved. The employers are also willing to supply instruction without cost to the city, and only desire that the city furnish the location, furniture, notebooks, paper and similar materials necessary to its conduct. The Hub has long been noted for its courteous and efficient saleswomen, and the proposed "finishing course" should make them superior of any in the land.

Smiling red cheeks are commoner than usual along Washington street. An epidemic of apple exhibits is in progress. A western railroad inoculated it by giving an exhibition of the products raised along its lines, and implying that there were better fruits to be raised by going to Montana or Idaho than by staying in the land of ex-abandoned farms. A loyal New England road takes exceptions to this conclusion, and has planned an exhibit of products designed to put the western show way in the shade. This little corner of the earth was at one time considered the banner apple orchard of the union, and it is with a pang of regret that New Englanders have seen the abandoned orchards with apples spoiling on the ground when a little care and scientific treatment would produce fruit which in variety and flavor cannot be equalled anywhere in the world. Thousands of city people in this state are already advising each other to put money into Massachusetts orchards—though one sometimes detects a little disposition to "let George do it". Ethel Angier.

"MISS PLYMOUTH"

Poultry Dealers Trying to Place Blame Upon Her

POULTRY TRUST MEN HELD

Sixty of the Eighty-Six Indicted Deposit Bail of $1000 Each

New York, March 26.—The eighty-six defendants who were indicted, charged with illegally manipulating the live poultry business in the city, have each been held in $1000 bail for trial. Sixty of the defendants appeared in court, after bail was set, and deposited bonds for their release. A date for trial has not been fixed.

Former District Attorney Jerome, counsel for the poultrymen, scoffed at the story circulated that he had secured the service of a number of experts to put all the blame on Miss Layer Plymouth. "Why, any one can see this is a joke," explained Jerome. "Miss Plymouth is the name of a chicken. She is not to be made the goat, I assure you."

While the denial of Jerome was being given out it is said that experts are at work to prove that all the blame of the poultry trust will be shouldered on the hard laying chickens.

KEITH HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Alleged to Have Taken $150 From James Chapman

James Chapman, who alleges that Mortimer Keith walked away with $150 of his money last Monday, told his story to the court this morning. Mr. Chapman said that his home was in New Brunswick. That last February he came to the states to visit his daugter an dother relatives. With him he brought several hundred dollars in bright new ten dollar bills of the bank of New Brunswick. Since he came to the states he had visited several places about Boston as well as New York. He had made purchases of numerous gifts for his daughter and when he came to Wollaston to visit Carey Keith he had $150 in money in a long wallet which he carried in a pocket on the inside of his coat. The money was composed of ten or twelve bank of New Brunswick ten dollar bills and the balance in United States ten dollar bills. When he retired for the night at the Carey Keith house the money was safe and sound. He did not lock his door and does not know just how the money was taken.

The next morning he met Mortimer Keith and others of the family at breakfast and during the morning went out to ride with Mrs. Keith. In the afternoon he visited Boston, and thinking it well to have some small change entered a drug store and asked them to change a ten dollar bill for him. He drew out his pocketbook and nearly fainted when he found that the pocket book was empty, and that all the money he had was some small change.

Returning to Wollaston he made inquiries, and from what he learned swore out a warrant against Mortimer Keith. It was brought out during the evidence by other witnesses, that Mortimer had said he was hard up and had borrowed money from Carey Keith before he left for Manchester to work. It also developed when arrested by Inspector McKay he had several ten dollar bills in his pocket. The court found probable cause to believe him guilty and held him in $300 for the grand jury.

INSURANCE GRAFT PROBE

Hotchkiss Expected to Present New Names When Inquiry Is Resumed

New York, March 26.—Delving deep into the mines of legislative graft and mire, State Superintendent of Insurance Hotchkiss is revealing insurance facts likely to develop into a greater sensation than the probe of the Armstrong committee on the "yellow dog" fund. The dragging of the courts into the investigation has been the biggest surprise yet and startling evidence is expected when the inquiry is resumed next week.

The names of two senators are said to be involved in the testimony that Hotchkiss will bring out. Chief Justice Cullen of the court of appeals announced that he would take a hand in the investigation because letters had been produced, indicating that there was a leak from the insurance interests.

ROACH'S SHIPYARD SOLD.

The plant of the Delaware River Iron Shipbuilding and Engine Works, at Chester, Pa., better known as Roach's shipyard, was sold at receiver's sale on Thursday says the Transcript. The plant was purchased by William H. Hanford, acting for William Holman of New York, and the price was $153,210 subject to a mortgage of $100,000. The once famous shipyard operated and owned by the late John Roach & Son at Chester, Pa., was sold to liquidate its indebtedness of $600,000 in settling the estate.

After Mr. Roach's death in 1887, yard was operated by his son John B. Roach, who died two years ago. At Roach's was the beginning of teh new navy, the pioneer ship being the unarmored protected cruiser Atlanta, with a speed of 15.60 knots an hour, built at a cost of $617,000. The Atlanta was finally ordered out of commission on Dec. 21, 1904. With the Atlanta were built, as the nucleus of the modern steel navy, the cruisers Chicago and Boston and the gunboat now the despatch boat, Dolphin. It was Secretary of the Navy William E. Chandler who laid the foundation of the great "White Squadron."

The claims of others to the distinction of having brought into being the first of our modern warships may be put forth with whatever persistency is possible, but the fact remains, as the official records will show, that to the Arthur administration and to Mr. Chandler are due the credit for making the dream of a modern navy for Uncle Sam a fact.

The tragedy of the Dolphin lies in the fact that when the Cleveland administration came into power it was thought necessary to make political capital out of the widespread popular belief that old John Roach, the most famous ship-builder this country ever knew, had made an enormous fortune out of contracts, proper and improper ,handed over to him as a favorite of a corrupt Republican regime and as a veteran beneficiary of the corrupt Republican policy of protection. A victim was necessary to make the object lesson graphic, and so Roach was sacrificed. The administration of the Navy Department under the late William C. Whitney, denounced John Roach as having fattened his purse at the expense of the people, repudiated existing contracts, held up payments that were due on others and finally pronounced much of his finished products to be inferior to the standard and to contract requirements.

The Dolphin then nearing completion, was cited as the horrible example. A board of survey was appointed which, after considerable coaching and coaxing, described her officially as being "structurally weak." The old shipbuilder protested, but in vain. The official report was given to the world.

His business was ruined ,he went into bankrutcy and eventually died in practical poverty. But the Dolphin was pushed to completion by his critics, and now, nearly twenty-six years after her acceptance from the contractors, after a strenuous life marked by many vicissitudes of form and service in all the waters of the globe, she is still on the active list.

RUBE'S SPORTING CHAT

I had a talk with Bjorkland on Sunday in regard to the baseball situation in Quincy. "Al" is very optimistic in his plans for a successful season and promises the local nine will be in the running from the top of the gong. I broached the subject of local players to him and found him to be heartily in favor of giving all achance to make good. I inquired about a date when a good practice game could be arranged between his hopefuls and a group of local ball tossers and was informed nothing would please him better than a friendly clash to be played on the Water street grounds Saturday afternoon April 16. Now I am going to find out how many local players there are who want a chance to get into this game. If there is interest enough shown by the locals I will be willing, for the sake of the Quincy players, to pick the strongest possible team and pit them against Bjorkland's outfit. A good game should result if Michaels, Fallon, Saunders, Rogers, Nichols, Ganzel, McKenzie, Artis, and a number of players can be brought together and be given a chance to show their worth. Will all interested Quincy players send me their views on this game at once that I may let Bjorkland know if we can play or not? Address, "Rube" Daily Ledger office, Quincy.

COCHATO CLUB, BRAINTREE.

Friday evening the Westland quartet of Boston gave a delightful program. The audience was not as large as usual but very appreciative. The quartet responded most liberally and really gave a double number program. Miss May Belle G. Dadmun is first soprana, Mrs. Emma Schufelt Moire, second; Miss Alice G. Coe, first alto and Mrs. Dorothy M. Miller, second. Mrs. Marion C. Whiton, accompanied at the piano.

There was a matched game between a picked team of Allston lady bowlers and the Cochato's at the club, Wednesday afternoon. A most appetizing chafing dish lunch was served by Mrs. George S. Williams, assisted by Mrs. F. K. Patch, Mrs. W. A. Norton, Mrs. C. F. White and Mrs. L. O. Crocker. Mrs. Joseph Wilder received a very dainty souvenir for rolling the highest single string of 94 pins for the Cochato's, and Mrs. Jones for the Allstons of 108 pins. The Allstons won with a gain of two pins. The Cochatos will play a return match at Allston Wednesday afternoon, March 30th. The scores:

LARGE CONGREGATIONS AT EASTER SERVICES

Boys' Vested Choir an Innovation at Bethany Congregational Church.

Potted Plants Distributed at Some of the Churches.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

Very large congregations attended the services on Sunday at Bethany church. A rich musical program was presented at the morning service, the chorus being assisted by soloists, and the organ being accompanied by piano and violin. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Hardy, spoke on "Builders for eternity." He said almost all the civilized world now believe in eternal life, and it was becoming stronger and stronger year by year. The Easter hope is the brightest and answers the deepest need of the human heart.

The crowning event of the day was the first appearance at the Easter concert at 6 P. M. of the boys' vested chofr. Nearly 1000 people were out to greet the boys, and for the short time they have been rehearsing they made a very creditable showing. The concert program was an excellent and varied one, and by request the "Hving cross" was repeated, and tableaux given. W. E. Blanchard and Mrs. S. I. Wood were the committee in charge.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Never were there such large congregations at Christ church at the 7 A. M. and 10.30 services as on Easter Sunday. Large Palms, rubber plants and flowering plants were used for decorations.

At 3 P. M. a childrens festival was given. The address of the rector, Rev. R. E. Armstrong was particularly to the children and appropriate to Easter. Each pupil of the Sunday school brought in a mite box., At the close each pupil received a potted plant in flower.

The choral evensong at 7 P. M. was also largely attended.

ST. MARY'S.

Easter services were held at St. Mary's church on Sunday all of which were very largely attended. In years gone by special musical programs of high order were given, but these have now been eliminated. At the morning mass Miss Alice O'Neil sang a solo. At the vesper services at 4 o'clock Rev. Henry T. Grady, officiated and the Gregorian chant was sung by the regular choir under the direction of Miss Mary McKay. During the vespers Miss Alice O'Neil sang a solo and a male quartette sang "O'Salutarius." There were many beautiful flowers used in the decoration which included Easter lilies.

HALL PLACE M. E.

Special services appropriate to Easter were held at the Hall Place M. E. Church on Sunday. In the morning there was special music. The subject of the morning sermon was "Personal Proofs of the Living Christ." The text was taken from John 20-16. "Jesus saith onto her, Mary."

At 7 P. M. the Sunday school gave an excellent Easter concert. The songs and exercises were interspersed with recitations byLeslie McCormick, Elva Bent, Margaret Matteson, Clara Olson, Elizabeth Williams, Paul Raupach, Robert McCormick, Bertha Harvey, Ralph Newcomb, Maud Nichols, Mona Norris, Henry Nichols, Grace Thorne, Herbert Farnham, Emily Polli, Mabel Hayden, Herbert Fuge, Grace Newcomb, Lillian Williams, Reta Hunter, Mary Clark, Susie Edwards, Ardis Raupach, Ethel Newcomb, Addie Newcomb, Clara Olson sang a solo.

The church was prettily decorated in purple and white, with potted plants, lilies and cut flowers, the decorations being in charge of Miss Maud E. Hodgkinson.

AT ST. JOHN'S.

Masses were celebrated at St. John's church on Sunday at 6, 7 and 9 A. M. and a solemn high mass at 10.30 with Rev. John J. Coan as celebrant, Rev. John J. Casey as deacon and Rev. Patrick Scannell as subdeacon. In the evening, solemn high vespers were sung by the same priests. The church inside the altar rail was beautifully decorated with palms and Easter lilies. The music was under the direction of John Mahan, the Gregorian chant being sung.

FIRST CHURCH.

There was a large attendance at the half past ten service Easter morning

FAREWELL SERMON

Ministry of Rev. A. E. Clattenburg a Great Success

At St. Chrysostom's church Easter Sunday morning, the rector Rev. Albert Edwin Clattenburg, took for his text St. Matthew 28: 19-20—"Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world. Amen." The sermon was filled with the Easter spirit.

He said Christ's last command to the Apostles was that they should teach all men the good news which He had made known to them. This is the only reason for the existence of the Catholic church. He is the body of those who are responsible for the preaching of Christ Jesus. Let this part of the Catholic church do its full share to fulfil the true mission of the church. The world should be your vision, but your work should be whereever needed.

It was an appropriate and fitting text not only for the day but because it was the rector's last sermon to his parishioners who so reluctantly accepted his resignation at the parish meeting in January. They fully realize the great loss of a man who accomplishes what he undertakes.

Mr. Clattenburg placed himself under Bishop Cameron Mann of Fargo, North Dakota, and when it became known, the church at Devil's Lake extended him a call. He will also have charge of two missions.

Five years ago on Easter Sunday Mr. Clattenburg first assisted at the service at St. Chrysostom's and after he was graduated from the Theological seminary of Virginia in June, 1905, he became assistant rector. He was ordained a priest by Bishop Lawrence at Trinity church, Boston, May, 1906, and in June accepted a call to become the rector. Mr. Clattenburg's rectorship has been a notable one in many ways, the five years of faithful labor rendered by him to the parish has been greatly blessed in upbuilding the church. The list of communicants has steadily increased each year and due to his enthusiastic zeal and inspired ability, a mortgage of $3,000 on the church has been raised and the debt cancelled. The gratification and success of his efforts were rewarded and sufficient cause for rejoicing when on February 22 the church was consecrated by Right Rev. William Lawsence, D. D., assisted by the Venerable S. G. Babcock, Archdeacon of the Diocese. That day Mr. Clattenburg presented 34 persons to the Bishop for confirmation, double the number of any previous class in the history of the parish. He is leaving the church in a most flourishing condition entirely free from debt and a fund started for a parish house.

In all his varied duties of his life in the parish he has been a faithful, courageous shepherd, leading them into clearer light, holier living, and more willing service for the Master.

Mr. Clattenburg's musical ability is well recognized, and the choir has attained a high degree of excellency under his direction and the parish is proud of its sucess.

Many improvements have been made on the church property. The church has ben redecorated, new carpet placed in the sanctuary, and repairs outside, the lawn graded and a hedge set out.

Mr. and Mrs. Clattenburg have generously given 12,800 feet of land in the rear of the rectory, installed a hot water heating plant in the rectory, and made many other gifts to the church.

On February 15 a largely attended reception was given to Mr. and Mrs. Clattenburg showing the high esteem and affectionate regard which they hold in the hearts of the parishioners both young and old, who fully appreciate their untiring labor for the welfare of the parish.

The teachers in the Sunday school, the Woman's Guild and Altar Guild have given him gold pieces which with the offering of $55.00 taken consecration day the rector will devote to building a parish house at Devil's Lake. Mr. Clattenburg wishes to thank all those who have contributed materially and with love to him.

For nine years before going to Alexandria to study for the ministry, he had been one of Archdeacon Babcock's choir boys at Christ church, Hyde Park, and it is in recognition of his high regard for him and appreciation of the good work done in his diocese that the Archdeacon consented to preach at the Sunday evening service.

It is interesting to know that $1600 was secured to help build the church at Devil's Lake by collections from Sunday schools in and around Philadelphia through the influence of the late Rev. Charles Turner who was the rector. The conditions accompanying the gift were that the new church should be called Church of the Advent, because the offerings were made during the Advent season.

NEW CITY OFFICIAL

Tax Collector Carey Resigns and J. J. O'Hara Appointed

Timothy J. Carey, who has been the Tax Collector under Mayor Shea's administration, tendered his resignation this morning, to take effect April 1. The resignation was not unexpected and it was accepted with regrets. A few minutes later the Mayor announced that he had filled the vacancy in the office of Tax Collector by the appointment of John J. O'Hara.

This shift in officials at City Hall will be received with some surprise by the citizens in general, although it has been known to the press for some days.

Mr. Carey resigns his office to accept a position on the State Board of Charity as an inspector. The new position is one under the civil service and while the salary is not as much at first as that received by the tax collector, Mr. Carey has the satisfaction of knowing that not only will his salary be gradually increased but that he has practically a life job. It is understood that he has been assigned to a district in the western part of the state.

John J. O'Hara, who succeeds Mr. Carey as Tax Collector, is a Quincy boy, a rising member of the Quincy bar. He is a son of Michael O'Hara, a long resident of this city, and resides on Newcomb place. He received his education in the public schools of Quincy and completed his education at the Georgetown University at Washington, graduating with high honors in the class of 1904. Shortly after he was admitted to practice of law and opened an office in Quincy with Lawrence W. Lyons, who was sometime ago appointed as assistant clerk at the District court. Three years ago Mr. O'Hara was elected a member of the School Committee from Ward Two, his term expiring at the close of the present year. This is the only public office that he has ever held. He is a member of Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, and the Quincy lodge of Elks. That he will make an efficient Tax Collector those who know him have no doubt, and his many friends unite in wishing him all success in his new position.

The correspondence follows:

March 28, 1910.

Hon. William T. Shea, Mayor City of Quincy.

Dear Sir:—Having recently been tendered a position which requires my absence from Quincy, and as I have decided to accept same, I will be unable to continue in the position of Collector of Taes.

I, therefore, tender you my resignation as Collector of Taxes for the City of Quincy to take effect not later than March 31st, 1910.

I wish to take this occasion to thank you for the many expressions of confidence and good will which have marked our relations in the past, add I sincerely hope your administration will continue to be successful.

Yours respectfully,
Timothy J. Carey.
Collector of Taxes,
City of Quincy.

We wish to further call your attention to the change in our business system, for without doubt it will be one of the most important changes that will take place in Quincy this year. Our new price lists will soon be ready and we have arranged them so that any one can easily see the difference between paying cash and charging prices. Now this change that we propose to make only proves that Johnsons Bros. have taken another step onward in the progress of better conditions for Quincy.

The close buyer with large means, the close buyer with small means, will find it is to their advantage to trade at home and where can you find purer or better goods than at Johnson Bros., and the prices are surely going down. We think a community should all stand together and render all the assistance they can to each other. This is one of the methods we take. By lowering the prices of our goods and therefore doing our little mite toward lightening the burden of living expenses for the people of Quincy. We shall start the Cash System, Monday, April 4th, this being the first Monday in April. After that date, there will positively be no credit extended to any person, for with such low prices to be placed on our goods, every purchase must be made for cash: and highest quality and lowest prices will rule at Johnson Bros. after said date.

Respectfully yours,

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Houghs Neck residents are wise to start a movement for a public playground. Now is the time to secure the right piece of land for most of that available is being rapidly built upon. The suggestion of the lot with the pond seems a good one for there is need of outdoor sports in winter as well as in summer. Every youngster enjoys skating.

That the water pressure in certain parts of the city is not what many had reason to believe was evident Friday in two instances. One was at fire at the Estabrook house on Fenno street, and the other at the woods fire on Quincy avenue. In both of these cases the pressure was very low, and but for the steamer the loss must have been heavy. It was evident to one who attended these fires that the steamer must have paid for herself. Another thing that was brought out was that there is a great lack of call and permanent men. If the apparatus is to make the quick time which it does in reaching the scene of fires, there must be more men. It is almost useless for the apparatus to arrive at a fire early and then stand around waiting for men to arrive to handle the hose while the occupants of the buildings stand about and criticise the fire department.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The Panama Canal alone is a reason for our keeping pace with the world in naval strength. During the years that will elapse before its completion we should use every effort to add to the number and efficiency of our warships. I believe in the most liberal appropriation for offense and defense, yet hope and pray that universal peace may prevail. The navy is our national police on the ocean. Before we withdraw our warships from service and discharge our officers and crews it might be well to follow the suggestion of our famous Admiral "Bob" Evans, and experiment by abolishing our police force in our cities, and trusting to the good nature of our criminal classes and their sense of honor to be good citizens and respect the rights of their fellowmen.—Henry Clews, L. L. D., at banquet of American Peace and Arbitration league.

In cleaning up their grounds at this time of year people are accustomed to make free use of fire as the most convenient means of getting rid of rubbish that has accumulated during the winter. And if properly controlled there is no better agent than a bon fire to destroy the useless material. On the other hand, if it is not kept under control, there is alwals danger of fire causing great damage, and the many calls upon the fire department at this season are evidence that there are numerous cases in which fires set to destroy leaves, dead grass and brush have escaped from the control of the people who started them. In some cases these fires have spread to buildings and injured them, and in others they have threatened the peace of mind of people living near at hand. There is always much danger from carelessness in setting fires in the woods, either purposely or accidentally, when the ground is covered with inflammable material as is the case after a few days in the spring. These fires burn so rapidly that they not infrequently get beyond control, and even when they are thought to be extinguished, they sometimes break out afresh, after smouldering in the turf for hours. The only safe rule is not to set any fires in the woods or in such places where the conditions are such that there is a liklihood of their spreading and if fire is used near houses for burning rubbish, it should be set on bare ground and watched constantly, not being abandoned until it is certain that every spark is out. Such precautions are easily observed and they will save in the aggregate many hundreds of dollars of damage to property and make unnecessary many hard runs of the firemen.—Milton Record.

LETTER CARRIERS' BALL.

Arrangements are already well under way for the annual concert, reunion and dance of the Letter Carriers' Mutual Benefit Association, which this year promises to eclipse anything yet by Uncle Sam's boys in gray.

This year's bal lwill be held Thursday, May 5, in Mechanics building, Boston, which will be transformed into a bower of beauty for the occasion, with artistic electrical effects.

This Association ,starting with a mere handful some twenty years ago, has now assumed quite formidable proportions ,embracing about twenty towns and cities, with Boston as a centre. Within two years, Newton, the Weymouths, Quincy, Watertown and Braintree have augmented the forces, making some fifteen hundred men eligible for membership, about one thousand of this number being affiliated with the association.

Uncle Sam does not pay the carriers when they are sick ,but this association pays to its members weekly sick benefits of seven dollars for twenty-six weeks, and a death benefit of one thousand dollars. The proceeds of the annual ball are devoted to this purpose.

Already the busy workers are bending every energy to make this year's affair a record breaker. The Letter Carriers' band of forty pieces, is preparing new features, and the committees are devising new schemes of entertainment for the big crowd that always looks forward to this terpsichorean event with pleasing anticipation.

Invitations have been sent to Governor Draper, Lieutenant Governor Frothingham, Mayor Fitzgerald, Postmaster Mansfield and many other city and state officials.

AFTER FORTY YEARS

Glacier in Alps Expected to Give Up Body of Quincy Man

With more certainty than the sea gives up its dead, that great sea of ice in the Alps, the Bossons glacier, on the slopes of Mt. Blanc, which melts away into a mountain stream near the little village of Chamonix, late in the coming summer, will give up the dead who have lain in its icy bosom for 40 years, says the Sunday Globe, which prints the following story of special interest to Quincy people.

Among the 11 men lost on Mt. Blanc on Sept. 6, 1870, was John C. Randall of Quincy, at that time treasurer of the Quincy Savings bank.

The great river of ice in whose embrace his body was taken, at the bottom of some cleft or crevasse, moving slowly and inexorably toward the valley, has never failed to yield up, at the end of 40 years, the bodies of its victims.

There have been many of them not less than 445 were lost on the mountain before Mr. Randall met his fate—but the mighty force that enshrouded them gave them all up again, so long after that the sting of death has been dulled and the rendering of the last service by the living is s sacred consecration of affection.

So steadily does the glacier work that the time when it will yield up its victims may be judged within a few week or days by the villagers of Chamonix. It is always 40 years. The weeks or days depend somewhat on the temperature of the valley, as the tip of the glacier melts away.

As these sad anniversaries approach the village folk watch for signs. Often the axes of the guides are found. As each is marked in a special way identification is, of course, instant and easy. Then through the clear ice the searchers may see the object of waiting and the recovery is made by chopping down to release the body.

Sometimes, by one of those marvels of nature's workings which fill men with awe, the features of the dead are as fair as when the ice closed over them.

Relatives are Watching.

Mr. Randall left a wife and seven children, who were comfortably provided for. His widow lived until 1891.

Of the children four are living now. Miss Edith Randall, next to the youngest of the family, has twice visited Chamonix. Her first visit was in 1894. She then met the widow and daughter of her father's personal guide, Contett. From them she verified the statements she had read, that in 40 years the glacier would yield up its dead. Another visit in 1904 confirmed the date.

The year 1910, therefore, was marked with sacred memory in the family, and today, in the various households in Massachusetts, where Mr. Randall's children and his children's children live, there is a turning of thoughts toward the Alps, and a counting of the days till the late summer, when the cables are expected to flash the news of the long awaited recovery of the body of the father and grandfather, and of its consignment to the dust by waiting and ready hands, which also will probably recover other dead cherished no less by the sturdy and patiently waiting Swiss.

Ambition of Life.

Mr. Randall left home in the spring of 1870 for a well-earned vacation trip. In his diary on May 25, 1870, he wrote: "A dull, lowery morning, looking like a stormy day; rose at 4 o'clock. Today I commence the realization of the dream of my whole life. After many misgivings and doubts I decided a few days ago to visit Europe. . . . Said goodby and kissed my dear wife and babies and left Quincy, Mass, at 9.30, and at 11.10 took the shore train via Providence for New York."

Subsequent entries reveal Mr. Randall's study for his journey by his reading. His whole temperament was that of a man endowed with the intellectual capacity for enjoying to the full the wonders such a tour offered to an appreciative traveler.

The entries of the last of August and early September refer to his first views of the Alps. On Aug. 27 he wrote:

"I had clear views of Mt. Blanc. I had left the hotel alone for Brevent. Reached the top at precisely 12, entered the hut and was cordially greeted by Michael Irene Contett, the old guide, who had been up 20 times. I had a fire built up. When at 4 o'clock I began to descend—O the glories of that descent. Across the valley far below me the whole chain of Mt. Blanc, flooded with sunshine, stood out sharp and clear with overpowering sublimity against the blue sky. Everything seemed in harmony. I was slowly descending, taking in the influences of the scene, till my overcharged soul found relief in tears. I stood with bared head and thanked God that after 20 years of toil and hope I was at last permitted to stand amid these great manifestations."

Entries to Sept. 3, which is the last one, speak of numerous climbs, hard work and rigorous experience in preparation for the climax of his desires, the ascent to the summit of "the monarch," Mt. Blanc.

The Ascent and Tragedy.

Mt. Blanc is 15,782 feet high. At a height of 10,00 feet on the route from Chamonix to its summit are two granite spurs or cliffs, rising above the deep crust of snow and ice on the mountain's breast, known as the Grand Mulets. Here is a shelter-house, where most parties ascending the mountain halt for the night, before attempting the summit. If the day promises well, however, the summit may be attained, and a return made to the shelter that day.

Sept. 6, 1870, seemed to promise perfect conditions for a climb to the summit. There were three tourists at Chamonix who wished to go up that day—Mr. Randall, Dr. James B. Beane of Baltimore and Rev. George McCorkendale of Scotland.

The eight guides chosen to accompany them numbered some of the most experienced in the village. They had been up Mt. Blanc scores of times.

The party made good time on the ascent, and so clear was the weather when they reached the summit that they were seen there through glasses, from the village.

Shortly after they left the summit a sudden change in the weather enveloped the mountain in snow clouds, which caught the party in a whirling storm.

There were anxious hearts in the village of Chamonix that night, as the wives of the guides watched the storm. Only a merciful ignorance of what was transpiring there spared a wife and mother in Quincy similar anguish.

Next day, from dawn to dark, the storm raged on the mountains, and when at last, on the third day, it abated a little there was certainly in Chamonix that death had been the lot of some, if not all, of the party on the mountain.

The sonw was followed by rain, which delayed a searching party sent out from the village, in which were 30 volunteers, all guides. No progress could be made on the mountain, owing to the uncertain footing in the snow.

Relief Party.

It was not until Sept. 16, 10 days after the storm set in, that clearing weather afforded trace of the lost party. The snow had then settled, and the strong lenses of telescopes picked out some black spots on the bosom of the glacier.

A party of 22 guides and mountaineers was made up and started at once towards the Grands Mulets, where they arrived before evening. The next morning they found two bodies—those of Mr. Randall's fellow travelers, and higher up three more. Six guides went to the summit and searched thoroughly, but found nothing more. They then united for the night at the Grands Mulets. That evening, Sept. 17, upon signal from the Grands Mulets, 24 more guides prepared to go up, and on the 18th, a day of rare clearness and quietness enabled them to make a thorough search of the neighborhood, but without avail.

Then the sad procession began its descent of the glacier. Sometimes the bodies were carried, sometimes lowered with ropes down steep descents, sometimes dragged across chasms in the snow.

The entire population of Chamonix was in the streets when the train came down with its precious burden. The rigidity of the dead by the exposure to the terrible cold made it impossible to prepare the bodies for burial, and so they were interred under the shelter of the village churchyard, still in sitting posture. Both Catholic and Protestant services were held.

How Death Came.

The body of Dr. Beane had been found sitting with his head upon his hands and that of Mr. McCorkendale sitting also with his alpenstock firmly gripped.

On Dr. Beane's body was found a letter which told how death had come to them. The letter said in part:

"Tuesday, Sept 6—I have made the ascension of Mt. Blanc with 10 other persons; eight guides, Mr. McCorkendale and Mr. Randall. We reached the summit at 2.30. Immediately after having quitted it I found myself enveloped in a whirlpool of snow at 15,000 feet English height. We have passed the night in a grotto dug in the snow—an uncomfortable asylum, and I have been ill all the night.

"Sept. 7, morning—Cold very intense, much snow. It falls without cessation; the guides are uneasy.

"7th September, evening—We have been on Mt. Blanc for two days in a terrible snowstorm. We are lost. We are in a grotto, dug in the snow, at a hight of 15,000 feet.

"I have no hopes of descending. Perhaps someone will find this book and send it to you. (At this point directions concerning his private and business affairs.) We have no provisions. My feet are already frozen, and I am entirely exhausted. I have only strength to write these words. I die, believing in Jesus Christ, with the sweet thought of my family, my friendships and all. I hope we may meet in heaven.

"My effects are partly at the hotel de Mont Blanc, a part with me in two portmanteaus. Send them by post to the hotel Schwietzerhoff at Geneva. Pay my bills at the hotel. Heaven will reward you for your kindness."

The letter closed with directions to his family concerning business matters and a simple statement that to his wife he left all his property. This was, of course, unwitnessed, but it was later offered for probate in Baltimore and was allowed without objection.

It is possible that when the body of Mr. Randall is found, some farewell word to his family may be found preserved with it.

NOT GUILTY.

There comes to all newspaper writers, at one time or another, the regret that every item or article, however trivial, may not have the name of the writer signed to it. The late Joseph Howard, one of the brightest journalist of his day, one time wrote: —"Whatever paper we writers may contribute for, then we are considered liable by our friends for anything appearing in its columns. We may say we did not write it, but a doubt remains." And to this sentiment every writer in the world says: Amen! Here is a case in point: A very harmless and trivial incident occurs in a section of a town that a young fan "covers" for his paper. An account of the affair, not entirely complimentary to the participants, but omitting the names, appeared in the paper, it having come from a different source. The reporter had no knowledge of the incident, did not read the item, and so went his way, happily unaware that he was on the "black books" as far as some young people were concerned. When the matter was finally brought to his attention, he declared himself innocent in spite of the accusing voices raised against him, and now he is willing to admit that many a person is hung in the wrong.—Dedham Transcript.

SEVERAL FIRE ALARMS

But Loss Did not Exceed Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars

The fire department has been called out several times since Saturday noon for small fires at none of which was the loss large.

Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock an alarm from box 24 called them to a fire on Old Coach road in the stone shed of T. J. Galvin. The fire caught from sparks from woods fire which alighted on the dry roof. A telephone call was sent to the central station and some of the apparatus were on the way when the alarm sounded. The stone sheds were situated some ways back from the street so that it was impossible for the apparatus to get a line of hose to them. The central station combination however managed to pull up near the sheds and used its chemical stream. There was little for the department to do, however, other than to watch the sheds burn. In the sheds were one or two small dies which were ruined, and the sheds were destroyed. The loss on the sheds and contents will not exceed $200.

The next alarm came Sunday afternoon at 3.08 and was sounded from Box 47. This was for a fire in an old engine house off Grove street on Break Neck hill. The building was a small affair and had not been used for sometime. The fire was probably caused by boys building bon fires. The loss will not exceed $10.

At 7.08 Sunday evening an alarm from Box 445 called the department to a fire in an old building at the quarry formerly occupied by Craig & Richards on Quarry street. This also was the work of boys. The building was desrtoyed at a loss not exceeding $20.

This morning an alarm from Box 46 called the department to a blaze on the roof of the blacksmith shop of Badger Brothers on Willard street, and was probably caused from sparks from a passing locomotive alighting on the roof. The fire was soon got under control. The loss will not exceed $10.

The alarm from Box 431 this noon was for a fire in the woods off Hall place. The fire was thought to be getting too near some of the houses. The recall sounded in a few minutes after the alarm.

Noah's Anchors.

A story of a pair of anchors is told in the book entitled "To Kairwan the Holy."

Kairwan is the Mecca of the west. It is a city so sacred that women are allowed to move about in it but very little. One of the interesting sights is the Mosque of Emir Ben Said Bon Muphtah. This mosque, with its six melon shaped domes, is the tomb of a most amusing old Moslem who died about the middle of the last century. He had great power over the bey and managed affairs according to his own pleasure. This Moslem got possession in Tunis of four large anchors which probably belonged to some old men-of-war abandoned on account of stress of weather. The gentleman with the long name was not content with any such prosaic explanation of their origin. By means of the labor of 500 Arabs he had the anchors dragged from Tunis and deposited in front of his house. The transportation took five months. He then declared them to be the anchors by which Noah fastened the ark to Mount Ararat. The relics are now in the mosque of their former owner and are regarded as holy.

His Rules of Golf.

A lawyer of considerable prominence took up the game of golf. Some of his friends volunteered chapters of advice, while another presented to the beginner a book of rules. After completing his first round the counselor was asked if he had mastered the rules. The perspiring lawyer realized the sarcasm of the remark, but proved equal to the occasion. "The rules? Oh they are quite simple," he replied. "There are two I know of, and to my mind they are the most important. You must hit the ball with your club, and after you have hit it you must find it, of course, before you hit it again. It will take an honest man several weeks to master these two rules. After driving the ball you must hit it wherever it lies. Good lies are as important in golf as in fishing. Losing a ball costs you two strokes and the price of the ball. Hitting a caddie with the ball is justifiable homicide."—New York Tribune.

A Medical Opinion.

"Doctor, how do you account for the existence of rheumatism?"

"The mind, my dear sir, evolved the disease to fit the word."—Chicago Tribune.

EASTER SERVICES

at First church. For the musical service the church quartet was assisted by Miss Sophia B. Eastman soloist, and E. B. Porter, violinist, with William Weston at the organ.

Rev. Ellery C. Butler, pastor and Rev. Charles Bulkley Ames assistant pastor were in the pulpit. Mr. Butler took for his text, "A portion of our Father's house." It was a forceful plea for a simpler life, a getting away from the stress of work and social life to walk more closely with God. Less high living and more thought for right living would not only make life more worth living but would make the passing from this earth to our Father's mansion something to look forward to. We would be sure of "our portion in our Father's house."

Following the service communion was held.

The church was decorated with pots and bouquets of Easter lilies.

The regular noon session of the Sunday school was omitted but at four o'clock a special Easter service was held in the church. There was a very large attendance and it was a beautiful service of music and reading carried out by the children under the direction of Supt. Charles H. Johnson.

Miss Priscilla Whiton of Boston read an Easter story which was a new and enjoyable feature of this year's program. She read it beautifully and it appealed to young and old.

At the close of the service potted plants were distributed to each member of the school, the bright blossoms hardly rivaling the brightness and happiness of the faces of those receiving them.

The closing services of the day was the meeting of the Young People's Religious Union at seven o'clock. Rev. D. Roy Freeman of All Souls' church, Braintree, was the speaker, his subject being "The Meaning of Easter to Unitarians. Special Easter music was by the Young People's choir, assisted by Mr. Rhodes.

AT QUINCY POINT.

Special Easter services were held Sunday at the Washington Street Congregational church. The platform about the pulpit was profusely decorated with lilies. The attendance at the morning service and at the Sunday school service in the afternoon were very large. At the morning service at 10.45 the pastor, Rev. Charles P. Marshall took for his subject "The Promise of Easter." There was special music which included "Hallelujah, Christ is risen" and "Come, sing we loud hosannas" with solos by Miss Crane, Mrs. Murfin and Mrs. Woodsum of Braintree. In the afternoon at 4 o'clock there was an Easter concert by the Sunday school. With the exception of a solo by Mrs. Murfin all the parts were taken by members of the Sunday school.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

The seating capacity of the Wollaston Unitarian church was taxed to its utmost at the Easter service which was held at the usual hour of morning worship. The chorus choir of young people rendered the musical selections very acceptably, and Rev. Carl G. Horst's reading of the last part of the 15th chapter of 1 Corinthians was most impressive, the beautiful and familiar lines taking on a deeper and finer significance as the preacher read the great promises of the resurrection and eternal life. "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him" served as the text for a most helpful and uplifting sermon upon the theme of Immortality. The floral decorations were unusually attractive, and the new lectern and Bible were in place for the first time, adding much to the dignity of the pulpit fittings.

At the regular meeting of the Women's Alliance in the vestry Wednesday, March 30, at 2.30 o'clock, Mrs. C. Theodore Hardwick of Quincy will speak on "Mothers and Sons." A full attendance is requested.

The Whatsoever circle, King's Daughters will hold its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Leavitt, Lincoln avenue on Monday, March 28, at 8 P. M.

The Wednesday noon service in King's Chapel, March 30, will be conducted by the Rev. H. C. De Long of Medford.

In honor of the Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale's birthday, a special service will be held Sunday, April 3, at 4.30 o'clock. There will be special music, including Dr. Hale's favorite hymns, and addresses by the Rev. Rufus B. Tobey of Wollaston and the Rev. Calvin Stebbins of Framingham.

A public meeting in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the birthday of the Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D. D., will be held at the Arlington street church, Boston, Monday, April 4, at 7.45 P. M. Addresses will be made by the Rev. George A. Gordon, D. D., the Rev. Robert Collyer, Lit. D., the Rev. Prof. Francis G. Peabody, D. D., and ex-President Charles W. Eliot.

The last food sale of the Alliance exchange will be held at the home of Mrs. Charles T. Baker, 215 Safford street, Saturday afternoon, April 2.

A neat little booklet containing the constitution and by-laws, covenant and membership certificate of the church, will soon be placed in the hands of every member of the Wollaston Unitarian society.

WOLLASTON M. E.

Large audiences were in attendance at all of the services Sunday at the Wollaston Methodist church. The subject of Rev. Wesley Wiggin's sermon was "True Easter Joy." Easter music was rendered by the large chorus choir with Miss Ada Stone as organist. J. A. Sedgwick, the Superintendent, took charge of the Sunday school, reviewing the last quarter's lessons, using the blackboard. The Sunday school is having increased attendance each Sunday.

At 6 o'clock an excellent Easter concert was given by the Sunday school. All who took part were well trained and reflected credit to the program committee. The decorations were in charge of A. B. Cassidy and A. N. Murray's Sunday School class, and were in accord with the day. The program committee were as follows: Miss Florence Bennett, Mrs. Herbert Gott, Miss Mary Cleveland, Miss Ada Stone and Miss Bessie Wilbur.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

The pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther, preached morning and evening. Morning subject, "The question of the ages—if a man die shall he live again." Evening subject, "The Believer's present and spiritual resurrection; we know that we have passed from death unto life." Mr. Walther was at his best and preached two very earnest and helpful sermons.

Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell rendered a solo, at the morning service in a very pleasing manner and Mrs. Mary Hastings Slade, a former soloist of the church, favored the congregation with two solos in a way that proved her great ability as a singer.

The church was crowded at both services and a large number were obliged to stand during the evening service. Sixteen persons were baptized at the close of the service as follows: Marion Rand, Margaret Goodspeed, Bertha Salisbury, Ella Whitehead, Rosina McQueen, Isabel McQueen, Muriel Dresser, May Cook, Dorothy Miller, Mrs. S. R. Bain, Edward Bullock, Stuart Walther, Erwin Church, Revere Dresser, Hollis Black, Herbert L. Wilson.

All former records were broken at the Sunday school, which had the largest attendance during the year.

Miss Ruth Cahill favored the young people at the Christian Endeavor meeting with two solos, which were very much enjoyed.

The cottage prayer meeting at Montclair Tuesday evening will be led by Dea. George A. Brown.

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S.

Easter Sunday was observed at St. Chrysostom's with the usual impressive services, and the church was filled. At the 7 A. M. celebration over 150 came to pay their devotions and receive holy communion. The choir sang Easter hymns and the altar was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies.

At 10.30 morning prayer and holy communion, the retiring rector preached a strong sermon filled with the Easter spirit. The musical program by the vested choir was well rendered and in keeping with the occasion, Miss Louisa Allison Ross, organist. Miss Susie Louise Nichols sang "He is risen, He is risen."

The children's festival was held at 3 P. M., the children bringing their mite boxes which contained $75. After the singing of Easter hymns each child in the Sunday school received a potted plant. The children love Mr. Clattenburg and are heart-broken at his leaving.

At the 7.30 evening prayer, Archdeacon Babcock preached on the Resurrection of our blessed Lord and Master and he paid a high tribute to Mr. Clattenburg, whom he has known since a boy.

ATLANTIC MEMORIAL.

The Easter morning service at the Memorial Congregational church was a most inspiring one. The congregation was large and filled the entire church. "The message of Easter" was the subject of the strong sermon preached by the pastor, Mr. Davison, and the anthems rendered by the quartet were especially fine. In place of the customary children's concert in the evening, a service was participated in by the older members of the Sunday school. This program consisted of two selections by the chorus choir, solos by Miss Jardine Davison and Mr. William Harding, readings by Miss Maud Read and an anthem by the quartet.

AT SACRED HEART.

Easter lilies and palms were used largely in the decorations at the Church of the Sacred Heart at Atlantic on Easter Sunday. There were early morning masses and also vespers at 7.30 at which Rev. John P. Cuffe officiated. The music was under the direction of Miss Collins the organist at the church and included the Gregorian chant.

AT UNIVERSALIST.

The Universalist church looked attractive for Easter, the decorations including Easter lilies and other plants. A goodly number attended the morning services, and also the concert by the Sunday school in the evening, when a pleasing program was presented.

The Laborer's Thanks.

A tram car was going down a busy street one day and was already comfortably full when it was hailed by a laboring man much the worse for liquor, who presently staggered along the car between two rows of well dressed people regardless of polished shoes and tender feet.

Murmurs and complaints arose on all sides, and demands were heard that the offender should be ejected at once.

But amid the storm of abuse one friendly voice was raised as a benevolent clergyman rose from his seat, saying:

"No, no! Let the man sit down and be quiet."

The discomfiture of the party turned to mirth when the drunken one seized his benefactor by the hand, exclaiming:

"Thank ye, sir—thank ye. I see you know what it is to be tight!"—London Answers.

A Literary Light.

A short time ago a well known writer of London, remembering that he had never read the noncanonical books, went out in search of a copy and in one bookshop after another drew blank. At last he went to his own particular newspaper shop, which also dealt in Bibles and light literature. "Have you the Apocrypha?" he asked. For a moment the young woman behind the counter was puzzled; then, brightening, she said, "Is it a weekly or a monthly?"

HINES MAY BE MADE SPEAKER

Man Who Formulates Rulings May Succeed Cannon

AN EXPERT PARLIAMENTARIAN

Poindexter Says Initial Reform Inaugurated by Insurgents Must Be Followed by Others, Chief of Which Must Be Deposition of Uncle Joe—Ways and Means of Revising Rules Being Actively Discussed

Washington, March 28.—Many of the insurgent Republicans in the house who voted to retain Speaker Cannon in the chair are "hearing from home," according to reports in circulation about the capitol, and these advices are said to be not at all reassuring.

Following closely this information comes statements from several that the war against "Cannonism" is to go on to the extent of the ultimate deposition of Speaker Cannon, the election of his successor and the complete reformation of the rules of the house. The overthrow of the speaker and the taking from the speakership of all power unduly to influence legislation are aimed at.

A proposition to remove Cannon by means of the combined vote of Democrats and insurgents and to substitute for him Asher C. Hinds of Portland, Me., the parliamentarian of the house, is one of the plans which several insurgents advocated.

The idea of placing in the speaker's chair a pure parliamentarian, not a member of the house, who would be entirely uninfluenced by considerations of partisan advantage, was pointed out by Mr. Poindexter (Wash.) and others as the logical and proper course. Under the constitution the house may choose a speaker who is not a member of the body.

Representative Poindexter, who is one of the prominent insurgents, said:

"This initial reform which we have accomplished must be followed by others. The whole trouble in which the house finds itself is caused by the joining of the power of the speaker with that of the leader of the majority.

"The English plan of having an expert parliamentarian instead of a politician as a presiding officer is the only correct one. As long as we select a party leader as speaker, just so long will we have partisan and unfair rulings from the chair.

"When the house adopted the Norris resolution the other day, it was a vote of 'no confidence' in Speaker Cannon, and he should have resigned. As he did not do so, we should depose him. With that accomplished, I think we should elect Mr. Hinds."

Victor Murdock (Kan.), another insurgent leader, said: "The movement to reform the procedure of the house has just begun. Before this session adjourns we will have accomplished a great many things. I hear radicals on this side, who never before were willing to admit that the rules or anything else needed changing, now discussing ways and means of revising the rules and making them better."

Other insurgents expressed themselves along similar lines. All of them expressed themselves as desiring to see the president's legislation out of the way before hostilities break out again.

The proposal to elect Hinds speaker elicited much comment from those who were made aware of it. Hinds is a Republican and is a candidate for nomination for congress in the First Maine district. His present duty is to formulate rulings for Speaker Cannon.

Mrs. Harry W. Fisher of Braintree left Saturday for hPiladelphia and Washington to spend the Easter holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar W. James of Wollaston, announces the engagement of their daughter, Susan Clayton to William Emory Beach of Boston.

The weather Easter Sunday was ideal although there was a cool east wind during the afternoon and evening.

Thursday evening the annual parish supper and social will be held in the vestry of the Hall Place church. Supper will be served at 7 sharp and an interesting program will follow.

Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Munroe were among the passengers on the outward-bound Moltke sailing Thursday from New York for Bermuda, San Juan and Havana.

Miss Ida M. Brown of Wollaston is supplying the place made vacant by the resignation of Mrs. Mary L. Wade as teacher of cooking in the public schools of Milton.

At the last session of probat court the will of Sarah J. Chase was allowed, executor Mabel S. Baxter. Administrations were granted on the estates of Maria A. Elcock, Mary Ford, and Sarah E. Brackett.

Quite a party of Quincy gentlemen made an inspection of the battleship North Dakota on Sunday under the guidance of James H. Lalley, the master painter at the yard and Warren H. Rideout of the treasurer's office. The battleship is about ready to be turned over to the government.

Young society people are anticipating a pleasurable evening at the second dance to be given by the Y. P. R. U., at Alpha hall, Tuesday evening. Mrs. Henry C. Hardwick, Mrs. George G. Saville and Mrs. Robert R. Smith will matronize the affair. The success of the last Y. P. R. U. dance was due in a large measure to the enthusiasm and management of Miss Lela Belle Smith, chairman. With the same efficient officers in charge, a second brilliant success is expected.

—Whenevver a bunco steerer goes to New Hampshire or Maine and helps to fleece a farmer out of a few thousand dollars the papers are full of advice to the "easy marks "in the country. Recent developments go to show that right here in Boston there are a lot of very "easy marks." It is said that one banker has been swindled out of $60,000 by a gang of crooks and that 15 victims have lost more than $200,000 by the same bunco syndicate. Merchants, bankers, professional men and others are included in the list of the fleeced. They seem to be about as "easy "as the "sons of toil "in any of the country towns a hundred miles away.—Chelsea Record.

PROFESSOR PERRET

STILL MORE TO FOLLOW

Perret Predicts Greater Eruption of Mt. Etna or an Earthquake

Catania, March 28.—While the quantity of lava from the craters of Mt. Etna continues to decrease, the internal activity of the volcano is stronger.

Frank A. Perret, the American volcanologist, believes the lecrease in the flow of lava is due to obstructions in the new craters which prevent its flowing freely and that later, either in a few days or perhaps a week, the molten mass either will force a passage or an earthquake will result.

Professor Perret went Sunday from Nicolosi to the Alpine club refuge, which is situated near the craters, and later telegraphed down as follows:

"The activity of Etna is stronger but the lava slower. Terrific explosions in the interior of the mountain continue."

SOPHIE KRITCHMAN GUILTY OF KILLING

Music Teacher Is Convicted With Joseph Mitchell

New Haven, March 28.—Sophie Kritchman, the 24-year-old music teacher of Union City, was found guilty of manslaughter and Joseph Mitchell of Waterbury guilty of murder in the second degree by a jury in the superior criminal court here.

They were charged jointly with the murder of Bronislow Kulvinskas at murder of Bronislow Kulvinskas by shooting and cutting his throat and had been on trial for seven weeks.

The crime was committed at Union City, Sept. 17 and 18, 1909. Late on the latter day, Bronislow Kulvinskas was found in a wooded section of that place in a dying condition, his body riddled with bullets and his throat cut.

Before death he said Sophie Kritchman and Joseph Mitchell lured him to the spot on the 17th, and there shot him, leaving him to die, and also that on the following day, finding him still alive, Sophie had cut his throat.

TRAINMEN REJECT OFFER

Negotiations With Officials of New Haven Road Are at an End

New Haven, March 28.—Negotiations between the adjustment board of the conductors and trainmen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, it is stated, have come to a sudden end.

This announcement followed practically an all-day discussion of the compromise offers of the railroad company, with especial reference to the latest proposition of the company, and which it was finally decided not to acept.

It is understood that this provided for certain concessions, but made it plain that the company would not grant the wage increase.

Swithchmen's Pay Is Raised

CAUGHT JUST IN TIME

Police Prevent Maniac From Slaying His Four Children With an Axe

Hartford, March 28.—An insane father was prevented from butchering his four children, whose ages range from 2 to 7 years, on the banks of the Connecticut river by the arrival of the police. When found back of the bushes his four boys were partly undressed and were lined in a row, the maniac father standing over them with uplifted axe. A boy of 4 was to have been the first victim.

The child was standing beneath the shining blade with a crucifix in one hand, calmly awaiting his fate. The others were terrified spectators. The police dashed through the undergrowth, threw the madman aside and gave their immedate attention to the children.

The father was taken to the station and locked in a padded cell. He had been dispossessed by his landlord and it made him desperate.

CONCESSIONS BY CANADA

United States to Get the Same Tariff Rates as France

Washington, March 28.—General satisfaction is expressed here at the announcement that an agreement practically has been reached between the officials representing the Canadian government and the president and Secretary Knox, respecting the adjustment of the tariffs of Canada and the United States.

No one in authority is willing to discuss the details, but there is good ground for the belief that material concessions have been granted by Canada, and that the United States will receive in return for its minimum the intermediate rates given by Canada to France and twelve other countries on a considerable number of articles in which exporters from the United States are specially interested.

EX-TAX COLLECTOR IS UNDER ARREST

Paid to Be Over $4000 Discrepancy In His Accounts

Wenham, Mass., March 28.—On a warrant charging larceny, Frederick P. Stanton, for ten years tax collector of this town, was arrested last night by Deputy Sheriff Flynn of Lawrence, acting under orders from District Attorney Peters of Essex county.

Owing to Stanton's serious illness he was not removed from his home, but a guard was paced in the house.

It is said that an audit of Stanton's accounts has revealed a discrepancy of more than $4000 between the total amount of taxes believed to have been collected and the aggregate amount which appears on the books as paid.

About a month ago the selectmen announced an apparent shortage of $746.49 in the tax accounts of Stanton, who had resigned last August. Stanton asked that a complete audit of his accounts be made.

The selectmen at once employed expert accountants. The arrest is said to have been determined on after they had made their report.

AFFAIRS ON THE SALEM

Complaints Became Too Numerous For Navy Department to Ignore

Washington, March 28.—When more than 13 percent of the crew of a warship is ordered before summary courts within a month and when petty officers with fine service records, who have served a dozen years, go over the side and voluntarily surrender themselves as deserters to the commanders of the other ships, it is about time for the navy department to take notice of the conditions on that ship.

That is the explanation at the navy department for the dispatch of Rear Admiral Dillingham to Hampton Roads to make a personal investigation of the situation on board of the scout cruiser Salem. His report is ready for the navy department, but regarding the contents and the nature of his recommendations there is no inkling.

DISASTER ON FLAGSHIP?

Manila Hears That Gun Exploded on the Cruiser Charleston

Manila, March 28.—A report reached here that a gun on the United States cruiser Charleston exploded during target practice and that eight men were killed or wounded. The Charleston is returning to Manila from Olongapo. No details of the reported accident have been received here, nor has the report been confirmed.

The Charleston is the flagship of Rear Admiral Hubbard, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet. Her commanding officer is Commander Gibbons. She is a protected cruiser of 9700 tons and carries fourteen guns.

BODY IS FOUND IN GUNNY SACK

Fate of Ruth Wheeler Is No Longer a Mystery

ANSWERED EMPLOYMENT NOTE

Her Charred Body, Which Shows That She Had Been Strangled and Hacked With a Knife, Found at Home of Youth to Which She Had Been Decoyed—Woman Supports One Accused of the Crime

New York, March 28.—The body of Ruth Wheeler, who was lured from her widowed mother on Thursday last by a decoy offer of employment, was found huddled in a gunny sack on a fire escape outside the apartment of Albert Wolter, the youth charged with her abduction.

She had been strangled, hacked with a knife, burned beyond recognition and thrust carelessly out of doors like so much rubbish. Identification was only possible by shreds of clothing and fragments of jewelry, but there was abundant evidence of how the murder had been done. Around the neck were the charred fibres of manilla burnt into the flesh.

The apartment reeked with the odor of kerosene. There were oil stains in front of the newly-painted fireboard that hid an open grate. Fully dressed, the girl's clothing and hair had been saturated with kerosene, the fire board had been removed and the body thrust up the chimney standing. When the match was touched to her, she burned like a torch.

Probably the murderer had hoped for an opportunity to remove the body under cover of night, but when the girl's disappearance raised such an uproar and he began to suspect he was shadowed, he fled in terror.

Ruth Wheeler was 15 years old, the youngest of three sisters bred by their mother, a dressmaker, to self-support. Both the elder sisters were stenographers and Ruth had just graduated from a business college eager for employment and proud of her diploma.

An employment agency for graduates is conducted by the college and Ruth called there often to look for a situation. Thursday morning she left home on her usual errand and never returned.

The girl had been carefully brought up. She was never on the streets at night and her failure to come home for twenty-four hours without explanation meant more than a caprice. The next morning her sisters, Pearl and Adelaide, in serious concern, went to the college and learned that the following postcard had been turned over to her:

"Dear Madam—Please call in reference to position of stenographer at residence of secretary. A. Wolter.

"222 East 75th street."

Investigation at the adress given showed that Wolter, who is about 20 years old, had left the apartment where he lived with his wife earlier in the same day. He received many calls from young girls, said the landlady, and she had particularly noticed that one who last called was fresher of face and better dressed than the ordinary run of them.

Detectives waited for Wolter's wife. When she appeared, they trailed her to a corner where she met a man answering Wolter's description. He was immediately arrested, taken back to the rooms he had vacated and searched. At first he denied writing postal cards to business schools, but when the detectives turned up answers from business schools addressed to him at various house numbers, he admitted the correspondence, but could not explain it.

Before a magistrate he had nothing to say, but to others he admitted that the woman with whom he was living is not his wife. He met her shortly after coming to this country from Germany, two years ago, he said; they fell in love and set up housekeeping.

Last summer he and she had worked at Irvington-on-the-Hudson at a boarding house. They came to this city last month and since then the woman had supported him by working in a laundry.

Wolter was committed to the Tombs without bail Sunday, charged with the girl's murder. At a continuation of the police inquiry he persisted in his denials that he ever saw the girl, ever wrote to her or knew how her body came to be on the fire escape outside his window, or why fragments of human feet, hands and arms, all partly incinerated, were found in the ashes of his fireplace.

In Sympathy With Strikers

Dover, N. H., March 28.—At a mass meeting of all classes of textile operatives employed in the Cocheco department, Pacific mills, a vote of sympathy with the loomfixers in their strike for a 10 percent increase in wages was unanimously extended.

Two New Airships Ready

Baddeck, N. S., March 28.—Two-men aerodromes are now ready, waiting for suitable weather to make a test. One is a monoplane built for Gardiner G. Hubbard of Boston. The other is a triplane which was constructed for Professor Bell.

RAISE IN RAILROAD RATES

New Hampshire's Attorney General Seeking to Prevent It

Exeter, N. H., March 28.—A temporary injunction restraining the Boston and Maine Railroad company from further raising its freight rates was granted by Justice Plummer of the superior court here upon petition of Attorney General Eastman. The question of making the injunction permanent will come up at the April term of the superior court.

This action follows the efforts of the attorney general to have many of the railroad's present rates declared illegal and the road prevented from making further advances on the ground that the legislative acts permitting the Boston and Maine to lease several of its subsidiary lines in this state prohibited the road from increasing any of the freight rates in effect at the time of leasing.

"GOOD AS ANY WHITE MAN"

Negro's Assertion Does Not Prevent Mob Taking His Life

Pinebluff, Ark., March 28.—Resenting the attitude of "Judge" Jones, a 26-year-old negro, toward a young white woman of this city, a mob of forty men took the negro from the custody of the officers, who were conducting him to a convict farm, and lynched him.

Jones was arrested on the complaint of the mother of the young woman, who charged him with trespass, asserting that he persisted in loitering about her home and became insolent when ordered away. During his trial the negro replied sharply to his questioners, insisting that he "was as good as any white man."

After the trial Jones was being taken to a train, when the mob overpowered the officers and hanged the negro to a water tank.

THROUGH EFFORTS OF THEIR GRANDSON

Buffalo Bill and His Wife Have Become Reconciled

North Platte, Neb., March 28.—Colonel W. F. Cody and his wife, who have been estranged for the past ten years, have become reconciled and held a reception to the entire town of North Platte at the famous Scout's Rest ranch, to commemorate the adjustment of their differences. It is Cody's first visit to North Platte since the estrangement.

The reconciliation was brought about through the efforts of Cody Boals, grandson of Colonel Cody, who some days ago telegraphed the old scout to come down to North Platte and spend Easter. Cody accepted the invitation and the reconciliation with his wife followed.

The Elks club tendered the colonel a reception, and the Commercial club held a smoker in his honor today. The entire town is celebrating the reconciliation of the Codys.

FOSS IS GOING WEST

Intends to "Carry Message of Tariff Reform and Reciprocity"

St. Paul, March 28.—Eugene N. Foss, congressman-elect in the Fourteenth Massachusetts district, has notified Frank A. Day, leader of the Minnesota Democracy, that he will make a western tour "to carry the message of tariff reform and reciprocity."

He will be guest of honor at the dollar dinner on Jefferson's birthday, April 13. Foss will attend the banquet of the Jefferson club at Des Moines, Ia., April 8. He also intends to visit Sioux City and Omaha.

The invitation to Foss is believed to mean another tentative move for the Republican votes which elected the late John A. Johnson governor of this state.

OVER A DAM TO DEATH

Two Women Drowned When Motor Boat Becomes Disabled

Hillsboro, N. H., March 28.—A motor boat rendered unmanageable by the sudden stopping of the engine was dragged into a swift current and swept over the dam of the upper mill pond here, hurling its occupants, Mrs. Nellie Darres and Miss Mildred Craig, to their death below. William N. Parker, who was in charge of the boat, escaped by being thrown into shallow water, from where he was able to reach shore, although badly injured.

The bodies of the two women were swept down the Contoocook river and were seen to go over a second dam, but no further trace of the bodies was discovered.

Rich Man Left no Will

Cambridge, Mass., March 28.—Alvin F. Sortwell, ex-mayor of Cambridge, left no will. Bancroft G. Davis filed a petition in the Middlesex probate court asking for letters of administration of the estate. It is estimated that Sortwell was worth nearly $4,000,000.

Washington, March 28.—President Taft shook hands with nearly 600 teachers and pupils of eastern schools who are in Washington attending conventions.

WILL DISCUSS "MEN HIGHER UP"

French Goes to Washington In Cambridge Bank Case

REPORT OF EXAMINER HANN

Banking Men Astounded at Looting by Bookkeeper Without Being Discovered by His Superiors—Criminal Proceedings May Be Instituted Against "Faro Gang" In New York—Coleman Denies That He Is Married

Boston, March 28.—United States District Attorney French quietly slipped out of town Saturday night. His destination is Washington, whither he has been summoned by the attorney general to discuss the looting of the National City bank of Cambridge by George W. Coleman.

Yesterday French stopped over in New York, where he conferred with the district attorney there in regard to the criminal prosecution of the faro men who fleeced Coleman.

The "men higher up" will be the chief topic of discussion at Washington, it is understood, for just before leaving Boston the district attorney is quoted as saying "that when he returns from Washington he will furnish a sensation that heretofore has not been anticipated."

The bank directors and other officials who were so lax in their duties as to permit the looting of the bank are the persons that Attorney General Wickersham and the comptroller of the treasury are said to be most anxious to hear about, and this is said to be the reason for summoning French to Washington.

It is known that the district attorney feels that the conviction of the fake faro bank workers, if such can be obtained, will be accomplished much more readily in New York than in Massachusetts and considerable importance is attached to his consultation with the New York federal district attorney.

The money which Coleman carried to break the bank in New York was delivered to the conspirators there and the statutes in that state allow the victim of such a scheme, even though he admits that his plan was to obtain money by cheating the game, to recover and institute criminal proceedings against the men who inveigled him into it.

Since the disclosures in the report of Bank Examiner Hann official Washington and banking men all over the country have been astounded at the ease with which the bookkeeper abstracted the $250,000 from the bank and practically flaunted his thefts in the eyes of the Cambridge and Boston populace by purchasing autos and entertaining lavishly at Boston hotels.

The report of Hann is in the hands of Comptroller of the Currency Murray in Washington and will undoubtedly serve as a basis for the consultation between the district attorney and the attorney general.

Notwithstanding what seems like certain proof of his marriage to Miss Hightower, Coleman last night again emphatically denied that he had wed the young woman from Kansas City.

This denial came when a reporter informed Coleman that Miss Hightower, who had been stopping at the Hotel Oxford on Huntington avenue, had left that hostelry on March 23, the day that he secured his marriage license, and has not returned there since.

WOMAN SUES FOR $20,000

Widow Says Husband Was Burned, Roasted and Baked by X-Ray

Trenton, March 28.—Mrs. Henry W. Page of this city brought suit for $20,000 damages against Professors Howard McClenahan and Edward P. Adams of Princeton university, alleging that they burned her husband so severely with the X-ray that he died of his injuries.

The complainant charges that her husband was "burned, roasted and baked" so badly that his limbs became decayed, he grew gradually worse and died last November.

Page suffered from hip disease and the defendants took X-ray photographs to determine the extent of the malady. His wife says that he was fifteen minutes under the rays.

COOK NEAR NEW YORK

Will Probably Be Seen In That City Within a Few Days

New York, March 28.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who has been reported of late as "en route to New York," is, according to the latest rumor, at the home of his wife's sister, Mrs. Henry Harvey, at Pensuaken, N. J.

Friends of the doctor decline to commit themselves as to his whereabouts, but Captain Osbon, a staunch supporter, says that the explorer will be in New York within a few days. Mrs. Cook, said Osbon, will come first to select apartments.

Woman Finds Father's Dead Body

Boston, March 28.—Michael Tessitore, aged 55, was found dead in bed in a room in the rear of his grocery store, 199 Havre street, by his daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Russo. The man died from the effects of gas poisoning.

HOUSEHOLD LETTER

"To work for work's sake, seems to me stupid" said a clever professional woman, who is withal an excellent housekeeper, and always ready in her leisure time to extend a gracious and easy hospitality to her many friends. "I avail myself of every good, labor saving machine that is offered, and consider the money thus spent my best paying investment. Our house is small, and domestic service of a satisfactory sort is difficult to secure, and more difficult to retain. Our vacuum cleaner replaces a housemaid, and our fireless cooker, that works quietly, all day and all night with never a complaint, is so efficient in its department that we scarcely regret the absence of a cook. Our dishwasher has reduced that dreaded task to a minimum, and—"Tell it not in Gath!"—we use it only once a day.

A WASHING MACHINE.

A washing machine makes the laundry work go quickly, and our patent drier is so satisfactory that Mrs. Smith, our weekly "help" can accomplish as much in one day at our house as she does in two places where old-fashioned methods prevail. We use an electric iron and the even temperature maintained prevents scorching, or roughness of finish. An electric attachment, runs the sewing machine, and another makes toast on the table mornings, while we are eating our fruit and cereal, or heats the chafing dish when we cook some of our favorite dishes. A revolving table that has several shelves, and can be wheeled into the pantry, takes care of the dishes removed at the end of each course, for our service is as dainty when we are alone, as when a guest is present.

SYSTEMATIC PLANNING.

If the housekeeping seems to run automatically it is because mother is a master at reducing things to a system. It takes brains to so plan the running of even the simplest home, that no one hears the cranking of the cogs, and the planning is always for the easiest possible methods consistent with comfort.

THE RESERVE STOCK.

In a little closet, in a cool corner of the large pantry, we keep what we call our "Reserved Stock" of prepared foods, which can be served at a moment's notice and thus meet unexpected calls upon our hospitality. Canned soups of the finest grade, in different sizes and styles, French peas, and string beans and whole tomatoes, fine sardines and salmon and home made salad dressing in a jar enable us to concoct an appetizing salad. Hawaiian pineapple, which is picked at the moment of perfect ripeness and canned on the spot, we find delicious in sliced form, eaten with a spoon like grape fruit, for this unlike the ordinary pineapple has no woody fibre, and in the crushed and grated forms makes dainty ices, creams and desserts. Jellies, pickles and jams, peanut butter and potted meats and cheeses are always on hand in this closet.

QUALITY ESSENTIAL.

We buy only the best brands of prepared foods for we find that though the "United States Pure Food Stamps" protect one from foods that are positively detrimental to health, they do not by any means, insure the flavor an deliciousness of the contents. Only the brand of the maker can be relied upon for this, so we test the quality of such goods, and stick to the kinds we like, rejecting all "Just as good" sorts, which usually prove disappointing".

Eleanor Frances.

A Multiplication Trick.

Here is a little trick in multiplication that may amuse you. Ask a friend to write down the numbers 12345679, omitting the number 8. Then tell him to select any one figure from the list, multiply it by 9 and with the answer to this sum multiply the whole list—thus, assuming that he selects either the figure 4 or 6:

Select 4×9=36.	Select 6×9=54
12345679	12345679
36	54
74074074	49382716
37037037	61728395
444444444	666666666

You see, the answer of the sum is composed of figures similar to the one selected.

The officers in the raiding party were Goodacre and White of the railroad police and Shea. A large delegation from the West Quincy Improvement association attended the hearing before the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs at the state house this morning to protest against the passage of the so called McCall bill. This bill provides that no more money shall be expended by the Metropolitan Commission in building streets through the reservations. The West Quincy Improvement association object as it is claimed such a bill would be detrimental to the city. A few streets have already been built through the Blue Hills reservation and some new streets are under way. If the proposed bill should become a law nothing further could be done toward developing the reservation as far as new streets are concerned.

ARRESTED IN BOSTON.

Albert Gordon of Quincy was arrested in Boston Saturday night by Boston inspectors while in the act of pawning three bush hammers. The bush hammers stolen were taken late Saturday afternoon from the sheds of John C. Murray.

The strikeout record in a nine inning game was made by Charles Sweeney of Providence, when he made twenty-one Boston players fan the air in 1883.

NEW BASEBALL RULES FOR 1910 IN BRIEF.

There being a good deal of confusion and misunderstanding as to what are exactly the proposed changes in the baseball playing rules, they are given briefly as follows:

The coacher's box has been altered to prevent the coach from getting nearer than fifteen feet of first base. The deadline runs between first and second bases.

The umpire must watch small points which hitherto have been subjects for complaint from captains, such as the discoloring of the new balls.

The captain must notify the umpire of substitutes and changes in the positions of players, and the umpire must announce them to the crowd.

The captains must give the umpires the batting order list at the home plate before the game is called, and players named must take part in the game.

If a player on the defense impedes or stops a batted ball by throwing a glove or mask at it the runner gets three bases. The umpire judging balls and strikes is the chief, his colleague guarding the first and second bases only.

Every player gets an assist who assists in putting out a runner if he makes the put out himself. Thus he may get the credit for a put out and an assist at once.

The chief umpire may fine bench kickers and may eject them for a second offense.

Weeping Animals.

Travelers through the Syrian desert have seen horses weep from thirst. A mule has been seen to cry from the pain of an injured foot, and camels, it is said, shed tears in streams. A cow sold by its mistress, who had tended it from calfhood, wept pitifully. A young soko ape used to cry with vexation if Livingstone didn't nurse it in his arms when it asked him to Wounded apes have died crying, and apes have wept over their young ones slain by hunters. A chimpanzee trained to carry water jugs broke one and cried, which proved sorrow, though it wouldn't mend the jug. Rats, discovering their young drowned, have been moved to tears of grief. A giraffe which a huntsman's rifle had injured began to cry when approached. Sea lions often weep over the loss of their young. Gordon Cumming observed tears trickling down the face of a dying elephant. And even an orang outang when deprived of its mango was so vexed that it took to weeping There is little doubt, therefore, that animals do cry from grief or weep from pain or annoyance.—Harper's Weekly.

On the Wrong Side.

A temperance missionary in Glasgow left a few tracts with a young woman one morning. Calling at the same house a few days after, he was rather disconcerted to find the tracts doing duty as curl papers on the head of the damsel to whom he had given them. "Weel, my lassie," he remarked, "I see ye have used the tracts I left wi' ye, but," he added in time to turn confusion into merriment, "ye ha' putten them outside instead of inside your head."

Men In Petticoats.

It will probably be a matter of surprise to the general reader to learn that the petticoat was first worn exclusively by men. In the reign of King Henry VII. the dress of the English was so fantastic and absurd that it was difficult to distinguish one sex from the other. In the inventory of Henry V. appears a "petticoat of red damask, with open sleeves." There is no mention of a woman's petticoat before the Tudor period.

AWAY back in the time when knee breeches and bag wigs, pointed waists and petticoats of quilted satin were in fashion there lived a crusty old king who had not a chick nor a child in the world except one sweet little princess granddaughter, whom he was determined to marry to the toothless old king of the next kingdom upon her sixteenth birthday.

Now, the little princess and the king's handsome young surgeon were in love with each other. The surgeon was often tempted to put a few dark drops into the old king's medicine that would put him so fast asleep that he'd forget to waken. But you'll be glad to know that the young surgeon wasn't so wicked as to yield.

THE KING AND THE FAIRY.

Just about this time the queen of the fairies gave a snowy hen and a beautiful mountain goat to the crusty old king. The snowy hen laid an egg every morning that was like a great white pearl, and the milk of the mountain goat only filled a tiny silver bucket. It was rich and creamy. The queen of the fairies called it nog.

She told the king that as long as he would eat the egg and drink the nog every morning he would continue to live, but that if he missed only one little day he would die.

So you can imagine that the king would permit no one but the princess to milk the snowy nog from the goat or bring the egg and broil it for him.

Every morning when the princess went out to the royal stable she found the surgeon waiting for her, and they used to tell over a few loving words.

This all happened in an enchanted time when eggs had long, slender arms and legs outside of their shells and when the quaint little silver bucket became alive as soon as ever the creamy nog entered it. So it was quite to be expected that while the surgeon made love to the princess sly Mr. Egg should make eyes at Miss Nog in the bucket.

Easter morning came. The earth was very beautiful. There were birds and blossoms all about, and soft breezes from the south brought spicy odors. The princess and surgeon forgot to count the shining moments and stood hand in hand for a much longer time than usual.

When at last they parted the little princess cried out in great fear. The egg, in an effort to kiss the snowy forehead of the nog, had tumbled into the silver bucket and broken his silly crown.

There was no mending it. Even the king's surgeon couldn't separate the golden heart of the egg from the creamy heart of the nog. He tore his hair for a minute, then fell upon his knees.

"Have no fear, beloved princess," he said; "all shall be well."

Then he cast away the pearly shell of the egg and carried the silver bucket to the castle, where he beat the egg and the nog together into a golden foam. He then sifted a few grains of sugar into it and added a delicate portion of rum—of which the crusty old king was altogether too fond—flecked the top with grated nutmeg, carried the potion to the king and presented it to him upon a silver salver.

"Your majesty," he said, "I have grieved to notice that your strength has been failing of late. As one who is responsible to the court for your health I have earnestly sought for a life giving draft. It is not well that you should longer eat the egg of the snowy hen and drink the nog of the mountain goat each by itself, but together. Thus will your majesty gain double strength."

THEN HE DRANK IT GREEDILY.

The old king tasted the draft very daintily at first, then drank it greedily. He was so pleased with the taste that he could hardly wait for the next morning to come, when he could drink of it again. And he felt so much stronger that he at once summoned his prime minister and commanded that the betrothal of the princess to the royal surgeon should be proclaimed.

So a little later on the happy young people were married. After the fairy queen had taken back the snowy hen and the mountain goat, so that the crusty old king had to die, the two young people reigned.

And every Easter morning the whole court drank of a potion that was mixed by the royal hands. And what do you think the pretty queen called this delectable potion?

Why, eggnog, to be sure!—Izora Chandler.

EASTER MONDAY BALL KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

Large and Brilliant Party of Quincy Council at Music Hall.

Good Music Both Instrumental and Vocal.

Handsomely gowned ladies in very large numbers graced the annual Easter Monday night ball of Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, Monday evening. The affair was held at Music hall and was one of the prettiest of the many social functions held under the auspices of this, the leading Catholic society of the city. It was a party that one could watch for hours without tiring, as was evinced by the large number who from preference watched the gay scene being enacted upon the floor from the balcony, rather than to participate more actively in the festivities of the occasion.

The music was delightful and the decorations about the platform were very beautiful, consisting of such fragrant spring flowers as hyacinth, narcissus and tulips, with large pots of ferns and palms as a back ground. These were under the direction of Deringer and he did his work well.

Cuff's orchestra furnished the musical accompaniment, and from 8 to 9 o'clock rendered a pleasing program which included the following numbers:

March—"Venture"	Lampe
Concert Waltz—"Chinese Lanterns"	Strauss
Overture—"Northern Lights"	Schmidt
Cornet Solo—Selected	W. M. Smith
Intermezzo "Golden Arrow"	Remick
March—"Blaze of Glory"	Holzman

Meanwhile the guests of the evening were being carefully looked after by a large and efficient reception committee headed by His Honor Mayor Shea and Past Grand Knight Edward J. Murphy.

It was but a few minutes after 9 o'clock when the signal was given to form for the grand march which was to open the ball. The march was an unusually pretty affair and was participated in by upwards of sixty couples. It was led by Grand Night, Lawrence W. Lyons, who was accompanied by his sister, Miss Mary Lyons, who wore a handsome gown of pale green silk. Following closely were His Honor Mayor Shea and his niece Miss Rita Lyons, Floor Director Charles J. McGilvray and sister Miss Annie W. McGilvray, ex-Councilman Michael T. Walsh and Miss Lizzie Carroll, George W. Berry and Miss Margaret Londergan, Clarence Fouche and Miss Anate Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C Hearn, and Councilman William A Carey and Miss Nellie Coughlin.

These formed the first eight couples and as they came down the centre of the hall sixteen front, with almost perfect alignment there was a spontaneous outburst of applause from the spectators in the balcony. Leo J. McMaster was the director of the march and he stood at the head of the hall so that there was no mixup. On either side stood two pages dressed in Continental costume. These pages carried baskets on their arms from which dance programs were handed the dancers. The two pages were Master Charles F. Williams and Master Henry Ford.

General dancing followed until near midnight, when there was a brief intermission during which refreshments were served in the annex. At this time there was an innovation in the way of a brief musical program. This included two selections "Blue Danube" and "The Rosary" by a quartette composed of Miss Helen Galvin, Miss Angela McCarthy, Dr. Daniel B. Reardon and D. J. Seward McCurdy. There were also two vocal solos by Joseph Morissette and Edward J. Sullivan.

General dancing was in order again until the early morning hours when special cars were found in waiting for all sections of the city.

Those in general charge of the ball which was most successful in every way were:

Floor Marshal—Lawrence W. Lyons; Floor Director, Charles J. McGilvary; Assistant Floor Directors, Richard A. Cole and George W. Berry.

Aids—William A. Carey, Michael T. Walsh, John Heffernan, Daniel Donovan, John J. King, John A. Duggan, Dr. Daniel B. Reardon, Henry McGee, Dennis Crowley, John H. Heaney, William H. BLUE HILL ROADWAYS

Bill to Limit Commission Strongly Opposed

Several hearings on Metropolitan affairs were given at the State House on Monday by the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs. Representative Thomas took a prominent part during the consideration of the bill providing for a Metropolitan council composed of the Mayors and Selectmen. He asked Mayor Fitzgerald some pointed questions.

Under Bill 503 for the preservation of the Blue Hill reservation in its natural form, Representative Carr spoke at length in favor of his bill. He is reported by the Transcript as follows:

The bill would not have been filed if there had not been a ruthless cutting of trees in the park. Those who had done it were no doubt actuated by the best of motives, but this work should be done by an experienced forester or landscape architect. If the work of the Metropolitan Park Commission keeps on, it will make a park of the reservation. If people want this, they can find it in Franklin Park. If the continued making of paths goes on, the reservation will be like an English gentleman's country estate. Mr. Carr had been over the park with Mr. Kennard, an accomplished landscape architect, and both agreed that the more pleasing effects were secured where the park was left in a natural state.

"The answer that there is very little original old growth there is begging the question. The summits of the hills are covered with a scrub growth, left untouched. Seedling forests are coming up, also, to be preserved. But the coppices, or growth from the roots of old trees, are the bete noir of the commission. It may be that these should be cut out, but it should be done gradually, and the Commissioners have cut out large areas, leaving rocks and bare places exposed.

"I should be satisfied if no chopping were done except under the direction of a forester or experienced landscape architect. I suppose if an act were passed the Commission could live up to it, though it could be evaded. To my mind the beauty of the reservation is that it is crossed only by the old cart paths and footpaths. They keep one close to nature. Within the past year several paths have been cut, and how are you to get into nature when you are crossing streets all the time? The statement is made that these paths offer a barrier to fires. I do not believe it is necessary to turn a wild reservation into a park to prevent fires when the reservation is continually watched for fires. I can't help feeling that every man has a desire once in a while to get away from people and get back to nature. It may be that continued cutting will make the reservation or park beautiful in fifty years, but I think we should legislate for the living generation. I hope you will consider the views of people who like to see this preserved as well as those who wish it made a park.

Clarence B. Humphreys of Dorchester, a member of the club of seventeen members with a camp on the borders of the reservation, said he had tramped all over the reservation, and their experiences more naturally corresponded to those enjoyed in the Rangeleys than anywhere else. If outside of the Great Blue Hill much more is done in the way of widening paths and making new ones the reservation will be turned into a park.

Mayor Shea of Quincy said that city had given up about one-third of its area for this reservation. Mr. Whitney, who had charge of the cutting in the parks, he believed competent. The people of Quincy like the opportunity to go into the park and meet other people—even to drive there. "My observations have been that no attempts are being made to make this compare with Franklin Park. We want the matter left where it is and in present hands." Incidentally Mayor Shea called down the committee for not advertising the hearing in the local papers.

Representative Wolcott of Milton said when the reservation was established he did not like the idea, but he had become converted to the idea. He thought the Metropolitan Park Commissioners were handling the matter properly." Many of the cuttings to which Representative Carr objects have been made to eliminate gypsy moths. The old primeval growth has not existed for many years, and the third growth has developed sprouts from the trees, making a poor growth. This is not a matter for statute. Many of the visitors to the reservation are not familiar with it, and the paths should be made easier than at present to serve the greatest good of the public."

E. R. Stone of the Quincy Board of Trade aproved the work being done by the Metropolitan Park Commissioners. In a few years, he belived, the park will be much improved.

Nathaniel T. Kidder said "This tract is too near the cities to get conditions approximating those of the wild woods. One important point is policing. It is extremely easy for one to lose one's self in the park today. I am told that the rattlesnakes are more common there than frequently, but I think that while I have only seen three rattlesnakes in the park it ought to be cleaned up enough to prevent one from stepping on rattlesnakes. Then there are certain spaces where particular trees grow, and cutting will make these distinctive in chaacter."

George F. Elcock of West Quincy, opposed the bill. He said 500,000 little pine trees had been planted and this showed the good judgment of the Commission. He had been in the park forty years, and while he could get anywhere he wanted roads to allow infirm people to ride through the park. The roads also serve as fire insurance.

George Rogers of the Metropolitan Park Commission was asked by Senator Parker if he had anything to say. He simply stated that not enough cutting is being done, and that what is done is under the direction of experienced foresters. Professor Fisher of Technology had advised as to cutting, being a forester.

MUSICAL LECTURE

History of Famous Old Hymns with New Interpretation

In the future, when the audience at the parish house of Christ church Monday evening, hear the good old hymns sung, they will appreciate and enjoy them more fully. For Miss Rosabelle Temple in a delightful musical lecture told how several came to be written, and also sang them with feeling and expression. She was assisted at times by Carleton Beal of Braintree and often asked the audience to sing with her hymns like "Jesus lover of my Soul," "Abide with Me," "Onward Christian soldiers," and "Now the day is over."

She maintained the singing church is the triumphant church, and had a word to those who play hymns, and those who sing hymns.

The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Kings Daughters in aid of the Pond Home for aged people. The platform was attractive with its homelike appearance, piano, lamp, candelabrum and other furnishings. The program opened with piano solo by Miss Freda Gore, vocal solo by Carleton Beal, and violin solo by Arthur Hanson, all much appreciated.

OFF FOR THE WEST.

Over sixty parishioners besides many other friends were at the South station, Monday afternoon, to bid Rev. Albert Edwin Clattenburg, Mrs. Clattenburg and son Albert good bye and a wish for a safe journey and success in their new home in North Dakota. John L. Hamilton in behalf of the Men's club presented Mrs. Clattenburg with a five pound box of candy and said he hoped it would help her to carry away "sweet" remembrances of Wollaston. Miss Ruth W. Bean of Atlantic street, who accompanies them to be their guest, was surrounded by a bevy of young ladies to wish her a safe return to them in October.

ST. JEAN SOCIETY

Hold Grand Annual Ball at St. Mary's Hall

The eighteenth annual concert and dance of Society St. Jean Baptiste was held Monday evening at St. Mary's hall West Quincy, and as usual was well attended, nearly seventy-five couples participating in the grand march. From 8 till 9 o'clock Maxim's orchestra gave a pleasing concert. The ball opened with a waltz and the order was made up of both the modern and square dances so that those who did not desire to participate in the mazy waltz or two step could enter the quadrilles.

At midnight there was a brief intermission during which refreshments were served in the lower hall.

Archille J. Roger was the directeur de dance and Ernest Rogers assistant. They were assisted by the following aids: Alphonse LeClaire, Velere Lemieux, Napoleon Laurandeau and Wilfred A. Rogers.

The ball closed at 2 A. M. with a waltz dedicated to Will Anderson.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

The time for the apportionment of sewer assessments expires April 1, 1910, a month earlier than ever before. This was made necessary by the change in the State law which fixes the above date as the legal time for tax assessments. The bills for sewer assessments were sent out one month earlier than usual, so that people have had three months in which to make a request for apportionment, if so desired.

TODAY'S COURT.

Williams Lyons and William McGaughey were arraigned for drunkenness at Randolph. Cases continued on probation until July 1.

Paola Phipps was arraigned for assault on L. Rullo at Quincy and was put under $100 bonds to keep the peace for two months.

Furniture Faking
Claiming To Sell At Wholesale
A lady came into our store last week after visiting one of the fake wholesale furniture stores in Boston and made a comparison of prices. This furniture faking consists of claiming to sell at wholesale and marking goods at a high price offering a third off. The agent who sends customers to the gold brick district usually gets a ten per cent commission. The whole thing is worked in a confidential manner just as every confidence game must be worked.
On a bill of goods amounting to about $400 this lady found she could save at least 20 per cent in buying her goods from us and she was delighted to leave her order here. We mention this instance merely to show just how some people are misled by an apparant discount and for the moment lose sight of real values, while we here are selling furniture at prices that are fair to pay.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It's just the way with Spring—she keeps on trying until she succeeds.

T. R. wants no triumphal tour. How can he help it? Every step he takes is a triumphal tour.

The Republican party can better afford to bury the hatchet now than bury itself later.

"Jimmie Garfield," comments Mr. James B. Nevin. "testifies as directly and effectively as he serves a tennis ball." James frequently "cuts" too.

Of course, the price of meat is governed by the supply. It is on this account the trust endeavors to regulate the supply.

Mayor Gaynor says he is not the engineer that is running the political machine. We should say not. Gaynor is attending strictly to the firing.

Seems as if it were about time for Senator Aldrich to drop in at the White House again and assure the President that he is pushing through that legislative program as rapidly as possible.

The Savannah News is needlessly alarmed about the possibility of Matt Hensen being made a Rear Admiral. Even Commander Peary is being asked to retire to the extreme rear and be seated.

With the business men meeting tonight to plan for a "Merchants Week," and a committee meeting to arrange for a Fourth of July celebration, and a meeting this week of the committee at work for protected playgrounds, together with the many social gatherings, is evidence that Quincy is a wide-awake, progressive city. There is something doing all the time now in Quincy.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

Here is a significant item; that in order to show that spitting on the sidewalks is dangerous to health, an investigation has been made by Dr. John Robertson, medical health officer of Birmingham, England, which shows that 7 per cent of the "spits" collected in public places contained consumption germs; while on the other hand, the dust collected from the floors of the cottages of the Adirondack Cottage Sanitarium has been found to be free of tuberculosis germs, showing that a careful consumptive is not dangerous. The moral is plain, that people with the spitting habit, whether in sickness or in health, ought to abandon it at once.—New Bedford Standard.

One reverend gentleman bluntly downs the Rockefeller foundation as a wholly inadequate and fatally belated attempt at 'reparation' for the Rockefeller sins. To put a very modest valuation on Mr. Rockefeller's good side, it may be said that even a longing to make reparation would be no bad spiritual asset at that. Quite a few tough commercial sinners pass through life without thought of making any "reparation" at all. The tenacity with which they cling to their dollars to the bitter end is only equalled by their none too scrupulous avidity in accumulating them. To the best of our judgment the beneficent design of Mr. Rockefeller's great scheme deserves to be considered independently and in the light of its own merits and unquestionable high purpose. So seen, it marks a monumental event in the history of philanthropy. —Haverhill Gazette.

Somebody having found fault with the Lowell Courier-Citizen, because it devoted so much space to advertising, that excellent journal devotes half a column to the enlighenment of the kicker. It demonstrates by some recent examples that the advertising columns of a paper are read by men and women, and perhaps as generally as any other part of the paper. Our Lowell contemporary concludes with a novel proposition, one that has never before been put forth so clearly. "One of the most valuable functions performed by the modern newspaper it declares, "is the publishing accurate news of the merchants, and the daily prices that they are quoting upon their stock in trade; of the places of amusement and what they are offering to the public of the real estate that may be purchased at a bargain, of the people seeking work and the situations seeking workers. Really, we don't blame the public for reading the advertising columns!" Now that the advertisements have been officially, and very properly, declared to be news, we hope no readers of the Item will neglect to carefully peruse the advertising columns.—Lynn Item.

A LITTLE DUTCH BONNET.

The Dutch bonnet still finds favor in the juvenile showing of spring millinery, and the example illustrated is good looking in the extreme. The foundation is a leghorn flat of medium size, shaped into the semblance of the bonnets worn by the peasantry in the land of windmills, tulips and pretty Holland maidens. Very likely the Princess Julianna, the tiny girl who some day is destined to rule over Holland, will wear a bonnet this season somewhat on the order of the creation we are describing, for her royal mother has a decided penchant for the native costume of her subjects. But, to return to the Dutch bonnet under dissection, it is trimmed with narrow ruchings of pink chiffon, very full and tightly gathered, that follow the outline of the bonnet shape. Satin ribbon in a little deeper tone of pink and a bunch of rosebuds nestle at one side of this fascinating piece of millinery. The ties are of the satin ribbon.

EVANS IS EXONERATED

Severe In Discipline, but Will Retain Command of the Salem

Washington, March 29.—Admiral Dillingham, who was sent to Hampton Roads by the navy department to investigate the conditions aboard the scout cruiser Salem, has returned to Washington.

While the official report has not been delivered, it is understood he found that the men aboard the Salem were to a large extent to blame for the extraordinary number of court martials. Though it is possible that Captain Evans has been rather severe in his discipline, he will be retained in command of the ship.

AFTER ROBERTS' SEAT

Unitarian Pastor Resigns to Enter Race For Congressional Honors

Revere, Mass., March 29.—Rev. W. L. Meeker has resigned as pastor of the First Unitarian church to enter politics. He has announced his intention of opposing Congressman Roberts for re-election from the Seventh district. Meeker will go into the fight as an independent candidate, while Roberts will doubtless get the Republican nomination.

Mr. Meeker is a firm believer in public ownership of natural resources and public utilities. He is opposed to bossism and that will be one of the issues he will raise. He is a very effective speaker and he proposes to stump the entire district.

"The church stands primarily for righteousness and absolute honesty," says Meeker, "but under present conditions it is practically impossible for a man to live a perfectly honest life and hold his job in the business world."

FOSS FOR GOVERNOR

Indications That Vahey Will Be Sidetracked by New Congressman

Boston, March 29.—A very delicate situation has arisen as the result of the great victory won by Congressman-elect Eugene N. Foss in the Fourteenth congressional district.

Up to the time that he entered this contest Foss was content to be a candidate for lieutenant governor this fall on the ticket with James H. Vahey, and he discouraged all attempts to sidetrack the latter.

His victory, however, has brought him into great political prominence, and Chairman Macleod of the Democratic state committee has had no hesitancy in saying that he believes Foss would make a very strong candidate for governor. There is no question but that a Foss boom for governor is started.

250 MERRYMAKERS KILLED AT A FIRE

Victims Meet Death In Hungarian Hotel Ballroom

Mate-Szalka, Hungary, March 29.—Two hundred and fifty people were killed and many others injured at Oekoerito, when fire broke out in a hotel where a ball was being held.

A coach house connected with the hotel had been fitted up as a ballroom, and was crowded with several hundred guests when the fire started. It was first noticed when a woman's dress was seen to be ablaze, and a moment later the gowns of several other women were in flames.

A panic followed, and in a mad rush to the exits many persons fell and were trodden to death by others. To make matters worse the roof fell in before the hall could be cleared, and many injured ones and those who, because of the crush at the doors had been prevented from making their escape, were buried with the dead in the ruins.

3000 MILES BY WIRELESS

Navy Department Anticipates Achievement of Great Triumph

Washington, March 29.—The navy department expects to score one of the greatest triumphs in wireless telegraphy when the scout cruisers Birmingham and Salem try to communicate over a distance of 3000 miles with the new naval wireless station at Brant Rock, Mass.

The Birmingham will make the wireless experiments from points in the South Atlantic, off the African coast.

The Salem will take another position, about 1000 miles distant from the Birmingham, and the ships will try to communicate directly between themselves and with the Brant Rock station direct.

Boston, March 29.—Richard Olney, secretary of state under the late President Cleveland's administration, was operated upon at a hospital in Brookline yesterday, this being the second time since the beginning of the new year that he has undergone such an experience at this institution.

The report was given out last night that the operation was successful and Olney is resting comfortably. His ailment is said to be a recurrence of an abdominal trouble which made an operation on Jan. 14 necessary.

BOSTONIANS CRITICISED

Admiral Garcia Surprised at Their Indifference

"You Bostonians are an unenthusiastic people," said Admiral Manuel D. Garcia of the Argentine Republic, at the Touraine on Sunday to a Herald reporter.

"I do not say this for my own reception. I do not care what notices you take of me, but I speak on behalf of that very capable naval officer of yours, Admiral Francis T. Bowles.

"There is a man who has secured for a local company an order for two $11,000,000 battleships ,against the competition of all the great shipbuilding companies of the world, and what notice have you taken of it; what credit do you give to him?

"Think of the business this means for your community, and yet, you all take the achievement so calmly as if nothing had happened. Why, in New York and Philadelphia and Washington they are most enthusiastic over this achievement of Admiral Bowles.

"The navy department at Washington is elated at his work in securing the contract for these ships of my country. I have the highest esteem for Admiral Bowles, both as a man and as a naval architect and expert, and he is so regarded in Europe."

Admiral Garcia arrived at the Touraine Saturday night and left Monday for Pittsburg. He will remain in this country with a staff of about 30 Argentine naval officers till the battleships are completed.

He spoke with enthusiasm of the friendly relations existing between this country and Argentine, and said that, while the principal reason for awarding the contract for the battleships to this country was due to the skilful efforts of Admiral Bowles a feeling of friendship, patriotism, kinship with the United States was an important reason.

He said that he thought that our tariff was very fair in his country, and while freer trade would open a bigger market here for agricultural goods, she still enjoyed a tremendous export trade with Europe and particularly with England ,being able to compete strongly with England's colonies.

"My country does not intend to compete with the other naval powers for prowess on the sea, but is merely building the ships for defense, and is choosing this type ,the Dreadnought, because other countries are choosing that type, he said.

"Argentine is now getting the excess emigration from Europe. It is a truly wonderful country. Its possibilities of industrial and of commercial development are tremendous. Our mineral resources are almost untouched. In the south there are great oil fields. In the northwest are great timber lands. Natural products offer possibilities for the prosperity of the country for many years."

CANNON THE MAN AND THE SPEAKER

Venerable Legislator Against Whom the Insurgents of the House of Representatives Have Won a Memorable Fight. ::

Political Warhorse of Danville, Ill., Who Danced a Jig at Seventy-three to Show He Was Still In the Ring. :: :: ::

By ROBERTUS LOVE.

THE ides of March this year will be memorable in American political history by reason of the sensational climax of the "insurgent" fight against the prevailing system of rules under which the national house of representatives does business. Incidentally the fight had become a personal one on the part of the insurgents, twenty-five or thirty Republican members, against Joseph Gurney Cannon of Danville, Ill., the present speaker. But in a larger sense it was a struggle altogether impersonal to the end that the house may be enabled to live, move and have its being, without being held firmly between the thumb and forefinger of any man who happens, by grace of the votes of his fellows, to sit in the big chair.

The insurgents, who come from north, east and west, stoutly and strenuously aver and asseverate that under the present house rules there is only one real representative in congress—to wit, Speaker Cannon—who by reason of the power conferred upon him by these rules becomes in effect the whole house the moment he picks up the gavel.

The speaker, say these insurgent members of his party, is enabled under the rules to block legislation, kill any bill at will and prevent any other member from doing anything to represent his constituency beyond occupying his seat and uttering protests.

Man Who Leads the Fight.

In the limelight as chief active insurgent just now is George William Norris of McCook, Neb., who came to the house just about the time, seven years ago, when Uncle Joe first became speaker. Representative Norris has been insurging more or less all along, and recently his insurgency has become most pronounced.

It was the resolution introduced by Mr. Norris looking toward the elimination of the speaker's alleged czarship that precipitated the fight which has made the "big noise" emanating from the house chamber heard from Maine to Mexico and from Seattle to the Florida keys. Briefly the Norris resolution called for the raising of the rules committee of the house from five to fifteen members, to be elected by vote of the house instead of being appointed by the speaker, as heretofore, and the insurgents insist that the speaker shall not be, as heretofore, a member of the rules committee, and that the committee itself shall elect its chairman.

As a concession to the Republican regulars the insurgents agreed to the amending of the resolution by cutting down the proposed new rules committee to ten members, but no consideration could induce them to consent to leave the speaker on the committee. As thus amended the house passed this Norris resolution March 19 by a vote of 193 to 153, a clear majority of forty against the regulars, several Republicans not regarded as true insurgents voting for the resolution. On a motion to declare the speakership vacant, immediately following the defeat of the regulars on the rules proposition, Speaker Cannon retains his chair by a majority of thirty-six, only eight of the insurgents voting with the Democrats to oust him.

Such, in brief, is the genesis and final development of the internecine "scrap" which kept the house in session for twenty-eight hours without a recess, caused the rounding up of absent members by deputy sergeants-at-arms and evoked a spluttering of parliamentary palaver which narrowly missed being an explosion.

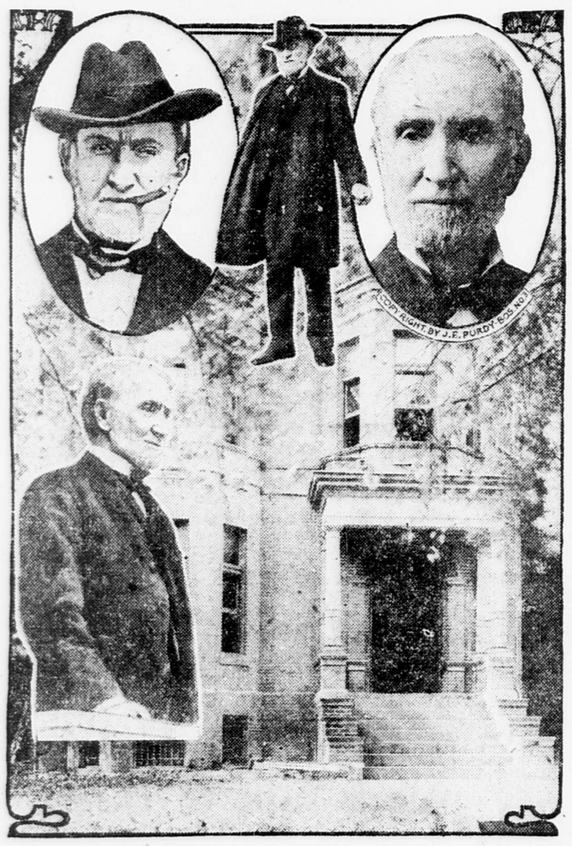
Representative Norris is still under fifty, but the man against whom he leads the insurgents to battle will be seventy-four years old on the 7th of May. There is another nickname than Uncle Joe for Mr. Cannon. He has been called the "Iron Duke." Whether this is applied to him because of his iron rule in the house or because of his iron physical constitution is not material. It is interesting, however in this connection to cite an episode that took place immediately after the house declared a recess following the all day and all night sitting.

Speaker Cannon retired to his room in the capitol, apparently almost exhausted. The newspaper men asked him for a statement. He said:

"Gentlemen, this house of ours has talked about 175,000 words since the clock struck noon yesterday, mostly about me; but, like the mummy of old Rameses, I haven't got a word to say. But I can dance a little step for you to show you that they haven't got the old man down yet."

Cannon Dances a Jig.

Whereupon this spry person of seventy-three years, ten months and a dozen days proceeded to dance a lively jig in the middle of the room while Congressman Dwight patted "Juba."



JOSEPH G. CANNON IN CHARACTERISTIC POSES AND HIS RESIDENCE IN WASHINGTON.

The insurgents learned long ago, however, that Cannon is a mighty hard cat to kill.

This "Juba" jig, be it remembered, was performed by the venerable target of an almost majority of Democrats combined with Republican insurgents, a combination which promised every minute to reduce the speaker's authority by about ninety-nine-hundredths and end a fifteen year fight for the revision of the rules. The jig dancer was right on the brink of losing his premier place as a sort of prime minister under the president and of being humiliated personally in the bargain, yet he appeared to be as lively and fit as when some months ago he he sparred with "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien, the pugilist, in an exhibition bout. Fancy the Hon. James William Lowther, speaker of the British house of commons, doing a stunt like that! Well, this is a democratic country.

It is said by Speaker Cannon's friends that he is not afraid of anything in the United States unless it be his daughter, who some years ago gave her father some vigorous and effective curtain lectures because he insisted on wearing a twelve dollar suit of clothes.

Cannon an All Round Defier.

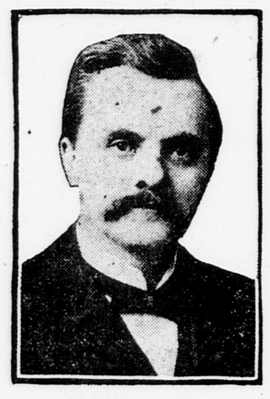
Joseph Gurney Cannon of Danville defies anything and everything when he feels like defying. He makes no secret of the fact that he plays poker when he has time and opportunity to get into a game, that he takes a drink of spirits when he feels that his spirits need refreshment, that he—well, everybody knows that he smokes most of the time when he is awake and that he swears, sometimes in the course of public speeches. Mr. Cannon is a survival of the old time country politician days when the cuspidor was the chief ornament in public places and the pants pocket plug was more popular than the plug hat. There are those, it may be interpolated here, who accuse Mr. Cannon of affecting these more or less homespun vices just to popularize himself as a man of the people, though his friends know he does as he pleases just because it pleases him to do so.

Last March, when Champ Clark of Missouri, the defeated Democratic candidate for the speakership, escorted Mr. Cannon to the chair immediately after his re-election thereto, the Missourian called the house to order and said:

"I present to you the second man in the history of the United States who has been elected speaker of the house for four consecutive terms."

Clark's Prophecy Fulfilled.

Later that same day, during an outbreak over rules revision, Mr. Clark, who has been limelighted as the man whom the Democrats and the insurgents might elect to the speakership in case Uncle Joe was defeated in his rules stand and resigned to avoid the humiliation of elimination from the committee, arose in the house and uttered these near-prophetic words:



GEORGE W. NORRIS.

"This is one of the greatest days the house has seen in a quarter of a century. Whether you Republicans beat us or we beat you by a few votes, the jig is up with the house machine. For fourteen years there has been an ever present demand for revision of the rules. Six times I have seen the motion made and every Democrat line up and vote against it. The day is not far distant when the sentiment, so insistent outside of the house, for revision of the rules will be overwhelming in the house. * * * I admire the insurgents for the courage they have shown in joining with us."

Now, one year and a few days later, Mr. Clark's prophecy is fulfilled in a way that sends cold shivers down the backs of many regular Republican members.

It is said that Speaker Cannon's cigar is the barometer of his feelings. If he wears the cigar uptilted he is feeling that the world, or, at any rate, the United States, is safely stowed away in his vest pocket for future or present reference; if the smoke roll extends out at right angles from his face he feels just so-so and is not altogether certain that he holds a lead pipe cinch on contemporaneous affairs, and if the cigar points downward he is considerably down in the mouth.

The United States is a great nation, all of us must admit, and therefore we must admit that there must be a side to Mr. Cannon which is distinctly serious and dignified, otherwise this Illinoisan could not have retained his vital grasp upon public affairs. He has served thirty-five years in congress. He was elected first in 1873 and has been re-elected every two years since, with the single exception of 1891, when a Democrat caused his cigar to take a downward tilt. Since 1893 his return to the house every time a new congress is elected has been a foregone conclusion, though in recent years a national fight against Cannonism has been waged, with the object of putting him out of the running for the speakership by electing him to stay in Danville and look after his considerable banking interests, for Uncle Joe, despite his farmer-like appearance, is a measurably wealthy banker.

Cannon Essentially a Politician.

His wide knowledge and deep understanding of public questions cannot be disputed. On the other hand, it cannot be disputed that he is essentially a politician rather than a statesman. His stanchest adherents never hold that he will go down to history as the leader in any great progressive or reformative movement, but his dearest enemies admit that as a politician he will occupy one of the niches where the spot lights shine most brightly.

Another thing is sure—the Cannon anecdote will vie with the Lincoln anecdote for years to come, wherever Mr. Cannon may be remembered. Already there are enough Cannon anecdotes to fill volumes. Here is one, which may be apochryphal.

After a night at poker with a company of congenial spirits, Congressman Cannon spent the next evening at a prayer meeting. He fell asleep and snored loudly. The preacher in charge of the services asked in a loud voice:

"Will Brother Cannon lead us in prayer?"

Mr. Cannon awoke, rubbed his eyes, and replied:

"'Tain't my lead; I dealt last."

Insurgents Norris, Victor Murdock, Lenroot, Cooper, Fowler and the rest of the unterrified twenty-nine who stand with the Democratic minority against the rules reign seem to have the notion firmly fixed in their heads that it is their lead now, and they have also cut the deck.

ONCE MORE

We wish to further call your attention to the change in our business system, for without doubt it will be one of the most important changes that will take place in Quincy this year. Our new price lists will soon be ready and we have arranged them so that any one can easily see the difference between paying cash and charging prices. Now this change that we propose to make only proves that Johnson Bros. have taken another step onward in the progress of better conditions for Quincy.

The close buyer with large means, the close buyer with small means, will find it is to their advantage to trade at home and where can you find purer or better goods than at Johnson Bros., and the prices are surely going down. We think a community should all stand together and render all the assistance they can to each other. This is one of the methods we take. By lowering the prices of our goods and therefore doing our little mite toward lightening the burden of living expenses for the people of Quincy. We shall start the Cash System, Monday, April 4th, this being the first Monday in April. After that date, there will positively be no credit extended to any person, for with such low prices to be placed on our goods, every purchase must be made for cash: and highest quality and lowest prices will rule at Johnson Bros. after said date.

Respectfully yours,

JOHNSON BROS.' MARKET

MEASURES NOT ENDANGERED

Presidential Bills Will Be Actively Pushed In Congress

ROAD IS TO BE SMOOTHED

Taft Will Ask Ohio Friends to Call Caucus of House Republicans—Work on Railroad Bill Practically Complete, but Needs Whipping Into Shape—Test of Influence Before Postal Bank Bill Can Pass

Washington, March 29.—A caucus of the Republicans of the house is to be called for next week to arrange the program of putting through that body the administration measures now pending in Congress. This was agreed upon at the White House. President Taft, who wants something done as early as possible, will request the Ohio Republicans in the house to take the steps to bring about a caucus, to which, it is thought, there will be no objection, sentiment apparently favoring such a meeting.

The question of a caucus was taken up when Representatives Townsend and Fish conferred with the president about the legislative situation. Both favor a caucus, and suggested to the president that this was about the speediest way to secure action in a methodical manner. The same suggestion was made to the president by members of the Ohio delegation in the house. The president thought the idea a good one, and will ask his Ohio friends to see to the calling of the gathering.

President Taft showed particular solicitude about the interstate commerce railroad bill and the postal saving bank bill. He was told that none of his important measures before congress was in danger, but that there had been more or less unavoidable delay in getting them before the house. By getting together in caucus the Republicans will be able to map out a program that will be comparatively easy to follow.

Mr. Townsend, who has been in charge of the administration railroad bill in the house, said that his committee had agreed upon the bill, and it was only necessary to whip it into a detailed shape and report it.

To his visitors the president reiterated the list of bills which he believes congress should pass, if nothing else of broad importance is done this session. These are the railroad, postal bank, conservation and anti-injunction bills. The railroad bill is in the senate unamended, but the majority are willing to accept a list of about half a dozen amendments which are being prepared by Attorney General Wickersham. The house committee has completed its own bill after long hearings, and amended the president's draft, which went into the open senate unamended, to suit itself.

According to Representative Townsend, President Taft favors many of the changes in the railroad bill made by the house committee, his chief hesitancy being over the remodeling of the long and short haul clause.

Judging by the activity in the committee on postoffice and post roads, it may not be necessary for the house to drag the postal bank bill out of the committee by main force, although that point is not yet settled. Enough of the committee probably oppose the legislation on its merits to keep the bill bottled up, but they may finally declare for the bill as a matter of party expediency. The president, some congressmen complain, lays too much stress on the platform promise and not enough on the practical undesirability of making the government responsible for several hundred millions of the people's money with no corresponding safeguards.

Chairman Weeks yesterday appointed a sub-committee to consider the postal savings banks bill and report to the full committee April 15. The committee may not have the nerve to report that the bill ought not to pass, and let the whole question be fought out on the floor. The bill cannot pass the house if it fails to retain the money in the communities that deposited it, and it can hardly get by the committee or even the president if it does. The situation is of the "impossible" order, and promises to test the president's influence severely before it is settled.

The postoffice committee recognizes the force of the popular demand for a parcels post and announces a hearing April 25. The committee has twelve bills before it, ranging from experiments on a small scale with R. F. D. service to a complete parcels post system. Probably something will be recommended by the committee. The public demands for a parcels post is very imposing, but it does not always calculate on expense, and if a start is made it will be a modest one.

General reorganization of the postoffice department will be considered by a third sub-committee.

MUSICIAN IS SHOT IN DRESSING ROOM

Had Rejected a Stage Manager's Proffers of Love

Boston, March 29.—William J. Gilson, aged 29, stage manager at the Scenic Temple on Berkeley street, enraged because Miss Leola Haynes, aged 19, flute player at the theatre, would not return his love, shot her down last night in her dressing room just before the evening performance.

Two of the three revolver bullets lodged in the girl's back. She is in a serious condition, although a hope is held out that she will live.

After the shooting Gilson tried to kill himself, but neither of the two bullets took effect. He was arrested.

Since the couple met, last August, Gilson has been paying assiduous court to the young musician. They became acquainted through their connection in the same theatre, but to all the man's advances the girl refused to respond, accepting him as a friend, but stating unequivocally to him that she didn't care for him and never could.

EXPLOSION ON CRUISER

Eight Men Killed and Others Hurt When Breechlock Blows Off

Manila, March 29.—Eight men were killed and several others slightly injured on the cruiser Charleston. During practice at sea off Olongapo the breechlock of a three-inch gun blew off and in its flight across the deck cut through a steel stanchion and mowed down the men in its path. Seven of the victims were instantly killed, while an eighth died as the Charleston was hurrying to Cavite.

The cause of the explosion is not known. Read Admiral Hubbard, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet, has ordered an investigation. The bodies of the victims will be buried at Cavite.

SLAYERS ARE SENTENCED

Life Imprisonment For Mitchell and Twelve Years For Woman

New Haven, March 29.—Life imprisonment for Joe Mitchell and not less than twelve nor more than fifteen years for Sophie Kritchman, were the sentences imposed by Judge Williams, in the superior court, upon the accused, who were found guilty of the killing of Bronislow Kulvinskas.

Counsel for the woman made a plea for a very light sentence, saying that the young woman would not live out a long sentence, as she has shown signs of tuberculosis.

WOLTER SAYS HE IS INNOCENT

But Circumstantial Evidence Points Strongly Toward Him

KILLING OF RUTH WHEELER

Coroner Declares That She Was Stuffed Into Chimney and Set on Fire While Still Alive—Many Young Girls Had Associated With Accused Man—His Female Companion Gives Startling Testimony

New York, March 29.—Spurred on by the discovery that Ruth Wheeler, the stenographer victim of the sensational murder uncovered Saturday, was smothered and stuffed while unconscious into the fireplace of Albert Wolter's apartments and there burned to death, the authorities have continued the task of trying to develop the motive for the crime.

Coroner O'Hanlon declares Ruth was burned alive. After the autopsy he said that the discovery of a remnant of a square of linen over the right nostril of the girl and traces of soot in the nostril and lungs convinced him that she was still alive when, after being strangled by the cord about her neck, her body was set on fire by the murderer.

Hours of questioning have failed to shake young Wolter in his declaration that he had never seen the Wheeler girl, and knew nothing of the way in which she met her fate.

In his cell in the Tombs, where he is lodged on a charge of murder, he protests innocence, but steadfastly declines to explain the entry of Ruth Wheeler's name in his memorandum book or to account, to the satisfaction of the police, for his movements on the day when it is learned Miss Wheeler visited his rooms in answer to an advertisement for a stenographer, and was not seen again alive outside the East 75th street house in which Wolter lived.

A fresh trail in Wolter's case was was struck by the authorities in a story told them by a young woman who confessed to having known Wolter well. Her tale of the many young girls who, she said, had been associated with the prisoner, set the authorities to looking up the numerous girls whose names and addresses were found in Wolter's memorandum book to see if any of them are missing. The investigation is expected to reveal whether or not Wolter had any active connection with the "white slave" operations.

Under a merciless grilling Katie Miller, Wolter's companion, broke down and gave the police some startling additions to her testimony.

According to the report of the young woman's revelations to Captain Carey of the homicide bureau, she told of having returned to Wolter's apartment on the night Ruth Wheeler was first missed, and at 9 o'clock was sound asleep.

"About midnight," the report of her testimony continued, "I was awakened by a crash in the front room. I called out, 'Who's there?' and Albert answered from the front room saying, 'Part of the fireplace has fallen down and I'm fixing it. You stay in bed.'

"I went right back to sleep, but was awakened again about 2 o'clock by another sound as of something falling. Albert was down on his knees before the fireplace shovelling something up in his hands back into the grate. I said, 'Can't I help you?' He said roughly, 'Go back to bed and stay there or I'll choke you to death,' I went back to bed and stayed."

"They really fear she will go insane. You see, she found a diary he kept before he met and married her."

"Oh, I see! And the awful revelations—"

"Revelations, nothing! It was in cipher, and she couldn't read a word of it."

IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all the other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they may lead to diabetes or Bright's disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kidney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys. Residents of this vicinity are constantly testifying to permanent cures.

Richard Smith, South Central avenue, Wollaston, Mass. ,says: "I suffered from backache and kidney trouble for a long time. I had dull pains through the small of my back and on arising in the morning, I was so stiff and lame that I could hardly dress myself. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply and in a short time after beginning their use, I was relieved. After I had taken the contents of two boxes of this remedy, I was in good health and I have had no kidney trouble since. I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for this change for the better and I gladly recommend them."

STORY TOLD BY COLEMAN

It Displeases Government as Well as His Counsel

HIS STEALING OF $250,000

Bank Clerk's Evident Intention to Connect Faro Gang With Defalcation to Extent of $180,000 Results In His Being Summoned For Interview —Keliher Tired of Being Made the Goat For Others

Boston, March 29.—George W. Coleman and Wilson W. Lockhart, accompanied by their counsel, William A. Morse, called on Assistant United States District Attorney Garland yesterday and remained for over an hour.

In order to keep the meeting as secret as possible the conference was held in the private office of United States District Attorney French. It is understood that the letter which French sent to Coleman on Saturday following the public statement which Coleman made to the press and which was highly displeasing to the government, was responsible for the meeting yesterday.

Mr. French is in Washington, where he will take up the case with the attorney general and the comptroller of the treasury.

So far Lockhart has maintained absolute silence regarding his connection with the case. Coleman has made several statements and, although it is alleged they have varied in certain particulars, it is believed that he has told all he knows of consequence to the government. His evident intention to connect the faro gang with his defalcation, at least to the extent of $180,000 out of an estimated $250,000, has been barren of results so far as the United States district attorney has shown his hand.

Attorney Morse seems to take the same view of this part of the case, for after his conference with Garland he said that the public statement by Coleman connecting the faro gang with the case was to be regretted.

The Post says "Big Bill' Keliher believes that his side of what have been termed the fake faro stories will do much to change public opinion, which, he claims, has up to this time condemned him without a hearing.

Keliher has stood for Coleman making the best case he could without interfering, but the last interview, in which he believes he sought to unload his doings on the backs of others, has more than disturbed him.

According to the stories told by Keliher he did not seek Coleman to participate in the faro or any other game. He was besought by the bank embezzler to let him in.

Keliher has for two weeks been waiting calls from either the county or federal grand juries. He is reported as not dreading the issue. He is quoted as saying that he ventured his own money and won and lost. If someone else chose o risk as he did they must take the results as he has done.

He is tired of being made the goat for the doings of others. Coleman's money, he says, did not go wholly into faro. There were other outlets, and these outlets were of Coleman's own making.

Mrs. Bullen was formerly the wife of Harry Armstrong, a booking agent and actor. He is now playing at the Princess theatre. The two were divorced shortly after the young woman met Bullen.

DEMANDS GRANTED NEW HAVEN MEN

Boston and Albany Employes Are Not So Fortunate

New York, March 29.—From New Haven comes the announcement that the New Haven road has granted all the demands of its conductors, trainmen and yardmen, providing shortening of hours and liberal increase in wages.

The New York Central, which owns the Boston and Albany, however, was unable to come to an understanding with a committee of employes and a strike vote was ordered by the men. The employes demanded an increase of from 8 to 64 percent and the railroad refused to give more than from 8 to 25 percent.

In Cincinnati the board of arbitration arranged an agreement between the Big Four railroad and telegraphers.

In Cleveland a strike vote was ordered in the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad by the railway conductors and negotiations broken off with the company.

The accident was caused by Gallant's attempt to turn the machine from the car tracks in which he had been driving. The machine skidded and he lost all control.

DRAINAGE OF SWAMP LANDS

Scheme Advocated by B. F. Yoakum For the South.

WILL BE WORTH VAST SUMS.

Land Needed For Growing Population and to Halt Rising Cost of Living, Says Railroad Man—Declares Concerted Pressure on Congress Is Needed to Save Many Acres For Tillage.

B. F. Yoakum, chairman of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad company, urged upon the New Orleans board of trade the other day the need of concerted action in the south to secure the aid of the federal government in draining the 58,000,000 acres of swamp lands in the south. These lands under tillage, he said, would be worth hundreds of millions of dollars, and their products would be of the utmost importance in stemming the rising tide of the cost of living.

Mr. Yoakum said the United States could and would undertake the needed reclamation projects which private capital was ready to follow up if suitable pressure were brought to bear upon officials and southern representatives in Washington by the farmers and business men of their states. Without that pressure, he declared, little would be done. And he added significantly, referring to tendencies at the national capital:

"To drain the valley, to build new railroads, to develop the country and to enforce our regulative laws are more important than the enactment of new and experimental ones.

Of Value to the Whole Land.

"For almost a century," said Mr. Yoakum, "our government has looked with indifference at the rich, unused lands of the southern states. The low, rich lands of the south have now become a matter of importance to the whole country. First, the people need the food, cotton and other products which your lowlands will produce in abundance; second, these lands are needed for settlement by the American citizens who are now seeking homes in other countries. Sixty thousand people moved from the United States to Canada last year. They carried with them $1,000 each, or $60,000,000. Our people are leaving thickly settled districts where the prices of farm lands are high. This means that our own people are building up an empire belonging to a foreign nation at the expense of our own country.

"Your rich lands may be drained at a cost of $5 per acre located near the congested centers and will produce the kind of food that supplies the kitchens of the consuming masses. The government is interested in reclamation in the northwest, but the administration at Washington has become interested in the irrigation projects of the northwest because the people of the northwest became interested in the development of their country and urged their claims.

"A drainage bill permitting the drainage of southern lands was introduced by a western senator at the last session of congress. It was killed by a southern senator. There are 148 senators and representatives in congress from the southern states. By working together with one object in view they can accomplish much—in fact, they can get what they want if they will go after it.

Wealth From Drainage.

"The state of Louisiana has 10,000,000 acres that can be made into rich farms. For an investment of $10 to $15 an acre in drainage and clearing the increased wealth of Louisiana would be more than $600,000,000. It is conservative to estimate $30 an acre annually from crops, which would mean an annual increase of $300,000,000 in the products of Louisiana, or, to put it in another way, each dollar invested in drainage would pay $6 annually in products. This, in connection with the upbuilding of new towns, sugar mills, cotton mills, rice mills, railroads and other industries, shows the importance of starting this work under a broad and comprehensive plan with the aid and co-operation of the federal government. The government is waiting for you to say what you want.

"The government could afford to make the surveys and lay out the plans on a comprehensive scale; the government could afford to supply the main drainage channels for the surplus waters to make their way to the gulf. If it will undertake the surveys and provide the main channels for drainage, private capital will do the rest. For every 50 cents the government will expend private capital will spend $5 to push forward and complete the work of reclamation to make your state in land values and productiveness one of the richest of the nation.

"There are 76,000,000 acres of swamp lands in the United States, 58,000,000 of which are in the southern states—a greater acreage than the states of Tennessee and Kentucky. Let the senators and representatives of the southern states co-operate with the agricultural and business interests of the south and we will make farms faster than they ever were made in the history of the world. It must be inaugurated by the business and farming interests of the south through public sentiment and co-operation at Washington."

—By making Argentina's warships the best of their kind, American shipbuilders may still further spread their reputation as good battle-craft makers, and such a reputation may count in their country's favor, since it will help to show the world that we can build good ships as well as man them.—Christian Science Monitor.

Representative Langelier voted in favor and Representative Thomas against the White amendment of the Lobby bill defeated in the Legislature on Monday 81 to 118. The bill went to a third reading.

Senator Hultman is taking a prominent part in opposition to the movement which would exempt the bonds of the Boston Railroad Holding Company from taxation. He holds it would be unconstitutional.

Bethany circle is giving an informal reception this evening at the home of their president, Mrs. John F. Welch, for the pastor of the church, Dr. Edwin N. Hardy and Mrs. Hardy, to which not only parishioners but friends will be welcome.

A missionary tea is to be held at the home of Mrs. E. W. Sheppard, 58 Greenleaf street, on Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. George L. Badger will read a paper on "Spain and Austria." This is the annual meeting and all the ladies of Bethany church are cordially invited.

Again this week Quincy has to pay high on a temporary loan of $100,000 in anticipation of taxes. It was awarded to Loring, Tolman & Tupper at 3.87 per cent discount. The same day afflicted Framingham borrowed at 3.70 per cent discount, and that was high.

The Salvation Army are to hold a grand fair Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 7, 8 and 9, at their hall on Granite street. Tableaux and a coal mine will be daily features and there are other attractions. They solicit funds and articles to make the fair a success that they may carry on their great work.

FORE RIVER CHANNEL

Duty of Government to Straighten and Improve

The resolutions adopted by the City Council last week in favor of the Fore river appropriation read as follows:

WHEREAS:—A bill has been introduced in Congress to have the United States Government improve and straighten under the direction of the United States Engineer's Department, the channel of the Weymouth Fore river, and

WHEREAS:—The improvement of the Weymouth Fore River channel will bring to our city and adjoining territory large and lasting benefits and would enable the city to offer to the commerce of New England and the world, large water front for terminal of steamship lines and for other industrial purposes and would be of material advantage to our city in making it possible for the largest size ocean vessels to come to our shores in safety for trading and business purposes.

RESOLVED:—That the City Council heartily endorses the action taken to make the aforesaid improvement and urges upon the members of Congress from this Commonwealth and the United States Engineer's Department the necessity of supporting and voting for any bill making an appropriation for the same.

BRIEFS

Col. Edward Anderson of this city will deliver the Memorial day address at West Bridgewater.

The U. S. cruiser Des Moines, built at Quincy, was ordered Monday to proceed from Hampton Roads to Liberia to relieve the U. S. cruiser Birmingham, also built at Qiuncy.

H. Elmer Wetherbee of Maple street, Milton, was held up on Eliot street in that town on Saturday evening. He was assaulted and robbed and is confined to his home. There is no clew to the highwayman.

Mrs. Henry I. Hall gave a party at her home on Goffe street Monday in observance of her son Henry's birthday. It was an early evening party and the young people had a fine time. Dancing, games and a supper filled the hours full of pleasure.

The trustees of the Fore River and Hingham bridges met this morning in the office of Mayor Shea. The Fore River trustees had but little other than routine business. The trustees of the Hingham bridge however, had a vacancy to fill, caused by Gordon Willis of Weymouth not being as one of the Selectmen of that town. The position of secretary and treasurer of the Hingham bridge was given to Edward W. Hunt, of the Weymouth board of Selectmen.

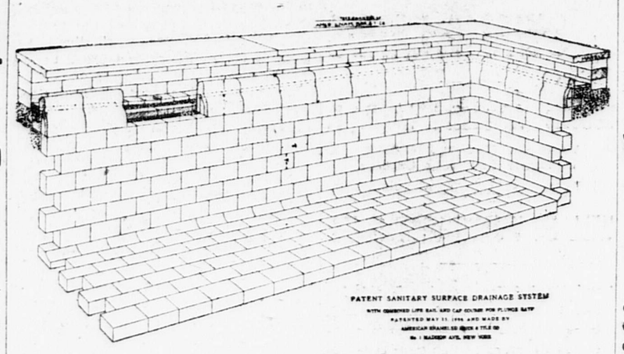
COME ON IN, THE WATER'S FINE.



The swimming pool at the Quincy Y. M. C. A. is now a reality, and a large number of the members are enjoying it. They have waited long and impatiently for its completion, but they feel now that they have something grand. That they can enjoy a swim at any time of the day, summer or winter, without being dependent on the tides or the temperature. "Come on in, the water's fine" is the boys salutation now. It is the intention to keep the temperature at 75 degrees all the time. The water is filtered daily, and is clear and sanitary.

The Seniors had a social on Monday evening, and a swim was a part of the program. A permanent spring board has been placed at the deep end of the pool, and there was an exhibition of fancy diving, also different strokes used in swimming. J. D. Uppling entertained with whistling solos and songs. Refreshments were served.

FORE RIVER BASEBALL

The Hull Draftsmen Ready to Meet All Departments

At a meeting of the Hull draftsmen at the Fore River on Monday, organization of the baseball team to represent the department was affected and plans drawn up for the coming season. B. G. Barnes was elected manager and his wide experience assures the team of being well handled. J. J. Floyd was chosen captain and should make a capable leader.

The draftsmen will place a faster team than ever in the field this year and have a wealth of veteran material from which to select. Several old college and high school players are in the line-up and some classy ball is looked for in the inter-department series.

The Electric Boat and Government draftsmen will try conclusions, but the big game of the schedule is with their time-honored rivals, the Engineers.

When the season starts, Captain Floyd will be found in his old position behind the bat, while Jordan, the former guard college star, will occupy the pitcher's mound. Weston of Braintree High and Joe Ryan of Mechanic Arts High, both flingers of no mean ability, will also alternate on the slab. A. R. Kennedy, the old North Carolina State player, will strengthen the team at the initial sack, and Alstein, Nicholson and Grows, the University of Maine player, will fill out the infield. Ryan and Weston will do outfield work when not pitching. Among the other candidates for outfield and other positions are: Browning of Lehigh University; Hogan, Morrison, Sickler, Keaney, Percy of Drexel Institute; McBride of Boston "Tech", and Davis of Mechanic Arts High. Regular practice will now be in order and hard work the rule.

FARMS FOR SALE.

In accordance with an act of the Legislature of 1909 the State Board of Agriculture is preparing an attractive pamphlet on the agricultural resources of the State. The publication will be along different lines from the ordinary "abandoned farm catalogue." It will include a concise statement of the advantages which Massachusetts has to offer in farms and farming, with illustrations of the various specialties pursued. Descriptions of about 400 salable farms have been received at the office of the Board. If there are others the owners or administrators may have them advertised in the proposed publication by applying to J. Lewis Ellsworth, secretary State Board of Agriculture, 136 State House, Boston, for a description blank. There is no charge for the service.

MRS. CALEB CHASE.

Mrs. Salome Chase widow of Caleb Chase passed away on Saturday at her home on Beacon street, Brookline. She had been an invalid for many months and having no children missed the companionship of her devoted husband who died in 1908.

Like her husband, Mrs. Chase gave liberally and often to charity, being especially interested in assisting worthy people in distress. She never sought publicity in her giving, preferring to do it privately.

Mrs. Chase was born in Thomaston, Maine and is a half sister of Mrs. James H. Stetson of this city, who has been much with her during her illness.

Funeral services were held at the Brookline home and interment was at Harwich on the Cape, Mr. Chase's native town and where they always kept the homestead as a summer home. Everywhere in the town are evidences of the interest of Mr. and Mrs. Chase. The Stetsons also have a summer place there.

AFTERNOON FIRE.

The alarm from Box 445 at 1.55 this afternoon was for a grass fire between two houses on Quarry street near the junction of Common street. The recall sounded a few minutes after the alarm.

BRIEFS

Commissioner Bainbridge asks proposals today for laying concrete sidewalks during 1910.

An adjourned hearing was held by the Railroad Commissioners Monday afternoon on the petition of residents of Houghs Neck for improved street car service.

Donald MacLeod, one of the oldest residents of Quincy, died Monday at the home of his son at 29 Brooks avenue, South Quincy. Mr. MacLeod was 93 years of age and leaves several children. The body was taken today to Clyde River, Prince Edwards Island, for burial.

"Get Thin!" Cries Paris.

"Get thin!" is the cry of Paris at this moment. In fact, a superfluous ounce of flesh is more odious to the Parisienne just now than the unexpected visit of a detested mother-in-law. The New York woman as well has succumbed to the fashion of the moment. And one marvels to see how amazingly slim even one's stoutest friends have become.

Now, the secret of this amazing thinness is really that one is suffering an optical illusion born of the corsetiere's and dressmaker's skill, and thin looking people are not really thin after all. These wonderful artists have learned how to dispose of an overplentiful supply of too apparent flesh and bestow upon it becoming and graceful lines and curves. Dieting also plays its part, and more than one woman who pines for long and slender lines has been heard moaning, "I haven't had a square meal this winter."

Englishwomen are devoting themselves to the fascinations of the jumping rope, and skipping is a fad just how at English country homes and week end parties.

One of the main factors in the acquiring of flesh is the lack of exercise, women indulging in indolence and the luxury of riding where a good brisk walk would be the savior of health, temper and figure. Fresh air is the best of all tonics, and a long walk in a pleasant frame of mind can do much toward keeping one in good condition.

☞ If you read Kincaide & Co.'s ad. today you will see why trading at home is a good thing for you. In dealing with people you know you are sure of not only getting a good article at the right price, but the local dealer stands back of his furniture and will make good every time.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Y. M. C. A. Helpers Holding Conference in Quincy

An all-day conference of the Women's Auxiliaries to the Young Men's Christian associations of the fourth district, comprising the cities of Quincy, Brockton, Taunton and the towns of Middleboro and Abington, is being held today at the rooms of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. The morning session opened at 10 o'clock with Mrs. L. H. Hattie of North Abington presiding and Mrs. F. W. Crane of Quincy as secretary. About 35 delegates were present.

The session opened with a piano solo by Mrs. Charles Sampson and was followed by a praise service led by Mrs. J. D. Buckingham, and devotional exercises led by Mrs. V. E. Miller.

The greeting to the delegates was made by Mrs. H. W. Pinkham and Mrs. R. P. Keith of Brockton responded.

Mrs. Crane read the report of the last conference and then came the appointment of a nominating committee, who will report at the afternoon session. The roll call and reports from the secretaries of the several auxiliaries came at 10.45, the reports of the secretaries being exceedingly interesting. This was followed by a paper on "A Swarm of Bees" by Mrs. A. C. Lewis of Taunton, and a solo by Mrs. E. D. Gourd of Needham.

The morning session closed with three ten-minute papers as follows:—"Work for boys outside the building" by Mrs. E. G. Gay of Quincy; "Co-operation with church and civic organizations" by Mrs. N. G. Nickerson of Quincy; and "Work among the aliens" by Mrs. Wilson Marsh of Quincy.

From 12 until 1.30 there was a recess during which a lunch was served by the ladies of the Quincy auxiliary.

The afternoon session opened at 1.30, the program to include a piano solo by Mrs. J. F. Hunt; praise service led by Mrs. J. D. Buckingham; Bible reading by Mrs. George L. Badger; report of the nominating committee and election of officers; and the following papers:—"The stamp-saving society" by Mrs. L. O. Tillson of Middleboro and "The progress of county work" by Mrs. D. C. Drew, the county secretary. There were also solos by Mrs. E. D. Gourd. The closing service was held at 3.15 by Mrs. H. W. Pinkham of Quincy.

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES.

Graham bread and brown bread are both excellent for sandwich purposes, and raisin bread, "with lots of raisins in it," is a welcome change.

A teaspoonful of lemon juice in a cupful of tepid water will remove all stains from nails and skin and loosen the cuticle better than a sharp instrument.

Round jelly cake pans make excellent pot covers by turning upside down and placing in center a small wooden knob, obtainable of any grocer. Two can be bought for 5 cents.

New linen for working upon should be rubbed over with a dry cake of soap. This will render the fabric soft, so that drawing threads of embroidery upon it will be much facilitated.

While it is advisable to pack a water bag flat, occasionally there is necessity for rolling it. If so, it is well to lay a piece of cloth or paper over the bag first; then there will be no possible danger of the sides of the bag sticking together.

Carrots will make delicious preserves. Take three-quarters of a pound of sugar to a pound of carrots and sufficient water to make a sirup and boil until the preserves are thick. A little ginger or lemon should be added to flavor.

To use cold halibut or other white fish remove the bones, flake it and arrange it in layers in breadcrumbs and seasoning in a buttered baking dish. Cover the top with buttered crumbs, turn in hot milk to moisten sufficiently, sprinkle grated cheese over and bake.

Restfulness of Massage.

Massage is restful not only to the body, but to the mind, and is to be recommended to very nervous women who have not acquired the art of relaxation. Expert masseuses will not give massage unless the patient promises to rest at least one hour after the treatment. So many muscles are brought into play that the bodily exercise gone through with is the equivalent of a walk of several miles, and physical fatigue is a natural result and rest an absolute requirement.

TWO BIG CELEBRATIONS PLANNED

Merchants' Week in May

4th of July Observance

BUSINESS MEN ALL ENTHUSIASTIC

To Entertain People of South Shore and Give Them Some Great Bargains.

Various Committees Appointed Last Evening.

That's the plan of the Quincy Retail Merchants' Association!

All the members are enthusiastic, and ready to W-O-R-K and C-R-O-W, and to go deep into their pockets to advertise QUINCY throughout the South Shore district.

At the meeting Tuesday evening it was voted to have five committees, and great plans will be made during the next seven weeks in preparation for the event. Watch the newspapers and keep posted, and do what you can to encourage the boom for Quincy.

It was a special meeting of the Merchants Association held at Union hall, and the members sat down to supper at 6.30.

President E. W. Sheppard presided at the business meeting. Reports were received from the committee on frieght facilities, and Quincy station conditions also relative to the sealing of weights and measures, the widening of Hancock street, and the lighting of City Square. Resolutions were adopted in favor of a government appropriation for the Fore River channel.

The greater part of the evening was devoted to "Merchants Week." The committee reported as follows:

"The committee appointed by The Quincy Retail Merchants' Association to arange for "Merchants' Week" recommend:

"That the date of commencement be May 23.

"That every merchant in the city enter into the spirit of a broad, liberal, well advertised "Quincy Merchants' Week."

"That a large Merchants' Week paper be published and distributed in the following suburban towns: Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Holbrook, Randolph and Milton.

"That an advertising expert be employed to attend to the make-up of the paper.

"That every merchant in the city co-operate with the Merchants' Association and offer to the buying public staple goods from their stocks at manufacturers' prices, thereby offering an inducement to the buying public to purchase goods to commemorate this Merchants' Week sale, at prices that will demonstrate to the inhabitants of Quincy and surrounding towns that low suburban rents enable us to beat Boston's bombastic claims.

"That the Street Railway Company be requested to co-operate with the merchants by liberal advertising on the cars.

"That a special card be gotten up by the advertising man to display in the store windows and public places throughout the city and adjoining towns.

"That the merchants throughout the city decorate and illuminate their places of business, make strong window displays with specially priced goods and offer such additional inducements, individually, as would attract public attention.

"That the Street Commissioner be requested to see that the streets are cleaned and specially well watered during the week."

Each and every gentlemen present was called upon individually to express himself relative to the feasibility of observing "Merchants Week" and everyone endorsed it, and was ready to work, to advertise, and contribute toward the expense. Many suggestions were offered which will be considered by the committees. When the vote was taken to see whether Merchants' Week should be observed, it was by roll call of members, and the vote of each member was recorded.

COMMITTEES.

It was voted that the following committees be appointed by the President:

Committee of five on Advertising.

Committee of three on Finance.

Committee of twelve (two from each ward) on Decorations.

Committee of three on sports and Entertainment.

Committee of three on Transportation Rates.

Voted that Executive Committee include the president and secretary of the Merchants Association, and the chairman of each of the above committees.

Adjourned at 10.20.

The Quincy Daily Ledger will issue an edition of 50 to 100 pages and distribute 25,000 papers in the South Shore towns.

Public Meeting For Protected Playgrounds

A meeting of the Quincy Playground Committee of One Hundred and of all citizens interested in playgrounds, is called for 8 o'clock tomorrow evening, in the Council Chamber of City Hall. The officers of this committee will be elected. Mr. Christian Lantz of Salem, the leader of the notable playground movement there, will give a brief address; there will be questions and an informal discussion, and such other business as may be appropriate.

On November 3, 1908, the voters of Quincy accepted, by the decisive majority of 3002 yes to 933 no, the so-called Playground Act, which provides that

"Every city and town in the Commonwealth having a population of more than ten thousand, accepting the provisions of this act shall, after the first day of July in the year 1910 provide and maintain at least one public playground conveniently located and of suitable size and equipment, for the recreation and physical education of the minors of such city or town, and at least one other playground for every additional twenty thousand of its population."

On January 3, 1910, His Honor, Mayor William T. Shea, said in his Inaugural Address:—"Our city should be liberal in providing public parks and playgrounds in the different wards for the use of its children. Chapter 513 of the Acts of 1908, having been accepted by the city, it will be necessary for us this year to lay out and properly equip one or more playgrounds of the character contemplated by that act. I recommend that action be taken on this matter without unnecessary delay."

During the summer of 1909 the Civic Betterment committee of the Quincy Women's Club in conjunction with the Y. M. C. A., maintained a supervised playground with good results on the lot in the rear of the Y. M. C. A. building. The committee of 100 has been appointed by their committee and a committee of the new Civic League of Quincy of which D. King is chairman. All interested in playgrounds are invited to the public meeting tomorrow evening.

TODAY'S COURT.

Patrick Dennehy was fined $10 and Elmer Chapman and Thomas J. Well and their cases continued until July 1, for drunkenness at Quincy.

James Toomey was fined $15 for exceeding the automobile speed limit on the Blue Hills parkway.

John J. Cotter was arraigned for non support at Milton. Also for contempt of court for not appearing on a summons. He was fined $10 for contempt and ordered to pay $12 a week for the support of his family.

LODGE ANNIVERSARY

Ladies L. O. L. Lodge Provide Enjoyable Entertainment

The Daughters of John Adams, Ladies L. O. L. lodge, celebrated their 16th anniversary Tuesday evening by an entertainment, apron and necktie party and social dance at Colonial hall, and a grand time it was. The hall was altogether too small to accommodate those who desired to attend, and it was not until dancing had been in progress some time that the party thinned out sufficient to make it comfortable.

The program of the entertainment was a varied one and was very enjoyable. It opened with a song, "Where the river Shannon flows" by Miss Cora Sherwood. This was followed by a sketch entitled "A man from Texas," the characters being impersonated by Miss Beatrice Budd, Miss Barbara Ross, Murdock McKinnon and Wilbur Winot.

There was an exhibition of fancy dancing by Miss Marion Bill, a reading by Miss G. McKinnon, the program closing with a dialogue by Miss Beatrice Budd and Miss Dora Eastman.

Then came the distribution of aprons and neckties. By these the gentlemen selected their partners for the grand march that was to open the dancing. William Wilson furnished the music and the march was led by Miss Beatrice Budd and Murdock McKinnon. The floor was in charge of Mrs. H. A. Sproul, with Mrs. Murdock McKinnon as assistant, and Mrs. Sadie McLean and Mrs. Annie McKenzie as aids.

Ice cream and cake were served during an intermission at 10.30.

The general committee in charge of the anniversary included Mrs. H. A. Sproul, Mrs. Sadie McLean, Miss Barbara Ross, Mrs. Murdock McKinnon, Mrs. Andrew Stewart, Mrs. Oscar Swanson, W. F. McCaulder and Murdock McKinnon.

DORCAS SOCIETY

Give a Supper and Entertainment at Universalist Church

At the Universalist church vestry on Tuesday evening a supper and entertainment was given under the auspices of the Dorcas society. The supper consisting of escalloped oysters ,potato salad, baked beans, fancy pies, pickles, rolls, coffee, etc., was served at 6.30 under the direction of Mrs. George E. Sprague, assisted by Mrs. George F. Spooner, Mrs. Robert G. Reed, Mrs. G. W. Wheeler, Mrs. W. F. Carman and Mrs. Lermond. Over 100 sat down to the tables and praise of the supper was heard on every side.

At 8 o'clock the following entertainment was announced. Mrs. T. Ray Blanchard of North Weymouth, violinist, accompanied by Herbert A. Hayden on the piano, rendered two delightful solos with skill and ease, which were listened to with much pleasure. Then followed the two act farce "A Rank Deception" given by the young people of the Quincy Point church, the following taking part: Miss Elizabeth Schouler, Mrs. Auwelda Smith Melville, Miss Viola Hayden and Messrs. Robert Mitchell, John Melville and Irving Hayden. The young people took their parts well and greatly pleased an appreciative audience. Between the acts Mrs. Blanchard rendered two more selections ,and was presented with a handsome bunch of pink tulips.

The committee having the entertainment in charge were: Mrs. George F. Spooner, Mrs. Thomas A. Addison and Mrs. George E. Sprague.

EIGHTY YEARS OLD.

Tuesday, the 29th of March was one of the balmiest of days in the life of Mrs. Sylvia H. Ramsdell of Billings street, Atlantic, who celebrated her eightieth birthday. Many of her relatives and friends called to extend their congratulations, and many more tangible remembrances of the occasion were received. She still retains her vigor and mental abilities to a marked degree and is simply eighty years young.

GRAND PARADE AND SPORTS

Something Planned for All Parts of the City on the Holiday.

Board of Trade to Take the Initiative.

A movement was started at a meeting held at the rooms of the Board of Trade on Tuesday evening to have a grand celebration in Quincy on the Fourth of July. This is boom year in Quincy, and all business men are working together with that end in view, so that a "whoop her up" celebration would be in keeping with the time.

The idea of a celebration started at a recent meeting of John A. Boyd Camp, Spanish War Veterans. Invitations were sent to a number of local citizens to meet at the rooms of the Board of Trade, to discuss the advisability of a celebration. While the meeting of the Merchants Association kept several from being present, quite a number accepted the invitation, and for an hour or more talked the matter over informally.

It was agreed by all present that one big celebration for the whole city would be a grand good thing, and George A. Wardwell who sent out the notices of the meeting reported that he had been given much encouragement from many busines men whom he had seen.

It was the general sentiment that the Board of Trade should take the initiative in the movement, and President Stone of the Board of Trade promised to bring the subject before the directors and the meeting of the board and promised his hearty co-operation to the plan.

The general outline was for the Board of Trade to send invitations to every society, club and organization of the city, inviting them to send one delegate, who should form a general committee. This committee would select an executive committee, and also appoint sub committees to look after every detail. The main question was the raising of the necessary funds. A plan for the celebration was mapped out, which it was estimated would cost from $1,200 to $1,500. It was believed that a large sum could be raised by subscription, and that the City Council should be asked for an appropriation. These matters however will be taken up when the general committee is called together.

The plan of the celebration as outlined by those present was for a grand parade of antiques, historical features and business firms in the morning, to start from Merrymount park at 9 o'clock, to proceed over a route of about three miles which should end at the playground at Quincy Point about 10 o'clock. The parade of course would be reviewed in City Square by the Mayor and other dignitaries, and cash or other prizes would be offered for the best features in the parade.

The idea of having the parade end at Quincy Point was because the playground had the only cinder track in the city, and that the parade should be followed by a series of sports. These would include a ten-mile cross country run, and other athletic events. It was thought that about ten events should be run off and that such prizes should be offered as would insure a large entry of good athletes.

The field sports would end at 1.30 and there would then be a lull until 2.30 or 3 o'clock at which hour there would be base ball games at West Quincy, South Quincy, Atlantic and Quincy Point, each for a purse of $25. At the same time there should be a grand out of door entertainment for the children at Merrymount park, which should include a grand balloon ascension.

In the evening there would be band concerts at Merymount park until dark, when there would be a grand display of fireworks so that the day might end in a blaze of glory.

This in brief is the plan as outlined by the gentlemen present at the meeting the carrying out of which would give the city such an awakening as it has not had for years.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

No tariff war with France? Fine! We are not even slightly mad with France ,anyway.

There is an x on Mr. Aldrich's door too; better look out, Nels., Cannon and you are in same boat.

Vice-President Sherman is to be congratulated on having a gavel that never gets red hot.

Well ,they have taken the ammunition out of our old Cannon, but it can still make a good deal of noise, when necessary.

These members who have been cherishing visions of an early adjournment of Congress may have to readjust their range-finders.

"Let me dominate the country and over-ride its laws and I will give millions of my ill-gotten gains to charity," is the motto of Rockefeller, correctly translated.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

With the advent of spring comes the cleaning up of the yards about our homes, both front and back. Naturally, those in front will be adorned and made attractive and pleasing to the eye. Why not devote equal attention to those in the rear? Much delight can be found in beautifying our back yards. At least they may be kept in good order. Beyond that there is pleasure to be had in the growing of flowers, which pay many times over for the labor bestowed upon them. There need be but little outlay of money if one is willing to put in a half hour's work now and then in digging, weeding and training of vines. A small plot of ground, properly tended, will reward the owner with a supply of fresh vegetables which will be far more palatable than those from the market. Some people enjoy taking their evening meal out of doors in the summertime, and what more charming spot for it could be imagined than where you will be surrounded by or may gaze upon the blossoms you yourself cultivated?

That you should make your back yard attractive to the view is a duty you owe to your neighbors, who must look upon it, possibly, day after day, and the fulfilment of this duty will, doubtless, be a cause of much gratification to them. Should they not be inclined to pursue a similar course on their own premises, the example you set before them cannot fail in having its effect. The mere raking up of old leaves or other refuse will often spread from one yard to another until a whole section has been cleared and freshed up for the new season. Then others get in line, and the outcome is approach to a spotless town. Now is the time to begin to beautify the back yards.—Christian Science Monitor.

PROFESSOR AGASSIZ DEAD

Became Famous as Leader In Scientific and Mining Interests

Boston, March 30.—A wireless message was received here saying that Alexander Agassiz, president of the Calumet and Hecla Mining company and one of those principally responsible for its developments, a generous benefactor of Harvard university, philanthropist, noted scientist and holder of honors from many great scientific bodies, died on the steamer Adriatic, due in New York today.

News of Professor Agassiz's death came as a great surprise and shock. So far as his intimates knew he was in the best of health..

Professor Agassiz was the son of the "Great Louis" Agassiz, the famous Harvard geologist, and followed in his father's footsteps. For many years he devoted his time to the Harvard department of comparative zoology, founded by his father, and did much exploration work that won him fame.

Professor Agassiz was a millionaire many times over, but never allowed that to interfere with his work as a scientist. He was president of the National Academy of Sciences. He was born in Switzerland seventy-four years ago.

REV. W. B. AYRES ORDAINED AND INSTALLED

Outlook for Park and Downs Church Are Now Very Encouraging.

May Soon Have a New and Larger Edifice.

In the Park and Downs Congregational church on Tuesday evening, Rev. William Bingham Ayers was formally ordained as a minister of the Congregational faith and as the pastor of the Park and Downs Congregational church.

In response to a call from the committee of the church an ecclesiastical council convened at 3.30, besides the delegates many members of the church being present. Among the prominent people attending the council were: Rev. Albert P. Fitch, D. D., president of Andover Theological Seminary; Rev. Asher Anderson, D D., secretary of the National Congregational Council; Rev. F. E. Emrich, D. D., secretary of the Massachusetts Home Mission society; Professor J W. Platner and Rev. John G. Taylor, both of Andover Theological Seminary; Rev. Perley B. Davis of West Roxbury; Rev. Edward Norton of Quincy, and Rev. Rufus B. Tobey of Wollaston.

Composing the council were pastors and delegates from churches in Dorchester, South Boston, Roxbury, Roslindale, Boston, West Roxbury, Jamaica Plain, Neponset, Hyde Park, Norwood, Dedham, Cambridge, Quincy, Atlantic and Wollaston.

The council was called to order, Rev. Dr. Anderson being elected as moderator, and Rev. G. Wolcott Brooks as scribe. After prayer by Dr. Anderson a roll call followed and a quorum was declared present.

Herbert Tucker clerk of the church read from the church records matters pertaining to the calling of Rev Ayers and the meeting of the council. He said that the congregations were increasing; the church was united and earnest; the members were taking hold loyally and all felt encouraged by the outlook. The remainder of the afternoon was taken up with a paper by the pastor-elect William Bingham Ayers. In it he described his Christian experience and his motives and doctrinal beliefs in entering his ministry.

Taking his text from 2d Samuel, 5: 18—"Deal gently with the young man," he stated that he would not essay to speak on any systematic theology, but rather of certain convictions he had received during his Christian experience. He took up his early life and gave his version of how man comes to God. Continuing with definitions of various essential features of religious life and practise, he concluded with the statement that he believed in conversion as a fact; but one that defies explanation.

Following the questioning of pastor-elect Ayers, by members of the council upon various subjects, the council went into private session. As a result it was unanimously voted that the credentials of the said Rev. Ayers were eminently satisfactory.

FINE SUPPER.

At 6 o'clock ministers and delegates adjourned to the vestry of the church where the following menu was served: Pressed beef, beef loaf, escalloped potatoes, green peas, egg and radish salad, jellies, pickles, cake, pies, rolls, tea and coffee.

Upwards of sixty, including divines and delegates were seated, the blesing being invoked by Rev. Perley B. Davis. The scene was an attractive one and the decorations and table appointments were in excellent taste. The fame of the ladies of the church as good cooks has gone abroad, but on Tuesday evening they outdid themselves. Those present mentally seconded Deacon Stone's hearty words of appreciation at the close of the repast.

Included in the supper committee were: Mrs. Reginald Shaw, chairman Mrs. W. A. Thompson, Mrs. A. H. McFadden, Mrs. F. W. Torrey, Mrs. H. A. Northrop, Miss Marion Brown, Mrs. C. N. Merrill, Mrs. C. L. Gilliatt, Mrs. L. M. Ewen, Mrs. H. L. Forsyth and Mrs. Frank E. Knowlton.

THE ORDINATION.

The service of ordination and installation opened in the evening at 7.30 with a piano prelude by Miss Henrietta Gram. Rev. John Wild of Medford delivered a most inspiring invocation.

Rev. Asher Anderson D. D., as moderator, brought the greetings of the council which he referred to as one of exceptional high level. The report of the scribe, Rev. G. Wolcott Brooks, contained an outline of the afternoon's proceedure and stated that credentials of the pastor-elect had been found satisfactory by a unanimous vote of the council. The comments, he said, both at the public meeting and the private session had been highly favorable to Rev. Mr. Ayres.

Scripture reading followed by Rev. T. W. Davison of the Atlantic Memorial church.

The sermon of the evening was delivered by Rev. Albert Parker Fitch, D. D., president of Andover Theological Seminary, from Matthew, 4th chapter: "Then was Jesus led up of the spirit into the wilderness to be tempted by the devil." Each one of us, said Dr. Fitch, may find a parallel of the temptation of Jesus in our own lives. It makes no difference whether it is an outward fiend or an inward desire. The outward existant evils may always be transformed into inward evil suggestion. Simultaneous with the recognition of power comes the question: To what end shall we devote it? To glory, dominion, self, service, sacrifice, God? Every day power is made the tool of vanities. Upon the question— "How are we using it?" hangs the fundamental question of life. Evil meets us face to face and upon the answer to that question hangs our success or failure. With a church facing a new minister nowhere is it easier for ambition to take the place of service. A church to succeed must live for the community. If a minister has become a great minister it is because he has met Christ's temptations in Christ's way.

The ordaining and installing prayer was delivered by Rev. F. E. Emrich, D. D. The group of four ministers—Rev. Emrich, Fitch, Brooks and Davison—with their hand extending the blessing to the kneeling pastor-elect in the centre, made it a most impressive ceremony.

Rev. Frederick B. Richards of the Phillips church, South Boston extended the right hand of fellowship. He spoke of the pleasant privilege he considered it to welcome a brother minister into the Congregational belief, and the pulpit of a Congregational church. He dwelt at length upon the ministry of reconciliation, which, he said, binds man to God and man to man.

THE WELCOME.

Rev. Edward A. Chase of the Wollaston Congregational church in a most humorous and well-turned speech delivered the address of welcome. The first word will be a personal one. Comparing the varied religious beliefs of his ancestors with those of Rev. Ayers, he said that on one side they had been of the Presbyterian faith but not liking the idea of infant damnation, had finally joined the Methodist. On his father's side his grandmother was of the Church of England, and then a Quakeress. As a result of these, his parents became Congregationalists in which church he was brought up. If at any time, said Mr. Chase, you feel like discussing matters just pull the latchstring of the parsonage on the hill and you will find me ready to talk things over.

Speaking of Wolaston geographically it lies between the sea and the hills. Its chief temptation is not Boston but the beach. Mr. Chase spoke of the young life of the community, and said there were many young homes the pastor might enter and be a formative influence. Wollaston is a community of young and middle aged men, as you would testify if you watched the evening trains from 5 to to 6.30. It is a splendid atmostphere for a man to live and do.

He asked Rev. Ayers to do two things, first, assert the place of the church. Never mind the building. A church is not a building but a body of people gathered together for the worship of God. In Wollaston you get what you ask for and no more. Do not asume the spirit of apology, but assert the dignity and vital place of the church in the community. No matter how much you love the children or visit the women of the parish challenge the men. Make them feel it is their duty to support the church. They are not all angels and not all perfect in Wollaston. Wollaston is a little paradise but the serpent is there. Be appreciative, said Rev. Chase. The people of Wollaston will follow you to death on the appreciative side, while they will scarcely follow a minister one minute on the depreciative.

CHARGE TO PEOPLE.

Rev. Edward Norton of Quincy, in his charge to the people, said that his first word would be that of congratulation. They had made their choice, and it had now been sanctioned by the council. He brought the warmest of congratulations. His second was a word regarding the pastor. Make him pastor in every sense of the word. Take him to your hearts. Make the pastoral relation sweet, tender, beautiful in fact, all it ought to be. One speaks of the power of the pastor to handle the people. I would like to bring before you the counterpart of this. It is the silent message coming from the pews that makes a pastor what he is. If the message be one of sympathy, the pastor will give the best in him. If it is the opposite the most fervent soul will be chilled and the most electric thought silenced. They say it takes a model pastor to make a model congregation, but I shall reverse this and say that it takes a model congregation to make a model pastor.

CHARGE TO PASTOR.

Rev. G. Wolcott Brooks, in his charge to the pastor, mentioned some conditions which make toward success in the ministry. First, have a manly ministry. You must be a man. There are many things to sap manhood out of a ministers life. If you are not on your guard by the time you are an old clergyman, you will be a regular old sissy. Combine sweetness and strength. There is no sweetness like that of strength. The Greatest Minister had both the lamb and the lion in him. Make it a scholarly ministry. You must store your mind if you would feed the congregation. Have an affectionate ministry. Interest yourself in the children. Be tender in times of affliction. Have an evangelical ministry. To save persons is to make persons Christlike. As a last charge, I advise exhort and entreat you to have a Christianlike ministry. If you live near Christ all other things will be added. Make the spirit of the church a power in the community, and money will flow in and a new church be erected.

The evening closed with a benediction by the new pastor, Rev. William Bingham Ayers.

During the services "As it began to dawn" by Vincent and "O day of Christ" by Bartlett were finely rendered by the large chorus choir of the church with Mrs. Clyde Saunders and Mr. Hey as soloists respectively.

The committee of the church to arrange for the ordination and installation consisted of Artemus W. Dingwell, Mrs. Theo C. Gram, Mrs. James A. MacDonald, Frank C. Blake and Burpee A. Banks. The ushers for the afternoon and evening were the deacons of the church: A. W. Dingwell, J. A. MacDonald and B. A. Banks.

THE NEW PASTOR.

Rev. William Bingham Ayers was born near Toronto, Canada, of American parents. His early education was received in a boys' school at Toronto. Later he entered high school in Minneapolis whither his father was called by business interests. Much of his early life was spent in travel under the guidance of tutors.

In 1900 he first preached in a mission church in the slums of St. Paul. Since then he has held various pastorates the last three being in New York state and of the Methodist denomination. About a year ago he left his last pastorate at Cape Vincent, New York, to take up special courses at Harvard University and Andover Theological Seminary.

Rev. Ayers is of commanding stature, of smooth face, and is said to be about 40 years of age. His speech is well modulated and convincing. Since coming to the church several weeks ago he has drawn large congregations to the Sunday services. As one of the parishioners remarked, he is evidently the man for the place. He succeeds Rev. Henry G. Megathlin, who accepted a call to Walpole, N. H.

When questioned regarding the field, he expressed great hope for a church, within ten minutes walk of which 25 houses had been erected the last three months, and 50 more were projected the coming summer. He said that it was a union church with no creed limits, but a broad saving theology. There is a fine outlook, he says, and he expects to see it grow and prosper. Rev. Mr. Ayers intends to apply himself to the bringing about of the erection of a new and larger church edifice, plans of which have been in the air for some time.

Wire Communication Is Interrupted and Trains Are Stalled

Chicago, March 30.—A terrific rain, snow and sleet storm, accompanied by high winds, is raging throughout eastern Colorado and western Nebraska. It has cut off Denver from wire communication with the east and has caused much delay to transportation.

According to meagre reports received by telegraph companies, trains traversing that territory are stalled in snow drifts and rotary plows have been called into service to relieve the blockade.

SPECIAL SPRING SUITS

Last week our store was crowded to the doors, everyday, by women looking for up-to-date styles and materials.

In nearly every case, words of praise were heard about the goods and styles we were showing and rarely did any of them leave without placing an order with us.

We measured more women for elegant tailored suits than we ever had hopes of and feel we should be given an opportunity to make your spring suit if you have not ordered it.

This week we will continue to show these late styles that have captured Quincy women and ask you and your friends to call, examine them and see why we do the largest ladies' tailoring business in Norfolk County.

All the women are talking about the new vacuum house cleaners and when all the women talk about something new, it's a safe guess that something has merit.

Duntley house cleaners are certainly wonderful and every man who really wants to make his wife happy will buy her a Duntley Cleaner. A few days ago a woman to whom we had sold a Duntley Cleaner said she would part with her automobile and most anything else before she would give up her Duntley Cleaner if she couldn't get another. Drop a Postal and ask for a circular teling you just how a Duntley Cleaner works. A free demonstration at your house just for the asking.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

Tomorrow (Thursday) afternoon the Hospital Aid Association holds its March meeting with Mrs. Harry L. Rice of Adams street. The enlargement of the Hospital seems to have aroused increased interest and the monthly meetings are much more largely attended. As Thursday's meeting is an important one and there is considerable business to be discussed it is hoped there will be an unusually large attendance. Any one interested in the Hospital and its work whether a member of the Association or not is cordially invited to attend the meeting.

• • •

Mrs. William H. Doble of South street is hostess for the next meeting of the Women's Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. on Friday afternoon, April 8.

• • •

Members of the S and S club are to be guests on Friday afternoon of Mrs. E. M. Gilman of Addington road, Brookline. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith of Quincy and Mrs. W. E. Dow of Braintree are members of this club, which was organized at the home of Mrs. Dow last year.

• • •

Quincy Catholic club has many pleasant meetings but one event in the club year always looked forward to is "guest night" which occurs Monday night, April 4th.

• • •

It is recommended by the civics committee of the General Federation of Women's clubs that every woman's club plant six trees on Arbor day, and care for them until grown. "The fundamental spirit of this one day in the year should be to plant" is the reminder given those who observe the day simply by reciting verses and singing songs.

• • •

Rev. Carl G. Horst minister of the Wollaston Unitarian church is to address the church Alliance in the vestry on Wednesday afternoon, April 6th. The speaker this week was Mrs. Theodore Hardwick of Quincy whose subject "Mothers and Sons" was interestingly treated.

• • •

In the early history of women's conventions the General Federation secured concessions from the passenger associations of the various sections of the country of one fare plus $2 with the privilege of returning by a different route ,and for the Los Angeles biennial a two months' time limit, and the Daughters of the Revolution, with a smaller attendance and 100 for the guaranteed number, a rate of one and a third fares on the certificate plan. The days of the one fare rates are gone ,probably never to return, and many other concessions to large organizations are probably gone with it. The railroads do not now grant the concessions formerly given to conventions. The rate for the Cincinnati biennial of the General Federation of Women's clubs, May 9-15, is one fare and a half for the round trip, the ticket good going and returning by the same route only, and the special party rates always available for the annual meeting of the Society of Daughters of the Revolution in Atlantic City for the week of May 11.

• • •

The April meeting of the Quincy Day Nursery Association will be held Tuesday afternoon, April 5, at the Quincy Women's club house. A large attendance of members is hoped for and if you are not a member you are invited to attend the meeting and learn of the good work being accomplished by this association.

There is quite a long break in the meetings of the Quincy Women's club, the next one not coming until April 12 but it is anticipated that it will be a very enjoyable meeting as Miss Mildred Sheldon Bass of Wollaston is to give readings from Paul Laurence Dunbar and plantation melodies will be sung by negro voices.

The postponed meeting of the Junior Friday club was held Monday afternoon with Mrs. Walter E. Burke of Adams street and was in charge of its president,Mrs. Laurance H. Sturtevant who was the program committee for the afternoon.The club meets again on Monday April 4 when Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield of Wollaston will be the hostess and Mrs. Perry Lawton in charge of the program.

Supt. Barbour of the Quincy schools speaks upon "The School Problem of Today" at the April Mothers' meeting.

The social meeting of the Young Women's club on Saturday evening at the clubhouse on Goffe street was an enjoyable one. For entertainment Mrs. W. E. Alden read her interesting paper on Historic Quincy and Mrs. Frank A. Page of Wollaston sang.

• • •

Tuesday was a busy day for Quincy women an all day meeting being held at the Y. M. C. A. building by the Norfolk County Women's Auxiliaries and an afternoon meeting at the Quincy Women's clubhouse under the auspices of the Home Economics committee when the work of the Consumers League of Massachusetts was explained by Miss Elizabeth Houghton of Cambridge.

• • •

Junior Alliance of First church met Monday evening in the church parlor, conducting the usual routine business, which was followed by an interesting paper by Mrs. E. C. Butler and music. The neighborhood meeting will be held April 11 when Miss Emma C. Low, president of the National Alliance will be present and speak.

• • •

Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution hold their April meeting on Monday afternoon at half past two at the birthplace of President John Adams.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

There was a large attendance at the meeting on Monday of the Quincy Alliance to meet Miss Harriet E. Johnson who was the speaker of the afternoon. She gave a most interesting paper on "What theologically trained women can do in the church." No one is better qualified to speak on this subject than Miss Johnson for she has received her degree from the theological school and has put her knowledge to practical use being superintendent of the Arlington Street Sunday school one of the best organized in Boston.

Mrs. Lawrence H. Sturtevant was the soloist and gave pleasure as usual by her singing.

Mrs. George G. Saville and Mrs. Ralph L. Lowell were the hostesses.

But two more meetings will be held this season, the neighborhood, an all day meeting on April 13 with Rev. D. M. Wilson as the speaker and the annual meeting on April 25.

MOTHERS' ASSOCIATION.

On the first Wednesday of every month the Quincy Mothers' association holds it meeting in the chapel of Bethany Congregational church. The meeting for April will come upon Wednesday, April 6th, at three o'clock, and Superintendent of schools, Albert E. Barbour, will address the meeting.

These meetings are absolutely free, the aim of the association being to get together the mothers of the city for the purpose of learning what is best to do in the way of training children. It is a great privilege for the mothers of the city of Quincy to come so closely into touch with the man at the head of our schools. When each mother in the city realizes how much her presence is desired at these meetings and how much she can get for herself at them which will be helpful to her in her home life, there will be need of a large audience room.

At the last meeting, Dr. John A Gordon gave a talk which was most helpful and instructive. The day was stormy, but in spite of that the hall was full. Every good mother wants to do her best for her children. The Mothers' association wants to give assistance, knowledge and a pleasant, restful afternoon to mothers.

FOR THE SUMMER SCHOOLS.

Friday evening, April 29, the Education Committee of the Quincy Women's club is to give an entertainment in Alpha hall. The proceeds are to be devoted to the Summer school. The program consists of living pictures, posed by Mrs. H. H. Kitson, the well-known sculptor, who is famous throughout the country; singing of portions of "The Chimes of Normandy," by local artists, with some fancy dancing, fencing, and music.

The Committee proposes selling as many tickets as they can, but it is important that they receive the assistance of the citizens of Quincy as well as of Club members. A reasonable amount of co-operation by all, in this particular respect, will insure, beyond any question, the realization of that for which they are striving, and while the children for whose benefit they are putting forth this effort are unable at this immature period of their years to fully appreciate its results, those who help the Committee by their patronage will have the consciousness that they have done what they could toward teaching the children to make vacation time profitable and happy.

The money raised at this entertainment, together with the proceeds from the May Festival, will be used to pay inspectors who will oversee the children's work of planting seeds and raising flowers and vegetables in the different wards of the city. It will also pay the salary of a young woman to teach girls swimming and other physical exercises given out of doors, and carry on what classes it is decided best to have. But the entertainment, aside from the cause for which it is to be given is of a high order while the tickets are to be sold at popular prices.

ECONOMIC TRAINING.

"They can make excellent fudge, but I would not like to try their biscuits." This is one bachelor's conclusion about most of the young women of today. They might have their doubts as to his ability to earn a livlihood. That is not a matter now under consideration, however. The fact to which it is desired to call attention is that probably a majority of the college girls are not getting the instruction in caring for a home that they should receive. Many of them are relieved by their mother or sisters of home duties so that their minds may be left free to attend to their college studies or their preparation for college if they have not yet reached it. This is considerate and kind, and the girl students find that it takes most of their time to prepare their lessons to come up to college requirements.

But they should not be left wholly ignorant of household work. No objetcion whatever is being raised to college education; the more general it becomes the better. Yet, in addition, it is deemed desirable that our girls should have some training as housewives. It will give them confidence and poise later when they come to assume larger duties. It may not be necessary to send the young women to professional schools; there can generally be found in the home some one qualified to instruct, and there are vacation seasons and other times when practical work can be done.

It is stated that through the efforts of Miss Frances L. Brown of the extension department of the Kansas Agricultural college more than twenty home economics clubs have been organized by girls in high schools throughout the state. They are said to take up the work with eagerness. No doubt exists that our young women will learn readily enough. We only urge that all be given a full opportunity.—Christian Science Monitor.

Butler's Reply.

There was a time, while Lyman Trumbull was chairman of the senate committee on judiciary, that Benjamin Butler was chairman of the judiciary committee of the house. It was at this period that a delegation from one of the southern states visited Washington with a desire to secure the impeachment and removal of the federal judge of their state. They interviewed Mr. Butler as to the probability of carrying such a measure through that session.

"I don't know," was Mr. Butler's reply; "I am chairman of the judiciary committee of the house. The necessary action can be had here. But Lyman Trumbull is chairman of the senate committee, and Judge Trumbull is troubled with two things—the dyspepsia, which makes him miserable, and conscience, which makes him uncertain."

Not His Fault.

A story is told of a well known Sheffield tenor who when asked to sing at a dinner, although he had no music with him, went on to the platform to try.

He did his best, but he broke down in the middle and retired.

He was cheered up by an elderly man sitting next to him, who tapped him on the shoulder and said:

"Never mind, lad; tha's done thy best, but t' feller at asked thee to sing owt to be shot!"—London Telegraph

WHY PLAYGROUNDS ARE NEEDED.

To many people who live in the country where there is unlimited room and access to open pastures and fields it seems folly and extravagance to talk of playgrounds for the children; but no one who has had experience in city life or even in a large town can doubt the importance of the movement now becoming so popular for establishing suitable playgrounds for the children in every good sized place.

At present thousands upon thousands of children find the open streets their only playgrounds. Many children are injured. In one city 67 children under ten years of age were killed in the streets in the year, while many times that number were maimed, bruised and run over, and all because of the fact that the street was their only playground.

It has been found too, that playgrounds prevent juvenile crime. It makes a place for the boys and their activities. Hitherto they have not been wanted anywhere. As Judge Lindsey says: "We are literally crowding them off the earth."

When a boy, chuck full of life and vigor, goes out on the street and steals apples, and throws stones through the laundryman's windows, it is not primarily because he is vicious but because he has no legitimate occupation.

Last year Newark provided base ball suits for 1500 of its boys. A playground with its regular activities outdoor games, etc., is a great factor in promoting the health of children.

We have taken away most of the work by means of which children exercised their muscles during our past history. There are relatively few chores for boys and girls today in the towns and cities. There is less opportunity for muscular exercise.

It is necessary if children are to be strong and vigorous to provide a suitable place for them to get outdoor exercise. The playgrounds also provide a place where children learn self-control. Discipline on the playground is largely that of public opinion,—the will of the body of children themselves under proper guidance.—Healthy Home.

—If your trees and shrubs are infested with the San Jose scale and you don't have them sprayed with the proper mixture before Patriots' day, it will be too late for this year.

Make Your Toilet Articles.

Any girl can have the very best toilet articles if she will make them herself, and many of them offered for sale at the stores will often do a permanent injury to a delicate skin. Should a lotion be needed for perspiration stir one ounce of hydrate of chloral in one pint of soft boiled water and keep in a bottle. Apply with soft old linen and allow the lotion to dry on the skin. To keep the hands in good condition keep a preparation of vinegar and cornmeal ready for use and after washing clothes or doing any work that soils the hands wash them in warm suds, rub the hands well with the cornmeal mixture, then dry and rub a few drops of honey and water well into the skin. An excellent and safe face powder is made by sifting half a pound of pure rice powder eight or ten times and then adding a few drops of oil of rose and a little carmine if you want the powder tinted. One of the best cucumber creams is made by cutting up two large cucumbers into half a cupful of water and allowing them to simmer for half an hour; then strain, add a cupful of boiling water, ten grains of powdered borax and enough tincture of benzoin to make the water look milky and bottle when cool. The skin may be kept in fine condition by using a little borax in the water every time the face and hands are washed and then rubbing this lotion well into the skin. An excellent fluid for keeping the scalp clean and free from dandruff is made with half a teaspoonful of the borax powder, a small piece of gum camphor and half a pint of soft water, and one of the best and safest washes for the mouth and teeth is made by adding one ounce of the powder to one pint of boiling water and then before it is cold adding half a teaspoonful of spirits of camphor. The hair tonic should be rubbed well into the scalp once a week. About two teaspoonfuls of the mouth wash in half a glass of water is the proper proportion, and the fluid whitens the teeth and keeps the gums in a healthy condition.

Mending With Plaster.

In lieu of drawing the torn edge of a dress together with silk thread or even with frayed threads of the material an excellent plan lies in your medicine chest.

That sounds a trifle startling to the needle worker, but listen. A piece of court plaster will form a good working basis upon which a comparatively invisible reparation can be made.

If the tear be on the plain width the skirt should be laid upon a table, the edges pulled together and pinned down and finally the strip of court plaster applied. A hot iron will press the edges together, and the frayed threads should be cut away as a finishing touch.

THE CADDIE'S ADVICE.

The caddie followed him around the course silently, but not unobservant. Their wake behind was marked by scars and gashes in the turf. At length he ventured on a tentative remark:—

"Ye'll be a stranger to these parts, maybe?"

"Well, not exactly a stranger."

Whirr-whirr-swish! And one more gash appeared as a lump of turf soared aloft and came down 50 yards away.

"You see," the golfer concluded. "I was born here, but I have been away many years now. And my folk are burned here-abouts."

"I doot ye'll go deep eno' with your driver," remarked the caddiee; "ye'd better tak' your iron."—Liverpool Post.

THE POINT OF VIEW.

Jean Paul Laurens, the famous French painter, was the son of an honest cart driver of Toulouse. At one time when the painter was at the height of his Parisian reputation it happened that two old women at Toulouse were talking about the Laurens family

"Let me see," said one; "there were two boys, weren't there?"

"Yes."

"What became of them?"

"Oh, one's a grocer right here in Toulouse. He does a very good business."

"And the other one?"

"The younger one? He went off to Paris and became an artist."

"Dear, dear! And his father such a good, worthy man!"—Youths Companion.

—Dr. Wiley says people can live now about as well and cheaply as ten years ago if they would live in the same way. About everybody else is saying the same thing. People simply will not go back to the old style unless they have to. If as Dr. Wiley says, they pay $10 a bushel for wheat made into breakfast foods, it is because they want to, knowing as well as he does that they could get the cereals in cheaper forms. The chemist says, too, that they are cheated in some canned goods. This they cannot help, though they might do something by refusing to buy cans improperly filled. They like the canned goods as they do the breakfast foods and while they have the price will buy them. It is immaterial that they are not making the most of their money. Domestic economy has been a neglected science for some time.—Lowell Courier Citizen.

ONCE MORE

We wish to further call your attention to the change in our business system, for without doubt it will be one of the most important changes that will take place in Quincy this year. Our new price lists will soon be ready and we have arranged them so that any one can easily see the difference between paying cash and charging prices. Now this change that we propose to make only proves that Johnson Bros. have taken another step onward in the progress of better conditions for Quincy.

The close buyer with large means, the close buyer with small means, will find it is to their advantage to trade at home and where can you find purer or better goods than at Johnson Bros., and the prices are surely going down. We think a community should all stand together and render all the assistance they can to each other. This is one of the methods we take. By lowering the prices of our goods and therefore doing our little mite toward lightening the burden of living expenses for the people of Quincy. We shall start the Cash System, Monday, April 4th, this being the first Monday in April. After that date, there will positively be no credit extended to any person, for with such low prices to be placed on our goods, every purchase must be made for cash: and highest quality and lowest prices will rule at Johnson Bros. after said date.

Respectfully yours,

BRIEFS.

Friends of William Mullen will be glad to hear that he was able to return from the Quincy Hospital this week to his home on Mill street.

Mrs. Mary L. Wade of Wollaston Park gave a demonstration lecture Tuesday afternoon for the Danvers Women's Association, having a large an interested audience.

Elliot club of Wollaston meets Wednesday evening, April 6th, with Mrs. George H. Murray of Newport avenue. It will be an evening with the poets, discussed by Miss Poore, Miss King and Mr. and Mrs. Bean.

The Woman's Home Missionary society of the Universalist church met Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Frank Hobart on Mill street. Mrs. J. A. Lombard read an interesting paper on "The Life of Ruth."

A musicale is being arranged by Messrs. George O. Wales, Edwin L. Emerson and George E. Williams for the next entertainment in the Cochato club series, on Friday evening, April 8th, at the club house in Braintree.

Something over $50 has been made by the "parties of eight" which have been given this winter for the benefit of the Hospital Aid association, the Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary and the Tuberculosis committee. It is hoped the parties will continue as the work entailed is small and the money is doing a good work. Who will have the next circle of eight?

LORDS INTEND TO FIGHT

Not Inclined to Yield to Demand For Surrender of Veto

London, March 30.—The first day's debate in the house of commons on Premier Asquith's resolutions dealing with the veto power of the house of lords proved conclusively that the lords will not yield their privileges without a great struggle.

A. J. Balfour, the opposition leader in the commons, declared plainly that it was the intention of his party to take the first opportunity to repeal any measure restricting the house of lords' power of veto.

On the other hand, Asquith's speech seems to have put fresh heart into his conglomerate party, and the speeches of John E. Redmond for the Irish party and George N. Barnes for the Laborites, as well as those of the representatives of the Welch constituencies, all breathed defiance to the lords.

Counsel For Wood and Miss Orr Reach Basis of Settlement

Boston, March 30.—"Judgment satisfied," was the brief entry made in the office of the clerk of the superior court, in the two suits of Marion Orr against William Wood of Boston and Portland, and the third one of Charles H. Orr against the same defendant.

These were the cases tried before Judge Harris and a jury in which Miss Orr recovered $40,000 for breach of promise to marry, and $1000 for assault, and Charles H. Orr, her father, recovered $2500 for loss of her services.

After the trial a motion was made by the defense to have the verdicts set aside, on the usual grounds, the verdicts being claimed to be excessive. Since the trial counsel in the case have endeavored to reach some basis of settlement, and in this they have been successful.

The terms of the settlement are not disclosed, but it is understood a substantial amount has been paid.

EXPRESS TRAIN DERAILED

Broken Rail Said to Be to Blame For Accident at Lynn

Lynn, Mass., March 30.—While traveling through West Lynn a Portland express brought up with a shock with four cars off the rails and a number of passengers and train hands more or less injured. Conductor Miller was the most seriously injured, with cuts, bruises and internal hurts. Milo Millet of Boston, a passenger, had his leg broken. A number of passengers were badly shaken up, and several received cuts from flying glass.

The derailed train consisted of a combination express and baggage car, a Pullman and three regular coaches, the latter being in the rear.

The wreck is said to have been caused by a broken rail. Engineer Latham and Fireman Stewart saved themselves by jumping before the engine fell over.

POLICEMEN TRIED TO CHECK GRAFTING

Must Now Hunt Other Jobs Because of Their Activity

New York, March 30.—Because Mayor Gaynor thought that the motives of two self-constituted excise raiders in the persons of Policemen Thomas Keenan and Charles F. Cunningham might not be altogether disinterested, the men were tried on charges of violations of the police rules and were found guilty by Trial Deputy Commissioner Walsh and their dismissal recommended.

The policemen had raided saloons for violating Sunday laws. Cunningham testified that every saloon in New York could be easily closed if the captains and inspectors wanted them closed. He declared that he and Keenan made the arrests in an effort to terminate what they said they believed was grafting in the police department.

They were pretty sure, they said, that police officials were collecting, for they had often seen detectives going in and out of saloons where it was plain the law was being violated.

IS WILLING TO FORGIVE

Boston Girl Shot by Stage Manager Is Expected to Recover

Boston, March 30.—Miss Leola Haynes, 19 years old, who was shot by a rejected suitor in her dressing room at the Scenic Temple Monday night, is resting comfortably and has expressed a willingness to forgive her assailant.

William J. Gilson, stage manager at the theatre, who is charged with the shooting, was arraigned before Justice Bolster, and waiving examination, was held in $5000 for the April term of the grand jury.

Unless complications set in Miss Haynes will be able to leave the hospital in a few days, as she suffered only superficial wounds of the neck and back.

VILLAGES SAFE FROM LAVA

Situation Considered Better, Although Etna's Activity Increases

Catania, March 30.—Mount Etna is somewhat more active. The moderation of the eruption Sunday allowed of some solidification of the lava and the new streams are therefore moving more slowly than those which flowed from the crater.

While the fields and the vineyards have been greatly damaged, none of the villages are now threatened.

Killed by Bread Mixing Machine

Boston, March 30.—While at work in a bakery Giuseppe Vitrano, aged 45, was dragged into a dough-mixing machine and so badly cut that he died on his way to a hospital. It is thought that his apron became caught in the machinery and that he was pulled among the flying steel paddles.

Brought Forth to Befog Mississippi Senatorial Fight In 1911—State Senator Declares That He Accepted Bribe, While Acting as Spy For Vardaman, to Find Out If Percy Was Buying Votes

Washington, March 30.—Senator Leroy Percy of Mississippi, replying to a charge that State Senator Bilbo had been given a bribe by L. C. Dulaney, one of Percy's supporters in the recent senatorial contest in which he defeated Governor Vardaman made a statement in which he said:

"Not a cent was ever used during the senatorial fight in Jackson by me or with my procurement, consent or knowledge to influence any member of the legislature, nor have I the least idea that any such expenditure was ever made by any friend of mine." He added that Bilbo was known as a bitter partisan of Vardaman and said that the "effort merely is to besmirch the election so as to discredit the result in the primary election fight for the full senatorial term which is to be held in the summer of 1911, Vardaman now being engaged in stumping the state in the contest."

L. C. Dulaney, at Jackson, Miss., a prominent planter, has been arrested for, it is alleged, tendering a bribe to State Senator Theodore Bilbo. The grand jury did not indict Bilbo. A resolution pending in the senate demanding the expulsion of Bilbo was held in abeyance.

All this happened in rapid succession after a formal declaration by Bilbo that during the recent legislative caucus he accepted a bribe to be used as evidence in support of charges that irregular methods were used to encompass the defeat of Vardaman, of whom he was supporter.

Bilbo swore before the grand jury, according to his own statement, that he was acting as a spy for Vardaman to find out if Percy was buying votes, and that he went to Dulaney, who is a wealthy politician, and offered to sell his vote for $1000. He had arranged to have a witness present when the money was delivered, but at the time could not complete this arrangement. Dulaney gave him only $645, he said, and this he presented to a preacher to feed the poor and for other church work.

SOLD "LOVE CHARMS"

Violator of Our Postal Regulations Has to Pay Fine of $50

Boston, March 30.—Joseph Kowalevsky, who attempted to do a mail order business in alleged efficacious love charms at 25 cents each, was fined $50 by Judge Lowell in the United States circuit court for violation of the postal regulations.

The "charm" was advertised in New York and was produced by writing the names of the unresponsive lover, the loving one, and also of Adam and Eve on four leaves of a tree, which were burned and the ashes cast into the drink of the cold-hearted one. The spell would be effective, it was alleged, provided the ashes were consumed in the drink.

ADVISER GENERAL TO CHINESE EMPIRE

Roosevelt the Man For the Job, Says London Standard

London, March 30.—The Standard this morning devotes a long editorial to ironical reference to Colonel Roosevelt's progress. Alluding to a recent rumor that the ex-president had received an offer of the post of adviser-general to the Chinese empire, The Standard says he is obviously the man for the position.

It remarks that the ordinary traveler requires months of study and observation before venturing an opinion on foreign nations. With a "man of genius" it is otherwise. A few weeks, spent mainly on the cars and steamers and at the hotels, qualifies him to pronounce judgments for the instruction of listening nations.

"We look forward with keen anticipation," the editorial concludes, "to Mr. Roosevelt's discovery of the British Isles and have his candid remarks on our shortcomings. We might return the compliment by sending, say Mr. Asquith, to lecture the citizens of the United States on their national defects and imperfections."

INTERESTED IN NEWSPAPER

Policeman Did Not Know That Thief Was Operating Upon Him

New York, March 30.—While Policeman Frank Hasse was traveling to Manhattan from his home in Brooklyn on the rear platform of a street car a thief cut a slit in the side of his trousers and extracted from a pocket Hasse's shield and $18. The policeman was reading a newspaper at the time.

When Hasse reached the station he discovered his loss and reported the matter to Lieutenant Norton, who said he would have to make a charge against the policeman for losing his shield. So Hasse will have to appear for trial. He probably will lose a day's pay besides the $18.

WOLTER'S LOVE FOR HIS "WIFE"

Police Hope It Will Lead Him to Reveal Details of Crime

KILLING OF RUTH WHEELER

Girl Who Loves Accused Youth Begs Him to Tell All and She Will Forgive Him—Plans Arranged to Make Record In the Trial, Conviction and Disposal of Alleged Slayer of Youthful Stenographer

New York, March 30.—While the police inquisitors are using a second letter from Katie Miller to force a confession, the authorities entered into an arrangement to send Albert Wolter to the chair for the butchery of Ruth Wheeler in the shortest possible passage of time. Katie Miller's letter follows:

"My Dear Al—As you have been so good to me, I beg you to tell the truth. They found a sack on our fire escape, and if they also found the other things they tell me of, I think you must be guilty. So I beg you to tell all and I will forgive you. You have been so good-hearted to me all the time that I can hardly believe it possible that you have done what they accuse you of.

"But you know what I know. I appreciate your kindness to me, but if you really harmed the little girl, I beg you to confess. Always remember, no matter what happens, I love you. Your loving, sorrowful Katchen."

Unless the present plans miscarry, the 19-year-old abnormality will have been put to death within forty-five days from the date of the murder—a record in the administration of the criminal law in New York county.

It was last Thursday that the 15-year-old girl was killed under the most frightful circumstances. The body was not discovered until Saturday evening. Yesterday, after a little more than two days of work, the police department and the coroner's office, working together, had succeeded in constructing what the police prosecutor regards as a complete fabric of proof against the accused youth. Yesterday afternoon District Attorney Whitman put the case into the hands of his first assistant, Frank Moss, with instructions to move as rapidly as possible.

And Moss did move. Within an hour all the known witnesses had been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury today. Before night it is expected that an indictment for murder in the first degree will be returned.

The trial will begin next Monday before Judge Foster in general sessions. It is believed that less than two days will be needed to get a jury, offer all the evidence, make the speeches on both sides, and secure a conviction. As soon as the verdict is announced the judge will sentence Wolter to die within the minimum time allowed him, which is thirty days.

Still using for leverage Wolter's love for his so-called wife, Katie Miller, the men who are working on the most atrocious murder in recent years hope to draw from their terrorized prisoner the complete narrative of how, through a pretence of needing a stenographer, he lured the Wheeler girl to his flat, how he choked her to death, and then dismembered her body and tried to destroy it with fire.

Up at the house of detention Inspector Titus caused Katie Miller to write Wolter another letter—the second she had written him in a few hours—and he took it to the prison and put it personally in Wolter's hands.

Evidence that may fix a motive for the crime was revealed in the findings of Professor Larkin of Columbia university. He reported that there were indications that the girl had been mistreated before being killed.

MENELIK NOT DEAD

Preparations to Prevent War When Monarch Passes Away

Rome, March 30.—The report of the death of King Menelik of Abyssinia is officially denied. A dispatch from Addis Abeba says that Empress Taitou is still nursing the king, but that a regency has been constituted and is now carrying on the government.

The capital, the dispatch says, is overflowing with soldiers loyal to Ras Tesama, the regent, and more are expected to reach the city soon. Such energetic preparations aim to prevent complications or civil war on the death of Menelik, which is expected at almost any moment.

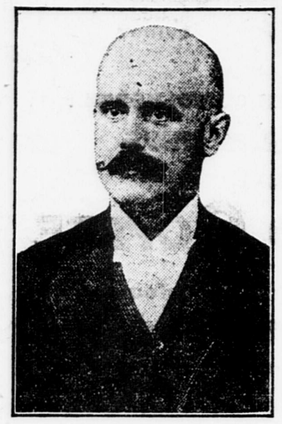
SENATOR CONGER

Leading Figure In New York's Legislative Scandal



CONVICTED IN BRIBERY CASE

Charges Against Allds Sustained by Vote of 40 to 9

RESIGNS FROM THE SENATE

Action Taken Previous to Casting of Vote Causes Big Surprise and Places Him Beyond Jurisdiction of Legislative Body—Conger Likely to Be Put on Trial Next—Sensational Developments Looked For Albany, March 30.—State Senator Jotham P. Allds of Chenango county was found guilty by a vote of 40 to 9 in the senate, of accepting a $1000 bribe from the bridge interests in 1901.

Politically, the vote stood: For sustaining the charges, Republicans, 29; Democrats, 11. Against sustaining the charges, Republicans, 4; Democrats, 5.

The verdict followed his resignation from the senate and marks the end of the hearing of the charge, preferred by Senator Conger, which has extended over seven weeks, revealing many side lights on the startling nature of the condition of the legislature nine years ago.

Allds' resignation was a big surprise. It was handed in on the advice of counsel. The action threw the senate into confusion. There were groups of senators standing about discussing the latest turn that the sensational affair has taken. Inasmuch as a vacancy has been created and the senator has removed himself from the jurisdiction of the senate that body was unable to punish Allds.

The question of what shall be done with Conger still remains. A report that Conger intended to follow Allds' example and resign proved unfounded and his future action is still in doubt.

Majority leader Cobb introduced a resolution providing for the formal presentation of charges against Conger, based on the evidence brought out by the investigation that he gave a bribe to influence legislation. The senate postponed action on this proposition and adjourned for the day, after formally adopting the report of the committee of the whole, in which the question was first decided.

The voting was delayed by the resignation of Allds, which for a time threatened to disrupt the program. A number of senators saw in this development a chance to avoid committing themselves individually on the main question. A tentative proposition to dispense with a vote on the question of sustaining the charges was discussed during a short recess, but the appeal of Cobb that the members had no right to avoid the responsibility in this way finally prevailed and the voting followed.

A statement given out by Allds' counsel declared that Allds resigned on the advice of his attorneys because the latter were satisfied that his case was not to be decided by the evidence, but by political expediency and influence brought to bear from "Washington and elsewhere."

Developments will follow thick and fast on the action of the senate. Allds' resignation makes it possible for Governor Hughes to call a special election for the immediate selection of Allds' successor. Provisions for a general investigation of alleged legislative corruption will now be made with all speed.

TWO MEN KILLED ON WAY TO WEDDING

Ceremony In House of Mourning Instead of Church

Waverley, Mass., March 30.—Two lives were lost in a grade crossing accident here last night, in which a carriage on the way to a wedding was struck by a train not 100 yards from the church in which the ceremony was to take place.

Charles A. Bryer of Centre Harbor, N. H., brother-in-law of the bride, was killed, as was Ernest M. Harlow, a local carriage driver, and Mrs. Katherine M. Bryer, wife of the former and the bride's own sister, was so seriously inured that she may die.

The church wedding was not held, but the marriage was celebrated quietly in the home of George C. Flett, father of the bride and of Mrs. Bryer. In another room, while the ceremony was taking place, Mrs. Bryer was suffering from three fractured ribs, a dislocated shoulder and possibly internal injuries.

The principals of the wedding were Miss Helen R. Flett and Leonard G. Buckle.

Death of Last of Peary's Dogs Which Reached Pole With Him

Portland, Me., March 30.—The last survivor of the pack of dogs which reached the North Pole with Commander Peary died here, his strength worn out by the approaching spring weather and by the unaccustomed surroundings of dog shows.

The dog was Peary's favorite, selected by him as the first of the pack to go on the last stage of the memorable exploring expedition in the frozen north. He was the only one of the small pack that reached the Pole who returned in good condition, all the others having been killed for food or become so weakened that they did not survive long after the return. Peary brought him to his home on Flag island in Casco bay, where he died.

GRANITE MAN DEAD

Long a Manufacturer and Polisher at West Quincy

Thomas F. Mannix, for more than 25 years one of Quincy's prominent granite manufacturers, died this morning at his home on Rogers street, after an illness extending over two years, aged about 59 years.

Mr. Mannix was born in the old country, but came to America with his parents when a young man. He learned the trade of a granite cutter, and came to Quincy from Framingham about 29 years ago. He worked at his trade for a time and then commenced business for himself at a quarry on the Badger estate. Some years ago he opened a granite shed on Willard street and built a large polishing mill. Later he purchased a large quarry and up to the time of his illness he did a very large business. Since his illness he sold his quarry to his brother but the cutting and polishing mill was continued under his name.

During the years 1908 and 1909 he served as a member of the Park Commissioners and would have been reappointed again this year but for ill health. He was a member of St. Francis court of Foresters, Quincy council Knights of Columbus and several fraternal organizations. He leaves a widow, a son and daughter.

PRISONER ESCAPES

Took French Leave from Police Station Tuesday Afternoon

Albert I. Gordon, who was arraigned in court a few days ago on two complaints for larceny, and whose case was continued until this morning, took French leave from the police station Tuesday afternoon, and has not been seen since.

Gordon was held at the police station waiting trial, and as he had been confined to a narrow cell for two days, Sergt. Hanson, who was in charge of the station decided to give him the run of the cell room to limber up. There are several windows in the room all of which are heavily barred, and there is also a steel door leading to the main station. This door was closed, and it was supposed that the bars on the windows would resist any attempt to break them. At 6 o'clock Tuesday night, when the cell room was entered, it was found that the bird had flown. Examination showed that he had obtained a piece of iron pipe, and with this had pried out the frame which held the steel bars, and had then dropped out of the window onto an ash heap, and thus made his escape. Just how much of a start Gordon had before his escape was discovered is not known, but he must have had two hours or more.

SEFFELL—HILL.

A quiet wedding was solemnized Tuesday afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hill on South Central terrace, Wollaston, when their only daughter, Miss May Isadore Hill, became the bride of Mr. Chester R. Seffell of Montreal. Miss Mabel Anderson of Wollaston was the bridesmaid and Mr. Frank Pinigre of Washington, D. C., attended the groom. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Joseph Walther of Wollaston Baptist church. The wedding, and reception which followed were attended by the immediate families only. Mr. and Mrs. Seffell left Boston on the 7.15 train that evening for Montreal, where they will make their home.

OPINIONS OF NATIONAL PILOTS

How Leaders In Old Circuit Size Up Race.

"PUT A BET ON US"---CHANCE

Manager of Cubs Thinks His Machine Will Surely Carry Off Banner This Season—"Watch the Reds," Says Griffith—What Others Think.

By Frank Chance of Chicago.

FRANK CHANCE.

Put a bet on the Cubs, for we will be safely rooted to the upper ring of the ladder when the end of the season arrives. We will get away with a flying start this year, and when the new blood that has been instilled into the team gets to working with the veterans I predict the fifth pennant for the Cubs. I look for strong opposition from Pittsburg, New York and Cincinnati.

By Fred Clarke of Pittsburg.

With an even break in luck the Pirates should again capture the National league pennant and defend their title of world's champions. Our club will have to fight hard to retain the honors won last season. I appreciate the efforts that have been made by the other clubs to develop strong teams, and I figure that this season's race should be one of the hardest in the history of the league, but the work of the Pirates should triumph, provided an ill fate doesn't enter into the contest.

By Fred Lake of Boston.

The Doves made a poor showing the latter part of last season, but I am sure the club will do better this year. I have a team that is capable of putting up a good article of ball, and it's up to me to make the start of the right sort. I think it would be unreasonable for any one to expect us to finish in the first division, but you can bet all you've got that we will take many a fall out of the big teams.

By Bill Dahlen of Brooklyn.

BILL DAHLEN.

The Brooklyns have been despised second division people for the last few seasons, but I have high hopes for the 1910 season. We have material for a good team for this year and a bully chance to break into the first division. I don't claim a pennant, for I don't think my club is of championship caliber yet, but we will make things very warm for the other seven clubs. I think they will finish as follows: Pittsburg, Chicago, New York.

By Johnny McGraw of New York.

The Giants will be in the thick of the fight from start to finish this season. Every effort has been made to strengthen the weak points of the team since last season. The pitching department is in excellent shape. Mathewson, Wiltse and Raymond are ready for a strenuous season. Rube Marquard has shown big improvement, and I look for him to be one of the leading southpaws in the league this year. The infield is just as good as ever. Our backstopping department is as strong as any in the league. I have discovered several crack young outfielders, who will help make baseball history this season. Pittsburg and Chicago are just as strong as ever and will make a strong fight for the flag.

By Clark Griffith of Cincinnati.

The Reds will be a thorn in the side of every team this season. I look for a twofold improvement over last year's play-ers. You can jot it down in your little notebook that the Cincinnati team will finish one-two this season. Our team is composed of fast young players, who are bound to improve with experience. My message to the fans is, "Watch the Reds." They won't be content with any place short of the lead or next to it.

By Charley Dooin of Philadelphia.

CHARLEY DOOIN.

I can't promise a pennant for Philadelphia in my first year as manager, but we are going to create more disturbance in our National league circuit than some people think we can. I have one of the strongest pitching staffs in the league and a good in and out field. If some of our new players develop as I think, the team will land away up in the first division. If luck favors me I will catch every game. This will enable me to coach my men properly.

By Roger Bresnahan of St. Louis.

Keep your eye on the Cardinals. For the first time in many years St. Louis will be represented by a first division team in the National league. Now that we have a reliable pitcher like Victor Willis the Cardinals are complete. I have a strong infield and fast outfield. The Cardinals look to me like a first division combination. If they land fourth or even fifth President Robison will be more than satisfied.

Big Bonus For Twirler Brown.

If he can win thirty-five games this season Mordecai Brown, three fingered pitching wonder of the Chicago Nationals, will be the highest salaried twirler in the business. Charley Murphy says his compensation will exceed that of Christy Mathewson, but Murphy says more than his prayers. The probabilities are that Brown will get between $6,000 and $7,000 as his salary and a bonus of around $2,500 if he wins his thirty-five games. Murphy has already offered bonuses to Reulbach and Overall if they can win thirty games. If all three do this other Cub twirlers need win one game a month to cinch the flag.

Served Him Well.

During the early days of the career of William Allen White, when he was charged with the conduct of a country paper in Iowa, he one day received a call from an indignant contributor, who bitterly complained that matter of his, long before submitted, had not been published.

"Softly, my friend," said White in his most soothing tone. "Really I must offer my best thanks to you for those features. They have served me well. From time to time when I get to thinking that this sheet is a pretty poor one to inflict upon a long suffering public I look up your stuff and read it carefully, a process which enables me to perceive how much worse my paper might be, whereupon I become real cheerful. Please don't take them from me."—Cleveland Leader.

DYNAMITE-LADEN SCHOONER

Captain Not Afraid Unless Someone Goes Looking For Trouble

Boston, March 30.—With seventeen tons of dynamite aboard and a large red flag at the masthead as a warning for other ships to keep away, schooner Thomas H. Lawrence, Captain Rowe, dropped anchor on the South Boston flats.

The DuPont Powder company, to whom the dynamite is consigned, has two powder hulks at anchor on the flats at all times in which they keep their explosives for the Boston trade stored, and they are as closely guarded as the United States mints.

When Captain Rowe was asked how he felt when tramping the decks over seventeen tons of dynamite, he said that he would rather carry a shipload of dynamite any time than a couple of hundred pounds of powder, as powder was dangerous at all times, while dynamite would stay quiet until somebody went looking for trouble and then it kicked.

How She Got the Job.

"The one thing we demand from our employees," said the head of the office force, "is correctness in figures."

Not even Boston has more acres of parks and playgrounds than are contained within the limits of the city of Quincy, so we may well be called a "City of Playgrounds" as a "City of Presidents" or a "City of Granite" or a "City of Shipbuilding."

But it is the desire this year to make a start in the supervision of children while at play, and a public meeting has been called for tonight at 8 o'clock at City Hall. There should be a large attendance.

Luther Halsey Gulick, M. D., the president of the Playground Association of America, writes as follows on "The doctrine of hands off in play."

Within the last few years there has arisen a pernicious doctrine with reference to children--the doctrine of "hands off". It is based on the idea that children grow up wholesomely if only they are let alone. I remember seeing a young mother who had been carefully taught that she must not interfere with her child, but allow it to unfold naturally and wholesomely, as a flower unfolds. I have seen her with tears trickling down her face, watching her baby on the floor; she wanted to take hold of the child, but she had been told "hands off." The baby needed to be caressed and snug to as much as the mother needed to do it, but this pernicious new doctrine that children should be let alone was interfering with the fundamental instincts of motherhood and the fundamental instincts of babyhood.

Let us examine some of the facts back of this doctrine of "hands off." When the Playground Association of America was organized in Washington, some of us who were interested in the work were granted an audience by Theodore Roosevelt, then President of the United States. We told him what we were doing, and he made a gracious response. He said: "It is a splendid thing to provide in congested districts of American cities spaces where children may play; but let them play freely. Do not interfere with their play. Leave them

PROBATION OFFICER

Lester L. Clee to be Appointed as Deputy

Judge Avery of the East Norfolk District court at Quincy will tomorrow announce the appointment of Lester L. Clee, the boys work director at the Quincy Y. M. C. A., as deputy probation officer, whose special duty will be to look after delinquent children. The appointment is made with the consent of the directors of the Y. M. C. A., and not only has their endorsement but the endorsement of the Chairman of the School Committee and the Superintendent of Schools.

The appointment is made under section 2 of chapter 637 of the acts of 1908 which provides that "The justice of every police, district and municipal court, excepting the municipal court of the City of Boston, may appoint one or more deputy probation officers without compensation. They shall assist probation officers for wayward and delinquent children in such ways as the court shall direct."

The present method of procedure has been to issue summons for delinquents and hail them into the juvenile or delinquent session of the court. Under the new plan Judge Avery intends that when application is made to the court for a summons that the case shall be turned over to the deputy probation officer, who will make an investigation and decide whether the delinquent shall be brought before the court. He will visit the boys, and talk with their parents, and circulate among them. The main idea is not to bring young boys into court unless it is absolutely necessary, and it is the belief of Judge Avery that a deputy probation officer in the person of such a young man as Mr. Clee, whose special fort is boys' work, that much good can be accomplished. Sessions of the delinquent court will be held but twice a month.

In the case of boys who are brought into court they will be placed in the care of the deputy and every means possible tried to reform the boy and make a man of him, instead of a future criminal. For such kind work it is doubtful if a man better fitted for the position could be found than Mr. Clee.

RECENT DEATHS.

Mrs. Martha Elizabeth Willett, wife of William H. H. Willett, one of Quincy's veteran letter carriers, died suddenly Wednesday afternoon at her home, 292 Franklin street, aged 65 years. Mrs. Willett was apparently enjoying her usual good health and ate her dinner as usual. Two hours later she was taken ill and died soon after. Apoplexy is given as the cause of her death. She was 65 years of age and leaves a husband and daughter, Mrs. George Dexheimer.

Mrs. Henrietta M. Wilson, widow of Thomas R. Wilson, late of Portsmouth, N. H., and mother of Brandt W. Wilson, a United States Inspector of carpentering work on the battleship North Dakota, passed away this morning at the Hotel Greenleaf, where she has been making her home since her son has been stationed in Quincy. She was 69 years of age, and has been in poor health for some time.

SPECIAL OF CITY COUNCIL

That Water Loan Order May Have Second Reading

Mayor Shea has called a special meeting of the City Council for tonight to take action on the order changing the per cent of the $30,000 water loan from 3 1-2 per cent to 4 per cent. The order making this change was adopted by the council at its meeting March 21, but when put up to the bankers they decided that the order must have two readings. It will therefore be necessary for the Council to recall the order from the Mayor and give it another reading.

The object of the special meeting is to hurry the matter along as fast as possible, as there are many applications on file with the Commissioner for water and the extensions cannot be made until the appropriation is available.

BIG LEDGER IN MAY

To Advertise the Advantages of Our City

The Daily Ledger is making great plans for a big "Prosperity Edition" in connection with Merchants' Week in May. Probably 25,000 Ledgers will be distributed in all the South Shore towns, including Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Norwell, Braintree, Holbrook, Randolph and Milton. It will contain not only attractive announcements of our merchants, but "write ups" of the Quincy industries and also the advantages of Quincy as a place, to trade, to do business, to build a home, to enjoy the seashore, to educate children, etc. It will be illustrated.

CASE OF CRUELTY.

A horse, very lame, and much the worse for age, was taken from a boy in City Square this morning and is now at Mahoney's stable. The horse was owned by Richard S. Gardner of Weymouth, and a boy was leading him from Wollaston to his owner's place. Just as Officer Dhooge held up the boy Mr. Phillips, an agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, came along, and ordered the animal taken to a stable, and the owner notified. It is possible that the animal may have to be killed.

"Where," said the land agent addressing an audience of possible purchasers—"where else on the face of the globe will you find in one place copper, tin, iron, cotton, hemp, grain, game—" and a voice from the crowd replied, "In the pocket of my youngest son."

GALAHAD CLUB DRAMATICS

Two Plays Given with Good Success at Parish House

The annual dramatic entertainment of the Galahad club of Christ church was held Wednesday evening when two short plays were given under the direction of Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis. The first was entitled "Loan of a lover," and considering that the cast was composed of young people the play ran very smoothly. There were several amusing incidents which the audience were quick to appreciate and were free to applaud.

The cast follows:

Captain Amersford	John King
Peter Spyk	Henry W. Boutilier
Swyzel	John E. Spargo
Delve	William Warmington
Gertrude	Marion Bolster
Ernestine Rosendaal	Lizzie Dickie

The second play was in the nature of a pleasing little comedy, entitled "The striped sweater," and was equally as well carried through. The cast was composed entirely of boys and they did remarkably well.

Reginal Fitzarthur, a city dude camping out in Maine	Gibb MacDonald
Hop Ski, a chinese washerman looking for a job,	Everett R. Prout
Solon Simple, a country beau on a holiday	Robert E. King
Wandering William, a travelling gentleman"	Harold Prout
Ira Ketchum, a deputy Sheriff.	Philip Halvosa
Simon Snug, an agricultural landowner	Ralph Prout

Much credit for the smoothness of the two plays was due to the efforts of Edward J. Townsend the stage manager, John King the stage electrician and Albert Andrews the stage carpenter.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE.

Miss Madge Hatfield of Wollaston was the recipient of a very happy surprise Wednesday evening when some thirty-five young people called unexpectedly at her home on North Central avenue. The occasion was a birthday anniversary and so well were the plans of the party arranged and executed that she was taken entirely unawares. All came prepared to make the event an entertaining one, and a varied and pleasing program of appropriate games, interspersed with music, afforded much merriment. Piano solos were contributed by Mrs. Charles Roach and James Cahill and pleasing vocal numbers by Miss Ruth Cahill, George Brown and Chester Barlow.

Miss Hatfield was showered with individual birthday remembrances by her guests and was presented a substantial gift in the form of a handsome cut glass salad dish. In behalf of those present, Charles Roach made the presentation speech, expressing in a few well chosen words the esteem and well-wishes of the gathering. The recipient in turn thanked all and expressed her appreciation. Refreshments were served.

Among the surprisers were: Mr. and Mrs. Percy Brewster and son Paul, of Waltham, Mr. and Mrs. Warren J. Barlow, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Hatfield, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Roach, Miss Helen Pettis of Winthrop, the Misses Christie Douglas, Ethel Clifford, Gertrude Barlow, Clara Porter, Ruth Cahill, Nellie Dunn, Marion Baker, Grace Schermerhorn, Ida Brown, Winifred Church, Ethel and Olive Hatfield, and Messrs. George Drew, Lester Porter, Chester Gurney, James Cahill, Earl Church, Aldwin Hatfield, Dana Cahill, James Floyd, Chester Barlow, Roy Waring, George Brown, Roy Given and Eric Card.

—The corporation tax returns that are pouring into Washington leave little doubt that it will pile up $40,000,000 a year. This must mean an early revision of the statute or of the tariff schedules. For it will take a very stort time at that rate to wipe out the deficit and to pile up a surplus that will draw congress into new extravagance. The rate may easily be cut in half.—Boston Record.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Just at present Mr. Taft is busy adjusting his political compass.

There is no telling what kind of a chick a causus will hatch.

Senator Percy ,of Mississippi, says he doesn't intend to revolutionize that body. Aldrich and his crowd can therefore rest easy.

Not only will the census enumerator keep as a profound secret the date of a lady's birth, but if he is a really polite enumerator he will assure her most convincingly that she doesn't look it.

The Washington Herald discovers that there are fifteen times as many germs on a $1.00 bill as on a $20.00 bill. But inasmuch as it is at least fifteen times as hard for a poor man to get a $1.00 bill as it is for a rich man to get a $20.00 bill, is the danger from germs greater among the poor?

With 1910 only well started on the road wholesale houses are already sending out announcements of their line of calendars for 1911. Manufacturers are probably making next winter's suits and in the meantime most of us poor mortals are trying to keep up with each day as it comes.

Certainly it is a year of great things for Quincy, not the least of which was the installation of a Duplex press by the Daily Ledger. Many date the awakening in the city to the very successful campaign to raise funds for the Y. M. C. A., and say that the grand reception to Admiral Bowles was event No. 2. Other big events for the uplift of Quincy are being planned for the near future. But this awakening dates further back than one year, and there have been many agencies which have caused it to culminate in 1910. The local press may reasonably take considerable credit, also the Quincy Women's Club, the local churches, the Board of Trade, the Citizens Association, the Retail Merchants Association, the Civic League, the Granite Manufacturers' Association, the Quincy Historical Society, the Men's Clubs connected with the churches, the Daughters of the Revolution, the Elks, the Knights of Columbus, the Yacht Clubs, and other organizations almost without number.

Not in our recollection, however, were so many big movements launched, in the city in one week, as the present week. Here is a partial list:

Merchants' Week under auspices of the Quincy Retail Merchants Association.

Fourth of July celebration under auspices of Board of Trade.

Protected playgrounds under auspices of Quincy Women's Club and Civic League.

Prosperity edition of Daily Ledger of 50 pages (25,000 copies) in connection with Merchants' Week.

All these are great things for the development of Quincy. The distribution of 25,000 "Big" Ledgers throughout the South Shore district and among the Boards of Trade of New England will not only invite traders to Quincy, but also enterprises and capitalists who will be quick to see the possibilities of this city.

—The world will watch the coming race between the American and English antarctic expeditions to be first at the south pole with something of the breathless interest that a hushed grandstand might take in the neck-and-neck duel down the homestretch of two mighty thoroughbred horses in some great contest of the turf. In all history the rivalry of the nations in exploration never yet has shown itself in a contest that so nearly fulfills all the conditions of a genuine race.—Framingham News.

WHEN GLOVER WAS DYING

Beemed Fearful That Wife Would Shoot Him, According to Doctor

Cambridge, Mass., March 31.—When Dr. Edward F. Dowd of Waltham asked the dying Clarence F. Glover if he wished to see his wife, he replied "Yes," and then, hesitating for a few seconds, added: "She won't shoot me, will she?"

Dr. Frederick L. MacDonald, testifying in the Glover will contest, gave the long-delayed confirmation of this statement yesterday.

Three times before the question was asked by Dowd, MacDonald said he himself had asked the dying man if he wished to see his wife, and on each occasion Glover had answered "No."

Mrs. Lillian M. Glover was in the room downstairs, MacDonald said, and was asked by him several times if she wished to see her husband. Her answer each time was "No."

BATCH OF BANK STOCK

Issued to Supreme Court Justice, Senator, and Legislative Agent

New York, March 31.—The story of the formation of the International Banking and Trust company, which has been mentioned several times in the fire insurance investigation which Superintendent Hotchkiss of the state insurance department is conducting, was given out after an investigation by Hotchkiss' office.

The investigation revealed that three lots of stock in the company were issued at the same time to Edward E. McCall, now supreme court justice; William H. Buckley, former Albany legisdative agent for fire insurance companies, and State Senator Louis F. Goodsell, who was in the senate for Orange county from 1899 to 1906.

SIXTEEN MORE MEN CALLED GRAFTERS

Pittsburg Councilmen Charged With Taking Bribes

Pittsburg, March 31.—Dr. E. R. Walters, former president of select council, who is director of public health and charities, was indicted as the alleged recipient of $1000 in bribery money, and fifteen other former councilmen were charged in the grand jury's report as having received amounts ranging from $500 to $250.

The indictments make a total of ninety-one in three reports by the grand jury within two weeks, and there are more to come, District Attorney Blakeley says.

To this end the inquisitorial body had before it yesterday thirty more officials, directors and employes of the six banks alleged to have paid money to obtain an ordinance naming them as city depositories.

IRISH SUPPORT ASQUITH

But They Want More Drastic Action Concerning the Lords' Veto

London, March 31.—The Nationalists in a meeting decided to urge a more drastic campaign to curb the power of the lords than that proposed by the government, though supporting the latter on the veto resolutions. John E. Redmond presided.

The Irish decided to favor resolutions giving the commons the right to enact laws after the bills have been rejected twice by the lords, instead of three times, and to remove the clause providing that three years must elapse between the introduction of a bill and its final passage over the lords' veto.

DESIRE TO SEE BIG FIGHT

Prompts a Black Hand Demand Upon Merchant to Give Up $500

New York, March 31.—"We want to get money enough to go out to 'Frisco to see the big fight between Jeffries and Johnson."

This new form of "Black Hand" letter was received by Max Rubenfeld of Jersey City, merchant, who was threatened with death unless he deposited $500 in a designated spot. The letter was turned over to the police.

ELLEN STONE'S RANSOM

Senate Committee Favors Refunding Money to Contributors

Washington, March 31.—The committee on foreign relations reported the bill of Senator Lodge authorizing the state department to refund $61,000 to the contributors to the ransom fund of Ellen M. Stone, the Chelsea, Mass., missionary who was abducted in Macedonia in 1901 by the brigand Sarafoff.

New German Naval Station

Kiel, March 31.—One of the most important movements in the German navy since its creation began when the first battleship squadron of the active fleet sailed for the North sea to take up a permanent station at Williamshaven, which now supersedes Kiel as the principal naval base of Germany.

Paper Strike Closes Mill

Franklin, N. H., March 31.—One of the pulp mills at the local plant of the International Paper company, where the union pulp, sulphite and paper mill workers are on strike, was boarded up last evening and its operation apparently is to be abandoned for an extended period.

REPORT THIS WEEK

Deeper Waterways for All Sections of Country

The Senate Committee on Commerce will report the River and Harbor appropriations bill late this week ,the last big projects to have the consideration of the committee being the Mississippi and Missouri projects including the Lakes-to-the-Gulf deep waterway proposition.

Senator W. A. Smith of Michigan, a member of the committee stated today that the bill would carry between $48,000,000 and $50,000,000 and would increase the House bill in all probability to the extent of $6,000,000 or $8,000,000.

"We are very much interested up Michigan way over the Lakes-to-the-Gulf proposition," said Mr. Smith.

"The committee has been guided in its deliberations ,thus far, by a desire to encourage the improvement of worthy waterways. There has been no extravagance nor will there be. But the losses that would result from a failure to continue these great improvements would be incalculable, if they were neglected, because ultimately we would have to appropriate a great deal more to make up for the losses that would result from partially completed projects.

"There is every disposition on the part of the committee to do the decent thing by all the sections. The sentiment in this country is overwhelmingly in favor of improving our rivers and harbors, much of that sentiment being directly traceable to the disinterested efforts of those connected with the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, kindred associations and commercial bodies."

GREAT APPLE WAY.

Lined with apple trees ,set 40 feet apart and alternated with English elms, and fountains for man and beast as mile-stones, will be the Great Apple Way, a 60-foot wide macadamized thoroughfare between Spokane and Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, 31 miles, upon which construction work is to begin within 30 days. J. A. Perry, Secretary of the Spokane County Good Roads association, which will direct operations, announces that the estimated cost of the speedway is $310,000 or $10,000 a mile.

Funds for the building of the road, the first of its kind on the continent, will be obtained through an assessment plan, operating similar to a levy for municipal improvements. The governors and members of the legislatures of Washington and Idaho and the supervisors of the various townships are in favor of the highway and have promised to take part in promoting the enterprise.

Contracts have been signed by the Spokane Canal Company to furnish water for irrigating the trees and supplying the fountains for a period of five years without cost to the counties and states ,and the property-holders along the right-of-way have undertaken to care for the trees and assist in maintaining the roadway until it is taken over by the states. Tree planting will begin May 1.

Seventeen miles of the road between Spokane and the Washington Idaho state line will be built by the Spokane County Good Roads association, assisted by commercial and improvement organizations in the valley, and the remaining 14 miles, between Spokane bridge and Coeur d' Alene, is to be constructed by the chamber of commerce of the last named city.

"The road taps four towns in the Spokane valley," said Mr. Perry, "and when completed it will be one of the most beautiful and picturesque speedways in the United States and the equal of any in Europe.

ONCE MORE

We wish to further call your attention to the change in our business system, for without doubt it will be one of the most important changes that will take place in Quincy this year. Our new price lists will soon be ready and we have arranged them so that any one can easily see the difference between paying cash and charging prices. Now this change that we propose to make only proves that Johnson Bros. have taken another step onward in the progress of better conditions for Quincy.

The close buyer with large means, the close buyer with small means, will find it is to their advantage to trade at home and where can you find purer or better goods than at Johnson Bros., and the prices are surely going down. We think a community should all stand together and render all the assistance they can to each other. This is one of the methods we take. By lowering the prices of our goods and therefore doing our little mite toward lightening the burden of living expenses for the people of Quincy. We shall start the Cash System, Monday, April 4th, this being the first Monday in April. After that date, there will positively be no credit extended to any person, for with such low prices to be placed on our goods, every purchase must be made for cash: and highest quality and lowest prices will rule at Johnson Bros. after said date.

Respectfully yours,

TUBERCULOSIS SUNDAY.

Rev. Charles F. Aked, D. D., pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church of New York city, and Dr. Lawrence F. Flick, the famous Philadelphia specialist ,and chief organizer of the last International Congress on Tuberculosis, both issued statements to the newspapers today endorsing in most emphatic language the movement for a National Tuberculosis Sunday on April 24th.

Dr. Aked says: "I am profoundly thankful to know that the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis is planing on a great scale a 'National Tuberculosis Sunday.' I shall be glad to cooperate to the limit of my ability and opportunity. In the old days a doctor's diagnosis, 'Consumption,' was regarded as a sentence of death, and the prevalence of tuberculosis was thought of in the light of some mysterious 'visitation of God.' Today we know that tuberculosis is curable, and, what promises even more for the human race, that it is preventable. Preventable diseases ought to be prevented. And the Church of the Living God, with the memory of Him whom we love to call 'the Good Physician,' of whom it is recorded that 'He went about doing good,' and that 'He healed many that were sick of divers diseases,' should be in the van of those who love their fellows, seeking to prevent preventable ills.

Dr. Flick, after expressing his keen interest in the movement ,and his desire to be of all possible assistance, says: "No body of men has better vantage ground for good work in the crusade against tuberculosis than clergymen. They are in close touch with the people who need education and what they say will be accepted as from authority. Such a cause as the stamping out of a plague must appeal to them as it exemplifies the quintessence of religion. Every clergyman in the land should become a teacher of the doctrine of health and preventing medicine. He should, moreover ,as a leader of men become a living active force in the world movement for stamping out consumption.

Reports thus far received at the National headquarters in New York indicate that on April 24th more people will hear the gospel of health and right living than have ever before received such a message.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL

Items of Interest to Students and Graduates

Baseball practice has been held twice this week. The response to the call greatly exceeded all expectations, about sixty turning out to make a try for the team. Soon daily practice will be commenced. There are said to be excellent prospects for this season. The interest in athletics is surely increasing. Possibly the very successful basketball season and the recent meet, on the firmer establishment of physical training in the school tend to this result.

In regard to baseball, Mr. Cleveland in his annual report for 1909 said: "The school is at present very fortunate in having among its masters a man competent and willing to handle baseball." He recommended in athletics that "The school should have on its staff of teachers a trained man to give his whole time to its students, taking charge not only of regular class work but directing all school athletic teams. There should also be an equally well trained woman directing the work of the girls. Each year emphasizes the need of a trained athletic adviser, especially in such strenuous games as basketball, football, and track sports. A coach, such as many schools employ; who is hired to make a winning team and has no scientific knowledge of physical development, will do more harm than good. He will subordinate all things to a desire to win. He will make impossible the great ethical lessons the game may teach. A coach should be as wholly under the direction of the head-master, as the French teacher, and be an essential part of the school system. The man who looks upon boys, primarily, as coming men whom he can largely assist in becoming more manly, who knows their physical strength and weakness, who will not tolerate unsportsmanlike conduct, who knows that a team wins a great victory when it takes defeat well, who appreciates the ethical possibilities in his relations with the boys—such a man for an athletic adviser must exercise a tremendously wholesome influence upon the whole school * * * There is no one branch of school life that contains greater possibilities for helping than the athletic"

A number of the schools in and about Boston have wireless stations. Recently the station of the Revere High school commenced communicating with the wireless of the Malden, Everett, and Wakefield High schools. There is quite a group of the students at Quincy High who have more or less complete outfits If an outfit could be installed at the school it would supplement the work of the physics department, and make it more interesting besides giving practical demonstrations of certain parts.

It has seemed all the more difficult to resume work at school after the short let down during vacation. But from now until the end of school the hardest work of the year is scheduled in many studies.

A number of students availed themselves of the opportunity offered during vacation last week to take trips away from Quincy.

It is somewhat difficult for the students to refrain from crossing and walking on the front lawns. But if a little restraint is exercised now while the ground is softening and the grass commences to spring up, the lawns will be much better and amply repay for the restraint from walking on them by being more handsome and in better condotion.

Miss Gladys Bain, '10, has resigned from the dramatic committee of the Senior class as she is now a member of the cast of "The Amazons."

There seems now to be slight probability of a concert by the music class this spring so efforts are rather more turned to the graduation music.

Beginning April 13 all students of the high schools of Boston will be compelled to go in for physical training. A course has been outlined by the hygene department, which becomes more difficult each year through the four years. One point will be allowed, which has been taken from the military course. Not only are the boys suposed to go in for physical development, but the girls as well. This new branch is apart from baseball, football and basket ball. The work is outlined in divisions according to the years.

Great interest is being taken in this research.

The building has been in use since last September and has recently been adopted by the city.

Mrs. Oliver Ames, Sr., is to finance a course in nature study for Easton teachers, the course to run through the spring term and to consist largely of out-of-door work. Miss Sarah E. Brassill, supervisor of nature study in the schools of Cambridge until the office was abolished and lecturer at teacher's institutes, is to be the teacher. The class will meet for the first time Thursday, April 7, at 4 P. M. at the Oliver Ames High school. After a conference of half an hour the class will take its first field trip. The meetings with Miss Brassill will be considered teacher's meetings. Oakes Ames, chairman of the school board, is interested in the work and has offered the class the use of his large botanical library.

The boys of the Lake View High school had a "soft collar day" Friday and have served formal notice on the girls of the school that today will be "rat day," says the Chicago Inter-Ocean. Translated this means that Friday the stiff, white collar was declared "out of season" in much the same way that the straw hat is put out of usefulness on the board of trade on the first of September, and that today will see the end of rolls of hair or wire over which the girls roll their pompadours and build their hair mattresses. It is to be hoped that "rat day" will be observed with the same enthusiasm that marked "soft collar day," that both reforms will be permanent, and that other high schools will follow the good example of Lake View.

Prof. J. Scott Clark of the Northwestern University Bulletin writes: "In first place, the High school pupil should be taught to spell the large number of words which he naturally adds to his vocabulary during the ordinary four-year high school period. Obviously, the study of history, science literature and foreign languages compels the pupil to use many words that he has never used before. Yet a very large proportion of our secondary schools pay no attention whatever to orthography. Morever ,most of the high school pupils take at least a little Latin, and their spelling may be greatly improved by calling their attention to the relation of the connecting vowels of the different conjugations to the spelling of Latin derivatives in English.

IMPERIAL VAUDEVILLE

Many Good Hits at Performance at Wollaston

Imperial vaudeville was produced in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church on Wednesday evening to a crowded house. This is the third annual production and was given under the auspices of the Wollaston Social society.

An overture by the Imperial orchestra, under the direction of Francis H. Bishop opened the evening. Baker Bros. (Roy C. and Clifton H.) matchless magicians, followed in what was introduced as a hilarious concoction of black magic interspersed with side-splitting comedy work. They ably lived up to their reputation of former years, the best part of the performance being the explanation of the "professor's" tricks by his "able" assistant.

Harold Bowker of Dorchester was easily one of the favorites of the evening. He was billed to impersonate Hary Lauder, and he did in such an able manner that the bonny Scotch comedian did not lose much by the comparison.

A skillful exhibition of club swinging by Wallace C. Bennett was enjoyed. His last feature of illuminated clubs was loudly applauded.

Miss Abbie Penley followed with several very pleasing vocal solos. They were, as always, well received.

George Skalem alias George E. Brown, and Dot Trillem, otherwise known as Miss Dorothy Fay, in a black face comedy sketch, were the hits of the performance. With a comic series of gags and cross-fires, together with a group of popular coon songs, they kept all amused. The stage properties in this act were original.

The last number on the program consisted of a one-act college comedy entitled "His awful chum. The novel situations in the comedy were excruciatingly funny, and the acting of the young people was of more than amateur proficiency.

Edward R. Hall and Ernest W. Arnold in the leading parts of college chums were excellent. Willard E. Keyes in the low comedy character part of Shreedy, a boxing professor, was right on deck with his Bowery talk and manners.

The cast follows:

Steve Hudson, a college student, Ernest W. Arnold
Ned Burleigh, his chum, Edward R. Hall
Jack Randolph, interested in club dramatics, John Norrie
Professor Shreedy, a sparring teacher, Willard E. Keyes
Mrs. Hudson, Miss Theodora A. Luard
Miss Hudson, Miss Ella Packard

alone. Do not meddle." He has since changed his opinion, but in those words he voiced the general public feeling regarding this whole matter of play. It is the general public feeling that children ought to be let alone, that they will play wholesomely if only adults do not fuss with them.

During the last few years we have had two or three pretty bad experiences. Cities have opened playgrounds and have simply said, "There is your ground, play on it." Children have gone there to play; the older boys have become bullies and have driven off the younger, and the young men have made those places their abodes by night, until by petition some of them had to be closed, for they had become a moral menace by night and a physical menace to small children by day.

When the family splits up for its recreation there is danger. When young people take their pleasures apart by themselves without the wholesome influence of family life, there is moral danger. Only when the family stays together do we have wholesome conditions. Our social traditions are the most precious element of civilization, and of cultivated life. They are the things that distinguish between a refined and well-bred person and a boor.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT

Bailey Tells Senate That It Needs to Be Amended

DOCTRINE OF STATE RIGHTS

Texan Says New England Is to Become One of Its Strongest Advocates—He Cites Recent Federal Railroad Decisions and Declares That Employes Now Fail to Get Justice Which Is Due Them

Washington, March 31.—New England's pre-eminent interest in maintaining the doctrine of state rights was urged upon the senate by Senator Bailey of Texas and promptly admitted by Senator Hale, the floor leader, in a course of a significant debate on a bill to amend the employers' liability act reported by the committee on the judiciary.

The situation grows out of the celebrated decision of the superior court of errors of Connecticut in the case of Hoxie vs. the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, in which the court threw into confusion litigation over personal injuries to railroad employes by the remarkable decision that the Connecticut court had no jurisdiction in a local suit, on the ground that congress did not intend that jurisdiction of cases arising under the act should be assumed by state courts.

The effect of this doctrine, if generally accepted, would be to place railroad employes at a greater disadvantage in suits based on personal injuries, and compel them to sue in the federal courts, often at great inconvenience and expense.

The judiciary committee had reported a bill to give state and federal courts concurrent jurisdiction, thus relieving the situation in a measure, and apparently the senate was about to pass it when Senator Bailey began an impressive discussion of the bill.

He had no time to study the bill, he said, and it seemed useful as far as it went, but he would like to submit an amendment much broader than that proposed by the committee. The Texan senator severely criticised the modern court decision which has taken from the states their local rights in cases of this character.

"As sure as the progress of events means anything," he said, "New England is to become one of the strongest advocates of state rights. Under modern decisions everyone concerned in the operation of a train is subject to federal control. We have carried the commerce clause of the constitution to the point where we not only regulate commerce and the instrumentalities of commerce, but we invoke its power for the control of all domestic affairs.

"If in a train of twenty cars, made up wholly within a state, nineteen were loaded exclusively with state products, taken aboard and laid down in the state exclusively, and one-twentieth of the freight in the twentieth car were shipped from another state, every person concerned in the operation of that train would be subject to federal control. To require the average laboring man to litigate his case in a federal court is almost to deny him justice."

Mr. Bailey cited the case of John Ball vs. the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, in which the supreme court held that notwithstanding the relation of master and servant had been sharply defined by the supreme court of Ohio, the local court was not required to follow the law of that state as interpreted by its highest tribunal.

"I intend in an amendment that I shall offer," said Bailey, "not only to reverse the supreme court, but to take off the bill the express provision that these men shall be compelled to litigate in a federal court."

Senator Hale gradually woke up during the address of the Texas senator, and before Bailey had finished, the Republican leader was pouring forth friendly questions and nodding his head approvingly as they were answered.

"Something should be done," commented Senator Hale, "to restrain this overwhelming sea which is destroying all the landmarks of state rights. The makers of the constitution never for a moment dreamed that under and by virtue of the clause authorizing congress to regulate commerce an action founded solely in personal injuries should be brought.

"The senator from Texas is equipped with ample paraphernalia of thought to see that the rights of the people of Texas are protected," said Senator Hale. "Let the bill go over."

Unanimous consent to do so was obtained after Senator Dixon had given notice of an amendment of his own providing that every common carrier shall be deemed as a citizen of every state in which its line extends. The issue involved in this question is of the most far reaching importance, not only to the railroads but to every railroad employe. The bill had already passed the house.

CITY OF ST. LOUIS

Steamship for Savannah Line Launched at Newport News

Old ocean that champion Bluebeard of the centuries, has gained a new and charming bride. At Newport News on Wednesday Miss Louise Nugent, daughter of Daniel C. Nugent a prominent merchant of St. Louis, acted as sponsor and performed the ceremony in which the "City of St. Louis," newest of the Savansah line's new fleet, was gathered in his mighty arms. She is a sister ship to the "City of Montgomery," recently launched by the same line, and the seven seas have seldom seen a bonnier bride than she.

The "City of St. Louis," like the "City of Montgomery," is 6,200 tons.

The length of the sister boats will be 404 feet; their width 50 feet; these measurements giving them the right to rank as the Gibson Girls of the coastwise fleets. Their full complement of passengers will be 136 first-class, 36 intermediate and 57 in the steerage. They will possess some unusual features for coastwise vessels, notably a well-equipped barber shop and a news stand.

Fully loaded, the draft of the "City of St. Louis," like that of her sister, will be 18 feet, 6 inches. The holds below the draft line are divided into water-tight compartments, making the vessels unsinkable. They will carry wireless telegraph apparatus.

There will be plenty of perfectly appointed shower baths and sanitarily perfect lavatories aboard these vessels de luxe ,and the staterooms will contain all devices for cleanliness, health and comfort known to the ship designer of this first decade of the wonder century.

The dining-room will have a capacity of 124, and is located at the forward end of the hurricane deck. It is so arranged that there is an unobstructed view of the waves, a sight so dear to the heart of the landlubber when he has an opportunity to quit his native and less interesting element.

BOARDER TRIES TO HUG HER

Woman Is Dying From a Broken Neck In Consequence

Utica, N. Y., March 31.—Mrs. Esther Pec is dying from a broken neck as the result of an attempt to hug her. She was working near the top of a steep flight of stairs in her home when Stanlet Czepect, aged 23, a boarder, threw his arms about her. She pushed him from her and he fell, dragging the woman with him down the entire flight. He was badly bruised and was cared for by the police.

The woman is the mother of several children. She refused to hold the man to account for the accident.

Berlin Boycott on Butter

Berlin, March 31.—This city is threatened with a butter boycott on the same lines as the recent meat boycott in America. Many people in the suburban towns have banded together and agreed not to purchase butter at the present price of 36 cents a pound.

Frank J. Flood who was operated on for appendicitis is convalescing at his home on Fayette street.

A meeting of the City Council Committee on Public Buildings will be held tonight after the special Council meeting.

The resident's of Washington street are very anxious that street should be oiled the coming summer instead of being watered.

Work has been commenced by Mark E. Hanson on the foundation for a two tenement house on Hancock street adjoining his residence.

A meeting of the directors of the Board of Trade was held Wednesday evening to plan for the regular meeting of the board next Wednesday evening.

Tonight will be a busy one of the City Auditor, for the books of Tax Collector Carey must be audited before they are turned over to Mr. O'Hara the new collector who takes office Friday morning.

The alarm from Box 445 at 8.29 Wednesday night was for a small fire in an old building on Quarry street near the corner of Common street. The alarm from Box 28 at 9.27 was a false alarm.

More Pay For Over 100,000 Employes of Pennsylvania Railroad

Harrisburg, March 31.—An increase of 6 percent in the wages of every employe on the Pennsylvania Railroad system whose salary does not exceed $300 a month will become effective tomorrow. This announcement was made here by the division superintendents. Over 100,000 men are affected.

The increase, which will cost the company $6,000,000 annually, also applies to employes on the Pennsylvania's lines west of Pittsburg who receive less than $300 a month.

Warren Fights Extradition

Boston, March 31.—Franklin H. Warren, who made a sensational departure from Boston about two weeks ago with his two children, whom he took from their mother, is using every endeavor to prevent being extradited from Providence. He is at present held there as a fugitive from justice at the request of the Boston police, who hold an indictment warrant, charging him with polygamy.

TAFT ENDS TARIFF DISPUTE

Both the United States and Canada Will Be Benefited

Washington, March 31.—President Taft has issued the proclamation extending the minimum rates of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill to Canada. This brings to a successful conclusion negotiations extending over several months, and ending happily, principally because Canada took the matter up directly with the United States.

Canada gets the minimum tariff rates and in return gives to the United States important reductions on thirteen schedules in which there is active or prospective competition between the products of France and other countries with which Canada has reciprocity agreements.

This meets the contention that the rates extended by the Dominion government to France and twelve other countries constitute "undue" discrimination against the United States.

PRAYER CAUSES A STIR

Bar and Bottle Bill Goes Through the Massachusetts House

Boston, March 31.—The famous bar and bottle bill, which provides that a bar license and a bottle license can no longer be granted to the same premises, was passed to a third reading in the house by a vote of 141 to 90, amid scenes of wild excitement.

Among the opponents of the bar and bottle bill there were heard comments upon the opening prayer of Chaplain Waldron, who said:

"When the record of this day has been made up, may we have contributed something to the welfare of the commonwealth, something to the sobriety of the people, something to roll back evil and to establish the people in truth, temperance and righteousness."

LIBERIAN TROOPS BEATEN BY REBELS

Government Appears Unable to Quell Serious Disturbance

Liverpool, March 31.—Advices received here state that the fighting between the natives and Liberian troops at Cape Palmas, Liberia, continues and grows more serious. Rev. Speare, a native pastor at the mission in Cape Palmas, has been shot and killed, and the lives of the white residents are said to be in danger.

The hostile natives appear to be getting the better of the troops, whose excesses, when they were sent to stop the native trade in French territory, caused the outbreak. The natives are said to be anxious to have a few Englishmen killed, with the object of bringing about intervention by Great Britain.

The Liberian gunboat Lark, temporarily commanded by a German officer, bombarded the native villages, but did little damage. A German gunboat arrived, and its commander offered to bombard Hoffman station and Pluke, but the authorities declined the assistance.

AT FORTY MILES AN HOUR

World-Wide Tours May Be Conducted by Airship Line

Washington, March 31.—A line of airships of the Zeppelin type, to ply between New York and London, via Pekin, is proposed by A. Brodbeck, president of the Aero club of Utah, who says he is already negotiating with Count Zeppelin.

Brodbeck says the practicability of the Zeppelin ship has been proved. It would average forty miles an hour, he says, and principal stations on the proposed route would be New York, Chicago, Denver, Salt Lake, San Francisco, Seattle, Fort William, Behring, Stockholm, Tokio, Pekin, Irkutsk, Omski, Orenburg, Moscow, St. Petersburg, Riga, Berlin, Cologne, Paris and London.

ASSESSMENT OF $15,000,000

Sworn Off Estate of the Late H. H. Rogers by His Son

New York, March 31.—It was announced at the office of the board of taxes and assessments that H. H. Rogers, son of the late H. H. Rogers, Standard Oil millionaire, swore off a $15,000,000 assessment levied against his father's estate of the personal tax rolls of the department.

He declared that the bulk of the estate was invested in stocks and bonds exempt from taxation, and that the liabilities and debts exceeded the amount of taxable securities held.

KING MENELIK

African Monarch Who Modernized His Empire

KING SOLOMON DESCENDANT

Claim of Menelik, Who Responds to Death's Summons

GRANDSON HEIR TO THRONE

Indications That Reactionists Have Already Begun to Get Busy—Aged Monarch Fought Italy Successfully, Killing Ten Thousand Men, and Won Independence—Turbulent Subjects Checked by His Law Alone

Addis Abeba, Abyssinia, March 31.—Menelik II, emperor of Abyssinia, Lion of Judah, is dead at the age of 66 years, and in the twenty-first year of his reign. Prince Lyg Eyassu, grandson of the late monarch, is heir to the throne. The monarch was stricken with apoplexy last October and never recovered his health.

When he was able no longer to carry on the affairs of state, Ras Tassama, the regent, with the approval of the the principal chiefs, took over the reins of government. At the same time Empress Taitou was deprived of all power of interference in the government, and her appointments made among her favorites were annulled.

Prince Lyg Eyassu was proclaimed heir to the throne on May 18 last. He is 14 years of age, and little less than a year ago was married to the granddaughter, aged 7 years, of the late Emperor John and niece of Empress Taitou.

The empress is reported to have been imprisoned by the followers of Lyg Eyassu.

Since 1889 Menelik has been the undisputed ruler of Abyssinia, having been elected by the Abyssian chieftains over Ras Mangasha. King Menelik claims to be a direct descendant of Solomon, by the Queen of Sheba, and was born on July 17, 1844. He was the son of the King of Shoa, but was captured in his youth by the governor of Kondar, who had usurped the throne, under the title of Theodore III.

Menelik made war on Theodore and his successor, Emperor Johannes. Finally he married his daughter to Res Area, the emperor's son, and was tacitly acknowledged the heir to the throne. After Res Area died Emperor Johannes was killed in battle and Menelik became Negue of Abyssinia.

Refusing to acknowledge the domination of Italy over his country, Menelik compelled the Italian army to capitulate at Adowa in 1896, when a treaty was signed recognizing the absolute independence of Abyssinia. Ever since than peace has crowned Menelik's foreign policy and the country has prospered.

The result of the battle of Adowa was one of the most crushing defeats ever suffered by the Italian nation. The Italian army of 18,000 men was swept out of existence, and 10,000 of them left dead on the battlefield.

But Menelik was more than a warrior. He was also a diplomat of such a high order that by playing off the conflicting desires of the European powers for his domain, he succeeded in keeping Abyssinia the only real independent state, free from outside interference of any kind.

The people are a strange mixture of Semitic Abyssinians, Hamitic Gallas, Somali negroes and Falashas (of Jewish religion), with a considerable number of non-natives—Indians, Arabs, Greeks, Armenians—and a few Europeans.

These discordant and warring elements have not only been held in check, but have been forced to accept many innovations. That they did accept them is a tribute to the respect and affection in which he was held by his people.

Strike of Lynn Lasters

Lynn, Mass., March 31.—Twenty-five hand lasters came out on strike from the King shoe factory in sympathy with five ironers whose demand to be paid by piece work was refused by the firm.

PRESIDENT IS BESIEGED

Hundreds of People From New England Are Visiting Washington

Washington, March 31.—This city is flooded with hundreds of pupils from New England high schools and academies. Every hotel is filled with the pupils and their teachers.

President Taft yesterday gave himself over to shaking hands with his constituents from Boston and its surrounding cities. The chief executive did not balk at the huge line of 1500 that was waiting to greet him, but stood for hours perspiring and shaking hands. About every New Englander in Washington called at the White House.

One of the local newspapers estimates that there are 3000 tourists in the city, and at least one-half of them comes from within a radius of 100 miles from Boston.

HIGHER RAILROAD RATES

Public Will Pay For New Haven Road Employes' Increase

Washington, March 31.—The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company has filed with the interstate commerce commission schedules of increases in its passenger rates. These advances are due to the increases in wages made recently to the company's employes.

The new rates will become effective May 1. The increases in fares range from 2 to 5 percent, but from an examination of the tariffs filed with the commission it appears that only those fares which now average more than $1 have been increased. The fares for the short hauls, which average from twenty to thirty miles, have not been altered.

LAVA STREAM POURS CLOSE TO CATANIA

Thirty of Mount Etna's Craters In Active Eruption

Catania, Sicily, March 31.—This city is in terror, and thousands of residents are fleeing to the hills for safety from Mount Etna. A heavy fall of ashes has covered the town to a depth of six inches.

Thirty craters are belching fire and lava and red-hot stones bombard the country about the slopes of the volcano.

The ashes have destroyed all the orchards that escaped the lava between Catania and the crest of the mountain. Hundreds of tourists, the majority of them Americans, who came here to view the spectacle, made haste to depart.

Fear has seized all of the 150,000 inhabitants of the city and the frenzy of the peasantry about Etna is almost indescribable.

Professor Ricco, chief of the observatory, which was destroyed in the first stages of the eruption, reports that thirty craters are active, an unprecedented number. The outpouring lava, however, is scarcely greater than when a dozen mouths were threatening the country.

Grateful people testify.
Here's one case of it:

C. H. Foster, 180 Thatcher street, Milton Mass., says: "The symptoms of kidney trouble in my case were not serious at first and I paid little attention to them. The result was that before long I found myself firmly in the grasp of this complaint. I became so weak that I could hardly attend to my work and I also suffered from sharp pains in various parts of my body. I lost twenty pounds in weight and could not sleep well. I was very nervous, had no energy and was in such poor health that the doctor told me that I should take to my bed. I did not do this, however, being unwilling to give up. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised. I procured a supply and had only taken part of the contents of one box before I began to feel better. From that time on I improved steadily until I was well." (Statement given May 1905.)

A Permanent Effect.

On June 24, 1908, Mr. Foster added: "My former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills still holds good. I have been free from kidney complaint during the years that have passed since I first took the remedy."

WOLTER TRIAL NEXT MONDAY

First Degree Murder Is Charged Against Young Man

AUTHORITIES LOSE NO TIME

Case Passes Through Hands of Coroner's Jury and Grand Jury In Ninety-Three Minutes—Alleged Murderer Shows Signs of Strain Upon Him—Sisters of Ruth Wheeler Have to Undergo Ordeal by Testifying

New York, March 31.—It took just ninety-three minutes Wednesday for two juries to pave the way for the trial of Albert Wolter, charged with the atrocious murder of Ruth Wheeler on last Thursday.

A coroner's jury held him for the grand jury and the grand jury indicted him for murder. The true bill lay on top of fifteen others returned. The trial has been set for next Monday.

Wolter's lawyer, Walter D. Scott, protested that he had not been informed of the hour at which the inquest would be held, and that his client was receiving "shabby treatment."

It would be "legal butchery," he said, to try Wolter on Monday, when there were fifteen other men in the Tombs awaiting trial on charges of homicide. He would not even admit that Ruth Wheeler is dead.

The grand jury indictment was for first degree murder, based on the charge that Wolter strangled Ruth Wheeler, aged 15, stenographer, and then burned her body while she was still alive but unconscious.

Wolter showed many signs of the ordeal he had been undergoing since the murder charge was laid against him. Noticeably worn and dragged out, collarless, and wearing a badly wrinkled gray suit, his whole appearance presented a remarkable contrast to that of the dapper youth of a few days ago.

Katie Miller, his young woman companion, who is being detained in the case, came into court shortly after Wolter. She glanced at the prisoner, but he ignored her.

Pearl and Adelaide Wheeler, sisters of the dead girl, testified at the inquest to the facts concerning the search for their sister. They identified articles belonging to Ruth found in Wolter's rooms and in the bundle containing the body which was thrown to the yard of the Wolter house from the fire escape where a neighbor discovered it.

Katie Miller testified to Wolter's mysterious movements about the fireplace on the night after the murder. She identified an umbrella produced in court as one she had seen for the first time Friday night at the Seventy-fifth house where Ruth Wheeler's body was discovered.

Pearl Wheeler identified the umbrella as the one her sister took with her when she left home on the fatal morning of last Thursday. It was found in the apartments to which Wolter and Katie Miller moved last Saturday, while the search for the Wheeler girl was on.

Dog Slaughter Ordered

Bristol, R. I., March 31.—A general dog slaughter has been ordered here, because the dog owned by Amos Lamaruz bit three children, a policeman, two horses, three cows and eight other dogs.

IN FASHION'S REALM

It would be an easy thing for the reader if the writer could summarize the season's fashions into a few pithy paragraphs. One could do it at the sacrifice of a great deal that is interesting and fail in presenting many of the dominant and ruling ideas that are gotten out in clothes apart from the conventional styles.

If one were trying to summarize, one would say that sleeves were full and long; the kimono or peasant cap to the sleeve rules; that skirts are to be gathered at the back; that colored hems are a feature; that skirts are oftener short than long; that most blouses are without collars; that belts are ubiquitous.

Those are a few items that one can say off without catching breath, and a few more, on second thought, are these: Metal net is growing into second favor; peasant embroidery is a rival to Russian braiding; chiffon fabrics will be widely used; the new weaves of thin fabrics are creponned in direct opposition to the chiffon weaves; that velvet is giving way to satin.

These are items jotted down from the models that the shops and dressmakers have offered for inspection. They may not hold good under the test by the public. They may dissolve into other shapes when the actual wearing time comes. They may give place to something better and. something newer. But all that is beyond the point.

The public wants to know what has been done and what is being shown. After all, it approves or disapproves, and makes or mars a fashion. The mass usually accepts what is offered to it; the individualist makes her own fashion and is rarely copied ,and the bulk of people between are the ones to watch.

There is no doubt now in the mind of those who follow things that skirts will be full. Evening gowns of superb fabric follow the Renaissance idea of fullness at the waist line, tightness in the front, and a tendency to squareness at the hem in the back.

The fundamental idea is carried out in some of the most brilliant gowns shown in Paris. They are excessively narrow across the front, and begin their fullness just back of the hips, where they spread into actual folds and plaits.

These skirts are immensely difficult to cut, but they are more graceful than the tight Directoire skirt that had no fullness at the back, and that drew in at the ankles every time one stepped.

As for other skirts ,those that will not be worn for brilliant evening affairs, but will do service for every hour, the growing tendency to fullness is managed in an odd way. It is an eccentric compromise between a fashion that is passing and one that is approaching.

It was possibly invented by the designer to placate the temper of women who did not want the tight skirt changed. It consists of fullness from waist to knees and a deep, narrow hem below.

The hem took its origin from the peasant costume, but it did not find its exceeding narrowness there. It found it in the designer's rooms in the Rue de la Paix, where came patrons who had taken a fancy to the short skirt, with its narrow hem, that showed their feet.

It was an American who remarked that the reason French women never wore any skirts but long ones was to hide their ugly shoes. It would be a far stretch of the imagination to think that the invasion of the American shoe in Paris has given the short skirt cachet in that town.

The truth seems to be that the French-woman is not conscious how ugly her shoes are. They are not so from her point of view, but only from our, and if there is one thing in the world that the American floats the flag above and makes the eagle scream and sings "Old Glory" over it is her shoes.

She will stand the world casting aspersions on her liberty of speech, her freedom from her husband, her unchaperoned existence, and her extravagance, but she will not stand a word against her shoes.

This is the one thing on which she stands firm in Paris. She will let them make her believe anything else is better than it is in America, until it comes to footwear. She won't buy their shoes. She won't wear their shoes. And she never loses an occasion to sniff at a Frenchwoman's shoes when she gets the chance.

Conscious that her feet are perfectly shod, she has worn short skirts for eight years; Paris is wearing them for the first time, and like all its new fashions, it has grown feverishly ardent over the abbreviated costume.

Therefore it does not want to give up this short skirt at once, and it won't; and because it knows that a short skirt is ugly when full, the designers ,as I said before, have compromised between a new and an old fashion by attaching a full upper skirt to a narrow, short hem.

This fashion of putting a hem that will stand out conspicuously as a hem promises to be a dominant feature in clothes. And by hem one does not mean a casual ,ordinary, every-day kind of finish to the bottom of a skirt. It means a wide piece of cloth, 10 or 12 inches or more, made of another fabric from the gown, and usually of another color. It is often shaped at the top into lines that are away from the conventional, to call attention to its depth and how important a part it is of the costume.

That would be nothing new about this hem if it followed its usual lines of flaring in proportion to the rest of the skirt and making a swirl at the hem. But it does not do this. It is a very extraordinary hem, for it is often only a yard and a half wide, and gives the effect of going in suddenly at the ankle.

Black is the chosen color for this hem, and satin will be a favorite fabric when it is possible to use it. It is a good rule to go by that the cloth in the hem is heavier and more solid looking than the cloth in the rest of the gown. Whatever is used is often repeated in a queer yoke effect at the top, of which I shall write further.

The woman who is not quite ready to buy new clothes might not be interested in this new hem, but she should be, for it is one of the best renovators of old skirts that has been brought out this season. It can be used on skirts that are too short, or uneven, or plaited one that flare too much to be in accordance with the fashions of the day.

There seems to be an unwritten law that a skirt must not swing out into a flare at the hem, and to prevent this leaden weights are generously used. The hem provides a new weight to offset the flare of a plaited skirt. One can be made of cloth to match or harmonize, cut in an irregular shape at the top, finished with cord if one likes and heavily stitched over the plaits. They may be cut away if one does not like the weight, but they form a rather good facing for the hem if stitched beforehand.

A practical description of just how such a hem is put on a gown of thin material may be of use to the woman who needs such knowledge. The frock is of black and white striped marquisette. it is made over an oyster-gray lining, with both blouse and bodice slightly gathered at the belt. The latter is a conspicuous thing in itself; it is of black satin, sharply boned in front and cut down to a Bavarian point. It is fastened over at the side with a very handsome jet buckle studded with crystals, and it is quite straight at the back.

On the skirt is a hem not quite two yadrs wide which extends to 15 inches at the side and from 10 to 12 at front and back. It is of black satin, lined with black broadcloth to hold it steady. It has three row of black soutache as a finish at the top, and this braid curls itself into Russian circles, graded in size and close together, at intervals of 12 inches.

The satin of the hem was repeated on the bodice in this queer yoke effect which I mentioned above. It reaches to the bust line in a slight point back and front, its edges trimmed with the soutache design and similar to the one on the skirt.

As a part of the yoke there are straight short sleeves cut in one and edged with the soutaching. Above the top of the yoke there is a flat, plaited guimpe of the black and white marquisette, which is finished with a short tucker of coarse white net gathered into a black satin band. Beneath the short black satin sleeves there are full sleeves of the marquisette finished with a three-inch gathered puff of white net, finished with the satin wristband.

Not content with introducing the short coat against years of long ones, the designers have also ordained that we are to wear belts in addition. This is Russian, of course. We had better be thankful that it wasn't sashes, for both Napolean and the Cossacks wore sashes. We might have had to wear these with our everyday coats, and here is a secret: exclusives are going to wear them with their afternoon coats. The latter are typically Russian.

The incoming cotton fabrics proclaim a renewed reign of tunics, for everything of appreciable artistic merit has a deep border. These are in soft and vivid colors, and usually placed against a background of the same color in another and lighter tone.

Borders are for edges, and tunics have a long, extensive sweep of edges; therefore one argues that these gay bands are to take the place of the pelts that have been used so lavishly this Winter.

Russian blouses, however, are to be a rival of tunics, and they demand also borders. So do the new skirts; so, taking it all in all, it will be a border year.

Among the so-called cottons that are offered for early inspection are alluring marquisettes, a fabric which has gained substancial headway since its initial appearance.

It then came out in an expensive and rather luxurious weave, quite living up to its name; now it joins the rank of wash cottons and promises to be widely popular, and deservedly so.

If it, in this form, has been left out of your calculations for wash blouses and room robes, you have yet to make a gratifying discovery. In the striped designs it is especially attractive and can be utilized for blouses to wear with colored coat suits.

Somehow the waist that has a touch of color that definitely marks is as belonging to the suit, rather than being a haphazard choice, is preferred to white.

It is for this reason that the self-toned dimity and lawn blouses have been introduced and have met with such emphatic approval.

By the way, to return to borders, they are admirably adapted for blouse trimmings. One can buy them by the yard, which is a help, as it permits one to avoid endless cutting. A blouse of plain white dotted French swiss—a preferred material this year—is made with a three-inch border of brilliant deep blue down the front, which also forms long, tight cuffs and a boned stock or Peter Pan collar.

The severity of the band down the front is enlivened by a four-inch plisse frill of plain lawn edged with lace.

The tunics that are to be worn in gowns of cotton marquisette, grenadine, and voile are considerably shorter than those we have had with us last Winter; this is due to the influence of the Russian blouse.

They have more fullness also, some actually showing gathered cordings at the waist line. There is usually a slashed opening at the side which gives more opportunity for the use of a colored border.

Speaking of early Spring styles as well as borders, there are a few exclusive gowns coming that show a tunic of chiffon bordered with embroidery over a slip of figured foulard. This experiment is not altogether attractive, but in a day of eccentricities far more glaring it passes muster.

This season, so far, is not as prolific of foulards as last year was, yet it cannot be said that one saw as many gowns of it later on as one expected from the masses of the materials shown in the shop counters.

In the Spring neckwear are two jabots that can be made of bits of embroidery and lace.

One is made from nine inches of batiste embroidery, finished with irish lace edged two inches deep and worked in eyelets above it. The embroidery is sloped at the top so the left side of the tie is seven inches long and the right side six inches. These sides are rolled and finished with narrow Val. lace put on without fulling.

Plait in five side plaits and finish top in a narrow hemmed band.

The other tie is made of two pieces of ecru Brussels lace of heavy mesh. Each piece is four inches deep and fourteen long, with the ends overcast on the wrong side to make a tubular section.

The two ends are joined in the centre with an overlaping of gilt gauze ribbon wound so tightly that the two sides fall in a festoon one over the other.—Anne Rittenhouse in New York Times.

BRIEFS

Several deaths are reported today.

Mrs. J. Ginns and son of Gloucester, have been spending a few days with relatives in West Quincy.

Tonight, public playground meeting in Council chamber, City Hall, 8 P.M.

Edwin N. Bray, a son of Mellen H. Bray was married at Dedham on Wednesday to Miss Esther E. Clapp of that town.

The Quincy Quarries Company will pay a semi annual dividend of two and one-half per cent in April. A similar dividend was paid in October.

Although the sky was rather black in the east this morning the wind was in the wrong direction for a storm and it looked as though the promised rain would skip Quincy.

Miss Marguerite Louise Holbrook is to give a concert this evening in the auditorium of the Atlantic Methodist Episcopal church. A large attendance is expected. The proceeds are to be given to the church.

All men and women interested in playgrounds are invited to the meeting tonight in the Council chamber, City Hall, under the auspices of the Quincy Play Ground Committee of one hundred.

Christian Lantz of Salem, who speaks tonight at the Playground meeting in City Hall, is the leader of the notable playground movement there. He will personally inspect this afternoon our playground possibilities, so that he may make his talk as specific as possible.

The funeral of Thomas F. Mannix will be held Friday morning from his late residence on Rogers street at 8 o'clock and will be attended by Quincy lodge of Elks of which he was a member. The services at the house will be followed by the celebration of mass at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock.

The revised list of the pupils at the Quincy High school during the first year (1852) scheduled to be published today, is postponed until April 7 that it may be more complete in detail. The Daily Ledger has nearly a complete list, but now desires the names after marriage where marriages have taken place, also the present residence of those now living. Who will help in these details? Great interest is being taken in this research.

PERSISTENT ADVERTISING

Sure to Bring Certain and Gratifying Resul's

The Pilgrim Publicity association is making rapid strides in its efforts to boom New England, and at its monthly banquet at the Exchange club, Boston, entertained the members of the Boston Sales Managers' club, the Boston Merchandise Brokers' association, the Boston Selling Agents' association, and the Ad Craft club, all of whom pledged support to the movement.

It was a notable gathering and all were inspired with the optimistic spirit to boom New England. Vice President George B. Gallop was toastmaster and the speakers included Don C. Seitz, publisher of the New York World; Edward E. Fowler, president of the sales managers; William B. Seigmons of the brokers; W. M. Donner of the agents; and Mr. Jacobs of the Ad men.

Mr. Seitz said in part:

"My theory of advertising has always been a very simple one, viz., to state plainly and simply what you have to sell, tell the public just what you have, what it costs, what it is good for and where they can get it, without any superfluous language, in advertisements free of poetical remarks or vague statements. I do not think there is anything great to be achieved in mere typography and I know that persistent advertising is sure to bring certain and gratifying results.

"I can't tell you anything about selling, because I never sold anything in my life. The newspaper, you know, gives most everything away. The newspapers are, in a sense, the right-hand maid to the public at large, and for the price at which it sells, I may say that it brings the ends of the worlds together so promptly, so thoroughly and carefully every day that you take it as a matter of course.

"I doubt if the public quite appreciates this great engine of civilization and progress. The world has moved somewhat in a hundred years and I think the newspaper has made it move more than any other single thing. Here in New England I believe you used to think the protective tariff did it all, but I understand you have changed your minds on that." (Applause.)

WHIST TOURNAMENT.

Seven tables were in play at Wednesday night's whist tournament under the auspices of the Granite City club. The two best scores were made by Thomas G. Smith and Charles C. Hearn. The former won 41 and lost 13, giving him 75.9 per cent, and the latter won 33 and lost 15, or 68.3 per cent.

He Could Not Recommend It.

The editor was seated at his desk, busily engaged in writing a fervid editorial on the necessity of building a new walk to the cemetery, when a battered specimen of the tramp printer entered the office.

"Mornin', boss," said the caller. "Got any work for a print?"

"I have," answered the editor. "You happened in just right this time. I've got only a boy to help me in the office, and I need a man to set type for about a week. I have to make a trip out west. You can take off your coat and begin right now. I start tomorrow morning."

"All right," said the typographical tourist, removing his coat. "What road are you going to travel on?"

"The X., Y. and Z. mostly. I've never been on it. Know anything about it?"

"I know all about it. I've traveled it from one end to the other."

"What kind of road is it?"

"Bum!" said the printer in a tone indicative of strong disgust. "The ties are too far apart!"—Youth's Companion.

Paris' Worst Flood.

In the year 1296 rose the greatest flood of which history makes any record in Paris. "Men went in boats over the wall of the king's garden." All the island was covered, and from the foot of the hill of the university to the rising ground beyond the Marrais the upper stories of the houses rose out of a lake a mile wide. In that flood was swept away the old stone bridge that Charles the Bald had built centuries earlier, before even the Normans besieged the town, and in that flood the Petit Chatelet was destroyed. The Petit Pont fell into the river also, but that was nothing wonderful, for it was the most unfortunate of bridges and never stood firmly for fifty years at a stretch, but was forever being destroyed and regularly rebuilt. The waste of this flood was the signal for Philippe le Bel's rebuilding.—Hilaire Belloc's "Paris."

QUINCY FORFEITS.

The match scheduled between Quincy and Braintree teams in the Old Colony league was not rolled, owing to non-appearance of the Quincy team at Braintree. Both of these teams have been but stepping stones to the leading duet, and they lost interest long ago. In another season an effort should be made to strengthen these two that a closer and more exciting race may result.

"Chub" Coose one of the most promising ball tossers in this section will be given a thorough try out by the Dewey's this season. Chub's home is in Braintree, but he is well known in this city.

The bicycle race between Percival Sears and Ralph Hall arranged for next Saturday, at 11 A. M., is creating much excitement among the sporting fans in this city. The starting point is at the Adams street bridge and the course is down Newport avenue, up Beale street and back Adams street. The officials are S. Sears and Schenkelberger.

Foley of Holy Cross, who twirls during the summer months occasionally, for Stoughton, the Old Colony league club, is in fine form and landing games for the Worcester college in easy style.

It is pleasing to note that the Quincy Retail Merchants' Association and the citizens who attended the Board of Trade meeting, Tuesday evening, made arrangements for all kinds of sports for both celebrations. I am heartily in favor of Merchants' Week, and also a Fourth of July celebration, and sincerely hope the committees will arrange interesting events for both. If I can in any way assist either committee nothing would please me better than to do so

The directors of the Quincy Old Colony league baseball club will meet in their rooms on Water street tonight and elect officers for the ensuing season.

The Hayseed Karnival which comes off at the Quincy Y. M. C. A. building, Wednesday evening April 13, is surely going to stir up sports in this section. Mr. Gifford the popular physical director has written the plot and it is indeed fitting for this out of the ordinary athletic event.

BOARDERS ENTERTAIN

Appreciate Hospitality Extended in Past

Many pleasant events have been held in I. O. O. F. hall, Wollaston, but that of Wednesday evening from a social and fraternal standpoint seems to have eclipsed them all, when John Hancock lodge, No. 224, became the guests of its "Boarders."

"These "Boarders," by the way are residents Odd Fellows and members of other lodges throughout the country but make this their headquarters. They gathered about 40 strong, and after the regular business meeting entertained the lodge for about an hour and a half with a musical and literary entertainment consisting of the following program:

Roll call of the Boarders, 40 in number, selection by the I. O. O. F. orchestra, reading by Brother James Cahill, song by Brother H. L. Tobey, P. G., cornet solo by Brother George Critchley, selection by the orchestra, presentation by the lodge to the "Boarders" of a receipted bill for all dues to date, story by Charles F. West, P. G., and selection by the orchestra.

All brothers then entered the banquet hall where a collation was served consisting of blocked oysters and saltines, escalloped oysters and rolls, doughtnuts and cheese, oranges bananas, coffee and cigars. After which a social hour was spent in stories, music and singing. All voted it a very enjoyable evening, and extending a vote of thanks to their entertainers.

CASH BASIS NEXT WEEK.

This is the last week under the charge system at the store of Johnson Bros. Commencing next Monday everything will be done on a cash basis. Prices will be marked way down so that the cash buyer can save good money by paying cash. It may seem a little odd at first to the many customers of this store, but there is no question but when accustomed to it people will like the system, particularly when they come to realize that by paying cash they are saving good money which with most people is somewhat scarce.

Just here, a word about making a deposit will not be out of place. The idea is not intended for a customer to make a large deposit, but a small sum so that they may not be disappointed in receiving their goods.

By way of illustration supposing the good housewife orders some goods for the evening dinner at which company may or may not be expected. She is prepared to pay for these goods when the driver calls with them. In the meantime, however, some emergency arises, and she is suddenly called out for a short time. It is while she is absent that the driver calls to deliver the goods. He finds no one at home, and under the strict orders which he has, he is obliged to return the goods to the store. Shortly after the housewife returns to find that the goods have come and gone back again. She is naturally very much provoked and disappointed, and will be put to a great deal of trouble to get the desired articles.

Now, if she had a deposit of at least two dollars, to protect her in just such emergency cases, the driver not finding her at home and knowing that she had a deposit, would leave the goods. She gets her slip of the goods and the amount is charged against her deposit. It will thus be seen that instead of being a hardship that the deposit of a small sum will work to the benefit of the customer.

Messrs Johnson say, that while they naturally expect to lose some of their customers by the new plan, that their prices will be so low for first class goods that it will attract more than enough new customers to offset what they may lose, of the old.

—President Lowell's warning that he will discipline Harvard students who may be convicted in court of "such conduct as appears to merit severe censure," is timely. The public is beginning to tire of the discrimmination that permits a college boy lightly to escape the consequences of an act for which an ordinary lad receives severe punishment. Rowdyism is rowdyism by whomever committed and in this free country there should be no double standard of punishment.—Springfield Union.

THE COOK AND THE CRITIC.

A Problem Worthy the Attention of All Earnest Women.

It always awakens a sort of amused wonderment in me, says Marietta Ladd in Table Talk, when I hear learned men, especially bishops, tell schoolgirls that in order to secure husbands they must learn to be good cooks. Just as though a man ever thinks seriously of cooking when he is really and truly in love! The idea is absurd. Yet it is undeniable that a large proportion of unhappy marriages result from an imperfect knowledge of the sublime art of cookery on the part of the wife. All sensible women know that their power and influence in the home is inseparable from their practical ability to prepare healthful and appetizing foods for those under their charge. The problem of our time is to increase the number of careful and intelligent cooks and so lift the race on to a higher plane of life.

It is clear to me that this problem, worthy as it is of the attention of all earnest women, cannot be satisfactorily solved by educating women alone. Man is an important factor in the home, and it is as much the business of a man to know what foods are helpful and what harmful as it is a woman's. In the stress of modern business life it is unreasonable to expect a married man to do actual cooking. If he does it some part of his work outside the home must suffer. But if he cannot do work he can always criticise. He should therefore be taught how to criticise intelligently in such a way as to help his wife and not try her temper to its utmost limits.

Domestic unhappiness usually arises in one of two ways—either the wife is incompetent and as a natural consequence ultra sensitive to criticism or the wife is really a good cook, but her husband has been spoiled and rendered bearish by living at good hotels and restaurants where "many hands make light work."

There is only one remedy for this state of affairs. Boys and girls must learn cookery side by side, as they learn other necessary knowledge. The boy who knows what to eat and how to help, not hinder, digestion in the kitchen will be a kind and helpful critic to his wife. The wife who knows the science and art of cookery will consult her husband's taste and blend it with her own, knowing that the masculine point of view in cookery, as in all else, is a valuable corrective of the feminine.

Ginseng's Growth.

The manner of the ginseng's growth gives it a queer shape and in some cases fabulous value. There is first a main root or trunk. Then on the sides there will be smaller roots, one on a side, and by a curious formation the offshoots resemble arms and legs, so that the full grown ginseng looks for the world like a human figure. The more the fancied likeness to the human form is developed the greater the value, according to some of the Chinese. The root as an herb has wonderful properties, but, too, so much beyond is the value of one that looks human. The others will cure cancers and all sorts of other diseases, but the precious one having the human shape will keep off devils and all bad luck.—Argonaut.

An Odd Gypsy Custom.

In Hungary, when the question of the baby's future comes up for discussion among the gypsies, there is no time wasted in argument. A blanket is held by the four corners, and the baby is thrown into the air. If it comes down on its little stomach it is a sign that it is going to be a musician; if it falls on its back it is to be a thief, and the education of the child is begun as soon as possible in one of these two time honored professions.
